

Pioneer Notebooks Index

- A -

Achleitner

Anna, v. 6, p. 307
 Florence D., v. 6, p. 307
 Otto, v. 6, p. 307

Adams

Catherine (Felter), v. 1, p. 2
 Clarence H. Jr., v. 1, p. 1
 Clarence Henry, v. 1, p. 1
 Cynthia (Lane), v. 1, p. 4
 Eliza (Blanchard), v. 1, p. 1
 Emma Jane (Wilson), v. 1, p. 4
 Eugene Hale, v. 1, p. 1
 George Francis, v. 1, p. 4
 Hannah, v. 2, p. 19
 Henry Riley, v. 1, pp. 2-3
 John, v. 1, p. 1; v. 2, p. 19
 Jose Perry, v. 1, p. 4
 Joseph, v. 2, p. 19
 Joseph Jr., v. 2, p. 19
 Lydia (Chadwick), v. 2, p. 19
 Margaret (Eams), v. 2, p. 19
 Rebecca (Cutter), v. 2, p. 19
 Riley, v. 1, p. 2
 Sarah (Storey), v. 1, p. 2
 Sarah M. (Pugh), v. 1, p. 4
 Seth, v. 1, p. 2
 Thomas, v. 2, p. 19

Aderhold

Herman H., v. 3, p. 97
 Jennie (Barnes), v. 3, p. 97
 Venita A., v. 3, p. 97

Adin

Olaf, v. 4, p. 133
 Olaf, Mrs., v. 4, pp. 133-134

Adle

Albert F., v. 6, pp. 476, 479
 Julia A., v. 6, p. 476
 Sarah (McMaster), v. 6, pp. 476, 479

Adler

Esther, v. 6, p. 359
 Harry, v. 1, p. 5
 Max, v. 6, p. 359
 Miriam A., v. 6, p. 359

Aiello

Carolina (Anselmo), v. 1, p. 6
 John, v. 1, pp. 6-7
 John Baptiste, v. 1, p. 6

Aitken

J. R., v. 1, p. 8
 Jennie (Pollock), v. 1, p. 8
 Leonard Jr., v. 2, p. 238
 Leonard L., v. 1, p. 8; v. 4, p. 218

Leonard, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4, p. 217

Mary (Kinnie), v. 1, p. 8
 Regina, v. 4, p. 217
 Richard, v. 1, p. 8

Alexander

Jennie Louise (King), v. 1, p. 9
 William Knox, v. 1, p. 9
 Ann Elizabeth (Fore), v. 1, p. 9
 Ruth (Kassler), v. 1, p. 9
 Philip Knox, v. 1, pp. 9-10
 Hugh J., v. 1, pp. 9-10

Alkire

Edith V. (Miller), v. 1, p. 11
 John Leonard, v. 1, p. 11
 Leonard, v. 1, p. 11
 Mary A. (Bracken), v. 1, p. 11

Allen

Alexander P. (Rev.), v. 1, p. 15
 Carrie (Wilkins), v. 1, p. 18
 Catherine (Arnold), v. 1, p. 12
 Cornelia (Hayden), v. 1, p. 15
 Edward M., v. 2, p. 159
 Edwin S., v. 1, pp. 12, 13-14
 Florence M. (Gillett), v. 1, p. 18
 Frances, v. 2, p. 159
 Henly W. (Dr.), v. 1, pp. 15-16
 Jabez, v. 1, p. 12
 John L., v. 6, p. 278
 John Quincy (Dr.), v. 1, p. 17
 Josephine (Shedd), v. 1, p. 19
 Katherine (Triplett), v. 2, p. 159
 Levi E., v. 1, p. 18
 Littlebury W., v. 1, p. 19
 Margaret (Durham), v. 1, p. 19
 Mary (Moody), v. 1, p. 19
 Mary E. (Perkins), v. 1, p. 12
 Mildred (McNeel), v. 1, p. 15
 Pliny Wilkins, v. 1, p. 18
 Preston, v. 1, p. 17
 Rachel Alice, v. 6, p. 278
 Sarah M. (Fredenburg), v. 1, p. 17
 Susanna (Jessup), v. 1, p. 17
 William Austin, v. 1, p. 19
 Worth, v. 1, p. 19

Allin

Catherine (Detwiler), v. 1, p. 20
 Mary Susan (Banbury), v. 1, p. 20

Thomas Banbury, v. 1, pp. 20-21

William, v. 1, p. 20

Alsldorf

Alice (Stevens), v. 1, p. 22
 Mary (Reed), v. 1, p. 22
 Percy R., v. 1, p. 22
 Robert B., v. 1, p. 22

Altwater

Fritz Jacob, v. 1, p. 23
 Henry, v. 1, p. 23
 Magdalena (Mök), v. 1, p. 23
 May (Barrick), v. 1, p. 23

Amesse

John H., Dr. and Mrs., v. 1, p. 24
 Eloise, v. 1, p. 30
 Helen M., v. 1, p. 32
 John, v. 1, pp. 30, 31
 John C., v. 1, pp. 24-30
 John William, v. 1, pp. 31-33
 Mary M. (Hawes), v. 1, p. 32
 Nancy (Parks), v. 1, p. 31

Ammons

Elias Milton, v. 1, pp. 34-37
 John R., v. 1, p. 34
 Margaret Caroline (Brindle), v. 1, p. 34

Amter

Bob, v. 4, p. 72
 Helen Kohn, v. 4, pp. 71-72
 Joanne, v. 4, p. 72
 Judy, v. 4, p. 72

Anderson

A. C., Mrs., v. 5, p. 91
 Anne E., v. 5, p. 292
 Archer R., v. 1, p. 38
 Calvin B., v. 5, p. 292
 Frank William, v. 5, p. 91
 James Waters, v. 1, p. 38
 Leona, Mrs., v. 5, p. 117

Andrew

Bessie (Turrell), v. 1, p. 40
 Charles Fisher, v. 1, pp. 39-40
 Harriet L. (Fisher), v. 1, p. 39
 John, v. 1, p. 39

Andrews

Clarissa (Beckwith), v. 2, p. 257
 Daniel, v. 2, p. 257
 John, v. 2, pp. 257-258
 Joseph, v. 2, p. 257
 Martha, v. 5, p. 76
 Mary, v. 2, pp. 257-258
 Mary (Johnson), v. 2, p. 257
 Ratcliff, v. 5, p. 76

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Andrews (cont.)

Samuel, v. 2, p. 257
 Susannah (Hough), v. 2,
 p. 257
 Thankful (Hunn), v. 2, p. 257
 Timothy (I), v. 2, p. 257
 Timothy (II), v. 2, p. 257

Andrus

Alanson E., v. 1, p. 41
 David, v. 1, p. 41
 Eliza (Cole), v. 1, p. 41
 George K., v. 1, p. 41
 Minnie (Estabrook), v. 1, p. 41

Anfenger

Louis, v. 1, p. 42
 Louise (Schlessinger), v. 1,
 p. 42
 Milton L., v. 1, p. 42

Annear

Bertha W. (Darrow) Lockhart,
 v. 1, p. 43
 Eunice (Brothers), v. 1, p. 43
 Jeremiah, v. 1, p. 43
 Thomas, v. 1, p. 43

Anthony

Chas. M., v. 1, p. 44
 Laura Alice (Lechner), v. 1,
 p. 44

Applegate

Elizabeth Herriott, v. 5, p. 248
 John Adams, v. 5, p. 248
 Margaret Clyde, v. 5, p. 248

Arbaney

Alexis, v. 1, p. 45
 Felicity (Gerbaz), v. 1, p. 45
 Henry, v. 1, p. 45
 John B., v. 1, p. 45
 Margaret, v. 1, p. 45

Archer

Jesse Kilgore, v. 1, p. 38
 Zachariah, v. 1, p. 38

Archibald

Julia, v. 2, p. 61

Arneill

Elizabeth (Rae), v. 1, p. 46
 James R. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 46
 James Rae, v. 1, p. 47
 James Rae, Mrs., v. 1, p. 48
 John, v. 1, p. 46
 Sara Hyatt (Taylor), v. 1, p. 46

Arrance

Gladys, Mrs., v. 3, p. 312

Arrata

Mr., v. 4, p. 1

Arthur

Alfred, v. 1, p. 49

Anne Helen (Finlayson), v. 1,
 p. 49

Charles H., v. 1, p. 49
 Gertrude (Price), v. 1, p. 49
 Rex Price, v. 1, p. 49
 Sarah, v. 1, p. 49

Atcheson

Effie A. (Moore), v. 1, pp. 50-51
 George, v. 1, pp. 50-51
 George Jr., v. 1, pp. 50-51
 Jane Amelia (McDonough),
 v. 1, p. 50
 John, v. 1, p. 50
 John Sr., v. 1, p. 50

Atwood

Anna (Cole), v. 2, p. 290
 Elmira C., v. 2, p. 290
 Stevens, v. 2, p. 290

Aubrey

F. E., v. 3, pp. 248-249

Ault

Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 56
 Fred, v. 6, p. 56

- B -

Baatz

Ferdinand, v. 5, p. 104
 Marie, v. 5, p. 104

Baekeland

George, v. 6, p. 104

Bailey

Elizabeth (Platt), v. 6, p. 308
 Elmyra, v. 6, p. 308
 John C., v. 6, p. 308

Bain

James, v. 4, p. 61
 Julia, v. 4, p. 61
 Mary, v. 4, p. 61

Baker

Absolom, v. 1, pp. 53, 54
 Annie (Moore), v. 6, p. 360
 Ada, v. 6, p. 360
 Carlos, v. 1, pp. 52-53
 Carlos C., v. 1, pp. 54-56
 Clarissa M., v. 1, p. 57
 Edward Henry, v. 6, p. 360
 Electa, v. 1, pp. 52-53, 54
 Eva C., v. 4, p. 329
 Evangaline, v. 4, p. 329
 John, v. 2, p. 259
 Margaret (Gilbert), v. 1,
 pp. 52-53
 Nathan Addison, v. 1, pp. 57,
 58, 59

Rodman, v. 1, pp. 52-53, 54
 Thomas H., v. 4, p. 329

Bakke

Carrie (Erickson), v. 1, p. 60
 Christiana, v. 1, p. 60
 Esther (Banks), v. 1, p. 61
 Norris C., v. 1, pp. 60-61
 Ole Pederson, v. 1, p. 60

Baldwin

Hattie B., v. 6, p. 182
 Henry Lewis, v. 6, p. 182
 Henry Lyman, v. 6, p. 181
 Joseph, v. 6, p. 181
 Kathryn, v. 6, p. 181
 Lottie C., v. 6, p. 182
 Polly (Smith), v. 6, p. 181

Ball

Clara Jennie, v. 3, p. 275
 Emily Mrs., v. 6, p. 342
 George, v. 1, p. 62
 Henry, v. 3, p. 275
 Joseph, v. 1, p. 62
 Prudence, v. 1, p. 62

Ballantine

George W., v. 1, p. 63
 John, v. 1, p. 63
 Lucy A. (Collum), v. 1, p. 63

Balmer

Helen M. (Brooks), v. 1, p. 64
 Horace M., v. 1, p. 64
 Mary J. (Phillips), v. 1, p. 64
 Robert, v. 1, p. 64

Bancroft

David C., v. 1, pp. 65-66
 Frank, v. 1, p. 243
 Frank N., v. 1, pp. 65-66
 Frederick J. (Dr.), v. 2,
 pp. 51-52
 George C., v. 1, p. 65
 Lydia A. (Chase), v. 1, p. 65
 Rosa, v. 1, p. 243
 Rosa G. (Stokes), v. 1, p. 65

Banks

Jabez B., v. 1, p. 67
 James Jones, v. 1, p. 67
 Jane Rebecca (Harvey), v. 1,
 p. 67
 Lee (Frazer), v. 1, p. 67

Banner

Cicely, v. 2, pp. 121-125

Bannister

Alice (Ward), v. 1, p. 68, 70
 Eliza Havens, v. 1, p. 68
 Helen (Allabach), v. 1, pp. 68-
 69, 70
 Lucius George, v. 1, pp. 68, 70

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Bannister (cont.)

Lucius Ward, v. 1, pp. 68-69, 70
William H., v. 1, p. 68

Barbee

Lindsey, v. 1, p. 71
James Walter, v. 1, p. 71
Mary Sandifer, v. 1, p. 71

Bardwell

Daniel A., v. 1, p. 72
Elizabeth (Harmon), v. 1,
p. 73
Gertrude Elizabeth (Jewett),
v. 1, p. 72
Hiram Webster, v. 1, p. 72
Iva (Shepard), v. 1, p. 72
Robert, v. 1, p. 72
Rodney Jewett Jr., v. 1,
pp. 72-73
Rodney Jewett Sr., v. 1,
pp. 72-73
Sallie (Jones), v. 1, p. 72

Barela

Casimiro, v. 1, pp. 74-75; v. 3,
p. 282
Damiana (Rivera), v. 1, p. 75
Jose M., v. 1, p. 74
Josefina dona Salome
(Garcia), v. 1, p. 75
Maria D. J. (Abeyta), v. 1, p.
74

Barker

Anselm Holcomb, v. 3, p. 28

Barnard

Alice E., v. 6, p. 157
John, v. 6, p. 157
Tom, v. 6, p. 157

Barnes

Elizabeth (Sperry), v. 1, p. 76
Lucy (Bixby), v. 1, p. 76
Melzar E., v. 1, p. 76
Milan R., v. 1, p. 76

Barnett

Catharine (Kennedy), v. 1, p.
77
John, v. 1, p. 77
John Thomas, v. 1, pp. 77-78
Sue Sayre (Nash), v. 1, p. 78

Barr

Mary, v. 6, p. 188
J. M., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
p. 188
Will H., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
p. 188
Sadie, v. 6, p. 188

Bartell

Caroline (Buckman), v. 1,
p. 79
Charles Frederick, v. 1, p. 79
Frederick P., v. 1, p. 79
Mary (Crosby), v. 1, p. 79

Bartels

Caroline H. (Dieterichs), v. 1,
p. 80
Emma Reed (Godfrey), v. 1, p.
80
Gustave Charles, v. 1,
pp. 80-81
Lina Elise, v. 1, p. 143
Louis, v. 1, p. 145
Louis F., Mr. and Mrs., v. 1,
p. 143
Louis Frederick, v. 1, p. 80
Louis Frederick Jr., v. 1, p. 80

Bartholomew

Cornelia (Kellogg), v. 1, p. 82
Florin A., v. 1, p. 82
Mary (Lapsley), v. 1, p. 82
Noyes E., v. 1, p. 82

Bartlett

John Thomas, v. 1, p. 83
Margaret M. (Abbott), v. 1,
p. 83

Bartow

Laura Thompson, v. 3, p. 261
George H., v. 3, p. 261

Bass

Lyman K., v. 6, p. 428

Bauer

Bertha G. (Lowell), v. 1, p. 84
Elizabeth (Groh), v. 1, p. 84
Jacob Philip, v. 1, p. 84
John Groh, v. 1, p. 84

Baxter

A. H. H., v. 3, pp. 294-296
Emma, v. 3, p. 294, 296
George, v. 3, p. 294
O. H. P., v. 3, pp. 294-296
Olive F., v. 3, p. 296

Beam

Aaron M., v. 1, p. 85
Jennie L. (Barkman), v. 1,
p. 84

Beans

Mary E. (Patterson), v. 1, p. 86
Walter, v. 1, p. 86

Beck

William B., v. 3, p. 10

Bedford

Benjamin F., v. 1, p. 87

Eliza A. (Summers), v. 1,
p. 87
Homer F., v. 1, p. 87
John F., v. 1, p. 87
Sarah, v. 1, p. 87
Stella V. (Cornell), v. 1, p. 87

Beggs

Orlena, v. 3, pp. 209-210
Robert H., v. 3, p. 209

Belknap

J. Harrison (Dr.), v. 1,
pp. 88-89

Bell

Sherman, v. 1, pp. 90-91

Bellamy

Frederica, v. 1, pp. 92-93
Harry, v. 1, pp. 92-93
Harry E., Mrs., v. 1, p. 94
Harry Elbert, v. 1, p. 94

Belser

Martha Hays, v. 5, p. 161
Ruth, v. 5, p. 161
S. P., v. 5, p. 161

Bennet

Clara Martha (Ames), v. 1,
p. 95
Hiram Pitt, v. 1, p. 95
Robert Ames, v. 1, p. 95
Susan A. (Housley), v. 1, p. 95

Bennett

Christian A., v. 1, p. 96
Daniel J., v. 1, p. 96
Elmer, v. 1, pp. 97-98
Elmer F., v. 1, pp. 99-100
Gertrude (Turner), v. 1,
pp. 97, 100
H. A., Mr. and Mrs., v. 1,
p. 97
Iretta (DeConders), v. 1, p. 96
Mary R. (Burke), v. 1, p. 96

Benson

Eletha E., v. 1, p. 101
Harrison T., v. 1, p. 101
Horace G., v. 1, p. 101
Mary E. (Schlink), v. 1, p. 101

Bent

Alfred Ernest, v. 1, pp. 102-103
Alice Maude (Black), v. 1,
p. 102
Dorcas, v. 1, p. 105
Edith Isabel (Stanley), v. 1,
p. 102
Elizabeth Barnes, v. 1, p. 102
James Martin, v. 1, p. 102
Lucy, v. 1, p. 105

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Bent (cont.)

Mary, v. 1, p. 107
 Silas, v. 1, pp. 104, 105-107
 William, v. 1, pp. 105-106

Bentley

Joshua, v. 2, p. 162
 William (Dr.), v. 2, p. 162

Berbower

Benton, v. 3, p. 332

Bergen

Judith, v. 1, p. 108
 Park, v. 1, pp. 109-110
 Sarah Allen (Post), v. 1,
 pp. 108-109
 Thomas C., v. 1, p. 108
 William Henry, v. 1, p. 108

Berger

Carry A. (Merriam), v. 1, p.
 113
 Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 19
 Emil August, v. 1, pp. 111-112
 Ethel (Sayre), Mrs., v. 6, p. 20
 George B., v. 1, pp. 113, 114
 George B. Jr., v. 1, pp. 114,
 115-116
 Jacob, v. 1, p. 111
 Laura (Schlumpf), v. 1, p. 111
 Laureen Porter (Walke), v. 1,
 p. 116
 Mrs., v. 6, p. 14
 Ola, Mrs., v. 1, p. 117
 William B., v. 6, p. 19
 William B., Mr. and Mrs.,
 v. 6, p. 13

Bergtold

Adele Darling (Smith), v. 1,
 p. 118
 Jacob Edward, v. 1, p. 118
 Louisa Hoffen, v. 1, p. 118
 William Harry (Dr.), v. 1,
 pp. 118-119

Bergstresser

Luella, v. 1, p. 258
 Reuben, v. 1, p. 258

Bernard

Sam, v. 4, p. 2

Bernet

Milton E., v. 1, p. 120
 Milton E., Mrs., v. 1, p. 120

Bernhardt

Henry, v. 1, pp. 268, 271
 Lena, v. 1, pp. 268, 270-271
 Mary (Oberlander), v. 1,
 pp. 268, 271
 Sarah, v. 2, p. 68

Berry

William E., v. 1, pp. 121-122

Berryman

Josephene, v. 3, p. 193
 Rebecca (McPherson), v. 3,
 p. 193
 Thomas, v. 3, p. 193

Berthelson

Agnes, v. 1, p. 123
 Anna Sorenson, v. 1, p. 123
 Botilda Gylling, v. 1, p. 123
 Christian, v. 1, p. 123
 J. G. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 123
 Soren Christian, v. 1, pp. 123-
 126

Best

Charles Fred, v. 1, p. 127
 John D., v. 1, p. 127
 Mabel (PaDelford), v. 1,
 p. 127
 Martha (Hooper), v. 1, p. 127

Bethell

Bessie, v. 2, p. 280
 William G. (Capt.),
 v. 2, p. 280
 Cynthia (Pillow), v. 2, p. 280

Bieser

Frank, v. 5, p. 11
 Jacob, v. 5, p. 11
 Joyce (Muirheid), v. 5, p. 11
 Marilyn (Bolchunos), v. 5,
 p. 11
 Merrill, v. 5, p. 11
 Otto, v. 5, p. 11
 Ralph, v. 5, p. 11
 Shirley (Higgins), v. 5, p. 11

Billig

Grace Adele Catherwood, v. 1,
 p. 128
 James Oakes, v. 1, p. 128
 James Oakes, Mrs., v. 1,
 pp. 128, 129

Birkins

Charline J., v. 1, p. 130

Bissell

Ethelbert, v. 5, p. 121
 Eunice, v. 5, p. 121
 Helen M., v. 5, p. 121

Black

Eleanor Adelaide (Cole), v. 1,
 p. 131
 George, v. 1, p. 131
 Louise Jane (Melville), v. 1,
 p. 131
 Melville, v. 1, pp. 131-132
 Robert Malachi, v. 1, p. 48

Robert, v. 1, p. 48

Sarah, v. 1, p. 48

Blackman

Adele, v. 6, p. 435
 Augustus, v. 6, p. 435
 Daniel, v. 1, p. 133
 Ellis, v. 1, pp. 133-134

Blake

Hannah, Mrs., v. 6, p. 342

Blanc

Minnie Richard, Mrs., v. 4,
 pp. 96-97

Blevins

Harriet Mendenhall, v. 1,
 p. 137
 Montie, v. 1, pp. 135-137

Blickensderfer

James D. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 146

Blickley

Marie, v. 5, p. 104
 Urban, v. 5, p. 106
 Urvan, v. 5, p. 104

Bliss

Jerry C., v. 1, pp. 139-140
 Jerry C. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 138
 Lillian (Farris), v. 1, p. 138
 Sarah (Edwards), v. 1, p. 138

Block

Augustus Hauck, Mrs., v. 1,
 pp. 141, 142

Blood

James H., v. 1, pp. 143, 145
 James H., Mrs., v. 1, p. 143
 Lina Bartels, v. 1, p. 144
 Lina Elise, Mrs., v. 1, p. 145

Bluestone

Belle Gittel, v. 4, pp. 8, 10
 Joseph I., Dr. and Mrs., v. 4,
 p. 8

Blundell

Family, v. 1, p. 146
 Hugh, v. 1, p. 146
 James, v. 1, pp. 146, 147-148
 Mary, v. 1, p. 147
 William, v. 1, pp. 147-148

Blunt

Edward A., v. 1, p. 154
 Family, v. 1, pp. 149-150
 Florence E., v. 1, p. 154
 Fred, v. 1, pp. 149-150
 Fred C., v. 1, pp. 153-154
 Joseph D., v. 1, p. 151
 Lawrence C., v. 1, p. 154
 Mark H., v. 1, p. 154
 Mark L., v. 1, pp. 152, 153-
 154, 155

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Blunt (cont.)

Mark S., v. 1, pp. 149-150

Bobbitt

Eugene Allen, v. 1,
pp. 156-157

Bock

Hilda (Schabarum), v. 1,
p. 158
Minnie (Koehler), v. 1, p. 158
Otto, v. 1, p. 158
William, v. 1, p. 158

Boettcher

Charles, v. 1, pp. 176, 180,
192, 195, 202, 204
Charles II, v. 1, p. 180
Charles K., v. 1, p. 181
Claude Kedzie, v. 1, pp. 159,
160-161, 162, 163, 164,
165, 166, 167-168, 169-
170, 171-172, 173, 174-
175, 176-177, 178-179,
180, 181, 182-183, 186,
200, 202, 203-204
Edna Case, Mrs., v. 1, pp. 184,
185, 186, 187-188, 189,
190, 191, 204
Fannie August, Mrs., v. 1, pp.
192-194, 195-196, 197-
198, 199, 200-201, 202
Mansion, v. 1, pp. 203-204
Ruth, v. 1, p. 197

Bolt

George H., v. 1, p. 205

Bond

James Ralston, v. 4, p. 260
Lucy Angel, v. 4, p. 260

Bone

David F. (Rev.), v. 1,
pp. 206-207

Bonfils

Eugene Napoleon, v. 1,
pp. 210-212
F. G., v. 1, p. 213
Francois, v. 1, pp. 208-212
Frederick Gillmer, v. 1,
pp. 208-212
Frederick W., Mrs., v. 1,
p. 217
Frederick Walker (Major),
v. 1, pp. 213, 214-215, 216
Helen, v. 1, pp. 218- 219
Henrietta B. (Lewis), v. 1,
p. 210
Lois, Mrs., v. 1, p. 216
Lois (Fisher), v. 1, p. 214
Lucinda (Alden), v. 1, p. 209

Marion, v. 1, p. 214

Bonham

Austin G., v. 1, p. 220
Claude D. (Dr.), v. 1,
pp. 220-222
David Jr., v. 1, p. 220
David Sr., v. 1, p. 220

Booth

Levi, v. 1, pp. 223-224; v. 6,
pp. 458-459
Lillie Belle (Hollbrook), v. 1,
p. 223
Millie, Mrs., v. 1, p. 223

Boothroyd

Arnold, v. 5, p. 54
Edith Gertrude, v. 5, p. 57
Samuel, v. 5, p. 54

Borden

Adelia A. (Williams), v. 1,
p. 225
Olney A., v. 1, p. 225
Timothy, v. 1, p. 225
Bosler
Bertie, v. 6, p. 82
Flora, v. 6, p. 82
William H. (Willie), v. 6, p. 82

Bosworth

Arthur, v. 1, p. 226
Harold, v. 1, p. 226
J. O., v. 1, p. 226
Joab, v. 1, pp. 226-227
Joab Otis, v. 1, pp. 226-227
Leonora Nettie Snyder, v. 1,
p. 226
Leonora S., Mrs., v. 1,
pp. 226-227
Robert, v. 1, p. 226

Bourne

Helen, Mrs., v. 6, p. 292

Bowen

Alma (Pike), v. 1, p. 229
Anna W. (Boyles), v. 1, p. 228
Charles Willard, v. 1, p. 228
Eleanor (Burdess), v. 1, p. 229
George W., v. 1, p. 228
Harry T., v. 1, p. 229
Helen Hicks, v. 1, p. 228
John W., v. 1, p. 229

Bowes

James C., v. 1, p. 230

Bowman

Clinton A., v. 1, p. 231
Francis W., v. 1, p. 231
Mabel T. (Gifford), v. 1,
p. 231

Boyd

Alida, v. 1, pp. 274-275
Alida Condi, v. 1, pp. 274-275
Elsie (Noble), v. 1, pp. 274-275
James, v. 1, pp. 274-275
Jessi Condi, v. 1, pp. 274-275
Mary (Nevin), v. 5, p. 9
Samuel, v. 5, p. 9

Bradbury

Hattie A. (Howe), v. 1, p. 232
William Chase, v. 1, pp. 232-233

Bradford

Charlotte, Mrs., v. 1, p. 234
Rollie W., v. 1, p. 234

Bradley

Emily (Graves), v. 4, p. 74
Loretta, v. 3, p. 74
William, v. 3, p. 74

Braerton

Edward, v. 1, p. 235
Emily (Gibson), v. 1, p. 235
Lula J. (Dunbar), v. 1, p. 235
Warder L., v. 1, p. 235

Braiden

Maude A., v. 1, p. 236
William A., v. 1, p. 236

Brandt

Lucus, v. 4, pp. 367-369

Braun

Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 426
John, v. 6, p. 426
Katherine (Hochmuth), v. 6,
p. 426

Breitenstein

George J., v. 1, p. 237
Helen C. (Thomas), v. 1,
p. 237
Ida S. (Sala), v. 1, p. 237
Jacob, v. 1, p. 237
Jean Frederick, v. 1, p. 237
Jean S., v. 1, p. 237

Brenner

Euphemia Georgie, v. 6,
p. 442
Johann Nikolaus (Brünner),
v. 6, p. 439
Maria Magdalena (Morbach),
v. 6, p. 440
Mary Louisa, v. 6, p. 442
Wilhelm (Brünner), v. 6,
p. 439
Wilhelm Nikolaus Johannes,
v. 6, p. 442
Wilhelmina, v. 6, pp. 439, 442

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Brock

Charles Robert, v. 1, pp. 238-241
Daniel R., v. 1, p. 238
John, v. 1, p. 238
Mary (Lucas), v. 1, p. 238

Brodhag

Gus, v. 3, p. 184

Bromfield

Alfred John, v. 1, pp. 242-243
Alfred John Sr., v. 1, pp. 242, 245
Donald, v. 1, pp. 244-245
Edith (Dalziel), v. 1, pp. 244, 246
Edward J. (Rev.), v. 1, p. 244
Edward Thomas, v. 1, p. 246
Georgiana Sophia (Musgrave), v. 1, p. 246
Georgianna, v. 1, p. 244
Helen (Phipps), v. 1, p. 244
Jessie M. (Dalziel), v. 1, p. 242
Lawrence B., v. 1, pp. 244-245
Lawrence Beattie, v. 1, p. 245
Louesa (Bancroft, v. 1, p. 243

Brown

Cornelius, v. 1, p. 248
Donald F., v. 1, p. 247
Edward, v. 1, p. 248
Elisha, v. 1, p. 248
Elizabeth (Davis), v. 1, p. 248
George M., v. 2, p. 151
Georgia (Dunning), v. 2, p. 151
Henry C., v. 2, p. 69
Henry Cordes, v. 1, pp. 248-250
James B., v. 1, p. 247
Jane (Lide), v. 1, p. 248
Janet (Mackintosh Orr), Mrs., v. 1, p. 247
Mary Hoyt, Mrs., v. 1, pp. 251-252, 253
Mary (Lake), v. 1, p. 247
Nicholas, v. 2, p. 248
Norton H., v. 1, pp. 247, 251, 253
Polly (Newkirk), v. 1, p. 248
Samuel, v. 1, p. 248

Brownell

Mary A., v. 2, p. 112

Brus

Emile, v. 6, p. 315
Jeanne E., v. 6, p. 315

Brush

Carrie, v. 4, pp. 277-278
Ida, v. 6, p. 58
Jacob, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 58
Jared, v. 4, pp. 275-276
John, v. 4, p. 275
Martha Margarette, v. 4, pp. 275-277
Minnie Bell, v. 4, pp. 275-279
Nellie, v. 4, pp. 277-278
William, v. 4, pp. 275-277
William Wesley, v. 4, p. 275

Brusse

Archie B. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 254
Dana, v. 1, p. 254

Bryans

Ruth Virginia (Waldron), v. 1, p. 255
Vena (Allen), v. 1, p. 255
William A. I, v. 1, p. 255
William A. II, v. 1, p. 255
William A. III, v. 1, p. 255

Buckingham

Caroline (DeForest), v. 2, p. 41
Florence, v. 2, p. 41
R. G., v. 3, p. 282
R. G. (Dr.), v. 2, p. 57
Richard Greene (Dr.), v. 2, p. 41
Sarah Ella, v. 2, p. 41

Buford

Eliza, v. 5, pp. 289-291
William, v. 5, p. 289

Bulkley

Fidelia (Groendyoke), v. 1, p. 257
Frank, v. 1, pp. 256, 257-258, 259; v. 4, p. 75
G. T. (Judge), v. 1, p. 257
Gershon, v. 1, p. 257
Luella (Bergstresser), v. 1, pp. 257-258; v. 4, p. 75
Peter, v. 1, pp. 256-257
Ralph G., v. 1, p. 260
Ruth Scollard, Mrs., v. 1, p. 260

Burch

Alice V., Mrs., v. 1, p. 261
Donald V., v. 1, p. 261

Burchinell

Anne Maria (Wilson), v. 1, p. 262
Mant Cunningham, v. 1, p. 262

Thomas, v. 1, p. 262

William Kendal, v. 1, p. 262

Burdy

Anna (Schlitter) Mrs., v. 6, p. 28

Burger

Edith M. (Brown), v. 1, p. 264
Elizabeth (Nichol), v. 1, p. 263
James, v. 1, p. 263
James C., v. 1, pp. 263-264

Burgin

Charles H. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 265
Ernest W., v. 1, p. 265
Eva, v. 1, p. 265
Flanery N. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 265
James F. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 265
Mary J. (Winningham), v. 1, p. 265
Paralle G. (Hopkins), v. 1, p. 265
Samuel Steele, v. 1, p. 265

Burgoyne

Susan Price Fish, Mrs., v. 1, pp. 266-267

Burkhardt

Clara (Wagner), v. 1, p. 268
Emelia (Halbekann), v. 1, p. 271
Ernest, v. 1, pp. 268-269, 270
Harry Alton, v. 1, pp. 270-271
Lena (Berhnardt), v. 1, pp. 268, 270-271
Louis, v. 1, pp. 268, 270
Louis Sr., v. 1, pp. 268-270
William H., v. 1, p. 272

Burnham

Ellsworth, v. 1, p. 273
Maria Walker, v. 1, p. 273
Mary K. (Treat), v. 1, p. 273
Norman Griswold, v. 1, p. 273

Burrell

George, v. 5, p. 264
Maria Georgina Dare, v. 5, p. 264
Trepkina (Reed), v. 4, p. 264

Burrows

Cornelia, v. 4, p. 180
John (Gen.), v. 3, p. 180

Burton

Alida (Boyd), v. 1, pp. 274-275
Elizabeth (Payne), v. 1, pp. 274-275
Hiram, v. 1, pp. 274-275
James, v. 1, pp. 274-275

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Bush

W. H., v. 1, p. 279
 William H., v. 1, pp. 276-278
 William H. (Eleanor), Mrs.,
 v. 1, p. 279

Buxton

Charles R., v. 1, p. 213

Byers

Elizabeth Minerva Sumner,
 v. 2, p. 61
 Frank, v. 5, p. 252
 Frank S., v. 1, p. 284
 Frank Sumner, v. 1, p. 280
 Mary (Robinson), v. 5,
 pp. 252-254
 Mary L. (Sullivan), v. 1,
 p. 280
 William (Bill) Newton, v. 1,
 pp. 282-284
 William N., v. 1, pp. 280, 281;
 v. 5, pp. 252-253

Byrd

Harry Flood, v. 4, p. 86
 Richard Evelyn, v. 4, p. 86
 Sally, v. 4, p. 86

- C -

Caldwell

Harvey, v. 6, pp. 310-311
 Lew, v. 6, pp. 310-311
 Narcissus Burdette (Vasquez),
 v. 6, pp. 310-311
 William E., v. 6, pp. 310-311

Calhoun

Martha B. Mrs., v. 6, p. 100

Campbell

Effie (Norman), v. 2, p. 5
 Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 5
 G. F., v. 2, p. 5
 George Washington, v. 2, p. 5
 Hazlett, v. 2, pp. 1-2
 Hugh, v. 2, p. 1
 James, v. 2, p. 1
 Margaret (Patterson), v. 2,
 pp. 3, 102
 Mary Alice (Price), v. 2, p. 5
 Miriam (Savage), v. 2, p. 4
 Richard Crawford, v. 2, pp. 3,
 102
 Robert, v. 2, pp. 1-2
 Thomas Patterson, v. 2, pp. 3-
 4, 102
 Walter M., v. 2, p. 5

Candler

Jo-Dean, v. 5, p. 27

Patsy, Mrs., v. 5, p. 27

Carey

D. Malcolm, v. 6, p. 204

Carlson

Carl, v. 2, p. 174
 Elvira, v. 2, p. 174
 Joel, v. 2, p. 174

Carlton

Albert E., v. 2, p. 6
 Ethel (Frizzell), v. 2, p. 6
 Eva (Stanton), v. 2, p. 6
 Leslie, v. 2, p. 6

Carpenter

Anna (Ketcham), v. 2, p. 7
 Charles Ketcham, v. 2, p. 7
 Daniel Powell, v. 2, p. 7
 Jennet (Coryell), v. 2, p. 7
 Louis G., v. 2, pp. 7, 8-12

Carringer

Anthony S., v. 2, p. 13
 Elizabeth (called Daisy)
 (Olds), v. 2, p. 14
 Franklin Eugene, v. 2, pp. 13-14
 Frederick W., v. 2, pp. 13-14
 Maria (Moyer), v. 2, p. 13

Carroll

Amasa P., v. 2, p. 15
 Elijah, v. 2, p. 15
 Fay H., v. 2, pp. 15-16
 Henry O., v. 2, p. 15
 Margaret (Printice), v. 2, p. 15
 Pacia (Smith), v. 2, p. 15

Carson

Kit (Christopher), v. 2, p. 17;
 v. 3, pp. 6-7, 8-9; v. 3,
 p. 6, 8
 Kit III, v. 2, p. 18
 Kit IV, v. 2, p. 18
 Maria Josepha (Jaramiel), v. 3,
 p. 6, 8

Carter

Charles M., v. 2, p. 19
 Cora Louisa, v. 2, p. 19
 Genevieve, v. 2, p. 20
 George F., v. 2, p. 19
 James Townsend, v. 2, p. 20
 Marie (Brickson), v. 2, p. 20
 Nellie J., v. 2, p. 19
 Perry James, v. 2, p. 20
 Sarah Amanda (Russell), v. 2,
 p. 19
 Sarah Marie (Gill), v. 2, p. 20

Case

Austin G., Dr. and Mrs., v. 1,
 pp. 184, 185

Gertrude, v. 4, p. 20

Casner

Calvin, v. 3, p. 283
 Mary S. (Davidson), v. 3, p.
 283
 May D., v. 3, p. 283

Cass

Joseph B., v. 2, p. 21
 O. D. (Dr.), v. 2, pp. 51-52
 Oscar D., v. 2, p. 21

Cavanaugh

James Michael, v. 2, pp. 22-23

Cecil

Attilia White, v. 2, p. 246
 Philip, v. 2, p. 246
 Polly (Wigal), v. 2, p. 246

Cheesman

Alice (Foster), v. 4, p. 385
 Gladys Foster, v. 4, p. 385
 Walter Scott, v. 4, p. 385

Cheney

John, Mr. and Mrs., v. 2, p. 66

Chern

Anna (Podolsky), v. 4, p. 404
 David, v. 4, p. 404
 Mary, v. 4, p. 404

Cherrington

Ben Mark, v. 2, pp. 23-24
 Edith (Harper), v. 2, p. 23
 George W., v. 2, p. 23
 Laura Ada (Frick), v. 2, p. 23

Chilcotte

George M., v. 3, p. 10

Chipeta, v. 2, p. 25

Chisholm

Colin A., v. 2, p. 26
 Frances (Johnstone), v. 2,
 p. 26
 Margaret (McKenzie), v. 2,
 p. 26
 Mary (Macdonell), v. 2, p. 26
 Theodore, v. 2, p. 26
 Theodore Aeneas Frank, v. 2,
 pp. 26-27

Choury

Armond, v. 2, pp. 28-31

Christian

Charles Jacob, v. 2, p. 32
 Charlotte Ruth, v. 2, p. 32
 Mary Catherine (Leffler), v. 2,
 p. 32

Christy

Betty Ann, v. 4, p. 216
 Ralph L. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 216
 Eleanor, v. 4, p. 216
 Ralph Jr., v. 4, p. 216

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Church

George Henry, v. 2, p. 33
 John Frank, v. 2, p. 33
 Marcus F., v. 2, p. 33
 Sarah Henderson (Miller),
 v. 2, p. 33

Clark

Bessis P., Mrs., v. 6, p. 310
 Elroy Newton, v. 2, pp. 34-35
 Fannie, v. 6, p. 386
 Fannie Adele, v. 2, p. 36
 Frank Goss, v. 2, p. 36
 George Fillinghast, v. 6,
 p. 386
 George T., v. 2, p. 36
 George T. (Katherine), Mrs.,
 v. 2, p. 36
 Katherine Goss, v. 6, p. 386
 Ransom Loup, v. 2, p. 34
 Sarah Ann (Hyde), v. 2, p. 34
 Stephen, v. 2, p. 34

Clarkson

A. L. (Fulcher), Mrs., v. 2,
 p. 297
 George E., v. 2, p. 297
 Hannah, Mrs., v. 6, p. 100

Clayton

George D., v. 4, p. 17
 Margaret M., v. 4, p. 17
 Mary (Morrison), v. 4, p. 17

Cleaveland

Helen B. (Worrall), v. 2, p. 37
 John R., v. 2, p. 37

Cleere

Alice (Stemmons), v. 2, p. 38
 Florence (Randolph), v. 2,
 p. 38
 James L., v. 2, p. 38
 John (Dr.), v. 2, p. 38
 Richard, v. 2, p. 38
 Roy Leon (Dr.), v. 2, p. 38

Clem

Allen H., v. 4, p. 325
 Clara Milheim, v. 4, p. 325
 E. High, v. 4, p. 325
 Emily Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 325

Cleveland

Clara Louise (Mather), v. 2,
 p. 39
 Frederick, v. 2, p. 39
 Gertrude Maria (Freleigh),
 v. 2, p. 39
 Gertrude Maria (Van Vranken), v. 2, p. 39
 Grover, v. 2, p. 39
 Mather (Dr.), v. 2, p. 40

Newcomb, v. 2, pp. 39-40

Clickener

Annie Berneice, v. 3, pp. 47-
 49
 John LaTourette, v. 3, pp. 47-
 48
 Mary (LaTourette), v. 3, p. 47
 Matthias, v. 3, p. 47

Cliff

Edward P., v. 6, p. 124

Clough

Anna L., v. 4, pp. 392, 393
 John, v. 4, p. 392
 Laura Louise, v. 6, p. 379
 Mary, v. 4, p. 392
 Nellie (Edger), v. 6, p. 379
 Otis Hale, v. 6, p. 379

Cobb

Charles Denison, v. 2, p. 41
 Charles Denison Sr., v. 2,
 p. 41
 Clarence, v. 2, pp. 41-42
 Florence (Buckingham), v. 2,
 p. 41
 Francis M., v. 6, p. 313
 Kittie May, v. 6, p. 313
 Marguerite (Bennet), v. 2,
 p. 42
 Sarah Ella (Buckingham), v. 2,
 p. 41

Cochems

Frank H. (Dr.), v. 2, pp. 43, 44, 45
 Jane Nugent, Mrs., v. 2,
 pp. 43, 44, 45

Cochran

Helen Hewitt, Mrs., v. 3,
 p. 198
 Hewitt, v. 3, p. 198
 Mary Jane, v. 3, p. 198

Coe

Decius Octavius, Mr. and
 Mrs., v. 2, p. 46
 Harry Kirk, v. 2, p. 46
 Helen Ruth, v. 2, p. 46
 Mabel, v. 2, p. 46

Coffman

Charles Augustus, v. 6, p. 483
 Florence Genevieve, v. 6,
 p. 483
 Genevieve (Southard), v. 6,
 p. 483

Cohn

Amelia, v. 6, p. 77
 Louis, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 77

Cole

Almeda H., v. 2, p. 48
 Berenice, v. 4, p. 408
 Eudora K., v. 2, p. 48
 Jacob, v. 4, p. 408
 Jesse, v. 2, p. 47
 John, v. 2, p. 47
 John Jr., v. 2, p. 48
 Mary (Bowen), v. 2, p. 48
 Miriam K., v. 2, p. 48
 Rachel J. (Bradford), v. 2,
 p. 47
 Samuel D., v. 2, p. 48
 Spencer, v. 2, p. 48
 Thomas, v. 2, p. 48

Coleman

Julius Archer, v. 6, pp. 75, 76
 Martha Elam, v. 6, pp. 75, 76
 Nancy McCormick, v. 6,
 pp. 75, 76

Colorado Pioneer Dentists

v. 2, p. 49

Colorado Pioneer Doctors

v. 2, pp. 51-60

Colorado Pioneer Women

v. 2, pp. 61-65

Combs

Alice, v. 6, p. 465
 J. A., v. 6, p. 465
 Justus, Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
 p. 67
 Rose B., v. 6, p. 465
 Susanna, v. 2, p. 67

Comer

Marie, Mrs., v. 5, p. 91

Comparet

Alexis, v. 2, p. 68

Conner

Cecil R., v. 2, p. 70

Constance

John G., v. 2, p. 71

Converse

Elisha E., v. 2, pp. 72, 73
 Harry E., v. 2, pp. 72, 73
 Mary (Parker), v. 2, p. 72
 Mary P. (Capt.), v. 2, pp. 72, 73
 Parker, v. 2, p. 72

Cook

Charles A., v. 5, pp. 278-280

Cooke

Helen Archibold, Mrs., v. 2,
 p. 74
 Persifor Marsden (Dr.), v. 2,
 p. 74

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Cooper

Charles, v. 2, p. 79
 Charles S., v. 2, p. 115
 Elthea Belle, v. 2, p. 115
 Jane O., v. 2, p. 78, 82; v. 4, p. 6
 Jane Olivia (Barnes), v. 2, p. 78; v. 4, p. 7
 Jennie O. (Barnes), v. 2, p. 77
 Job A., v. 2, pp. 77, 78; v. 4, pp. 6, 7
 Job Adams, v. 2, pp. 79-80, 81-82
 John W., v. 2, pp. 75, 76
 Josephine (Brewster), v. 2, p. 115
 Kemp, v. 6, p. 445
 Maria (Hadley), v. 2, pp. 79, 82
 Mary, v. 6, p. 445
 Meredith Kimberley, v. 2, pp. 75, 76
 Olivia (Denham), v. 4, p. 6
 Thomas, v. 2, pp. 79, 82

Coors

Adolph (Ad) III, v. 2, pp. 83-85
 Adolph Herman Joseph, v. 2, pp. 83-84
 Family, v. 2, pp. 83-85
 Joe, v. 2, p. 84
 Louise, Mrs., v. 2, p. 86
 Mary (Grant), v. 2, p. 85

Copeland

William, Mr. and Mrs., v. 2, p. 87

Copp

E. A., Mrs., v. 6, p. 369

Corbin

Franklin, Mrs., v. 6, p. 64
 W. W., Mrs., v. 6, p. 234

Cornish

Jacob Miller, v. 2, p. 88
 John Jay, v. 2, p. 88
 Sarah Jane, v. 2, p. 88

Cory

Abner, v. 2, p. 212
 Margaret S., v. 2, p. 212
 Sarah Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 212

Coulehan

Jerry, v. 2, pp. 88-90

Coulter

Anne, Mrs., v. 2, p. 91

Cowan

Andrew, v. 1, pp. 195, 200, 202

Elizabeth, v. 1, pp. 195, 200, 202

Fannie Augusta, v. 1, p. 200

John, v. 1, pp. 195, 200, 202

Cox

Sam P. (Maj.), v. 2, p. 274

Cozens

Mary York, v. 2, p. 92
 William Zane, v. 2, p. 92

Craig

Carrie, v. 2, p. 197
 Frank, v. 2, p. 78
 Howard, v. 2, p. 197
 Nellie (Jenkins), v. 2, p. 197
 W. H., v. 2, p. 197

Crannell

Fannie Eleanor (Grout), v. 2, p. 93; v. 4, p. 286
 Florence, v. 4, p. 286
 Laura Adell (Prink), v. 2, p. 93
 Matthew Jr., v. 2, p. 93
 Philip Wendell, v. 2, p. 93; v. 4, p. 286

Crawford

James H., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 154
 John E., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 154
 Lucille, v. 5, p. 154

Cree

Alexander, v. 2, pp. 94, 95
 Family, v. 2, pp. 96-97

Creede

Nicholas C., v. 2, p. 98

Creger

James H., v. 2, p. 99
 Mary Martha, v. 2, p. 99

Crisp

Ada (Morris), v. 2, p. 100
 John Andrews, v. 2, p. 100
 John Douglas (Dr.), v. 2, p. 100
 Mary Ellen (Constock), v. 2, p. 100

Croke

Euretta (Burdick), v. 2, p. 101
 Thomas B. Jr., v. 2, p. 101
 Thomas Bernard, v. 2, pp. 101-102

Cromwell

Daniel, v. 6, p. 3
 Edward, v. 6, p. 3
 Gertrude, v. 6, p. 3
 James, v. 6, p. 3
 John (Col.), v. 6, p. 3
 Martha W. (Birdsall), v. 6, p. 3

Oliver (Sir) v. 6, p. 3

Crow

Dora, v. 2, p. 104
 Floyd, v. 2, pp. 105-106
 Maggie, Mrs., v. 2, pp. 103-106
 Vernon, v. 2, pp. 105-106
 William, v. 2, pp. 103-106

Crowley

Elizabeth, Mrs., v. 2, p. 63

Crowther

Minnie Ellen, v. 5, p. 117
 Howard, Mrs., v. 5, p. 117
 Orson, v. 5, p. 117
 T. A., v. 5, p. 117

Cullen

Frank, v. 2, p. 107
 Mary (Robinson), v. 2, p. 107
 Neil R., v. 2, p. 107

Cunningham

John, v. 6, p. 295
 Virginia, v. 6, p. 295

Curfman

Christian, v. 2, p. 108
 Elise Louise, v. 2, p. 108
 Elsie Drucilla (Gelvin), v. 2, p. 108
 George Hardin, v. 2, pp. 108-109
 George Hardin Jr., v. 2, p. 108
 John Colvin, v. 2, p. 108
 Lenora Alice (Alexander), v. 2, p. 108
 Lenora Jane, v. 2, p. 108
 Margaret (Gehret), v. 2, p. 108
 Mary Martha, v. 2, p. 108
 Robert, v. 2, p. 108

Curtice

George D., v. 2, p. 112
 Jennie, Mrs., v. 2, p. 110, 112
 Louis A., v. 2, p. 110, 112
 Louis A., Mr. and Mrs., v. 2, p. 111
 S. Jennie, v. 2, p. 112
 William J., v. 2, p. 112

Curtis

Amelia Ann, v. 4, p. 203
 Henry H., v. 4, p. 203
 Julia Frances, v. 4, p. 203

Cushman

Indiana (Sopris), v. 6, p. 115
 Samuel, v. 6, p. 115

Cuthbert

Gertrude (Hill), v. 2, p. 113
 James Hazzard (Rev.), v. 2, p. 113

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Cuthbert (cont.)

Julia Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 113
Lucius Montrose, v. 2,
pp. 113-114

- D -

Dale

Emma Charlotte, v. 6, p. 305
James, v. 6, p. 305
Sarah (Baughman), v. 6,
p. 305

Daly

Clarence Joseph, v. 2, pp. 115-
116, 117, 118
Elizabeth Marie, v. 2, p. 116
Elthea Belle (Cooper), v. 2,
pp. 115, 117
Helen Josephine, v. 2, pp. 117,
118
Imogene Elizabeth, v. 2,
pp. 117, 118
John, v. 2, pp. 115, 117
Margaret (Touhy), v. 2,
pp. 115, 117
Marie A. (Genter), v. 2, p. 115
Mary (Shaw), v. 2, p. 116
Thomas F., v. 2, pp. 117, 118
Thomas F., Mrs., v. 2, p. 118
Thomas Franklin II, v. 2,
p. 116
Thomas Franklin, v. 2, p. 115

Dalziel

Edith, v. 1, pp. 244, 246
Jane (Dyke), v. 1, pp. 242,
244, 246
Jessie M., v. 1, p. 242
John S., v. 2, p. 119
John Sanderson, v. 1, pp. 242,
244, 246

Daniels

Cicely, v. 2, pp. 120-125
William B., Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 2, p. 121
William Cooke (Major), v. 2,
pp. 120-125

Danks

Addie (Cooley), v. 2, p. 125
Joseph, v. 2, p. 125
Matilda E. (Lanham), v. 2,
p. 125
William C., v. 2, p. 125

Davis

A. Kate, v. 4, p. 59
Amanda Bailey (Swift), v. 4,
p. 384

Anna L. (Inskepp), v. 1, p. 250
Benjamin, v. 3, p. 323
Betsy Jones (Wood), v. 4,
p. 59
Charles Alfred, v. 4, p. 384
Charles R., v. 4, pp. 57, 59, 60
Dolor, v. 1, p. 248
Simon (Dr.), v. 1, p. 248
Ed, v. 1, p. 136
Edna, v. 5, p. 281
Edward Michael, v. 2, pp. 218,
219
Emily Sanders (Willet), v. 4,
p. 384
Ethel Marian, v. 2, p. 203
Evan, v. 2, p. 203
Gertrude (Tucker), v. 6, p. 274
Glenn W., v. 6, p. 274
James Renwick, v. 5, p. 281
Jane Cory, v. 1, p. 250
Jean, v. 6, p. 274
Joan, v. 6, p. 274
Lydia C., v. 3, p. 323
Minnie E. (Wikoff), v. 5,
p. 281
Simon, Lt., v. 1, p. 248

Dawson

Caroline (Price), v. 2, p. 126
Clyde C., v. 2, pp. 126-127
Jesse W. (Dr.), v. 2, p. 126
Kathryn (Russell), v. 2, p. 127

Dayton

Elizabeth, Mrs., v. 2, pp. 128-
129, 130-131
William L., v. 2, pp. 128, 130

Dean

Emma, v. 4, p. 357
William, v. 4, p. 357

DeHarport

Jerome, v. 4, p. 96
L. A., v. 4, pp. 96-97

Delavan

Timothy, v. 3, p. 163

Denison

Agnes (Hawley), v. 2, p. 132
Charles, Dr., v. 2, p. 53; v. 3,
p. 163
Dudley Chase, v. 2, p. 132
Eunice (Dunbar), v. 2, p. 132
John Henry, v. 2, p. 132

Denver

James, v. 2, p. 141
James William (Gen.), v. 2,
pp. 133-134, 135-136,
137- 139

Louisa (Rombach), v. 2,
pp. 134, 140
Matthew Rombach, v. 2,
pp. 140-141
Patrick, v. 2, p. 133

Detwiler

Caroline (Ham), v. 1, p. 20
Catherine, v. 1, p. 20
Christian, v. 1, p. 20

Deuel

E. W., v. 2, p. 142
Harry A., v. 2, p. 142
T. A., v. 2, p. 142
William A., v. 2, p. 142

DeVivier

John, Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
pp. 143, 144

Dexter

Harriett, v. 5, p. 94
James V., v. 5, p. 94

Dickens

Rienzi C., v. 2, p. 126

Dickinson

Anna P. (Saunders), v. 2,
p. 149
Harold, v. 6, p. 434
John P., v. 2, pp. 145-150
Matilda Burtis, Mrs., v. 6,
p. 434
Muriel, v. 2, p. 149

Dickson

Edith (Brown), v. 2, p. 151
George Richard, v. 2, p. 152
Mary (Hover), v. 2, p. 152
Thomas A., v. 2, pp. 151-152
Thomas A. Sr., v. 2, p. 151

Dier

Althea (Quaintance), v. 2,
p. 156
Carolyn Lawrence, Mrs., v. 2,
p. 153
Elizabeth (Door), v. 2, p. 154
John, v. 2, p. 154
John Lawrence, v. 2, p. 153
John Q., v. 2, p. 153
William A., v. 2, p. 153
William Arthur, v. 2, pp. 154-158

Dimmitt

Harry, Mrs., v. 6, p. 422

Dines

Alta (Hopper), v. 2, p. 159
Charles W., v. 2, p. 159
Elizabeth (Dodd), v. 2, p. 159
Frances (Allen), v. 2, p. 159
Orville Lee, v. 2, pp. 159-160

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Dines (cont.)

Thomas, v. 2, p. 159
 Thomas A., v. 2, pp. 159-160
 William, v. 2, p. 159

Dingley

Blanche, v. 4, p. 258
 Frank Lambert, v. 4, p. 258
 Lucinda Mary Greeley, v. 4,
 p. 258

Dixon

Alexander Hamilton, v. 2,
 p. 161
 Emma (Bryson), v. 2, p. 161
 Etta (Fox), v. 2, p. 161
 Marjorie Adele, v. 2, p. 161
 Walter Abbottson, v. 2, p. 161

Dodge

David Child, v. 2, pp. 162-
 167, 169
 Dora E., v. 2, p. 168
 Emily K. (Oatman), v. 2,
 p. 166
 Frank Leroy, v. 2, p. 168
 George, v. 2, p. 168
 George B., v. 2, p. 166
 Nannie O. (Smith), Mrs., v. 2,
 pp. 169-171, 166
 Richard, v. 2, p. 162
 Susanna (Woolley), v. 2,
 p. 162
 William, v. 2, p. 162
 Zora, v. 2, p. 168

Dolan

Andrew, v. 4, p. 374
 Catherine A. (O'Connell), v. 4,
 p. 374
 Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 374
 Elizabeth D., v. 4, p. 374
 Ellen J., v. 4, p. 374
 Michael H., v. 4, p. 374

Dolman

Margaret (Martin), v. 2, p. 172
 Philip Harold, v. 2, p. 172
 Richard Denver, v. 2, pp. 172, 173

Donelson

Thomas, v. 1, pp. 147-148

Dooly

James, v. 6, p. 106
 Mary C., v. 6, p. 106
 May V., v. 6, p. 106

Dooner

Mary Marjorie, v. 3, p. 2
 Rosa A. (Gay), v. 3, p. 2
 William A., v. 3, p. 2

Doth

Marian A., v. 5, pp. 40-41, 42

Dotti

Marian, v. 5, pp. 43, 44
 Michael, v. 5, p. 44

Doud

Elivera, Mrs., v. 2, pp. 174-
 176
 Elvira (Carlson), v. 2, p. 174
 Frances Moore, v. 2, p. 175
 John Sheldon, v. 2, pp. 174-
 175
 John Sheldon, Mrs. and Mrs.,
 v. 2, p. 206
 Mamie Geneva, v. 2, pp. 175,
 206

Douglas

Charles Winfred, v. 2, p. 177
 Freda Bendix (Gillespie), v. 2,
 p. 177
 Frederic Huntington, v. 2,
 p. 177
 Josepha (Williams), v. 2,
 p. 177

Dow

Lewis, v. 2, pp. 269-273

Downey

D. B., v. 3, p. 75

Downing

Dr. James M., v. 2, p. 178
 Elizabeth (Miller), v. 2, p. 178
 Ella Margaret (Summers),
 v. 2, p. 178
 Emma (Leet), v. 2, p. 178
 Mary Virginia (Hennahan),
 v. 2, p. 178
 Miller, v. 2, p. 178
 Richard, v. 2, p. 178
 Richard I, v. 2, p. 178
 Richard II, v. 2, p. 178
 Richard III, v. 2, p. 178
 Sarah (Mount), v. 2, p. 178
 Thomas, v. 2, p. 178
 Warwick M., v. 2, p. 178

Draper

Amy Lucy (Mead), v. 2,
 p. 179
 Cecil Mead, v. 2, pp. 179-180
 Virginia Lee (St. John), v. 2,
 pp. 179-180
 William Tell, v. 2, p. 179

Drumm

Elizabeth (Funke), v. 6, p. 427
 Eugene, v. 6, p. 427
 Ruth, v. 6, p. 427

Duffield

Alice, v. 5, pp. 133-134

Frank, v. 5, p. 133

Duke

Ella (Ayres), v. 2, p. 182
 Nathaniel Wilson, v. 2,
 pp. 181-182
 Sarah (Wilson), v. 2, p. 181
 Thomas Alexander, v. 2,
 p. 181

Dunagan

Benjamin, v. 2, p. 183
 Jesse Jackson, v. 2, pp. 183-
 185
 Nicholas, v. 2, p. 183
 Sarah (Hutchinson), v. 2,
 p. 183

Duncan

David, v. 2, p. 187
 David Robardson Lincoln,
 v. 2, p. 187
 David Shaw, v. 2, pp. 187,
 188-192
 Laura L., v. 2, p. 189
 Laura Lovenia (Walton), v. 2,
 p. 187
 Margaret (Shaw), v. 2, p. 187

Dunklee

Alzina M. (Keyes), v. 2,
 p. 195
 David, v. 2, p. 193
 Donald C., v. 2, pp. 193-194
 Dorcas, v. 2, p. 193
 E. V., v. 2, p. 193
 Edward, v. 2, p. 193
 Edward V., v. 2, p. 195
 George F., v. 2, pp. 193, 195
 George J., v. 2, p. 195
 George Kinney (Dr.), v. 2,
 p. 195
 Jemima (Jesseman), v. 2,
 p. 195
 Mary E. (Vaughan), v. 2,
 p. 195
 Moses, v. 2, p. 195

Dunlavy

Francis, v. 6, p. 158
 John C., v. 6, p. 158
 Mary Frances, v. 6, p. 158

Durbin

Jessie, v. 4, p. 14
 L. T. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 14

DuRoy

Charles F., v. 2, p. 196
 Emma Gourley, v. 2, p. 196
 Robert Mignon, v. 2, p. 196

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Durr

Martha (Schlitter), Mrs., v. 6,
p. 28

Dyer

Carrie Craig, v. 2, p. 197
Molly, v. 5, p. 127
Thomas, Mr. and Mrs., v. 5,
p. 127

- E -

Earhart

Dorcas, v. 6, p. 216
Samuel, v. 6, p. 216

Earl

Nathan, v. 2, pp. 269-273

Eaton

Ben, v. 2, p. 62
Benjamin, v. 3, p. 282
Rebecca (Hill), v. 2, p. 62

Ebbs

Anna Marie, v. 6, p. 71
Robert, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
p. 71

Eccles

Cynthia, v. 3, p. 320
Mildred, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 318, 320

Edmondson

William G., Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 2, p. 198

Edwards

Alfred, v. 2, p. 202
Andrew Wesley, Rev., v. 2,
p. 199
Anna Belle (McClain), v. 2,
p. 201
Anna M. (Weyenbeurg), v. 6,
p. 369
Beatrice G., v. 2, p. 200
Billy, v. 6, p. 369
Charles Curtis (Rev.), v. 2,
p. 201
Ethel Marian (Davis), v. 2,
p. 203
Florence (Sargent), v. 2,
p. 201
J. Stanley, v. 2, pp. 199-200
Julia Elizabeth (Knight), v. 2,
p. 202
Justin Sargent, v. 2, p. 201
Loren McClain, v. 2, p. 201
Mabel Dean (Walker), v. 2,
p. 200
Mary Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 201

Merrick Knight, v. 2, pp. 202-203

Miriam Electa (Marvin), v. 2,
p. 199

Walker Stanley, v. 2, p. 200

Eggleston

Bigot, v. 2, p. 204
Darius, v. 2, p. 204
Elisha, v. 2, p. 204
Rachel (Kinne), v. 2, p. 204

Eisenhour

George Wayne, v. 2, p. 205

Eisenhower

Dwight D. (Gen.), v. 2, p. 205
Dwight David, v. 2, pp. 175,
206
John (Major), v. 2, p. 174, 206
Mamie Geneva Doud, Mrs.,
v. 2, pp. 175, 206
Milton, v. 2, p. 206
President, v. 2, p. 174

Ellington

Anna (Massie), v. 2, p. 207
Emmett Edward, v. 2, p. 207
Mary (Monroe), v. 2, p. 207
William T., v. 2, p. 207

Ellis

Anne, Mrs., v. 2, p. 208
Annie Laurie (Anne Lavine),
v. 2, p. 208
Daniel B., v. 2, p. 209
Earl, v. 2, p. 208
Erl Hubert, v. 2, p. 209
Herbert, v. 2, p. 208
Laura F. (Smith), v. 2, p. 209
Lena Allen Stoiber, v. 6,
pp. 183-185
Lyman A., v. 2, p. 209
Mark St. Clair (Com.), v. 6,
p. 184
Mary (Buckley), v. 2, p. 209
Mary Alice (Hardin), v. 2,
p. 209

Elsner

John, (Dr.), v. 2, p. 55

Emerson

Emily (Hapgood), v. 2, p. 210
Eugene H., v. 2, p. 210
Grace Gertrude (Stiles), v. 2,
p. 210
Guy LaVerne, v. 2, pp. 210-211
Harriet (Raymond), v. 2,
p. 210
Laura (Leesburg), v. 2, p. 210
William Allen, v. 2, p. 210

Empson

Caroline A., v. 6, p. 305
Nancy (Riley), v. 6, p. 305

Enos

Charles R. (Dr.), v. 2, p. 212
Charles Rolland, v. 2, pp. 212-213
Charles Wolcott (Dr.), v. 2,
p. 212
Eliza Ann (Thorp), v. 2, p. 212
Rebecca (Wood), Mrs., v. 2,
p. 213
Sarah Elizabeth (Cory), v. 2,
p. 212

Epperson

Asa, v. 4, p. 424; v. 5, p. 297
Harriet Samantha, v. 5, p. 297
Leah Barron, v. 4, p. 424; v. 5,
p. 297
Letha (York), v. 4, p. 424;
v. 5, p. 297
Mahala Ann, v. 4, p. 424
Thomas, v. 4, p. 424; v. 5,
p. 297

Eppich

Jeannette A., v. 2, pp. 214,
215, 216, 217
Louis F., v. 2, pp. 214, 215, 216, 217

Erhardt

Elizabeth Ann (Dr.), v. 3,
p. 165

Erwin

Harriet, v. 2, p. 280
James, v. 2, p. 280
Margaret (Caldwell), v. 2,
p. 280

Esgar

Frank T., v. 6, p. 252
Frank Tomlin, v. 6, p. 252
Marjorie Elizabeth, v. 6,
p. 252

Eskuche

Anna Pauline (Duefel), v. 2,
p. 218
Anna R., v. 2, p. 218
Eva Bella Zern, Mrs., v. 2,
p. 218
Geo. C., v. 2, p. 218
John Henry, v. 2, p. 218

Estes

Joel Sr., v. 2, p. 61

Evans

Alice, v. 2, p. 227; v. 4, p. 385
Anne, v. 2, pp. 224-227; v. 4,
p. 385

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Evans (cont.)

Benjamin, v. 2, p. 221
 Cornelia Lunt (Gray), v. 2,
 pp. 220, 224, 225
 David, v. 2, pp. 220-221, 222
 Ellen, v. 4, p. 27
 Evan Elbert, v. 2, p. 224
 Family, v. 2, pp. 222-227, 228
 Gladys (Cheesman), v. 2,
 pp. 221, 225; v. 4, p. 385
 Hannah (Canby), v. 2, p. 220
 John, v. 2, pp. 219, 220-221,
 222-227, 228; v. 4, p. 385
 John (Dr.), v. 2, pp. 220-221
 John II, v. 2, pp. 225-227,
 v. 4, p. 385
 John III, v. 2, pp. 225, 227
 Kathryn (Farrell), v. 2, p. 224
 Margaret P. (Gray), v. 2,
 p. 220
 Mary (Daly), v. 2, p. 227
 May, v. 4, p. 27
 Owen, v. 2, pp. 221-222
 Rachel, v. 2, pp. 220-221, 222
 Thomas B., v. 4, p. 27
 William G., Mrs., v. 2, p. 228
 William Gray, v. 2, pp. 220,
 223-224, 228

Ewing

J. Harold, v. 6, p. 48
 J. Harold, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 45, 46, 47, 48

- F -

Fahl

George, v. 6, p. 268
 Jane, v. 6, p. 268
 Josiah, v. 6, p. 268
 Minnie, v. 6, p. 268
 Sarah, v. 6, p. 268

Fairbanks

Alonzo D. (Rev.), v. 2, p. 229
 Annette J. (Taplin), v. 2,
 p. 229
 Arthur D., v. 2, p. 229
 Mary Dale (Redding), v. 2,
 p. 229

Fairchild

Aaron, v. 2, p. 33
 Elizabeth (Smith), v. 3, p. 33
 Frances (McKittrick), v. 3,
 p. 33
 Grace, v. 3, p. 33
 Grace (Folett), v. 3, p. 33
 John Henry, v. 3, p. 33

John, v. 3, p. 33

Faller

Alice Lycan, v. 2, pp. 231, 233
 Celia M. (Astle), v. 2, pp. 231, 233
 Donald Dean, v. 2, pp. 231, 233
 Georgiana (Lycan), v. 2,
 p. 230
 Guy W., v. 2, pp. 230-231;
 v. 3, pp. 285-286
 Guy William, v. 2, pp. 232-233
 William, v. 2, p. 230
 William George, v. 2, p. 233

Farish

A. T., v. 2, p. 234
 John B., v. 2, p. 234

Farnam

Alice M. (Davies), v. 6, p. 452
 Charles H., v. 6, p. 452
 May, v. 6, p. 452

Farnham

Florence, v. 4, p. 161
 Elizabeth, Mrs., v. 4, p. 161
 W. A., v. 4, p. 161

Feist

Bertha, Mrs., v. 2, pp. 235-236
 C. J., v. 2, p. 235

Fellows

Hannah, v. 3, p. 325
 Jennie, Mrs., v. 2, p. 237
 Rachel McGaffey, v. 3, p. 326
 Stephen Jr., v. 3, p. 325

Fenton

Caroline Lydia, v. 6, p. 396
 E. B. (Capt.), v. 6, p. 396
 Mattie Reed, v. 6, p. 396

Ferguson

Carrie (Johnson), v. 2,
 pp. 238-239
 Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 238
 John A. Jr., v. 2, pp. 238-239
 John Albert, v. 2, pp. 238-239
 Katherine (Morey), v. 2,
 p. 238
 Lulu, v. 2, p. 238
 Rachel, v. 2, p. 246

Ferretti

Jack, v. 2, pp. 240-241
 Joe, v. 2, pp. 240-241
 Kate, Mrs., v. 2, pp. 240-241

Ferrier

Mary, Mrs., v. 2, p. 242

Ferril

Alice MacHarg, v. 2, pp. 243-244
 Thomas Hornsby, v. 2, pp.
 243-244, 245
 Will C. (Family), v. 2, p. 246
 William C., v. 2, p. 243

Ferris

Gladys (Rice), v. 2, p. 247
 Harold N., v. 2, p. 247
 Peggy, v. 2, p. 247

Fertig

Wendell W. (Col.), v. 2, p. 248

Field

Eugene, v. 2, p. 249

Finding

Charles, Mrs., v. 2, pp. 250-253
 Chas. A., v. 2, pp. 252-253

Fine

Eben, v. 2, p. 254

Firestein

John, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
 pp. 44-45

Firth

Grace, v. 4, p. 396
 Helen (Cowing), v. 4, p. 396
 Wm. H., v. 4, p. 396

Fish

A. G. (Lizabeth), Mrs., v. 2,
 pp. 255, 256, 258
 Albert G., v. 2, pp. 257-258
 C. B., v. 2, p. 259
 Clarence, v. 2, p. 259
 F. D., v. 2, p. 259
 John Alonzo, v. 1, p. 266
 Lisbeth (Gladfelter), v. 2,
 p. 258
 Martha Jane (Goodrich), v. 2,
 p. 257
 Orlando, v. 2, p. 257
 Sarah Goody, Mrs., v. 2,
 p. 259
 Silas, v. 2, p. 257
 Susannah (Walden), v. 2,
 p. 257
 Susanne Price Fish, v. 1,
 pp. 266-267

Fisher

Barbara E., v. 6, p. 325
 Mary F., v. 6, p. 325
 W. G., v. 6, p. 325

Fiske

Hermine (Gladstone), v. 2,
 p. 261

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Fiske (cont.)

Louis E. "Lou," v. 2, pp. 260-262

Fitzgerald

Ben, Mr. and Mrs., v. 2, p. 263

Benjamin Lee, v. 2, p. 263

Fitzpatrick

J. B., v. 2, p. 264

Fleming

George, v. 2, p. 208

Joy Hope, v. 2, p. 208

Neeta Hope, v. 2, p. 208

Fletcher

Anne, v. 2, p. 260

Donald, v. 2, pp. 265-266

Flinchbaugh

David, v. 2, p. 267

Julia, v. 2, pp. 267-268

Flinn

Family, v. 2, pp. 269-273

George, v. 2, pp. 269-273

George Nelson, v. 2, p. 273

Mary, v. 2, pp. 269-273

Myron, v. 2, pp. 269-273

Sidney, v. 2, pp. 269-273

Flint

Leslie M., v. 2, p. 274

Lester H., v. 2, p. 274

Mary Cox, Mrs., v. 2, p. 274

Virgil, v. 2, p. 274

William M., v. 2, p. 274

Fluke

Charles L., v. 2, p. 275

Ford

Barney L., v. 2, pp. 276-277

Bob, v. 2, pp. 103, 278

Forrest

George, Mrs., v. 2, p. 279

Forsyth

Henry, v. 3, p. 250-251

Fortner

James F., v. 5, p. 2

Leora, v. 5, p. 2

Foster

Bessie (Bethell), v. 2, p. 280

Elizabeth (Potter), v. 4, p. 309

Harriet (Erwin), v. 2, p. 280

Hiram Glass, v. 4, p. 309

Hugh Bethell, v. 2, p. 280

John McEwen Jr., v. 2,

pp. 280-281

John McEwen Sr. (Dr.), v. 2,

pp. 280-281

Kendall Lee, v. 2, p. 280

Margery (Morrison), v. 2,
p. 280

Mary Ellen, v. 4, p. 309

Turner Saunders, v. 2, p. 280

Frankfather

Clay D., Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
p. 282

Dwight, v. 2, p. 282

Francisco

Henry, v. 3, p. 291

Josephine Baldwin, v. 3,
p. 291

Lionna, v. 3, p. 291

Fraser

Donald, v. 2, p. 284

Elizabeth Jane (Brown), v. 2,
p. 284

George Albert Holden, v. 2,
p. 283

Maria James (Nicholas), v. 2,
p. 283

Margaret Ethel Victoria (Dr.),
v. 2, p. 284

William (Rev.), v. 2, p. 283

Freed

Charles E., v. 2, p. 285

Nettie S., Mrs., v. 2, p. 285

Freeman

Amanda (Frank), v. 2, p. 287

Arthur W., Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
p. 286

Ellen (Ricker), v. 2, p. 287

Elmer L., Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
p. 286

Floyd J., Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
p. 286

Frank, v. 2, p. 287

Holman, Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
p. 286

Howard M., Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 2, p. 286

Jeanne (Wright), v. 2, p. 287

L. L., Mr. and Mrs., v. 2,
p. 286

Leonard (Dr.) v. 2, p. 287

Leonard Jr., v. 2, p. 287

Orville W., v. 2, p. 286

Paul, v. 2, p. 287

Pearl, v. 2, p. 286

Zoeth, v. 2, p. 287

French

Adelaide, v. 2, p. 290

C. M., v. 2, pp. 288-289

Daniel, V. 4, p. 101

Eva, v. 4, p. 101

Franklin G., v. 2, p. 290

George P., v. 2, p. 291

Grace Alice (Stone), v. 2,
p. 290

Mary Patton (Heald), v. 4,
p. 101

Richard Whitsitt, v. 2, p. 290

Sidney Willis, v. 2, p. 291

Stillman Willis, v. 2, pp. 290-291

Frick

Conrad, v. 4, p. 121

Flora, v. 4, p. 121

Friedman

Bertha (Sternberg), v. 2,
p. 292

J. Freyhan, v. 2, p. 292

Juliet (Freyhan), v. 2, p. 292

Nathan, v. 2, p. 292

Pauline Alma, v. 2, p. 292

William Sterne (Rev.), v. 2,
p. 292

Friedrick

Mrs. Lucie, v. 6, p. 120

Frost

Clarinda, v. 6, p. 419

Ilah B., v. 6, p. 419

William Henry, v. 6, p. 419

Fulcher

A. L. (Clarkson), Mrs., v. 2,
p. 297

Anna Lee, v. 2, pp. 293-296

Etta, v. 2, p. 293

Ira, v. 2, p. 243

John, v. 2, p. 293

Mary, v. 2, p. 293

Millard, v. 2, p. 293

Silas Redmon, v. 2, pp. 293-296

Tom, v. 2, p. 293

Fuller

Douglas E., v. 2, p. 298

Robert, v. 2, p. 298

Fullerton

Clara L. (Oyler), v. 2, p. 299

Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 299

Fullerton (cont.)

James, v. 2, p. 299

Jane (Paul), v. 2, p. 299

Janet, v. 2, p. 299

Kate, v. 2, pp. 299-300

Paul, v. 2, p. 299

Wilfred, v. 2, pp. 299-300

William, v. 2, p. 299

Fulscher

Carrie (Lammers), v. 2, p. 301

Otto, v. 2, p. 301

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Furman

Adolph, v. 2, pp. 1-2
Harry, v. 2, pp. 1-2

Fynn

Arthur John, v. 2, pp. 302-303
Mary (Barnes), v. 2, p. 302
Mary (MacDonald), v. 2,
p. 302
Michael, v. 2, p. 302
Rose (Curry), v. 2, p. 302

- G -

Gajefski

Anna, Mrs., v. 3, p. 3
Michael, v. 3, p. 3

Gallagher

Mary, v. 4, p. 3
Reddy, v. 4, p. 3

Gallaher

Beatrice A. (McGloine), v. 3,
p. 2
Eliza Jane (Lutton), v. 3, p. 1
Horace Augustin, v. 3, p. 2
John, v. 3, p. 2
John Sr., v. 3, p. 2
John Augustin, v. 3, p. 2
Marjorie, v. 3, p. 2
Mary Marjorie (Dooner), v. 3,
p. 2
Thomas Jones, v. 3, p. 1
Thomas Jones Sr., v. 3, p. 1

Gallup

Amelia Sefton (Hittle), v. 3,
p. 4
Charlotte (McClellan), v. 3,
p. 5
Charlotte Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 5
Edith, v. 3, p. 4
George Hittle, v. 3, pp. 4-5
James Henry, v. 3, p. 4
Pearl, v. 3, p. 4
Sarah (Boalt), v. 3, p. 4
William, v. 3, p. 4

Garcia

Estevan delaCruz, v. 3,
pp. 6, 8
Joseph Samuel (Rev.), v. 3,
pp. 6-7, 8-9
Maria Manuela (Sanchez),
v. 3, pp. 6, 8

Gardiner

Iona M., v. 6, p. 294
Nellie, v. 6, p. 294
William, v. 6, p. 294

Gardner

Elliott, v. 5, p. 99
Gib, v. 5, p. 99
Glen, v. 5, p. 99
Helen J. (Knox), v. 3, p. 11
James Frank, v. 3, pp. 10-12

Garramone

John, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3, p. 13

Garvin

Delilah E., v. 2, p. 183
John, v. 2, p. 183
Margaret (Sutton), v. 2, p. 183
William Anderson, v. 2, p. 183

Gaskill

Bertha, v. 3, p. 14
Family, v. 3, p. 14
L. D. Q. (Capt.), v. 3, p. 14

Gates

Charles C. Jr., v. 3, pp. 15,
17, 18-19
Charles Cassius, v. 3, pp. 15-
16, 17
Charles Cassius, Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 3, pp. 15-16
Gideon, v. 3, pp. 15, 17
Hazel LaDora (Rhoads),
v. 3, pp. 15, 17
Jane Duney (Swaner), v. 3,
pp. 15, 18
John Gideon, v. 3, pp. 15, 17
Ruth Ann (Voorheis), v. 3,
pp. 15, 17

Geary

Peter, v. 3, p. 20

Geddes

Willard (Olga Ostwald), Mrs.,
v. 3, pp. 21-22
William F., Mrs., v. 5, p. 15

Gengenbach

Anne Welty (Stuart), v. 3,
p. 23
Franklin Paul, v. 3, p. 23
John Henry, v. 3, p. 23
Margaret Stuart, v. 3, p. 23
Margarette Henrietta
(Grossman), v. 3, p. 23

Gengz

E. H., v. 5, p. 88

Genter

E. W., v. 2, p. 115
Marie A., v. 2, p. 115

Gentle

Elizabeth Ann, v. 3, p. 24
Fielder, v. 3, p. 24
Sarah (Onstadt), v. 3, p. 24

Georgia

Charles S., v. 3, pp. 25, 26
Charles S. Jr., v. 3, pp. 25, 26-27
Delphi, v. 3, p. 25
Delphi G., v. 3, p. 25
Harmon S., v. 3, p. 25
Irene E., v. 3, p. 25
Lena B. (Aldrich), v. 3, pp. 25, 26
Theodore R., v. 3, p. 25

Gewinner

J. H., Mrs., v. 3, p. 28

Giberson

Cole, v. 3, p. 29
Edith Mary (Chamberlain),
v. 3, p. 29
Elizabeth Ann (McDonald),
v. 3, p. 29
Glen, v. 3, p. 29
Howard, v. 3, p. 29
Jim, v. 3, p. 29
Kenneth, v. 3, p. 29
Roy, v. 3, p. 29
Wilbert S., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
p. 29
Winfield, v. 3, p. 29

Gibson

Claudia, v. 4, p. 190
Lillian, Mrs., v. 4, p. 190

Gifford

Alice, v. 3, p. 303
Charles A., v. 3, p. 303
Helen, v. 3, p. 303

Gilbert

Braxton, v. 1, p. 54
Clark, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
p. 83
Edward, v. 2, pp. 135, 137
Margaret, v. 1, pp. 52-53, 54
Stephen, v. 1, pp. 54-56

Gilbo

Bertha Gaskill, Mrs., v. 3,
p. 14

Gildersleeve

Finch (Lt.), v. 3, p. 30
George Snyder, v. 3, p. 31
George Whitfield, v. 3, pp. 30-32
Laura, v. 3, p. 31
Lillian, v. 3, p. 31
Mary (Seymour), v. 3, p. 30
Richard, v. 3, p. 30
Sarah Elizabeth (Snyder), v. 3,
p. 30
William, v. 3, p. 30

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Gilham

Julia Estelle, v. 3, p. 111

Gillaspie

Carbon (Dr.), v. 3, p. 33
 Carol Ann, v. 3, p. 33
 Carolyn (Henry), v. 3, p. 33
 Grace (Fairchild), v. 3, p. 33
 John DeWitt, v. 3, p. 33
 Richard Carbon, v. 3, p. 33

Gillespie

Bert, v. 3, p. 34
 Carbon (Dr.), v. 3, p. 194
 H. B., Mrs., v. 3, p. 34
 Henry B. (Col.), v. 3,
 pp. 34-36
 Ken, v. 3, p. 34

Gilluly

Euphemia Lawson, v. 3, p. 225
 Joseph W., v. 3, p. 225
 Mabel E., v. 3, p. 225

Gilpin

William, v. 3, p. 37

Girardot

Frank, v. 3, pp. 38-40

Gladfelter

Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 258
 Lisbeth, v. 2, p. 258
 Noah (Dr.), v. 2, p. 258

Glasier

J. M., v. 3, p. 41
 John T., v. 3, p. 41
 P. J., v. 3, p. 41
 W. F. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 41

Gleason

Frank Hubbard, v. 3, p. 42
 Gertrude, v. 3, p. 42
 Ida Riner, v. 3, p. 42
 John Allen, v. 3, p. 42
 May Augusta (Riner), v. 3,
 p. 42
 William Severy, v. 3, p. 42

Glenn

William Cooper, v. 3, p. 43

Gluth

Ethel, v. 3, p. 45
 George Russell, v. 3, pp. 44-45
 John, v. 3, p. 44
 John Albert, v. 3, p. 44
 John G., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
 p. 46
 Leota, v. 3, pp. 44, 46
 Russell George, v. 3, p. 46
 Stella Irene, v. 3, p. 44
 Susanne, v. 3, p. 45

Gollagher

Annie, v. 3, p. 48
 Annie Berniece (Clickener),
 v. 3, p. 47
 Charles Courtenius, v. 3, p. 48
 Gertrude, v. 3, p. 48
 John (Rev.), v. 3, p. 47
 Katherine, v. 3, p. 48
 Rose, v. 3, p. 48
 Rose (Phillips), v. 3, p. 49
 Samuel, v. 3, pp. 47-49
 Samuel John, v. 3, p. 48
 Samuel Phillips, v. 3, pp. 47-
 49
 Susan, v. 3, p. 48
 Thomas, v. 3, p. 47

Good

John, v. 3, pp. 50-51, 55-56
 John Edward, v. 3, pp. 54, 55
 Mabel LoRaine, v. 3, p. 55
 Rosalie (Mrs. John), v. 3,
 pp. 52-54
 Rosalie (Wagner), v. 3, pp. 50,
 55

Goodan

E. W. (Will), v. 3, p. 57
 John A., v. 3, p. 57

Goodard

Carl, v. 3, p. 58
 Edith, v. 3, p. 58
 Esther, v. 3, p. 58
 Frank, v. 3, p. 58
 Lewis, v. 3, p. 58
 Nancy (Smith), v. 3, p. 58
 Zoe Elia, v. 3, p. 58

Goode

A. F., v. 3, p. 59
 Eleanor (Seaton), v. 3, p. 59
 Eula (Ferguson), v. 3, p. 59
 John H., v. 3, p. 59

Goodell

Annie (Whitmore), v. 4, p. 361
 Clara (Mitchell), v. 4, p. 361
 Jennie (Blow), v. 4, p. 361
 Mary (Grant), v. 4, p. 361
 Olive (Hill), v. 4, p. 361

Goodrich

Clarissa (Andrews), v. 2,
 p. 257
 John, v. 2, p. 257
 Mary Jane, v. 2, p. 257

Goody

F. D., v. 2, p. 259

Goree

Alice (Altman), v. 3, p. 60

James L., v. 3, p. 60
 James L. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 60
 James Lyle, v. 3, p. 60
 Martha, v. 3, p. 60
 Mary (Dixon), v. 3, p. 60
 Victoria (Evans), v. 3, p. 60

Goss

Harriett, v. 2, p. 36
 Katherine Adele, v. 2, p. 36
 Katherine M., v. 2, p. 36

Gottlieb

David, v. 3, p. 61
 Hulde (Baum), Mrs., v. 3,
 p. 62
 Leo R., v. 3, pp. 61-62

Gourley

Emma, v. 2, p. 196
 Eva Hogler Lozier, v. 2, p. 196
 John C., v. 2, p. 196
 Mabel Sophia, v. 2, p. 196
 Myrtle C., v. 2, p. 196
 Thomas Wm., v. 2, p. 196

Gove

Aaron, v. 3, p. 63
 Aaron Morrill, v. 3, p. 63
 Caro Coggeshall (Spofford),
 v. 3, p. 63
 Ellen Spofford, v. 3, p. 63
 Estellus Aaron, v. 3, p. 63
 F. Edward, v. 3, p. 63
 Sarah Jane (Wadleigh), v. 3,
 p. 63

Grabenschroer

Henry, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 35
 Mary (Schutte), v. 6, p. 35

Grabow

Christine, v. 4, p. 61
 Julius H., v. 4, p. 61
 Marie, v. 4, p. 61

Graham

Ida, Mrs., v. 3, p. 64
 George H., v. 3, p. 64

Grant

Edwin Hendrie, v. 3, p. 68
 Gertrude (Hendrie), v. 3, p. 68
 James, v. 3, p. 70
 James I, v. 3, p. 68
 James II, v. 3, p. 68
 James III, v. 3, p. 68
 James Benton (Gov.), v. 3,
 pp. 65-66
 Joe J., Mrs., v. 6, p. 72
 Mary (Goodell), v. 3, p. 65
 Mary Adeline (Moseley), v. 3,
 pp. 67, 70

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Grant (cont.)

- Mary Jane (Benton), v. 3, pp. 67, 70
- Melanie Mortimer, v. 3, p. 68
- Thomas Macdonough (Dr.), v. 3, pp. 67-68, 70
- W. W. Jr., v. 3, pp. 65-66, p. 70
- Whitaker Macdonough, v. 3, p. 67
- William W., v. 3, pp. 70, 71-73
- William W. Sr. (Dr.), v. 3, pp. 65, 67
- William West, v. 3, pp. 67-69
- William West III, v. 3, p. 68

Grauberger

- Helena Krukow, Mrs., v. 3, p. 98

Graves

- Emily, v. 3, p. 74
- Family, v. 3, p. 74
- Oliver, v. 3, p. 74

Gray

- Cornelia Lunt, v. 2, p. 224
- William P. (Capt.), v. 2, p. 228
- Horace A., v. 2, p. 228
- John, v. 3, p. 75
- Nina, v. 3, p. 76
- William Patten, v. 2, p. 220
- Margaret P., v. 2, pp. 220-221
- Samuel, v. 2, p. 223

Green

- George, v. 3, p. 77
- Nellie, Mrs., v. 3, p. 77

Greene

- Richard (Dr.), v. 2, p. 41
- Harry D., v. 4, p. 409
- Helen, v. 4, p. 409
- Helen Ordway, v. 3, pp. 231, 233
- Henry Brooks, v. 3, pp. 231, 233
- Rose, v. 4, p. 409

Gregg

- Anne, v. 4, p. 373
- Andrew, v. 4, p. 373

Greenfield

- Becky (Lisman), v. 5, p. 94
- Margaret T., v. 5, p. 94
- Smith, v. 5, p. 94

Griffin

- Clifford, v. 3, p. 78
- Henage MacKenzie, v. 3, p. 78

Griffith

- Ida L. (Lindsey), v. 3, p. 79

- James E., v. 3, pp. 79-80
- James Edwin, v. 3, p. 79
- Katherine (Eidson), v. 3, p. 79
- N. H., v. 3, pp. 79-80

Griffiths

- Mary A., Mrs., v. 3, p. 81
- S. H., v. 3, p. 81

Grimes

- Benjamin, v. 3, p. 82
- Birdie E. (Knight), v. 3, p. 82
- Irving, v. 3, p. 82
- Joseph, v. 3, p. 82
- Lena (Jacobson), v. 3, p. 82
- Mamie, v. 3, p. 82

Grimm

- Fanny, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 83, 84, 85
- John, v. 3, p. 83

Groendyoke

- Asa T., v. 1, p. 257
- Fidelia, v. 1, p. 257

Grosheider

- Agnes Marie (Day), v. 3, p. 86
- Arthur Rogers, v. 3, p. 86
- Arthur Rogers Jr., v. 3, p. 86
- Clara (Keppler), v. 3, p. 86
- George W., v. 3, p. 86
- Jane, v. 3, p. 86
- Jane (Rogers), v. 3, p. 86

Gross

- Clara, v. 3, p. 88
- Dwight David, v. 3, pp. 87-89
- Eva (Davidson), v. 3, p. 88
- Hazel, v. 3, p. 88
- John R., v. 3, p. 87

Grover

- Emily B., v. 6, pp. 110-111

Groves

- Donald S., Mrs., v. 3, p. 320

Guanella

- Anna, v. 4, p. 126
- Ethel V., v. 4, p. 126
- Joseph, v. 4, pp. 124-127
- Josephine (Monti), v. 4, p. 124
- Margaret Mary (Lindstrom), v. 4, pp. 124-127
- Mayme, v. 4, p. 126
- Paul J., v. 4, p. 126
- Pauline B., v. 4, p. 126
- Thomas, v. 4, p. 124

Guggenheim

- Daniel, v. 4, p. 394
- Meier, v. 4, pp. 393-394
- Olga (Hirst), v. 4, p. 394
- Simon, v. 4, pp. 393-394

Gunkle

- Clara Amelia (Reed), v. 3, p. 90
- James Morgan, v. 3, p. 90
- Olga Edith, v. 3, p. 90

Gunn

- Agnes (Brown), v. 4, p. 91
- Charles H., v. 3, p. 91
- John M., v. 3, p. 91
- Pansy E. (Ferris), v. 3, p. 91

Gunnison

- J. W., v. 3, pp. 92-93
- John Williams (Capt.), v. 3, p. 94-95

Gunson

- Mary Ann (Bonus), v. 3, p. 96
- Thomas, v. 3, p. 96
- Thomas R., v. 3, p. 96
- Venita A., v. 3, p. 97
- Venita A. (Good), v. 3, p. 96

Gutshall

- T. O., v. 5, p. 88

Gutzmann

- Willy, v. 3, p. 98

Guymon

- Genevieve, v. 5, p. 117

Gylling

- Carl, v. 1, p. 123
- Walter, v. 1, p. 123

- H -

Hachquet

- Donna Lee, Mrs., v. 6, p. 319
- Johnny Pierre Jr., v. 6, p. 319

Haffner

- Edmonta, v. 3, p. 99
- Elsie, v. 3, p. 99
- Frank J., v. 3, p. 99
- Marilda, v. 3, p. 99
- Rosalid, v. 3, p. 99
- Rose, v. 3, p. 99
- Ruth, v. 3, p. 99

Hager

- Charlie, v. 5, p. 219
- George, v. 5, p. 220
- Louise, v. 5, p. 219
- Magdalena, v. 5, p. 219

Hagus

- Andrew, v. 3, pp. 100-101
- Andrew Frank, v. 3, p. 101
- Charles H. (Rt. Rev.), v. 3, p. 101
- Emma, v. 3, p. 100
- Fred, v. 3, p. 100
- Henry, v. 3, p. 100

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Hagus (cont.)

John, v. 3, pp. 100-101
 John J., v. 3, p. 101
 Katherine, v. 3, p. 100
 Lewis, v. 3, p. 100
 Louis F. (Rev.), v. 3,
     p. 101
 Louise, v. 3, p. 100
 Lucille, v. 3, pp. 100-101
 Lucille J., v. 3, p. 101

Hale

A. J., Mrs., v. 6, p. 310
 David, v. 3, p. 102
 Eliza (Huntington), v. 3,
     p. 102
 Elizabeth (Hall), v. 3, p. 102
 Elizabeth (Holden), v. 3,
     p. 102
 Horace Morrison, v. 3, p. 102
 Irving, v. 3, pp. 102, 103, 104
 John, v. 3, p. 102
 Thomas, v. 3, p. 102
 William, v. 3, p. 102

Haley

Hester, Mrs., v. 3, p. 105

Hall

Becky, v. 3, p. 108
 Beverly, v. 3, p. 108
 Carrie G. (Ayres), v. 3, p. 107
 Charles D., v. 3, p. 106
 Evalina (Bancroft), v. 3,
     p. 107
 Geo. Milton, v. 6, p. 346
 Josiah Newhall, v. 3, p. 107
 Michele, v. 3, p. 108
 Oliver W., v. 3, p. 107
 Rebecca Jane, v. 6, p. 346
 Sarah Newman, v. 6, p. 346
 Sigourney D., v. 3, p. 107
 Stanley, v. 3, p. 108
 Stephen A., v. 3, p. 107
 W. B. (Billy), v. 3, p. 109

Halladay

Anne M., Mrs., v. 3, p. 110
 Anne McCamly, v. 3, p. 110
 Frank Ellsworth, v. 3, p. 110
 Frank Walter, v. 3, p. 110
 Jennie Louise (Hunsiker), v. 3,
     p. 110
 Robin Ellsworth, v. 3, p. 110

Hallett

Julia (Mrs. Samuel Irving),
     v. 3, pp. 111-113
 Julia Estelle (Gilham), v. 3,
     p. 111

Samuel Irving, v. 3, p. 111

Hallquist

Bengtha (Nelson), v. 3, p. 114
 Carl Iner, v. 3, pp. 114-115
 Gilbert Leroy, v. 3, p. 114
 Harold, v. 3, p. 114
 John, v. 3, p. 114
 John Bernhard, v. 3, p. 114
 Josephine (Brunette), v. 3,
     pp. 114-115
 Lloyd Eugene, v. 3, p. 114
 Naomi Jervaise, v. 3, p. 114
 Norman Jerome, v. 3, p. 114

Halverson

Minnie, Mrs., v. 3, p. 116

Hamlin

Cassie (McClelland), v. 3,
     p. 117
 Robert Gann, v. 3, pp. 117-
     118
 Ruth (McGlothlin), v. 3,
     p. 117
 William Robert, v. 3, p. 117

Hanington

Charles Harrington, v. 3,
     p. 119
 Clara, v. 3, p. 119
 Henry, v. 3, p. 119
 Marie Louise (Seibt), v. 3,
     p. 119
 Theodore (Seibt), v. 3, p. 119

Hansen

Edith M., v. 3, p. 217
 Elizabeth (Kreuscher), v. 3,
     p. 271
 Jes I., v. 3, p. 122
 Marie Margrethe, v. 3,
     pp. 120-121
 Thomas, v. 3, p. 271
 Wolfe C., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
     p. 122

Hardin

Charles, v. 3, p. 125
 Charles B. (Maj.), v. 3, pp.
     123-125
 Elizabeth (King), v. 3, p. 124

Harding

T. M. Sr., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
     pp. 126-127
 Theodore Marsh, v. 3, pp.
     126-127, 128

Hardy

Clinton D., v. 4, p. 93
 Fanny (Cutter), v. 4, p. 93
 Josephine, v. 4, p. 93

Harker

Charles Lee, v. 3, pp. 129-130
 Helen, v. 3, p. 129
 Jesse, v. 3, p. 129
 Mary Elizabeth (Rhodes), v. 3,
     p. 129
 Susan Evelyn (Dunn), v. 3,
     p. 129

Harkins

Leon, Mrs., v. 4, p. 189

Harner

Elmer W. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 131

Harp

Anna, v. 6, p. 187
 Mary, v. 6, p. 187
 Wm. R., v. 6, p. 187

Harriman

Elizabeth Margaret (Russell),
     v. 3, p. 132
 James, v. 3, p. 132
 Russell, v. 3, p. 132
 Wm. Payton, v. 3, p. 132

Harrington

Brendan J., v. 3, p. 133
 Clarence L., Mr. and Mrs.,
     v. 3, p. 134
 Eileen M. (Richert), v. 3,
     p. 133
 Eleanor (Hart), v. 3, p. 138
 Elizabeth, v. 2, p. 130
 Family, v. 3, p. 134
 Margaret, v. 3, p. 134
 Martin J., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
     p. 134
 Mary Ellen (O'Donovan), v. 3,
     p. 133
 Maryanne, v. 3, p. 134
 Michael, v. 3, p. 133
 Patti-Jeanne, v. 3, p. 134
 Robert, v. 3, p. 138

Harris

Clark J., v. 3, p. 135
 Edward L., v. 3, p. 136
 Emma (Norberg), v. 3, p. 136
 Erzella, Mrs., v. 3, p. 136
 Ethel (Preville), v. 3, p. 136
 Florence (Wenzel), v. 3,
     p. 136
 George D., v. 3, p. 136
 Margaret (McNulty), v. 3,
     p. 136
 Robert, v. 3, p. 136
 Robert M., v. 3, p. 136

Harrison

Adelaide (Ligon), v. 3, p. 137
 E. Birch, v. 3, p. 137

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Harrison (cont.)

George B., v. 3, p. 137
 George Billinsley, v. 3, p. 137
 Lovan Birch, v. 3, p. 137
 Ruth, v. 3, p. 137

Hart

Agnes, v. 3, p. 138
 Alfred, v. 3, p. 142
 Edith, v. 3, p. 138
 Eleanor, v. 3, p. 138
 Eleanor (Wilson), v. 3, p. 138
 Elizabeth (Jerome), v. 3,
     p. 142
 Grace, v. 3, p. 138
 Hannah, v. 3, p. 138
 Henry Martyn (Dean), v. 3,
     pp. 138, 139-141
 John Lathrop Jerome, v. 3,
     p. 142
 Joshua, v. 3, p. 138
 Margaret, v. 3, p. 138
 Margaret Arms, v. 3, p. 142
 Mary Cornelia (Gardner), v. 3,
     p. 142
 Richard Huson, v. 3, pp. 142-
     143
 Stephen Harding, v. 3, p. 142
 Wilson, v. 3, p. 138

Hartman

Edward R., v. 3, p. 144
 F. Joe, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
     p. 144
 Joe, Mrs., v. 3, p. 144
 Mollie (Mock), Mrs., v. 3,
     pp. 144-145
 S. C., Mrs., v. 3, p. 144

Harvard Hotel, v. 3, p. 146

Harvey

Andrew Jackson, v. 3, p. 147
 Henderson, v. 2, p. 98
 Inez Anna (Guthrie), v. 2,
     p. 98
 John, v. 2, p. 98
 John W., v. 2, p. 98
 Martha McConnell, v. 2, p. 98
 Mary, v. 2, p. 98
 McConnell, v. 2, p. 98
 Wm., v. 2, p. 98

Hathaway

Bernice, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 148, 149

Hauck

Augusta, v. 1, p. 142
 Joseph, v. 1, p. 141
 Louise, v. 1, p. 142
 Robert, v. 1, p. 142

Hauser

Blanche (Border), v. 3, p. 150
 Eldon W., v. 3, p. 150

Havener

Bert C., v. 4, pp. 143-144

Havens

Gilbert L., v. 3, p. 152
 Horace W., v. 3, pp. 151-153

Hawes

Clemontine (Rockwell), v. 1,
     p. 32
 Jesse (Dr.), v. 1, pp. 32, 33
 Mary M., v. 1, p. 32

Hawkins

Albert, v. 3, p. 154
 Alvin, v. 3, p. 154
 Ashton W., v. 3, p. 154
 Ashton W. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 154
 Camillus, v. 3, p. 154
 Edward M., v. 3, p. 156
 Elvis, v. 3, p. 154
 Frances (Rubin), v. 3, p. 155
 Frank, v. 3, p. 154
 Horace Norman, v. 3, pp. 154-155
 John M., v. 3, p. 154
 John M. Sr., v. 3, p. 154
 Joseph, v. 3, p. 154
 Lilla Merrill, v. 3, p. 156
 Mary G. (Ralston), v. 3, p. 154
 Queenabelle (Smith), v. 3,
     p. 156
 Samuel, v. 3, p. 154
 Sarah Ann (May), v. 3, p. 154
 Stephana Eudora, v. 3, p. 156
 Valerie Villair, v. 3, p. 156
 Willard E., v. 3, p. 156
 William, v. 3, p. 154

Hawley

A. L., v. 3, p. 157
 Lydia, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 157-158

Hayden

Luke, v. 3, p. 159

Haynes

H. N., v. 5, p. 245
 Rhoda Norton, v. 5, p. 245

Haynie

Delph, v. 3, p. 161
 Elwood M., v. 3, p. 161
 Hazel Gertrude (Mortensen),
     v. 3, p. 160
 LaRue, v. 3, p. 161
 Leonard M., v. 3, pp. 160-161
 Louise, v. 3, p. 161
 Lydie B. (Stover), v. 3, p. 160
 Robert M., v. 3, p. 160

Hays

Lillie E., Mrs., v. 3, p. 162

Hayt

Charles Denison, v. 3, pp.
     163-164
 Charles Denison Jr., v. 3,
     p. 164
 Ella, v. 3, p. 164
 Henry Chester, v. 3, p. 164
 Henry Delavan, v. 3, p. 163
 Jane (Berry), v. 3, p. 163
 Julia Aline (Palmer), v. 3,
     p. 164

Head

Christy Campbell, v. 4, p. 388
 Mabel, v. 4, p. 388
 Willard R., v. 4, p. 388

Healy

Giles West, v. 6, p. 366
 Harleyn, v. 6, p. 366
 Rober, v. 6, p. 366

Hearne

Frank J., v. 2, p. 266

Heath

Lillian (Dr.), v. 3, pp. 165-166

Heckendorf

August, v. 3, pp. 167-168

Hedgcock

Frederick W., v. 3, pp. 169-
     170

Heidemann

Johanna, Mrs., v. 3, p. 171
 Martha, v. 3, p. 171

Heilman

Ben, v. 3, p. 172

Heimer

Duane Roland, v. 3, p. 173
 Gladys Eleanor Milheim, v. 3,
     p. 173

Heinemann

Albert, v. 3, p. 174
 Ewald, v. 3, p. 174
 William, v. 3, pp. 174-175

Heinrichs

William E. Jr., v. 6, p. 104

Helstien

John, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
     p. 176

Henderson

Ambrose Barber, v. 3, p. 180
 Anne (Huston), v. 3, p. 180
 Ben, v. 3, p. 177
 Cornelia (Burrows), v. 3,
     p. 180
 Darie L., v. 3, pp. 177-178
 Edward, v. 2, p. 9

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Henderson (cont.)

Elaine, Mrs., v. 3, p. 179
 Harold Burrows, v. 3, pp. 180-181
 Helen, v. 3, p. 181
 Jean, v. 3, p. 181
 Jennet, v. 2, pp. 8-12
 Jennie (Wells), v. 3, p. 180
 Jessie A. Norine, v. 3, p. 177
 John (Jack), v. 3, p. 181
 Joseph Welles, Dr., v. 3, p. 181
 Mary, v. 2, p. 9
 Richard, v. 3, p. 177
 Roger, v. 3, p. 177
 Samuel, v. 3, p. 180

Hendrie

Charles Francis, v. 3, p. 68
 Charles Francis Sr., v. 3, p. 68
 Edwin B., v. 3, p. 68
 Edwin Beard, v. 3, p. 182
 Gertrude, v. 3, pp. 68, 72
 Gertrude Hallidie, v. 3, p. 182
 Marion (Carnes), v. 3, p. 182
 Mary Ann (Beard), v. 3, p. 182
 Wm. West Jr., v. 3, p. 182

Henry

Thomas F., v. 3, pp. 183-184
 Tom, v. 3, p. 185

Hepp

Edward E., v. 3, p. 186
 Florence, v. 3, p. 186
 Gustus Brinton (Dr.), v. 3, p. 186
 L. Clark (Dr.), v. 3, p. 186
 P. F. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 186

Herron

Cassie, v. 3, p. 188
 Frances, Mrs., v. 3, p. 188
 John L., v. 3, pp. 187-189
 Patrick, v. 3, p. 188

Herskovitz

Emanuel, v. 3, pp. 190-191

Hess

Edwin Harrison, v. 3, p. 192

Hetherington

Annie (Jones), v. 3, p. 193
 Christopher, v. 3, p. 193
 Esther, v. 3, p. 193
 Ethel Clark (Anderson), v. 3, p. 193
 George, v. 3, p. 193
 Hugh, v. 3, p. 193
 Hugh William, v. 3, p. 193
 Josephene (Berryman), v. 3, p. 193

Robert Allen, v. 3, p. 193

Rowena, v. 3, p. 193

Heuston

Howard H. (Dr.), v. 3, pp. 194-196

Hewitt

Edwin, v. 3, pp. 197, 198
 Helen (Cochran), v. 3, p. 197

Hickerson

Allan R. Jr., v. 3, p. 199
 Allan Ramsey, v. 3, p. 199
 Lorena (Leech), v. 3, p. 199
 Nancy, v. 3, p. 199
 Sarah Ann, v. 3, p. 199

Hickey

Clinton G., v. 3, pp. 200-201
 Dorothy Simonds, v. 3, p. 201
 Esther (Lowry), v. 3, p. 200
 Ethelwyn, v. 3, p. 201
 George, v. 3, p. 200
 Harold Lowry, v. 3, p. 201
 Jennie A. E. (Simonds), v. 3, p. 201
 Muriel Mary, v. 3, p. 201
 Nelle (Harris), Mrs., v. 3, p. 201
 William, v. 3, p. 200

Hicklan

Alec, v. 4, p. 381
 Alfred, v. 4, p. 381
 Emma (Shaw), v. 4, p. 381
 Stephana, v. 4, pp. 380-381
 Thomas, v. 4, p. 381
 Zan, Mrs., v. 4, pp. 380-381

Hicks

C. W., v. 4, p. 256
 Celeste J., Mr., v. 4, p. 256
 Ernest, v. 4, p. 256
 Eugene, v. 4, p. 256
 Lettie, v. 4, p. 256

Higby

William, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3, p. 202

Hilburn

Adaline, Mrs., v. 3, p. 203
 Pearl (White), Mrs., v. 3, p. 203
 Robert E., v. 3, p. 203

Hill

Crawford, v. 3, pp. 204, 205, 207, 208
 Crawford (Louise), Mrs., v. 2, p. 122; v. 3, pp. 204, 205, 206-207, 208
 Louise (Sneed), v. 3, p. 204

Nathaniel P., v. 3, pp. 204, 205, 207, 208

Hiller

C. C. P. (Rev.), v. 3, pp. 209-210
 Charles, v. 3, p. 209
 Clara, v. 3, p. 209
 Francis L. L., v. 3, pp. 209-210
 Orlena Beggs, v. 3, pp. 209-210
 Robert, v. 3, p. 209

Hilliard

Albert, v. 3, p. 212
 Ben C. Sr., v. 3, pp. 211-212
 Ben Clark Jr., v. 3, pp. 211-213
 Lorraine (Finnicum), v. 3, p. 212
 Opel, v. 4, p. 212
 Tida, v. 3, p. 211

Hills

Anne Louise (Bruce), v. 3, p. 214
 Emily Cooper, v. 3, p. 214
 Richard Charles, v. 3, p. 214
 Richard Charles Sr., v. 3, p. 214

Hinderlider

Ann Eliza (Wilson), v. 3, p. 215
 Caroline (Kirk), v. 3, p. 215
 Clyde Kirk, v. 3, p. 216
 Daniel, v. 3, p. 216
 Daniel Peck, v. 3, p. 215
 Ellen (Peck), v. 3, p. 215
 Joel, v. 3, p. 215
 Michael, v. 3, p. 215
 Michael Creed, v. 3, pp. 215-216
 Michael Creed Jr., v. 3, p. 216
 Ruth, v. 3, p. 216

Hindry

John B., v. 3, p. 217

Hines

Dora, Mrs., v. 3, p. 218
 Eunice, Mrs., v. 3, p. 312
 William A. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 312

Hinman

Florence Lamont, v. 3, pp. 219, 220-222
 L. E., v. 3, p. 222
 Leroy Race, v. 3, p. 219

Hirschfeld

A. B. (Al), v. 3, p. 223
 Edward, v. 3, p. 223

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Hirschfeld (cont.)

Emma, v. 3, p. 223
Isaac Mendel, v. 3, p. 223

Hittle

Amelia Sefton, v. 3, p. 4
James P., v. 3, p. 4
Anna (Sefton), v. 3, p. 4
Cynthia (Jamison), v. 3, p. 4

Hoare

Mary Breen, Mrs., v. 3, p. 224

Hockenberger

John, v. 5, p. 88
William, v. 5, pp. 87-89

Hodges

Ella E. Francesca VanDerveer,
v. 3, p. 225
George L., v. 3, p. 225
Joseph Gilluly, v. 3, p. 225
Mabel E. Gilluly, v. 3, p. 225
William VanDerveer, v. 3,
p. 225
William VanDerveer Jr., v. 3,
p. 225

Hoffman

Bessie, v. 3, p. 227
Ed C., v. 3, p. 227
Flora E. (Chapman), v. 3,
p. 226
Richard H., v. 3, pp. 226-227

Hoffmeister

Bob, v. 4, p. 207
Carleton, v. 4, p. 207
David, v. 4, p. 207
Jim, v. 4, p. 207

Hofman

R. J. (Rudy), v. 3, pp. 228-229

Hogstotz

Alvena Matilda, v. 3, p. 230

Holcomb

Edith, Mrs., v. 6, p. 108

Holden

Elsie, Mrs. G. Walter, v. 3,
p. 233
Elsie Greene, v. 3, p. 231
G. Walter, v. 3, pp. 231-232, 233
Harriet Wheelock, v. 3, p. 231
James E., v. 3, p. 231
Laurence Wheelock, v. 3,
p. 231
Robert Greene, v. 3, p. 231

Holland

Eldridge V., v. 3, p. 234
Gertrude Raine (Nesbit), v. 3,
p. 234
James O., v. 3, p. 234

Martha Louise (Chestnt), v. 3,
p. 234

Robert C., v. 3, p. 234
Robert E., v. 3, p. 234
Robert Eldridge, v. 3, p. 234
William R., v. 3, p. 234

Hollingsworth

Charlie, v. 3, p. 235
Fay, v. 5, p. 172
Florence H., v. 5, p. 172
Guy, v. 5, p. 172
Harold, v. 5, p. 172
Ida, v. 5, pp. 172, 173
Jerome, v. 5, pp. 172, 173
Karl, v. 5, p. 172
Mary, v. 5, p. 172

Holme

James Sexton, v. 3, p. 236
Jamie Sexton, v. 3, p. 236
Peter H., Mrs. Jamie, v. 3,
p. 236
Peter Hagner, v. 3, p. 236
Peter Hagner Jr., v. 3, p. 236

Holmes

Charles, v. 3, p. 237
Clarence T., v. 3, p. 237
Edith, v. 3, p. 237
Harry F., v. 3, p. 237
James N., v. 2, p. 61
John, v. 3, p. 237
John E., v. 3, pp. 237-238
John E., Mrs., v. 3,
pp. 237-238

Hook

George, v. 3, p. 151

Hopkins

Benjamin, Mrs. Flora May,
v. 3, p. 239
Benjamin Sanderson, v. 3,
p. 239
Jane (Havens), v. 3, p. 239
William Chapin, v. 3, p. 239

Hopper

Alta, v. 2, p. 159
Anselm P., v. 2, p. 159
Cynthia (Harmon), v. 2, p. 159

Hornsby

Attilia White (Trolinger),
Mrs., v. 2, p. 246
Attilia White Cecil, v. 2,
p. 246
Brinkley, v. 2, p. 246
Esther Ann (Falls), v. 2, p. 246
William, v. 2, p. 246

Hotchkiss

Adair, v. 3, p. 241

Bill, v. 3, p. 240
Charles, v. 3, p. 240
Claire, v. 3, p. 241
Earl H., v. 3, p. 240
Enos, v. 3, p. 241
Fred, v. 3, p. 241
George H., v. 3, p. 240
Gladys, v. 3, p. 240
John, v. 3, p. 240
Leon, v. 3, p. 241
Lucy, v. 3, p. 240
Mary (Martin), v. 3, p. 240
Mary, (Mrs. Uri), v. 3, p. 240
Medora, v. 3, p. 240
Preston, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
p. 240
Roswell, v. 3, p. 241
Sarah (Martin), v. 3, p. 240
Uri, v. 3, pp. 240-241
Verdie, v. 3, p. 240
William R., v. 3, pp. 240-241

Hough

John Simpson, v. 3, pp. 242-249

Hover

Mariana (Vought), v. 2, p. 152
Mary, v. 2, p. 152
W. A., v. 2, p. 152

Howardsville, Colorado, v. 3,
p. 250

Howbert

Irving, v. 3, p. 252
Lizzie A. (Copeland), v. 3,
p. 252
Martha Marshall, v. 3, p. 252
May, v. 3, p. 252
William, v. 3, p. 252
William Irving, v. 3, p. 252

Howell

S. L., v. 2, p. 66

Howsam

Ed, v. 3, p. 313
Lee, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3, p. 312
Robert, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
p. 313
Robert, Mrs., v. 3, p. 312

Hoyt

Clarence Pattee, v. 1, p. 251
Mary, v. 1, p. 251

Hubble

Allen, v. 3, pp. 253-254
Thomas, v. 3, pp. 253-254

Huckert

Alice, v. 5, p. 134

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Hudnall

A. D. (Uncle Dick), v. 3,
p. 255
Leonard, v. 3, p. 255
Prowers, v. 3, p. 255

Huffman

Harry E., v. 3, pp. 256-257
O. C., Dr. and Mrs., v. 3,
p. 256

Hughes

Annie (Peate), v. 4, p. 53
Annie Clifton, v. 4, pp. 53-54
Bela Metcalf, v. 3, p. 258
Caroline W. (Umstead), v. 3,
p. 261
Charles J. (Sen.), v. 4, p. 53
Charles James, v. 3, p. 258
Charles James Jr., v. 3, pp.
258- 259
Edwin, v. 3, p. 260
Eliza (Rutherford), v. 4, p. 53
Eliza Clifton, v. 4, p. 53
F. Gerald, Mrs., v. 3, p. 259
Gerald, v. 3, pp. 258-259
Grace M., v. 3, p. 261
Harry Thurston, v. 3, p. 260
Jeannette U., v. 3, p. 261
John Thurston, v. 3, p. 260
Lafayette, v. 4, p. 53
Laura Thompson (Bartow),
v. 3, p. 261
Lucy S. (Menefee), v. 3,
p. 258
Mabel Yates (Nagel), v. 3,
p. 258
Mary (Cady), v. 3, p. 260
Mary J. (Mayor), v. 3, p. 260
Serena (Pollard), v. 3, p. 258
William Edgar (Col.), v. 4,
p. 53
William F., v. 3, p. 261
William Harold, v. 3, p. 261

Hulbert

Archer B., v. 3, p. 262
Calvin Butler, v. 3, p. 262
Dorothy (Printup), v. 3, p. 262
Mary Elizabeth (Stacy), v. 3,
p. 262
Mary Woodward, v. 3, p. 262

Hull

Frank G., v. 4, p. 41
Joseph, v. 4, p. 38
Mary Ellen, v. 4, p. 38
Milton, v. 4, p. 38
Nellie M., v. 4, p. 41
Theodore, v. 4, p. 41

Humphreys

A. E. (Col.), v. 3, p. 66
A. E., Mrs., v. 1, p. 197
Albert E. Jr., v. 3, p. 66
Ira, v. 3, p. 66
Lucille (Pattison), v. 3, p. 66
Ruth (Boettcher), Mrs., v. 1, p. 199, 202; v. 3, p. 66

Hunt

Alexander E., v. 2, p. 61
Ellen Kellog, v. 2, p. 61

Hunter

Arthur Francis, v. 3, p. 263
Emma Estelle (Schreiber),
v. 3, p. 263
Frances Tatlock, v. 3, p. 263
Frederick Maurice, v. 3, p. 263
G. V., v. 3, p. 20
Maurice Harold, v. 3, p. 263
Theodore F., v. 3, p. 263

Huntley

Cecil, v. 3, p. 264
Donald, v. 3, p. 264
Family, v. 3, p. 264
Jack, v. 3, p. 264
Lloyd, v. 3, p. 264
Maurice, v. 3, p. 264
Vernon, v. 3, p. 264

Hurlbut

Edwin W., v. 3, p. 265
Elizabeth G. (Arnold), v. 3,
p. 265
Henry A., v. 3, p. 265
Hiram E., v. 3, p. 265
Teresa A. (Booker), v. 3,
p. 265

Hurley

John, v. 3, p. 266

Huston

Anne, v. 3, p. 181
Bertha (Martin), v. 3, p. 181
Frank C. (Rev.), v. 3, p. 181

Hutchinson

Elizabeth Worner (Werner?),
v. 2, p. 183
Randolph, v. 2, p. 183

Hutton

Alida (Lansing), v. 3, p. 267
Helen H., v. 3, p. 267
John, v. 3, p. 267
John Sr., v. 3, p. 267
Katherine, v. 3, p. 267
Mary (Gaffney), v. 3, p. 267
Mary Ann (Lee), v. 3, p. 267
William Edward, v. 3,
pp. 267-268

Hyde

Alice Babcock (Calkins), v. 2,
p. 34
Jacob, v. 2, p. 34
Jacob Sr., v. 2, p. 34
Rebecca (Tobias), v. 2, p. 34
Reuben, v. 2, p. 34
Samuel, v. 2, p. 34
Sarah Ann, v. 2, p. 34
William, v. 2, p. 34

- I -

Iiliff

John Wesley, v. 3, p. 269

Ingalls

Bertha, Mrs., v. 3, p. 270

Ingley

Albert, v. 3, p. 271
E. Mary, v. 3, p. 271
Edith M., v. 3, p. 271
Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 271
Fred, v. 3, p. 271
Fred Jr., v. 3, p. 271
Jane, v. 3, p. 271
Mary (Bloomer), v. 3, p. 271
Ruth E., v. 3, p. 271
T. Hansen, v. 3, p. 271

Ingraham

Agnes (Woods), v. 3, p. 272
Clarence Bancroft, v. 3,
p. 272
Clarence Bancroft Sr., v. 3,
p. 272
Virginia Hart (Reed), v. 3,
p. 272

Ingram

Alexander, v. 3, p. 273
Alexander B., v. 3, p. 273
Alice Graeme (Staples),
v. 3, p. 273
Clara (Smith), v. 3, p. 273
Dorothy, v. 3, p. 273
Grace Evelyn, v. 3, p. 273
Hannah (Elliott), v. 3, p. 273
Harvey S., v. 3, p. 273

Imherr

George, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 101-
102
Lucille (Hagus), Mrs., v. 3,
pp. 101-102

Ionides

Agathoniki Fenerly, v. 3,
p. 274
Constantine Alexander, v. 3,
p. 274

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Ionides (cont.)

Louise L. (Silliman), v. 3,
p. 274
Margaret Louise, v. 3, p. 274
Stephen G., v. 3, p. 274

Ireland

Bess (Low), v. 3, p. 275
Clara Jennie (Ball), v. 3,
p. 275
Clarence Leo, v. 3, p. 275
Edith Alice, v. 3, p. 275
Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 275
Frederick, v. 3, p. 275
Roger, v. 3, p. 275

Ironfield

Arthur Milheim, v. 4, p. 324
Frances Louise, v. 4, p. 324
Fred, v. 4, pp. 324, 326, 328
Josephine Emma (Milheim),
v. 4, pp. 326, 328
Stella (Kissish), v. 4, p. 324

- J -

Jackson

Joseph, v. 3, p. 277
Laura, Mrs., v. 3, p. 276
Louise Victoria, Mrs., v. 3,
p. 277
Nellie, v. 3, p. 277
Raymond, v. 3, p. 277
Virgil, v. 3, p. 277
William Henry, v. 3, p. 278

Jacobs

Albert Charles, v. 3, p. 279
Frances, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 280-
281
Frances Wisebart, Mrs., v. 2,
p. 61; v. 3, p. 282

James

Edna, v. 3, p. 283
Evalyn, v. 3, p. 283
Harry C., v. 3, p. 283
Jesse, v. 2, pp. 103, 278
Margaret A., v. 3, p. 283
May D., v. 3, p. 283
William H., v. 3, p. 283

Jamison

Dorothy (Echternacht), v. 3,
p. 288
Frank R., v. 3, pp. 284-286
Frank Rutherford, v. 3, pp.
287-288
Frank Rutherford Jr., v. 3,
p. 288
Janice Elaine, v. 3, p. 288

JoAnn, v. 3, p. 287
John, v. 3, p. 287
Lorena (MacDonald), v. 3,
pp. 285, 287
Rachael (McBride), v. 3,
p. 287
Robert, v. 3, p. 287
Robert MacDonald, v. 3,
p. 287
Sarah (Ralson), v. 3, p. 287
Virginia (Hostetter), v. 3,
p. 287

Janus

Antoine, v. 3, p. 289
Antoine II, v. 3, p. 289
Antoine IV, v. 3, p. 289

Jardine

Clarissa Adelaide Pierce, v. 3,
p. 290
Jessie Margaret, v. 3, p. 290
John Martin, v. 3, p. 290

Jarecki

Theresa, Mrs., v. 3, p. 280

Jarvis

Ann Catherine, v. 4, p. 356

Jeancon

Jean Allard, v. 3, pp. 291-293
Lionna Francisco, v. 3, p. 291
Matilde Louise Lemcke, v. 3,
p. 291

Jefferson

Daisy Baxter, v. 3, pp. 294-
296

Jeffrey

Charles W. (Dr.), v. 3, p. 165

Jensen

Andrew K., v. 3, p. 297
Anna J., v. 3, p. 297
Carl A., v. 3, p. 297
Emma, v. 3, p. 297
Henry J., v. 3, p. 297
Jens Borup, v. 3, p. 297
Jens C., v. 3, p. 297
Louis M., v. 3, p. 297
Mary N., v. 3, p. 297
Otto J., v. 3, p. 297
William C., v. 3, p. 297

John

Alice Margaret, v. 3, p. 298
Alice Margaret (Schliter), v. 3,
p. 298
Charlotte Armanda, v. 3,
p. 298
Jawes Madison, v. 3, p. 298
William Mestrezat, v. 3,
p. 298

Johns

Etta, Mrs., v. 3, p. 300
Frank J., v. 3, pp. 299, 300-
302
George, v. 3, p. 300
Joseph, v. 3, pp. 299, 300
Joseph B., v. 3, p. 301
Robert, v. 3, p. 299
Robert F., v. 3, p. 301

Johnson

Adeline (Dickinson), v. 3,
p. 321
Alice Gifford, v. 3, p. 303
Amos Howe, ( Dr)., v. 3,
p. 303
Archie H., v. 3, p. 323
Barbara B., v. 3, p. 303
Betty Jean (Harris), v. 3,
p. 306
Burton W., v. 3, p. 326
Byron Carl, v. 4, p. 326
Caleb, v. 2, p. 238
Carrie, v. 2, p. 238
Charles A., v. 3, pp. 304-305
Charles Alfred, v. 3, p. 303
Charles Alfred Jr., v. 3,
pp. 303, 305
Charles C., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
p. 306
Clayton C., v. 4, p. 326
Eben H., v. 3, p. 325
Ed C., v. 3, pp. 307, 308-311, 312
Edna Grace, v. 3, p. 327
Edwin C., v. 3, pp. 313, 314-
316
Elizabeth, v. 2, pp. 89-90
Fern, v. 3, pp. 307, 309, 312
Flora Mae, v. 3, p. 327
Frances Louise Ironfield, v. 4,
p. 326
Frances Seymour (Benjamin),
v. 3, p. 303
Frank T., v. 3, pp. 318, 319,
320
Frank Thomas, v. 3, p. 317
Gladys (Hoover), v. 3, p. 306
Grace Woodruff (Keese), v. 3,
p. 321
Harold J., v. 3, p. 306
Ida, v. 1, p. 251
Irving Peake, Rev., v. 3, p. 321
J. M. Sr., Judge and Mrs., v. 1,
p. 251
James, v. 3, p. 322
James J. Jr., v. 3, p. 323

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Johnson (cont.)

James Joseph, v. 3, pp. 322-323
 Jane Ann, v. 3, p. 327
 Jarvis, v. 3, pp. 303, 305
 Jenette, v. 3, p. 327
 Jessie Lydia, v. 3, p. 323
 Jonas M. (Capt.), v. 3, p. 325
 Lydia C. (Davis), v. 3, p. 323
 Mark M., v. 3, p. 327
 Mary (Sheehan), v. 3, p. 322
 Myrna A., v. 3, p. 327
 Myrmeta, v. 3, pp. 318, 319, 320
 Nellie, v. 3, p. 324
 Norman Percy, v. 3, p. 321
 Paul A., v. 3, pp. 318, 319, 320
 Ralph J., v. 3, p. 327
 Robert (Col.), v. 5, p. 135
 Sam, v. 3, p. 319
 Samuel W. (Judge), v. 2, pp. 89-90
 Sarah, v. 3, p. 325
 Stanley Herbert, v. 3, p. 321
 Theodore, v. 3, p. 327
 Thomas H., v. 3, pp. 325-327
 Wm. Ross (Rev.), v. 3, p. 321

Johnston

Nellie, v. 3, p. 328

Jones

Anna V., Mrs., v. 3, p. 329
 B. Clark, v. 3, p. 331
 Caswell, v. 3, p. 330
 Churchill (Maj.), v. 4, p. 86
 Dorothea (Tower), v. 4, p. 62
 E. R., v. 3, p. 331
 Elizabeth Churchill, v. 4, p. 86
 Ethelyn Thatcher, v. 3, p. 333
 Gladys (Seevers), v. 3, p. 331
 Herbert C., v. 3, p. 169
 M. B., Mr. and Mrs., v. 4, pp. 62-63
 Margaret Ann, v. 3, p. 333
 Mary Alice (Thatcher), v. 3, p. 333
 Mildred, v. 3, p. 330
 Ruth, v. 3, p. 331
 Samuel T., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3, p. 332
 Samuel T. Jr., v. 3, pp. 332-334
 William, v. 4, p. 86

Joyce

Alice (Cooney), v. 3, p. 337

Alice, v. 3, p. 337
 Elizabeth Milne Logan, v. 3, p. 335
 Elizabeth P., v. 3, pp. 335-336
 John T., v. 3, p. 337
 John T. Jr., v. 3, p. 337
 Mary J. (Fitzgerald), v. 3, p. 337
 Patrick Henry, v. 3, p. 335
 Patrick J., v. 3, p. 337
 Robert, v. 3, p. 334
 William Gerald, v. 3, p. 337

Judd

Leroy M., v. 3, p. 338

- K -

Kaiser

Gene, v. 4, p. 1

Kassler

Charles, Mrs., v. 4, p. 5
 Charles Moffat, v. 4, p. 5
 Edwin S., v. 4, p. 6
 Edwin Stebbins Jr., v. 4, pp. 6, 7
 Edwin Stebbins, Mrs., v. 4, p. 7
 Genevieve, v. 4, pp. 6, 7
 George W., v. 4, pp. 5, 6
 Grace Maria, v. 4, p. 5
 Kenneth Stone, v. 4, p. 5
 Maria T. (Stebbins), v. 4, p. 6
 Olivia (Cooper), v. 4, p. 7
 Ruth, v. 4, pp. 6, 7

Kauver

A. J. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 10
 Abraham Judah, v. 4, p. 8
 Belle Gittel (Bluestone), v. 4, pp. 8, 10
 Charles Eliezer Hillel, v. 4, pp. 8, 9-10, 11-12, 13
 Golde Foge, v. 4, p. 8
 Rose Michlak (DeMaltoff), v. 4, p. 8
 S. S., Dr., v. 4, p. 10
 Sara Sperber Gross, v. 4, p. 10
 Solomon Salkind, v. 4, p. 8

Kavanaugh

Cecilia (Barnes), v. 4, p. 14
 Jessie Durbin, v. 4, p. 14
 Luke J., v. 4, p. 14
 Luke J. Sr., v. 4, p. 14

Kebler

Eliot A., v. 4, p. 16
 Emma (Abbot), v. 4, p. 16
 John T., v. 4, p. 16

Julian Abbot, v. 4, pp. 15-16

Keefauver

George, v. 6, p. 379
 Jessie M., v. 6, p. 379
 Keziah (Rahn), v. 6, p. 379

Keely

Elizabeth (Kendall), v. 4, p. 17
 Elizabeth (Sweet), v. 4, p. 18
 George Clayton, v. 4, p. 18
 Margaret M. (Clayton), v. 4, p. 17
 Mary Morrison, v. 4, p. 18
 Thomas, v. 4, p. 17
 Thomas Jr., v. 4, p. 18
 Thomas Sr., v. 4, p. 17

Kees

Charles, v. 4, p. 19
 Fanny (Watson), v. 4, p. 19
 Frank W., v. 4, p. 19
 Harvey L., v. 4, p. 19
 Hazel (Abernathy), v. 4, p. 19
 Lewis Cavender, v. 4, p. 19
 Marguerite (Parks), v. 4, p. 19

Keese

Abigail (Avery), v. 3, p. 321
 Grace Woodruff, v. 3, p. 321
 John, v. 3, p. 321

Keitt

George W., v. 2, p. 275

Kelly

Ed O., v. 2, pp. 103, 278

Kelty

Christopher, v. 4, p. 20
 Claude Albines, v. 4, p. 20
 David Clarence, v. 4, p. 20
 Dorris Belle, v. 4, p. 20
 Dulcia Irene, v. 4, p. 20
 Elsie Loretta, v. 4, p. 20
 Gertrude Viola, v. 4, p. 20
 Jessie May, v. 4, p. 20
 Laura Ann, v. 4, p. 20
 Myra Agnes, v. 4, p. 20
 Ralph Wolf, v. 4, p. 20
 Ruby Del, v. 4, p. 20

Kelty (cont.)

Shirley Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 20
 Tia Coral, v. 4, p. 20

Kemp

Fannie, v. 4, p. 21

Kendal

Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 17
 Frances (Loring), v. 4, p. 17
 Lucius B., v. 4, p. 17

Kennard

Anna (?), v. 4, p. 276
 Grace, v. 6, p. 276

Pioneer Notebooks Index

- William, v. 6, p. 276
- Kennedy
 Arthur L. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 22
 George A., v. 4, p. 22
 Horace, v. 4, p. 22
 Martin Herbert, v. 4, p. 22
 Silas S., v. 4, p. 22
- Kerr
 David, v. 5, p. 201
 Edith May, v. 5, p. 201
- Ketcham
 Benjamin, v. 2, p. 7
- Kettle
 J. E., Mrs., v. 6, p. 71
 Jess, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 73
 William R., Mrs., v. 6, p. 72
- Keyser
 Rebecca W., Mrs., v. 4, p. 23
- Kickland
 W. A. (Dr.), v. 2, p. 55
- Kimball
 Clara, Mrs., v. 4, p. 24
 Dave, v. 3, p. 250
 Dusty, v. 4, p. 26
 Lucille (Bastian), v. 4, p. 26
 Orlo, v. 4, p. 24
 Tom, v. 4, p. 24
 Tom Orlo, v. 4, pp. 25-26
- Kimbrough
 Annie, v. 6, p. 404
 Emma (McElrath), v. 6, p. 404
 George W., v. 6, p. 404
- Kindig
 Fannie R. (Kulp), v. 5, p. 196
 Lela Mae, v. 5, p. 196
 Lelia Mae, v. 5, p. 194
 R. O., v. 5, p. 194
 Reuben O., v. 5, p. 196
- King
 Belzora, v. 4, p. 30
 Chas., v. 4, pp. 30, 31
 John, v. 4, pp. 30, 31
 Mary, v. 4, p. 30
 Mary E., v. 4, p. 30
 Mary Elizabeth Evans, v. 4, p. 31
 Mary Evans, v. 4, p. 30
 Mary W., v. 4, p. 31
 Thos. J., v. 4, pp. 30, 31
 William, v. 4, pp. 30, 31
- Kinne
 Charles Byron, v. 2, p. 204
 Rachel, v. 2, p. 204
 Wellington, v. 2, p. 204
- Kinney
 William Silas, v. 4, p. 37
- William T. "Kangaroo", v. 4, p. 37
- Kirk
 Bessie, v. 4, p. 39
 Charles Milton, v. 4, p. 40
 Elizabeth Rose, v. 4, p. 40
 Frank Hilton, v. 4, p. 40
 James E. Jr., v. 4, p. 39
 James Eliot, v. 4, pp. 38-41
 John, v. 4, p. 41
 John W., v. 4, p. 38
 Martha Jane, v. 4, p. 40
 Mary Ellen (Hull), v. 4, pp. 38-41
 Nellie May, v. 4, p. 40
 Prudence Stevens, v. 4, p. 38
 Thomas William, v. 4, p. 39
 William, v. 4, p. 38
 William Whitcomb, v. 4, p. 40
- Kirchhof
 Alberta, v. 4, p. 43
 Bernadine, v. 4, p. 43
 Edward A., v. 4, p. 43
 Elizabeth (O'Connor), v. 4, p. 43
 Francis J., v. 4, p. 43
 Frank J., v. 4, pp. 42, 43
- Kirk(s)
 Arthur W., v. 4, pp. 376-377
 Eunice Opal, v. 4, pp. 376, 377
 Nora Ann (Ferguson), v. 4, p. 377
- Kistler
 Charles (Dr.), v. 4, pp. 44, 45, 46
 Clark (Dr.), v. 4, pp. 44, 45, 46
 George, v. 4, pp. 44, 45
 George, Mrs., v. 4, p. 44
 Judy, v. 4, p. 46
 Kirby, v. 4, pp. 44, 45, 46
 Kristine, v. 4, p. 46
 Marian, Mrs., v. 4, pp. 45, 46
- Kittle
 Bert L., v. 4, p. 47
 Gladys (West), v. 4, p. 47
 J. L. "Les," v. 4, pp. 47-48
 Katherine (Kennedy), v. 4, p. 47
 Katherine Jane, v. 4, p. 48
 Margaret Ann, v. 4, p. 48
- Kitto
 Arthur P., v. 4, p. 49
 Harry, v. 4, p. 49
 Mrs., v. 4, p. 49
- Kittredge
 Anna (Von Myrbach), v. 4, pp. 50, 52
 Charles M. Jr., v. 4, pp. 50, 51, 52
 Charles Marble, v. 4, pp. 50-51, 52-54
 Cornelius Van Ness, v. 4, pp. 50, 51, 52
 Cornelius Van Ness II, v. 4, p. 53
 John (Sir), v. 4, p. 50
 Mercy Marble, Mrs., v. 4, p. 50
 Sadie Allen (Bowman), v. 4, pp. 50, 52
 Sadie Claire, v. 4, pp. 50, 52
- Klaiber
 Joseph, v. 3, p. 167
- Klunsner
 Anton H., v. 4, p. 318
 Linnie, v. 4, p. 318
 Margaret (Templeton), v. 4, p. 318
- Knight
 Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 58
 Evelyn E., v. 4, p. 59
 James, v. 4, p. 59
 John, v. 4, p. 55
 Minnie, Mrs., v. 4, p. 55
 Roger, v. 4, p. 57
 Roger D., v. 4, p. 59
 Roger D. Jr., v. 4, pp. 56-58
 Stephen, v. 4, pp. 56-57, 59, 60
 Stephen, Mrs., v. 4, p. 60
 Stephen J., v. 4, p. 59
 Susan, v. 4, p. 57
- Knous
 Francis, v. 4, p. 61
 John F., v. 4, p. 61
 Julia (Bain), v. 4, p. 61
 Marie (Grabow), v. 4, p. 61
 Mary, v. 4, p. 61
 Merle Stanley, v. 4, p. 61
 Robert L., v. 4, p. 61
 William J., v. 4, p. 61
 William Lee, v. 4, p. 61
- Knudsen
 Anna Dorothea Mollsen, v. 4, p. 62
 Caroline (Tower), v. 4, p. 62
 Family, v. 4, pp. 62-63
 Hans Jorn, v. 4, p. 62
- Knutson
 John, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4, p. 64
 Rognar, v. 4, p. 64

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Koch

Alex, v. 4, p. 66
 Amelia, v. 4, p. 66
 Bertha, v. 2, p. 235
 Billy, v. 2, p. 235
 Carl, v. 4, p. 66
 Ellen, v. 4, p. 70
 Esther (Moore), v. 4, p. 66
 Frederick A., Mr. and Mrs.,
     v. 4, p. 64
 Harry, v. 2, p. 235
 Henry M., v. 4, p. 66
 Karl, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
     pp. 67-68
 Leah (Gettman), v. 4, p. 66
 Mary, v. 4, p. 66
 Pauline, v. 4, p. 66
 Rachel, v. 4, p. 66
 Ruth (Reid), v. 4, p. 70
 Walter K., v. 4, pp. 67-70
 Wanda, v. 4, p. 70

Kohn

Almee, v. 4, p. 71
 Family, v. 4, pp. 71-72
 Helen, v. 4, pp. 71-72
 Samuel, v. 4, p. 71

Kouns

Clara F. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 73
 Earl M., v. 4, pp. 73-74
 Evelyn, v. 4, p. 74
 May Hassel (Hilburn), v. 4,
     p. 74
 Richard L., v. 4, p. 73
 Sallie (Huffmaster), v. 4, p. 73

Kountze

Charles B., v. 1, p. 114
 Charles Brewer, v. 4, p. 75
 Eleanor E., v. 4, p. 75
 Eugenie, v. 5, p. 24
 Harold, v. 1, p. 114; v. 4,
     p. 75; v. 5, p. 24
 Harold Jr., v. 4, p. 75
 Herman, v. 5, p. 24
 Louise J. (Bulkley), v. 4, p. 75
 Luther, v. 1, p. 114
 Mary Ensign (Estabrook), v. 4,
     p. 75
 Mary L., v. 4, p. 75
 Nancy, v. 4, p. 75

Kramer

Mark, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4, p. 76
 Mark Jr., v. 4, p. 76
 Norman Frederick, v. 4, pp.
     76-78

Kretschmer

Frances, Mrs., v. 4, p. 79-80

Kreutzer

Mary M., Mrs., v. 4, p. 81
 William R., v. 4, p. 81
 William R. (Billy), v. 4, p. 82

Krukow

Carolina, v. 3, p. 98
 Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 98
 Helena, v. 3, p. 98
 Max, v. 3, p. 98
 Wilhelm, v. 3, p. 98
 Willy, v. 3, p. 98

Kullgren

Archie Gilbert, v. 4, p. 83
 Dorothy, v. 4, p. 83
 Elwood M., v. 4, p. 83
 Etta M., Mrs., v. 4, p. 83
 Gilbert V., v. 4, p. 83

Kuykendall

Anna T. (Thomason), v. 4,
     p. 85
 Eliza A. (Montgomery), v. 4,
     p. 84
 John Montgomery, v. 4, pp.
     84-85

Kyle

Katherine (Hardman), v. 4,
     p. 99
 Mary E., v. 4, p. 99
 Samuel E., v. 4, p. 99

- L -

Lacy

Elizabeth Churchill (Jones),
     v. 4, p. 86
 James Horace (Maj.), v. 4,
     p. 86
 Mabel Linn, v. 4, p. 87
 Margaret Agnes (Innes), v. 4,
     p. 87
 Sally Byrd (Goodwin), v. 4,
     p. 86
 Sterling Byrd, v. 4, p. 86
 William James, v. 4, p. 86
 William Sterling Byrd, v. 4,
     p. 87
 William Sterling Innes, v. 4,
     p. 87

LaForgue

Persis Tabor, Mrs., v. 4, p. 88
 Paul Alain, v. 4, p. 88

Lamey

Levi, v. 5, p. 13
 Louise L., v. 5, p. 13
 Lydia L. (McClintock), v. 5,
     p. 13

LaMunyon

Harold E., v. 4, p. 89
 J. Douglas, v. 4, p. 89
 J. M., v. 4, p. 89
 Joe D., v. 4, pp. 89-90
 Joe D., Mrs., v. 4, p. 89
 John, v. 4, p. 89
 Winona, v. 4, p. 89

Lancaster

Aurora (Norcross), v. 6, p. 269
 B. F., v. 6, p. 269
 Flora M., v. 6, p. 269

Lansing

Alida Platt, v. 3, p. 267
 Mary Jane (Abbott), v. 3,
     pp. 267-268
 Melancthon C. Woolsey (Dr.),
     v. 3, pp. 267-268

Larson

Ernest W., v. 4, p. 91
 Herbert, v. 4, pp. 91-92
 Jim, v. 4, pp. 91, 92
 Mabel, v. 4, p. 91

Larwill

Ada Potter (Dunton), Mrs.,
     v. 4, p. 93
 Annie J. (Pickard), v. 4, p. 93
 George Washington, v. 4,
     p. 93
 Harry L., v. 4, p. 93
 Josephine (Hardy), v. 4, p. 93
 Langdon H., v. 4, p. 93

Lathrop

Mary, v. 4, p. 94

LaTourette

Courtenius (Lt.), v. 3, p. 47
 John, v. 3, p. 47
 Mary (Marie), v. 3, p. 47
 Oliver, v. 3, p. 47
 Sarah (Schenck), v. 3, p. 47
 Schuyler (Capt.), v. 3, p. 47
 Susan, v. 3, p. 47

Lamont

Anne Edwards, v. 3, p. 219
 Florence, v. 3, p. 219
 Peter, v. 3, p. 219

Lawrence

Anne Elizabeth (Birch), v. 2,
     p. 153
 C. H. (Major), v. 2, p. 153
 Caroline, v. 2, p. 153
 Egbert E., v. 6, p. 480
 Irene Xetah, v. 6, p. 480
 Martha (Petty), v. 6, p. 480

Layton

Alva, v. 4, p. 95

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Layton (cont.)

John, v. 4, p. 95
 Lon, v. 4, p. 95
 Ora, v. 4, p. 95
 True, v. 4, p. 95

Learned

Albert C., v. 6, p. 324
 Florence Louise, v. 6, p. 324
 Lucy A., v. 6, p. 324

Lechner

Almira (McLaughlin), v. 1, p. 44; v. 4, p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
 George R., v. 4, pp. 96-97
 George Richard, v. 4, p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
 George W., v. 1, p. 44; v. 4, p. 96, 206; v. 5, p. 5
 Katherine Sarah (Neiman), v. 4, p. 206
 Laura Alice, v. 1, p. 44; v. 4, p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
 Marcia, v. 4, p. 206
 Myra A., v. 4, p. 206; v. 5, p. 5

Leckenby

Charles Harmon, v. 4, p. 98
 Laura (DeWitt), v. 4, p. 98
 Maurice, v. 4, p. 98

Lee

Abel Thomas, v. 4, p. 99
 Amanda (Thomas), v. 4, p. 99
 Barbara, v. 4, p. 99
 Florence M. (Moore), v. 4, p. 99
 Joan (Tanner), Mrs., v. 4, p. 99
 Margaret, v. 4, p. 99
 Mary E. (Kyle), v. 4, p. 99
 Mordica, v. 4, p. 99
 Paul Wayne, v. 4, pp. 99-100
 Richard M., v. 4, p. 99

LeFevre

Eva (French), v. 4, p. 101
 Eva Frederica, v. 4, p. 101
 Eva J., v. 4, p. 101
 Owen E., Mrs., v. 4, p. 102
 Owen Edgar, v. 4, p. 101

Leffenwell

William D., v. 4, pp. 103-105

Leffingwell

George, v. 4, p. 107
 Josephine, v. 4, p. 107
 Mabel, v. 4, p. 107
 Myron, v. 4, p. 106
 William Harrison (Maj.), v. 4, pp. 106-107

Lehow

Charles Lybrand, v. 4, p. 109

Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 109
 Eloise L. (Sargent), v. 4, p. 108-110
 Helen Flora, v. 4, p. 109
 John, v. 4, p. 108
 John Weimer, v. 4, p. 109
 Oscar Edmund, v. 4, pp. 108-110
 Sara (Weimer), v. 4, p. 108
 Weimar Sargent, v. 4, p. 109
 Wm. Henry, v. 4, p. 109

Leik

Barbara, v. 6, p. 427
 Faye, v. 6, p. 427
 Peter J., v. 6, p. 427

Leimer

Ella (Wolff), v. 4, p. 111
 Rudolph A., v. 4, p. 111
 Walter Alexander, v. 4, p. 111

Leonard

Katherine, v. 4, p. 114
 Martha, v. 4, p. 114
 Robert Prescott, v. 4, p. 114
 William Henry, v. 4, pp. 112-113, 114

Lewis

Anne, v. 4, p. 117
 Dorothy (Byrd), v. 4, p. 117
 Edward Thomas, v. 4, p. 115
 Ella C., (Avery), v. 4, p. 117
 George, v. 4, p. 115
 George Frank, v. 4, p. 115
 George Stephen, v. 4, p. 115
 John Philip, v. 4, p. 115
 Laura F., Mrs., v. 4, p. 116
 Lucy (Baker), v. 4, p. 117
 Margaret (Sinclair), v. 4, p. 115
 Margaret Esther, v. 4, p. 115
 Marion, v. 4, p. 115
 Mason, v. 4, p. 117
 Meriwether, v. 4, p. 117
 Robert, v. 4, pp. 115, 117
 Robert E., v. 4, pp. 117-118
 Ronald, v. 4, p. 115
 Sarah M. (Griffith), v. 4, p. 117
 Sophia A. (Silver), v. 4, p. 115
 Warner, v. 4, p. 117

Leyden

Frank, v. 4, p. 119
 James, v. 4, p. 119
 John J., v. 4, p. 119
 Joseph, v. 4, p. 119
 Leo T., v. 4, p. 119
 Nellie, Mrs., v. 4, p. 119

Light

Jennie, Mrs., v. 5, p. 91

Lightfoot

Amanda, Mrs., v. 4, p. 120
 Charles W., v. 4, p. 120

Lilyard

August, v. 4, p. 121
 Flora (Frick), v. 4, p. 121
 Floyd R., v. 4, p. 121
 Ida (Anderson), v. 4, p. 121
 Lucile, v. 4, p. 121

Lindemann

Alonzo Charles, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Anna Mary, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Annette Ella, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Arthur Fredrick, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Carl Daniel Maximilian, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Charlotte (Atkins), v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Henrietta Probst, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Maximilian Sydney, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Phillipa Grace (Patey), v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Thomas, Atkins, v. 4, pp. 122, 123
 Walter Franklin, v. 4, pp. 122, 123

Lindsey

Charles, v. 3, p. 79
 Ida L., v. 3, p. 79
 John Collier, v. 3, p. 79
 Mary (Marshall), v. 3, p. 79

Lindstrom

Margaret (Theiss), v. 4, pp. 124-127
 Margaret Mary, v. 4, pp. 124-127
 Paer, v. 4, pp. 124-127
 Paul, v. 4, pp. 124-127

Linger

Albert F., v. 4, p. 129
 Christopher, v. 4, p. 128
 Earl, v. 4, p. 129
 Eri, v. 4, p. 128
 George Washington, v. 4, pp. 128-129
 Horatio, v. 4, p. 128
 Howard, v. 4, p. 129
 Lyman, v. 4, p. 129
 Margaret, v. 4, p. 129

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Linger (cont.)

Phoebe, v. 4, p. 128
Rosie (Ogelbie), v. 4, p. 129

Linn

Mabel, v. 4, p. 87
Nellie (Butler), v. 4, p. 87
William Robert, v. 4, p. 87

Linneer

Charles A., v. 4, pp. 130-131, 132
Marie (Norstrom), v. 4, p. 132
Peter, v. 4, p. 132

Little

Edna (Brooks), v. 4, p. 135
Janet (Roberts), v. 4, p. 135
Joseph, v. 4, p. 135
Lanore (Davis), v. 4, p. 135
Nellie (Walker), v. 4, p. 135
Olga Schaefer, v. 4, pp. 133-134
Oscar, v. 4, p. 133
Rosamond, v. 4, p. 135
William, v. 4, p. 133

Litton

James R., Mrs., v. 6, p. 345

Livingston

Charles, v. 4, p. 136
Fremont P., v. 4, p. 136

Livoda

Loraine (Gaudet), v. 3, p. 138
Mike, v. 4, p. 138
Mrs., v. 4, p. 138

Lloyd

Beatrice E. (Dillow), v. 4, pp. 141-142
Elizabeth, pp. 141-142
Jack (Capt.), v. 4, pp. 139-140
Mary (Inman), v. 4, p. 141
William E., Mrs., v. 4, pp. 141-142

Lobach

Eugene Blair, v. 4, pp. 143-144
Grace (Woodbury), v. 4, p. 143
Sophia Dorothy Margaret (Wagner), v. 4, p. 143

Lockard

Alta (Haney), v. 4, p. 145
Bertha (Williams), v. 4, p. 145
Bessie (McCoy), v. 4, p. 145
Logan, v. 4, p. 145
Oma (Bowman), v. 4, p. 145
William E., v. 4, p. 145
William Emmet, v. 4, p. 146

Loiseau

Arthur, v. 4, p. 147

Isabelle, v. 4, p. 147
John E., v. 4, p. 147
Louis A., v. 4, p. 147
Louise M. (Guyot), v. 4, p. 147

Londoner

Wolf, v. 4, pp. 1-2
Wolfe, v. 2, p. 249

Lone Eagle, v. 4, pp. 148-149

Long

Carrie Eugenia (Bell), v. 6, p. 431
Daniel (Rev.), v. 6, p. 431
Henry P., v. 1, p. 220
Margaret, v. 6, p. 431

Loose

Fred, v. 4, p. 150

Lorber

Arthur B., v. 4, p. 153
Fannie E., Mrs., v. 4, pp. 151-153
Jacob N., v. 4, p. 153
Milton B. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 153

Lorton

Ada (Millay), v. 4, p. 161
Alice, v. 4, p. 161
Barbara, v. 4, p. 161
Billy, v. 4, p. 161
Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 161
Florence (Farnham), v. 4, p. 161
George, v. 4, pp. 161-162
Mary Lou (Tooker), v. 4, p. 161
Phillip M., v. 4, p. 161

Lory

Anna, v. 4, p. 156
Carrie Louise (Richards), v. 4, p. 155
Charles A. (Dr.), v. 4, pp. 154-156

Earl Christian, v. 4, p. 156
Marion Richards, v. 4, p. 156

Lough

Dorothy, v. 4, p. 157
John Alexander, v. 4, p. 157
John Benedict, v. 4, p. 157
Mary Laurinda (Benedict), v. 4, p. 157
Samuel Alexander, v. 4, p. 157
Samuel Allan, v. 4, p. 157
Susan (Craig), v. 4, p. 157

Love

C. Waldo, v. 4, p. 160
Waldo, v. 4, pp. 158-159

Loyd

Frank, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4, p. 163
Fred, v. 4, p. 163
Harlan, v. 4, p. 163
Robert, v. 4, p. 163
Vernon, v. 4, p. 163

Lubchenco

Portia Mary McKnight (Dr.), v. 4, p. 164

Lumsden

Cynthia, v. 4, p. 87
Della Margaret, v. 4, p. 87
John J., v. 4, p. 87

Lynch

Patrick J., v. 4, p. 165

Lyne

Henry, Mrs., v. 4, p. 166

- Mc -

McAllister

Henry, v. 4, pp. 167-168
Henry, Mrs., v. 4, p. 168
Matilda, v. 4, p. 168
T. Sherman, v. 4, p. 168

McAuliffe

Daniel J., v. 4, p. 169
Gerald E., v. 4, pp. 169-171
Mary Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 170
Susan (Crowe), v. 4, p. 170

McBreen

Louise (Schlitter), Mrs., v. 6, p. 28
Thomas, v. 6, p. 28

McBride

Rachael, v. 3, p. 287
Sarah, v. 3, p. 287
William, v. 3, p. 287

McBroom

Emma J. (Burnett), v. 4, pp. 173-174, 175
Eva, v. 4, p. 175
Isaac, v. 4, p. 175
J. W., v. 4, pp. 173-174
John, v. 4, pp. 172-174

McCain

Alice E., Mrs., v. 5, p. 156
Ernest R., v. 5, p. 156
Franklin M., v. 5, p. 156
Mark, v. 5, p. 156

McCamly

Anna May (Preston), v. 3, p. 110
Anne, v. 3, p. 110
David, v. 3, p. 110

Pioneer Notebooks Index

McCarthy

Charles, v. 4, p. 179
 Cornelius, v. 4, p. 179
 Dennis, v. 4, p. 180
 Florence, v. 4, p. 180
 Geraldine, v. 4, p. 180
 Johanna (Driscoll), v. 4, p. 179
 Kathleen, v. 4, p. 180
 Mary, v. 4, p. 180
 Mary (Mercer), v. 4, p. 179
 Minerva (Woolley), v. 4,
     p. 180
 Patricia, v. 4, p. 180
 Raphael (Rev.), v. 4, pp. 176-
     178
 Wilson, v. 4, pp. 179-180,
     181- 183

McCauley

P. B., Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
     p. 184
 Robert, v. 4, p. 184

McClain

Bertha (Marts), v. 4, p. 185
 Beverly Diane, v. 4, p. 185
 John, v. 4, p. 185
 Marjorie Dean (Hill), v. 4,
     p. 185
 Mary (Duncan), v. 4, p. 185
 Virginia, v. 4, p. 185
 Virginia Jeanne, v. 4, p. 185
 Walter David, v. 4, p. 185
 Walter David Jr., v. 4, p. 185
 Walter R., v. 4, p. 185

McClellan

Charlotte, v. 3, p. 5
 Elizabeth Annette (Strong),
     v. 3, p. 5
 George B. (Gen.), v. 3, p. 5
 William C., v. 3, p. 5

McClintock

Anna Colton, v. 4, p. 186
 Edith B. (Tompkins), v. 4,
     p. 187
 Elizabeth, v. 4, pp. 187, 188
 Margaret Lynch, v. 4, p. 187,
     188
 Mary T., v. 4, pp. 187, 188
 Thomas E., v. 4, pp. 187, 188
 Washington, v. 4, p. 186
 William, v. 4, p. 187
 William D., v. 4, pp. 187, 188

McCluer

Margaret (Swain), v. 4, p. 189
 Margaret, Mrs., v. 4, p. 189

McConnell

Francis, v. 2, p. 98

Isabella, v. 2, p. 98

Martha, v. 2, p. 98

McConville

John H., v. 4, p. 190

McCord

Charles R., v. 4, p. 191

McCormick

George C., v. 4, p. 192

McCoy

Bertha, v. 4, p. 273
 Charlie, v. 4, p. 273
 Charlotte Elizabeth Mayfield,
     v. 4, pp. 268-273
 Florence, v. 4, p. 273
 Janet, v. 4, p. 273
 Janet (Stuart), v. 4, pp. 268,
     271-273
 Joseph, v. 4, p. 268
 Mary, v. 4, p. 273
 Robert, v. 4, pp. 268-273
 Samantha, v. 4, p. 273

McCracken

Ed, v. 4, p. 193

McCully

Anne E., v. 5, p. 292
 David A., v. 5, p. 292

McDermott

R. B. "Mac," v. 4, p. 195

McDonough

James, v. 1, p. 50
 Jane (Wood), v. 1, p. 50
 Jane Amelia, v. 1, p. 50

McDowell

Alice, v. 4, p. 204
 Effie, v. 4, p. 203
 Etta, v. 4, p. 204
 Eva, v. 4, p. 204
 Frank, v. 4, p. 204
 James, v. 4, p. 204
 Mary, v. 4, p. 204
 Rhoda M. (Donegan), v. 4,
     pp. 203, 204
 Vincent, v. 4, pp. 203, 204

McElveen

Gilbert, v. 1, p. 184

McFarlane

Eugenia H., v. 1, p. 1
 Frederick, v. 4, pp. 196-197,
     198
 George, v. 4, p. 196
 Ida Kruse, v. 4, pp. 196-197
 Lillian (Cushing), v. 4, pp.
     197, 198
 Mary E., v. 1, p. 1
 Peter, v. 4, pp. 196-197, 198

William O., v. 1, p. 1; v. 4,
     p. 196

McGaa

William, Mrs., v. 2, p. 61
 William Denver, v. 2, p. 173

McGloine

Beatrice A., v. 3, p. 2
 James, v. 3, p. 2

McGlone

Bill, v. 4, p. 199
 Mary, v. 4, p. 199

McGlothlin

Isaac Newton, v. 3, p. 117
 Ruth, v. 3, p. 117

McGregor

Ada (Dalton), v. 4, p. 200
 Adelbert, v. 4, p. 200
 Ellen, v. 4, p. 200
 Lottie (Beers), v. 4, p. 200
 Sarah, v. 4, p. 200
 William C., v. 4, pp. 200-201

McGuire

Annie (Finnerty), v. 4, p. 202
 Bernard, v. 4, p. 202
 James Ducey, v. 4, p. 202
 John F., v. 4, p. 202
 John F. Jr., v. 4, p. 202
 John Wingfield, v. 4, p. 202
 Martha, Mrs., v. 5, p. 288
 Nellie Gertrude (Ducey), v. 4,
     p. 202

McInroy

Alice Amelia, v. 4, p. 203
 Amelia Ann (Curtis), v. 4,
     p. 203
 Effie (McDowell), v. 4, p. 203
 Frank H., v. 4, p. 203
 Harold Vincent, v. 4, p. 203
 Henry Harper, v. 4, pp. 203, 204
 James P., v. 4, pp. 203-204
 James P. Jr., v. 4, p. 203
 James Patrick, v. 4, p. 203
 Margaret (Lilly), v. 4, p. 203
 Patrick, v. 4, p. 203
 Stewart Ross, v. 4, p. 203
 Violet Mae, v. 4, p. 203

McIntosh

Alexander, v. 5, pp. 8, 10
 Cecilia, v. 5, p. 8
 Jessie McEwen, v. 5, pp. 8, 10

McKeen

Elizabeth M. (Campbell), v. 4,
     p. 205
 Harold Reid (Dr.), v. 4, p. 205
 Harold Reid III, v. 4, p. 205

Pioneer Notebooks Index

McKeen (cont.)

Maude, v. 4, p. 205

McKenna

Frank A., v. 4, p. 252

Peter, v. 4, p. 252

McKnight

J. H. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 164

Portia Mary (Lubchenco)

(Dr.), v. 4, p. 164

McLaughlin

Almira (Lechner), v. 4, p. 206

Daniel, v. 4, p. 206

Sarah Anne, v. 4, p. 206

McLearn

E., v. 4, p. 207

Franklin Jude, v. 4, p. 207

James M., v. 4, p. 207

Mr. and Mrs., v. 4, p. 207

Ralph Jerry, v. 4, p. 207

McMenamin

Hugh L. (Rev.), v. 4, p. 208

McMurtie

DeAllan, v. 1, p. 184

McMurtry

Caro, v. 2, p. 238

Caro (Gove), v. 2, p. 238

John G., v. 2, pp. 238-239

John G. Jr., v. 2, pp. 238-239

Virginia (Symes), v. 2,
pp. 238-239

McPherson

Nathaniel, v. 3, p. 193

Rebecca, v. 3, p. 193

W. R., v. 4, p. 89

McNaught

Francis Hector, v. 4, p. 209

Grace L., v. 4, p. 209

Hector C., v. 4, p. 209

Helen C. (Cowan), v. 4, p. 209

Helen Hoy, v. 4, p. 209

John S., v. 4, p. 209

McNeal

Blanche Young, v. 4, pp. 210-211

McNeil

Daniel McGregor, v. 5, p. 201

Edith May (Kerr), v. 5, p. 201

Sadie Ethel, v. 5, p. 201

McNichols

Cassie F. (Warner), v. 4,
pp. 212, 213

Dolores V., v. 4, pp. 212, 215

John J., v. 4, p. 212

Mary (Lucia), v. 4, p. 212

Rita, v. 4, pp. 212, 215

Stephen R., v. 4, pp. 212, 215

William H., v. 4, pp. 212, 213-
215

William H. Jr., v. 4, pp. 212, 215

McNutt

C. A. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 216

Erastus H., v. 4, p. 216

Mrs., v. 4, p. 216

McPhee

Angela Hannah, v. 4, p. 218

Charles D., v. 4, p. 218

Jessica Cranmer, v. 4, p. 218

John Raymond, v. 4, pp. 217, 218

Regina Aitken, Mrs., v. 4,
pp. 217, 218

Stella, Mrs., v. 4, p. 217

Williamain Cranmer, v. 4,
p. 218

William P., Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
p. 217

William Peter, v. 4, p. 218

McVittie

Albert Andrew, v. 4, pp. 219-
224, 225, 226, 227

Bonnie, v. 4, p. 226

- M -

MacCracken

Gertrude Thompson, v. 4,
p. 228

James W., v. 4, p. 228

Mary Cassill, v. 4, p. 228

Robert E. Lee, v. 4, p. 228

Robert T. (Decie), v. 4, p. 228

Mack

Barbara, v. 4, p. 229

Elizabeth (Sauer), v. 4, p. 229

Irma (Tegtmeyer), v. 4, p. 229

Louis, v. 4, p. 229

Louis W., v. 4, p. 229

Louis W. Jr., v. 4, p. 229

Mackay

John G., v. 4, p. 230

Katherine, v. 4, p. 230

Malcolm, v. 4, p. 230

Robert, v. 4, p. 230

Robert Jr., v. 4, p. 230

Roy R., v. 4, p. 230

MacKenzie

Alec, v. 4, p. 231

Mackintosh

Donald, v. 1, p. 247

Janet, v. 1, p. 247

Jessie, v. 1, p. 247

Madison

Charles, v. 4, p. 232

Gus, v. 4, p. 232

Louise, Mrs., v. 4, p. 232

Mahin

Angeline (Creightler), v. 4,
p. 234

Naomi (Teewell), v. 4, p. 234

Theodore, v. 4, pp. 233-234

Mahon

John, v. 4, p. 235

John Ralph, v. 4, pp. 235-236

John Ralph Jr., v. 4, p. 235

Mary (Gilbert), v. 4, p. 235

Sally Ann Morris, v. 4, p. 235

Malaby (Maleby)

Albert, v. 4, p. 240

Alma, v. 4, p. 239

Calvin Miles, v. 4, pp. 237-
241

Charles Sumner, v. 4, p. 239

Etna Iowa, v. 4, p. 238

Frederick Grant, v. 4, p. 239

Hannah Ann (Ross), v. 4,
p. 237

Henry, v. 4, p. 237

Henry Ross, v. 4, p. 239

Lillian G., v. 4, p. 240

Maggie, v. 4, p. 240

Mary (Kefover), v. 4, p. 237

Matilda, v. 4, p. 240

William, v. 4, p. 240

Maine

Emma Shuster, v. 4, p. 148

Floyd Shuster, v. 4, p. 148

George W. (Rev.), v. 4, p. 148

Major

Maude, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 324-328

Malnati

Henri, v. 2, p. 240

Malone

Etta B., v. 4, p. 242

Etta B. (McClelland), v. 4,
p. 242

Mary Cossett, v. 4, p. 242

Nadine Cossett, v. 4, p. 242

Richard H. Jr., v. 4, p. 242

Richard Henry, v. 4, p. 242

Richard Horwell, v. 4, pp.
242- 243

Ulay C. (Thomson), v. 4,
p. 242

Maloney

Ann Harwood (Staley), v. 4,
p. 244

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Maloney (cont.)

- Joseph, v. 4, p. 244
- Joseph Cecile, v. 4, p. 244
- Mary Cecile (Ryan), v. 4, p. 244

Mann

- B. L., v. 4, pp. 245-246, 247

Manzanares

- Jesus Maria, v. 4, p. 248

Maple

- Maggie, v. 2, p. 103

Marasco

- Ann, v. 4, p. 249
- Ben, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4, p. 249
- Fred B. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 249
- Paul B. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 249
- Roland (Dr.), v. 4, p. 249

Marks

- Elizabeth Krukow, Mrs., v. 3, p. 98
- Harry, v. 2, pp. 261-262

Massie

- Anna, v. 2, p. 207
- Marion, v. 2, p. 207
- Nancy, v. 2, p. 207

Martin

- Eliza, v. 4, p. 59
- Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 18
- Florence, v. 2, pp. 120-125
- Fred, v. 4, p. 250
- George, Mr. and Mrs., v. 3, p. 240
- Herman S., v. 4, p. 250
- Ina, v. 4, p. 250
- James (Sir), v. 2, p. 123
- Kate (Dixon), v. 4, p. 18
- Lady, v. 2, p. 123
- Lucy, v. 3, p. 240
- Mary, v. 3, p. 240
- Molly, Mrs., v. 4, p. 250
- Robert, v. 4, p. 250
- Sarah, v. 3, p. 240
- Wilton B., v. 4, p. 18

Martines

- John, v. 4, p. 252

Marts

- Bertha, v. 4, p. 185
- David, v. 4, p. 185
- Mary (Beathler), v. 4, p. 185

Martz

- Andrew J., v. 4, pp. 253-254

Marx

- Hazel Helen, v. 5, p. 45
- M., v. 5, p. 45
- Mose, v. 5, p. 46
- Rosetta, v. 5, pp. 45, 46

Mason

- Alonzo, v. 4, pp. 255-256
- Alonzo L., v. 4, p. 255
- Celeste I., v. 4, p. 255
- Daniel L., v. 4, p. 255
- Dorthea, v. 6, p. 277
- Leslie L., v. 6, p. 277
- Martha A., v. 4, p. 255
- Martha Ann (Newell), v. 4, p. 255
- Maude (Kimball), v. 6, p. 277
- Melissa Ann, v. 4, p. 255

Massinger

- William M., v. 4, p. 257

Mastin

- Caroline, v. 6, p. 229
- Celia M., v. 6, p. 229
- Charles H., v. 6, p. 229

Mathews

- Blanche Dingley, Mrs., v. 4, p. 258
- Martha Margarette, v. 4, p. 277
- Milton, v. 4, p. 277
- W. S. B., v. 4, p. 258

Matthews

- Ben (Dr.), v. 2, p. 55

Mattingly

- Agnes (Bradley), v. 6, p. 354
- Lenora, v. 6, p. 354
- Thomas Cousens, v. 6, p. 354

Matty

- Leo, v. 4, p. 259

Maul

- Benjamin Franklin, v. 4, pp. 260-261
- Benjamin Franklin Jr., v. 4, p. 261
- Calvin W., v. 4, p. 261
- Hannah (Chamberlain), v. 4, p. 260
- Lucille A., v. 4, p. 261
- Lucius, v. 4, p. 260
- Lucy Angel (Bond), v. 4, p. 260
- Mabel Otis, v. 4, p. 261
- Russell Wallace, v. 4, p. 260
- William Bond, v. 4, pp. 260-261

Maxwell

- Frank, v. 4, p. 262
- Margaret, v. 4, p. 380
- Sarah (Williams), v. 4, pp. 378-380

Mayer

- Frank H. (Col.), v. 4, pp. 263-264, 265
- Frank Howard, v. 4, pp. 266-267
- Marjorie Monroe, v. 4, p. 266
- Lois, v. 4, p. 267

Mayern

- Eustace Von II, v. 4, p. 266
- Heloise deCourcy, v. 4, p. 266

Mayfield

- Charlotte Elizabeth, v. 4, pp. 268-273
- David, v. 4, p. 269
- Delia, v. 4, pp. 268-273
- Donna Jean, v. 4, p. 274
- Elijah Bailey, v. 4, p. 268
- Elijah Mayfield Family, v. 4, pp. 268-273
- Elijah Wellington, v. 4, p. 269
- Florence, v. 4, p. 269
- Minnie McMaster, Mrs., v. 4, p. 274
- Samantha (Milner), v. 4, pp. 268-270
- Sarah, v. 4, p. 269
- Thomas G., v. 4, pp. 268, 269
- William H., v. 4, p. 274
- William H. Family, v. 4, p. 274

Mayne

- Alva J., v. 4, p. 278
- Elva, v. 4, p. 278
- Minnie Bell Bruch, v. 4, pp. 275-279
- Pansy, v. 4, p. 278
- Phoebe, v. 4, p. 278

Mayo

- Adeline (Gregory), v. 4, p. 280
- C. P. (Charlie), v. 4, p. 280
- Charles Henry, v. 4, p. 280
- Joe, v. 4, p. 280
- Margaret, Mrs., v. 4, p. 280

Mayor

- Mary J., v. 3, p. 260
- Thurston, v. 3, p. 260

Mead

- Albert H., v. 2, p. 179
- Alice A. Hough, v. 4, p. 281
- Charles L. Jr., v. 4, pp. 281, 282
- Charles Larew, v. 4, pp. 281, 282
- Cornelius, v. 4, p. 285
- Edgar, v. 1, p. 217
- Eleanor C., v. 4, pp. 281, 282

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Mead (cont.)

Eleanor Marcena Smith, v. 4,
p. 281, 282
Ella A. (Dr.), v. 4, pp. 283-284
Enos, v. 2, p. 179
Ezra, v. 2, p. 179
Frances W. Cheesman, v. 4,
p. 285
John Henry, v. 2, p. 179
Jonathan, v. 2, p. 179
Joshua, v. 4, p. 281
Kenneth A., v. 1, p. 217
M. Salome, v. 4, p. 281
Nehemiah, v. 2, p. 179
Richard Wilson, v. 4, p. 281
Robert S., v. 4, pp. 281, 282
Winifred, v. 4, p. 281
Walter C., v. 4, p. 285

Means

Carl, Mrs., v. 4, p. 286
Carl Bell, v. 4, p. 286
Eleanor Crannell, v. 4, p. 286
F. M. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 287
Florence Crannell, v. 4, p. 286
John F., v. 4, p. 286
Katherine Leavengood, v. 4,
p. 286
W. Richard, v. 4, p. 287

Mear

John, v. 4, p. 289
Mary Nash, v. 4, pp. 288-290

Mears

Mary Kampfschulte, v. 4,
p. 301
Otto, v. 4, pp. 291, 292-296,
297-301, 302, 303-305

Meek

Clara D., v. 4, p. 306
Cora May Cunningham, v. 4,
p. 306
Leonard B., v. 4, p. 306
W. W., v. 4, p. 306

Melrose

Allene H. Milton, v. 4, p. 307
James Watson, v. 4, p. 307
Hugh, v. 4, p. 307

Menard

Gustavus Francis, v. 4, p. 308

Mendenhall

C. B., v. 1, pp. 135-137
Harriet, v. 1, p. 137

Mendum

Augusta, v. 6, p. 465
Hannah, v. 6, p. 465
Warren, v. 6, p. 465

Menefee

Lafayette Slaughter, v. 3,
p. 258
Lucy S., v. 3, p. 258

Mercer

John, v. 4, p. 179
Mary, v. 4, p. 179
Nancy (Wilson), v. 4, p. 179

Merchant

Benjamin Franklin, v. 4,
pp. 309-310
Hattie Cleveland (Gray), v. 4,
pp. 309-310
Mary Ellen (Foster), v. 4,
pp. 309-310
Viola Ellen, v. 4, p. 310
William Franklin, v. 4,
pp. 309- 310

Messenger

Ira D., v. 4, p. 311
Lulu, Mrs., v. 4, p. 311

Metsker

Clarissa (Nickey), v. 4, p. 344
Ella R., v. 4, pp. 344-345
Lewis F., v. 4, p. 344

Metzger

A. A., Dr. and Mrs., v. 4,
p. 312
Arthur, v. 4, p. 312
E. V., v. 4, p. 312
Elizabeth A., Mrs., v. 4, p. 312
R. C., Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
p. 312

Meyers

John A., Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
p. 313

Middlemiss

Alice, v. 4, p. 316
Earl, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
pp. 314, 315, 316
Elva, v. 4, p. 316
Ida, Mrs., v. 4, pp. 314, 315, 316
Kenneth, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
pp. 314, 315
Ralph, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
pp. 314, 315, 316
Ross, v. 4, pp. 314, 315, 316
Stuart, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
pp. 314, 315, 316
Vera, v. 4, p. 316

Miel

Eleanor, Mrs., v. 4, p. 317
George W. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 317

Miles

Alfred H., v. 4, p. 318

Barbara, v. 4, p. 318
Emma (Lutz), v. 4, p. 318
Floyd F., v. 4, p. 318
Genevieve Marie, v. 4, p. 318
James B., v. 4, p. 318
Linnie (Klunsner), v. 4, p. 318
Mary M., v. 4, p. 318

Milheim

Alexander, v. 4, pp. 319-320,
321-323, 328
Barbara A., v. 4, p. 323
Betty, v. 4, p. 323
Clara Catherine, v. 4, p. 321
Dale R., v. 4, p. 323
David Allen, v. 3, p. 173; v. 4,
p. 319
Ella Blanche, v. 4, p. 327
Emma Benita, v. 4, p. 321
Emma Elizabeth (Hagus), v. 4,
p. 327
Euri Inez (Brannan), v. 4,
p. 327
Fred Andrew, v. 4, p. 327
Frederick, v. 4, pp. 319-328
Gladys Eleanor, v. 3, p. 173;
v. 4, p. 319
Jacob, v. 4, pp. 319-322
James Otto, v. 3, p. 173; v. 4,
p. 319
Jerry O., v. 4, p. 323
John, v. 4, pp. 319-322
Josephine Elizabeth, v. 4,
p. 321
Marion Marvel, v. 4, p. 327
Richard Ernest, v. 3, p. 173;
v. 4, p. 323
Thelma (Snodgrass), v. 3,
p. 173; v. 4, p. 323
Wila (Trafford), v. 4, p. 319

Miller

Allie (Galbreath), v. 4, p. 332
Bess, v. 4, p. 331
David, v. 4, p. 331
David Baker, v. 4, p. 329
David G., v. 4, p. 329
Dora, v. 4, p. 337
Duvette (Eller), v. 4, p. 337
Edward, v. 4, p. 332
Edward T., v. 4, pp. 330-331
Eva C. (Baker), v. 4, p. 329
Gus, v. 4, p. 332
Henry, v. 4, p. 332
Hugh Baker, v. 4, p. 329
Hyman, v. 4, p. 333
Jacob, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
pp. 335, 336

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Miller (cont.)

James Jr., v. 4, p. 334
 James R., v. 4, p. 334
 LeRoy, v. 4, p. 333
 "Lil," v. 4, p. 333
 Mary, v. 4, pp. 338, 341, 342
 Mary Cunningham, v. 4,
     p. 329
 Mary Elizabeth (Mason), v. 4,
     p. 334
 Mason E., v. 4, p. 334
 Max, v. 4, p. 337
 Morris (Moe), v. 4, pp. 335,
     336-337
 Paul, v. 4, p. 337
 Peter G., v. 4, pp. 338-339,
     340, 341, 342
 Rudolph, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
     p. 332
 Samuel, v. 4, p. 329
 Sheri, v. 4, p. 331
 Shirley, v. 4, p. 337
 Terri, v. 4, p. 331
 Walter Baker, v. 4, p. 329
 Wesley, v. 4, p. 331

Milligan

Bertha Virginia (Hale), v. 4,
     p. 343
 Edward W., v. 4, pp. 343, 344
 Edward William, v. 4, p. 343
 Ella R. (Metsker), v. 4, pp.
     344-345
 James T., v. 4, pp. 343, 344
 Mary E. (Arms), v. 4, p. 343
 Mary Elizabeth (Aiken), v. 4,
     p. 344
 Mary Virginia, v. 4, p. 343
 Robert Edward, v. 4, p. 343

Milliken

John D., v. 4, pp. 346-347
 Lola, v. 4, p. 346

Milliman

Family, v. 4, p. 348
 Ida, Mrs., v. 4, p. 348

Mills

Alan Robert, v. 4, p. 355
 Brian Frederick, v. v, p. 355
 Clifford, v. 4, pp. 349-351
 Corwina R., v. 4, p. 352
 Corwina Rouse, v. 4, p. 352
 Donald H., v. 4, pp. 352, 355
 Edith R., v. 4, p. 352
 Fern Elizabeth (Guyn), v. 4,
     p. 355
 Gabrielle, v. 4, p. 351

Harold Gillespie, v. 4, pp. 352, 355
 Hazel, Mrs., v. 4, pp. 353-354
 Hazel A. (Mohrman), v. 4,
     p. 352
 J. Warner, v. 4, pp. 349-350
 Jessie R., v. 4, p. 352
 Joseph Trotter, v. 4, p. 349
 Maude (Ketchpaw), v. 4,
     p. 350
 Maurine, v. 4, pp. 352, 355
 Muriel A., v. 4, pp. 352, 355
 Murielle, v. 4, p. 351
 Robert H., v. 4, p. 352
 Robert Harold, v. 4, p. 355
 Ruth L. (Nye), v. 4, pp. 352, 355
 Stephen Harold, v. 4, p. 355
 W. F. R. Jr., v. 4, p. 352
 William Fitz Randolph, v. 4,
     p. 352

Milne

Ann Catherine, v. 4, p. 356
 David, v. 4, p. 356

Milton

Allene H., v. 4, pp. 307, 357
 Eloise (Hendricks), v. 4,
     p. 357
 Emma (Dean), v. 4, pp. 307,
     357
 George (Dr.), v. 4, p. 307
 George Washington (Dr.),
     v. 4, p. 357
 William, v. 4, p. 357
 William Dean, v. 4, p. 357

Miner

Fred L., v. 4, p. 358

Misamore

Minnie Fahl (Treece), v. 6,
     p. 268
 Owen (Rev.), v. 6, p. 268

Mitchell

Archibald, v. 5, p. 81
 Arthur, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
     p. 359
 Catherine Quentin, v. 4, p. 360
 Clara Elizabeth, v. 4, pp. 360,
     361-363
 Clara Madison (Goodell), v. 4,
     p. 360
 Clark Goodell, v. 4, pp. 360,
     361-363
 Deana (Swearingen), v. 4,
     p. 359
 Esther (Williams), v. 4, p. 359

Evadna (Blackburn), v. 4,
     p. 359
 Ida Hermina (Quentin), v. 4,
     pp. 360, 362
 James, v. 4, pp. 361-363, 364
 John Clark, v. 4, pp. 360, 361-363
 John Clark II, v. 4, pp. 360,
     361-363
 Lela (Nagel), v. 4, p. 364
 Mary (Baker), v. 4, p. 359
 Quentin, v. 4, p. 360
 Ruth (Mann), v. 4, p. 359
 Sarah (Swigert), v. 5, p. 81
 Sarah J., v. 4, p. 364
 Sarah Maria, v. 5, p. 81
 Virginia (Kominski), v. 4,
     p. 359

Miyamoto

K. K. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 365

Mock

Mollie, v. 3, p. 144
 W. J., Mr. and Mrs., v. 3,
     p. 144

Modena

Luis, v. 4, pp. 367-369
 Maria, v. 4, pp. 366-369
 Mariana (Mariano), v. 4,
     pp. 366-369, 370

Moffat

Anne Gregg, v. 4, p. 373
 David, v. 4, p. 371
 David Halliday, v. 4, pp. 372,
     373
 Eleanor Louise (Cutler), v. 4,
     p. 373
 Nicholas de, v. 4, p. 373
 Samuel, v. 4, p. 373

Monson

Andrew T., v. 4, pp. 374-375
 Anna B., v. 4, p. 374
 Eleanor M., v. 4, p. 374
 Elizabeth D. (Dolan), v. 4,
     p. 374
 Ellen J. (Dolan), v. 4, p. 374
 Emeline, v. 4, p. 374
 George, v. 4, p. 374
 George L., (Dr.), v. 4, p. 374
 Hugh T., v. 4, p. 374
 Martha J., v. 4, p. 375
 Ruth B., v. 4, p. 375
 Theodore L., v. 4, p. 374

Montgomery

Earl, v. 4, p. 376
 Eliza A., v. 4, p. 84
 Elizabeth, v. 4, p. 84

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Montgomery (cont.)

Eunice Opal (Kirk), v. 4,
pp. 376, 377
George, v. 4, pp. 376, 377
John, v. 4, p. 84
Matilda (Proctor), v. 4,
pp. 376, 377
Pauline, v. 4, p. 376
Rutherford G., v. 4, pp. 376, 377

Moon

Sarah J., v. 4, pp. 378-382

Moore

Alice (Evans), v. 4, p. 385
Alice T., (Dr.), v. 4, p. 388
Barbara Standish, v. 4, p. 385
Clarence C., v. 4, p. 383
Dora (Sides), v. 4, p. 390
Edward, v. 4, p. 384
Elizabeth (Taylor), v. 4, p. 384
Florence M., v. 4, p. 99
Hosea, v. 4, p. 99
Hudson, v. 4, p. 384
Hudson Jr., v. 4, pp. 384-386, 387
Hudson III, v. 4, p. 385
James G., Mrs., v. 4, p. 388
John, v. 4, p. 99; v. 5, p. 24
John C., v. 5, p. 25
John H., v. 4, p. 99
John Lewis, v. 4, p. 384
Louise, v. 4, p. 391
Mabel Head, v. 4, p. 388
Martha (Tyler), v. 4, p. 99
Mary, v. 4, p. 391
Mary (Crory), v. 5, p. 24
Mary (Hudson), v. 4, p. 384
Mary Louise, v. 5, p. 25
Richard M., v. 5, p. 25
Robert, v. 4, p. 391
Ruth, v. 5, p. 25
Thomas E., v. 5, p. 25
Tochie Williams (Davis), v. 4,
p. 384
Walter C., v. 4, pp. 389-391
Walter Scott Cheesman, v. 4,
p. 385
Willard James, v. 4, p. 388

Morey

Abigail Baird, v. 4, p. 392
Anna L. (Clough), v. 4, pp.
392, 393
Chester Stephen, v. 4, pp. 392,
393-394, 395
John W., v. 4, p. 392, 393, 395
Katherine Laura, v. 4, p. 395

Mable F., v. 4, p. 395
Mary Louise, v. 4, pp. 392,
393
William H., v. 4, p. 392

Morgan

Edward Broadbent, v. 4,
p. 396
Elizabeth White Poyner, v. 4,
p. 399
Ella Sherera Blum, v. 4, p. 396
Emma (Farley), v. 4, p. 398
Evan D., v. 4, pp. 397-398
Florence, v. 4, p. 398
Gertrude, v. 4, p. 398
Grace Firth (Welles), v. 4,
p. 396
John R., v. 4, p. 397
John Thomas, v. 4, p. 399
Phocion, v. 4, p. 399
Samuel Broadbent, v. 4, p. 396
William Berry, v. 4, p. 399
Winna Thomas, v. 4, p. 399

Morganti

Cesare, v. 4, pp. 400-401, 402
Emilio, v. 4, pp. 400, 403
Gladys, v. 4, p. 402
Noemi, v. 4, pp. 400-401, 402-
403
Umberto, v. 4, pp. 400-401,
402-403

Morris

Benjamin, v. 4, p. 235
Fanny (Strouse), v. 4, p. 404
Jane Theresa, v. 4, p. 404
Leanna, v. 4, p. 404
Mary (Chern), v. 4, p. 404
Percy Strouse, v. 4, p. 404
Pinchas, v. 4, p. 404
Sally Ann, v. 4, p. 235
Susan (Straub), v. 4, p. 235
William, v. 4, p. 404

Morrison

Ella (Gentry), v. 5, p. 147
George, v. 4, p. 405
Isabelle, v. 4, p. 405
Mary Walburn, v. 5, p. 147
Paul R., v. 4, p. 405
Singleton M., v. 5, p. 147
Thomas Cowan, v. 4, p. 405

Morrow

E. L. (Dr.), v. 4, p. 406
Helen, v. 4, p. 406

Morse

Anna (Reynolds), v. 4, p. 394
Bradish, v. 4, p. 394

Mosser

Adelia E., v. 5, p. 85
Agnes Adelia Devanny, v. 5,
p. 85
J. W., v. 5, p. 85

Moynihan

Cornelius (Rev.), v. 4, p. 407
Helen (O'Connor), v. 4, p. 407
James F. (Rev.), v. 4, p. 407
James J., v. 4, p. 407
Jerimiah J. (Rt. Rev. Canon),
v. 4, p. 407
John, v. 4, p. 407
Neal P. (Rev.), v. 4, p. 407

Mueller

Anne, v. 4, p. 409
Berenice (Cole), v. 4, p. 408
Carl Hugo, v. 4, p. 408
Caroline (Kreuz), v. 4, p. 408
Elizabeth (Buck), v. 4, p. 408
Helen (Greene), v. 4, p. 409
Jacob, v. 4, p. 408
Louis C., v. 4, pp. 408-409
Louis C. Jr., v. 4, p. 409
Margaret (Miller), v. 4, p. 408
Nicholas, v. 4, p. 408
Sally, v. 4, p. 409

Muhlhauser

Linda Mae, v. 4, p. 410
Michael, Mrs., v. 4, p. 410

Mullen

Catherine Smith, Mrs., v. 4,
p. 411
John K., v. 4, p. 411
John K., Mrs., v. 4, p. 411
John Keenan, v. 5, p. 47
Katherine, v. 5, p. 47
Katherine (Smith), v. 5, p. 47

Mumey

John B., v. 4, p. 413
Nolie (Dr.), v. 4, pp. 412-414

Mundhenk

Sarah, Mrs., v. 4, pp. 415-416

Muir

William Train, v. 3, p. 224

Munroe

Charles Micajah, v. 4, p. 417
Clara Elizabeth (Garland),
v. 4, p. 417
Cora Eva (Blood), v. 4,
pp. 417-418
Cora Garland (Thibodeau),
v. 4, p. 417
Herbert Micajah, v. 4, p. 417
Marion (Craig), v. 4, p. 417
Roy Blood, v. 4, p. 417

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Munroe (cont.)

Roy Garland, v. 4,
pp. 417-418
Winnola, v. 4, p. 417

Munson

Benjamin F., v. 4, p. 419
Catherine (Laughran), v. 4,
p. 419
Edith, v. 4, p. 419
Inez (Young), v. 4, p. 419
Thomas E., v. 4, p. 419

Murat

Henri, v. 2, pp. 61, 65
Henri (Count), v. 4, pp. 420-
423
Joachim, v. 4, p. 420
Katrina (Countess), v. 2, p. 65
Katrina Wolf, v. 4,
pp. 420-423

Murphy

Bert E., v. 4, p. 424
Catherine (Dory), v. 4, p. 424
Cyrus, v. 4, p. 424
Effie, v. 4, p. 424
Frank, v. 4, p. 424
Hiram H., v. 4, pp. 424-425
Isadora, v. 4, p. 424
Jennie Gertrude, v. 4, p. 424
Julia, Mrs., v. 4, p. 426
Mahala Ann (Epperson), v. 4,
p. 424
Martin, v. 4, pp. 424, 426
Nettie Mae, v. 4, p. 424
Porterfield, v. 4, p. 424
Sarah Alice, v. 4, p. 425
ViAnna, v. 4, p. 424

Murray

Esther F. (Smith), v. 4,
pp. 427-433
Fred, v. 4, p. 434
George, v. 4, pp. 427-433
Mark, v. 4, p. 434
V. S., v. 4, p. 434
Verne, Mrs., v. 4, p. 434

Muser

George, v. 4, p. 435

Myers

Bertha (Mullare), v. 4, pp.
436, 437
Cora (St. John), v. 4, pp. 436,
437
Elizabeth (Messenger), v. 4,
pp. 436, 437
Elizabeth (Nan), Mrs., v. 4,
pp. 436, 437
George, v. 4, p. 437

John H., v. 4, p. 438

- N -

Nanny

Alma Rhoads, v. 5, p. 113
Stephen, v. 5, p. 113
T. Frank, v. 5, p. 113
Tyline, v. 5, p. 113
William, v. 5, p. 113

Nash

Alice A. (Brown), v. 5, p. 1
Edgar O. (Dr.), v. 5, p. 1
Joe, v. 4, pp. 288-289
Joseph, v. 4, pp. 288-289
Mary, v. 4, pp. 288-290
Richard, v. 5, p. 1
Selina (Woodworth), v. 5, p. 1

Naugle

Cecil Emmett, v. 5, p. 2
Emma (Johnson), v. 5, p. 2
John F., v. 5, p. 2
Leora (Fortner), v. 5, p. 2
S. Emmett, v. 5, p. 2

Neal

Mary, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 3-4
Titus E., v. 5, p. 3

Neiman

Dorothy M. (Larson), v. 4,
p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
George H., v. 5, p. 5
John H., v. 4, p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
Katherine Sarah, Mrs., v. 4,
p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
Kathryne E. (Williams), v. 4,
p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
Lauriel E. (Wolfe), v. 4,
p. 206; v. 5, p. 5
Ralph, v. 5, p. 5
Richard John, v. 5, p. 5
Theodore L., v. 5, p. 5

Nelson

Anna M., Mrs., v. 5, p. 6
C. Walfred, v. 5, p. 6
John A., v. 5, p. 6
Oscar F., v. 5, p. 6
Victor H., v. 5, p. 6

Nester

Bertha, Mrs., v. 5, p. 7
Emma (Frazzini), v. 5, p. 7
Felicitas (McGibbon), v. 5,
p. 7
Harry, v. 5, p. 7
Henry, v. 5, p. 7

Nevin

Edna Louise, v. 5, p. 8

Hugh, v. 5, p. 9

Jessie (McIntosh), v. 5, pp. 8, 10

John, v. 5, p. 9

John Knox, v. 5, p. 9

Joseph Murray, v. 5, pp. 8, 9

Mary Boyd, v. 5, pp. 8, 9

Wm. C. Jr., v. 5, pp. 8, 10

William Calvin, v. 5, pp. 8, 9-10

Newbold

Cecelia, Mrs., v. 5, p. 12
David, v. 5, p. 11
Jean, Mrs., v. 5, p. 12
Jim, v. 5, p. 12
Vernon W., Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 5, p. 11

Newbould

Victor, v. 5, p. 12

Newcomb

Harry Wendell, v. 5, p. 13
Henry E., v. 5, p. 13
Herbert J., v. 5, p. 13
Louise L. (Lamey), v. 5, p. 13
Marion L., v. 5, p. 13
Mary (Pullen), v. 5, p. 13
Warner W., v. 5, p. 13

Newton

Amelia (Peery), v. 5, p. 14
Amy, Mrs., v. 5, p. 20
Byron, v. 5, p. 14
Claud E., v. 5, p. 14
Clifford, v. 5, p. 20
David, v. 5, p. 17
Eva J., v. 5, p. 14
Ezra A., v. 5, p. 21
Forrest, v. 5, p. 17
Frances Salter, v. 5, p. 15
George Ezra, v. 5, p. 21
George H. (Rev.), v. 5, p. 14
Helen, v. 5, pp. 16, 17
Irving S., v. 5, p. 14
Jack (Sgt.), v. 5, p. 17
James E., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5,
pp. 16, 17
James Elmer, Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 5, p. 18
James Quigg, v. 5, p. 21
James Quigg, Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 5, p. 19
Jerry, v. 5, p. 17
Lillian B., v. 5, p. 14
Marc, v. 5, p. 17
Margaret J. (Conklin), v. 5,
p. 14
Mary Rose (Quigg), v. 5, p. 21

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Newton (cont.)

Maurine, v. 5, p. 17
 O. D. (Capt.), v. 5, p. 17
 Richard, v. 5, p. 17
 Richard L., v. 5, p. 20
 Richard L., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 20
 Robert F., v. 5, p. 21
 Rochelle, v. 5, p. 20
 Roland, v. 5, p. 17
 Ronald, v. 5, p. 17
 Ruth Ann (Wilbur), v. 5, p. 21
 Tom, v. 5, p. 17
 Whitney, v. 5, p. 21
 Whitney, Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 15
 Whitney, Mrs., v. 5, p. 19
 Wilbur, v. 5, p. 21
 Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 15

Neylan

Daniel (Sir), v. 3, pp. 129-130
 Frederick L. L. (Major), v. 3, p. 129
 Helen (Harker), v. 3, p. 129

Nicholls

Adelaide, v. 5, p. 22
 E. A., v. 5, p. 22
 Elipha, Mrs., v. 5, p. 22
 Fred, v. 5, p. 22

Nichols

Amalia Barney, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 141-142
 Caroline (Newhall), v. 5, p. 23
 Charles Herbert, v. 5, p. 23
 Charles Hersey, v. 5, p. 23
 Frederick Chester, v. 5, p. 23
 John Frederick, v. 5, p. 23
 Lily E. (Armstrong), v. 5, p. 23
 W. H., v. 3, p. 250
 Walter T., v. 5, pp. 141-142

Nicholson

Charles Lionel, v. 5, p. 24
 Elizabeth Kountze, v. 5, p. 24
 Eugenie (Kountze), v. 5, p. 24
 Meredith, v. 5, pp. 24-25
 Meredith Jr., v. 5, p. 24

Nienhiser

Ettie (Woodrow), v. 5, p. 26
 Henry, v. 5, p. 26

Nilson

Albert, v. 5, p. 27
 Pearl, v. 5, p. 27
 Teresa, Mrs., v. 5, p. 27

Niner

E. K., v. 5, p. 29
 Frederick L., v. 5, p. 29
 Jennetta (Drummond), v. 5, pp. 28, 29
 L. C., v. 5, p. 29
 Lee C., v. 5, p. 28
 Louise, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 28, 29

Nisbet

Alexander, v. 5, p. 30
 E. L. (Heath), v. 5, p. 30
 Grace, v. 5, p. 30
 John Rae (Rev.), v. 5, p. 30
 Margaret, v. 5, p. 30
 Martha, v. 5, p. 30
 Mary (Allchin), v. 5, p. 30

Nixon

Azor M., v. 5, p. 31
 John C., v. 5, pp. 31-32
 Sarah Jane (Crouch), v. 5, p. 31

Noel

Cassandra Rose, v. 6, p. 320
 Virginia, Mrs., v. 6, p. 320

Norfleet

J. Frank, v. 5, pp. 33-34

Norling

John F., v. 5, p. 35
 Marshall, v. 5, p. 35

Norman

John E. Jr., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 467
 John Thomas, v. 6, p. 467

Norris

M. L., Mr. and Mrs., v. 2, p. 66

Norton

Albert Julius, v. 5, p. 36
 Caroline (Trask), v. 5, p. 36
 Eliza, v. 5, p. 36
 Harvey C., v. 5, p. 36

Nuckolls

Della Vannah, v. 5, p. 37
 Emmett, v. 5, p. 37
 George Harvey, v. 5, pp. 37-38
 Marion, v. 5, p. 37
 Milissa (Bennett), v. 5, p. 37
 Virginia (Wallace), v. 5, p. 37

Nutt

B. F., Mrs., v. 5, p. 39
 George A., v. 5, pp. 40-41, 42, 43, 44

- O -

Oberfelder

Arthur M., Mrs., v. 5, p. 46
 Arthur Milton, v. 5, pp. 45, 46
 Bobetta, v. 5, pp. 45, 46
 Hannah, v. 5, p. 45
 Hazel Helen (Marx), v. 5, p. 45
 Hazel M., v. 5, p. 46
 Joseph, v. 5, p. 45

O'Connor

Anna, v. 5, p. 47
 Carol (Sudler), v. 5, p. 48
 Carol Sheila, v. 5, p. 48
 James Emerson, v. 5, p. 47
 John Mullen, v. 5, pp. 47-48
 Katherine, v. 5, p. 47
 Katherine (Mullen), v. 5, p. 47
 Timothy Mullen, v. 5, p. 48
 William, v. 5, p. 47

O'Daniels

Dan, Mrs., v. 5, p. 49
 Danel, v. 5, p. 49
 Nancy, v. 5, p. 49

O'Donnell

Amy, v. 5, p. 50
 Anita, v. 5, p. 50
 Canton, v. 5, p. 50
 Dorotita, v. 5, p. 50
 Kathrine (Dwyer), v. 5, p. 50
 Michael, v. 5, p. 50
 Ottomar, v. 5, p. 50
 Thomas Jefferson, v. 5, pp. 50-52

O'Donovan

Mary (Hagerty), v. 3, p. 133
 Mary Ellen, v. 3, p. 133
 Jeremiah, v. 3, p. 133

O'Fallon

Martin J., Mrs., v. 3, p. 134

Ogilvy

Blanche Edith Maude, v. 5, p. 57
 Blanche Stanley, v. 5, p. 55
 David G. D., v. 5, p. 53
 David Graham Drummond, v. 5, p. 55
 David Lyulph Gore Wolseley, v. 5, p. 55
 Dorothy, v. 5, p. 54
 Edith Gertrude (Boothroyd), v. 5, p. 57
 Jack David Angus, v. 5, pp. 53, 54, 57

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Ogilvy (cont.)

Lyulph G. (Lord), v. 5, pp. 53, 54

Lyulph Gilchrist Stanley (Lord), v. 5, pp. 55-57

Maude (Lady), v. 5, pp. 53, 55

O'Kin-Nee (Chief), v. 3, p. 255

Olds

Bernard, v. 2, p. 14

Elizabeth (Cross), v. 2, p. 14

Elizabeth (Daisy), v. 2, p. 14

Olinger

Emma Scott, v. 5, p. 58

Geo. W. Jr., v. 5, pp. 58, 60

George Washington, v. 5, p. 58

George Washington, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 59-60

John W., v. 5, p. 58

Margaret G. (Flagg), v. 5, pp. 58, 59-60

Margaret Gwendolyn, v. 5, pp. 58, 60

Olmstead

Florence S., Mrs., v. 5, p. 61

Mary, v. 5, p. 61

Mary, Mrs., v. 5, p. 62

Prescott Jr., v. 5, p. 61

Prescott S., v. 5, p. 61

Olson

Anna (Johnson), v. 5, p. 65

Arvid, v. 5, pp. 63-64

Charles J., v. 5, p. 65

Clara C. (Johnson), v. 5, p. 65

David, v. 5, p. 64

Joseph E., v. 5, p. 65

Mabel C. (Peterson), v. 5, p. 65

Mary Louise, v. 5, p. 65

O'Malley

Burke, v. 5, p. 66

Jeanne, v. 6, p. 66

Richard K., v. 5, p. 66

Sidney, v. 5, p. 66

Oppenheimer

Frank, v. 5, pp. 67-68

J. Robert, v. 5, p. 67

Jackie, v. 5, p. 67

Judith, v. 5, p. 67

Michael, v. 5, p. 67

Orahood

Albert, v. 5, p. 70

Ann Messenger, v. 5, p. 69

George, v. 5, p. 70

Gertrude, v. 5, p. 70

Harper, v. 5, p. 70

Harper M. (Colonel), v. 5, pp. 69-70

Mary Esther (Hurlbut), v. 5, p. 70

William F., v. 5, p. 70

William J., v. 5, p. 69

Osborn

W. B., v. 4, pp. 367-368

Ostwald

Olga, v. 3, pp. 21-22

Otto

Christian, v. 5, pp. 71, 72, 73

John S., v. 5, pp. 71, 72, 73

Lenora, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 71, 72, 73

Ouray (Chief), v. 2, p. 25; v. 4, pp. 248, 294-295

Overholt

Charles H., v. 5, p. 74

Lewis C., v. 5, pp. 74-75

Lewis C. Jr., (Dr.), v. 5, p. 74

Owen

James, v. 5, pp. 76-77

James (Rev.), v. 5, pp. 76, 77

James Churchill, v. 5, p. 77

Margaret, v. 5, p. 77

Marie (Weber), v. 5, p. 78

Martha (Andrews), v. 5, p. 76

R. Bryan, v. 5, p. 78

William Myron, v. 5, p. 77

William R. (Dr.), v. 5, p. 76

Winifred (Churchill), v. 5, p. 77

Owens

Everett, v. 5, p. 79

John C., v. 5, p. 79

Margaret, v. 5, p. 79

- P -

Pace

Arthur E., v. 5, p. 80

Charles, Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 80

Hartzell, v. 5, p. 80

Marguerite, v. 5, p. 80

Rose, v. 5, p. 80

Paepcke

Walter, v. 3, pp. 187-189

Palmer

Eva (Chrisinger), v. 5, p. 81

Everett B., v. 5, p. 81

Ezekiel H., v. 5, p. 81

Gertrude (Winne), v. 5, p. 81

Robert S., v. 5, p. 81

Sarah Maria (Mitchell), v. 5, p. 81

Virginia Roberta, v. 5, p. 81

William Jackson (Gen.), v. 5, pp. 82, 83

Pankey

Family, v. 5, p. 84

L. C., Mrs., v. 5, p. 84

Park

Adelia Keyes, v. 5, p. 85

Agnes Adelia Devinny

Mosser, v. 5, p. 85

Robert O., v. 5, p. 85

Robert O., Mrs., v. 5, p. 85

Valentine Devinny, v. 5, p. 85

Parker

Charles A., v. 5, p. 86

Edith (Smith), v. 5, p. 86

Lola (Huey), v. 5, p. 86

Parks

George, v. 5, p. 87

James, v. 1, p. 31; v. 5, pp. 87-89

Mary (Moore), v. 1, p. 31

Parmenter

Catherine, v. 5, p. 90

Charles Otis, v. 5, p. 90

Christine Whiting, v. 5, p. 90

Kenneth R., v. 5, p. 90

L. Margaret (Jones), v. 5, p. 90

Parriott

Family, v. 5, p. 91

W. P., Mrs., v. 5, p. 91

Parshall

McDonald, v. 6, p. 366

Vera, v. 6, p. 366

Parslow

Luke A., v. 5, pp. 92-93

Parvin

Edward B., v. 5, p. 94

Elizabeth (Birdsall), v. 5, p. 94

Harriett (Dexter), v. 5, p. 94

James D., v. 5, p. 94

Margaret T. (Greenfield), v. 5, p. 94

Roland G., v. 5, p. 94

Patterson

Albert, v. 5, p. 95

Bruce, v. 5, p. 95

Clara, v. 5, p. 95

Dorothy, v. 5, p. 95

Eph, v. 5, p. 95

Frances Eleanor (Tidmarsh), v. 5, p. 95

George, v. 5, p. 95

Herbert, v. 5, p. 95

Jacob Horatio, v. 5, p. 95

James, v. 2, p. 3

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Patterson (cont.)

John, v. 5, p. 96
 June, v. 5, p. 95
 Katharine (Grafton), v. 2, p. 4
 Laura, v. 5, p. 95
 Lena, v. 5, p. 95
 Margaret, v. 2, pp. 3, 102
 Newton, v. 5, p. 95
 Thomas M., v. 5, p. 97
 Thomas M. (Senator), v. 2,
 pp. 101-102
 Thomas MacDonald, v. 2,
 pp. 3-4
 William, v. 5, p. 95

Paulin

Elliott, v. 5, pp. 98-99
 L. R. E., v. 5, p. 98
 Louis Eugene, v. 5, p. 98

Payne

Edward, v. 5, p. 135

Peabody

Cora May, v. 5, p. 266
 Frances (Clelland), v. 5, p. 266
 James H., v. 5, p. 266

Pearce

Clara, v. 5, p. 101
 Emily Baker, v. 1, p. 2
 Emily Jane (Baker), v. 1, p. 2
 George Delavan, v. 1, p. 2
 Grace, v. 5, p. 101
 J. C., v. 5, pp. 100-101
 Lottie, v. 5, p. 101
 Mary Frances (Scott), v. 5,
 pp. 100-101
 Nellie, v. 5, p. 101
 Sarah (Hodges), v. 5, p. 101

Pearl

Richard M., Mrs., v. 6, p. 345

Pearson

Charles, v. 5, p. 102
 Gus, v. 5, p. 106
 Gustaf, v. 5, p. 104
 Homer L., v. 5, p. 103
 John, v. 5, p. 102
 Joseph Jr., v. 5, p. 103
 Joseph Sr., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5,
 p. 103
 Marie W., Mrs., v. 5, pp. 104,
 105, 106

Pedigo

John, v. 5, p. 107
 Rose, Mrs., v. 5, p. 107

Peek

Violet G., Mrs., v. 6, p. 320

Peeler

_____ (Tinnin), v. 6, p. 404

Elizabeth A., v. 6, p. 404

William, v. 6, p. 404

Peery

Amelia, v. 5, p. 14
 Thomas E., v. 5, p. 14

Pegues

Anna Eliza (Cosnaham), v. 5,
 p. 270
 Christopher, v. 5, p. 270
 Claudius, v. 5, p. 270
 Claudius Sr., v. 5, p. 270
 Marcie (Murphy), v. 5, p. 270
 Mary R., v. 5, p. 270

Pendery

J. L. (Judge), v. 5, p. 108

Pendleton

Eugene, v. 3, p. 74
 Loretta E., v. 3, p. 74

Perkins

Albert, v. 5, p. 109
 Alta, v. 5, p. 109
 Carson, v. 5, p. 109
 Cora, v. 5, p. 109
 George, v. 5, p. 109
 Isaac Hardin, v. 5, p. 109
 Jessie, v. 5, p. 109
 John, v. 5, p. 109
 Joseph D., v. 5, p. 109
 Leo Warner, v. 5, p. 109
 Nancy Elizabeth (Horn), v. 5,
 p. 109
 Otto, v. 5, p. 109
 Roxie, v. 5, p. 109
 Vivian, v. 5, p. 109
 Warner, v. 5, p. 109

Perrin

Lewis K., v. 5, pp. 110-111

Perry

E. W., v. 5, p. 112
 Family, v. 5, p. 112
 G. N., v. 5, p. 113
 Louise Drake, v. 5, p. 113
 Mary Alice (Seaburg), Mrs.,
 v. 6, p. 51
 Ralph Drake, v. 5, p. 113
 Tyline Nanny, v. 5, p. 113
 William, v. 6, p. 51

Pershing

Alice Reymer, v. 5, p. 115
 Cyrus L., v. 5, p. 114
 Elizabeth (Hammond), v. 5,
 p. 115
 James Hammond, v. 5, p. 115
 John, v. 5, p. 115
 Martha Kimball (Reymer),
 v. 5, p. 115

Mary Letitia (Royer), v. 5,
 p. 114

Peshkin

Murray (Dr.), v. 4, pp. 152-
 153

Peters

Robert R., v. 5, p. 116
 Robert R., Mrs., v. 5, p. 116

Peterson

Alice Olivia (Lundvall), v. 5,
 p. 118
 Daniel, v. 6, p. 323
 Daniel C., v. 6, p. 323
 Grace Evelyn, v. 5, p. 118
 Gustaf, v. 5, p. 118
 Hulda Rosalia (Lundvall),
 v. 5, p. 118
 Johanna (Peterson), v. 5,
 p. 118
 Lou Ann, v. 5, p. 117
 Maggie, v. 6, p. 323
 Orval, v. 5, p. 117
 Rebecca, v. 6, p. 323
 Swen, v. 5, p. 117
 Thor N., v. 5, p. 117
 Walter Andrew, v. 5, p. 118
 Wesley Adelbert, v. 5, p. 118

Pett

Ellen N., v. 6, p. 480
 John, v. 6, p. 480
 Mary Ann, v. 6, p. 480

Pferdesteller

Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 323
 Frederick L., v. 6, p. 323
 Jean, v. 6, p. 323

Phillips

Daniel Edward (Dr.), v. 5,
 p. 119
 Diantha (Stilson), v. 5, p. 120
 Edward, v. 5, p. 120
 Edward Rudolph, v. 5, p. 119
 Estella, v. 5, p. 122
 Family, v. 5, p. 122
 Helen M. (Bissell), v. 5, p. 121
 Isaac Newton, v. 5, p. 119
 Martha (Croley), v. 5, p. 119
 Mary Lydia (Davis), v. 5,
 p. 119
 Orie Leon, v. 5, p. 120
 Ruth Jean, v. 5, p. 119
 Susan (Thompson), v. 5,
 p. 120
 Thomas Garrett, v. 5, p. 120
 William J. (Minnie), Mrs.,
 v. 2, pp. 64-65

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Phipps

Agnes (McCall), v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 Albert John, v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 Edward, v. 5, p. 124
 Elizabeth Johnson, v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 Frances Smith, v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 Francis, v. 5, p. 124
 Franciscus, v. 5, p. 124
 Genevieve (Chandler), v. 1, pp. 244-245; v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 Helen, v. 1, p. 244
 Henry, v. 5, p. 125
 Ibrealla Hill Loomis, v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 James, v. 5, p. 124
 Johannes, v. 5, p. 124
 Lawrence Cowle, v. 1, pp. 244-245; v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 Margaret Rogers, v. 5, pp. 123, 125
 Richard, v. 5, p. 124
 Samuel, v. 5, p. 125
 Thomas, v. 5, p. 124
 William Henry, v. 5, pp. 123, 125

Pierre

Jessie, Mrs., v. 5, p. 126

Pike

Alberta, v. 5, p. 127
 Clarissa, v. 5, p. 128
 Esta, v. 5, p. 127
 Genevieve, v. 5, p. 127
 James, v. 5, p. 128
 John, v. 5, p. 128
 Molly, Mrs., v. 5, p. 127
 Otis Albert, v. 5, p. 127
 Z. M. (Monty), v. 5, p. 128
 Zebulon Montgomery, v. 5, p. 128

Pippin

"Grandma Rose," v. 5, p. 129
 Nelson A., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 129
 "Pip," v. 5, p. 129
 Roy Andrew, v. 5, p. 129

Pitkin

Amy (Moore), v. 5, p. 130
 Fidelia James, v. 5, p. 130
 Frederick W., v. 5, p. 130
 Julia, v. 5, p. 130
 Marion, v. 5, p. 130

Robert James, v. 5, p. 130

Platt

Anna (Conner), v. 5, p. 131
 Frank, v. 5, p. 131
 John, v. 5, p. 131
 Laura, v. 5, p. 131
 Lena (Dale), v. 5, p. 131
 Louis, v. 5, p. 131
 Mary (Smith), v. 5, p. 131
 May (DeGuelle), v. 5, p. 131
 Nicholas, v. 5, p. 131

Playter

Ben, v. 4, p. 175
 Eva (McBroom), Mrs., v. 4, p. 175

Pletcher

Edward, v. 5, p. 132
 Edwin, v. 5, p. 132
 Harry, v. 5, p. 132
 Josephine (Hulse), v. 5, p. 132
 T. Pearl (Johnson), v. 5, p. 132

Poker Alice, v. 5, pp. 133-134

Pollock

Mary E., v. 6, p. 204
 Mary Ellen, v. 6, p. 205
 William Perry, v. 6, pp. 205-206

Pomeroy

Charity E., v. 6, p. 186
 Grace P., v. 6, p. 186
 James H., v. 6, p. 186

Pool

John, v. 2, p. 145

Pope

Edmund Pendleton, v. 5, p. 136
 Eleanor, v. 5, p. 136
 J. Worden, (Brig. General), v. 5, pp. 135, 136-137
 James Worden, v. 5, pp. 136-137
 Mary E. (Lynch), v. 5, p. 136
 Nancy (Johnson), v. 5, p. 136

Porter

Dora, v. 5, pp. 139-140
 Henry M., v. 5, pp. 138-140
 John H., v. 5, pp. 139-140
 Laura (Smith), v. 5, pp. 138-140
 Laurine, v. 5, pp. 139-140
 Ruth, v. 5, pp. 139-140
 William E., v. 5, pp. 139-140

Post

Amalia Barney Nichols, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 141-142
 Morton, v. 5, p. 142

Potter

Ada, v. 4, p. 93
 Charles N., v. 4, p. 93
 Ethel J., v. 5, p. 143
 Hez W., v. 5, p. 143
 James W., v. 5, p. 143
 Louisa M. (Enyert), v. 5, p. 143
 Maggie N. (Smith), v. 5, p. 143

Pound

Addie, v. 5, p. 144
 Ephraim, v. 5, p. 144
 William, v. 5, p. 144

Pourtales

James (Count), v. 5, pp. 145-146

Powell

Cuthbert (Dr.), v. 5, p. 147
 Cuthbert Sr., v. 5, p. 147
 John Wesley (Major), v. 1, pp. 283-284
 Louisa Coles Miller, v. 5, p. 147
 Mary Walburn (Morrison), v. 5, p. 147

Powers

Abner B., v. 5, pp. 149-150

Prentiss

Louis W. (Major General), v. 6, p. 104

Preston

Laura E. (Jackson), v. 5, p. 150
 Mary Ann (Percy), v. 5, p. 150
 Orlando, v. 5, p. 150
 Percy Robert, v. 5, p. 150
 Robert, v. 5, p. 150

Price

James W., v. 5, pp. 151-152, 153
 Susanne, v. 1, pp. 266-267
 Thomas, v. 1, p. 266
 W. H. (Harry), v. 5, p. 153

Printup

David, v. 3, p. 262
 Dorothy, v. 3, p. 262
 Marian H. (Gamsby), v. 3, p. 262

Pritchett

Carr Waller, Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 154
 Henry S., v. 5, p. 154
 Lucille (Crawford), v. 5, p. 154

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Pritchette

Eva J., Mrs., v. 2, pp. 74, 75

Proctor

Abi, v. 5, p. 287
 Addie (Bennett), v. 5, p. 155
 Addie (Millison), v. 5, p. 155
 Alice E. (McCain), v. 5, p. 156
 Alma E. (Wheeler), v. 5,
     p. 157
 Harriet C., v. 5, p. 287
 James S., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5,
     p. 155
 James S. Jr., v. 5, p. 155
 Jessie (Wilson), Mrs., v. 5,
     p. 155
 Laura, Mrs., v. 5, p. 156
 W. C., v. 5, p. 155
 W. P. Chaffee, v. 5, p. 287
 William, v. 5, pp. 157-158
 William T., v. 5, p. 155

Provost

John Baptiste, v. 1, p. 135

Prowers

John W., v. 3, p. 255
 John Wesley, v. 2, p. 62

Pupke

Eberhard L., v. 5, p. 263
 Harriet, v. 5, p. 263
 Julia W., v. 5, p. 263

Putnam

Clarence Francis, v. 5, p. 159
 Edith, v. 5, p. 159
 Edith Sara, v. 5, p. 159
 George Bancroft, v. 5, p. 159
 Ida Robinson (Smith), v. 5,
     p. 159
 Mary, v. 5, p. 159

- Q -

Quaintance

Althea, v. 2, p. 156
 Jesse, v. 2, p. 156

Quentin

Carrie Elizabeth Post, v. 4,
     p. 360
 E. E., v. 4, p. 360
 Ida Hermina, v. 4, p. 360

Quiat

Anna (Shames), v. 5, p. 160
 Carole Jean, v. 5, p. 160
 Esther (Greenblatt), v. 5,
     p. 160
 Gerald, v. 5, p. 160
 Ira L., v. 5, p. 160
 Marshall, v. 5, p. 160

Philip, v. 5, p. 160

Quigg

James, v. 5, p. 21
 Julia, v. 5, p. 21
 Mary Rose, v. 5, p. 21

Quigley

George Newitt, v. 5, p. 161
 Geo. Newitt Jr., v. 5, p. 161
 Margaret Newitt, v. 5, p. 161
 Ruth Belser, v. 5, p. 161
 Thomas M., v. 5, p. 161

- R -

Rachossky

Abe, v. 6, p. 85

Raedel

Lee Wallace, v. 5, pp. 162-163
 Maude, v. 5, p. 162

Raftery

Edith S., Mrs., v. 5, pp. 164-
     165, 166, 167, 168, 169-
     170

Ragan

David, v. 5, p. 171
 David, Mrs., v. 5, p. 171

Raine

Claire Parmeley, Mrs., v. 5,
     pp. 174, 176, 177
 Eugene C., v. 5, p. 176
 Florence A., v. 5, pp. 173, 176
 Florence H., v. 5, p. 172
 Forrester, v. 5, p. 177
 Jennie P., v. 5, p. 176
 Jessie Watt, v. 5, p. 173
 Patricia, v. 5, pp. 173, 176
 Patty, v. 5, p. 172
 William, v. 5, p. 173
 William McLeod, v. 5, pp.
     172, 173, 174, 175-176,
     177- 178

Randolph

Florence, v. 2, p. 38
 Harvey, v. 2, p. 38

Raney

"Aunt Lee," v. 5, p. 179
 D. F., v. 5, p. 179
 L. M., Mrs., v. 5, pp. 179-180

Rath

Dorothea, Mrs., v. 5, p. 181

Rathbone

Benson, v. 5, p. 182
 Rose, v. 5, p. 182

Rathvon

Anne, v. 6, p. 258
 Emily McGraw, v. 6, p. 258

Samuel Forney, v. 6, p. 258

Ratliff

Amanda (Portlock), v. 5,
     p. 239
 John Wesley, v. 5, p. 239
 Lucy Ann, v. 5, p. 239

Redd

Ada, v. 5, p. 183
 Cornelia, v. 5, p. 183, 184
 Curtis, v. 5, p. 184
 George S., v. 5, p. 183
 George S., Mrs., v. 5, p. 184
 George Stidger, v. 5, p. 184
 Gertrude, v. 5, p. 183
 Julia A. (Stidger), v. 5, p. 183
 May (LaFleur) Chillson, v. 5,
     p. 183
 S. L., v. 5, p. 184
 Samuel, v. 5, p. 183
 Samuel B., v. 5, p. 183

Reddick

Adeline R. (Marron), v. 5,
     p. 185
 Bernice, v. 5, p. 185
 James Jr., v. 5, p. 185
 James P., v. 5, p. 185
 John, v. 5, p. 185
 Mary, v. 5, p. 185
 Ray, v. 5, p. 185

Red Fox

William (Chief), v. 5, p. 186

Rediess

Darline, v. 5, p. 187
 Fred W. Jr., v. 5, p. 187
 Frederick W., v. 5, p. 187
 Jimmy, v. 5, p. 187
 Kenneth, v. 5, p. 187
 Lawrence, v. 5, p. 187
 Mary Lou, v. 5, p. 187
 Rose Mary, v. 5, p. 187
 Virginia, v. 5, p. 187

Reed

Albert Augustus, v. 5, p. 188
 Baldwin, v. 5, p. 188
 Charles Jr., v. 5, p. 189
 Charles Lowry, Mr. and Mrs.,
     v. 5, p. 189
 Charlotte Baldwin, v. 5, p. 188
 Elias Baldwin, v. 5, p. 188
 Esther Candee, v. 5, p. 188
 Eve Cathrene, v. 2, p. 218
 Fanny (Raymond), v. 5, p. 188
 Frances DuBois, v. 5, p. 188
 John, v. 2, p. 218
 Lydia (Howell), v. 5, p. 188
 Margaret Howell, v. 5, p. 188

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Reed (cont.)

Miranda (Candee), v. 5, p. 188
 Nellie, Mrs., v. 3, p. 277
 Roland, v. 5, p. 189
 Roy, v. 5, pp. 190, 191
 Walter K. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 221
 Walter W. (Dr.), v. 1, p. 221

Reeves

Bert, Mr. and Mrs., v. 5,
 pp. 192-193
 Biddle, v. 6, p. 284
 Lulu, v. 5, pp. 192-193
 Maria V., v. 6, p. 284
 Sara R., v. 6, p. 284

Reichenbach

Meta (Witting), v. 6, p. 426
 Theodore, v. 6, p. 426

Reid

Catherine (Russell), v. 5,
 pp. 194, 196
 Charles Philip, v. 6, p. 414
 Cleta, Mrs., v. 6, p. 414
 Fred, v. 4, p. 70
 Frederick Hormah, v. 5,
 pp. 194-195, 196
 George, v. 5, pp. 194, 196
 Lelia Mae (Kindig), v. 5,
 pp. 194, 196
 Leonard Russell, v. 5, pp. 195,
 196
 Margaret Ruth, v. 5, pp. 194,
 196
 Roderick Hormah, v. 5, pp.
 195, 196
 Ruth, v. 4, p. 70

Reithmann

Emil, v. 5, p. 198
 Fred G., v. 5, pp. 197-199
 John, v. 5, p. 198
 Louis, v. 5, p. 198
 Victoria, v. 5, p. 197

Remington

Paul Ellsworth, v. 5, pp. 200-
 201
 Sadie Ethel (McNeil), v. 5,
 p. 201
 Sarah Lucinda (Porter), v. 5,
 p. 200
 Walter Wood, v. 5, p. 200

Renaud

A. Etienne Bernardeau, v. 5,
 pp. 202-203
 E. E. DeCora, v. 5, p. 202

Reybold

Genevieve (Carter), v. 2, p. 20

Reymer

Harmer Denney, v. 5, p. 115
 Harriet Kimball, v. 5, p. 115
 Martha Kimball, v. 5, p. 115

Reynolds

Albert E., v. 4, p. 394
 Anna, v. 4, p. 394
 Naomi, v. 5, p. 204
 W. D. (Doc), v. 5, p. 204
 William D. (Dr.), v. 5, pp.
 204- 205

Rhoads

Addie (Mellon), v. 3, p. 15
 Bert Lee, v. 3, p. 15
 Harry, v. 5, p. 157
 Harry Fisher, v. 3, p. 15
 Harry M., v. 5, p. 91
 Harry Mellon, v. 3, pp. 15,
 304
 Hazel LaDora, v. 3, p. 15

Rhodes

Mary Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 129
 William, v. 3, p. 129

Rice

E. J. Jr., v. 5, p. 208
 E. J., Mrs., v. 5, p. 209
 Elial Jay, v. 5, pp. 206-209
 Ernest, v. 5, pp. 219-220
 Frank H., v. 5, pp. 210-215,
 216, 217-218
 Jeannette, v. 5, p. 209
 Louise Hager, v. 5, pp. 219-
 220
 Magdalena (Fish), v. 5, p. 220
 Sylvia, v. 5, p. 209

Richards

D. M., v. 5, p. 221

Richardson

Dora, Mrs., v. 6, p. 342

Richert

Catherine, v. 3, p. 133
 Eileen M., v. 3, p. 133
 Paul, v. 3, p. 133

Rickel

Dora S., Mrs., v. 5, p. 222
 Frank H., v. 5, p. 222

Ricketson

Frank H. Jr., v. 5, pp. 223-224, 225
 Frank H. III, v. 5, pp. 224, 225
 Frank H. IV, v. 5, p. 224
 Kathleen, v. 5, p. 224
 Maizie Donnegan, Mrs., v. 5,
 pp. 223-224, 225
 Mary Ellen, v. 5, p. 224
 Roseanne, v. 5, p. 224

Ricks

Charles, v. 5, p. 226
 John H., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5,
 p. 226
 John H. Sr., v. 5, p. 226

Rider

Abigail (Orne), v. 6, p. 278
 Ellen Augusta, v. 6, p. 278
 Gartrell Bruce, v. 6, p. 294
 George Palmer, v. 6, p. 294
 Hannah, v. 4, p. 237
 Joseph, v. 6, p. 278
 Laurence, v. 4, p. 237
 Mary, v. 4, p. 237
 Virginia, v. 6, p. 294

Rigden

Charles, v. 5, p. 227
 Helen (White), v. 5, p. 227
 John R., v. 5, p. 227
 John R., Mrs., v. 5, pp. 227-
 228

Rigg

Alma, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 229-230,
 231, 232-233
 Clara (Cram), v. 5, p. 232
 Gertrude, v. 5, p. 231
 H. N., v. 5, p. 233
 Harrison, v. 5, p. 231
 Leland, v. 5, p. 232
 Luella (Munro), v. 5, p. 233
 S. R., v. 5, p. 232
 Samuel, v. 5, p. 231
 Virginia, v. 5, pp. 230, 231, 233
 William N., v. 5, p. 233

Ring

Lydia Maria, v. 6, p. 115

Rische

August, v. 3, p. 151

Risley

Delia, v. 5, p. 234
 Elijah Jr. (General), v. 5,
 p. 234
 Elijah Sr., v. 5, p. 234
 Elizabeth (Rogers), v. 5,
 p. 236
 Florilla, v. 5, p. 234
 Hanson A., v. 5, pp. 234-235, 236
 Harriet (Crosby), v. 5, p. 234
 Laurens G., v. 5, p. 234
 Minerva, v. 5, p. 234
 Sophronia, v. 5, p. 234

Rittenhouse

Delia (Willis), v. 5, p. 237, 238

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Rittenhouse (cont.)

Edwin Theodore, v. 5, p. 237, 238

Ritter

Albert A., Mrs., v. 5, p. 239
Albert Adam, v. 5, p. 239
Carl A., v. 5, p. 239
Catherine (Lauter), v. 5, p. 239
John, v. 5, p. 239
John A., v. 5, p. 239
Lucy Ann, v. 5, pp. 239-243

Roberts

Elva, Mrs., v. 5, p. 247
Esther A. (Lancefield), v. 5,
p. 246
Harold D., v. 5, pp. 244-246
Harold DeWitt, v. 5, p. 245
Harry, v. 5, p. 247
Jane N. (Knight), v. 5, p. 246
Jennie, v. 6, p. 361
Neil F., v. 5, p. 246
Ray, v. 5, p. 247
Rebecca Jane, v. 6, p. 360
Rhoda, v. 5, p. 244
Rhoda Norton (Haynes), v. 5,
p. 245
Richard, v. 5, p. 247
Rita, v. 5, p. 247
Roger, v. 5, p. 247
Rollie, v. 5, p. 247
Ronald, v. 5, p. 247

Robertson

Alice G., v. 5, p. 248
John, v. 5, p. 248
Margaret Clyde, v. 5, pp. 248-
249
William Earl, v. 5, p. 248

Robinson

Charles, v. 5, p. 255
Eunice (Elsie), v. 5, pp. 250-
251
George, v. 2, p. 294
John, v. 2, p. 294
Mary Byers, v. 5, pp. 252-254
Matilda M. (Cogdon), v. 5,
p. 255
Milt, v. 2, p. 293
William F., v. 5, p. 253
William Proudfit, v. 5, p. 255

Roche

Elizabeth (Monahan), v. 5,
p. 256
Ella (Aspinwall), v. 5, p. 257
John J., v. 5, pp. 256-258
Josephine, v. 5, p. 257

Rock

Eugene, v. 5, p. 261
George III, v. 5, p. 261
George F., v. 5, pp. 259-262
Linda Mae, v. 5, p. 261
Marie (Duddy), v. 5, p. 260

Roeder

Adolph, v. 5, p. 263
Arthur, v. 5, p. 263
Harriet, v. 5, p. 263
Harriet A., v. 5, p. 263
Marie, v. 5, p. 263

Roerig

Ann, v. 6, p. 180
Blanche, v. 6, p. 180
Henry, v. 6, p. 180

Rogers

Addison Alvin, v. 3, p. 327
Alice Adelaide, v. 3, p. 327
Anna Mahalu, v. 3, p. 327
Cora May (Peabody), v. 5,
p. 266
Edmund Burrell, v. 5, p. 264
Edmund J. A. (Dr.), v. 5,
p. 268
Edward James Armstrong,
v. 5, pp. 264-265
Eliza M., v. 3, p. 325
Flora A., v. 3, p. 327
Frances Maria, v. 5, p. 264
Gladys Ione, v. 5, p. 271
Hamilton, v. 5, p. 268
Hannah Fellows, v. 3, p. 325
James C., v. 5, p. 264
James Grafton, v. 5, pp. 264,
266, 267-269
John D., v. 5, pp. 270-271
Laura A. (Winston), v. 5,
p. 270
Lela (Patton), v. 5, p. 270
Lorna, v. 5, pp. 266-268
Louis G., v. 3, p. 327
Louis Gilbert, v. 3, p. 325
Lucille, v. 5, p. 271
Maria (Burnham), v. 5, p. 264
Maria Georgina Dare Burrell,
v. 5, pp. 264, 266
Marie B. (Pringle), v. 5, p. 270
Marie Camille, v. 5, p. 271
Mary Emma, v. 3, p. 327
Mary Susana, v. 5, p. 264
Ranger, v. 5, pp. 266, 268
Ruth Georgina, v. 5, p. 264
Thomas H. M., v. 5, p. 270
Walter J., v. 5, p. 271
Walter L., v. 3, p. 325

Rohrbach

Mary, v. 5, pp. 272-273

Roller

Douglas Arnold, v. 5, p. 274
Eliza (Seafly), v. 5, p. 274
John P., v. 5, p. 274
Mary E., v. 5, p. 274
Nellie H. (Arnold), v. 5, p. 274
Nellie Harris, v. 5, p. 274
Rose Wiley (Sill), v. 5, p. 274
William W., v. 5, p. 274
Winfield Irving, v. 5, p. 274

Rollins

Emma Chapin Clark, v. 5,
p. 278
James, v. 5, p. 275
John A., v. 5, p. 275
John Quincy Adams, v. 5,
pp. 275-280
Louisa (Burnett), v. 5, p. 276
Marie, Mrs., v. 6, p. 310

Romig

Albert Stanley, v. 5, p. 281
Cecilia (Bigler), v. 5, p. 281
Edna Davis, Mrs., v. 5, p. 281
William Davis, v. 5, p. 281
William H., Rev., v. 5, p. 281

Rood

Hugh, v. 6, p. 184
Lena Allen Webster Steiber,
v. 6, pp. 183-185

Rose

Charles Randolph, v. 5, p. 282
Elizabeth (Camfield), v. 5,
p. 282
Helen Marie, v. 5, p. 282
Jennie Mae, v. 5, p. 282
John Gansevort, v. 5, pp. 282-
283
Marie Katherine (Venemann),
v. 5, p. 282
Richard Warren, v. 5, p. 282
William, v. 5, p. 282

Rosen

John Peter, v. 5, pp. 284-285
Peter, v. 5, p. 284

Rosenkranz

Charles, v. 5, p. 286

Ross

Diana, v. 4, p. 241
Ezra Job, v. 4, p. 241
Frederick R., v. 5, p. 287
Grace, Mrs., v. 5, p. 288
Hannah Ann, v. 4, p. 237
Hannah Linkhorn, v. 4, p. 237
Harriet C., v. 5, p. 287

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Ross (cont.)

Henry, v. 5, p. 287
 Isaac, v. 4, p. 240
 Jehu, v. 4, p. 240
 John, v. 4, p. 240; v. 5, p. 288
 John C., v. 5, p. 287
 Nancy, v. 4, p. 240
 Robert, v. 4, p. 237
 Rumina (Daggitt), v. 5, p. 287
 Warwick, v. 4, p. 240

Rothrock

Agnes Dell, v. 5, p. 291
 Eliza Buford, v. 5, pp. 289-291
 John E., v. 5, p. 290
 John R., v. 5, pp. 289-291
 William, v. 5, pp. 289-291

Rowland

Anne E., Mrs., v. 5, p. 292
 Henry C., v. 5, p. 292

Rowley

Dolores, Mrs., v. 4, p. 215

Rudy

Anna, Mrs., v. 5, p. 293
 M. M., v. 5, p. 293

Russell

Angeletta (Craighill), v. 3, p. 132
 Charles, v. 2, p. 19
 Elizabeth E., v. 3, p. 132
 Elizabeth Margaret, v. 3, p. 132
 Esther (Smith), v. 5, p. 295
 Hannah (Adams), v. 2, p. 19
 Hellen, v. 5, p. 295
 Hellen I. (Seerie), v. 5, p. 295
 J. N. Jr., v. 3, p. 132
 James, v. 3, p. 132
 Joseph Oliver, v. 6, p. 131
 Levi J. (Dr.), v. 6, p. 131
 Levi Jasper (Dr.), v. 5, p. 294
 Margaret (Adams), v. 2, p. 19
 Robert, v. 5, p. 295
 Sarah (Phillips), v. 2, p. 19
 Sarah Amanda, v. 2, p. 19
 Thomas, v. 2, p. 19; v. 3, p. 132
 Walter, v. 2, p. 19
 William Edmonston, v. 5, p. 295
 William Greeneberry (Green), v. 6, p. 131

Rutledge

Carrie, v. 5, p. 296
 Dick (Col.), v. 5, p. 296

Ryan

Anna, v. 5, p. 297
 Harriet Samantha (Epperson), v. 5, p. 297
 James, v. 5, p. 298
 John Barry, v. 5, p. 53
 Johnny, v. 5, p. 298
 Michael, v. 5, pp. 297-298
 Nellie, v. 5, p. 297
 Nellie (Dermody), v. 5, p. 297
 Patrick, v. 5, p. 297
 Thomas Fortune, v. 5, p. 53
 Thomas Henry, v. 5, p. 297
 Virginia Fortune, v. 5, p. 53

- S -

Sabin

Dorothy Worthington, Mrs., v. 6, p. 467
 Elisha Stearns, v. 6, p. 1
 Florence R., v. 6, p. 1
 George Kimball, v. 6, p. 1
 Lena (Miner), v. 6, p. 1
 Mary S., v. 6, p. 1
 Rena (Dr.), v. 2, p. 54
 Sophia Hall, v. 6, p. 1

St. Vrain

Ceran, v. 6, p. 2
 H. S., v. 6, p. 2

Sales

Henry M., Mrs., v. 2, p. 63

Sampson

Edith, v. 6, p. 3
 Elizabeth (May), v. 6, p. 3
 Gertrude (Cromwell), v. 6, p. 3
 Joseph, v. 6, p. 3
 Joseph Cromwell, v. 6, p. 3
 William, v. 6, p. 3

Sanborn

Frederick W., v. 6, p. 4
 Caroline C. (Goodale), v. 6, p. 4
 Cynthia (Bower), v. 6, p. 4
 Frederick W. Jr., v. 6, p. 4
 Louise, v. 6, p. 4
 Marjorie, v. 6, p. 4
 Nancy, v. 6, p. 4
 Patricia, v. 6, p. 4
 Pliny (Rev.), v. 6, p. 4
 Richard, v. 6, p. 4
 William D., v. 6, p. 4
 Wm. D., Mrs., v. 6, p. 4

Sargent

Belinda C. (McKillip), v. 4, p. 108
 Eloise L., v. 4, pp. 108-110
 Irene (Sweet), v. 4, p. 108
 John, v. 4, p. 108
 Wm. Sylvester, v. 4, p. 108

Sasson

Joseph, v. 6, pp. 5, 6

Saunders

Albert, v. 6, p. 7
 George Everett, v. 6, p. 7
 George W., v. 6, p. 7
 Lawrence, v. 6, p. 7
 Lee, v. 6, p. 7
 Lelia Platt (Spaulding), v. 6, p. 7
 Norma, v. 6, p. 7
 Opal (Mallory), v. 6, p. 7
 Parmilia, v. 6, p. 7
 Ruth, v. 6, p. 7
 William C., v. 6, p. 7

Savage

Ellen, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 8-9
 Lydia (Smith), v. 2, p. 4
 Miriam, v. 2, p. 4
 Thomas F., v. 2, p. 4

Sayre

Elizabeth, Mrs., v. 6, p. 20
 Elizabeth (Berger), v. 6, p. 19
 Elizabeth (Dart), v. 6, p. 18
 Ethel, v. 6, pp. 19, 20
 Hal, v. 6, pp. 10-11, 12-17, 18-20
 Hal, Mrs., v. 6, p. 13
 Hal Jr., v. 6, pp. 14, 19
 Robert, v. 6, pp. 11, 14
 Robert H., v. 6, pp. 19, 20

Scarlett

Lah, Mrs., v. 6, p. 299
 William, Bishop, v. 6, p. 299

Schaefer

Joe, Mrs., v. 1, pp. 186, 188
 Virginia C., Mrs., v. 1, pp. 184, 185, 187, 190

Schenck

Anetje, v. 6, p. 22
 Charles Meigs, v. 6, pp. 21-25
 Gerrit, v. 6, p. 23
 Gertrude, v. 6, p. 21
 Harriet, v. 6, p. 21
 Julia, v. 6, p. 21
 Julia Bliss, v. 6, p. 21
 Martin, v. 6, p. 21
 Martin (Sir), v. 6, p. 22
 Martin Pieterse, v. 6, p. 22

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Schenck (cont.)

Mary Elizabeth (Stone), v. 6,
p. 21
Paul Albert, v. 6, p. 21
Roelof, v. 6, pp. 22-23
Washington Lafayette, v. 6,
pp. 21, 25
William (Rev.), v. 6, p. 23

Schermerhorn

Fred (Dr.), v. 6, p. 26
Janette, Mrs., v. 6, p. 26

Scherrer

Jacob, v. 6, p. 27
Jacob G., v. 6, p. 27
William, v. 6, p. 27

Schinner

Adolph, v. 6, p. 337

Schlitter

Alice Margaret, v. 3, p. 298
Charles, v. 3, p. 298
Histine, v. 3, p. 298

Schlitter

Anna (Bardy), Mrs., v. 6, p. 28
Henry J., v. 6, p. 28
Louise (McBreen), Mrs., v. 6,
p. 28
Martha (Durr), Mrs., v. 6,
p. 28

Schneider

Alex, Mrs., v. 6, p. 319

Schomburg

August (Gen.), v. 6, p. 29
Sam, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 29

Schones

Alva, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Bill, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Claude, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Earle, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Ed, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Fred, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
pp. 30, 31
Gene, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Glen, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Joe, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Maude, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Vera, v. 6, pp. 30, 31
Verna, v. 6, pp. 30, 31

Schroter

Minnie M. (Warren), Mrs.,
v. 6, pp. 32-34
Sidney, v. 6, p. 32

Schulte

E. A., v. 5, p. 105
Edward R., Mrs., v. 5, p. 104

Schutte

Anna (Rempe), v. 6, p. 36

Frank, v. 6, p. 36
Herman, v. 6, p. 35
Joe, v. 6, pp. 35-36
Johanna (Sugroue), v. 6,
p. 36
Kate (Rempe), v. 6, p. 36
Louise (Trant), v. 6, p. 36
Lucille (Spalding), v. 6, p. 36
Mary (Kohmetscher), v. 6,
p. 36
Mary, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 35-36
Minnie (Kimminau), v. 6,
p. 36

Schwartz

David, v. 6, pp. 37-38, 39
Esther, v. 6, pp. 38, 39
Etta, v. 6, pp. 38, 39
Evelyn (Meer), v. 6, p. 39
Irving, v. 6, pp. 38, 39
Jennie, v. 6, pp. 37, 38
Rebecca, v. 6, p. 37
Sarah, Mrs., v. 6, p. 39

Schwartzwalder

Fred, v. 6, pp. 40-41, 42-43
Mrs., v. 6, pp. 41, 42-43

Seiple

Harold F., v. 6, p. 44

Scoon

Elizabeth, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 45,
46, 47, 48
Frank, v. 6, pp. 45, 46, 47, 48

Scripps

E. W., v. 6, p. 49
Edward Wyllis, v. 6, p. 49
Ellen Browning, v. 6, pp. 49-
50
James, v. 6, p. 49

Seaburg

Bernice, v. 6, p. 51
Gerald, v. 6, p. 51
Harold, v. 6, p. 51
LaVerne, v. 6, p. 51
Mary Alice (Perry), v. 6, p. 51

Seaman

Alice B. (Shallenberger), v. 6,
p. 52
Henrietta H. (Simmons), v. 6,
p. 52
John R., v. 6, pp. 52, 53-54, 55
John W., v. 6, p. 52
Lorraine, v. 6, p. 52
Wayne R., v. 6, pp. 52-55

Secrest

Elizabeth (Ault), v. 6, p. 56
Thompson Ellsworth, v. 6,
p. 56

Thompson Raymond, v. 6,
p. 56

Seemann

Henry, v. 6, p. 57
Henry I. (Capt.), v. 6, p. 57
Katherine R., v. 6, p. 57
Wanda Marie, v. 6, p. 57
Wilhelmina, v. 6, p. 57

Seerie

Edward, v. 5, p. 295
Hellen I., v. 5, p. 295
Margaret (Duff), v. 5, p. 295

Segal

Blanding (Sister), v. 6, pp. 88-
89, 90

Seibert

Ida E. (Brush), Mrs., v. 6,
pp. 58-59
J. A., v. 6, p. 58

Sewall

Henry (Dr.), v. 2, p. 56; v. 6,
pp. 60-61
Isabel Josephine (Vickers),
v. 6, p. 60
Julia Elizabeth (Waters), v. 6,
p. 60
Thomas (Rev.), v. 6, p. 60

Sexton

James Seymour, v. 3, p. 236
Jamie, v. 3, p. 236
Lillian Wise, v. 3, p. 236

Seymour

Bennett E., v. 6, p. 62
Edward, v. 6, p. 62
Richard, v. 6, p. 62

Shaffer

Grace, Mrs., v. 6, p. 342

Shames

Anna, v. 5, p. 160
Ira L., v. 5, p. 160

Sharp

Gertrude, v. 6, p. 64
P. F., v. 6, pp. 63-64

Shaw

Earle Lionel, v. 6, pp. 65-66
Frank Herbert, v. 6, pp. 65-66
Stella Frances (Critchett), v. 6,
pp. 65-66

Shawcroft

Bountiful, v. 5, p. 117
Ted, v. 5, p. 117

Shawsheen, v. 2, p. 62

Shay

Wilford T., v. 6, pp. 67-68

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Shell

Caroline, v. 6, p. 355
Samuel, v. 6, p. 355

Shepherd

Ann, v. 6, p. 73
Bill, v. 6, p. 73
E. J., v. 6, p. 71
Enoch J., v. 6, pp. 71-72, 73
Sam, v. 6, p. 72
Sarah Jane (Topliss), v. 6,
pp. 71, 73
William, v. 6, p. 71

Shepperd

B. A., v. 6, p. 74
Hampton H. (Col.), v. 6,
pp. 167-168
Mary Louise (Dunnica), v. 6,
p. 167
Orian, v. 6, p. 167
Parker D., v. 6, p. 74

Sherwood

John H., v. 2, pp. 9-12

Sherman

Louisa A. (Dickinson), v. 6,
pp. 75, 76
Martha Elam (Coleman), v. 6,
pp. 75, 76
Nancy Louise, v. 6, pp. 75, 76
Penoyer L., v. 6, pp. 75, 76
Samuel S. Jr., v. 6, pp. 75, 76
Samuel Stevens, v. 6, pp. 75, 76

Shibko

Amelia, Mrs., v. 6, p. 77
Joseph, v. 6, p. 77
Julius, v. 6, p. 77

Shields

Craig, v. 6, p. 364
Ellen, v. 6, p. 364
Frank, v. 6, p. 364
Hiram, v. 6, p. 362
Joseph, v. 6, p. 362
Lewis, v. 6, p. 364
Martha (Veatch), v. 6, p. 362
Mary (Jamieson), v. 6, p. 362
Mary Elizabeth, v. 6, pp. 362-
364
Ursula, v. 6, p. 364

Shoup

Dorothy (Chambers), v. 6,
p. 79
Mary, v. 6, p. 79
Merrill, v. 6, pp. 78-79
Merrill Edgar, v. 6, pp. 78-79,
80-81
Nancy, v. 6, p. 79

Oliver Henry, v. 6, p. 78
Unetta Small, v. 6, p. 78

Shuel

Flora, Mrs., v. 6, p. 82

Shull

Chesley, v. 6, p. 83
George B., v. 6, pp. 83-84
George B. Jr., v. 6, p. 83
Hayward, v. 6, p. 83
LaJuana (Purvis), Mrs., v. 6,
p. 84
Mrs., v. 6, p. 83

Schwayder

Hannah (Berry), Mrs., v. 6,
p. 85
Isaac, v. 6, p. 85
Jess, v. 6, p. 85

Sickman

Alonzo B., v. 6, p. 86
Eva Wilson, v. 6, p. 86

Silkensen

Raymond, Mrs., v. 6, p. 332

Silliman

Chauncey M., v. 5, p. 274
Louise L., v. 3, p. 274

Silverstein

Esther (Shevelson), v. 6, p. 86
Eva Wilson (Sickman), v. 6,
p. 86
Harry S., v. 6, p. 86
Harry S. Jr., v. 6, p. 86
Jane, v. 6, p. 86
Solomon, v. 6, p. 86

Simmons

Fred, v. 6, p. 52
Henrietta H., v. 6, p. 52

Sims

John, v. 6, p. 87

Skaggs

Roscoe, Mrs., v. 6, p. 100

Skerritt

George, v. 6, p. 91
M. E., Miss, v. 6, p. 91
Mrs., v. 6, p. 91
Thomas J., v. 6, pp. 91-92

Skinner

Dorothy E., v. 6, p. 93
Dwight L., v. 6, p. 93
Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 93
Hattie B., (Hedges), v. 6, p. 93
Jessie C., v. 6, p. 93
Mark, v. 6, p. 93
Mark A., v. 6, p. 93
Mary (Knappan), v. 6, p. 93
William H., v. 6, p. 93

Skouge

Oren T. (Dr.), v. 6, p. 94

Slater

Abram, v. 6, p. 95

Slaughterback

Kate, v. 6, p. 96
"Rattlesnake Kate," v. 6, p. 96

Smedley

Agnes (Giesecke), v. 6, pp. 98,
99
Annie (Garrison), v. 6, pp. 98,
99
Chester E., v. 6, pp. 98, 99
Ellen Mary (Vickers), v. 6,
p. 98
V. Clyde (Dr.), v. 6, p. 99
Victor Clyde, v. 6, p. 98
William (Dr.), v. 6, pp. 97-98,
99
William P., v. 6, p. 98

Smith

Aimee (Neresheimer), v. 6,
p. 105
Albert, v. 6, p. 69
Brainerd, v. 2, p. 169
Charles L., v. 6, p. 431
Clara, v. 3, p. 273
Clifford R., v. 6, p. 100
Cora (Costello), v. 6, p. 101
Cora A., v. 6, p. 431
Cora E., Mrs., v. 6, p. 100
Cornelia (Buxton), v. 3, p. 273
D. Tom, Mrs., v. 2, p. 63
David, v. 6, p. 69
David, Mrs., v. 6, p. 69
Eben, v. 6, p. 101
Emery, v. 6, p. 69
Emily (Rundel), v. 6, p. 101
Ernest Q., Mrs., v. 5, p. 3
Eudochia Bell, Mrs., v. 6,
p. 102
Hannah Amelia, v. 6, p. 105
Harvey Walter, v. 3, p. 273
Horace G., v. 6, p. 103
Isabelle, v. 6, p. 105
Joseph Emerson, v. 6, p. 102
Lake E., Mrs., v. 6, p. 104
Leland Ray, v. 6, p. 69
Lillian Bell, v. 5, p. 3
Mabel Dorothy, v. 6, p. 431
Mary C. (Dooly), v. 6, p. 106
Mate, v. 2, p. 62
Meroni, v. 6, p. 69
Milton, v. 6, pp. 105-106
Milton Sr., v. 6, p. 105
Nancy Hawley, v. 2, p. 169

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Smith (cont.)

Nannie O., v. 2, p. 169
 Norman H., v. 6, p. 105
 Samuel Decker, v. 6, p. 105
 Scot, v. 6, p. 69
 Stella, Mrs., v. 6, p. 107
 Susan Roots (Jones), v. 6,
 p. 105
 Walter, v. 6, pp. 69, 107-108

Snedeker

Dora (Crow), v. 2, pp. 104-
 106
 Edith, v. 2, p. 104
 Irene, v. 2, p. 104
 Ray, v. 2, pp. 104-105
 Walter, v. 2, p. 104

Sniveley

Eliza, Mrs., v. 6, p. 418
 Lena B., v. 6, p. 418
 M. H., v. 6, p. 418

Snook

J. E., v. 6, pp. 109-110
 Mrs., v. 6, p. 109

Snyder

Catherine (Jones), v. 3, p. 30
 John, v. 3, p. 30
 Lib, v. 6, pp. 111-112
 Monroe, v. 6, pp. 111-112
 Sarah Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 30

Sopris

E. B. (Gen.), v. 6, pp. 113-114
 Indiana, v. 6, p. 115
 Richard (Capt.), v. 6, p. 115
 S. T., v. 6, p. 113

Soule

Amasa, v. 6, p. 116
 Silas S. (Capt.), v. 6, pp. 116-118

Spalding

George, v. 6, p. 119

Sparks

James, v. 1, pp. 54-56
 Miranda, v. 1, pp. 54-56

Speer

Kate, Mrs., v. 6, p. 120
 Kate (Thrush), v. 6, p. 120
 Robert W., v. 6, pp. 120, 121-
 122

Spell

Leslie D., v. 6, p. 123
 Mrs., v. 6, p. 123
 William L. "Bill", v. 6, p. 123

Spencer

Alice (Weiss), Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 129
 Andrew Monroe, v. 3, p. 24

Elizabeth Ann (Gentle), v. 3,
 p. 24

Joel Francis, v. 3, p. 24
 John W., v. 6, pp. 124, 125
 Marian (Lockwood), Mrs.,
 v. 6, p. 129
 Murlin, v. 6, pp. 126, 129
 Nelda (Center), Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 129

Olin, v. 3, p. 24
 R. B., v. 6, pp. 126, 127-128
 Robert B., v. 6, pp. 129-130
 Robert W., v. 6, p. 129
 Russell, Mrs., v. 6, p. 131
 Sarah Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 24
 Thomas, v. 3, p. 24
 Thomas Fielder, v. 3, p. 24
 Walter, v. 3, p. 24

Spetnagel

Bertha, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 132-133

Spotswood

Robert J., v. 6, pp. 134-135
 Robert W., v. 6, pp. 134-135

Sprague

Edna Jane (Ailes), v. 6, p. 136
 Joseph, v. 6, p. 136
 Marshall, v. 6, pp. 136-137
 Marshall, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 136-
 137
 Sharon, v. 6, p. 136
 Stephen, v. 6, p. 136

Spray

Amelia T., v. 6, p. 137
 Eli, v. 6, p. 137
 Emily R., v. 6, p. 137
 Marian Virginia, v. 6, p. 137
 Mattie (Wooton), v. 6, p. 137
 Mildred A., v. 6, p. 137
 Walter J., v. 6, p. 137

Spring

Agnes Wright, Mrs., v. 6,
 pp. 139-140, 141, 142-143,
 144
 Archer T., v. 6, pp. 139, 141,
 142, 144

Springer

Annie Clifton, v. 4, p. 53
 John W., v. 4, p. 53

Stabler

Elsie, Mrs., v. 5, p. 49

Stacey

Elliott (Paulin), v. 5, pp. 98-99
 Wayne, v. 5, p. 99
 Wayne, Mrs., v. 5, pp. 98-99

Stacy

Joel E., v. 3, p. 262

Mary Elizabeth, v. 3, p. 262

Staley

Ann Harwood, v. 4, p. 244
 Calvin C., v. 4, p. 244

Stanaker

Theodore, v. 6, p. 163
 Theodore III, v. 6, p. 163
 Theodore IV, v. 6, p. 163

Stanchfield

Edward Everett, v. 6, p. 145
 Stephen D., v. 6, p. 145

Stannard

Carroll, v. 6, p. 146
 Clare Nowlen, v. 6, p. 146
 Clarence D., v. 6, p. 146
 Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 146
 Evelyn, v. 6, p. 146
 Josephina (Thompson), v. 6,
 p. 146
 Kenneth, v. 6, p. 146
 Velora, v. 6, p. 146

Stanton

Helen M., v. 6, p. 148
 Irving Wallace, v. 6, pp. 147-
 148
 Mary (Singer), v. 6, p. 148

Staples

Alice Graeme, v. 3, p. 273
 John, v. 3, p. 273
 Kate, v. 3, p. 273

Stapleton

Ben Jr., v. 6, p. 149
 Benjamin F., v. 6, pp. 149-150
 Lois Jane (Lowell), Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 149
 Mrs., v. 6, p. 149
 Patience Tucker, v. 6, p. 151
 William, v. 6, p. 151

Starr

Belle, v. 6, p. 152
 Henry, v. 6, p. 152
 Sam, v. 6, p. 152
 "Uncle Tom," v. 6, p. 152

Stebbins

Charles M., v. 6, pp. 153, 154
 Maria T., v. 4, pp. 5, 6

Steck

Amos, v. 4, pp. 415-416; v. 6,
 pp. 155, 156
 Harry, v. 4, p. 415
 Mary (McLaughlin), v. 6,
 p. 156
 Sarah, v. 4, p. 415

Steele

Alice E., Mrs., v. 6, p. 157
 Anna B. (Truax), v. 6, p. 161

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Steele (cont.)

Cornelia (King), v. 6, p. 158
 Frances Edwina, v. 6, p. 161
 Henry, v. 6, p. 161
 Henry King (Dr.), v. 6, p. 158
 Jane, v. 6, p. 161
 John (Dr.), v. 6, p. 158
 Mary Frances (Dunlavy), v. 6, p. 158
 Matthew W., v. 6, p. 157
 Pete, v. 6, p. 157
 R. W., v. 6, p. 157
 Robert Wilbur, v. 6, pp. 158-162
 Robert William, v. 6, p. 161
 Ted, v. 6, p. 157
 Theresa (Cole), v. 6, p. 157
 Victor, v. 6, p. 157
 Walt, v. 6, p. 157
 William, v. 6, p. 161

Steiger

Samuel, v. 3, p. 167

Steinaker

Bill, v. 6, p. 163
 John J., v. 6, p. 163
 Joseph, v. 6, p. 163

Steinwald

Hildred (Plessinger), v. 6, pp. 164-165
 Nancy (Glover), v. 6, p. 165
 Walter, v. 6, pp. 164-166

Stemmons

Alice, v. 2, p. 38
 Alma (Zimmerman), v. 2, p. 38
 John, v. 2, p. 38

Sterne

Albert Eugene, v. 6, p. 168
 Charles F., v. 6, p. 167
 Charles Shepperd, v. 6, p. 167
 Eugenia (Fries), v. 6, p. 167
 Laura Mercy (Laughlin), v. 6, p. 168
 Orian, v. 6, p. 168
 Orian (Shepperd), v. 6, p. 167
 William Charles, v. 6, pp. 167-168

Stevens

Anson, v. 6, p. 169
 Chellie, v. 6, p. 469
 D. F., v. 6, pp. 170-171, 172
 Eugene C., v. 6, pp. 170-171, 172
 Henry, v. 2, p. 89
 John F., v. 6, p. 170
 Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 172

Sanford H., v. 6, p. 469

Stevic

Abner B., v. 6, p. 173
 Henry, v. 6, p. 173
 James O., v. 6, pp. 173, 174, 175
 Jean Clare, v. 6, p. 173
 Laura A. (France), v. 6, p. 173
 Marietta V. (Baker), v. 6, p. 173
 Mary, v. 6, p. 173
 Theodora Shreve (McColloch), v. 6, pp. 173, 174, 175
 Waneeta, v. 6, p. 173

Stewart

Frank, v. 6, p. 176

Stiles

Bert W., v. 6, p. 177
 Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 177
 Elizabeth (Leffingwell), v. 6, p. 177
 Frank L., v. 6, p. 177
 Helen (Oswald), v. 6, p. 177
 May (Johnson), v. 6, p. 177

Stinemeyer

Edwin H., v. 6, pp. 178-179
 Frank G., v. 6, p. 179
 Samuel C., v. 6, p. 178
 William R., v. 6, p. 179

Stocker

Allison, v. 6, p. 180
 Blanche (Roerig), v. 6, p. 180
 Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 180
 Harry S., v. 6, p. 180
 Jessie M., v. 6, p. 180
 Matthew S., v. 6, p. 180
 Ruth, v. 6, p. 180

Stoddard

Anna Blanche, v. 6, p. 182
 Edward Darcy, v. 6, p. 181
 Edward Olin, v. 6, p. 182
 Elijah Woodward, v. 6, p. 181
 Ethel May, v. 6, p. 182
 Kathryn Baldwin, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 181-182
 Lyman Volcott, v. 6, p. 182
 Volcott Coyne, v. 6, p. 181

Stoiber

Edward, v. 6, pp. 183-184
 Lena Allen, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 183-185

Stokes

Albert J., v. 1, p. 65; v. 6, p. 186
 Charles A., v. 6, p. 186

Grace P. (Pomeroy), v. 6, p. 186

Louise P., v. 6, p. 186

Rosa G., v. 1, p. 65

Stone

Albert, v. 6, p. 21
 Charles Birney, v. 4, p. 5
 Elizabeth Hawes Ellis, v. 6, p. 21
 Elmira C. (Atwood), v. 2, p. 290
 Grace Alice, v. 2, pp. 290-291
 Grace Maria, v. 4, p. 5
 Isaac (Capt.), v. 2, p. 290
 Jerusha (Learned), v. 2, p. 290
 Martha Jane (Teal), v. 4, p. 5
 Mary Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 21
 Nathaniel, v. 2, p. 290

Stover

Anna (Harp), v. 6, p. 187
 George A. (Dr.), v. 2, p. 54
 George Henry M. D., v. 6, p. 187
 Jane McMaster (White), v. 6, p. 187
 William C., v. 6, p. 187

Strain

David F., v. 6, p. 188
 Mary (Barr), v. 6, p. 188
 R. L., v. 6, p. 188
 W. Chester, v. 6, p. 188
 W. Chester, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, pp. 188-189
 Willis, v. 6, p. 188

Strang

S. B., Mr. and Mrs., v. 5, p. 110

Stratton

Bruce, v. 6, p. 191
 Frank L., v. 6, p. 190
 George, v. 6, p. 191
 Myron, v. 6, p. 192
 Winfield Scott, v. 6, pp. 192, 194, 195

Strauss

Moses I. (Dr.), v. 6, p. 193
 Rose, v. 6, p. 193

Strickler

David P., v. 6, pp. 194-196
 Edith (Rice), v. 6, p. 195

Stroehle

Annie (Huntington), v. 6, p. 197
 Frederick W., v. 6, p. 197
 George, v. 6, p. 197
 John, v. 6, p. 197

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Strong

Charles Dunwoody, v. 6,
pp. 198-199
Charles Morgan, v. 6, p. 198
Horatio, v. 6, p. 198
Jared Stevens, v. 6, p. 198
Joseph, v. 6, p. 198
Margaret VonBrahman, v. 6,
p. 198
Ozias, v. 6, p. 198
Phineas, v. 6, p. 198

Strouse

Fannie, v. 4, p. 404
Morris, v. 4, p. 404
Theresa (Holzman), v. 4,
p. 404

Struby

Frederick Francis, v. 6, p. 200
Laura Ruth, v. 6, p. 200

Sturgeon

David D., v. 6, pp. 201-203
Edith (Thomas), v. 6, p. 202
Edith Jane (Johnson), v. 6,
p. 202

Sudan

Archer Chester, v. 2, p. 102

Sudler

Amos C., v. 5, p. 48
Carol, v. 5, p. 48
Estelle (Kramer), v. 5, p. 48

Sutman

Henry C., Mrs., v. 2, p. 64

Summers

Ella Margaret, v. 2, p. 178
Nathaniel, v. 2, p. 178
Sarah (Parsons), v. 2, p. 178

Swadley

Clara Belle, v. 6, p. 206
George C., v. 6, p. 204
John Ira, v. 6, p. 206
Laura (Minges), v. 6, pp. 204,
206
Margaret (Pence), v. 6, p. 205
Mary E. (Pollock), v. 6,
pp. 204, 205
Sarah Margaret, v. 6, p. 206
William Henry, v. 6, p. 205
William Robert, v. 6, p. 206

Swain

Alva A., v. 6, pp. 207-208
Flora (Bague), v. 6, p. 207
John, v. 6, p. 207
Sara Ann, v. 6, p. 207

Sweeney

Bertha, Mrs., v. 6, p. 100

Lester, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
p. 209

Sweet

Channing, v. 4, p. 18
Elizabeth (Martin), v. 4, p. 18
John J., v. 6, p. 210
Katharine, v. 4, p. 18
Sandra, v. 4, p. 18

Swigert

Jana Amanda, v. 5, p. 81
Philip Andrew, v. 5, p. 81
Sarah, v. 5, p. 81

Swink

Alice (Whitten), v. 6, p. 211
Alice, Mrs., v. 6, p. 211
Manfred (Lt.), v. 6, p. 211
Nikki, v. 6, p. 211

Symes

George Gifford, v. 6, pp. 212-
213, 214
J. Foster, v. 6, p. 214
John Foster, v. 6, p. 213
Katherine Foster, v. 6, p. 213
Mary (Gifford), v. 6, p. 212
Sophi F. (Foster), v. 6, p. 213
William, v. 6, p. 212

- T -

Tabor

Augusta, v. 4, p. 88
H. A. W., v. 3, p. 151; v. 4,
p. 88
N. Maxey, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
p. 88
Persis, v. 4, p. 88

Talbot

Alvah George, v. 6, p. 215
Anna M. (Layng), v. 6, p. 215
Charles H., v. 6, p. 215
Clarence F., v. 6, p. 215
Edward L., v. 6, p. 215
Frank L., v. 6, p. 215
George (Dr.), v. 6, p. 422
Horace W., v. 6, p. 215
John H. Keylen, v. 6, p. 215
Laura G., v. 6, p. 215
Lucy May, v. 6, p. 215
Mildred Evelyn (Mullis), v. 6,
p. 215
Presley, v. 6, pp. 215, 216
William L., v. 6, p. 215

Tallman

Elizabeth J., Mrs., v. 6,
pp. 217-218
John M., v. 6, p. 218

Tapp

W. J., v. 4, p. 89

Taylor

Arthur George (Dr.), v. 6,
p. 219
Ella, Mrs., v. 6, p. 342
Henry, v. 6, p. 223
John, v. 6, pp. 220-224
John Francis, v. 6, pp. 223-224
Kitty Cloud, v. 6, pp. 223-224
Mrs., v. 6, p. 219
William S., v. 1, p. 135

Tears

Daniel, Mr. and Mrs., v. 4,
p. 198
Georgie Louise (Crittenden),
v. 4, p. 198

Tegarden

James H., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
p. 225

Tegtmeyer

Bertha, v. 4, p. 229
Christopher, v. 4, p. 229
Irma, v. 4, p. 229

Temple

William Geddes, v. 5, p. 15
William Oscar, Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 5, p. 15

Tennant

Chauncey Eugene (Dr.), v. 2,
p. 53

Tenney

Andrew, v. 6, p. 226
Andrew Jr., v. 6, p. 226
Eliza (Miner), v. 6, p. 226
Eliza Duff (Robertson), v. 6,
p. 226
Eunice (Smith), v. 6, p. 226
Fanny Annette, v. 6, p. 228
Helen Eliza, v. 6, p. 227
Henry Edwin A., v. 6, p. 228
John, v. 6, p. 226
Joseph, v. 6, p. 226
Martha Jane, v. 6, p. 228
Rollins Quartus, v. 6, pp. 226-
228
Samuel, v. 6, p. 226
Thomas, v. 6, p. 226

Terasaki

M., v. 4, p. 365

Tesch

Celia M. (Mastin), v. 6, p. 229
Eliza Jane (Wallace), v. 6,
p. 229
Frank S., v. 6, p. 229
James G., v. 6, p. 229

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Thatcher

Fanny (Kistley), v. 6, p. 231
 Frances Kirtley, Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 230
 John A., v. 2, p. 181
 John Pemberton, v. 6, p. 231
 Joseph Addison, v. 6, pp. 230, 231
 Mahlon D., v. 2, p. 181
 Patsy (Hickman), v. 6, p. 231

Thiede

Edward C., v. 6, pp. 232-233
 Henry, v. 6, p. 232

Thomas

Charles S., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 234
 Charles Spaulding, v. 6, p. 235
 Charles Spalding II, v. 6,
 p. 234
 Edith M., v. 6, p. 235
 Emma Senn, Mrs., v. 6, p. 238
 Flora May, v. 3, p. 239
 Frances (Ryan), v. 6, p. 237
 George, v. 6, p. 235
 H. G. (Col.), v. 6, p. 237
 Hubert F., v. 6, p. 234
 Hubert F., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 234
 James Mattson, v. 3, p. 239
 John L. (Judge), v. 4, p. 399
 Lowell, v. 6, pp. 236-237
 Mary Jo, Mrs., v. 6, p. 234
 R. Idris, v. 6, p. 238
 Sally, v. 4, p. 399
 Winna, v. 4, p. 399

Thompson

Benjamin, v. 6, p. 216
 Eldridge, v. 6, p. 240
 Elizabeth Mana, Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 216
 Elizabeth V., v. 4, p. 228
 Frederick A., v. 6, p. 146
 George R., v. 4, p. 228
 Gertrude, v. 4, p. 228
 Gunter, v. 6, p. 240
 Isabel (Stuart), v. 5, p. 120
 Jane Monroe (Goelet), v. 6,
 pp. 239, 240
 Josephina, v. 6, p. 146
 Llewellyn E. Jr., v. 6, pp. 239, 240
 M. A., v. 6, p. 240
 Mary Theodosia (Kellogg),
 v. 6, p. 146
 Robert, v. 5, p. 120
 Sam (Col.), v. 6, pp. 241-242

Susan, v. 5, p. 120
 "Wally," v. 6, p. 240

Thornton

Rita, Mrs., v. 4, pp. 212, 215
 William H., v. 4, p. 212

Thrush

Ellis, Mrs., v. 6, p. 120
 Kate (Speer), v. 6, p. 120

Thurston

Charles Mynn (Col.), v. 5,
 p. 135
 John, v. 5, p. 135

Tibbitts

William, v. 5, p. 49

Timmons

Ernest E., v. 6, p. 243
 Frederick A., v. 6, p. 243
 Irene (Cole), v. 6, p. 243
 J. A. (Col.), v. 6, p. 243
 Leonard O., v. 6, p. 243

Timson

Alma (Setzer), v. 6, p. 245
 Frank C., v. 6, pp. 244-245, 246
 Mary, Mrs., v. 6, p. 246

Tindall

Jesse M., v. 3, p. 108
 Job D., v. 3, p. 108
 Sarah, v. 3, p. 108

Tipotsch

Andy, v. 6, pp. 247-248
 Felix, v. 6, p. 247
 Fred, v. 6, p. 247
 Isabel, v. 6, p. 247
 Joe, v. 6, p. 247
 Rudy, v. 6, p. 247
 Teresa (Moigg), v. 6, p. 247

Tobin

Tom, v. 2, p. 18

Todd

Edith, v. 6, p. 249
 Gertrude, Mrs., v. 6, p. 249
 Kathryn (Clark), Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 249

Toland

Ann, v. 6, p. 250
 Charles, v. 6, p. 250
 Clark, v. 6, p. 250
 Ernst, v. 6, p. 250
 Eva, v. 6, p. 250
 Frank M., v. 6, p. 250
 George, v. 6, p. 250
 George C., v. 6, p. 250
 James F., v. 6, p. 250
 Mary J., v. 6, p. 250
 Nancy (Hayhurst), v. 6, p. 250

Siddie (Crane), v. 6, p. 250
 Stella, v. 6, p. 250

Tomlin

Albert Baker, v. 6, pp. 251-
 257
 Albert Franklin, v. 6, p. 253
 Beverly Beatrice, v. 6, p. 254
 Eleanor, v. 6, pp. 251-257
 Elizabeth Ellena Whitesides,
 v. 6, pp. 251-257
 Elizabeth Jane, v. 6, p. 254
 Eugene Hahn, v. 6, p. 255
 Galen Jeffrey, v. 6, pp. 251-257

James Robert, v. 6, p. 255
 Jeanne (Kiser), v. 6, p. 254
 Jennie (Hahn), v. 6, p. 255
 John H., v. 6, p. 251
 Julia Mae, v. 6, p. 253
 Kenneth Wesley, v. 6, p. 257
 Leola Gladys (Herrin), v. 6,
 p. 257

Louise, v. 6, p. 255
 Margaret Perrie, v. 6, p. 251
 Oliver Baker, v. 6, pp. 251-
 257

Oliver Bryson, v. 6, p. 255
 Patricia, v. 6, p. 254
 Robert Levy, v. 6, p. 251
 Robert Moore, v. 6, p. 251
 Sadie Myra (Rudolph), v. 6,
 p. 253
 Thomas Albert, v. 6, pp. 251-
 257

Thomas Henry, v. 6, p. 255

Tompkins

Allen, v. 4, p. 187
 Anne Rathvon, v. 6, p. 258
 E. A., v. 4, p. 188
 Edith B., v. 4, pp. 187, 188
 Eva, v. 4, p. 188
 Evangeline, v. 4, p. 187
 Howard Richard K., v. 6,
 p. 258
 Mary Jane, v. 6, p. 258
 Rathvon McClure, v. 6, p. 258
 Richard K., v. 6, p. 258
 Richard Kelsey, v. 6, p. 258

Totten

George, Mrs., v. 6, p. 225

Tower

Caroline Knudsen, v. 4, p. 62
 Dorothea, v. 4, p. 62

Townsend

Hosea, v. 6, p. 259

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Trask

Caroline, v. 5, p. 36
 Louisa C., v. 5, p. 36
 Robert, v. 5, p. 36

Trease

C. A., v. 6, p. 260
 Cebert Alexander, v. 6,
     pp. 261-267
 Florence Edna (Tripp), v. 6,
     p. 267
 James Porter, v. 6, p. 261
 Merritt Alexander, v. 6, p. 267
 Wilbur Steele, v. 6, p. 267

Treece

Cora Sloat, v. 6, p. 268
 Edna M. (Sloat), v. 6, p. 268
 Henry, v. 6, p. 268
 J. Dale, v. 6, p. 268
 John T. (Dr.), v. 6, p. 268
 Minnie (Fahl), v. 6, p. 268
 Reuben H., v. 6, p. 268

Trowbridge

Edwin, v. 6, p. 269
 Eugene Lancaster, v. 6, p. 269
 Flora M. (Lancaster), v. 6,
     p. 269
 Grace Nelson, v. 6, p. 269
 Hannah (Bradford), v. 6,
     p. 269
 Henry, v. 6, pp. 269-270
 John, v. 6, p. 269
 Ruth E., v. 6, p. 269

True

Henry A., v. 6, p. 271

Trueblood

John, v. 6, p. 453
 Mildred, v. 6, p. 453
 Susanna (McCoy), v. 6, p. 453

Truscott

R. W., v. 6, p. 272

Tubbs

Alice, v. 5, pp. 133-134
 W. G., v. 5, p. 133

Tucker

Alfred, v. 6, p. 273
 Edward, v. 6, p. 274
 Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 274
 Gertrude, v. 6, p. 274
 Lillian (Stocker), v. 6, p. 273
 Loretta F. (Kennan), v. 6,
     p. 274
 Margaret Ann, v. 6, p. 273
 Margaret Ann (Burgess), v. 6,
     p. 273
 Minerva (Sutton), v. 6, p. 274
 Sheldon E., v. 6, p. 274

Sheldon E. Jr., v. 6, p. 274

Turner

Alfred Peabody, v. 6, p. 275
 Alfred Smith, v. 6, p. 275
 Anne Lucy, v. 6, p. 275
 Barbara Merle (Carruthers),
     v. 6, p. 275
 Clara Ellen, v. 6, p. 275
 Elsie Fay (Dowdy), v. 6,
     p. 275
 Frank C., v. 6, p. 275
 Mary Angeline (Bunce), v. 6,
     p. 275
 Summit County, v. 6, p. 275

Turtle

John A., v. 5, pp. 87-89

Tuttle

Arthur A., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
     p. 368

Tyler

Frank, v. 4, p. 99
 Martha, v. 4, p. 99

- U -

Underwood

Amos, v. 6, p. 276
 Arthur Kennard, v. 6, pp. 276-
     277
 Arthur Kennard Jr., v. 6,
     p. 277
 Carolyn, v. 6, p. 277
 Charles D., v. 6, p. 276
 Charlotte, v. 6, p. 276
 Dortha (Mason), v. 6, p. 277
 George I, v. 6, p. 276
 George II, v. 6, p. 176
 George III, v. 6, p. 276
 George IV, v. 6, p. 276
 Grace, v. 6, p. 276
 Grace (Kennard), v. 6, p. 276
 Kennard Jr., v. 6, p. 276
 Rosamond, v. 6, p. 276
 William D., v. 6, p. 276

Upton

Albert, v. 6, p. 278
 Ellen Augusta (Rider), v. 6,
     p. 278
 Ernest B., v. 6, p. 278
 Ernest W., v. 6, p. 278
 Mary Elanor, v. 6, p. 278
 Rachel Alice (Allen), v. 6,
     p. 278
 William B., v. 6, p. 278

- V -

Vail

Allan Paden, v. 6, p. 280
 Catharine (Brokaw), v. 6,
     p. 279
 Charles Davis, v. 6, pp. 279-
     280
 Charles Gillespie, v. 6, p. 280
 Jessie (Paden), v. 6, p. 280
 Jettie, v. 6, p. 281
 John F., v. 6, pp. 281-282
 Kenyon C., v. 6, p. 280
 Lela Phelps (White), v. 6,
     p. 281
 Margaret (Finch), v. 6, p. 280
 Richard R., v. 6, p. 279
 Richard Randolph, v. 6, p. 280
 Shirley Ann, v. 6, p. 280
 Stephen, v. 6, p. 281
 Vera Mary, v. 6, p. 280

Vaille

Agnes Wolcott, v. 6, p. 283
 Edith Wolcott, v. 6, p. 283
 Frederick Ozni, v. 6, p. 283
 Harriet Wolcott, v. 6, p. 283
 Henry Robert, v. 6, p. 283
 Sarah Wilkinson (Lewis), v. 6,
     p. 283

Van Cise

Adele, v. 6, p. 284
 Edwin, v. 6, p. 284
 Eleanor, v. 6, p. 284
 Philip S., v. 5, pp. 33-34; v. 6,
     pp. 284-285
 Sara R., v. 6, p. 284

Van Derbur

Francis, Mrs., v. 5, p. 60
 Gwendolyn, v. 5, p. 60
 Margaret Gwendolyn
     (Olinger), v. 5, p. 58
 Marilyn, v. 5, p. 59

Van Der Schouw

G. E. (Dr.), v. 6, pp. 286-288
 G. E., Mrs., v. 6, p. 288
 H. M. (Dr.), v. 6, p. 287
 M. G. (Dr.), v. 6, p. 287

Van Deusen

Arthur E., v. 6, p. 289
 Mrs., v. 6, p. 289
 Robert M., v. 6, pp. 290, 291
 Stewart A., v. 6, pp. 290, 291

Vandeventer

Jabez Hopkins, v. 2, p. 99

Van Horne

Lester K., v. 6, p. 292

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Van Hummell

Henrich, v. 6, p. 293
 Henry, v. 6, pp. 293-294
 Iona M. (Gardiner), v. 6,
     p. 294
 Jenny (Snyder), v. 6, p. 293
 Quincy (Dr.), v. 6, p. 293
 Sophia Henwood (West), v. 6,
     p. 293
 Virginia, v. 6, p. 294

Van Meter

Elfrida V. (Wright), v. 6,
     p. 295
 Elfrida Victoria, v. 6, p. 295
 Garrett, v. 6, p. 296
 Isaac, v. 6, p. 296
 Jane Seymour, v. 6, p. 295
 John, v. 6, p. 297
 Kreign, v. 6, p. 297
 Seymour Doss (Dr.), v. 6,
     pp. 295-296
 Virginia Cunningham, v. 6,
     p. 295
 William C., v. 6, pp. 295, 296

Van Meteren

Garrett, v. 6, p. 296
 Hannah, v. 6, p. 296
 Isaac, v. 6, p. 296
 Jan Joosten, v. 6, p. 296
 John, v. 6, p. 296
 Joost Hanse, v. 6, p. 296
 Macyken (Hendricksen), v. 6,
     p. 296
 Sarah DuBois, v. 6, p. 296

Van Riper

Anna, v. 6, p. 298
 George, v. 6, p. 299
 John, v. 6, p. 298
 Melicent (Campbell), v. 6,
     p. 298
 Walker, v. 6, pp. 298-299, 300

Van Schaack

Clara (Mitchell), v. 4, pp. 361,
     362
 Clara Sterling (Mitchell), v. 6,
     p. 302
 Henry C., Mrs., v. 4, p. 361
 Henry C. Sr., v. 6, pp. 301-303
 Henry Cruger, v. 4, p. 362

Van Wormer

Isaac P., v. 6, p. 304

Van Zant

Burton Truitt, v. 6, p. 306
 Caroline A. (Empson), v. 6,
     p. 305

Charles Burton, v. 6, pp. 305-
     306

Charles Garrett, v. 6, p. 305
 Emma Charlotte (Dale), v. 6,
     p. 305

Glenna Dale, v. 6, p. 306

Margaret (Groves), v. 6,
     p. 305

Mary (Wardell), v. 6, p. 305

Ralph Dale, v. 6, p. 306

Thomas Cornish, v. 6, p. 305

Varian

E. P., v. 6, p. 307
 Florence D. (Achleitner), v. 6,
     p. 307
 Lester E., v. 6, p. 307
 Mary S., v. 6, p. 307

Varney

Charles Eugene, v. 6, p. 308
 Elmyra Bailey, Mrs., v. 6,
     pp. 308, 309
 Frederick William, v. 6, p. 308
 Maud Elden, v. 6, pp. 308, 309
 Nathan Elden, v. 6, pp. 308, 309

Vasquez

Hirman, v. 6, p. 310-311
 Louis, v. 6, pp. 310-311
 Narcissus Land, v. 6, pp. 310-
     311

Vaughan

Clara, Mrs., v. 6, p. 312
 Courtland, v. 6, p. 312
 Ella Pauline, v. 6, p. 312
 H. S. (Major), v. 6, p. 312
 Harold S., v. 6, p. 312
 Mary E., v. 2, p. 195
 Roswell C. (Major), v. 2,
     p. 195

Velie

Jacob W. (Dr.), v. 1, pp. 283-284

Venemann

Marie Katherine, v. 5, p. 282
 Robert Theodore, v. 5, p. 282

Vickers

Catherine Moodie, v. 6, p. 60
 Isabel Josephine, v. 6, p. 60
 John J., v. 6, p. 60

Vickery

Albion K. I, v. 6, p. 313
 Albion K. II, v. 6, p. 313
 Albion K. III, v. 6, pp. 313-
     314
 Albion K. IV, v. 6, p. 313
 Howard F., v. 6, p. 313

Katherine, v. 6, p. 313
 Kittie May (Cobb), v. 6, p. 313
 Rodney M., v. 6, p. 313
 Sarah P. (Martin), v. 6, p. 313

Vidal

Barbara, v. 6, p. 315
 Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 315
 Emile N., v. 6, p. 315
 Henri, v. 6, p. 315
 Henry, v. 6, p. 315
 Henry C., v. 6, p. 315
 Jeanne E. (Brus), v. 6, p. 315
 John, v. 6, p. 315
 Lou Ann, v. 6, p. 315
 Louis B., v. 6, p. 315
 Lucille, v. 6, p. 315
 Lucille H., v. 6, p. 315
 Marie (Tailhades), v. 6, p. 315
 Robert, v. 6, p. 315

Vincent

Wendell, v. 6, pp. 316-318

Vineyard

Doris, v. 6, p. 404
 Doris Ann, v. 6, p. 404
 James Wilkerson, v. 6, p. 404
 Willard, v. 6, p. 404

Vittur

B. D. (Col.), v. 6, p. 57
 Katherine Cecilia, v. 6, p. 57
 Katherine R. (Seemann), v. 6,
     p. 57

Vogel

Family, v. 6, pp. 319, 320
 Gilbert, v. 6, p. 320
 Katherine, Mrs., v. 6, p. 319
 William A., v. 6, p. 320

Vogt

Adelgunda (Von Riedel), v. 6,
     p. 482
 Minnie Louise, v. 6, p. 482
 William F., v. 6, p. 482

Volk

George D., v. 6, p. 462

von Dickersohn

G. E., v. 6, pp. 321-322
 R. Julian, v. 6, pp. 321-322

Vondy

Christian, v. 6, p. 323
 Frederick William, v. 6, p. 323
 Jean (Pferdesteller), v. 6,
     p. 323
 Merritt D., v. 6, p. 323
 Rebecca (Peterson), v. 6,
     p. 323
 Thomas, v. 6, p. 323
 Thomas Sr., v. 6, p. 323

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Vondy (cont.)

William, v. 6, p. 323

Von Wegener

Beautie (Wanamaker), v. 6,
p. 339

Hans Max (Count), v. 6,
p. 339

Vosburgh

Ann Eliza Bedell, v. 6, p. 324

B. C., v. 6, p. 324

Edna H., v. 6, p. 324

Florence Louise (Learned),
v. 6, p. 324

George Bedell, v. 6, p. 324

Paul L., v. 6, p. 324

Vredenburg

Maria, v. 1, p. 225

Purdy, v. 1, p. 225

- W -

Wagner

Anna, v. 6, p. 371

Christine, v. 1, p. 268

Clara, v. 1, p. 268

Herman, v. 6, p. 371

John, v. 1, p. 268

Walker

Barbara E. (Fisher), v. 6,
p. 325

Becky, v. 6, p. 327

Elizabeth A., v. 2, p. 200

Emily Strother, v. 6, p. 325

Francis Strother, v. 6, p. 325

James Randolph, v. 6, p. 325

James Randolph Jr., v. 6,
p. 325

John Brisben, v. 6, p. 325

John M., v. 2, p. 200

Mabel Dean, v. 2, p. 200

Preston, v. 6, pp. 326-327

Robert C., v. 6, p. 326

Walter, v. 6, pp. 326-327

Wall

David K., v. 6, p. 328

Wallace

James H., v. 5, p. 37

Virginia, v. 5, p. 37

Walling

Ansel T., v. 6, p. 329

Burns (Commodore), v. 6,
p. 329

Percy A., v. 6, p. 329

Sarah E., Mrs., v. 6, p. 329

Sarah K. (Hodges), v. 6,
p. 329

Stuart Douglas, v. 6, p. 329

Walpole

Floyd Finnell, v. 6, p. 330

Laura Finnell, v. 6, p. 330

Martha L. (Field), v. 6, p. 330

Nimrod S., v. 6, p. 330

Walseth

John E., v. 6, pp. 331-332

Russell (Sox), v. 6, p. 332

Walsh

Christopher V. (Rev.), v. 6,
pp. 333-334, 335

Walter

Holly (Ringsby), v. 6, p. 337

Paul B., v. 6, p. 337

Rudolph J. Jr., v. 6, pp. 336-
338

Rudolph III, v. 6, p. 337

Stanley J., v. 6, p. 337

Wanamaker

Beautie, v. 6, p. 339

J. E., v. 6, p. 339

Wannemaker

J. E., v. 6, p. 340

Wanner

Catherine, Mrs., v. 6, p. 341

Ward

Ben, v. 6, p. 342

Emma Jane, v. 6, p. 343

F. D. W., v. 6, p. 343

Jane, v. 6, p. 343

Jane Shaw, v. 6, p. 343

Jasper D., v. 6, p. 343

Jasper Dudley, v. 6, p. 343

Lewis, v. 6, p. 342

Marie, Mrs., v. 6, p. 342

Marion Kenneth, v. 6, p. 343

William Shaw, v. 6, pp. 343-344

Wardell

William W., Mr. and Mrs.,
v. 6, p. 345

Warfield

Bathania (Brent), v. 6, p. 346

George A., v. 6, pp. 346-347

John Alfred, v. 6, p. 346

John Hollister, v. 6, p. 346

Marian Rebecca, v. 6, p. 346

Richard Hall, v. 6, p. 346

Sarah Newman (Hall). v. 6,
p. 346

Warner

Ann Spence, v. 6, p. 348

Anna Smith, v. 6, p. 348

Clara L., Mrs., v. 6, p. 367

Mary Ella, v. 6, p. 348

Max E., v. 6, p. 367

Stanley Clark, v. 6, p. 348

Warren

"Bill," v. 6, p. 33

Edith (Beauvais), v. 6, p. 33

Ethel (Velhagen), v. 6, p. 33

Minnie M., v. 6, pp. 32-33

Waterman

Howard, Mrs., v. 6, p. 291

Watson

Thomas, v. 6, p. 349

William S., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
p. 349

Weaver

David, v. 2, p. 267

Louise, v. 2, pp. 267-268

Webb

Daniel Lee, v. 6, p. 351

Daniel Lee, Mrs., v. 6, p. 351

Gerald Bertram (Dr.), v. 6,
p. 350

Henry Nelson, v. 6, p. 351

Webber

DeWitt C., v. 6, p. 352

Frank T., v. 6, pp. 352-353

Isaac, v. 6, p. 352

Weber

Caroline (Shell), v. 6, p. 355

Carolyn, v. 6, p. 355

David, v. 6, p. 354

Edith (King), v. 6, p. 355

Harry Albert, v. 6, p. 354

Lenora Mattingly, Mrs., v. 6,
p. 354

Rosemary Louise, v. 6, p. 354

Walter W., v. 6, pp. 355-356

William Herman, v. 6, p. 354

Webster

Hugh, v. 6, p. 183

Lena Allen, v. 6, pp. 183-185

Wehrmeyer

Dina, v. 5, p. 26

Henry, v. 5, p. 26

Weicker

Florence C. (Holliday), v. 6,
p. 357

Robert V., v. 6, pp. 357-358

Weil

Albert W., v. 6, p. 259

Gladys Miriam, v. 6, p. 359

Mathilde, v. 6, p. 359

Miriam A., v. 6, p. 359

William, v. 6, p. 359

Welborn

Ada (Baker), v. 6, p. 360

Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 360

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Welborn (cont.)

Jennie (Roberts), v. 6, p. 361
 Jesse F., v. 6, p. 360
 John Baker, v. 6, p. 360
 John Wesley, v. 6, pp. 360,
 361
 Rebecca Jane (Roberts), v. 6,
 p. 360
 Robert Floyd, v. 6, p. 360

Welles

Grace Firth, v. 4, p. 396
 Helen, v. 4, p. 396
 Julian Firth, v. 4, p. 396

Wells

Burrows (General), v. 3,
 p. 180
 Edward Clark, v. 3, p. 180
 Elizabeth Bruner, v. 3, p. 180
 Jennie, v. 3, p. 180

Welsh

Eliza (Leathorn), v. 6, p. 362
 John, v. 6, pp. 362-364
 Joseph, v. 6, p. 362
 Mary Elizabeth (Shields), v. 6,
 p. 362
 Mary F., v. 6, p. 363
 Richard, v. 6, p. 364
 Sallie, v. 6, p. 363
 Sarah, v. 6, p. 364
 Thos., v. 6, p. 364
 William, v. 6, p. 363
 William J., v. 6, p. 363

West

David Anthony, v. 6, p. 367
 David Robert, v. 6, p. 367
 Eliza (Boyd), v. 6, p. 365
 George, v. 1, pp. 149-150,
 153-154
 George (General), v. 6, p. 365
 Harley Dean, v. 6, pp. 365-366
 Harleyn, v. 6, p. 366
 Jenny (Henwood), v. 6, p. 293
 John Gartrell, v. 6, p. 293
 Muriel, Mrs., v. 6, p. 367
 Sophia Henwood, v. 6, p. 293
 Vera (Parshall), v. 6, p. 366

Westaway

Agnes, Mrs., v. 6, p. 368
 Ted, v. 6, p. 368
 William, v. 6, p. 368

Wettengel

Earl, Mrs., v. 1, p. 223
 Lillie, v. 1, p. 224

Wheeler

Abbie F. (Eastman), v. 6,
 p. 370

Ann Margaret, v. 6, p. 371
 Charles, v. 6, p. 371
 Charles A., v. 6, p. 370
 Doris, v. 6, p. 370
 Edward C., v. 6, p. 370
 Edward E., v. 6, p. 370
 Elmer, v. 6, p. 371
 Emma Jane, Mrs., v. 6, p. 371
 Frances, v. 6, p. 370
 Helen, v. 6, p. 370
 John Lawrence, v. 6, p. 371
 Margaret Ann, v. 6, p. 371
 Minnie (Chapman), v. 6, p. 370
 Robert, v. 6, p. 371
 William B., v. 6, pp. 371-372
 William W., v. 6, p. 371

Whinnery

Charles, v. 6, p. 373
 Webster S., v. 6, pp. 373, 374
 Webster S., Mrs., v. 6, p. 373

Whipple

W. W., v. 5, p. 221

White

Adam, v. 6, p. 379
 Albert, v. 6, p. 375
 Bess, v. 6, p. 376
 Clement M., v. 6, p. 379
 George Edger, v. 6, p. 380
 Herbert P., v. 6, p. 281
 James L., v. 6, pp. 376-378
 Jessie M. (Keefauver), v. 6,
 p. 379
 Kathryn, v. 6, p. 281
 Laura Louise (Clough), v. 6,
 p. 379
 Lela Phelps, v. 6, p. 281
 Lowell, v. 6, pp. 379-380
 Macaja Letman, v. 6, p. 379
 Mary (Stubbs), v. 6, p. 379
 Patricia, v. 6, p. 379
 Sam, v. 6, pp. 381-382

Whitehead

Bruce S., v. 4, p. 22
 Carlton, v. 4, p. 22
 Dorothy, v. 4, p. 22
 Kenneth, v. 4, p. 22
 Leigh, v. 4, p. 22
 Paul, v. 4, p. 22

Whiteman

Paul, v. 6, pp. 383-384
 Wilburforce J., Mr. and Mrs.,
 v. 6, p. 383

Whiteside

Augusta, v. 6, p. 385
 Fred, v. 6, p. 385
 Fred W., v. 6, p. 385

Mildred (Gillaspy), Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 385

Whiting

Catherine Tracy, v. 5, p. 90
 Christine, v. 5, p. 90
 Frederic A, v. 5, p. 90

Whitley

Carolyn, Mrs., v. 6, p. 100

Wigginton

Elijah Gravette, v. 6, p. 386
 Eliza Anne Bell (West), v. 6,
 p. 386
 Fannie Clark, v. 6, p. 386
 Frank Clark, v. 6, p. 386
 George Crawford, v. 6, p. 386
 Katherine Eliza, v. 6, p. 386
 May Wood, v. 6, pp. 387-388,
 389-390, 391
 William Gravette, v. 6, p. 386
 William Gravette Jr., v. 6,
 p. 386

Wilcox

C. A., v. 6, p. 392
 C. A., Mrs., v. 6, p. 293
 Caroline Lydia (Fenton), v. 6,
 p. 396
 Catherine (Edgcomb), v. 6,
 p. 396
 Edward B., v. 6, p. 394
 Edward John, v. 6, pp. 393-
 394
 Helen B., v. 6, p. 394
 Henrietta, v. 6, p. 397, 399
 Henrietta Styles, Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 400
 J. T., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 395
 John C., v. 6, p. 396
 Lelia (Ayers), v. 6, p. 395
 Lucius M. (Lutie), v. 6, pp.
 397-398, 399, 400
 Martha, v. 6, p. 396
 William, v. 6, p. 396
 William Fenton, v. 6, p. 396

Wiley

Evelyn, Mrs., v. 3, pp. 318, 320

Wilfley

Addie (Farnham), v. 6, p. 402
 Arthur Redman, v. 6, pp. 401-
 402
 Elmer, v. 6, p. 402
 George, v. 6, p. 402
 Lola, v. 6, p. 402
 May, v. 6, p. 402

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Wilhoft

Ada, Mrs., v. 6, p. 403
 Emil, v. 6, p. 403
 Fred Jr., v. 6, p. 403
 Frederick James Sr., v. 6,
 p. 403

Wilkerson

Annie (Kimbrough), v. 6,
 p. 404
 Doris, v. 6, p. 404
 Elizabeth A. (Peeler), v. 6,
 p. 404
 Robert J., v. 6, p. 404
 William Robert, v. 6, p. 404

Willacy

Ella C., Mrs., v. 6, p. 405

Willcox

Charles MacAllister, v. 6,
 pp. 406, 407
 DePazza (Roberts), v. 6,
 pp. 406, 407
 Elaine Daniels, v. 6, pp. 406,
 407
 Mary Louise (Farnsworth),
 v. 6, pp. 406, 407
 Orlando B. (Gen.), v. 6,
 pp. 406-407

Willet

Elizabeth (Leffingwell), v. 4,
 p. 384
 Emily Sanders, v. 4, p. 384
 Jedediah, v. 4, p. 384
 John, v. 4, p. 384
 Joseph Sr., v. 4, p. 384
 Margaret McKay, v. 4, p. 384

Williams

Albert N., v. 6, pp. 408-409
 Albert N. Jr., v. 6, p. 408
 Asabell, v. 4, p. 380
 Ben, v. 6, p. 411
 Bertie, v. 6, p. 409
 Bill, v. 6, p. 411
 Cleta Reid, Mrs., v. 6, p. 414
 D. Lew, v. 6, pp. 410-412
 Daniel D., v. 6, p. 418
 Daniel Jackson, v. 6, p. 418
 Dave, v. 6, p. 411
 Estella (Evans), v. 6, pp. 410-
 412
 George, v. 6, p. 411
 "Harry," v. 6, p. 415
 Jerry S., v. 6, p. 418
 John, v. 4, pp. 378-382; v. 6,
 p. 411
 John Thomas, v. 6, pp. 413-
 414

Karol, v. 6, p. 414
 Katherine (Stockton), v. 6,
 p. 418
 Lena B. (Sniveley), v. 6,
 p. 418
 Lucretia, v. 4, p. 378
 Lycurgas, v. 4, p. 378
 Manley, Mrs., v. 6, p. 319
 Mary, v. 4, p. 380
 Maude, v. 6, p. 415
 Roger, v. 6, p. 411
 Roger L., v. 6, p. 411
 Roger W., v. 6, p. 418
 Sarah, v. 4, pp. 378-382
 T. Arthur, v. 6, pp. 413-414
 Thomas H., v. 6, pp. 415-416
 Tommy, v. 6, p. 414
 "Uncle Billy," v. 6, pp. 410-411
 Wardner, v. 6, p. 417
 Wayne C., v. 6, p. 418
 Wayne Cullen, v. 6, p. 418
 Wayne D., v. 6, p. 418
 William Walter, v. 6, p. 410

Willis

Charles Henry (Dr.), v. 6,
 p. 419
 Charles Henry Jr., v. 6, p. 419
 Emma (Gray), v. 6, p. 419
 Henry, v. 6, p. 419
 Ilah B. (Frost), v. 6, p. 419

Willoughby

Frances, v. 3, p. 188
 Frank, v. 3, p. 188
 Fred, v. 3, p. 188

Wilson

Arthur R., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 420
 Clarence Eugene, v. 6, p. 421
 Creighton, v. 6, p. 423
 Eloise, Mrs., v. 6, p. 422
 Emily Pat (Remler), v. 6,
 p. 423
 Ethel (Reed), v. 6, pp. 423,
 424
 Eugene Collins, v. 6, p. 421
 Gertrude (Kurth), v. 6, pp. 423, 424
 J. F., v. 6, p. 422
 J. M., v. 6, p. 422
 Jessie (McNett), v. 6, pp. 423-424
 M. A., v. 6, p. 423
 Mabel (Wolgamotte), v. 6,
 pp. 423-424

Margaret Jane (Purvis), v. 6,
 p. 421
 Mary, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 423, 424

Winn

Doris, v. 4, p. 325
 Emily Elizabeth Clem, v. 4,
 p. 325
 Harold, v. 4, p. 325
 Joan, v. 4, p. 325
 Leroy, v. 4, p. 325
 Linda, v. 4, p. 325
 Marilyn, v. 4, p. 325
 Roy, v. 4, p. 325

Winne

Gertrude, v. 5, p. 81
 W. W., v. 5, p. 81

Witt

Flora, Mrs., v. 6, p. 425

Witting

Barbara Faye, v. 6, p. 427
 Doris Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 427
 Elizabeth (Braun), v. 6, p. 426
 Faye (Leik), v. 6, p. 427
 Frederick F., v. 6, p. 426
 Margaret Jean, v. 6, p. 427
 Ruth (Drumm), v. 6, p. 427
 Theodore J., v. 6, pp. 426-427

Wolcott

Edward O., v. 6, p. 428
 Frances Metcalfe, Mrs., v. 6,
 p. 428

Wolf

Albines, v. 6, p. 429
 Andrew Thomas, v. 6, p. 429
 Arthur, . 6, p. 429
 Claude Albines, v. 6, p. 429
 Columbus Lafayette, v. 6,
 p. 430
 David Clarence, v. 6, p. 429
 David Thomas, v. 6, p. 429
 Dorris Belle, v. 6, p. 429
 Dulcie Irene, v. 6, p. 429
 Elsie Loretta, v. 6, p. 429
 Gertrude Viola, v. 6, p. 429
 Iza Coral, v. 6, p. 429
 Jessie May, v. 6, p. 429
 Katrina, v. 2, p. 61
 Laura Ann (Kelty), v. 6, p. 429
 Lydia Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 430
 Myra Agnes, v. 6, p. 429
 Olin Francis, v. 6, p. 430
 Oscar, v. 6, p. 429
 Ralph, v. 6, pp. 429-430
 Ruby Del, v. 6, p. 429
 Sarah Elizabeth (Spencer),
 v. 6, p. 429

Pioneer Notebooks Index

- Shirley Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 429
 Viola, v. 6, p. 429
 Walter, v. 6, p. 430
- Wolfe
 Charles Leon, v. 6, p. 431
 Daniel K. Jr., v. 6, p. 431
 Daniel K. Sr., v. 6, p. 431
 Daniel K. III, v. 6, p. 431
 Edward Lloyd, v. 6, p. 431
 Mabel Dorothy (Smith), v. 6, p. 431
 Margaret (Long), v. 6, p. 431
 Margaret Ann (Duffy), v. 6, p. 431
- Womack
 Bob, v. 6, pp. 432-433
 Corilla, v. 6, p. 432
 Dorsey, v. 6, p. 432
 Margaret, v. 6, p. 432
 S. R., v. 6, p. 432
- Wood
 Amelia Estelle, v. 6, pp. 438, 442
 Augustus Blackman, v. 6, p. 437
 Benjamin, v. 6, pp. 435, 439
 Benjamin Franklin, v. 6, pp. 438, 442
 Caroline Brightman, v. 6, pp. 437, 442
 Catharine (Cole), v. 6, pp. 435, 439
 Edwin Chardavoyne, v. 6, pp. 437, 441, 442
 Ernest Brenner, v. 6, p. 441
 George Howard, v. 6, pp. 437, 442
 Georgia Adele, v. 6, p. 437
 Harold M., v. 6, p. 434
 Henrietta Lippincott, v. 6, pp. 437, 442
 Jacob Benjamin, v. 6, pp. 435, 439
 Jacob Vincent, v. 6, p. 437
 John Richardson, v. 6, pp. 435-438, 442
 Joyce Lippincott, v. 6, p. 437
 Mary Carolina, v. 6, pp. 438, 442
 Mary Catharine (Lippincott), v. 6, pp. 435, 439
 Raymond Lippincott, v. 6, p. 442
 Roswell Vernon, v. 6, p. 442
 Rufus Chapman, v. 6, p. 441
 Ruth Lippincott, v. 6, p. 437
- Sarah Bogert, v. 6, pp. 437, 442
 Thomas Lippincott, v. 6, pp. 438, 439-443
 Wilhelmina Brenner, v. 6, p. 439
 Wilma Barclay, v. 6, p. 441
- Woodbury
 Ann Koons, v. 6, pp. 445, 449
 Anna M. (Koons), v. 6, p. 450
 Emma, v. 6, pp. 445, 450
 Frank, v. 6, pp. 444-446, 447, 451
 Mary (Cooper), v. 6, pp. 445-446
 Roger, v. 6, pp. 444-446
 Roger William, v. 6, p. 447
 Roger Williams, v. 6, pp. 448-449, 450-451
- Woods
 Agnes, v. 3, p. 272
 Byron (Rev.), v. 3, p. 272
 Ella (Tousley), v. 3, p. 272
- Woodward
 Benjamin Franklin, v. 6, p. 452
 Charles Farnam, v. 6, p. 452
 Frank L., v. 6, p. 452
 Frank Lincoln, v. 6, p. 452
 Helen Sophia (Bassett), v. 6, p. 452
 May (Farnam), v. 6, p. 452
- Woolley
 Hiram, v. 4, p. 180
 Minerva, v. 4, p. 180
- Woolston
 Benjamin Franklin (Rev.), v. 6, p. 453
 Mildred (Trueblood), v. 6, p. 453
 Paul Livingston, v. 6, p. 453
 Rebecca (Swope), v. 6, p. 453
- Worcester
 George S., Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 454
 Mary (Lewis), v. 6, p. 455
 Mollie (Brown), v. 6, pp. 455-456
 Philip George, v. 6, pp. 454-456
 Tom, v. 6, p. 455
 Willis, v. 6, p. 455
- Work
 Dorcas (Bissell), v. 6, p. 457
 Hubert (Dr.), v. 6, p. 457
 Laura (Arbuckle), v. 6, p. 457
- Moses Thompson, v. 6, p. 457
 Philip, v. 6, p. 457
 Robert Van Horn, v. 6, p. 457
 Tabith Van Horn, v. 6, p. 457
- Working
 Grace, Mrs., v. 6, pp. 458-459
- Works
 Chan, v. 6, p. 461
 Charles Enoch, v. 6, pp. 460-461
 "Chiz," v. 6, pp. 460-461
 Johnny, v. 6, p. 461
 Nora (Coolidge), v. 6, pp. 460-461
- Wormington
 Adrienne, Mrs., v. 6, p. 464
 Hannah Marie, v. 6, pp. 462-463
 Marie, v. 6, p. 464
- Wormwood
 Alice Louise, v. 6, p. 465
 August (Mendum), v. 6, p. 465
 Frank, v. 6, p. 465
 Kenneth M., v. 6, p. 465
 Raymond C., v. 6, p. 465
 Rose B. (Combs), v. 6, p. 465
- Worthington
 William C., v. 6, p. 467
 William "Parson Bill" (Rev.), v. 6, pp. 466-467
- Wright
 Angelina (Richter), v. 6, p. 469
 Chellie (Stevens), v. 6, p. 469
 Chellie Stevens, v. 6, p. 469
 E. Dunbar, v. 6, p. 469
 Edward, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 468
 Frederick Richter, v. 6, p. 469
 Laura Estella (Clay), v. 6, p. 468
- Wulff
 Frank, Mr. and Mrs., v. 6, p. 470
 Willard, v. 6, p. 470
- Wyer
 Glenn, v. 6, p. 473
 Malcolm G., v. 6, pp. 471-472
 Malcolm Glenn (Dr.), v. 6, p. 473
- Y -
- Yager
 Jerome, v. 4, p. 257
 Mabel, Mrs., v. 4, p. 257

Pioneer Notebooks Index

Yarberry

Milton, v. 6, p. 474

Yates

Francis, v. 3, p. 258

Mabel, v. 3, p. 258

Yeager

Billy, v. 4, p. 438

Jack (John) Churcher, v. 6,
p. 475

Rex B. Jr., v. 6, p. 475

Rex Bertram, v. 6, p. 475

Robert Benson, v. 6, p. 475

Ruth Josephine (Churcher),
v. 6, p. 475

Sarah Jane (Smith), v. 6,
p. 475

Thomas L., v. 6, p. 475

Yetter

A., v. 6, p. 478

Aaron (Rev.), v. 6, pp. 476, 479

Elizabeth (Seiler) (Siler), v. 6,
pp. 476, 479

Frank Russell, v. 6, pp. 476,
478, 479

George A., v. 6, pp. 476, 478,
479

Gerald P., v. 6, p. 477, 478, 479

John, v. 6, p. 478

Julie A. (Ade), v. 6, pp. 476,
478, 479

Marjorie Dee, v. 6, pp. 477, 479

Pearl Lee, v. 6, pp. 477, 479

William P. (Pearl), v. 6,
pp. 476-477, 478, 479

William P. Jr., v. 6, pp. 476, 478, 479

Young

Caroline (Studer), v. 6, p. 481

David B., v. 6, p. 480

Dorothy, v. 6, p. 481

Ellen N. (Pett), v. 6, p. 480

Emery Herbert, v. 6, p. 481

Inez, v. 4, p. 419

Irene Xetah (Lawrence), v. 6,
p. 480

Jean, v. 6, p. 481

John, v. 4, p. 419; v. 6,
pp. 480, 481

John Carlton, v. 6, p. 480

John Carlton Jr., v. 6, p. 480

Josephine, v. 6, p. 481

Laura L. (Emery), v. 6, p. 481

Mary (Connor), v. 6, p. 481

Miles R., v. 6, p. 481

Priscilla (Hawley), v. 6, p. 480

Rush Lawrence, v. 6, p. 480

W. H., v. 6, p. 481

W. J., v. 6, p. 481

William Henry, v. 6, p. 481

Younger

Bruce, v. 6, pp. 432-433

- Z -

Zang

Adolph Frank, v. 6, pp. 482-
483

Adolph Frank Jr., v. 6, p. 483

Adolph Joseph, v. 6, p. 482

Elizabeth (Hurlebaus), v. 6,
p. 482

Florence Genevieve

(Coffman), v. 6, p. 483

Fredericka (Kaufman), v. 6,
p. 482

Gertrude, v. 6, p. 482

John, v. 6, p. 482

Louise Adelgunda, v. 6, p. 482

Marie Annette, v. 6, p. 483

Minnie Elizabeth, v. 6, p. 482

Minnie Louise (Vogt), v. 6,
p. 482

Philip, v. 6, pp. 484-485

Philip Adolph, v. 6, p. 482

Zern

Eva Bella, v. 2, p. 218

Solomon, v. 2, p. 218

William, v. 2, p. 218

CLARENCE HENRY ADAMS

Date: August 21, 1937

No. 2 B850 D5 E16 F3
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Clarence Henry Adams, President, International Trust Company,
Denver, Colorado

Clarence Henry Adams*, born at Black Earth, Wisconsin, October 14, 1879; son of Frank and Emma Jane (Wilson) Adams.

Frank Adams, born at Blue Mounds, Wisconsin; son of John and Eliza (Blanchard) Adams, the former of whom was a native of Kentucky. John Adams, who moved to Wisconsin in 1832, was a cattle dealer, and merchant. Frank Adams, who was a merchant, moved in 1877 to Colorado, settling in 1882 at Dennison, and in 1893 in Denver, in which city he died March 26, 1927. His wife, Emma Jane (Wilson) Adams, who was born at Black Earth, Wisconsin, died February 26, 1933. Her parents, Henry and Mary (Homewood) Wilson, natives of England, emigrated to America, and settled in Wisconsin. Henry Wilson was a farmer.

Clarence Henry Adams, graduated from Yale University, A. B., in 1902. He became associated with the Colorado Ice & Cold Storage Co., in Denver, in 1903. He was vice-president of the firm, 1917-27, and has been president since 1927. He was associated with the Proudfit Ormsby Commission Co., in Denver, 1905-17, and has been president of the International Trust Co. since June 1932. Mr. Adams has been a member of the board of directors of the First National Bank of Denver since 1933. He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Denver Club; Denver Country Club; Denver Athletic Club; Polo Club; Mile High Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association.

On August 15, 1905, Clarence Henry Adams married Eugenia H. McFarlane, who was born at Central City, Colorado, daughter of William O. and Mary E. McFarlane. Mr. and Mrs. Adams are the parents of 2 children: (1) Clarence H., Jr., who is secretary of the Colorado Ice & Cold Storage Co. He is married, and is the father of 3 children: Arthur Ware, Clarence H. (III), and William Slayton. (2) Eugene Hale, who is associated with the First National Bank of Denver.

*For further data regarding Clarence Henry Adams, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-37), vol. 19, p. 137.

Mrs. C. H. Adams, Jr. D.A.R. #245370; #87253

HERMAN RILEY ADAMS

In early life a farmer, as was his father before him, H. R. Adams later entered the world of business and finance to which he was more strongly attracted, and in these fields achieved a career of notable success. He became expert in all phases of mining operations, and, moving to Denver from his home in Wisconsin, opened his office as a broker, dealing in mining stocks and later also in oil securities. Mr. Adams became widely known throughout the West for his great business ability and many successes, but in spite of the honors which came to him he never lost the quiet modesty and charm which were the distinguishing features of his character.

Mr. Adams was born August 30, 1860, in Walworth, Wisconsin, a son of Seth and Sarah (Storey) Adams. His father, born in Schoharie County, New York, a son of Riley and Catherine (Felter) Adams, and a member of an old and highly respected New York State family, was a farmer until the time of his death.

Herman Riley Adams attended the public schools of his birthplace and the academy there known as Big Foot Academy. When he completed his education, in deference to his father's wishes, he took up the occupation of farming and to this work devoted himself until his thirtieth year. At that time, however, he bought a store at Walworth and established himself in business as a general merchant, this arrangement continuing for a period of twelve years. Meanwhile Mr. Adams had interested himself in various Colorado mining projects, and in attending to his interests, made many trips to that State where he gradually became very well known. By the year 1906, he had risen to so preëminent a position in mining affairs that Governor James O. Davidson of Wisconsin appointed him Wisconsin delegate to the mining congress held at Denver from October 17 to 19 of that year. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Adams removed to Denver, where he thenceforth made his home, engaging extensively in the promotion of various mining ventures which commended themselves to him, and in the buying and selling of mining stocks. He established his offices in the Mining Exchange Building, and in the course of years gradually enlarged his interests to include oil properties and securities. He was very successful in this enterprise, his sound judgment in the matter of property values and business trends, together with his absolute integrity in all his relations with others, winning him the confidence of the entire community and a volume of business of gratifying proportions.

In earlier years a member of the Democratic party, he later supported Republican principles, but in his mind the character and ability of the candidate counted for rather more than mere party affiliation. He was always vitally interested in civic welfare and growth, supporting worthy projects, both civic and charitable, from whatever source. Fraternally, Mr. Adams was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, at Walworth, Wisconsin, and was also a member of the Modern Woodmen. He was of a strongly religious turn of mind, worshiping in the faith of the Baptist church, and no matter how pressed for time he might be, he found opportunity for church activities and for the renewed inspiration which came to him thereby.

On December 15, 1881, at Walworth, Wisconsin, Herman Riley Adams married Emily Baker Pearce, daughter of George Delavan and Emily Jane (Baker) Pearce, and a member of a prominent New York State agricultural family. Her grandparents were William and Amy (Dodge) Pearce, of Utica, New York. Mrs. Adams, a woman of profound culture and sensitive tastes, was a source of constant inspiration to her husband in all his work. A charming hostess of inherent wit and vivacity, she made the home a happy gathering place for family and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Adams became the parents of one child, a son, Royal Pearce, prominent in Denver affairs, and a successful broker of the city. He married Alveretta O'Connell, and they are the parents of two children, Marjorie and R. Howard.

Herman Riley Adams died at his home in Denver on January 16, 1923. His passing was a severe loss to the community in which he lived and to his many friends and acquaintances in every part of the country. He was a man of very definite opinions, which were arrived at, however, only after mature deliberation, and honestly believed. His high ideals of conduct, utter probity, and great personal warmth and charm, won him the affectionate esteem of all those with whom he came in contact, and of the community at large, which only at his death, perhaps, came to realize the extent of its deep affection for him, and the constant value of his presence.

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 43-44

JOSE PERRY ADAMS

Jose Perry Adams, president of the Western Livestock Commission Company, of Denver, is a seasoned plainsman and ranchman, and one of the heaviest, most energetic and successful live stock dealers in the west. He is also the owner of large ranches in Nebraska and Colorado, and a man who carries into all his operations the generosity and swing of the broad out-of-door life of which he has been a creature since an early period in his boyhood.

Born in Brunswick, Missouri, May 31, 1847, Mr. Adams is a son of George Francis and Cynthia (Lane) Adams, his father being a widely known live stock man of Missouri. When he was eight years of age the boy left behind him the Brunswick public school and went to Kansas, participating in the life of its plains for eight years. In 1864 he located at Denver, driving a stage for several months from Julesburg to Fort Morgan, and afterward securing employment as a government freighter to Laramie, Salt Lake City and other western points. He remained thus engaged until 1868, when he located on a cattle ranch in Douglas county, Colorado, and after working there for some two years entered the field as an independent raiser and dealer in the same county. Twenty years in this line made him financially easy and enabled him to locate in Denver as a metropolitan figure in the live stock commission business. In 1890 Mr. Adams founded his business there under the name of the J. P. Adams Live Stock Commission Company, and in April, 1906, the company was changed to the Western Live Stock Commission Company, with Mr. Adams as president and manager; B. S. Wyatt, vice president, and M.W. Jones, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Adams owns a majority of stock in the concern, which is one of the heaviest operators in the state in the business of buying, selling and shipping of live stock. It handles annually about 35,000 head of cattle, 50,000 sheep and 20,000 hogs.

Mr. Adams has always enjoyed the stir of politics, and while a resident of Douglas county was elected by the Democrats for two terms to the office of sheriff, also serving for two terms as county commissioner. He is a member of the Denver C. of C. and in the secret and benevolent orders is affiliated with the Fraternal Brotherhood and the Denver Lodge No. 17, B.P.O.E. In his religious faith he is a Presbyterian.

In 1869 Mr. Adams married Miss Susan M. Pugh, daughter of Alexander Pugh, of Brunswick, Missouri, and the three children born to them are Alice E.; Mary Joe, wife of James F. Collins, of Denver, and Edna M. Adams.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 283-284

HARRY ADLER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Harry Adler
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Harry Adler, born in London, England, February 11, 1894

Name of father: Bernard Adler, a native of Russia

Name of mother: Mildred Rosenbloom, a native of Russia

Attended school or college: Grammar schools in England and Milwaukee, Wisconsin; High School in Milwaukee.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: July 1910

Married: Yes, at Denver, Colorado on May 30, 1917

Name of wife: Annabelle Atlivaick, daughter of Eli Atlivaick and Gertrude Kopel

Names of children and years of birth: Bernice Frances, June 16, 1921; Gertrude Sylvia, October 2, 1924; Lorraine Susan, May 22, 1927

Avocation: Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Arvada Electric Company; Fiction Critic, Author & Journalist

Biography File

JOHN AIELLO

John Aiello, identified with the banking business at Trinidad, is one of the prominent representatives of the financial interest in the state and to this position he has attained through the fit utilization of the innate talents which are his. He is pre-eminently a man of affairs and one who is wielding a wide and beneficial influence. A native of southern Italy, he was born in Altilia, in the province of Cosenza, September 8, 1864, his father, John Baptiste Aiello, being a property owner and merchant of that place. In the schools of Italy the son acquired his education as civil engineer, and in 1881, when in his eighteenth year, he came to the United States, settling at Eagle Pass, Texas. There he remained for about seven years in active connection with mercantile houses, and in 1887 he removed to Colorado, settling at Trinidad. He now felt that his previous experience as well as his capital justified him in embarking in business on his own account, and for some time he conducted mercantile and banking interests in the coal camps of this district. He then established The Southern Colorado Mercantile Company, in February, 1904, and became president and general manager. He is also owner of The Aiello Dry Goods Company and a director of The Trinidad National Bank and the Philip Schneider Brewing Company. He is likewise president of The Southern Colorado Lumber Company, also owner of the Aiello Block, and is interested in other enterprises in Trinidad.

His labors are of an important character, contributing in substantial measure to general development and progress as well as to individual success. He belongs to the little group of distinctively representative business men who have been the pioneers in inaugurating and building up the chief industries of this section of the country. He early had the sagacity and prescience to discern the eminence which the future had in store for this great and growing country, and, acting in accordance with the dictates of his faith and judgment, he was garnered in the fullness of time the generous harvest which is the just recompense of indomitable industry, spotless integrity, and marvelous enterprise. He is now connected with many extensive and important business interests, all of which feel the stimulus of his sound judgment and active co-operation. In 1901, while touring in Europe, Mr. Aiello was married to Miss Carolina Anselmo, also a native of Italy, and they became the parents of five children: Grace, Roger, Annie, Elvira and Mary Silvia.

Mr. Aiello is identified with the Elks Lodge of Trinidad, the Trinidad Club, and the Denver Athletic Club. His political allegiance is given to the Republican party, but while he is never remiss in the duties of citizenship, he does not seek office, preferring to concentrate his time and energies upon his business affairs. He is today the only Italian private banker doing regular banking business in the United States, being a member of the American Bankers' Association and the Colorado State Bankers' Association. Aside from his other interests, he is agent for all steamship companies between the United States and Europe. For a number of years he has now been classed with the most prominent and progressive citizens of this state. He may well be termed one of the founders of Trinidad, for he has been the promoter of many of its leading business enterprises, and the growth and development of a city depend upon its commercial and industrial activity. His connection with any undertaking insures a prosperous outcome of the same, for it is in his nature to carry forward to successful completion whatever he is associated with. He has earned for himself an enviable reputation as a careful man of business, and in his dealings is known for his prompt and honorable methods, which have won him the deserved and unbounded confidence of his fellowmen.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 90-92

LEONARD L. AITKEN

Hon. Leonard L. Aitken, vice-president of the Pike's Peak Fuel Company, and interested in numerous business enterprises in Colorado, is a native of Viola, Illinois, born September 3, 1871, being a son of Richard and Mary (Kinnie) Aitken. The father was a hardware merchant in Viola. The son was educated at the public schools and high schools of his native town and also attended the Morgan Park Academy and Kent College of Law at Chicago.

In September, 1898, he saw visions of prosperity and success in the far West and came to Colorado, locating at Colorado Springs, where he acted as secretary for his uncle, J. R. McKinnie, but after a few years he engaged in business on his own account and is now connected with the Pike's Peak Fuel Company, and is its vice-president. He is president of the Dante Mining Company of Cripple Creek and other similar enterprises.

Politically, Mr. Aitken is a Republican and is at present chairman of the Republican central committee of his county. In 1903 he was elected as a member from El Paso and Teller counties, to the fourteenth general assembly of the state of Colorado. He is a member of both the Woodmen of the World and Modern Woodmen of America.

In 1899 Mr. Aitken was married to Jennie Pollock, daughter of J. W. Pollock and wife of Cedarville, Illinois. They have two children--Regina and Leonard L. As a citizen and prosperous business man, Mr. Aitken ranks among the best class within his state.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 275

PHILIP KNOX ALEXANDER

Date: August 28, 1937

No. 2 B858 D5 E16 F6
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Philip Knox Alexander, Vice-President, The First National Bank of Denver, Seventeenth and Stout Streets, Denver, Colorado

Philip Knox Alexander*, son of Hugh J. and Jennie Louise (King) Alexander; born in Trinidad, Colorado, September 29, 1891.

Hugh J. Alexander*, son of William Knox and Ann Elizabeth (Fore) Alexander, was born in Fairfield, Iowa, August 20, 1851. He attended school in Fairfield, and later was deputy clerk of Jefferson Co., Iowa, 1 year, subsequently moving to Colorado Springs, where after 1 year, he became teller in the First National Bank. After 18 months, he moved to Lake City, where he was assistant cashier of the Miners & Merchants Bank, 3 years, and cashier, 4 years. In 1886, he moved to Trinidad, Colo., where he served as cashier of the First National Bank, of which he later became president. In June 1902, he settled in Denver, where he became cashier of the Continental National Bank, of which he later was president. This bank later was known as the Capital National Bank, and subsequently was merged with The First National Bank of Denver. Mr. Alexander served as vice-president of the bank until 1915, following which he was president until his death, which occurred December 8, 1928. His wife, Jennie Louise (King) Alexander, whom he married September 27, 1880, was born in Warren, Pennsylvania. She died November 7, 1936. They were the parents of 2 children: (1) Sidney King, who was born December 11, 1884, and died April 11, 1902. (2) Philip Knox.

William Knox Alexander, father of Hugh J., was born in Pennsylvania, and later moved to Iowa. He was a manufacturer of boots and shoes. He was a soldier in the Civil War. His wife, Ann Elizabeth (Fore) Alexander, was born in Pennsylvania. They were the parents of 6 children, 3 of whom were sons.

Philip Knox Alexander, graduated from Dartmouth College, B. S., in 1915. He then became a clerk in The First National Bank of Denver. On September 15, 1917, he enlisted for service in the World War. He was commissioned a captain in the Field Artillery, and was honorably discharged December 5, 1918. He then returned to the employ of the First National Bank of Denver, with which he since has been associated. After the war, he was made assistant cashier of the bank, and in 1925, he was elected vice-president, which position he since has held. Since 1926, he has also been a director of the bank. He is a director of the Denver Union Stock Yard Co., the Merchants Fire Insurance Co., and the Kuner-Empson Co. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: Denver Country Club; Mile High Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. His hobbies are hunting, and farming. Mr. Alexander owns 9 ranches in Colo.

On May 24, 1916, Mr. Alexander married Ruth Kassler, who was born in Denver, Colorado, daughter of E. S. Kassler. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander are the parents of 3 children: (1) Philip Knox, Jr. (2) Hugh K. (3) Bruce D.

*For further data regarding Philip Knox Alexander, and his father, Hugh J. Alexander, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, pp. 314, and 94, respectively. Also for further data regarding Hugh J. Alexander, see Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 68.

JOHN LEONARD ALKIRE

Realtor

There has been no more delightful character in the business history of Colorado than John Leonard Alkire, of Denver, who lived in the city and nearby for more than fifty years and whose reputation for the highest forms of integrity was spotless.

Reared in the atmosphere that seems to breed lofty ideals, his boyhood spent in a community where the laws were in embryotic form and each individual, in a measure, was compelled to depend upon his fellow's instinct of fair dealing, he never faltered from pursuance of his life work along those lines. No man dealing with him needed to ask a bond of assurance. His individual statement was sufficient, always for it came to be known that his hatred of dubious methods was his deepest dislike. Mentally and morally he was above the average citizen, in his native wisdom he had few equals, was an independent thinker in public affairs and carried out the tenets of his faith according to what he believed to be the best interests of the whole body politic. Chivalrous, generous, sympathetic and courageous, he attracted men because of these attributes and held fast the multitude of friends he made during the course of a long life of rectitude and industry.

Born in Sweetwater, Illinois, January 15, 1864, he was a son of Leonard and Mary A. (Bracken) Alkire. His father was a farmer and stock raiser in Illinois, later removing to Denver, where he became a prosperous merchant and successful ranchman on property he purchased nearby. He was a descendant of one of seven brothers who came to America from Holland in the early days of the Republic and separated in their search for fortune, settling in various sections of the country. After a few years working his ranch near Denver he purchased a partnership in a coffee and tea business in the city, operating wholesale and retail, and it was in this enterprise that his son, John, after an elementary education in the public schools of Denver and a brief course at the Denver University, first undertook business. He later dissociated himself from that line and established himself as a real estate operator, buying, selling and building, gradually building up a profitable business and gaining for himself an honorable name and an ample fortune.

For a number of years he was a member of the Denver Board of Health and usually voted the Democratic ticket, but was never held to any political bond in which he did not thoroughly believe. He was a true sportsman, a keen follower of Izaak Walton and delighted in the recreations of outdoor life. He died in Denver, Colorado, January 10, 1926.

John Leonard Alkire married in DeKalb, Illinois, September 1, 1886, Edith V. Miller, daughter of William H. Miller, whose ancestors came from Germany to America in the early period of the Republic. He accumulated considerable capital and retired from active business. Mr. and Mrs. Alkire were the parents of a son, Leonard H., a Denver business man of high reputation, who has one son, Leonard M., now in the senior class of the Denver High School.

Mr. Alkire was himself of such heroic mental mould that he openly bespoke his exasperation when he observed others indulging in unethical business operations. He had a highly developed business mind, an unusual intellectual equipment and an abiding consideration for the weak and for women and children. His passing removed one of the most picturesque and beloved characters that has ornamented the history of Colorado.

Mrs. Edith V. (Miller) Alkire is a representative of one of the best families of Illinois, cultured, refined, gracious and hospitable. Beautiful and vivacious, even with her years, she presides with charm and dignity over one of the most sumptuous homes in the exclusive residential district of Denver. She has an unusually attractive personality and the happy faculty of adapting herself to any environment, radiating happiness through her own exceptional charm. She is modern in all of her feelings, witty, a delightful conversationalist and a staunch friend and liberal contributor to all worthy causes.

[Article includes portraits of both John L. Alkire and Edith V. Alkire.]

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 110-111

EDWIN S. ALLEN

A man of singular force of will, tenacity of purpose and strength of character, Edwin S. Allen is justly accorded a high place among the leading citizens of Loveland. Active and influential in public affairs, he has held important offices in both city and county, having served Loveland as justice of the peace for six years, as a member of the city council for nine years, and as mayor, while in 1897 he represented Larimer county in the State Legislature. He is now devoting his time to the practice of law. . . . A son of Jabez Allen, he was born, April 19, 1852, in Peru, South America.

Jabez Allen, a native of Lancaster, England, spent his early life in his native country, and there married Catherine Arnold, who was born in Birmingham, England. As a glass manufacturer and an expert glass cutter, he accumulated a fortune, and sometime during the "thirties" he gave to his partner about $100,000 to invest in New Zealand industries. Six months later, accompanied by his family, which was then small, he went in a sailing vessel to New Zealand, intending to embark in mercantile pursuits in that country, but on his arrival his former partner refused to recognize him and Mr. Allen was deliberately cheated out of his entire capital. Left thus with limited means, he took passage for South America, stopping first in Chili, then in the Argentine Republic, and finally drifted to Peru. There he made money in mining, and was afterwards employed in Custom House brokerage.

In 1855, accompanied by his wife and three children, he came to the United States, sailing around Cape Horn, at the end of five and one-half months landing in Baltimore, Maryland. The winter of 1855 and 1856 he was engaged in the hotel business in Chicago, and the following spring established himself as a land agent in Western Iowa. He subsequently turned his attention to farming and soon after the establishment of the town of Onawa opened a store of general merchandise within its limits, and was there engaged in mercantile and agricultural pursuits until his death, in 1870.

Brought up on a farm, Edwin S. Allen acquired those habits of industry, forethought and careful expenditure that constituted a good foundation for his future success, and though his educational advantages were of necessity meagre, he made the best use of what he had. . . . he came to Colorado, locating in Denver, where he learned the trade of saddle and harness maker, and continued it until 1892, when he sold out. During this time he had acted as secretary for various irrigation companies, and for fourteen years as secretary of the Home Supply Ditch Company. He likewise read law, and did other law office work, and in April, 1895, was admitted to the bar. He has since been actively and prosperously employed in the practice of his profession, has served as secretary of several irrigation companies, and at the same time has been interested, with his eldest son, in general farming.

Mr. Allen married, in 1876, Mary E. Perkins, a daughter of Jeremiah Perkins, of Connecticut, and of their union four children have been born, namely: Howard K., engaged in farming near Loveland; Russell K., of Denver; Josephine M., and Edwin P.

Politically Mr. Allen is a straight-forward Republican, ever loyal to the interests of his party. He is a member of the Larimer County Bar Association, and belongs to Loveland Lodge, No. 1051, B.P.O.E., of which he is exalted ruler; to the Woodmen of the World, and to the Knights of Pythias.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 151-152

DR. HENLY W. ALLEN

Dr. Henly W. Allen, of Boulder, Colorado, . . . has the honor of being one of the founders of a remarkably virile and progressive community. Coming to Boulder county in 1865, . . . he founded its first newspaper, erected the first drug store in Boulder . . .

Dr. Allen had his birth near Chicago, Illinois, on the 28th of December, 1838, and is a son of Rev. Alexander P. and Cornelia (Hayden) Allen, his parents both dying in 1880. His father, who was a native of Connecticut and a Methodist minister, came to Colorado in 1860, locating successively at Denver and Boulder. At the latter place he acquired considerable public prominence, serving as probate judge and county commissioner for a decade prior to his death.

Henly W. was educated, first in the public schools of his native locality, and afterward at Lawrence University, Appleton, Wisconsin, one of the leading Methodist institutions of an educational nature in the northwest. In 1860 he graduated from that institution with the degree of A.B., and three years afterward his alma mater conferred the degree of A.M. upon him. In the meantime he had commenced to teach school and study medicine, and in 1862 was matriculated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, commencing practice at Weyauwega, Waupaca county, Wisconsin, and remaining there until his removal to Colorado in 1864.

Dr. Allen commenced practice in the territory at Black Hawk, Gilpin county, but in the following year removed to Boulder county and to the field of professional work which he has since occupied and expanded. In the early years of his residence he put his hand and mind to many tasks, . . .

He took up land and, with the assistance of his growing sons, cultivated and improved it; he engaged in surveying, and did any other kind of work which was in demand in the new country and which could be managed by his ingenuity and versatility. Eventually Dr. Allen discovered that his farm was underlaid with coal and, in partnership with Dr. Bond, he profitably developed the property for several years. He also established the first distinctive drug business in Boulder . . .

Dr. Allen is an active member of the American Medical Association and the Colorado State and the Boulder County Medical societies. He is an old and still an enthusiastic Mason, being initiated to the order in 1860, as a member of Waverly Lodge No. 52, of Appleton, Wisconsin. He joined the chapter at Waterloo, that state, and upon becoming a resident of Boulder was received into Chapter No. 7 of that place, being now a member of Mt. Sinai Commandery. He is also identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

In 1860 Dr. Allen was united in marriage with Miss Mildred McNeel, daughter of James McNeel, of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. Of the thirteen children born to them, nine are living, as follows: Almeda Elizabeth, now Mrs. W. W. McNeff, whose husband is a resident of Phoenix, Arizona; Dr. James Orfila, who is a graduate of Gross Medical College, Denver, and a practitioner located at Bellevue, Iowa; Arthur, Edward A. and Stephen Herbert Allen, all in the drug business at Sand Point, Idaho; Charles Ellery and Henly W., residents of Walsenburg, Colorado; Daisy Mary, Mrs. W. A. Johnson, of Boulder; and Guy Leroy Allen, an assayer, of Boulder. The doctor and Mrs. Allen have fifteen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 286-287

DR. JOHN QUINCY ALLEN

A leading medical practitioner of Montrose as well as a well known Republican leader of the county, Dr. John Q. Allen is a native of Indiana, born at West Newton, October 21, 1854. His parents were Preston and Susanna (Jessup) Allen, his father being a native of Ohio and a farmer and lumberman, who died October 30, 1882. His mother was born in Indiana and died September 1, 1907, at the age of eighty years.

Dr. Allen received his education, preliminary to his professional courses, in the public schools of Valley Mills and Fairfield, Indiana, at the Bloomingdale Academy and at the Danville (Indiana) Normal School. In the fall of 1880 he entered the Indiana Medical College of Indianapolis, from which he was graduated with the class of 1883. Although he had enjoyed considerable experience at the Indianapolis city hospital before completing his medical studies, the Doctor commenced active practice at West Newton, his birthplace, in partnership with an uncle, and then, after spending about a year in looking about for a suitable location, in 1886 located at Plainfield. His residence and practice of five years at that place were terminated in 1891, when he went to New York to pursue a post graduate course in the Polyclinic of that city, his studies being devoted to general medicine and diseases of the skin. Dr. Allen then located at Denver, Colorado, but remained there only a short time, then located at Creede, where he remained for about three years. In 1894 he began practice at Montrose, where he continued until 1900, at which time he assumed the superintendency of the hospital at Telluride, established at that point for the benefit of the miners. After a time he returned to Montrose, where he is now engaged in successful practice.

His personal popularity has drawn him to a large extent into politics, which with his professional ability has brought him the coronership of San Miguel county for one term and that of Montrose county for four terms. This record is a decided tribute to the doctor's present work, as he is a strong Republican, while the county is normally Democratic . . . Dr. Allen is an active member of the American Medical Association and the Montrose County and the Colorado State Medical Societies.

In 1888 he was married at Plainfield, Indiana, to Miss Sarah M. Fredenburg, daughter of William Fredenburg, a resident of Conboy, Ohio, and their three children are: Mary, Florence and Alice Allen . . .

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 260-261

PLINY WILKINS ALLEN

Pliny W. Allen, president of the well known Abstract and Investment Company, is an energetic and able citizen of Greeley, widely interested and prominently concerned in the development of the various irrigation and financial interests of this section of the state. He is a native of Sharon, Wisconsin, born August 5, 1867, son of Levi E. and Carrie (Wilkins) Allen. His father, who was a native of New York and a farmer by occupation, was quite prominently identified with the politics of Walworth county, Wisconsin, and died January 3, 1905. The mother, who before her marriage was Carrie Wilkins, is a native of the Badger state and now resides at Long Beach, California

Mr. Allen received his literary education in the public schools of Sharon and Elkhorn, Wisconsin, and at the age of fifteen took a business and shorthand course in an institution at Minneapolis, Minnesota. As a stenographer he followed various lines of business until 1888, when he became a resident of Denver, Colorado. After a year and a half in that city he returned to Elkhorn, Wisconsin, and entered the abstract business, but three years afterward his desire for a western life returned to him and he relocated at Denver. He followed the real estate business in that city for about a year and in August, 1893, became a resident of Greeley and in association with his father purchased the business of the Weld County Abstract Company. Until 1900 the younger Mr. Allen was secretary of the company and in that year was elected president. He is also a director and secretary of the Consolidated Hillsborough Ditch Company and of the Boulder and Weld Reservoir Company; director of the Gilcrest State Bank and is ex-treasurer of the Antero and Lost Park Reservoir Company. He is a large owner of farming lands in Thompson valley and altogether one of the strong factors in the development of the leading interests of Weld county.

In politics a Republican, he has been active and influential in its advancement and has served for two terms as county treasurer, being first elected in 1906. His prominence in fraternity matters may be estimated from the fact that he is identified with the following: As a Mason, with Occidental Lodge No. 20, A.F. and A.M., of Greeley; Greeley Chapter No. 13, R.A.M.; Hiram Council No. 7; Colorado Consistory No. 1, and El Jebel Temple of the Mystic Shrine, having attained the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite; also a member of the Woodmen of the World, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks (Greeley Lodge No. 809), and is an active member of the Greeley and Commercial clubs. In his religious belief he is a member of the Congregational church.

In 1895 Mr. Allen married Miss Florence M. Gillett, a daughter of M.V.B. Gillett, of Greeley, and their three children are: Rispah G., Lee and Van G. Allen.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 109-110

WORTH ALLEN

Date: December 18, 1937

No. 2 B956 D5 E16 F139
MAS/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Worth Allen, Special Assistant Attorney General of the U. S. Courthouse,
Denver, Colorado

Worth Allen, son of Littlebury W. and Margaret (Durham) Allen; born at Greensburg, Kentucky, November 9, 1887.

Littlebury W. Allen, son of William Austin and Mary (Moody) Allen, and grandson of Littlebury Allen, was born in Kentucky. He was a merchant at Greensburg, Kentucky, several years. He died in 1894, and is buried at Greensburg, Kentucky. His wife, Margaret (Durham) Allen, daughter of Joseph S. and Nannie (Millem) Durham, was a native of Kentucky. She died in 1892, and is buried at Greensburg, Kentucky.

Worth Allen, attended public schools, at Greensburg, Kentucky, and in 1908, graduated from Georgetown (Kentucky) College, with an A. B. degree. He graduated with a J. D. degree from the University of Chicago Law School, in 1912, in which year, he entered the practice of law in Chicago, where he remained until 1918. In that year, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he established a law practice in 1919. Mr. Allen served as a member of the Public Utilities Commission from 1927 to 1935, at which time he resigned the position. He was appointed special assistant Attorney General of the U. S., on Oct. 15, 1937. Mr. Allen, who served as Democratic chairman of Denver County, from 1922 to 1924 and from 1926 to 1928, has been chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, since 1934. He is a member of the following: Masonic Lodge; Kiwanis Club (past president); Kappa Alpha, and Phi Delta Phi (fraternities); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Mt. View Presbyterian Church (trustee). His hobby is gardening.

In June 1917, Worth Allen married Josephine Shedd, who was born in Chicago. Children: Martha, born in 1920. (2) Dorothy, born in 1921.

THOMAS BANBURY ALLIN

Industrialist

Successful as a farmer in Iowa for a quarter of a century, Thomas B. Allin moved to Colorado where his activities in the development of its natural resources made him one of the foremost industrialists of the State and one of its most worthy citizens.

His success was due primarily to the admirable traits of his character. He was a cool judge, a careful operator, industrious where industry would count, but never fatiguing his brain or muscles in useless expenditure of effort. He studied a subject carefully and then took the most direct route to his objective. He was refined, generous and sympathetic, and courteous to all with whom he came in contact. His ideas were progressive, and what he found for his hands to do, he made them do to the best of his ability. His friends were many, for he seldom lost one, and men were attracted to him by reason of his personality and the integrity of his every action.

He was born in Gambier, Ohio, June 14, 1840, son of William Allin, of Berkshire, England, and Mary Susan (Banbury) Allin, members of distinguished English families. His parents, with their first child, left England in 1834, and settled first at Gambier, Ohio, later moving to Chillicothe, Missouri, and then to Iowa City, Iowa. He was educated in the public schools.

Urged by his intensely patriotic feelings, he joined the Federal forces early in 1861, and was assigned to Company H, 2d Iowa Cavalry, upon its organization at Davenport, Iowa. He was a member of this organization throughout its existence, reenlisting in it March 1, 1864, and being mustered out as a sergeant at Selma, Alabama, September 19, 1865, when the regiment was disbanded. He was particularly proud of his military service, much of which had been on detached duty at the headquarters of his regiment or brigade, and under the immediate orders of the commanders of those organizations, for whom he performed many important and hazardous missions.

Upon leaving the military service he returned to his home in Iowa. On February 1, 1866, he married Catherine Detwiler, daughter of Christian Detwiler, a farmer and gunsmith living near Iowa City, and Caroline (Ham) Detwiler. To this union four children were born: 1. Burton Lepley, now a merchant in Pasadena, California. 2. Catherine, deceased. 3. Norra, now the wife of Dr. C. E. Dakin of Mason City, Iowa, and 4. George R., now an officer of the Regular Army.

With his bride, he located on a farm near Iowa City, Iowa. During the twenty-five years he remained in that location, he built up a prosperous business establishment in agriculture and stock raising, but the urge for broader fields caused him to dispose of his property in Iowa and move to Denver, Colorado. Foreseeing the possibilities of the vast undeveloped resources in the great mountain ranges of the State, he purchased large areas of ranch, timber and coal lands in the vicinity of Steamboat Springs, and initiated their development. His prosperity grew with the years, as did that of those who became associated with him in the enterprises in which he engaged, and he became one of the best known industrialists in the State. His death occurred October 2, 1912, at Mason City, Iowa.

He was an independent in politics, but usually voted for the Republican candidates for office. Often urged to accept nominations for office, he invariably declined, preferring to keep to his chosen occupation. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and attended many of its encampments. He was also a member of the order of Free and Accepted Masons, the Knights Templar, and the Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Unostentatious, quiet and chivalrous, Thomas B. Allin's home was his pride, and he and his charming wife were delightful hosts. His kindliness to all was one of his finest characteristics. A tender husband, a generous father, a constant friend, he was one of Colorado's splendid citizens.

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 106-108

PERCY R. ALSDORF

Percy R. Alsdorf, of Central City, one of the organizers of the local C. of C., has held the position of secretary since the founding of that body. He is also actively engaged in mining and engineering . . . Born August 28, 1875, he is a native of Utica, Ohio, and a son of Robert B. and Alice (Stevens) Alsdorf. His parents were both natives of Ohio in which state for many years his father was a farmer.

Percy R. Alsdorf . . . is a graduate of the Ohio State University, from which he received the degree of M.E. in 1896. In July, of that year, he located at Central City, Colorado, where he at once engaged in assaying and mining engineering. Since coming to Colorado he has also secured important mining interest himself and in a financial, as well as engineering way, has been identified with them. He . . . served for some time as secretary of the Gilpin County Mining Association. His most important work in this locality, however, has been as the founder and only secretary of the Gilpin County Chamber of Commerce, an organization which has done much to develop the local interests. Fraternally Mr. Alsdorf is a member of Central City Commandery No. 2, K.T.; Central City Chapter No. 1, R.A.M.; Central Lodge No. 6, A.F. & A.M., and El Jebel Temple of the Mystic Shrine. In 1908 he married Miss Mary Reed, a daughter of Mrs. Esther Reed, of Princeton, Illinois.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 55

FRITZ JACOB ALTVATER

Fritz Jacob Altvater, present clerk and recorder of Gilpin county, is one of the leading Democrats of this section of the state and became quite well known as a journalist before he assumed his present duties. He is a native of Central City, Colorado, born April 15, 1876, son of Henry and Magdalena (Mök) Altvater, both parents being natives of Germany. The father emigrated to Colorado in 1865 and the mother in 1873, both locating in Central City, where they were married in 1875. The father was a plasterer and died in 1906.

Fritz Altvater, as he is generally known, is the eldest of seven children and received a grammar and high school education in the schools of his native city. He then learned the printer's trade, securing employment at Central City with the Register-Call and then going to the Denver Post in 1895, and in the following year returning to Central City. He did not, however, return to the "case," but engaged in mining and thus continued until 1898. He was then in a position to enter newspaper work in a responsible position and in the year named assumed the management of the Central City Observer, later becoming editor and proprietor of that publication and continued thus until 1904. In the fall of 1903 Mr. Altvater was elected to fill the unexpired term of county clerk and recorder and was reelected to the full terms in 1904, 1906 and 1908. He is well known as an active and influential Democrat and for a number of years has served as chairman of the county central committee. In Masonry he has reached the thirty-second degree, being past master of Central City Lodge No. 6, A.F. & A.M., and a member of Central City Chapter No. 1, R.A.M., Central City Commandery No. 2, K.T., and El Jebel Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He also belongs to the Central City Lodge No. 557, B.P.O.E., and is identified with the Woodmen of the World, Ancient Order of United Workmen, and Improved Order of Red Men.

On June 3, 1901, Mr. Altvater wedded Miss May Barrick, a daughter of William Barrick, a former resident of Golden, and they have become the parents of one child - Vernon F. Altvater.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 186

JOHN C. AMESSE
Stunned Father Tells of Fatal Fall
Son Would Have Been Doctor

A Denver doctor, whose son would have received a medical degree on Friday, sat in stunned disbelief Wednesday night as he reviewed the young man's life and told of his death a few hours earlier in a mountain-climbing fall.

John C. Amesse, 26, son of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Amesse of 115 Bellaire St., died at about 2:45 p.m. Wednesday when he fell an estimated 175 feet from the Flatirons, west of Boulder. Dr. Amesse is a member of the Denver Board of Education.

"He's the best mountain climber that I've ever known," said the father, who himself was once a climber. Young Amesse wanted to join an Army mountaineering unit as a doctor.

He was climbing with a close friend and classmate, Alfred E. Anderson of 1622 Harrison St., when he fell. They had placed a rope around a boulder and the rope slipped.

Young Amesse went back up the cliff to reposition the rope, and Anderson said the next thing he knew his partner had fallen past him.

Members of the Rocky Mountain Rescue Squad of Boulder brought young Amesse's body off the mountain, after Anderson descended to summon help. The accident was being investigated by authorities.

UTAH INTERNSHIP

Young Amesse was to receive his degree Friday from the University of Colorado Medical School. He planned to do his intern work at the University of Utah, so he could still be near the mountains, his father said.

He was born March 11, 1942, in Oakland, Calif. He was graduated as a merit scholar at East High School in 1960 and received a bachelors degree at Princeton University in 1964.

Amesse was a medic for Outward Bound, mountaineering school, at Marble, Colo., in 1960, and in Oregon last summer. He was a member of the Colorado Mountain Club and was interested in Western history.

Surviving are his parents, a sister, Mrs. Carol Kollman, Ann Arbor, Mich., and his grandmother, Mrs. Charles Montandon Brighton.

The Denver Post, June 6, 1968

FUNERAL NOTICE

AMESSE John C. Amesse of 115 Bellaire St. Son of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Amesse; brother of Carol Kollmann of Ann Arbor, Mich.; grandson of Mrs. Charles Montandon of Brighton, Colo.; nephew of Helen Amesse of Denver and Elsie Eiland of Brighton, Colo. Services: Saturday, 12:30 p.m. MONTVIEW BOULEVARD PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, 1990 Dahlia st. To Fairmount. Services conclude at the church. Those who wish may make memorial gifts to the University of Colorado Medical Education Fund, 4200 E. Ninth ave., or to the Colorado Outward Bound School, Marble, Carbondale, Colo.

In Memory Of
JOHN C. AMESSE
March 11, 1942 - June 5, 1968

Services at MONTVIEW BOULEVARD PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
June 8, 1968      12:30 P.M.

* * * * *

Dr. Charles F. Petet Jr.
and
Dr. Elmer C. Elsea
Officiating
Dr. Austin C. Lovelace, Organist

* * * * *

ESCORTS

Alfred Anderson
Gerry Bograd
Michael Dempsey
Nicholas Nosaman

Chukume Okadigwe
Chip Ridgway
Philip West
Herbert Wong

---

Quoted at the conclusion of John's paper presented to the Waring Society, entitled
"Man and the Himalaya"

But if adventure has a final and all-embracing motive it is surely this: we go out because it is in our nature to go out, to climb the mountains and sail the seas, to fly to the planets and plunge into the depths of the oceans. By doing these things we make touch with something outside or behind, which strangely seems to approve our doing them. We extend our horizons, we expand our being, we revel in mastery of ourselves which gives an impression, mainly illusory, that we are masters of our world. In a word, we are men, and when man ceases to do these things he is no longer man.

Wilfrid Noyce

---

Telegram from Jim Reece: East High Classmate

On this evening of national grief my heart goes out to you both in your personal tragedy - The loss of your son and my friend John. Though his life has ended with a fall, it is with heights - - heights of wit, heights of gentleness, heights of kindness that I shall always remember him . . .

---

Address by Dr. John J. Conger, Dean of the Colorado School of Medicine at the awarding of M. D. degrees following the general commencement exercises in Boulder, Colorado, June 7, 1968.

We are met here today to recognize the achievements of each of you, as you leave the Medical School, and enter upon a lifetime of challenge and responsibility in the practice of medicine. Your presence here reflects your own commitment; but in a larger sense, it reflects the faith of your families - of your parents and wives - and of society itself.

None of us can approach this ceremony without a profound awareness of the background of tragedy against which it takes place. The deaths of Senator Kennedy, and in our own family, of John Ames, who would have been the first student to receive his degree, require us to re-examine the meaning of the events here today.

That there is much that is senseless in our world cannot be denied. That the heritage of mankind must inevitably include pain and grief and suffering is equally clear.

At your senior class dinner Wednesday night, I found myself remembering Daniel Patrick Moynihan's statement when he said, in speaking of President Kennedy, "There's no use in being Irish, if you don't realize that the world will break your heart." The point is that you have to have a heart to break. It is only by having a heart - by being alive and concerned, by knowing laughter as well as tears, that we can stand up to an otherwise senseless world, and affirm the dignity and meaning of individual human existence. In John Ames, all of us who knew him found that kind of affirmation.

A very long time ago someone said that it is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness. A struggling society has given each of you a greater opportunity than is accorded most men and women to light such a candle, and to keep it burning against the cold winds of suffering and despair. In the face of our common loss, the renewed obligation of all of us, but especially those of you who face a longer tomorrow, is to make certain that in assuming the privileges and responsibilities conferred on you today, you determine never to lessen their meaning by an easy retreat to cynicism, self-serving, or despair. It would be my most earnest hope that by following this course, you will also be able to keep alive a sense of wonder and beauty, and a joy in living. This, I think, is the lesson of John's life, and the ultimate meaning of the degrees and the honors you will receive today.

---

Presentation of Senior Class Gift
by class President, Eli Chester (Chip) Ridgway III.

Each year the Senior Class presents a gift to the School of Medicine. This year in view of the tragic death of John Ames, the class gift will be in the form of a memorial to John. In setting up such a memorial, we have to come to some comprehension of the life style or posture toward life which John took. Certainly John was a clear, bright eyed, thoroughly enjoyable person. Sometimes he would amuse us intensely; other times his consuming, wide-eyed optimism toward the dreary in life would frustrate us. But most of all John was a sensitive humanist who would never cease to surprise us, he was a totally unconventional type of person.

While most of us went through the Basic Sciences learning from dreary, well-underlined notebooks, John spiced this experience with a thorough historical approach to medicine. He went beyond the bare scientific fact and enlivened it with a humanitarian and historical perspective.

When some of us spent our summers in hot Denver hospitals, you found John with Outward Bound teaching young men the lore of wilderness living.

Whereas most of us have not even taken a bus trip around Colorado, you could find John driving these buses on spare Sundays, offering each passenger a minute account of the tradition behind each crossroad in Colorado.

While most of us spent our nights in snug beds at home, you found Johnny spending his nights atop Long's Peak just to catch a glimpse and picture of the sunrise so that he could make this photograph into a Christmas card for his classmates and friends.

And certainly when most of us were at the College Inn, you would find John alone taking in a museum or reading a good book. Whereas most of us spent our afternoons during senior week by some swimming pool, on some golf course or tennis court, you found John off scaling the Flatirons west of Boulder. And finally, while most of us here today will die from our own organicity at age 70, John Ames died in his youth living a life full of vigor and enthusiasm.

I remember John's bursting in on me about three years ago saying, "I have finally succeeded!" When I asked what he meant, he answered, "I have finally liberalized my family." Likewise our contact with him cannot help enlightening and liberalizing us. His loss to us now must certainly diminish us.

I am reminded of the words of John Donne:

"No man is an island, entire of itself: every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main. If a clod be washed away by the sea, Europe is the less, as well as if a manor of thy friend of thine own were.

"Any man's death diminishes me because I am involved in Mankind, and therefore, never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

---

DISIDERATA

(Framed manuscript hanging in John's room)

GO PLACIDLY AMID THE NOISE AND HASTE, AND remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible without surrender be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even the dull and ignorant; they too have their story.

AVOID LOUD AND AGGRESSIVE PERSONS, THEY ARE vexations to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain and bitter; for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans.

KEEP INTERESTED IN YOUR OWN CAREER, HOWEVER humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs; for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals; and everywhere life is full of heroism.

BE YOURSELF. ESPECIALLY, DO NOT FEIGN AFFECTION. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment it is perennial as the grass.

TAKE KINDLY THE COUNSEL OF THE YEARS, GRACEFULLY surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress your self with imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself.

YOU ARE A CHILD OF THE UNIVERSE, NO LESS THAN the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should.

THEREFORE BE AT PEACE WITH GOD, WHATEVER YOU conceive Him to be, and whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life keep peace with your soul.

WITH ALL ITS SHAM, DRUDGERY AND BROKEN DREAMS, it is still a beautiful world. Be careful. Strive to be happy.

-Found in Old Saint Paul's Church, Baltimore. Dated 1692

---

From Johnny's own writings, found in his desk

RENAISSANCE MAN

People have always admired a man of varied interests and a broad education, a "well-rounded" man. Historically, the closest any culture ever came to achieving this ideal was in Italy during the Renaissance. Here men strove to acquire all possible knowledge and proficiency in all possible fields. . . A young man today makes a grave mistake when he fails to get a broad education. Very often, because of over-specialization, he either ignores or overlooks many of the important and enduring concepts that give real meaning to his existence. . . In college, in an atmosphere of intellectual freedom, I felt compelled to delay for two years my entrance into a specialized field. Subconsciously, then, I have followed the example of the Renaissance Man.

NATURE OF TRAGEDY

. . . The nature of tragedy, or a sudden reversal of fortune, or a total twist of events for the worse--this is the true essence of man's experience on earth. All he plans for will usually be destroyed in some way, eventually, by a "natural" or accidental catastrophe. Consider some empirical evidence . . . Should we not plan our life expecting these disasters to occur? Be stoical and phlegmatic or else you will wind up insane. Prepare for the worst or else you will be disappointed.

---

HIS POETRY

The raw north wind is like a friend because we both are lonely and unwanted.

Unlike man
A tree must shed its leaves and show the world its true nature.

Tonight the river rises but sleepy men ignore the running deer.

To this small world
the oriental comet comes but once like Jesus.

Our lonesome voices echo like Carmelites
conversing with the clouds.

The wind is like a friend tonight
To whom I can explain my tale of plight.

Wisdom alone remains when one has nothing
Except an empty soul.

Some are chosen to ponder while the world
flits by without a glance.

---

Colorado Outward Bound School
Marble, Colorado
June 8, 1968

Dear Dr. and Mrs. Ames:

To add an "Amen" to what the preacher said about young John.

We - Outward Bound - started John climbing. And to a father and mother who have raised such a fine young man - and experienced such a profound loss - I'd like to express not only my deep regret, but also try to help you understand, in so far as the finality of death can be understood.

We too grieve. but in an age when reality is becoming so confused with violence, change, impermanence, when many young people opt out, John and others like him stand out with their decency, their clarity of vision, their integrity in striving for their own style of perceiving reality. The mountains and climbing were like this to John - it was so much more than "kicks" - it was his own way of asking "Who am I?" and saying "This is me." His way of unfolding his personality and reaching out to his God - and whatever God stands for. He understood what fullness of living was - and was striving for it with a sense of certainty that I see in few adults many years his senior. Somehow the blue of the sky is bluer, the green of the grass is greener when you come off the snow and the ice of the mountains - and the same qualitative leap takes place in life too. And this is what John believed in - and what he sought that day on the cliff. And while we grieve his loss - and our loss too, for he had so much to give - we have to respect his aspiration and spirit.

Warmest regards,
Joe Nold and the Outward Bound Family

---

Dear Friends Everywhere:

We are grateful for your countless acts of kindness and concern: your messages from the world over, personal visits including those who came from distant places, beautiful flowers, "Care" packages, thoughtful contributions to your favorite charities and to Johnny's memorials. We wish we could tell you personally how much your love and prayers have sustained us. We will be all right.

We deeply appreciate the consoling arms of our church and its assistance in making this small memorial message possible.

Our daughter Carol and her husband Jack Kollmann (from Ann Arbor) and our almost-daughter Carol and her husband John Read (from San Francisco) were here to share our grief and lightened our load.

Eloise and John Ames

(You will surely understand that our annual season's greetings will not be sent this year.)

Above material from a Memorial Booklet published at the death of John C. Ames

JOHN WILLIAM AMESSE

Date: October 9, 1937

No. 2 B899 D5 E16 F103
MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

John William Amesse, Pediatrician,
624 Metropolitan Building, Denver, Colorado

John William Amesse*, born at Eagle River, Keweenaw Co., Michigan, January 15, 1874; son of John and Nancy (Parks) Amesse.

John Amesse, born at St. Timothee, Beauharnois County, Quebec, Canada, September 17, 1844; son of Joseph and Adele Amesse, who came from Alsace. When 18 years of age, John Amesse enlisted in Co. C, 10th Michigan Infantry, at Flint, Michigan, for service in the Civil War, and was wounded in the Battle of Nashville, December 15, 1864. After the war, he settled in Saginaw, Michigan, and in 1866, moved to Eagle River, Michigan, where he was employed by E. I. duPont deNemours & Co., Inc., until 1883. At that time he moved to Lake Linden, Michigan, where he was employed in a general store until 1890. He served as postmaster of Lake Linden, 1890-93, and 1897-1913. He died December 10, 1922, and is buried in Evergreen Cemetery, at Lake Linden. His wife, Nancy (Parks) Amesse, whom he married October 5, 1867, was born at Whitby, Ontario, Canada, February 28, 1846, daughter of James and Mary (Moore) Parks. She died December 25, 1934, and is buried in Evergreen Cemetery, at Lake Linden, Michigan. James Parks, who was a farmer, emigrated from Northern Ireland to Canada, when 15 years of age. His wife, Mary (Moore) Parks, emigrated from Glasgow, Scotland, to Canada, when young.

John William Amesse, attended public schools at Eagle River, Michigan, and graduated from high school at Lake Linden, Michigan, in 1889; University of Michigan, M. D., July 1, 1898; interne, Lake Superior General Hospital, at Lake Linden: graduate student of pediatrics, Johns Hopkins Hospital (Baltimore, Maryland), and Bellevue Hospital (New York City). Prior to entering medical training, he served 5 years as assistant postmaster of Lake Linden, and after completing his internship, served as assistant physician for the Osceola (Michigan) Tamarack Copper Mines. On December 26, 1899, he was appointed an assistant surgeon in the U. S. Marine Hospital Service, by President William McKinley, and was stationed at Detroit, Michigan, and Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Amesse was in charge of affairs during the bubonic plague, in San Francisco, California, in 1900, and later was sent to Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, where he served as U. S. Quarantine Officer from July 1, 1900, until February 1, 1901. He was U. S. Sanitary Officer in Manilla, Philippine Islands, from March 1, 1901, until October 1, 1903, during which time he also was health officer at Jolo, and quarantine officer at Illoilo, both in the Philippine Islands. After returning to the U. S., in December 1903, he was placed in charge of Immigration Medical Service at Seattle Washington, and the Wards for Seamen, at the Providence Hospital, in Seattle. In August 1905, he was given command of the U. S. Marine Hospital in Cairo, Illinois, and later was in command during the yellow fever epidemic, in New Orleans, Louisiana. He was head of the Medical Department, U. S. Immigration, at Ellis Island, New York, and in April 1906, was sent to Havana, Cuba, where he served as U. S. Quarantine Officer, and as U. S. Sanitary Observer, from 1907 to October 1909. In November 1909, he went to Costa Rica, Central America, as a U. S. Delegate to the Fourth International Sanitary Congress.

Dr. Amesse meanwhile had been promoted to the grade of passed assistant surgeon in the U. S. Public Health Service, from which he resigned in January 1910, and during that year, entered the private practice of his profession in Denver, Colorado, specializing in pediatrics. About 1912, Dr. Amesse became an instructor of pediatrics at the University of Colorado College of Medicine, where he now serves as associate professor of pediatrics. He was a state lecturer on tropical diseases, 5 years. He served as a captain in the Medical Corps, Colo. National Guard, 1910-13. He was commissioned a 1st lieutenant in the U. S. Medical Reserve Corps, in 1910, and entered active duty in the World War, April 11, 1917, at Ft. Logan, Colorado. On January 1, 1918, he was appointed by the American Red Cross, to organize Base Hospital No. 29, which was composed of a corps of 200 enlisted men, 35 doctors, and 100 nurses. This unit was stationed at Camp Cody, New Mexico, and later at Camp Crane, Allentown, Pennsylvania, and on July 4, 1918, was sent overseas, establishing headquarters at the Tottenham Hospital, in London, England.

Dr. Amesse was promoted from the rank of major to lieutenant colonel, October 25, 1918, after which he served with Base Hospital No. 15, at Chaumont, France, and with Gen. John J. Pershing's Headquarters. He was later placed in command of the front line Field Hospital. After the signing of the Armistice, he was in charge of Medical Service at Brest, France, until December 1918, and then served as Embarkation Medical Officer at Southampton, England. He returned to the U. S., and was honorably discharged at Camp Dix, in January 1919. In April 1919, Dr. Amesse received a citation from Gen. Pershing for unusually meritorious service in the Medical Corps, during the war.

Immediately after retiring from military service, Dr. Amesse resumed his professional work in Denver, Colorado. In 1910, he assisted in organizing the Children's Hospital in Denver, and was a member of the original staff. He is attending pediatricist to the Colorado General Hospital, and consulting pediatricist to the Denver General Hospital, and St. Anne's Convalescent Home for Children. He was a member of the State Board of Health, 1921-22, and president of the Denver Public Health Council, 1929-30. He is chairman of the advisory committee from the State Medical Society to the State Board of Health, and has been president of the adult Education Council of Denver, 5 years. He was medical director of the Capitol Life Insurance Co., 1919-29, and is now business and consulting medical director. Dr. Amesse is a frequent contributor to medical journals, and has had more than 40 scientific articles published on Public Health and Tropical Medicine, and on the Diseases of Children. He is the author of "First Aid to Injured", of which one million copies have been published. This book is used by Boy Scouts of America throughout the world. Dr. Amesse is collaborator on the book, "Dietotherapy", written by Dr. Fitch, and published in 3 volumes, by Appleton, in 1918.

Dr. Amesse is a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and Consistory (32nd degree); American Medical Association; Colorado State Medical Society; The Medical Society of the City and County of Denver (president in 1930); American Board of Pediatrics; American Academy of Pediatrics (charter member); City Club of Denver (a director); University Club of Denver; Denver Athletic Club; Cactus Club; Mile High Club; Henry W. Lawton Post No. 1, Spanish-American War Veterans; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Unitarian Church. His hobbies are traveling, motoring, reading, and languages.

On January 11, 1905, John William Amesse married Mary M. Hawes, of Greeley, Colorado, daughter of Dr. Jesse and Clemontine (Rockwell) Hawes. Mrs. Amesse graduated from Greeley Teachers College, and the Armour Institute of Technology, in Chicago. Three children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Amesse: (1) Jessie, who was born January 28, 1906, and died December 4, 1906. She is buried at Greeley, Colo. (2) Helen M., born November 8, 1909. She graduated from Smith College, A. B., and the University of Denver Library. She is serving as a librarian in Portland, Oregon. (3) John H., born May 24, 1915.

Dr. Jesse Hawes, father of Mary M. (Hawes) Amesse, graduated from the University of Michigan, in 1868. He studied under the supervision of Dr. Joseph Lister, in London, England, in 1870, and graduated from the Long Island College Hospital, in New York, in 1871. He engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Greeley, Colorado, from 1871 until his death, which occurred in 1901. He introduced aseptic surgery in Colorado. Dr. Hawes was professor of obstetrics at the Gross Medical College, in Denver, and was a member of the American Medical Association. (vice-president), and Colorado State Medical Society (president). He was the author of the book, "Cahaba".

* For further data regarding Dr. John William Amesse, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Published by Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 396.

Mrs. J. W. Amesse D.A.R. # 186740

ELIAS M. AMMONS
Memories of Elias M. Ammons
By Albert B. Sanford

Elias Milton Ammons was born on a farm in Macon County, North Carolina, July 28, 1860. His ancestors on his father's side were among the very first settlers in North Carolina, and fought in the Revolutionary War. Mr. Ammons' father was Jehu R., a Baptist Minister, who married Margaret Caroline Brindle, descended from an old Pennsylvania Dutch family.

In the early spring of 1871, Jehu Ammons, with his family, emigrated to Colorado Territory, where they arrived on April 1st. The oldest of the children was Elias, his sisters were Theodosia, Farita, Anna and Gwendolyn.

Elias had not yet reached his twelfth birthday on his arrival in Denver. The family finances were low and in order to help, Elias almost at once started out in search of a job. Someone directed him to the John W. Smith Woolen Mill, that had been recently completed and was located at Larimer and Seventh streets, West Denver. Smith's superintendent was a Mr. Higginbottom. On young Ammons' arrival at the plant, he was directed to this gentleman to make application. It so happened that Mr. Smith and the superintendent were in consultation, and after a few minutes waiting, with cap in hand, Ammons approached them and stated the object of his errand. The Superintendent looked him over for a moment and said, "You--you want a job here, you could not do us any good, not old enough." Elias turned to go when Smith called him back and after looking him over for a moment said to Higginbottom, "Do you know, I like the looks of that boy, and from what he has told us I know he needs work. You can find something for him to do and I want you to give him a chance."

He proved a surprise to his employer in effectually doing all that was asked of him and his wages were a material help to the family.

About the last of July of that year, the family moved to Turkey Creek and settled on that stream, a few miles southwest of the present town of Morrison. Here father and son secured ox teams and were engaged in hauling logs to the saw mill and in getting out railroad ties. They continued in this, and other like work until the winter of 1874, when the family returned to Denver. Elias secured employment almost at once and managed to save enough to buy his school books and clothing, and in February, 1875, entered the old Arapahoe School, on the present site of the Club Building. His progress and promotion in the grades was such that in June, 1876, he graduated and was ready to enter the East Denver High School.

Aaron Gove at that time was Superintendent of City Schools, and James H. Baker was Principal of the High School. It appears that both of these gentlemen recognized the natural ability and earnest desire of Ammons to secure an education. Young Ammons graduated from the High School in June, 1880. It was during this four period that, outside of his school hours and study at home, he was employed by the old Denver Gas Company, at that time holding a franchise to light the business section of the city. His main duty was to light the gas lamps as darkness came on and turn them off as daylight appeared.

The writer, who was in the eighth grade of the Arapahoe School, first met Elias Ammons in the fall of 1878, Ammons being in his second year of High School. As a rule the High School students did not affiliate with the grade boys but for some reason we became acquainted and a friendship followed that lasted through his life.

The High School organized a Lyceum and held weekly meetings, with debates on current questions featuring the programs. Beyond question, young Ammons proved himself a strong debater and rarely lost a decision. Naturally, such a reputation attracted more or less public attention. He also engaged occasionally in newspaper work, and his first regular job after graduation was on the Denver Times, where he was rapidly advanced to Telegraph Editor, under R. W. Woodbury, owner of the paper.

His resignation was offered on account of failing eyesight, and his general health demanded more of an outdoor life. Accordingly, in September of that year he entered into the cattle business with Thomas F. Dawson, private secretary to Senator Henry M. Teller, and started with a comparatively small herd. Their ranches and range were west of Sedalia and their cattle ranged from the eastern foothills to the Arkansas River. Their home ranch was located in Plum Valley, Douglas County, and while Ammons' time was largely taken up in riding that mountain section, he found time to interest himself in local politics, and in 1890 was appointed Clerk of the District Court of Douglas County. After a short period in this capacity, he entered the Republican campaign of that year and was elected to the Lower House of the State Legislature. It was here that his knowledge of parliamentary law, acquired during his High School experience, his reputation as a man, and his general activity in political matters attracted the particular attention of Senator Henry M. Teller, and a close personal and political friendship followed during the life of Senator Teller. He succeeded himself at the next General Election to this position, and was chosen as Speaker of the House.

A stormy extra session followed the next year, and although frequent appeals from his rulings as presiding officer were made, none were ever sustained by the House.

During both of these sessions, as an employee of the House, the writer was assigned to the Speaker's room. In addition to routine duties I was frequently entrusted with special matters of a nature that showed Mr. Ammons' entire confidence in me. I was never asked to retire when important meetings with committees were being held in his office and kept a brief record of the proceedings.

Close contact with Mr. Ammons in the two sessions, of some one hundred forty days, left with me a lasting impression of his ability and loyalty as a representative of the people of the State and a never failing determination to stand firm for what he believed to be their best interests.

When the national Republican Party, at their St. Louis Convention in 1896, declared against the adoption of a resolution presented by Senator Teller, that the platform should declare in favor of the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, Senator Teller walked out of the Convention. Mr. Ammons, although not a delegate, and many thousands of Colorado Republicans left their party and stood firmly with Senator Teller. Neither Teller nor Ammons ever rejoined the Republican ranks but were loyally devoted to the principles of the Democratic Party during the remainder of their lives.

Space will not permit mention of the many accomplishments of Mr. Ammons as a representative of the people, from membership in the Legislature to the Governorship of the State.

A few of the matters of vital interest to the State, however, should not be overlooked. He was an outstanding leader in the organization of a State Livestock Association, that resulted in the enlargement of a few cattle pens on the railroad in the eastern part of Denver to a large stockyards and the establishment of great packing houses.

Officially, and as a citizen, he was enthusiastic in his support of higher branches of education in the State and a leader, among other prominent men, in securing better appropriations for State Colleges and Schools almost to the time of his death.

When Gifford Pinchot recommended to the Department of the Interior that large areas of the Public Domain of Colorado be withdrawn from any form of entry by lawful claimants, Ammons was among the first to discover the unfairness of this act, and took the lead in arousing adverse public sentiment. So Pinchot came to Colorado and was so impressed with Ammons' position that he finally admitted that a wrong had been done and recommended material modifications of the Department ruling. A great many thousand acres of untimbered areas were reinstated to the homesteader and other lawful claimants. Ammons heartily supported the policy of protection to our forests, but insisted that it could be done without loss to the settlers' and stock growers' rights, that in no way would it interfere with just regulations covering the areas first withdrawn.

It was during Ammons' career as a cattleman that he became intimately acquainted with the mountain country, heretofore mentioned, and frequently entered Lost Park, southeast of Kenosha Hill, where a small herd of the last of the plains buffalo had drifted.

One thing that had not escaped his observation was the natural advantages of a storage reservoir on the south fork of the Platte, near the mouth of Goose Creek, and later, when the old Denver Union Water Company foresaw the necessity for a storage basin to be used in connection with a gravity system of Denver's water supply, this particular site was unknown to the officers of that corporation. Mr. Ammons, who was a personal friend of Walter Cheesman (President of the company), called his attention to this basin and urged immediate investigation by engineers. Their preliminary report soon followed and was favorable.

I met Mr. Ammons frequently after he engaged in the cattle business in Douglas County and we often discussed matters relating to the pioneers of Colorado. Perhaps an inherited special interest in their accomplishments under such unfavorable conditions came down to him from his ancestors of North Carolina.

I witnessed his inauguration as Governor of Colorado and I think there were few, if any, of those present who had known him more intimately or longer than the writer. He very early became a member of the State Historical Society and held the position as President of the Board of Directors at the time of his death. He particularly favored a policy having for its object the gathering of scattered historic data, relics and other things of interest of the pioneer days, and their permanent addition to the accessions of the State Historical Museum.

Elias Ammons died on the afternoon of May 20, 1925. The writer had been, at that time, associated with the Historical Society for over a year and we had frequent conferences over plans for the pioneer work. During his last illness I visited his bedside a number of times. It was in the forenoon of the 19th of May that he asked that I come to his home and take dictations in answer to several letters he regarded as of special importance. I responded immediately and after the dictations were completed, he outlined his purpose of speeding up the work of pioneer research and on my leaving he said, "I'll be out of this in a few days; we will then get our plans in shape and you may expect to be a very busy man."

The dictated letters were all typed and mailed that afternoon. It was not until the following day that I called his home to report that this had been done. I recall it was about four o'clock, and my first effort to get a 'phone connection was unsuccessful. A short time afterward I put in another call and someone in the house answered, saying: "Governor Ammons passed away only twenty minutes ago."

To me, as well as to hosts of friends in the State and elsewhere, it was hard to realize that the end had come to one of Colorado's foremost citizens and loyal public officers, when his illness did not appear to be of a serious nature.

No man in the public life of Colorado ever received more kindly and affectionate tribute than was given to Governor Ammons, at the time of his death by the entire State press and many national publications.

A few days after the death of Governor Ammons, Alva A. Swain in his column, "Under the Capitol Dome," published in various Colorado papers, said: "Colorado is a greater state because he lived within her borders. Her people are better because he placed before them an example of frugality and hard sledding industry that will stand as a monument to him until many generations have gone."

Somehow as I heard of his passing, his life story for near a half century, as I knew it, seemed to pass before me in review and no incident stood out more clearly than the mental picture of the boy not yet in his 'teens being gruffly refused a job in the Woolen Mills by the Superintendent, when Mr. Smith recalled him and said, "Give this boy a chance."

Colorado Magazine, March 1937, p. 48

ARCHER R. ANDERSON
1311 South 10th St., Denver, Colorado
Clerk, Pacific and U. S. Express Companies

Born: July 12, 1861 in Darwin, Clark Co. Illinois

Son of: James Waters Anderson and America Archer

Grandson of: Jesse Kilgore Archer and Jane Sharp McDonald

Great Grandson of: *Zachariah Archer and Jane Kilgore

SAR Claim #9525, Colo. 50

Claim thru: Zachariah Archer who was born in County Down, Ireland in 1752, and died in Clark Co. Ill. July 5, 1822. He enlisted in the year 1776 at the age of 24 from Cumberland or Northumberland Co. Pennsylvania, in Captain Wm. Peebles Co. 2nd Battalion of the Penn. Rifle Regiment, commanded by Col. Samuel Miles. This regiment was captured at the battle of Long Island Aug. 27, 1776. Capt. Wm. Peebles died while a prisoner of war, Oct. 1776, and his Company (after having been released as prisoners of war) was transferred to the Penn. State Regiment Afoot, with Nathan Scott (formerly 1st Lieut.) as Captain and Walter Stewart Colonel. This regiment was subsequently designated 13th Reg't. of the Penn. Line.

Among the engagements that he participated in were:

Battle of Long Island, Aug. 27, 1776

Battle of Trenton, Dec. 26, 1776

Battle of Brandywine, Sept. 11, 1777

In camp at Valley Forge winter of 1777-78

Term of service about 3 years and 9 months

Drew Depreciation Pay until Jan. 1, 1781, and his widow drew a pension.

References: Office of the State Librarian, Harrisburg, Penn.

History of the Penn Line, by Charles J. Stille

Record and Pension Office, Washington, D. C.

Hertman, Historical Register of Officers of the Continental Army, War of the Revolution.

Dated: Denver, Colorado, June 18, 1897.

[Signed] Archer R. Anderson

ANDERSON: 9525 SAR, Colo. 50

CHARLES FISHER ANDREW, M.D.

Charles Fisher Andrew, M.D., a well known practitioner of Longmont, Colorado, was born in New Salem, Pike county, Illinois, January 7, 1871, son of John and Harriet L. (Fisher) Andrew. His father, who was a native of England and a merchant, died in November, 1907, while his mother, who was an Ohio lady, still resides in New Salem. Dr. Andrew received his early education in the public schools of that town and at Lombard Academy, Galesburg, Illinois. He afterward completed a course at Dixon (Illinois) Normal School and for the three succeeding years taught in the different schools of Illinois. It had long been in his mind, however, to finally adopt the medical profession and while teaching school he was also studying medicine. The first year of his regular professional studies was spent at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago, and the last two years at the Missouri Medical College, of St. Louis, from which he graduated March 19, 1895.

Dr. Andrew commenced practice at Longmont, Colorado, soon after graduation from the Missouri Medical College and has since remained at this place engaged in general practice of medicine and surgery. His continuous residence at this place, however, was interrupted in 1900 by his post graduate work at the Northwestern University, Chicago, and at various medical schools and hospitals in Berlin, Vienna and other European centers. His special studies abroad were largely devoted to investigations and clinics in the field of internal medicine.

One of the most useful professional works which Dr. Andrew has accomplished in Longmont has been the founding of the Longmont Hospital Association, his associates in this project being Drs. Vivian R. Pennock and John Andrew. The association and hospital were founded in 1906 and both medical and surgical cases are skillfully treated therein according to the most modern methods. The Doctor is also division surgeon of the Burlington and Missouri Railway at Longmont and an active member of the Burlington Association of Railway Surgeons.

He has taken a prominent part in the proceedings of the various professional organizations, serving as president of the Boulder County Medical Society in 1907 and having been for a number of years an active member of the Colorado State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. His pen has already earned him an enviable reputation both in the discussion of medical and surgical subjects and in the general field of literature. In the latter classification may be mentioned his interesting and instructive paper read before the State Medical Society in 1906, entitled "The Physician in Politics." That the doctor is well qualified to write such a paper is evident when it is known that as a leading Republican he has had considerable practical experience in the line thus treated.

At the present time he is a member of the Colorado state board of lunacy under appointment by Governor Peabody. As a fraternalist Dr. Andrew is identified with the Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. In the order first named his connections are with the St. Vrain Lodge No. 29, A.F. & A.M., of Longmont; Longmont Chapter, R.A.M.; Long's Peak Commandery, K.T., and El Jebel Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of Colorado Consistory No. 1 and has taken the thirty-second degree.

He was married in 1896 to Miss Bessie Turrell, daughter of Judson Turrell, of Longmont, and their two children are Dorothy and Donald Andrew.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 205-107

GEORGE K. ANDRUS

George K. Andrus, whose legal practice is now centered in the city of Denver, has had experience in other portions of the great and rapidly developing West. He was born July 4, 1857, in Ashtabula county, Ohio, a son of Alanson E. and Eliza (Cole) Andrus. His great-grandfather David Andrus came to America from England in the seventeenth century, and became one of the early settlers in Connecticut, and took part in the Revolutionary War. On the mother's side the family were also early settlers in Connecticut. The father of George K. is a farmer in Ashtabula county, Ohio.

Reared on his father's farm, George K. Andrus attended the public schools and Grand River institute, and Austinburg Institute, from which educational institution he was graduated in 1877. He then entered the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, from which he was graduated in 1881, with the degree of LL. D., being admitted to the bar the same year in Michigan. He then removed to Dakota (territory) and practiced law fourteen years, at Valley City, in North Dakota. In 1895 he came to Denver, Colorado, where he has practiced ever since. He makes commercial law a specialty and represents leading merchants of New York and Chicago. Politically Mr. Andrus is a supporter of the Republican party. In Dakota he served for three terms as district attorney. In his fraternal connections, he is a member of the Odd Fellows order and the Masons, belonging to the A.F. and A.M. Oriental Lodge, No. 87; Cheyenne Chapter, No. 4, Valley City, North Dakota, and Denver Commandery No. 25, and El Jebel Temple.

He was married in 1885, to Miss Minnie Estabrook, a daughter of Albert Estabrook of Montgomery county, Illinois, by whom three sons were born: Ralph, Maynard and Dewey. The changes wrought in the western country--Dakota and Colorado, since this gentleman first commenced the practice of his profession is indeed wonderful. He has kept apace with the rapid strides in civilization and general commercial development and today is accounted one of the enterprising, public-spirited men of Denver and its environments.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 138

MILTON L. ANFENGER

Hon. Milton L. Anfenger, state senator, residing in the city of Denver, Colorado, is a native of that city, having been born there September 3, 1874, a son of Louis and Louise (Schlessinger) Anfenger. The parents were early-day settlers in Colorado and for many years the father was engaged in the real estate business, coupled with that of insurance. He was a member of the House of Representatives in the session of 1895.

The senator was educated in the public schools of Denver and also attended the graded schools of East Denver, from which he was graduated. In 1896 he was graduated from the Stanford University of California, with the degree of A.B. Having studied law he was admitted to the bar in 1897, since which time he has been in active legal practice. Mr. Anfenger has taken an active part in politics. He was elected a member of the State Senate from the First Senatorial District on the Republican ticket. During the Cripple Creek strike in 1903, he was a member of Governor Peabody's military staff holding the official rank of Colonel.

Senator Anfenger belongs to the Masonic, Odd Fellows and Elks orders. He is a member of the Denver Chamber of Commerce, the East Denver Turn Verein, B'nai B'rith Society, of which he held the highest office in the district, having served as District Grand President. He is also a member of the Republican Club and one of the organizers of the Society of the Sons of Colorado.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 394

THOMAS ANNEAR

Date: September 11, 1937

No. 2 B869 D5 E16 F28
LCD/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. Thomas Annear, State Auditor,
Denver, Colorado

Thomas Annear, born in Troy, New York, October 12, 1866; son of Jeremiah and Eunice (Brothers) Annear.

Jeremiah Annear, born in England. He came to America when 20 years of age, and engaged in the mercantile business in Troy, New York, and later in Cleveland, Ohio. In 1876, he moved to Silverton, Colorado, where, in 1880, his wife and son, Thomas, joined him. He engaged in mining at Silverton until his death, which occurred in 1910. His wife, Eunice (Brothers) Annear, a native of England, died in 1896.

Thomas Annear, attended public schools, and later, while working in mines, continued his studies at home. He subsequently engaged in the mining supply business, at Silverton, Colorado. He was elected a state representative in 1898, and later served in the State Senate, after which he was treasurer of San Juan County, Colorado. He then moved to Denver, Colorado, where he entered the real estate and insurance business. Mr. Annear was campaign manager for Mayor Arnold. He served as commissioner of supplies, in Denver; as superintendent of the U. S. Mint, in Denver, 8 years; on the Industrial Commission, several years; and since January 12, 1937, has held the office of state auditor. He is a director of the Children's Aid Society, and is a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Consistory (32nd degree), and Shrine; Democratic Club of Denver; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Unitarian Church. His hobby is mountains.

Thomas Annear married Mrs. Bertha W. (Darrow) Lockhart, of Silverton, Colo. Mrs. Annear died in 1929. By a former marriage, she was the mother of 1 child, Oliver Lockhart, who is deceased. He married, and was the father of 1 child, Oliver Lockhart, Jr.

LAURA ALICE (LECHNER) ANTHONY

BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

Name: Laura Alice (Lechner) Anthony

Address: 1462 South Grant

Born: September 7, 1872 at Cosmo, Colorado

Married to: Chas. M. Anthony on April 12, 1898 at Denver, Colorado

Children: George W. Anthony born Feb. 2, 1899 at Denver, Colorado; Lael A. McClusky born May 5, 1908 at Baker, Ore., died Oct. 4, 1956 at Ontario, Ore., interred in Payette, Idaho

Father's name: George W. Lechner, born August 28, 1832 at Sheridan, Lebanon Co., Penn. He died November 28, 1912 at Denver, Colorado

Mother's name: Almira McLaughlin (Lechner), born July 6, 1844 at Dubuque, Iowa. She died March 24, 1881 at Denver, Colorado

Brothers and Sisters

1. Myra Alie, born June 28, 1870 at Como, Colo., deceased Dec. 5, 1908
2. George Richard Lechner, born Nov. 14, 1875 at Como, Colo.
3. Sara Katherine (Neiman), born July 23, 1877 at Como, Colo.
4. Mary Lechner, born Aug. 16, 1879 at Como, Colo., died July 18, 1880

Biographical information concerning parents: Father was first judge of Park County. Was president of the Pioneer Society when pioneer monument was unveiled in 1911. He came to Denver in 1879 and bought home on Lawrence Street where his wife died in 1881. First child born in Como, Colorado in 1870.

No source given

ALEXIS ARBANEY

From far-away and sunny Italy, near Aosta on the Baltea and under the shadow of the Appenines, came Alexis Arbaney to the United States, when he was a young man of twenty-nine, and here he has given his time and energy to developing a ranch and building up thereon a flourishing stock and general ranching industry. He was born on November 27, 1861, and is the son of John B. and Margaret Arbaney, natives of that country and belonging to families long resident there. They were prosperous farmers, according to the ways of the country, and devout members of the Catholic church. After long lives . . . the mother dying on September 17, 1896, and the father in March, 1901. Five of the thirteen children survive them, Demiticus, Egyptian, Baslease, Alexis and one other.

Alexis had but few and scant opportunities for education in the schools, being obliged to assist his parents on the farm from an early age. When he was twenty he entered the Italian army and served four years. Then returning home, he devoted four years more to manufacturing cheese. In 1890 he emigrated to the United States and made his first location at Delray, Wayne county, Michigan. Here he engaged in lumbering for a time and later in foundry work. On October 10, 1890, he arrived in western Colorado, and soon after went to work as a ranch hand for Charles Harris, who paid him twenty-six to thirty dollars a month. At the end of a year he rented the ranch belonging to Samuel Cramer, and during the next four years he conducted its operations with gratifying success. While so engaged he wintered at Aspen and lived on the ranch in summer.

In 1892 he worked ten months in the Pride of Aspen mine for wages, then sold some interests he had acquired to his brother Henry and purchased the ranch on which he now lives, making the purchase in partnership with his cousin, L. C. Clavell. The ranch then comprised three hundred and twenty acres, and after buying his cousin's interest after a partnership of seven years, he bought forty acres more . . . The ranch is two miles east of Basalt and is considered one of the best in this whole section of the state. In political matters Mr. Arbaney is independent, but he is cordially interested in the welfare of his country and state, and devoted to the institutions of his adopted land.

He was married on June 17, 1886, to Miss Felicity Gerbaz, an Italian like himself and born on July 2, 1862. She is the sister of Jarry Gerbaz. . . Mr. and Mrs. Arbaney have two children, Flagin, born on February 28, 1888, and Isabelle, born on December 4, 1890. The parents are members of the Catholic church and are well esteemed as good citizens and enterprising, progressive farmers.

Progressive Men of Western Colorado, pp. 163-164

DR. JAMES R. ARNEILL

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Dr. James R. Arneill
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: James Rae Arneill, born at East DePerre, Wisconsin

Name of father: John Arneill, a native of Kelso, Scotland

Name of mother: Elizabeth Rae, a native of Duns, Scotland

Attended school or college: Lawrence University, of Appleton Wisconsin, 1883 to 1890;
University of Michigan - Medical Department 1890 to 1894

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: A.B., 1890; M.D., 1894

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Denver 1903

Married: Yes, in 1900 at Los Angeles

Name of wife: Sara Hyatt Taylor, daughter of Isaac Taylor and Anna Sheriff

Names of children and years of birth: Anne Arneill, born October 1902; James Rae Arneill Jr., born, June 1904

Avocation: Physician & Professor of Medicine in University of Colorado.

Autograph signature

James R. Arneill.
(signed)

Biography File

JAMES RAE ARNEILL

Date: September 4, 1937

No. 2 B867 D5 E16 F20
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

James Rae Arneill, Physician, Metropolitan Building
Denver, Colorado

James Rae Arneill*, born in East De Pere, Wisconsin, March 6, 1869; son of John and Elizabeth (Rae) Arneill.

John Arneill, born in Scotland. He engaged in the dry goods business in Edinburgh, and when 21 years of age, emigrated to Canada. He later settled in Detroit, Michigan, after which he moved to Wrightstown, Wisconsin, where he engaged in the mercantile business. Later in life, he moved to California, where he became a horticulturist. He was killed in an accident in 1893. His wife, Elizabeth (Rae) Arneill, who was born in Scotland, died in California.

James Rae Arneill, graduated from Lawrence College (Appleton, Wisconsin), A. B., in 1890, and LL. D., in 1922; and University of Michigan Medical School, M. D., in 1894. Dr. Arneill practiced his profession in Ventura County, California, 1894-97. He was instructor in clinical medicine at the University of Michigan, 1897-1903, following which he was professor of medicine at the University of Colorado, 1903-15, in the meantime engaging in his regular medical practice. He has since held the title of professor emeritus of medicine at the University of Colorado. Dr. Arneill has practiced his profession in Denver since 1903, specializing in internal medicine and diagnosis. In June 1937, he represented the alumni of the University of Michigan, at their 100th anniversary celebration. Dr. Arneill is the author of "Clinical Diagnosis and Urinalysis", which was published in 1905. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: American Medical Association; Colo. State Medical Society; The Medical Society of the City and County of Denver; American College of Physicians (former member board of regents); Denver Clinical and Pathological Society; Denver Country Club; University Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobby is golf.

In 1900, Dr. Arneill married Sara Hyatt Taylor, daughter of Isaac Taylor. Mrs. Arneill was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The following children were born to Dr. and Mrs. Arneill: (1) Anne, who married William H. Downs. Mr. and Mrs. Downs reside in Denver, and are the parents of 2 children: David, who was born in 1926; and Sally, who was born in 1930. (2) James Rae, Jr., who graduated from Yale University, B. S., and M. D. He is associated with his father in business, limiting his practice to surgery. He married, and is the father of 2 children, James Rae (III), and Bruce.

* For further data regarding Dr. James Rae Arneill, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-37), vol. 19, p. 189; and Jerome C. Smiley, "History of Colorado" (Lewis Publishing Co., Chicago, 1913), vol. 2, p. 89.

MRS. JAMES RAE ARNEILL
D.A.R. 108048

Lineage Traced to Scot Who Came Over in 1740.

Mrs. James Rae Arneill, who is one of the most prominent and active workers in the D. A. R., also has an interesting genealogy. Her first ancestor, Robert Black, came to this country from Scotland about 1740 and settled near Carlisle, Pa. The family tradition is that her great-great-great-grandparents, Sarah and Robert Malachi Black's five sons--namely Robert, Adam, John Hugh and Matthew, all enlisted in the Revolutionary army on the same day near Marsh creek, York county, now Adams county, Pennsylvania.

Robert and Adam became captains, John was a first lieutenant, Matthew was quartermaster and acted as adjutant. Hugh was a corporal. John and Hugh were taken prisoners by the Indians and John was put on a prison ship. The ancestor, thru whose line Mrs. Arneill joined the society, was Robert Black, captain of the Seventh company, Second battalion, York County Associates and Militia. Robert Black's daughter, Jeannette Black, married William Sheriff, and John Black Sherriff, Mrs. Arneill's grandfather, was a son of that union. On the Sherriff side her colonial ancestor came to this country in 1783, and William Sherriff, her great-grandfather, served with Commodore Peary at the battle of Lake Erie in 1812. William Sherriff's mother was Martha Neal, a number in whose family also served in the war of the revolution, according to the Pennsylvania archives. The Sherriff coat of arms was granted in Warwick in the sixteenth century.

No source given

REX PRICE ARTHUR

Date: January 22, 1938

No. 2 B985 D5 E16 F153

MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Rex Price Arthur, Resident Manager, Denver Branch, Otis & Company
202 First National Bank Building, Denver, Colorado

Rex Price Arthur*, born in Webster City, Iowa, December 20, 1890; son of Charles H. and Gertrude (Price) Arthur.

Charles H. Arthur, born in Webster City, Iowa; son of Alfred and Sarah Arthur. Alfred Arthur was the son of Ezra Arthur, who moved with his family, from Minnesota to Iowa, in the early 1850's. Charles H. Arthur operated a cattle ranch in Iowa, and in 1894, moved to Grand Junction, Colorado, where he engaged in ranching and cattle-breeding until 1909, at which time he retired. He resides in Denver, Colorado, with his wife, Gertrude (Price) Arthur, who was born at Clear Lake, Iowa.

Rex Price Arthur, attended public schools in Grand Junction, Colorado. He took a preparatory course in Munich, Germany, and graduated from Princeton University, Littl. B. in 1915. While a student of the latter school, he became a member of the Colonial Club, and the Triangle Club, and served as president of the latter organization. After graduating from college, Mr. Arthur was associated with the firm, Stone & Webster, in New York City. On April 6, 1917, he enlisted as a pilot, in the Aviation Service, for duty in the World War, and was assigned to the 104th Squadron of the First American Army. He served overseas, and was commissioned a 1st lieutenant. He was honorably discharged in San Francisco, California, in June 1919. He engaged in ranching and cattle-breeding in Colorado, until 1921, at which time he became associated with Otis & Co., an investment firm, dealing in Government., municipal, and corporation securities. This company, whose headquarters are in Cleveland, Ohio, was established in Colorado, in 1889. Mr. Arthur now serves as resident manager of the Denver branch of Otis & Co.

Mr. Arthur is independent in politics, and a member of the following: Investment Bankers Assn. of America; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Denver Country Club; Cherry Hills Country Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. His favorite recreation is golf.

In 1925, Rex Price Arthur married Anne Helen Finlayson, of Denver, daughter of Thomas and Annabelle Finlayson. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur are the parents of 2 children: (1) Rex Price, Jr., born in 1926. (2) Bradford, born in 1927.

* For further data regarding Rex Price Arthur, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Published by Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 369.

GEORGE ATCHESON

Date: November 20, 1937

No. 2 B935 D5 E16 F121
MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

George Atcheson, Physician and Surgeon
401 Tabor Building, Denver, Colorado

George Atcheson*, son of John and Jane Amelia (McDonough) Atcheson; born in Astoria, New York, March 28, 1866.

John Atcheson, son of John Atcheson, Sr., was born in Templemore, Ireland, in 1836, and when about 20 years of age, emigrated to America. He was a seaman, 2 years, and during the Civil War, was associated with W. K. Westerville, in the manufacture of ships, in Brooklyn and New York City. In 1869, he settled at Pleasant Hill, Missouri, where he engaged in farming until 1873, at which time he moved to Colorado, where he operated a ranch, located on Cherry Creek, in Douglas County. About 1890, he moved with his family, to Denver, where he died, in 1920. His wife, Jane Amelia (McDonough) Atcheson, who was born in New York City, in 1842, died in 1914. Her parents, James and Jane (Wood) McDonough, were of Scotch ancestry. James McDonough was a native of Ireland. John and Jane Amelia (McDonough) Atcheson were the parents of 11 children, 6 of whom were sons, George Atcheson being the eighth child.

John Atcheson, father of John, was a Scotchman. Upon being given control of large estates in Ireland by King George of England, he moved to Ireland, where he spent the remainder of his life. At one time he was a civil engineer in Canada. His son, George Atcheson, was commissioned a lieutenant in the Union Army, during the Civil War, and served under the command of Gen. George Brinton McClellan. George Atcheson was later appointed an Indian agent in Minnesota.

George Atcheson, attended public schools in Denver, Colorado, and graduated from the Denver College of Medicine, M. D., in 1893, serving internships at St. Luke's Hospital and the Denver General Hospital, 1893-94. He served as surgeon to the White Hills (Arizona) Mining and Milling Company, 2 months, at the end of which time he resigned. He practiced his profession at Idaho Springs, Colorado, from April 14, 1894, to 1909, since which time he has conducted a general practice in Denver, Colorado, specializing in surgery and gynecology. Dr. Atcheson is a staff member of St. Luke's Hospital, and the Presbyterian Hospital. He served as health officer in Clear Creek County, Colorado, many years. Dr. Atcheson is a Republican, and a member of the following: Masonic Lodge (Scottish Rite), and Shrine; American Medical Association; Colorado State Medical Society; The Medical Society of the City and County of Denver; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. His hobbies are hunting, fishing, and horseback riding.

On June 27, 1894, George Atcheson married Effie A. Moore, who was born in Indiana. Mrs. Atcheson graduated from the training school for nurses at St. Luke's Hospital, in Denver. Dr.

and Mrs. Atcheson are the parents of 1 child, George Atcheson, Jr., born in 1897. He graduated from the University of California, where he was an honor student. He served in the U. S. Coast Guard, during the World War, and is now serving as consul for the U. S., in Nanking, China, with U. S. Ambassador Nelson Johnson. George Atcheson, Jr. married Mariquita D. Laguna, of San Francisco, California. She was formerly identified with the Rockefeller Foundation, in China. George, Jr. and Mariquita D. (Laguna) Atcheson are the parents of 1 child, George Atcheson (III).

* For further data regarding Dr. George Atcheson, see "Portrait and Biographical Record of Denver, Colorado and Vicinity" (Chapman Publishing Co., Chicago, 1898), p. 1216.

CARLOS BAKER

Colorado Pioneer

Biographical Information

Contributed by Edna Cartwright Briggs. March 1960

Residence, Box 1843, Casper, Wyo.

Name: Carlos C. Baker

Born: July 20, 1844 at Miami Co. Indiana

Married to: Margaret Gilbert (See Gilbert in notebook), October 18, 1866 at Hannibal, Marion Co., Mo. She died October 15, 1908, age 63 yrs. (Daily News, Denver, Colorado, October 17, 1908)

Children:

1. Vivian B. (Braxton) Baker, born Aug. 25, 1867 at Hannibal, Missouri, married Lorenza P. Norwood, Denver, J. 18, 1899 4 children
2. Maud Edna Baker, born August 24, 1869 at Hannibal, Missouri, died May 4, 1872
3. Rodman (named for Grandfather Baker), born Feb. 6, 1872 at Hannibal, Mo., died in infancy
4. Braxton (named for Grandfather Gilbert) born Feb. 6, 1872 at Hannibal, Mo., died in infancy
Rodman and Braxton were twins.
5. Medora Estelle, born February 10, 1875 at Golden, Colo., died July 29, 1924 at Casper, Wyo.
6. Roy, born January 12, 1877 at Golden, Colo. died April 8, 1925 (no issue)
7. Gregory, born July 6, 1879 at Golden, Colo., married Nellie M. Barnes, 1901, Denver, 4 children
8. Mildred Carlotta, born 1887, married Ed Cooke, 7 children
(Above Information from Bible records)

Father's name: Rodman Baker, born March 25, 1804, died Aug. 4, 1879 at Hannibal, County of Marion, Missouri. Married at Marcy, near Utica, New York Mother's name: Electa Bailey, born May 8, 1806, New York State. Died Mar 3, 1897 at Hannibal, Missouri.

Brothers and Sisters

1. Cordelia M. Baker, born Feb. 27, 1827 at N. Y., died Apr. 4, 1829
2. James Arnold Baker, born Mar. 28, 1829 at N. Y., died June 4, 1842
3. Lodenia S. Baker, born Mar. 9, 1831 at N. Y., died May 20, 1831
4. George W. Baker, born Mar. 24, 1832 at N. Y., died June 18, 1897
5. Elsie M. Baker, born Oct. 26, 1835 at Cleveland, Ohio
6. Electa M. Baker, born Jan. 16, 1838 at Michigan
7. Watie R. (Ruth), born Feb. 25, 1840
8. Oscar O. Baker, born May 4, 1842, died Apr. 25, 1893
9. Milan M. Baker, born July 28, 1846, died Mar. 13, 1875
10. Cora E. Baker, born Dec. 5, 1849 at Wisconsin, died Aug. 15, 1870

(Above Information from Bible Records)

Biographical Information Concerning Parents:

Rodman Baker and Electa were married in N. Y. State. They had lived at Marcy - not far from Utica. In 1825, or when Lafayette visited, Electa was with her family and watched the parade at Utica. She later told her grandchildren what a wonderful day that was. That her husband's people were cousins of Ethan Allen and that an ancestor was Holland Dutch and knew the "Peg leg Governor of New York". We have found the Ethan Allen cousinship, but Electa's family must have had the Dutch ancestry. We can find no trace - so far, of her father. They started roaming shortly after 1832 and according to births went through Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin and finally settled in Hannibal. The 1850 census for Marion Co. does not carry them, but 1860 census does. He was a hunter and woodsman and moved on when "the settlement became crowded" he said.

Rodman was son of Absalom Baker, b. 8/10/1747, Woodbury, Conn. Revolutionary soldier Mass. Line. Father was Elisha Baker. d. Marcy, N. Y., 1/18/1820.

1860 Census Hannibal, Marion Co., Mo.

Micro film copied by Mrs. E. E. Evans, Columbia, Mo.

Rodman Baker.....	55.....	Carpenter.....	100.....	N.Y.
Electa Baker.....	53.....			N. Y.
Ruth Baker.....	20.....			Mich.
Electa.....	22 F.....			Mich.
Oscar.....	18 M.....			Mich.
Carlos.....	16 M.....			LA.
Minor (?).....	14 M.....			LA.
Cora.....	10 F.....			LA.

Biographical Information concerning self:

Carlos Baker born 1844 Miami Co., Indiana - son of Rodman Baker. Married Margaret Gilbert in Hannibal, Marion Co., Missouri, Oct. 18, 1866. They moved to Colorado between 1872 and 1875 and settled in Golden, Colorado. He worked in the old smelter there and was transferred or worked in the old Grant Smelter in Denver. He was a charter member of Galilee Baptist Church and lived on Cooks Hill. He became "Leaded" at the smelter so he and his sons started a brick yard and sold to contractors in east Denver.

He was a pensioner of the Civil War seeing service in Missouri troops. Belonged to G.A.R. post in Denver.

After the death of his wife he lived with his oldest daughter Vivian Norwood until his death in 1924, (Apr. 3).

BAKER, GILBERT AND SPARKS FAMILIES

FAMILIES OF COLORADO PIONEERS

Presented by Mrs. G. L. Briggs July 30, 1966 to show 3 immigrant ancestors
Baker, Gilbert and Sparks

Name of Pioneer: Carlos C. Baker, born July 20, 1844 at Miami Co., Indiana; died: Apr 2, 1924 at Denver, Colo. He was the son of Rodman Baker and Electa Bailey.

Pioneer's Ancestry -- The dates of birth, marriage, death, and place of residence of his parents and grand-parents were:

Father's name: Rodman Baker, born Mar 25, 1804 at New York State, died August 4, 1879 at Hannibal, Missouri. Resided at Cleveland, Ohio, Miami Co., Indiana, Wise and last Hannibal, Missouri. Married February 16, 1826 at Utica, New York.

Mother's name: Electa Bailey born May 8, 1806 at New York State, died March 3, 1891 at Hannibal, Missouri. She was of Dutch Descent. Lived at Marcy, Oneida County, 1825

Father's father's name: Azzar Absolom Baker, born March 16, 1786 at Williamstown, Mass. Resided at Murray, Orleans Co. 1852 (see pension application papers)

The Pioneer, Carlos C. Baker, married Margaret Gilbert (born Jan 25, 1845, Hannibal - died October 15, 1908 at Denver, Colo.) at Hannibal, Missouri, October 18, 1866.

Pioneer Wife's Ancestry -- The dates of birth, marriage, death, and place of residence of her parents and grand-parents were:

Father's name: Braxton Gilbert, born 1812 at Madison Co., Kentucky, died at Hannibal, Missouri, resided at Hannibal, Missouri. He was an Assessor and lost a leg in a run away accident.

Mother's name: Miranda Sparks (Check Sparks Quarterly, page 545), born 1816 or 17 at Jefferson Co., Kentucky, died 1872 at Hannibal, Missouri. Her parents bought property in Hannibal in 1832. Her sister Rose was born near Louisville, Ky. in 1825.

Father's father's name: Stephen Gilbert

Father's mother's name: Judith Lamb. She died November 1823 at Marion Co., Missouri on Bear Creek. Hers was the 1st death recorded in Marion Co.

Mother's mother's name: Anna or Susan Kennett

Mother's father's name: James Sparks, born 1798 at Jefferson Co., Kentucky. (See 1812 pension paper.) Died July 23, 1856 at Hannibal, Missouri (census report), resided at Hannibal, Missouri.

Earlier ancestry, or comments concerning any of the above as to military service, biography, etc. etc.:

Assar Absalom Baker's father was Absalom Baker, Revolutionary War soldier. He and father Elisha were in battle of Bennington, Vermont, Green Mtn. Boys. Elisha, who married Phebe Nichols, was cousin of Ethan Allen. Absalom Baker saw service in Berkshire County troops as private. Pen. 5241 New York. Recorded Book D, Vol. 2 - p. 362 - Dated July 30, 1853.

Biography and Pension Records. Baker, Gilbert family

Stephen Gilbert born in Bedford Co., Va., son of Samuel, a Revolutionary soldier of Bedford Co., Virginia. Lieut. Samuel Gilbert was granted 1313 acres in Madison Co., Kentucky for war service, moved his family there. He married Rhoda (a deed signed by Samuel and Rhoda his wife has been found). He married as a second wife a young woman and his twins by this union were minors when his will was made. Stephen's deed is on record for his share - dated Feb. 1823 and signed by Judith. He was in Marion County, Missouri as a school teacher in 1823 and Judith's death is recorded as the first and his daughter Rhoda Jane as one of the first white births. Records and copies of wills and the line of descent from Gervais Gilbert, of Maryland is on record in the Denver Library.

James Sparks saw service in War of 1812 and the pension applications and land grants are on record as - "Bounty Land Warrant File 11- 820-160-55."

Feb. 5, 1851 James Sparks of Marion Co. Mo. appeared before Mayor of the City of Hannibal and made statement. He was 61 years 6 mo of age - He was identical James Sparks who was a private in Ky. troops War 1812.

On Jan 6, 1852 a land warrant for 40 acres was issued to James Sparks (No. 36-581) but by that time James had died.

On April 15, 1854 Braxton Gilbert declared he was guardian of Franklin Sparks, minor son of James, who had died July 23, 1851.

Apr 23, 1854 A warrant was issued to Franklin Sparks for 160 acres instead of 40 issued to his father in 1852.

Concerning Pioneer Carlos C. Baker and Margaret Gilbert, who lived at Hannibal, Missouri, until 1872 or 73 when they settled in Golden, Colorado, then Denver:

He was baggage man at Golden - then later helped to build Valley Smelter. He helped with Bailey Smelter and Grant Smelter in Denver, serving here as foreman for many years.

He saw Service Civil War as Vol. Mo. troops, Union Army and belonged to Byron L. Carr Post #14 G.A.R.

In Denver, Colorado, was a Charter member of Galilee Baptist Church.

Came on train, according to tradition. He told me of the small village of what is now Denver on the river.

Later he came to Denver from Golden and watched and helped it grow.

Tradition says the old mammy of his wife, Margaret, came with her white child and kept a boiling pot on the back of the stove for bears or Indians. I don't know whether it was ever used or not.

The Twins were babies and both died in Colo., but the old Gilbert burial place on Bear Creek in Hannibal, Mo., had tomb stones to Braxton and Hampton Baker.

This Baker line proved by: Myrtle Ashill (Myrtle Baker). From family records and traditions, Nat'l No. 5376; Cal. State No. 287; Dau. of Founders and Patriots of America; Records of Marion Co., Mo. and Denver, Colo. records.

Compiled by: Mrs. George L. Brigg Residence: 4447 Thompson Ct.
Denver, Colo.

NATHAN A. BAKER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. N. A. Baker
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Nathan Addison Baker

Place and date of birth: Lockport, New York, August 3, 1843

Name of father: Addison Baker, a native of New York State

Name of mother: Charlotte Baker, a native of New York State

Attended school or college: Racine, Wisconsin High School, 1854-1858

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: In month of March 1860

Married: Dec. 6, 1865 at Denver, Colorado

Name of wife: Clarissa M. Baker (Trail 18:24 May 26), daughter of John and Catherine Moyer

Names of children and years of birth: Addison E. Baker, born Nov. 3, 1866; Lily M. Sebben, born May 21, 1872

Avocation: Pioneer Teacher, 1862; Newspaper business, 1863-1872; U. S. Volunteer Soldier, 1864-1865; Farming, stock and mining, 1873-1883; Real Estate Business, 1884-1905; United States Mint service, 1906-1914.

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government:
Military Service State 1863 - U. S. Vol. Service 1864-65 in Co. A. 3d Colo. Cavalry.
This year, 1914, is ninth year U.S. Mint Service.

(Autograph signature)

(signed)

Nathan A. Baker

Biography File

NATHAN ADDISON BAKER

The subject of this sketch, born at Lockport, New York, Aug. 3d, 1843, came of a family of pioneers,--the great-grandfather, in Connecticut and near Saratoga, New York, the grandfather in Western New York, and father in Wisconsin Onealia and Denver, and N. A. Baker, in Colorado and Wyoming,--thus for generations back have been with the advance guard of new regions opening up to the activities and beneficial uses of civilized life.

Fifty-five years ago now, (1915) Mr. N. A. Baker came to Denver, then only a village of a few hundred people. He entered upon an active life, and contributed a full measure of usefulness to the city and State of his adoption. He was a pioneer school teacher, law student, journalist, accountant, artistic printer, agriculturalist, horticulturist, miner, and real estate dealer, at various dates in his career.

As to his personality, a journalist wrote the following estimate:

"Primarily the ideas of Mr. Baker are original, and his opinions decided; has a vast fund of mental energy. He is extremely independent and yet entirely unpretentious; is unusually quick of perception, and is a good reader of character. He is versatile, and decidedly original in his tastes and talents, and is possessed of a strong will power, which is so well balanced by calm judgment and self-control. He is a person who expresses himself forcibly, whether as a writer or a speaker, is of a most thoughtful and reflective mind, is possessed of the highest principles and ideals, and is of a thoroughly conscientious nature."

Mr. Baker's connection with journalistic work, either as owner, or in a managerial capacity, has afforded a good field to aid largely in the development of a new country. In the office of the Denver "Commonwealth," a pioneer daily, and later in the business office of the "Rocky Mountain News," he began his newspaper work. His other newspaper life, mostly as owner, was with the Colorado "Leader," moved to Cheyenne, as the first paper of Wyoming. Also the Laramie "Sentinel," South Pass "News," the Denver "Tribune," Colorado "Farmer," the Colorado "Rural Life," etc.

His military history is as follows:

Member of Governor's Guard, 1864, and of Company A, third Colorado cavalry, U.S. volunteers, and later, prominent in Grand Army work, and takes unusual interest in fraternal organizations, being a member of several of these bodies.

Space forbids mention of very many of his business activities in the history of Denver and Colorado. In 1906 Mr. Baker practically retired from the prosecution of business affairs, and became connected with the United States Mint at Denver in a responsible position of honor and trust where he now is.

See Colorado Clippings under Newspapers

Denver Post - July 18, 1920, p.6, Sec 1

Rocky Mountain News - April 23, 1929, p. 2

Rocky Mountain News - April 22, 1934, p. 13

Denver Post - May 18, 1934, p. 15

Rocky Mountain News - May 28, 1934, p. 1

NATHAN ADDISON BAKER

WEDDING DATE

According to his diary Baker married on Dec. 6 and the wines cost $50, the wedding ring, $25. His hat and tie were a $9 investment and his wedding shirt set him back $5. There is no other comment on the ceremony.

There are no further entries after the marriage.

In a chronology of events drawn up by Baker of his life he considered the following history points: his entrance into the water hauling business in 1881, the purchase of his horse (the stone statue represents him on Baker's tomb) for $375, the enrollment in the Grand Army of the Republic, Lincoln Post and the completion of his home at 1435 W. 14th ave.

Baker, soon after his marriage, set about fixing up the home occupied by his parents in which he and his bride also took up residence. He planted the first trees to grace a residence yard and hauled water to water the cottonwoods.

The house was located at 19th and Lawrence. When he discovered there were springs near where the Denver Country Club is now, he ploughed a ditch all the way to his trees to give them frequent water.

In the boom days of Central City Baker became a Pony Express rider during the circulation war being waged between the Herald and The News.

He would service Central City miners with latest copies of the paper for varying prices that ranged from $24 a year to $3 and $4 a copy.

Rocky Mountain News, October 28, 1962, p. 9A

NORRIS C. BAKKE

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B878 D5 E16 F30
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. Norris C. Bakke, Justice of the Colorado Supreme Court
Denver, Colorado

Norris C. Bakke, born at Mayville, North Dakota, April 9, 1894; son of Ole Pederson and Carrie (Erickson) Bakke.

Ole Pederson Bakke, born in Trondhjem (now known as Trondheim), Norway. When 10 years of age, he emigrated alone to America, and, after a 14-week voyage, landed in this country. He settled in Goodhue Co., Minnesota, where he had acquaintances, and in 1875 moved to North Dakota, where he engaged in farming. He served as the first justice of the peace in Traill County, North Dakota, and as register of deeds in that county, 1900-04. In November 1909, he entered a Government homestead in Wells County, North Dakota. He died January 6, 1916. His widow, Carrie (Erickson) Bakke, daughter of Ole and Christiana Erickson, was born in Columbia County, Wisconsin, and resides in Denver. Of the 11 children born to Ole Pederson and Carrie (Erickson) Bakke, 10 grew to maturity, the sixth being Norris C.

Ole and Christiana Erickson, parents of Carrie (Erickson) Bakke, were early settlers of Wisconsin, and in Indian days moved in a covered wagon to North Dakota. Their son-in-law, Mr. Crosby, was serving as a lieutenant in the U. S. Army at Fort Lincoln, in North Dakota, at the time Gen. George Armstrong Custer left there to fight his famous last battle with the Indians.

Norris C. Bakke, attended high school; graduated, University of Chicago, Ph. B. and LL. B., 1919; and student, Harvard University, 1 year. When 15 years of age, he began work, in order to finance his high school education, and later taught in a rural school, 3 years (1911-1914). In 1914, he moved to Chicago, Illinois, where he was employed, at $1 a day, in a publishing office in which the arctic explorer, Frederick Albert Cook, had an interest. Norris C. Bakke then worked his way through the University of Chicago, following which he attended Harvard University.

In the fall of 1920, he was elected judge of the Logan County (Colorado) Court, in which office he served 4 years. He then served as city attorney in Sterling, Colorado, where he also engaged in a general legal practice until 1932, at which time he became deputy attorney general of Colorado, an office he held 4 years. In 1936, he was elected a justice of the Colorado Supreme Court, in which office he began serving in January 1937. In addition to receiving the largest number of votes ever given a candidate for the Colorado Supreme Court, he is the youngest Supreme Court justice ever elected in Colorado.

The Hon. Mr. Bakke is president of the Denver Council of Religious Education, and formerly was a member of the Board of Governors of the Lions International. He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Consistory (32nd degree), and Shrine; American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Lions Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association and Presbyterian Church (has been a Sunday School teacher, 20 years). Mr. Bakke, whose hobby is motoring with his family, especially enjoys his garden, and flowers.

On Aug. 12, 1921, Norris C. Bakke married Esther Banks, a native of Pottstown, Pennsylvania. They are the parents of 2 children: (1) Norris C., Jr. (2) Nancy.

GEORGE BALL

. . . George Ball, who is now one of the progressive and prosperous ranch and cattle men of Saguache county, this state, and is comfortably fixed on a fine ranch of three hundred and twenty acres seven miles southeast of the county seat . . . Mr. Ball is a native of "merrie England," born in Staffordshire on March 10, 1849. His parents, George and Prudence Ball, were also English by birth, and passed their lives in their native land. The father was a dipper in the potteries, and made good wages at his work but he did not have much to give his children in the way of a start in life. Of the seven children in the household Moses and Hugh have died, and Joseph, who is superintendent of the second division of the Rocky Mountain Coal & Iron Company; Joab, Isaac, and George, the last named being the second in order of birth of those who are living. He received a very limited common-school education, and began to work in the potteries at the age of nine years, being employed in their interesting work five years. From the age of fourteen to that of nearly seventeen he did hard labor in the coal mines. Then, . . . on August 5, 1867, he sailed from Liverpool for the United States, and ten days later arrived at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

The first three years of his residence in this country were passed working in coal mines in Mercer county and along the Monongahela river in that state, and the next two in the same occupation in many different and widely separated places, among them Illinois, Vancouver Island, the Puget Sound country, near San Francisco, California, and in the vicinity of Coos Bay, Oregon. In the spring of 1872 he came to Colorado, and after mining at Georgetown until October of that year, he went to Wyoming and mined coal at Carbon until Christmas day, then returning to this state, worked ten days in the mines at Golden. In January, 1873, Mr. Ball located half of his present fine ranch on a homestead claim, and traveled to it from Denver with all his worldly possessions on one wagon . . . leaving the capital city on January 16th and arriving at his homestead on the 29th of the same month . . . Mr. Ball has given his business close and careful attention, and it has rewarded his zeal with returns proportioned to the outlay. He has been something of a hunter, too, and has a large collection of mounted specimens of wild game, . . . all secured and mounted by himself, assisted by his brother Joseph, since 1886. The collection is valued at five hundred dollars and is wholly of Colorado products.

Mr. Ball is a Republican in politics and an earnest worker for his party. Recognized as one of the substantial, progressive and far-seeing men of the county, he is prominent in all local affairs, and occupies a high place in the regard of the people.

Progressive Men of Western Colorado, pp. 503-505

GEORGE W. BALLANTINE

George W. Ballantine, vice president and general manager of the Denver Stock Yards, is not only one of the leading experts in all live stock matters in the west, but one of the leading business men of Denver. He is a native of Brunswick, Missouri, born October 27, 1847. His father, John Ballantine, was born in Scotland, February 13, 1811, and came to this country when four years of age, first locating in Zanesville, Ohio, and afterward removing to Brunswick, Missouri, where for many years he engaged in the wholesale grocery business. His death occurred at Lincoln, Nebraska, January 21, 1875. The mother of George W. Ballantine was, before her marriage, Lucy A. Collum, a native of Zanesville, Ohio, born January 12, 1818, and she died December 13, 1896.

Mr. Ballantine received his early education in the public schools of Brunswick and in 1865 when eighteen years of age, removed to Nebraska City, where he completed his schooling. In February, 1868, he settled at Lincoln, Nebraska, and established the first lumber yard in that city. He conducted it until 1877, and then became identified with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, as its general live stock agent for all lines west of the Missouri river. Mr. Ballantine spent the succeeding ten years in this position, locating at Denver in January, 1887. By this time his standing as a leading expert in all matters connected with the live stock industry was assured, and he came to Denver as superintendent of its great stock yards. Not long afterward he was made general manager and still later the responsibility of the vice presidency was placed upon him and he still discharges the important duties of this dual office. For seven years of this period he was largely interested in raising cattle on an extensive ranch in Mesa county, Colorado, but in 1905 on account of the pressure of his many local responsibilities he was obliged to dispose of his cattle interests in that section of the state. Mr. Ballantine is not only an active manager of the great interests centered in the Denver Stock Yards but is a director of the Stock Yards Bank.

He is also one of the leading Masons of the west, being identified with Lincoln Lodge No. 19, of Lincoln, Nebraska; Lincoln Chapter No. 4, R.A.M.; Mount Moriah Commandery No. 4, K.T., all of which bodies he assisted to organize and still retains in them his life membership; Denver Consistory No. 1 and El Jebel Temple of the Mystic Shrine, of Denver. He is a thirty-second degree Mason of the Scottish Rite and has nearly reached the highest degree in the fraternity. As to fraternal organizations of a social and business nature it should be added that he is a member of the Denver Chamber of Commerce and the Denver Club, Country Club and Traffic Club.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 284-285

HORACE M. BALMER

Energetic, enterprising and progressive, Horace M. Balmer holds a position of prominence in the business circles of Fort Collins, being the leading undertaker of this part of the county. He is a man of education, well equipped for his occupation, and as a graduate of the Western College of Embalming, at Iowa City, Iowa, has a thorough knowledge of the art and science of embalming as practiced in the leading cities of our Union. A son of Robert Balmer, he was born, April 28, 1871, in Monmouth, Illinois, and was there reared to agricultural pursuits.

A native of Ireland, Robert Balmer emigrated to the United States when a lad of sixteen years, and for awhile lived in New York. Turning his attention to agriculture, he subsequently moved to Illinois, where he has since been successfully employed in tilling the soil, owning and managing a good farm. He married Mary J. Phillips, who was born in Ohio.

Laying a substantial foundation for his future education in the public schools of Monmouth, Illinois, Horace M. Balmer afterwards continued his studies at Tarkio College, in Tarkio, Missouri, where he was graduated in 1894. From that time until May, 1896, he was engaged in the real estate business at Creston, Iowa. Coming then to Colorado, he located at Fort Morgan, and for a little more than a year was employed in ranching in the Weldon valley. In February, 1897, Mr. Balmer established himself in business at Loveland, for two years dealing in furniture and serving as undertaker. Going to Rocky Ford, Colorado, in January, 1899, he was there nine months, after which he was traveling salesman for a furniture house. Locating after a time in Fort Collins, Mr. Balmer was for a while employed as an undertaker for the firm of Silcott & Webster, from whom, on December 1, 1901, he purchased the undertaking business, which he has since managed with great success. In his various operations, he has prospered, and in addition to owning valuable town property in Fort Collins, is interested, financially, in a Montana ranch of value.

Mr. Balmer married, in 1902, Helen M. Brooks, a daughter of Isaac M. Brooks, of Portland, Michigan. Politically Mr. Balmer earnestly supports the principles of the Republican party, and for five years served as coroner of Larimer county. Fraternally he is a member of Fort Collins Lodge, No. 804, B.P.O.E.; of the Knights of Pythias; of the Woodmen of the World; and of the Modern Woodmen of America. Religiously he is a trustworthy member of the Presbyterian church.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 149-150

FRANK N. BANCROFT

Date: December 18, 1937

No. 2 B956 D5 E16 F138
MAS/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Frank N. Bancroft, Attorney
728 University Building, Denver, Colorado

Frank N(ason) Bancroft*, son of David C. and Lydia A. (Chase) Bancroft; born in Taunton, Massachusetts, May 24, 1865.

David C. Bancroft, son of George C. and ____ (Ash) Bancroft, was born in Massachusetts, or Connecticut. He was a building contractor in Massachusetts, prior to the outbreak of the Civil War, at which time he enlisted in the 7th Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, as a captain. He served throughout the war, and was honorably discharged as a colonel. In 1870, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he continued in the building contracting business. He constructed several buildings, which are old landmarks in Denver, including the Markham Building, the Inter-Ocean Hotel, and the Witter Block. He was the architect and builder of the well-known Henry C. Brown residence, and the Beyers home in Denver, as well several school buildings, including those located on Stout Street, Broadway, and Arapahoe Street. He later moved to Deadwood, in the Black Hills of South Dakota, where he died in 1879. He is buried at Deadwood. His wife, Lydia A. (Chase) Bancroft, daughter of John and Mary Chase, was born in Massachusetts, in 1838. She died in 1907, and is buried in Riverside Cemetery, in Denver, Colorado. They were the parents of 4 children, Frank N. being the 3rd child in order of birth.

Frank N. Bancroft, attended grade and high schools, in Denver, after which he studied law in the office of A. L. Doud. He was admitted to the Colorado State Bar, in 1887, and subsequently entered the practice of law with the firm, Bartels & Blood, in Denver. Mr. Bancroft has since been associated with the firm, which is now known as Bartels, Blood & Bancroft. From 1917, to 1932, he was trust officer and a director of the Colorado National Bank, in Denver, having complete charge of the trust department, which he organized. Mr. Bancroft, who specializes in irrigation, state and corporation law, has been instrumental in establishing important irrigation projects. Outstanding among these is the Independence Pass Transmountain Diversion Project**, of the Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co., which is the first diversion of water from the western slope to the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, across the Continental Divide. Mr. Bancroft has extensive interests in irrigation and oil projects. He is an independent Republican, and a member of the following: American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association (president, 1915-16); Denver Chamber of Commerce; Denver Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. Mr. Bancroft, whose hobbies are walking, and mountain climbing, has climbed all of the 14,000-foot peaks of the Rocky Mountains, near Denver.

On May 1, 1889, Frank N. Bancroft married Rosa G. Stokes, daughter of Albert J. Stokes, who moved from Pennsylvania to Indiana. He later located in Kansas, and in 1872, settled in Colorado. He was a member of the Quaker Church. He died in San Diego, California, when 96 years of age. Frank N. and Rosa G. (Stokes) Bancroft are the parents of 4 children: (1) Albert S., born in 1890. He graduated from Cornell University, and from the University of Denver School of Law. He is an artist. He married Alpha Apperman, and they reside at Estabrook, Colorado. (2) Rose B., born in 1903. She married Kenneth W. Tapp, who is an attorney. They reside in Kansas City, Missouri, and are the parents of 2 children, Kenneth W., Jr., and Bancroft. (3) Louesa, born in 1905. She married Alfred John Bromfield, Jr.***, who is president of the Industrial Federal Savings & Loan Association, in Denver. (4) Virginia, born in 1908. She married Herman Clow, and they are the parents of 2 children, Donal, and Robin.

* For further data regarding Frank N. Bancroft, see Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 604.

** An article written by Frank N. Bancroft, regarding the Independence Pass Transmountain Diversion Project, appeared in "Dicta", monthly publication of the Denver Bar Association. The full text of this article was published in "The Ordway (Colorado) New Era", issue of Apr. 2, 1937, a copy of which is in the Citizens Historical Association files.

*** For further data regarding Alfred John Bromfield, Jr., see Citizens Historical Association files.

JAMES JONES BANKS

In the year 1904 the bar of Denver was fortunate in acquiring the addition to its bar of a man of high standing socially and an able lawyer in the person of Hon. James Jones Banks, who in that year moved to this city from Birmingham, Alabama, where he had been engaged successfully in the practice of law and as a judge since 1885. Judge Banks was born April 27, 1861, at Enon, Alabama, and is a southerner both in tradition and training. His parents were Jabez B. and Jane Rebecca (Harvey) Banks, of old American ancestry and both natives of Georgia. The father was a larger planter.

The future judge was educated in the schools of Alabama and took a literary course at what was then Auburn, but now the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, from which he was graduated with the degree of A.B. in 1882 and in 1885 was graduated from the University of Alabama with the degree of LL. B. From that year he entered activity into the practice of the law at Birmingham and the subsequent years were signalized by various promotion in the profession. In 1890 he was elected to the bench as judge of the tenth judicial district. From this position he resigned after seven years of continuous and honorable service and then resumed practice until coming to Denver in 1904.

In Denver his first business partnership was with Charles F. Potter, but since December 1907 he has practiced alone. Mr. Banks is first vice president of the Southern Society of Colorado and is a member of the Methodist Church. In politics he is a Democrat. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and of the Pan-Hellenic Club, being one of the board of directors of the latter.

He was married in 1887 to Miss Lee Frazer, a daughter of Judge S. T. Frazer, of Union Springs, Alabama. They are the parents of two sons: Lee Frazer and James J., Jr.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 275

LUCIUS WARD BANNISTER

Date: September 4, 1937

No. 2 B867 D5 E16 F18
LCD/JED

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

L. Ward Bannister, Attorney,
801 Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

L(ucius) Ward Bannister*, born in Des Moines, Iowa, March 30, 1871; son of Lucius George and Alice (Ward) Bannister.

Lucius George Bannister, born at Stafford, New York, son of William H. and Eliza Havens Bannister, the former of whom died in New York State. Lucius George Bannister, who was an attorney, practiced in Des Moines, Iowa, until his death, which occurred in 1889. His wife, Alice (Ward) Bannister, who was a native of Le Roy, New York, died in 1873.

L. Ward Bannister, attended Drake University (Des Moines), in 1889, and the State University of Iowa, 1889-91; graduated Stanford University, A. B., 1893; and Harvard University, LL. B., 1896. He began the practice of law in Des Moines, in 1896, and served there as first assistant city attorney, 1898-99. Since 1899 he has maintained a general practice of law in Denver, Colorado. Mr. Bannister, who is considered an authority on water rights law, lectures on this subject at the University of Denver and at the Harvard University, Law Schools. He served as special counsel for the State of Colorado, 1922-23, and at various times since in the state's interstate controversies. He was special counsel for Denver, Colorado River matters, 1926-29, and served as president of the Colorado River League, in 1925. He was chairman of committee on Interstate Streams (Denver Chamber of Commerce), in 1929, and legal adviser to Oil Conservation Conference, by appointment of secretary of interior, 1929.

Mr. Bannister, who was a member of the Colorado State Board of Pardons, 1907-08, is an active Republican, and served as president of the Colorado-Hoover-for-President, and Colorado Hoover-Curtis clubs, and was director of club activities in Colo. under Republican National Committee, in 1928. He is an officer in the Order of the Crown of Italy, and also was decorated with the Order of the Crown of Roumania.

He is a member of the following: American Law Institute; American Bar Association; House of Delegates of American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Masonic Lodge (A.F. and A.M.); Denver Chamber of Commerce (honorary member and president 1924-26); Mile High Club; Denver Club; Denver Country Club; Harvard Club (New York); St. Vrain Ranch Club; Rotary Club; Delta Tau Delta, and Phi Delta Phi (fraternities); and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. Mr. Bannister is a frequent speaker on public questions and an occasional contributor to legal periodicals. His hobbies are golf, fishing, and gardening.

In 1902, L. Ward Bannister married Helen Allabach, who was born in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, daughter of Edward W. and Eliza (Young) Allabach, who moved to Des Moines, Iowa, in _____. Mr. and Mrs. Bannister are the parents of one son, Wayne Bannister, who graduated from Stanford University, A. B., and from Harvard University Law School. He is associated in the practice of law with his father.

* For further data regarding L. Ward Bannister, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-1937), vol. 19, p. 233.

LUCIUS WARD BANNISTER

Biographical data to accompany the portrait of Mr. Lucius Ward Bannister
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Lucius Ward Bannister, born March 30, 1871 at Des Moines, Iowa

Name of father: Lucius G. Bannister, a native of New York

Name of mother: Alice Ward, a native of New York

Attended school or college: East Des Moines High School, Drake University, University of Iowa, Stanford University, Harvard Law School.

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Stanford, A.B. 1893; Harvard, L.L.B. 1896

Married: Yes, December 25, 1902 at Des Moines

Name of wife: Helen Allabach, born June 15, 1875 in Des Moines, Iowa, the daughter of Edward Wayne and Eliza (Young) Allabach

Names of children and years of birth: Wayne Allabach Bannister, born May 1, 1913

Avocation: Lawyer

Give dates: Began practicing in Des Moines, removed to Denver in 1899 and continued practice.

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government:
Assistant City Attorney of Des Moines; Member of Colorado State Board of Pardons; Special Consul for State of Colorado and for City of Denver in Colorado River Controversy

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

Joint author of Colorado Workmen's Compensation & Industrial commission. Law and first counsel of the Commission thereafter.

Served as lecturer on Western Water Law at University of Denver Law School, also at Harvard, Columbia & Cornell Law Schools on same subject.

President of Denver Chamber of Commerce 1924-26. Chairman of Chamber's committee on Interstate President "Hoover for President" and Colorado Hoover-Curtis Republican clubs and director of club activities in Colorado under Republican National Committee 1928.

Officer of Order of Crown of Italy. Order of Crown of Roumania.

Chairman of Colorado World Court Committee 1929-1931.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) L. Ward Bannister

Biography File

MISS LINDSEY BARBEE

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Miss Lindsey Barbee
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Lindsey Barbee, born at Danville, Kentucky

Name of father: James Walter Barbee, a native of Danville, Kentucky

Name of mother: Mary Sandifer Barbee, a native of Danville, Kentucky

Attended school or college: Denver Public Schools, University of Denver

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: 1880

Avocation: Writing

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

For Twenty years, Editor of The Crescent, official publication of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority.
1919-24. National President of Gamma Phi Beta.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Lindsey Barbee

Biography File

RODNEY JEWETT BARDWELL, JR.

Date: September 4, 1937

No. 2 B867 D5 E16 F15
LCD/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION
INDIANAPOLIS

Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Jr., Attorney,
First National Bank Building, Denver, Colorado

Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Jr., son of the Hon. Rodney Jewett, Sr., and Iva (Shepard) Bardwell; born in Denver, Colorado, October 3, 1902.

The Hon. Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Sr.*, son of the Hon. Hiram Webster and Gertrude Elizabeth (Jewett) Bardwell, was born at Tunkhannock, Wyoming Co., Pennsylvania, August 17, 1870. He was a student of the Maryland Military and Naval Academy (Oxford, Maryland), 1885-86, and graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy (Exeter, New Hampshire), 1890. He was admitted to the Pennsylvania State Bar in 1894, in which year he began the practice of law in Wyoming Co., Pennsylvania. In 1895, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he is general counsel and a director of the Public Service Co. of Colo., and is president of the board of the Colorado School of Mines. He was a state senator from the Twelfth Colorado District, 1907-11, and served in the Colorado National Guard, 5 years. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: Masonic Lodge (all bodies of the Scottish and York Rites); American Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; S. A. R.; and Episcopal Church. On February 20, 1900, he married Iva Shepard, of Denver. They are the parents of 4 children: (1) Eva Gertrude, wife of Jackson Brown, Jr. They reside in Denver, and are the parents of 2 children, Bardwell, who was born in 1923, and Beverly, who was born in 1926. (2) Rodney Jewett, Jr. (3) James Shepard. He is married, and is the father of 2 children, Charline, and Patsy Bardwell. (4) Edith Burger, wife of Britton White.

The Hon. Hiram Webster Bardwell, father of the Hon. Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Sr., and son of Daniel A. and Sallie (Jones) Bardwell, was born in Wyoming Co., Pennsylvania. He was an attorney, and served as judge of the Forty-ninth Pennsylvania. District. He later was postmaster of Tunkhannock, Wyoming Co., Pennsylvania. He served in the Civil War. He died in 1908. His wife, Gertrude Elizabeth (Jewett) Bardwell, who was born in Susquehanna County, Pennsylvania, died in 1926. Her parents, Rodney and Sarah E. (Bailey) Jewett, were natives of Pennsylvania. Rodney Jewett was the son of Col. Frederick Bailey, who was a veteran of the War of 1812, and a member of an old colonial family.

Daniel A. Bardwell, father of the Hon. Hiram Webster Bardwell, was born at Wysox, Pennsylvania. He was a farmer. His wife, Sallie (Jones) Bardwell, was born in Wyoming Co., Pennsylvania. Daniel A. Bardwell was a descendant of Robert Bardwell, who was born in England, and in 1630 emigrated to America. The Bardwell family originally came from Normandy to England with William the Conqueror. Members of the family served in the Revolutionary War.

Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Jr., graduated from the University of Colorado School of Law, in 1925. He since has been engaged in the practice of law, in association with his father, the Hon. Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Sr. He has served 3 terms, as a member of the Moffat Tunnel Commission. Mr. Bardwell is a Republican, and a member of the following: Colo. Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Denver Law Club; Denver Club; Denver Country Club; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. His hobbies are golf, fishing, and hunting.

On May 1, 1926, Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Jr. married Elizabeth Harmon, daughter of Philip K. and Bertha (Beadle) Harmon. Mrs. Bardwell was born in Denver, Colorado. Mr. and Mrs. Bardwell are the parents of 2 children: (1) Elizabeth, who was born in 1931. (2) Judith Anne.

* For further data regarding the Hon. Rodney Jewett Bardwell, Sr., see "Who's Who in America" (1936-1937), vol. 19, p. 237; Jerome C. Smiley, "History of Colorado" (Lewis Publishing Co., Chicago, 1913), vol. 2, p. 370; and Citizens Historical Association files.

CASIMIRO BARELA

Hon. Casimiro Barela, ex-president pro tem. of the Colorado state senate, has been a member of the upper house of the legislature longer than any other representative in the United States, having represented Las Animas county for thirty-two years, or since Colorado entered the sisterhood of commonwealths. With this remarkable record behind him, he has been honored with the appropriate sobriquet, "Perpetual Senator," and with Las Animas county continuing to maintain its old-time reputation as the banner Republican section of Colorado, he is not likely to have any successful rival as an aspirant for the name. More than this, Mr. Barela has been in office continuously since 1871; was twice elected to the territorial legislature, and was a member of the constitutional convention before he entered into his noteworthy career as a leading figure in the civil, legislative and political affairs of his country and state. His influence as an able man and as legislator also brought him recognition twenty years ago as an honorable representative of Colorado in the national councils of his party. But perhaps the most noteworthy evidence of his splendid standing in everything which stands for substantial American manhood and citizenship is the action of the capitol managers in selecting him to form one of the groups of sixteen distinguished citizens of Colorado whose portraits now grace the panels of the stately dome. Of these sixteen, only General Palmer and Mr. Barela are living. The portrait used for the purpose was taken on Mr. Barela's fiftieth birthday, and forcibly presents the strong, cultured, genial and dignified personality of this admired and beloved man.

Mr. Barela is a native of Embudo, New Mexico, born March 4, 1847, the son of Jose M. and Maria D. J. (Abeyta) Barela, his father and mother being of Spanish parentage and both grandfathers among the early settlers of California, dating back to 1777, being identified with all the early development of San Francisco. Having obtained his early education under the direction of Archbishop J. B. Salpointe, at Mora, New Mexico, in 1867 Casimiro removed with his father and family to a ranch in the valley of San Francisco, Las Animas county, where he still has a large ranch and is extensively engaged in stock raising. The Colorado & Southern Railroad Company established a station at this point, called Barela. Mr. Barela has also been interested in the merchandise and forwarding business at Trinidad and El Moro; was one of the incorporators of the San Luis Valley Railroad, and has been one of the directors of the American Savings Bank of Trinidad. In 1871 he was appointed assessor for Las Animas county by the county commissioners, and in the same year was elected to the house of representatives of the Territorial Legislature, being re-elected in 1873. In the following year he was elected sheriff of his county and in 1875, while still in office, was chosen a delegate to the Constitutional convention, and of the forty-nine members of that historic gathering, only eight are living. He also assisted in the organization of all the counties in the state - from sixteen, in the seventies, to the fifty-nine of today - and four of this number he has himself named, viz.: Baca, Otero, Prowers and Archuleta counties. Upon the admission of Colorado to statehood, in 1876, Mr. Barela was elected to the state senate of the First General Assembly for the long term and has since been continually chosen by the people of Las Animas county as their representative in the upper house of the legislature. In 1882 he was elected treasurer of Las Animas county for two years, and in 1885 was elected county judge for three years, but resigned the latter office after one year's service. In 1880 he was selected as a delegate-at-large from the state to the National Democratic convention held at Cincinnati, which nominated General Hancock for president. In 1881 he was the Democratic candidate for state auditor, but was defeated by eleven hundred votes, the entire ticket meeting with the same fate with the exception of Governor Adams. In 1894 Mr. Barela made the race for state treasurer, and though the entire ticket was defeated, he ran ahead of the other candidate seven thousand votes. Altogether Mr. Barela has been a conspicuous figure in the political annals of Colorado and has always been a leader of his party in the southern portion of the state. He has been prominently identified not only with politics but with mercantile pursuits, railroad affairs and the advancement of educational interest and the general progress of his county and state. In view of the above it is almost superfluous to add that his name is familiar throughout the state by reason of his long and able public service; that he has won the confidence and esteem of his colleagues in every legislative body of which he has been a member; and that he exerts an especially strong political and social influence in Las Animas county. He has a thorough knowledge of the English as well as the Spanish language, and is an effective and forceful speaker in both. He was a delegate to the National Democratic convention which met in St. Louis in 1888, and was a member of the committee from Colorado to notify Cleveland and Thurman of their nomination. Mr. Barela was president pro tem. of the general and extra session of the state senate in the legislature of 1893, at which time he was unanimously elected by the three parties - Democrats, populists and Republicans. He had also the honor of being the consul at Denver, acting first as the joint representative of Mexico and Costa Rica, but subsequently resigning the Mexican consulship.

A striking illustration of Senator Barela's unflinching honesty and independence of character was furnished by the legislative session of 1902, when he served notice on his party that if it persisted in some pernicious legislation he would withdraw from it. Among these measures was the proposition to make the single-tax issue a party question, and the fusion and law-and-order issues. It took a brave man to assume this position, and the fact demonstrated that Senator Barela has the courage of his convictions. Again, the session of 1907 supplied a signal illustration of the universal esteem and affection in which the senator is held by his fellow legislators, the following testimonial being signed by every member of the upper house:

To the Honorable Casimiro Barela, Senator, representing the Fourth Senatorial District, Sixteenth General Assembly, greeting:

On this sixtieth anniversary of your birth, the undersigned, your fellow senators, in commemoration of your thirty-six years of continuous service in behalf of your adopted state, as citizen, representative, framer of the state constitution and senator, do herewith present, as a slight token of the respect and high esteem in which you are regarded by the people of our beloved state by reason of such faithful, distinguished and meritorious service, and by us, your fellow senators, as a testimonial of our respect and continued brotherly affection, this engraved china-silver service. . . . . Fourth day of March, 1907.

Mr. Barela was married March 4, 1867, to Miss Josefita Dona Salome Garcia, who died on October 7, 1885, leaving three daughters, Leonor, Jaunita, and Sofia. He was married to his present wife, Damiana Rivera, February 16, 1886, daughter of Don Miguel Rivera and Dona Paulita Trujello.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 65

MELZAR E. BARNES

A leading and highly respected citizen of Fort Morgan, the substantial standing of Melzar E. Barnes is well indicated by his elegant residence in that place which he erected in 1900 and which is one of the most modern, comfortable and attractive places in this locality. Although still engaged in live stock pursuits to some extent, especially as a sheep dealer in which specialty he has become widely known, Mr. Barnes is still thus engaged more from the necessity of having congenial employment of some kind than because he is desirous of further profits in his old time calling. This certainly speaks well for the energy and ability of a man who has entered his seventy-second year.

Born in Sangamon county, Illinois, June 18, 1838, Mr. Barnes is a son of Milan R. and Elizabeth (Sperry) Barnes, both of his parents being natives of New York State. A life long farmer, his father moved from the Empire state to Illinois in 1837 and in a few years located in Iowa where he died in 1871. After spending some years in Sangamon county the family home was transferred to Lee county, Illinois, where Melzar E. attended various public schools in the winter and worked on his father's farm in the summer. For one of his temperament it was not possible for him to withstand the patriotic call of the Civil war and he therefore enlisted in Company D, Thirty-fourth Illinois Regiment Volunteer Infantry and served throughout the long and trying period of the conflict, being mustered out of the service at Louisville, Kentucky, on July 12, 1865. His father moved to Marshall county, Iowa, at the conclusion of the war, and the young man joined him in that section and there engaged in farming until the fall of 1887. In that year he pushed further west and located in Weld county, now Morgan county, where he took up land and engaged in the sheep business. This was before the era of wide spread irrigation, but after about seven years of profitable live stock operations Mr. Barnes decided to engage in farming instead of sheep-raising. He purchased a fine tract of one hundred and sixty acres near Fort Morgan under the Morgan canal, and continued thus actively engaged until 1901, when he rented his farm and retired from the most active of his pursuits, but, as stated, he is still engaged in sheep-feeding to some extent and is also a member of the board of directors of the Morgan Irrigation District.

In Masonic circles he belongs to Oasis Lodge, No. 67, of Fort Morgan, A.F. & A.M., and is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, being identified with the R. A. Cameron Post, No. 95. In politics he is a Republican and in religion a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and is serving as president of the Board of trustees of the local society.

On August 1, 1865, Mr. Barnes married Miss Lucy Bixby, daughter of Samuel Bixby, of Vermont, and to them four children have been born as follows: Wallace H., a Colorado farmer; George, deceased; Harold M., connected with the National Cash Register Company, of New York City; and Elizabeth, living at home.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 314

HON. JOHN THOMAS BARNETT

The rapid and solid advancement of Hon. John T. Barnett, attorney general for the state of Colorado, is characteristic of the high value which western communities place upon a trained mind and a broad education and of the estimation in which they hold the university man in politics and public life, in both of which fields of thought and action such influence has always been a potent factor in the development and progress of Colorado. There is a very good reason for this Popular attitude. Mr. Barnett owes his advancement and his stability in public confidence to thorough preparation; a quick grasp of practical details and a prompt and sound decision as to results, and straight-forwardness of methods and bearing which is as natural as it is honorable.

John Thomas Barnett is a native of New York, being born in Potsdam, June 22, 1869, son of John and Catharine (Kennedy) Barnett. His parents, who were both natives of Ireland, settled in the Empire state early in the fifties and are still living in St. Lawrence county, where the father was long engaged in farming and stockraising. The son received his non-professional education in the public schools and at the State Normal, at Potsdam, graduating from that institution in January, 1891.

In the summer following his graduation from the New York State Normal School Mr. Barnett located at Silverton, Colorado, holding the principalship of its schools for three years. During that period he also acquired and edited the Silverton Miner, which was one of the first papers published in the San Juan country and which he conducted until January 1, 1895. He had commenced the study of law in New York, continued it in Colorado, and at the date mentioned went to Chicago in order to prosecute his studies in a systematic manner which should lead to his admission to the bar. He first entered the law office of Moran, Kraus and Mayer, of that city, the senior member of which was Judge Moran, dean of the Chicago College of Law. Mr. Barnett also became a regular student in that institution, from which he was graduated in June, 1896, taking the degree of LL. B., at the Lake Forest University in the same year. He continued to practice with the firm mentioned until the spring of 1897, during the municipal campaign of that year serving as secretary to the treasurer of the committee which elected Carter Harrison, Jr. to the mayoralty. He was then tendered the position of assistant city attorney, but declined the honor, rather preferring to return to Colorado and find his place among her people.

In the summer of 1897 Mr. Barnett moved from Chicago to Silverton, his former home town in Colorado, and there engaged in practice until December of that year, when he located in Ouray, in the county of that name. This has since been his permanent residence, where he made the reputation which earned him a high place among the state officials at Denver. In January, 1899, he was appointed county attorney for Ouray county, and has continuously held the office to the present; no comment is required on this bald statement of fact. In the fall of 1898 Mr. Barnett was a candidate for the state senate from the Eighteenth district, and the majority of sixty-three votes by which his Populist opponent defeated him marked one of the most remarkable runs made by a Democrat in Colorado, as the district was conceded to the Populists by a 2,000 majority. In 1902 he failed by one vote of securing the nomination for attorney general before the Democratic state convention. In the fall of 1896 he became secretary of the Democratic state committee and ably filled that position until he was nominated for the attorney generalship in the fall of 1908. On January 12, 1909, he assumed the duties of the office for which his training and temperament so abundantly qualify him. Although his state official career has been short, he has already rendered the commonwealth valuable service by winning several suits on disputed tax levies by which large sums have been turned into the state treasury. Besides being a thorough lawyer and a remarkable executive, Mr. Barnett has gained wide recognition as a brilliant and effective campaign orator. Since coming to Colorado he has taken a leading part at all the state conventions, either as a delegate or a speaker, and has been a prominent figure in several national campaigns not only in his home state, but in other sections of the country, both east and west. In the campaign of 1896 he rendered most valuable service in both New York and Illinois.

As bearing upon the breadth of Mr. Barnett's interests and activities, it may be added that he has long been deeply interested in various mining operations and been especially identified with some of the most important enterprises of that character in the San Juan country. In these he is still a large operator. Since his election to the state attorneyship he has become connected with the Arkansas Valley Irrigation Company as a stockholder and chief counsel, and as the company is operating one of the largest irrigation projects in America, he holds no unimportant post of honor and responsibility in this regard. The canal under its control is already one hundred miles in length and its reservoir is designed to furnish irrigation to half a million acres of land in the Arkansas valley. As a Denverite Mr. Barnett is an active member of the Athletic and University clubs, and welcomed as a pleasing and inspiring addition to the social and fraternal circles of the city. In private, as in public intercourse, a strong and magnetic personality is instinctively recognized. He is well known in the secret and benevolent orders, having membership in the B.P.O.E., Knights of Pythias and Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Barnett was married, in January, 1906, to Miss Sue Sayre Nash, daughter of Colonel Thomas Nash, of Norfolk, Virginia.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 406

CHARLES FREDERICK BARTELL

Noteworthy for his good citizenship and many excellent traits of character, Charles F. Bartell, of Boulder, is widely known as ex-sheriff of Boulder county, and occupies a place of prominence in the county. A son of Frederick P. Bartell, he was born, October 4, 1851, in Germany, near Berlin.

Leaving the fatherland in 1856, Frederick P. Bartell came with his family to the United States, and for a while followed the trade of a brickmaker in Athens county, Ohio. During the Civil war he offered his services to the country of his adoption, enlisting at first for three months and afterwards for three years, becoming a member of Company H, Fifth West Virginia Volunteer Infantry. At the Battle of Cross Keys he was seriously injured, and after having served faithfully for two years was honorably discharged on account of physical disability. Subsequently moving to Ashland, Kentucky, he resided there until his death, in June, 1884. His wife, whose maiden name was Caroline Buckman, was born in Germany, came with him to America, and is now living in Colorado.

Charles F. Bartell was educated in the public schools of Pomeroy, Ohio, attending quite regularly until thirteen years of age. Beginning life then for himself, he worked at the jeweler's trade until 1885, when he migrated to Colorado. Locating in Longmont, he was employed as a jeweler for eight years, when he started in the jewelry business on his own account in that place. Taking an active part in local affairs, Mr. Bartell was nominated for sheriff in the fall of 1904, and was elected on the Republican ticket. In this capacity for four years, he served wisely and ably, his discretion, trustworthiness and force of character eminently fitting him for the position.

In 1873 Mr. Bartell married Mary Crosby, a daughter of Peter Crosby, of Ashland, Kentucky. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bartell, but both have passed to the life beyond. Mr. Bartell fills a place of Prominence in Masonic circles, being a member of St. Vrain Lodge, A.F. & A.M., of which he was master one term; of Longmont Chapter, R.A.M., of K.T. He is also a member of Excelsior Lodge, No. 54, K. of P., of Longmont, and belongs to the Boulder Club and to the Boulder Commercial Association. Religiously he is a member of the Episcopal church.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 326

GUSTAVE CHARLES BARTELS

Date: September 4, 1937

No. 2 B867 D5 E16 F16
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Gustave C. Bartels, Attorney, University Building,
Denver, Colorado

Gustave Charles Bartels*, born at Bellevue, Nebraska, January 22, 1858; son of Louis Frederick and Caroline H. (Dieterichs) Bartels.

Louis Frederick Bartels**, born in Gottingen, Hannover, Germany, January 10, 1826. His father was a teacher in Germany. Louis Frederick Bartels emigrated to America, when 19 years of age, settling in St. Louis, Missouri. In 1851, he moved to Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he was a merchant. In 1856, he returned to St. Louis.

Soon after his marriage, he moved to Bellevue, Nebraska, where he remained until 1861. He then moved to Denver, Colorado, where he lived until his death, which occurred July 27, 1874. He helped organize the Colorado Savings, Building & Loan Association, of which he was president. He was one of the founders of the Denver Gas Co., of which he served as secretary. His wife, Caroline H. (Dieterichs) Bartels, whom he married in St. Louis, Missouri, was born in St. Louis. She died in 1926. Their son, Louis Frederick Bartels, Jr.***, formerly served as assessor of the city and county of Denver.

Gustave C. Bartels, was a student of Washington University, in St. Louis, Missouri, 4 years, and graduated from the University of Michigan Law School, in 1879. He has practiced law in Denver, since Apr. 12, 1879, being the oldest attorney there, in point of service. He at one time served as corporation counsel of Denver. In 1900, Mr. Bartels was nominated for the office of judge of the Supreme Court, but was defeated.

He is a Republican, and a member of the following: American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association (past president); Denver Club; Denver Country Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association.

On April 30, 1883, in Denver, Colorado, Gustave C. Bartels married Emma Reed Godfrey, who was born in Louisiana, daughter of Dr. Noah P. Godfrey. Mr. and Mrs. Bartels are the parents of 1 child, Earl G. Bartels, who was born in 1884. He married Martha G. Wood. They reside in Denver, and are the parents of 1 child, Cynthia Bartels.

* See Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 3, p. 334; and William N. Byers, "Encyclopedia of Biography of Colorado" (Century Publishing and Engraving Co., Chicago, 1901), p. 343

** See "History of Denver, Colorado" (O. L. Baskin & Co., Chicago, 1880), p. 329

*** See Jerome C. Smiley, "History of Colorado" (Lewis Pub. Co., Chicago, 1913), vol. 2, p. 413

Frank Hall, History of Colorado, vol. 4, p. 368
Sketches of Colorado, p. 364

FLORIN A. BARTHOLOMEW

Florin A. Bartholomew, city treasurer of the city of Colorado Springs, is a native of Elmwood, Illinois, born May 12, 1862, a son of Noyes E. and Cornelia (Kellogg) Bartholomew. The father was a native of Connecticut, while the mother was born in Massachusetts. For a time the father was a farmer in Illinois but settled in eastern Kansas in 1866, when the country there was yet very wild and sparsely inhabited. He still resides there, aged eighty-two years.

Florin A. was reared on his father's farm, attended the country schools and also at Mound City, Kansas. He continued to live on the farm until twenty-five years of age, then moved to Colorado, entering the employ of the Denver & Rio Grande Express Company (now the Globe). He located at Pueblo in November, 1887. He remained there in the express company's employ until the spring of 1907 and during this time was night agent at Pueblo two years, then six years as road messenger. He also served as cashier for three and a half years at Leadville.

He came to Colorado Springs in 1899, where he was cashier until 1907, when he was elected city treasurer. He still holds this important city position and has fully met the requirements of the office and the most sanguine hopes of his fellow citizens, whose every financial interest he carefully guards. Politically, he is a Republican and was elected treasurer on this ticket. Mr. Bartholomew belongs to the Woodmen of the World and Royal Arcanum.

In 1888 Mr. Bartholomew was married to Miss Mary Lapsley, daughter of Dr. J. A. Lapsley, of Prescott, Kansas. This union is blessed by three daughters: Frances, Bula and Iona.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 174

JOHN T. BARTLETT

Biographical data to accompany portrait of John T. Bartlett
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: John Thomas Bartlett, born January 15, 1892 at Raymond, New Hampshire

Name of father: John T. Bartlett, a native of New Hampshire

Name of mother: Emma L. Tucker, native of New Hampshire

Attended school or college: Pinkerton Academy, Derry, N. H., 1907-10; Middlebury College, 1910-1911

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Ft. Collins, Colorado, 1917; to Boulder, 1919.

Married: Yes, September 7, 1912 at Medicine Hat, Alta.

Name of wife: Margaret M. Abbott, Derry, N. H., daughter of Albert H. Abbott and Georgianna G. Perry

Names of children and years of birth: Forrest A., born March 25, 1914; John T. Jr., born October 15, 1915; Richard A., born November 23, 1920; Margaret E., born December 22, 1922

Give brief incidents of historical interest: Reporter and special writer, Vancouver, B.C., News-Advertiser, Sun, Province, 1912-1915

Writer for agricultural publication, 1913-1919 (New England, 1915-17, Colorado, 1917-19).

Business research and writing, 1919

Manager Editor, Bartlett Service, editorial service for business papers, 1920

Secretary, National Association of Business Writers, 1927

Associate Editor and Co-publisher, The Author and Journalist, 1928

Secretary, Mountain States Hardware & Implement Association, 1930

Advisory Council, University of Colorado Writers Conference, 1930

Co-author, Retail Credit Practice, by Bartlett and Reed (Charle M.) 1928, Harper & Bros.

Co-author, Credit Department Salesmanship, by Bartlett and Reed (Charle M.), Harper & Bros., 1931.

Member, Colorado Authors' League, 1930

Biography File

JOHN GROH BAUER

Date: September 25, 1937

No. 2 B886 D5 E16 F68
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

John Groh Bauer, Treasurer, Capitol Life Insurance Company,
Capitol Life Building, Denver, Colorado

John Groh Bauer*, born in Cincinnati, Ohio, November 22, 1880; son of Jacob Philip and Elizabeth (Groh) Bauer.

Jacob Philip Bauer, born in Cincinnati, Ohio. He engaged in the coal business in Cincinnati. He is deceased, and is buried in that city in the Spring Grove Cemetery. His wife, Elizabeth (Groh) Bauer, was born in Cincinnati.

John Groh Bauer, attended grade school, and graduated from high school in Cincinnati, Ohio. He was first employed in the wholesale grocery business of R. B. Henley, in Cincinnati, and later engaged in the lumber business in Albuquerque, New Mexico, after which he served as an executive of the Santa Fe Railway Co. In 1908, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where in January 1909, he was employed in the accounting department of the Capitol Life Insurance Co. He has been treasurer of the company since about 1927. Mr. Bauer, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Arapahoe Lodge No. 130, A.F. and A.M.; Denver Tennis Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobby is tennis.

On Oct. 5, 1912, at Castle Rock, Colorado, John Groh Bauer married Bertha G. Lowell, of Maine. Mrs. Bauer, who was born in Colorado, was the daughter of a minister. Mr. and Mrs. Bauer are the parents of 2 children: (1) John Henry Lowell, who was born in February, 1916. He is a senior at the University of Colorado. (2) Betty Janice, who was born in July 1921.

* For further data regarding John Groh Bauer, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Publishers, Denver, 1927), vol. 5, p. 126.

AARON M. BEAM

It was the great Dr. Johnson who long ago said that "Genius is the result of large general powers, accidentally determined to some particular direction." The success achieved by Mr. Aaron M. Beam, the head of Beam Gold and Silver Process Co., in reducing low grade ores so as to make paying properties of mines otherwise worthless is a case in point. His years of experience in mining and prospecting, and long study of the subjects connected therewith, have brought him the reward of patient, painstaking merit in a worthy enterprise. Mr. Beam was born in Illinois July 31, 1850. When five years old his parents moved to Eastern Kansas, where he grew up, attending public schools, finishing his course in Lane University, Lecompton, Kan. When at college his mind naturally turned to chemistry and geology. He exhausted all known data on those subjects and was dissatisfied.

Launching out in the field of applied metallurgy he drifted through the mining states with fortune often against him. At an early date he conceived the idea that the known methods of extraction of gold and silver were at most very unsatisfactory. He bent his mind in that channel with five years of arduous labor, both day and sometimes all night, with the expenditure of considerable money. With the ever present sneers of the knowing ones, he has brought this system up to a commercial basis, where in points of economy, simplicity, high extraction and accuracy in handling, together with its adaptability to almost all classes of rebellious ones, it has no peer.

The Beam Bros. own the patents in fee simple with central office for the U. S. at 1018 Eighteenth street, Denver. The great merit of this treatment is that ores running as low as $4 per ton can be treated at a profit, of which the company stands ready to exhibit the proofs and figures. They are also engaged in mining, owning properties in several states. Mr. Beam owns the house where he lives at 341 Scott street, North Denver, and the firm also owns rental property.

By special appointment under Postmaster-General Cresswell, he was postmaster at one of the postoffices first established in the Osage Trust Lands in 1868 and 1870.

In September, 1870, he married Miss Jennie L. Barkman of Clinton, Kan. There were four children from this union, two daughters and two sons. The sons and oldest daughter voted their first votes for W. J. Bryan for president. Mr. Beam owes in a great measure his success to the untiring exertions and perfect sympathy of his devoted life partner. Often in his sorest disappointment she would build him up with her steadfast love and inspiration that alone could carry him over gulfs of adversity and almost despair. In personal bearing Mr. Beam is quiet and somewhat reserved, but beneath the calm exterior readers of character can detect the deepest purpose and unflagging zeal which has won him the ultimate successes of his life's labors.

Hall, History of Colorado, vol. 4, p. 492

WALTER BEANS

Biographical data to accompany the portrait of Mr. Walter Beans
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Walter Beans, born July 12, 1883 at Bucks Co., Pennsylvania

Name of father: Stacy B. Beans, a native of Pennsylvania

Name of mother: Mary E. Beans, a native of Pennsylvania

Attended school or college    College Prep., Abington Friends School, Abington, Pennsylvania; Grade School, Norminister, Pennsylvania; High School, Hathoro, Pennsylvania; C.P.A.
University of Illinois, June 4, 1910.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: April 1st, 1911

Married: Yes, June 22, 1907 at Abington, Pennsylvania

Name of wife: Mary E. Patterson, daughter of V. E. Patterson and Florence Hart Patterson

Names of children and years of birth: Walter S. Beans, born May 25, 1908

Avocation: Vice-President & Treasurer, the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co.

Biography File

HOMER F. BEDFORD

Date: September 11, 1937

No. 2 B869 D5 E16 F27
LCD/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. Homer F. Bedford, State Treasurer,
Denver, Colorado

Homer F. Bedford*, born in Balltown, Missouri, March 16, 1880; son of John F. and Eliza A. (Summers) Bedford.

John F. Bedford, born in Missouri; son of Benjamin F. and Sarah Bedford. Benjamin F. Bedford was born in Kentucky, and in pioneer days moved to Missouri, where he engaged in farming. John F. Bedford, who moved to Denver, Colorado, in 1898 and engaged in farming, was a carpenter, and later operated a barber shop at Evergreen, Colorado. He died Sept. 3, 1931. His wife, Eliza A. (Summers) Bedford, who was born in Missouri, resides in Denver.

Homer F. Bedford, attended public schools, after which he learned the printer's trade. He then engaged in the printing business in Denver, from 1898 until 1908, at which time he moved to Platteville, Weld County, Colorado, where he established the "Platteville Herald", which he sold in 1923. He was police magistrate of Platteville, Colorado, 2 years, and served as town clerk, 1 year. In January 1914, he was appointed postmaster of Platteville, in which capacity he served 2 terms, and was assessor of Weld County from 1922 to January 1933. In 1932, he was elected state treasurer, taking office, in Denver, January 1, 1933, and was elected and served as state auditor, 1935-36. On January 12, 1937, he again became state treasurer. The Hon. Mr. Bedford, who is a Democrat, is a member of the following: Elks Lodge;; I. O. O. F.; Exchange Club; Woodmen of the World; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobbies are hunting, fishing, and golf.

In Sept. 1904, Homer F. Bedford married Stella V. Cornell, daughter of H. V. Cornell. Mrs. Bedford is a native of Platteville, Colorado. The Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Bedford are the parents of 2 children: (1) Amy A., who was born in May 1905. She is the wife of Delbert Ehn. They reside in Denver. (2) Lloyd E., who was born January 29, 1907. He is supervisor of the Colorado State Motor Fuel Division.

* For further data regarding the Hon. Homer F. Bedford, see Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 473.

DR. J. HARRISON BELKNAP
Engineer Appointed Manager of Welfare
By BILL MOYER
Rocky Mountain News Writer

Mayor Nicholson Wednesday appointed Dr. J. Harrison (Harry) Belknap, 63, of 2308 Newport st. as Denver manager of welfare.

The appointment - the last major one for Nicholson - completes his cabinet just a few days short of a month since the new administration came into power.

Belknap will be sworn into office Thursday at 8:30 a.m. along with Richard Y. (Dick) Batterton, 51, who was named manager of improvements and parks Friday.

SUCCEEDS DURHAM

Both will take oaths of office in District Judge Robert Steele's chambers.

Belknap, an engineer and a colonel in the Air Force Reserve, succeeds J. E. Durham, who resigned as manager last July.

The department director, Miss Charline J. Birkins, has been acting manager pending the appointment by Nicholson.

Belknap said "Welfare is entirely foreign to my background" but added he "had time on my hands and wanted to be of service."

The job carries with it a $9000 yearly salary.

In announcing the appointment late Wednesday, Nicholson said Belknap has "no connection with welfare and will be a good watchdog" over the $21 million controlled by the department.

FRESQUES OUT

Nicholson earlier withdrew the appointment of James Fresques as welfare manager.

He had named Fresques and Robert S. McCullum to cabinet posts shortly after taking office. Later it was discovered that under the City Charter no councilman can be appointed to any position if he helped increase the salary of that job while a councilman.

McCullum had been appointed manager of parks and improvements. Both McCullum and Fresques are former councilmen.

Belknap, a registered Republican, has one daughter in Denver, Mrs. W. G. Davis of 7000 E. 32d ave. His wife died in 1953.

AIR FORCE JOBS

He was born on Feb. 17, 1892, at Corvallis, Ore. He was graduated from Oregon State College with a degree in electrical engineering and won his doctorate in engineering from the same school in 1940.

In 1923 he went to work with the Westinghouse Electric Corp. as a design and consulting engineer and had charge of the management of technical employment and training for the company on a nation-wide basis.

During World War II he served on the Officer Appointment Board and later handled personnel assignments for the Eighth and Ninth Air Forces in England.

After the war he was named deputy chief of the machinery and optics section of the Allied Control Authority in Berlin. From 1946 to 1948 he was chairman of the division of engineering for Rochester University and from 1948 to 1953 he was dean of graduate education for the U.S. Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright Air Force Base.

He moved to Denver in 1953 and, while maintaining a residence here, was director of professional personnel for the Atomic Energy Commission of the California University laboratory in Berkeley and Livermore, Calif.

Belknap said he had no immediate plans for the Welfare Department.

"I'll be in my office every day and will meet the people there and learn the job," he said. "That's the first order of business."

Rocky Mountain News, July 28, 1955

SHERMAN M. BELL

Game All Through

By Lee Casey

Theodore Roosevelt wrote in his own hand over his own signature that Sherman Bell, who died at Fitzsimons the other day, was "the very gamest man in a regiment of game men" - that is, the Rough Riders.

Considering who said it, that was extraordinary praise. It was not the first Roosevelt's habit to bestow superlatives on anybody, with the possible exception of himself. He was too much politician for that. Even in his book on his campaign in Cuba, when he wrote of the death of a gallant young Harvard graduate during the charge up San Juan, he hastened to add "and an equally gallant young graduate of Yale fell close to his side." So when Teddy praised anybody, with the aforementioned exception of himself, you can gamble that the praise was deserved.

But Sherman Bell had, by no means, shown all his stuff back in 1898. It was not until 1903, during the Cripple Creek strike, that he really got going. He was game - game all the way through. He was tough besides - perhaps the toughest man this Rocky Mountain country ever developed, and it developed plenty. He was as tough as some men thought they were - before they met him. He was as tough as William S. Hart used to look. He was tough when things were going his way, and tough when they weren't. He was game to the end.

A Valuable Type

I am not unfamiliar with the abuse heaped upon General Bell when he was going strong and the charges of high-handedness, to put it mildly, made against him. So far as his Colorado activities were concerned, my sympathies were on the other side.

But I admired him as a perfect example of a rare and valuable type of manhood. I admired his courage in the Cripple Creek days, even though I deplored the cause he stood for. I admired, vastly, the character he showed during the 15 years he was a patient at Fitzsimons.

General Bell could be, and frequently was, tough when he had a squad of soldiers behind him. He could be just as tough when he had nothing behind him but his own backbone which seemed to run clear down to his heels. He could walk straight through a crowd of strikers all threatening his life and, single-handed, arrest Big Bill Haywood and take him off to jail. Even those who, like myself, felt the strikers were fighting their battles couldn't help respecting a man like that.

"Military necessity recognizes no laws, either civil or social," was the phrase he used to express his attitude. That was merely a politer way of wording General Sherman's remark. In the Peabody-Moyer case, Justice Holmes, the darling of the liberals, said about the same thing in writing the majority opinion.

Still Unafraid

The man never lived who could look Sherman Bell in the eyes and make him give ground. Neither could illness make him whine or even complain. During 15 years, most of the time bed-ridden and in great pain, there was never a whimper out of him. Like St. Paul, he fought the good fight, or at least what he thought was the good fight; he ran his course; he kept faith as he saw it.

Sherman Bell lived in a period of transition. That is painful for most people. It is painful for most of us to be doing the same thing today.

But times of transition call for, although they do not always get, men like Sherman Bell - men who can see only one side of the question, their side, men willing to go all the way, men game to the core.

It is unfortunate that so much of General Bell's strength and courage was used up in a domestic dispute. But he was an outstanding example of the virtues that count for most in time of stress - the virtues that won the West, the virtues that stood out so nobly at Wake Island. Sherman Bell was stern and terrible. He was also a credit to the army, a credit to the race.

Rocky Mountain News, January 13, 1942, p. 8

MR. AND MRS. HARRY BELLAMY

Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy Look Back

Over Nearly 40 Years Together

By Pat King

Harry and Frederica Bellamy have been married nearly 40 years now and are busy as ever - or even busier.

Mr. Bellamy moved here from Illinois when he'd completed his schooling and went immediately into business. He was a partner in Kendrick-Bellamy Stationery Co. until his final retirement after World War II.

He had retired once before, previous to the war, but returned because of the manpower shortage. Quite active in civic and charitable doings, he "has never before been so busy."

"Freddy," as Mrs. Bellamy's friends call her, is the same way. She worked for 23 years in religious drama - writing, teaching and producing.

For nine years she has reviewed books for the American Association of University Women, she has always worked as a Red Cross director, she gives time to the Community Chest and has "an intense interest" in the Denver branch, National Poliomyelitis Foundation.

THEY LOVE DENVER

The Bellamys, both so fond of Denver, maintain "there's no better place to live."

Mrs. Bellamy attended Miss Wolcott's School and Bryn Mawr and studied singing in Germany, Italy and France. Shortly after she returned home she was a member of seven charity agency boards . . . and she's never been inactive since.

She sang soprano for organizations and local opera and was soloist for several years at Central Presbyterian Church.

A horse-woman then, she showed thoroughbreds in a number of shows. At that time she lived at 1400 Josephine st. - now the AAUW Clubhouse.

The Bellamys have one daughter, named Frederica after her mother. She is married to Col. George Arthur Lincoln, an assistant professor at West Point, now serving at the Pentagon.

HOME OLD AND FINE

The Bellamy home at 1174 Race st., is representative of Denver's oldest and finest homes. A large red stone house, it is filled with exquisite antiques, many of which are family heirlooms.

There are, for example, handmade Chinese hangings - nearly 100 years old now - and Japanese ivories. Some of the pieces were collected many years ago by Mrs. Bellamy's father, Judge Owen Edgar LeFevre.

And Timmy, their tiny, wiry-dog, has a manner which "belongs" in the lovely home. He is quiet and a bit dignified, pays his respects immediately and observes everything from across the rug, with occasionally friendly wags.

STUDENT OF HISTORY

Mrs. Bellamy, an avid reader of history and current events, is alert and interesting in her conversation. With grace and ease, she discusses politics, the arts and nations.

Her greatest interest at the moment is an understanding of the menace of Russian leaders - their disregard of human rights and dignity - and what has motivated their attitudes through the centuries.

"A book written in the United States," she maintains "must uphold traditionally fine American standards." And that is her only requirement, for her interest includes all phases - all subjects.

The Bellamys look and act young, and credit that to a "busy life."

Rocky Mountain News, April 22, 1951, p. 12

MRS. HARRY E. BELLAMY

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. Harry E. Bellamy
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Eva Frederica LeFevre Bellamy, born January 6, 1884 at Denver, Colorado.

Name of father: Owen Edgar LeFevre. a native of Ohio

Name of mother: Eva J. French, a native of Ohio

Attended School or college: Wolcott School, Denver; Bryn Mawr College

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Class of 1905, Degree of A.B.

Married: June 26, 1912 at Denver

Name of husband: Harry Elbert Bellamy, the son of Frank E. Bellamy and Marilla Porter

Names of children and years of birth: Frederica Eva Bellamy, born May 9, 1915

Avocation: Singer, lecturer, writer & producer of religious drama.
Newspaper work; book reviewer, foreign correspondent.

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

After graduation from Bryn Mawr College, lived one year in Berlin, Germany, and one in Florence, Italy. Returned to live in Europe 1908-1910. Book reviewer of Rocky Mountain News 1907-8; foreign correspondent for special travel articles 1908-1910.

Soprano with Municipal Band and local symphonies 1912-1922. Soprano in Music Week Operas 1923-1924.

Religious Drama director St. John's Cathedral 1919-1931. Chairman of Religious Drama Committee of Diocese of Colorado 1920. Member of Drama Commission of National Council of Episcopal Church of America 1922. Member of Colorado Council of Religious Education 1924-1929. Published religious dramas by Woman's Press & Century Company.

Please give autograph signature: (Signed) Frederica LeF. Bellamy

Biography File

ROBERT AMES BENNET

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Robert Ames Bennet
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Robert Ames Bennet, born February 3, 1870 at Denver, Colorado

Name of father: Hiram Pitt Bennet, a native of Maine

Name of mother: Clara Martha Ames (Bennet), a native of Wisconsin

Attended school or college: Denver school, and National Law School, Washington, D.C.

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Honorary degree of Master of Letters, University of Colorado, June-1917.

Married: Yes, June 14, 1893 at Denver, Colorado

Name of wife: Susan A. Housley, daughter of Joseph Housley and Harriet Ballard (Housley)

Names of children and years of birth: Harold Housley Bennet, August 8, 1896.

Vocation: Author, 1901 to present time

Avocation: Lawyer, 1892-7; City Secretary, Assessor and Collector, Port Arthur, Texas 1898-9; Surveyor, 1897 and 1901-7

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: City Secretary, etc. as given above.

Please give autograph signature.                      (signature)                      Robert Ames Bennet

Biography File

CHRISTIAN A. BENNETT

A man of earnest purpose, possessing much legal knowledge and ability, Christian A. Bennett, of Boulder, has met with deserved success as a lawyer, the truth of facts and principles of law seldom eluding his keen perceptions, while during the six years that he has recently served as district judge he made justice the constant motive of his decisions. A native of Wisconsin, he was born, November 7, 1849, in Ozaukee county, and there received his rudimentary education. His parents, Daniel J. and Iretta (DeCouders) Bennett, were both born in New York state, but subsequently bought a farm in Wisconsin, and there lived for many years. Neither are now living, the father having died in 1905, and the mother in 1901.

Beginning the study of law in Vienna, Missouri, Christian A. Bennett was admitted to the Missouri bar in 1871, and for several years thereafter was prosperously employed in the practice of his profession in Vienna. Coming to Colorado in 1883, Mr. Bennett continued his professional work in Greeley until 1897, when he was elected treasurer of Weld county. Serving in that capacity most satisfactorily for two years, he was re-elected to the same office in 1899 for another term, but served one year only, being, in 1900, elected district judge. Assuming the duties of his new position, Judge Bennett served most efficiently for six years. Retiring from the bench with honor, he located in Boulder, where he has an excellent and remunerative practice, a large amount of which is connected with irrigation law.

On December 3, 1873, Mr. Bennett married Mary R., daughter of A. K. Burke, of Vienna, Missouri, and of the five children born of their union, four are living, namely: John A., Lena, Mabel, and Nellie. Politically Mr. Bennett is a Democrat, and in religion he is liberal in his views. Socially he is a member of the Boulder County Bar Association, and fraternally he belongs to Boulder Lodge No. 566, B.P.O.E., Poudre Valley Lodge, No. 12, I.O.O.F.; to the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and to the Woodman of the World.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 305

ELMER BENNETT

Native Coloradan 'Carrying Ball'

For Interior Dept. on Basin Fight

By JAMES DANIEL

Rocky Mountain News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 - A native Coloradan is "carrying the ball" for the Interior Department on the Upper Colorado Basin fight.

Elmer Bennett, legislative counsel for Interior Sec. Douglas McKay, drafts--or has drafted--legislative changes; advises the boss on the probable reaction of individual congressmen; and undertakes to marshal support on the hill for policies and proposals the Administration thinks to be in the public interest.

Bennett came to his job by way of Sen. Eugene Millikin's office, where he served for two years prior to August 1953 as legislative assistant and executive secretary.

HE'S LIKEABLE

Earlier, he was three years on the staff of the Federal Trade Commission, working on the big steel case that led to an agreement in the steel industry to stop certain "basing point" practices.

On the hill Bennett is regarded as one of the more likeable and effective of the Administration's "bright young men." Born in 1917 at Longmont, Colo., he heads a staff of 18, including a goodly number of democratic appointees, who apparently swear by him.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Bennett, live in Greeley, where Elmer attended high school and later Colorado State College of Education.

He took law at Stanford University, Cal., and before the war worked as a novice attorney for Standard Oil. He was in the Navy in World War II and also worked for the Army in a civilian capacity. The Army brought him to Washington in 1946.

COLORADO PRODUCT

He is married to the former Gertrude Turner of Golden, Colo.

There is a lot about Elmer Bennett that stamps him as a Colorado product. For one thing, his attitude on conservation. He believes in conserving and developing sensibly the natural resources of the west.

At Millikin's office he argued persuasively both against exploitative policies and against government monopolistic ones.

In the Upper Colorado Basin fight, Bennett said he thinks some Rocky Mountain state officials sometimes are in danger of forgetting "the primary fact of life for our area." He says it is "that the rest of the country very much needs to be persuaded that historic reclamation policies we take for granted are, in the overall changing picture of today, still valid."

MUST SHOW UNITY

To obtain congressional approval at this session of the Upper Basin Bill will take a great deal of effort, he says. But more than that, he said, it will require an extraordinary degree of unity in the Western states affected - "more than has been shown so far, certainly."

Bennett said that the Western states, in arguing family-fashion over the distribution of water, power benefits and so forth, should be careful not to allow their disagreements to become magnified. Or else, they'll provide states' traditional opponents, the downstream areas and the conservationists, with fodder.

Rocky Mountain News, January 11, 1955, p. 22

ELMER F. BENNETT
Greeley Man Heads Big U.S. Legal Staff
By BARNET NOVER
Chief, Post Washington Bureau.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. --Elmer F. Bennett, 40, of Greeley, Colo., heads a law "firm" of 170 lawyers.

This doesn't mean they're all listed on a glass door somewhere. The only listing behind Bennett's name is: "Solicitor, U. S. Department of Interior."

And Bennett, born in Longmont, Colo., and educated at Eaton and Greeley, has a top job in the Eisenhower administration. His law "firm" served by a staff of nearly 200--grapples daily with a fantastic diversity of legal questions.

These questions range from the legality of multi-million dollar reclamation projects to a dispute over an Indian land title. Bennett's problems may involve interpretation of statutes involving water rights, public land administration, oil and gas leases on the national domain, power sales from Bonneville and Coulee Dam and a host of other laws, regulations and administrative decisions involving the Interior Department.

About half of the solicitor's staff are in regional offices situated in Denver, Portland, Ore., Sacramento, Los Angeles, Tulsa, Okla., and Juneau, Alaska. This field staff of the solicitor provide the day-to-day legal services required by Interior's many active bureaus.

Born in Longmont, Colo., on Sept. 17, 1917, Bennett was educated in the Eaton, Colo., High School, and Colorado State College at Greeley. He has a law degree from Stanford University.

BIG MAN ON CAMPUS

Bennett is remembered at Colorado State as "a small man in stature but a big man on the campus." He was an outstanding debate team member, active in student newspaper work.

He is one of two Coloradans in the top echelon of the Interior Department. Hatfield Chilson, undersecretary, is from Loveland, only a few miles from Longmont and Greeley.

During World War II Bennett served with the Navy and later with the Ordnance Department of the U. S. Army where he was engaged in management and planning work.

From 1948 to 1951 he was a trial attorney for the Federal Trade Commission, specializing in the anti-monopoly field.

ADVISER TO MILLIKIN

From 1951 to 1953 he served as legislative and legal adviser to Sen. Eugene D. Millikin of Colorado.

He joined the Interior Department in 1953 as special assistant to the solicitor and legislative counsel for the department.

He played a big part in the fight for Congressional approval of the Upper Colorado Storage project.

His testimony before the Senate and House Interior Committees, where he brilliantly met the legal assault on the project launched by Northcutt Ely, the high-paid California legal lobbyist, won him high praise from Senators Millikin, Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Arthur V. Watkins of Utah and others.

His wife is the former Gertrude Turner of Golden, Colo. They have two children and live in a split-level house in a nearby Maryland suburb.

Denver Post, October 20, 1957, p. 2AA.

HORACE G. BENSON

Horace G. Benson, lawyer, was born in Atchison, Kan., Sept. 18, 1863, the youngest son of Harrison T. and Eletha E. Benson. In 1866 his parents moved to Springfield, Mo., where his mother and brother died. From that place he moved to a farm situate midway between Lawrence and Topeka, Kan. He came to Colorado in 1871, settled in Golden for a time, and in 1873 came to Denver. His next change was to Del Norte, going thence to Lake City, where he remained two years; thence to the San Miguel country, residing there until Sept., 1879. During a part of this time he had attended the public schools and also learned the carpenter's trade.

In 1879 he came to Denver and attended the schools up to 1881, when he entered the law office of E. B. Sleeth and began his studies. He remained with Mr. Sleeth and his partner, O. B. Liddell, until 1881; passed a creditable examination before he attained his majority and received his license as an attorney, Oct. 24, 1884. He then began practicing, and in the meantime has achieved very gratifying success.

Oct. 7, 1885, he married Miss Mary E. Schlink of Denver. Mr. Benson is a member of the Knights of Pythias, P. O. S. of A., and also of the Rocky Mountain Camp of Modern Woodmen; was elected one of the managers for a long term, and chosen delegate to the meeting of the head camp, held in Chicago. After many trying experiences for one so young, he seems well calculated to hew out a satisfactory career in the great profession he has adopted.

Hall, History of Colorado, vol. 4, p. 89

ALFRED ERNEST BENT

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Alfred Ernest Bent
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Alfred Ernest Bent, born August 12, 1862 at Port Elgin, New Brunswick, Dominion of Canada

Name of father: James Martin Bent, (direct descendent, 8th generation of John Bent who settled in Sudbury, Mass., in 1638), a native of Fort Lawrence, Nova Scotia

Name of Mother: Elizabeth Barnes, a native of Sackville, New Brunswick, Canada

Attended school or college: Grade and High School of Girard, Kansas.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Lamar, Colorado, September 1886; to Denver, January 1905

Married - First: December 19, 1888 at Lamar, Colorado

Name of Wife: Alice Maude Black, (died Sept. 24, 1893), the daughter of Amos R. Black and Clara Black

Name of children and years of birth: Donald Earl, at Lamar, Colo., Nov. 23, 1890

Second Marriage: Edith Isabel Stanley, at Denver, March 16, 1895

Names of children and years of birth: Alfred E. Jr., born at Denver, March 31, 1908; James Gordon, born at Denver, December 18, 1909

Avocation: Clerk in a store in Girard, Kansas from 1878 to 1883. Clerk in store in Kansas City, Missouri from 1883 to 1886. Engaged in the loan and investment business in Lamar, Colorado from 1886 to 1890. Engaged in the irrigation, construction and land development business from 1890 to January 1905. Engaged in the ownership and operation of electric light and power plants from 1905 to 1921.

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Mayor of Lamar, Colorado, 1888. Was Auditor of the State of Colorado for the Biennial period 1905 and 1906. Was Treasurer of the State of Colorado for the Biennial period of 1907 and 1908.

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: From 1890 to 1905 was actively identified with the general irrigation development of the entire Arkansas Valley from Pueblo to eastern boundary of Colorado. Financed the construction of the Lamar Canal and consummated the sale of same to the American Beet Sugar Company. Was President of the Beet Sugar Company which promoted the erection of the sugar factory at Lamar, Colorado; erected and operated the electric light and steam engine plant until 1911. After the fire which destroyed the Bent County Court house at Las Animas, Colorado, 1888, donated to Bent County an abstract of the taxes for the year, upon which was collected over $70,000 in taxes. In 1905 addressed the Colorado State Realty Association on the subject: "The Conservation of Colorado Waters" which resulted in the State Engineer's office being deluged with irrigation storages filings; many of which matured into the actual development of millions of acre feet of reservoir capacity. Addressed the National Irrigation Congress in Denver _____, subject entitled: "Federal Roads for the Forrest Reserves," which shortly after was a subject of extensive circulation in the United States Congress and a potent factor in awakening National interest in road construction which subsequently resulted in the Bankhead Bill and various federal aid measures.

Biography File

Jerome Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 137

Death: Rocky Mountain News, Nov. 25, 1922, p. 9; Denver Post, Nov. 25, 1922, p. 4; Denver Times, Nov. 25, 1922, p. 3

SILAS BENT

Bent, Silas, lawyer and jurist, was born in 1768, in Massachusetts, and was educated in New England. In 1788 he removed to Ohio, and afterward to Virginia, where he married Martha Kerr. In 1804, after holding various offices, he was appointed chief deputy surveyor for Upper Louisiana, by Albert Gallatin. This brought him to St. Louis and in 1807 he was made first judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the District of St. Louis. The next year he became auditor of public accounts. In 1809 he was made presiding judge of the St. Louis Court, and signed the first town charter. In 1811 he was again public auditor, and in 1813 became a Supreme judge of Missouri Territory. This office he held until it was abolished by the admission of Missouri into the Union. After that he was appointed clerk of the St. Louis County Court, and held that office until his death in 1827. His children were John Bent, a lawyer of prominence, who died in 1845; Charles Bent, first Governor of New Mexico under the government of the United States; Julia Bent, who became the wife of Governor Lilburn W. Boggs; Lucy Bent, Dorcas Bent, William W. Bent, Mary Bent, George Bent, Robert Bent, Edward Bent, and Silas Bent.

Encyclopedia of the History of Missouri, vol. 1, p. 202

CHILDREN OF SILAS BENT

LUCY<sup>7</sup> BENT (Silas,<sup>6</sup> Silas,<sup>5</sup> Elijah,<sup>4</sup> Hopestill,<sup>3</sup> Peter,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>) was born in Ohio, March 8, 1805, but went with her parents the following year to St. Louis, Mo., where she died March 2, 1871. She married, Sept. 28, 1826, Joseph Russell, who was born in Rockbridge County, Va., Feb. 27, 1786, and moved to Missouri about 1820.

Children, all born near St. Louis:

- i. JULIA A. B.<sup>8</sup> RUSSELL, b. Oct. 16, 1827; m. Dec. 20, 1853, Trumbull Gustine Russell, b. April 7, 1823; not related so far as is known. Five children, only two living: Lucy Bent and Daniel Ronouard.
- ii. JOHN G. RUSSELL, b. Nov. 6, 1830.
- iii. CHARLES S. RUSSELL, b. March 7, 1833.
- iv. RUSSELLA LUCY RUSSELL, b. Sept. 4, 1835; m. George W. Parker, Pres. of the Parker-Russell Mining & Mfg. Co. of St. Louis.

DORCAS<sup>7</sup> BENT (Silas,<sup>6</sup> Silas,<sup>5</sup> Elijah,<sup>4</sup> Hopestill,<sup>3</sup> Peter,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>) was born March 12, 1807, in St. Louis, Mo., where she died Feb. 27, 1888, ae. 81. She married, Dec. 1829, William Chiles Carr, who was born in Albemarle County, Va., April 15, 1783, and settled, 1804, in St. Louis, where he died March 31, 1851. He was judge of St. Louis Circuit Court from 1826 to 1833; he had five children by a previous marriage.

Children of William C. and Dorcas (Bent) Carr:

- i. DABNEY<sup>8</sup> CARR, b. June 29, 1831; living in St. Louis; m. Mary E. Dyer. Four children: 1. Mary L<sup>9</sup>. 2. Carrie. 3. Dabney W. 4. Emeline.
- ii. WALTER BENT CARR, b. Jan. 11, 1833; d. March 22, 1865; m. Eugenia L. Paschall. Five children: 1. William C. 2. N. Paschall. 3. Martha E. 4. Mary P. 5. Walter Bent.
- iii. WILLIAM CHILES CARR, b. 1835; d. 1840.
- iv. CHARLES BENT CARR, b. July 28, 1836; living in St. Louis; m. Louisa A. Atchison. Seven children: 1. George A. 2. Dorcas Bent, m. Ernest P. Bell. 3. Charles Bent. 4. Fannie L. 5. Marie. 6. Robert C. 7. Hazel A.
- v. GEORGE WASHINGTON CARR, b. 1838; d. 1839.
- vi. THOMAS JEFFERSON CARR, b. Jun 28, 1840; d. Nov. 21, 1876; m. Minerva Norton. One child, Eugenia.
- vii. ROBERT SEPTIMUS CARR, b. Feb. 20, 1842; living in St. Louis; m. first, Fannie Selby; m. second, Helen Sims. One son, Robert L., by first wife; and one dau., Mary Josephine, by 2d wife.
- viii. MARTHA ELIZABETH CARR, b. 1844; d. 1849.
- ix. EUGENIA CARR, b. May 19, 1847; living in St. Louis; m. Augustus Kerr Phillips. Four children, one of whom bears the name of Silas Bent<sup>9</sup> Phillips.

WILLIAM<sup>7</sup> BENT (Silas,<sup>6</sup> Silas,<sup>5</sup> Elijah,<sup>4</sup> Hopestill,<sup>3</sup> Peter,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>) was born in St. Louis, Mo., May 23, 1809, and died in Bent County, Col., May 19, 1869. About 1826 he accompanied his brother Charles and others to the Arkansas valley in what is now the State of Colorado, then simply an unexplored part of the vast Louisiana purchase. Here they built a temporary wooden fort, which lasted until the completion in 1832 of what was known at first as Fort William, but later as Bent's Fort. From this as a centre he made trapping and trading expeditions among the Indians. When the fort was built the surrounding country was occupied by Comanches and Kiowas, but in 1836 he went to the valley of the Platte for a wife, a Cheyenne maid, daughter of a chief of great influence. The result was that about three-quarters of that tribe removed to the Arkansas valley, and his business increased correspondingly. In the palmy days he employed a hundred trappers.

During the Mexican War, in 1846 and 1847, the fort was headquarters for the commissary department, and many supplies were stored there. William Bent acted as guide as far as Taos, N. M. (his brother's home), for the 2d Missouri Cavalry, commanded by Col. Sterling Price (later a Confederate major-general), and after that was known as Col. Bent. In 1852 the Government offered him $12,000 for his fort, but his price was $16,000. As no agreement could be reached, he loaded what goods he could into his wagons, set fire to the powder magazine, and blew up the fort.

In the spring of 1853 Col. Bent began a new fort, forty miles east of the old one, completing it the following year. In 1859 he was appointed U. S. Indian agent for the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, but resigned in the next year. In the fall of 1859 he leased his fort to the Government, and it was occupied with troops and called Fort Wise, after Gov. Wise of Virginia; but this name was changed in 1861 to Fort Lyon, after the gallant Gen. Lyon, one of the first to die in the Civil War. The fort was abandoned in 1867 and a new fort was built by the United States twenty-five miles up the Arkansas River and named Fort Lyon, but this was given up in 1890.

In 1859 Col. Bent began improvements near the mouth of the Purgatoire River, Colorado, building a stockade one hundred feet square. In 1860 R. M. Moore, from Jackson County, Mo., joined him, and soon after married the Colonel's oldest daughter, Mary. This daughter had been educated in the family of Col. Albert G. Boone, a relative of the famous Daniel Boone of Kentucky. "The wedding," says the Kansas City Journal of Commerce, "was such a one as could be given only on the Western frontier and at the mansion of Col. Bent." The latter assembled his old hunting companions, formed an Indian council and passed around the pipe of peace. R. M. Moore, who was born in Ohio in 1833, was the first probate judge and first superintendent of schools for Bent County, 1870, and is now one of the largest ranch owners and cattle raisers in the county, and a man greatly respected. He has 2200 head of cattle, besides a large lot of sheep.

Col. Bent's wife died soon after the birth of her youngest child, and he married her sister. He himself died at his home, near Las Animas, Colo., May 19, 1869, ae. 60. Says Hall's History of Colorado: "A remarkable man in his day was William Bent, not perhaps according to the aesthetic standard, but in the estimation of his fellows and of the red men, where his iron firmness yet kindly manners, his integrity, truthfulness and courage not only compelled admiration but endeared him to them. As a consequence, no such harvests as he gathered were open to his competitors, and when his heavily loaded trains reached St. Louis, bearing the fruits of his enterprise, they came like ships bearing coveted cargoes from foreign lands."

William Bent's children were:

- i. MARY,<sup>8</sup> b. Jan, 22, 1838; d. May 6, 1878; m. April 3, 1860, R. M. Moore.
Six children, four girls and two boys.
- ii. ROBERT, d. in Indian Territory in April, 1889.
- iii. GEORGE, living, 1894, at Darlington, I. T.

- iv. JULIA, m. Edward Gurrie; living, 1894, at Darlington, I. T.
- v. CHARLES, was educated at St. Louis, but joined the Indians and died with them in 1868. The cause of his death was malarial fever superinduced by a wound received in a fight with the Kaws near the mouth of the Walnut Creek in Kansas. His picture appears in Harper's Magazine for Feb. 1868 (vol. 36, p. 305).

MARY<sup>7</sup> BENT (Silas,<sup>6</sup> Silas,<sup>5</sup> Elijah,<sup>4</sup> Hopetill,<sup>3</sup> Peter,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>) was born Jan. 25, 1811, in St. Louis, Mo., where she died March 3, 1866, aged 55; married Oct. 22, 1835, Major Jonathan Leet Bean, U. S. A., born July 14, 1800, died July 16, 1853.

Children, all born in St. Louis, Mo. (three died in infancy):

- i. WILLIAM CHAMBERS BEAN,<sup>8</sup> b. Sept. 9, 1836, d. July 14, 1885; m. Oct. 4, 1866, Susan Johnson, b. Petersburg, Va., Jan. 1, 1837. Four children, all b. in St. Louis: 1. Mary Leet<sup>9</sup> Bean, b. July 31, 1869. 2. Annie Johnson Bean, b. April 12, 1871. 3. Ashton Garrett Bean, b. March 11, 1872. 4. Edith Bean, b. Sept. 24, 1882.
- ii. MARY CATHERINE BEAN, b. Dec. 28, 1843, d. Feb. 6, 1891; m. Nov. 27, 1867, James Bonde Sharpe, b. Mayslick, Ky., July 5, 1833, d. Feb. 9, 1894; five children: 1. Norville Wallace<sup>9</sup> Sharpe, b. Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 21, 1869, living in St. Louis; m. Aug. 19, 1895, Daisy McClain Scott. 2. Bent Sharpe, b. St. Louis, March 29, 1871. 3. Daisy Sharpe, b. 1873, d. 1882. 4. Charles B. Sharpe, b. 1877, d. 1884. 5. James Marion Sharpe, b. Ferguson, Mo., July 4, 1883.

Source not given

BERGEN FAMILY

THOMAS C. BERGEN

Mr. Thomas C. Bergen was born in Dearborn county, Indiana, June 8th, 1820. At the age of fourteen he left his father's home to engage in farming and the raising of stock in Dewitt county, Illinois. The last four years there he operated a flour mill. He was married August 16th, 1841 to Judith Fletcher and came to Colorado in 1859, where he settled in Elk Park (now Bergen Park). Here he operated a tavern, raised stock and farmed until 1873, when he moved two miles south of Morrison and gave his attention to raising stock and to the culture of trout. He had a large fish lake well stocked with choice varieties of fish. He also was interested in an irrigation project.

He was a member of the people's convention, called to petition congress to make Colorado a State. He was also a member of the first legislature and when the county of Jefferson was first organized, he was elected county commissioner on the Republican ticket, and served for eight years. In 1885 he moved to the town of Morrison, Colo., and later to Phoenix, Arizona, where he passed away in 1888. He was sixty-eight years of age. [See Denver Post, November 4, 1956, p. 17A for article about his death.]

JUDITH R. BERGEN

Judith R. Bergen, wife of Thomas C. Bergen, passed away at Mt. Morrison, Colorado, February twenty-third, 1891. According to Mrs. Grace Rowe, clerk of statistics of Jefferson county, there were no records of death certificates kept in Jefferson county until 1900, and I have been informed Mrs. Bergen was buried in Morrison cemetery.

WILLIAM HENRY BERGEN

On Monday, October 27th, 1930, a son of Thomas C. Bergen, William Bergen, who came here with his father in 1860, at the age of fifteen years, stood on the exact spot where his father built his first cabin in the early summer of 1859, he was then eighty-five years old. On April 14th, 1928 for the first time in half a century, a brother, William, and Mrs. Martha Greene, of Ashway, New Jersey, a sister and sole survivor of the Bergen family, met at a family reunion at the home of Mr. Bergen's daughter, Mrs. Ralph J. Mayer, 1337 Corona St., Denver, Colo. She was seventy two, and Bergen eighty-three. The family gathering at which Bergen and his sister were reunited was also attended by his two daughters, seven grandchildren, and four great grandchildren.

SARAH ALLEN BERGEN POST

In 1862 Sarah Ellen Bergen became the wife of Amos F. Post of Minnesota, who crossed the plains in 1860, and at one time was a machinist for George M. Pullman, the inventor of the Pullman Sleeping Car. In passing to and from the mines, through Bergen Park, he met and wooed Sarah Bergen, daughter of Thomas C. Bergen, then a fair girl of twenty. Soon after the wedding Mr. Post established a trading post at Bergen Park, and continued in business there until 1877. The family then went to Evergreen, where another trading post was established. Nine children blessed this union, eight of whom were still living in 1909. It is understood the remains of Sarah Bergen Post lie in the Mt. Morrison cemetery. Another daughter, Martha A. Bergen, married a man named Greene.

BERGEN PARK

When T. C. Bergen settled in the Park he visualized there would be city here some day. His dream never was realized although thousands of fortune hunters traveled upon the road only a few settled in the region. Those who stayed were mostly engaged in the freighting business, and stage lines. A few of these settlers raised stock, most of the population being interested in the timber business. A large quantity of timber from this region was taken to Beaver Creek Station and moved on the railroad to Denver and the mining districts. There was a great variation of population within the boundaries of the park during the early history. The largest being in 1880 when there were four hundred, while in 1888 there were only fifty remaining. The town never materialized to any importance only a few houses were built. It was, however, the center of all activities of the region.

The largest building was built by Amos F. Post and was used as a trading post. It was approximately forty by sixty feet. After Mr. Post moved to Evergreen, in 1877, this building was used by the settlers as a dance hall and community center. It stood about one hundred feet south and a little east of the Bergen monument.

The region was the hunting grounds of the Ute Indians who were friendly towards the settlers. No trouble of any importance ever occurred except some pilfering by the Indians. The nearest village to the Park proper was located on lower Soda Creek.

The history of a settlement near Forsberg Saddle or Upper Beaver Creek seems to have been lost. This area was thickly settled in the early days by settlers engaged in the timber business and farming. The population, I understand, was mostly of Swedish descent although there was negro living there by the name of Bailey. The settlers objected to him being there and tried on several occasions to burn him out but were unsuccessful. The houses of this section have long ago disappeared along with the school house which stood until a few years ago, and the only marks of this settlement is a burial plot of approximately fifty by seventy-five feet. There are eight marked graves with head stones or crosses visible today which dates back to the 60's and 70's.

Today only a few of these early settlers are living who were born and raised in or near the Park, or came in their early youth. The Johnson brothers, George and Theodore, the Hager brothers, George and John, with Albert and Ellvena Rudin, are the only ones living now that were born here and have lived here their entire lives. Mrs. Elizabeth Swanson came here when she was three years old. They lived near the reservoir above the Forsberg Saddle, where her sister, Mary Robson was born. Later Elizabeth married Erickson, who built a hewed log home in which wooden pins were used instead of nails. Here her two sons, Carl and Algot Erickson, were born.

Mr. Al J. Hendricks came here when he was six years old, his father operated a saw mill for a number of years. He remembers quite well a lot of incidents mentioned in this book as he helped at the saw mill in his early youth. He is the son-in-law of Mr. Ben Hayward mentioned in this book.

Source: Our Memories of Bergen Park, C. M. Hamilton

Notes: Mrs. Theo Bergen Green came to Colo. 1860 from Westerly, R. I.

EMIL AUGUST BERGER

Hotel Owner

For many years one of the best known hotel men in Denver, the late Emil August Berger was a remarkable man in the achievements he accomplished after coming to this country from his native land in Germany. He was among that group of sturdy pioneers who came when the country of the great West was sparsely settled and, casting his lot in with other adventurers, he pushed through various experiences and found his reward for his perseverance.

Emil August Berger was born at Zell, Baden, Germany, February 3, 1857, the son of Jacob Berger. In 1882, he left his native country and, without any knowledge of the language, customs or conditions of this country, came straight to Chicago, where he worked for a while, and then moved on with that file of adventurous pioneers seeking their fortunes in the West. He went first to Kremmling, Colorado, where he started in the cattle business.

Six years later he returned to Europe where he was married, and brought his bride to the little ranch in Kremmling, where they made their home until 1907, when they moved to Denver. Having established his homestead, Mr. Berger later acquired a large tract of land and gradually developed it into one of the finest and most profitable ranches in Colorado.

Mr. Berger was one who displayed the quiet courage that marks humanity's progress in the lives of those who, instead of taking lines of least resistance and getting into a rut that makes life humdrum and does nothing for advancement, branch out in the face of hardships and dangers and probable discouragement and push on until they conquer or are conquered. When such men achieve success it is indeed worth the praise and admiration of all who know them.

Mr. Berger had many wild experiences in dealing with or fighting Indians. These bands of red men would attempt to steal his cattle, or horses, and in the defense of his property, his home and his family from these depredations, he had many narrow escapes.

While living on his ranch, Mr. Berger made a trip to the then small town of Denver once every year to purchase enough supplies for the family to last them for twelve months, until he could go again. This trip was made in a wagon and took several weeks each fall. He became so accustomed to the hardships and dangers of the pioneer's life that he took them as a matter of course, as indeed they were a part of the old life in the West.

As the children grew to school age, Mr. Berger realized that they should have the best educational advantages he could provide, and with this end in view, he moved his family to Denver. He sold his ranch and reinvested his capital in the Brunswick Hotel, which he managed successfully for twelve years, and in 1924, he bought the Granite Hotel, which he and his son, Oscar, managed until the time of Mr. Berger's death on October 28, 1927.

In 1888, in New York City, Emil August Berger, having been to Vevey, Switzerland, and brought his bride-to-be back to this country, married Laura Schlumpf. They had four children: 1. Bertha, wife of George W. Wagner, of Denver, Colorado. 2. Ida, wife of Raymond Reide, of Denver. 3. Mollie, wife of Earl Stump, of Wichita Falls, Texas. 4. Oscar Berger of Denver, who married Bertha Hunter. Mrs. Berger died in 1923.

In the death of Mr. Berger, the city loses one of its prominent men and the State of Colorado one of her pioneer builders. His name will ever be in the annals of the history of the settling of the West as one who blazed the way for the great development that has followed, and no one can ever measure his splendid contribution to this great achievement.

Encyclopedia of Biography, v. 36, p. 267

GEORGE B. BERGER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of George B. Berger
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: George B. Berger, born May 2, 1869 at New Castle, Pennsylvania

Name of father: William B. Berger, a native of Pennsylvania

Name of mother: Margaret Kountze Berger*, a native of Ohio

Attended school or college: Yale

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: 1888 S.S.S. - Ph. B.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: October 1869

Married: Yes, April 5, 1899 at Denver

Name of wife: Carry A. Merriam Berger, the daughter of Gen. H. C. Merriam and Una M. Merriam

Names of children and years of birth: Merriam Berger, born December 22, 1900; Margaret Berger Mott, born April 1, 1902; George B. Berger Jr., born November 20, 1905

Avocation: President, Colorado National Bank of Denver

Give dates: Since 1911

*See Kountze page Obituary: Rocky Mountain News, Aug 23, 1939, p. 1; Rocky Mountain News, Aug 24, 1939, p. 4; Denver Post, Aug 23, 1939; Denver Post, Aug 24, 1939, p. 14

Also see: Jerome Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 249

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 54, p. 84

Sketches of Colorado, p. 228

Biography File

GEORGE B. BERGER JR.
Named President of Colorado National Bank

George B. Berger Jr. Wednesday became the fifth president of the Colorado National Bank in its 89-year history with the appointment of Harold Kountze, president for the last 21 years, as chairman of the board of directors.

The new president is the son of a former president of the bank, as was his predecessor.

Kountze has been with the Colorado National since 1907. He became a vice president in 1911 and president in 1934.

SERVED 25 YEARS

Berger has been with the bank since 1930 and was elected a vice president in 1935. Since 1939 he has been a member of the board. During World War II he was a commander in the U.S. Navy.

He long has been active in civic affairs and currently is president of the trustees of the Denver Art Museum and chairman of the Denver Centennial Celebration Committee.

The bank is Colorado's oldest bank. It was founded in 1862 by the late Luther Kountze, uncle of the new board chairman. The bank originally was known as the Kountze Brothers Bank and was changed to its present name when a national charter was granted in 1866.

DADS OF BOTH

Charles B. Kountze, father of the new board chairman, took over the management of the bank in 1863 and was elected president in 1874, holding that position until his death in 1911.

George B. Berger Sr., father of the new president was president from 1911 until 1934, when Harold Kountze took over.

The Colorado National has been in its present building at 17th and Champa sts. since 1915. Prior to that time it had been located at 15th and Blake sts., 15th and Market sts., and 17th and Larimer sts.

Rocky Mountain News, September 22, 1955, p. 43

Denver Post, September 21, 1955, pp. 1, 24

GEORGE B. BERGER JR.
Hustles to Fulfill Business, Civic Tasks
By LEO ZUCKERMAN
Rocky Mountain News Writer

George B. Berger Jr. still holds the record for the mile run at Hotchkiss Preparatory School, Lakeville, Conn., that he set back in 1924.

The time for the record run is 4 minutes, 31.2 seconds, which is good running, the sports experts say, but frankly doesn't match the scurrying the amiable Mr. Berger does these days.

The 180-pound banker, who has added only 15 pounds to his six foot, two-inch frame since Hotchkiss, maintains a full schedule.

COMMUNITY CHEST LEADER

He is vice president and a director of the white-columned Colorado National Bank, and director of Denver Civil Defense. He's president of the board of the Denver Art Museum, board member of the Denver Museum of Natural History, director of both the Aspen Co. and Aspen Skiing Corp., and a member of the Denver Chamber of Commerce.

He's been leading Community Chest campaigns since the mid-30's and aiding in every other worthy drive in the community. He is active in the University, Mile High and Denver Country Clubs.

He also fishes, shoots ducks and plays an "unpredictable" game of golf.

"Nobody makes you take part in these various drives and campaigns and other community affairs," the rugged, vigorous banker said. "They are simply necessary things. There's no fun attached to them - it's all hard work. But somebody has to do them."

HE DOES BOTH JOBS

"Mayor Newton asked me to take over the civil defense program. How can any person refuse a request like that? The bank gave me a six-month leave of absence to devote myself to the defense job. At the end of the six months - July 27 - I went fishing for a week and then came back to the bank. I'm doing both jobs now."

Mr. Berger was born here Nov. 20, 1905. His father was cashier of the Colorado National Bank then and at the time of his death in 1939 was chairman of the board.

The gangling banker-to-be attended the old Corona School and Aaron Gove Junior High School before entering Hotchkiss.

His scholastic achievements are attested to by such former Hotchkiss classmates as Dr. James Arneill and Attorney Joseph Hodges - and the headmaster who urged Mr. Berger to become an English instructor.

BETTERS MILE MARK

The instructors at Yale University, where Mr. Berger bettered his mile performance by nearly five seconds and also received a Phi Beta Kappa key, were of the same opinion. He majored in English and still recites poetry at the drop of a hat.

After graduation, he joined the New York City banking firm of Brown Brothers & Co., which since has added the name of Averill Harriman to its title.

"Those were hectic times," he recalled. "I was there two years as a so-called apprentice and during that time there was a year called 1929 - remember it? I learned a heck of a lot during that mad period."

Mr. Berger returned to Denver in May, 1930, and a month later joined the Colorado National Bank trust department. In 1935, he was named a vice president and in 1939 a director. He's still the "trust department man" at the bank although his duties have expanded into other departments.

HAS THREE DAUGHTERS

In April, 1932, Mr. Berger was married to Laureen Porter Walker, whom he met at a dinner party two years before. Mrs. Berger's distinguished grandfathers were the late John Brisben Walker, first editor of Cosmopolitan magazine and a fabulous Colorado figure, and Henry M. Porter, Colorado financier.

The three reasons Mr. Berger "hasn't, isn't and won't be represented at Hotchkiss," are Laureen, 17, a freshman at Smith College; Susan, 14, a ninth-grader at Kent School, and Caroline, 11, a seventh-grader at Graland School. The family home is at 230 Vine st.

Mr. Berger joined the Navy as a lieutenant in March, 1942, and spent two years in Washington working on financing of Navy contracts and negotiating contracts for fire control (radar, gunfire control, etc.) equipment.

WON LEGION OF MERIT

In 1944, he was transferred to the U. S. Naval Group China, in charge of the group's India unit and was based in Calcutta. A year later, he became liaison officer between Admiral Miles, head of the group, and Lt. Gen. Albert Wedemeyer. A full commander then, he received the Legion of Merit for his work.

After his release from service in October, 1945, he returned to the "comparative dullness of the bank work."

"But don't get the idea that bank work is dull," Mr. Berger said. "On the contrary it's very interesting and often exciting. You meet a lot of people with a lot of problems. All those problems are different and must be handled differently. There's nothing monotonous about it."

Rocky Mountain News, November 18, 1951, p. 12

MRS. OLA BERGER
Family of 50 Joins in Big Reunion
(Photograph)

Mrs. Ola Berger, 75, of Lamar, Colo. (center, with flower) attended a family reunion held in her honor Sunday at 5001 S. Acoma St. Fifty members of her family from Oregon, California, Washington and Colorado attended the family dinner. Youngest member of the family, which spans four generations, was Kevin Daniels, 1, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Daniels of Castle Rock. Mrs. Berger had five children, Mrs. Velma Day of Englewood; Mrs. Ray Smith of Lamar, Mrs. Leota Crowell of Lyons, Ore.; Kermit Yargus of San Bernardino, Calif., and Glenn Daniels of Castle Rock.

Denver Post, July 29, 1957, p. 3

DR. WILLIAM HARRY BERGTOLD

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Dr. William Harry Bergtold
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: William Harry Bergtold, born October 28, 1865 at Buffalo, New York

Name of father: Jacob Edward Bergtold, a native of Buffalo, New York (born May 28, 1835)

Name of mother: Louisa Hoffen Bergtold, a native of Buffalo, New York (born March 25, 1937)

Attended school or college: University of Buffalo, Columbia University

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: University of Buffalo M.D. 1886; Post Graduate & Instructor

College Physicians & Surgeons, Columbia University (1888); Hon. M.SE - Hobart College, 1890

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came first to Colorado 1881, here 2 years; settled here in Denver 1894.

Married: Yes, June 10, 1898 at New York City

Name of wife: Adele Darling Smith, the daughter of James B. Smith and Anna Dexter Smith

Names of children and years of birth

(1) Adele, (lived 2 weeks) 1899; (2) Louise Harriet, September 26, 1900 (Mrs. J. T. Woolfenden, Dearborn, Mich.: two daughters, Joan, age 6, and Shirley, age 3)

Avocation: Ornithologist

Give dates: Active ornithologist since 1883

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Fellow American Ornithologist Union; Major, U. S. National Army, and Chief Medical Service, Fitzsimons General Hospital, U.S.A. September to July (1918 to 1919); Capt. and Asst. Surgeon, National Guard, New York, 1890-1894

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

Spent the summer of 1882 assaying, in Leadville, Colorado
Practiced in Denver since 1894

Publications: Incubation Period Birds - Denver - 1917; Guide to Colorado Birds - Denver - 1928

Lesser Publications: Number (including medical & Zoological topics) about 200 titles.

Prof. of Pathology University subjects 1890-1894

Prof. of Pathology University Denver, 1900-1904. Assistant Instructor, Histology, College Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University 1888.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) W. H. Bergtold

See

Denver Municipal Facts 1 #10, December, 1918, p. 8

Denver Post, January 16, 1931, p. 28; March 20, 1936, p. 22

Rocky Mountain News, March 21, 1936, p. 6; March 25, 1936, p. 5

Biography File

MILTON E. BERNET
Know Your Business Leaders
Vice President of the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company
By DON MCMULLEN

Born in St. Louis, Missouri, attended the public schools - graduated from Central High School in St. Louis - Took Bachelor of Arts at the University of Missouri and was Captain of the Basketball Team. He served as a Lieutenant in the 29th Division in the First World War . . .

Came to Denver in 1928 and was made Vice-President of the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co. in 1934. He has been instrumental in helping to restore the Central City Opera House as a memorial to Colorado's pioneers. Has been on the Executive Committee since 1932 and is now Chairman of the Board. The Central City Play Festival will open its 1949 season with the captivating classic "Fledermaus" by Johann Strauss.

Monitor, May 20, 1949

Bernet, Mrs. Milton E., DAR #288534

WILLIAM E. BERRY
Centenarian Scoffs at Fracture
100 Years' Excitement Recalled by Denverite

It's a fine state of affairs mankind has come to when a fellow can no longer politely eat with his knife and must go to bed just because he has a busted shoulder, in the opinion of William E. Berry.

Mr. Berry, who has lived in Colorado since 1870 and whose home is at 1926 Curtis st., is just a little bit set in his ways about things like that. Mr. Berry was 100 years old last May 11. Yesterday, Mr. Berry was nursing a broken shoulder in Denver General Hospital as a result of a stumble on a downtown curb, but he took time out between repeated deprecations of the gravity of his injury to inform hospital attendants he had blooming well learned "how to feed myself without any help, even if I have to do it nowadays with a spoon, so's to be polite."

RECALLS EXCITING DAYS

While mowing away a hearty repast of macaroni, bread and butter, milk and fruit, Mr. Berry, propped up in his hospital bed, seasoned his meal with recollections from a century-plus of living.

"In the first place, it is a (a couple of words deleted here) note when they make a fellow go to bed just because he broke his shoulder," said Mr. Berry.

"Why, I've been shot several times and fought my way around the world with my bare fists in a hundred prize rings 70-80 years ago and nobody made this much fuss over a little thing like a broken bone.

'JUST LITTLE SCRATCHES'

"I'll be out of here in a couple of days, mark my words. I've never had a sickness in my life that a chew of tobacco wouldn't cure, except for a few accidents like this one, or worse."

The gunshot mishaps, Mr. Berry explained, "were just little scratches like pretty near everybody ran into" in the mining booms of Central City, Leadville and Cripple Creek.

"I used to pack enough six-shooters to take care of myself," he explained. "Everybody did, but I guess there ain't many of 'em left now, whether they did or didn't."

Mr. Berry came to Colorado 71 years ago in a covered wagon with the bride he married following his discharge from service at the close of the Civil War.

When asked which side he fought with, Mr. Berry's silvery 10-inch beard bristled and his bright, blue eyes flashed.

"They wasn't but one side a man could join - I was born in Philadelphia," he pointed out.

Immediately after the war, he said, he entered the prize ring and he and his wife toured the world, "with me earning our way with my fists."

He said he made four trips to England in the late '60s "just to whip the same fellow four times because they wouldn't give me the title until the last one."

On moving to Colorado, he staked several mining claims in the Central City-Blackhawk area. The following year his wife died at the birth of their twin children.

"I raised the kids in the mining camps, and though I shouldn't say so, they were fine kids," he said. "They've both been dead nearly 50 years. I haven't a living kith nor kin."

Mr. Berry said there is "nothing I can think of" to which to attribute his long life.

"I've drank whisky and I've chewed tobacco and I've done just about everything you're not supposed to do, I guess, and here I am," he said.

At the decline of the mining boom, Mr. Berry entered the contracting business and remained active in it until he was struck down several years ago in Denver by an automobile.

"That kind of laid me up and made me figure for the first time I ain't as young as I used to be," he said. "At that time the papers said I didn't have much chance to pull through because of my 'age.' Why, I'll outlive the fellow that wrote that, I betcha."

Mr. Berry was injured Wednesday night when he fell while returning home from his daily walk downtown.

Physicians said Mr. Berry has the constitution of a man half his age and predicted he will recover with slight if any ill effects.

Rocky Mountain News, May 21, 1941, p. 7

SOREN C. BERTHELSON

Early Valley Pioneer

1844-1912

Author of the following historical sketch of Soren C. Berthelson, is Agnes Berthelson Mangus. She was born in Sanford, Aug. 21, 1897, and is a daughter of James C. Berthelson, younger brother of Soren C. Berthelson who converted the Peter Gylling family on his mission to Denmark. Botilda Gylling, a daughter in that family became the mother of Mrs. Mangus. Botilda Gylling Berthelson is also the mother of Dr. J. G. Berthelson of Alamosa, and is a sister of Walter Gylling of La Jara and Mesa, Ariz., and of the late Carl Gylling, produce dealer of Alamosa. The following is submitted by Mrs. Clarinda Knight Sewell of Monte Vista. The Editor.

Hand Cart Pioneer to Utah

Very little of the life of Soren Christian Berthelson is in print. He lived not so many years but had many experiences. The kind acts of generosity, hospitality, high morals, religious and civic activities will ever live in the hearts of those who knew him or knew of him.

Soren Berthelson was short, stocky in size, had blue eyes and always wore the old familiar pioneer beard and mustache. He was born in Jutland, Denmark, on August 11, 1844. His parents were Christian and Anna Sorenson Berthelson. They were considered well-off with land and a very comfortable home. When Soren was 15 years old, he accepted the Latter Day Saint Gospel and was baptized on June 2, 1859, by Ingward Hansen. He labored as a missionary and interpreter for the Danish language for four years prior to coming to America. He was twenty years old when he sailed from Hamburg, Germany May 8, 1865, on the ship "B. S. Kimball" with a company of 557 saints in charge of Elder Anders W. Winburg. While on the trip and only a few days at sea, he and seven other couples were married on the ship. Soren C. married his sweetheart of his native land and locality, Marianna Laursen. She, too, was a convert to the same church in 1864. The voyage was made in six weeks. They arrived in the New York harbor on June 13, and were permitted to go ashore on June 15.

Leave For Utah

The company then traveled by train to Florence, Neb., the outfitting post for the Latter Day Saints emigration companies. From this point Soren C. Berthelson, with the 400 other emigrants, left for Utah on July 31, 1865, by hand carts. After much sickness, suffering, and hunger, the weary travelers arrived in Salt Lake Valley, Nov. 8, 1865, having been on the road for three months and eight days. This company was sent by President Brigham Young to the Sanpete Valley where the Scandinavian saints were establishing themselves in the dairy business as that section of Utah was particularly adapted to that industry. Soren C. Berthelson's father was a potter and adobe-maker in Denmark, and therefore Soren learned that trade and began at once to set up a business at Fountain Green. His younger brother, James C. Berthelson, came to America 14 years later and became a partner in the same trade. They made adobes for many of the early pioneer's homes, school houses, and meeting houses throughout the Sanpete Valley. Both Berthelson brothers helped to clear the ground and build the Manti Temple, however, they left the valley before it was completed.

So many Latter Day Saint converts from the southern states were coming in such large companies to Utah, that President Brigham Young decided to send leaders out to look for new locations for the saints to colonize. On March 20, 1878, Elder James Z. Stewart of Draper, Utah, and others left Salt Lake City on a special mission to explore a location in southern Colorado along the Conejos River which later became Conejos County. This mission also led to the purchase of the Mexican claims that became the San Luis Valley, and Latter Day Saint stake.

On Special Mission

In the church chronology by Andrew Jensen, Sunday, Oct. 6, 1878, Bishop Hans Jensen and other brethren from Manti, Utah, including Soren C. Berthelson, arrived in Los Cerritos, Conejos county, on a special mission to locate the saints arriving from the southern states. Saturday, Oct. 12, 1878, the saints were settling in the San Luis Valley, Colorado, and they were organized into a branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with Hans Jensen as president, and John Allen and Soren Berthelson as counselors. This was the beginning of the so-called Mormon settlements in the San Luis Valley.

On October 26, 1878, Soren C. Berthelson was ordained a high priest. He was a man of splendid judgment in advising the converts where to settle and what to do in order to make the settlements self-sustaining. He, with the others, surveyed a townsite to be called Richfield (1882). Thor Peterson, Berthelson and others also surveyed a canal which was used to carry water from the Conejos River to the farming projects. This undertaking was discouraged very much by older non-Mormon settlers and grave doubt was expressed that a kernel of grain would ever be raised through their hard work and sacrifices.

Berthelson was a member of the church land board to distribute colony land, negotiations for which were made by Silas S. Smith with the state for 20,000 acres.

Plant Fields

Several families lived in tents during the summer at Richfield. Fields of grain were planted but due to the early frost, very little of it was harvested. Most of the settlers built log cabins for the winter. By fall, 1882, another company of saints from the Sanpete Valley arrived and among them were James C. Berthelson, younger brother of Soren, John Shawcroft, Charlie White, John Guymon, Jens Jensen, James M. Jensen, and a few others. Most of them remained in Richfield, Ephraim, and near-by communities for a couple of years.

Apostle John Henry Smith took several trips to the valley for the purpose of looking after the welfare of the saints. By 1885, he met with several of the leaders and decided to lay out a townsite on the bench. Upon the suggestion of Wm. Christensen the settlement was named Sanford, after Silas Sanford Smith. Three homes were built that fall and Soren C. Berthelson also began one for his family.

Albion Haggard, who has recently moved from Richfield to Sanford, was appointed by Apostle John Henry Smith to be the Presiding Elder of the new colony. A log school house and a meeting house were built the first year from logs which were hauled by teams some 35 miles away. Within a year or two, most of the saints had moved from Richfield and Ephraim to Sanford, and the town boundaries were extended and a thriving community was in progress with saints from the southern states arriving continually.

Married Again

On October 15, 1884, Soren C. Berthelson married Josephine Echols, a convert from La Jara. By this marriage he became the father of six children. He had no children by his first wife. The second marriage was before the manifesto.

On April 15, 1888, a special meeting was called by Apostle John Henry Smith and the stake presidency and other leaders at Sanford. A ward was organized with Soren C. Berthelson as bishop and George Washington Irvin and Wm. O. Crowther as his counselors. Previous to this date there had been organized the Sunday school and the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. During the next month on May 11, 1888, at quarterly conference, a Relief Society was organized with Cornelia A. Mortenson as president. The Young Ladies' Mutual Association was also organized with Mrs. Dora Sprague as president and Mrs. Christina Mortenson was made president of the Primary Association. Records state that Soren C. Berthelson reported in the conferences the affairs and conditions of the Sanford Ward and the three branches--*Jarosa, Richfield, and Morgan.

*Jarosa settlement was probably broken up before the Seventh Day Adventist settlement of that place was begun. Very little seems to be known about it.

That same year a co-operative store was organized with a small amount of capital. Bishop Soren C. Berthelson was a stock holder. He had built by now a very large red brick home and many visiting church authorities were entertained there by the kind hospitality of the Berthelsons and at conference time friends from far and near enjoyed the big dinners and comfortable beds in the Berthelsons home. One large room was used as a prayer room for the ward officers for many years.

Records also show that on Jan. 16, 1887, James C. Berthelson was set apart as stake president of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. He held this office until February 17, 1890, when he was called to go on a mission to their native land in Denmark. While there he converted and baptized the Peter Gylling family who later came to America, most of them settling in Sanford. (Peter Gylling's son, Walter, is a resident of La Jara and Mesa, Ariz. Another son, the late Carl Gylling of Alamosa, was a well-known produce dealer).

On Feb. 17, 1896, Apostle John Henry Smith returned to the San Luis Stake and released the counselors and sustained Peter Rasmussen as first counselor and Marion D. Maloy as second counselor to Bishop Soren C. Berthelson.

Sanford Grows

Sanford continued to grow and became a well laid-out community with happy thrifty saints. After eleven years as Bishop of Sanford, Soren C. Berthelson was released and William O. Crowther was ordained as the second bishop of Sanford, with Marcus Olander Funk and Herman Kimball as counselors. Soren C. Berthelson was returned to the high council, a position which he held until his death. He was a farmer and building contractor, Justice of the Peace and also had held several other civic positions. After his home was completed, he built two exactly like his own for wealthy cattlemen over in New Mexico. He also owned a large hay ranch and orchards in the Marianna Valley in Northern New Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. Berthelson lived long and useful lives and contributed a great deal in developing the early settlements in the San Luis Valley. They were among the influential pioneers in organizing the Church Academy. Many teachers and students enjoyed the hospitality of the Berthelson's.

Soren C. Berthelson died May 11, 1912, at Sanford, and Mrs. Berthelson died in 1937 in Sanford when she was 94 years old. Both are buried in the Sanford cemetery. All of their children are dead. However, they have seven grandchildren who are their living descendants.

Grandchildren in the valley by S. C. Berthelson's daughter, Mary, who married Frank Shawcroft, are: Martha, Mrs. Weimer Coombs, La Jara; Mildred, Mrs. Leslie Edgmand, Alamosa; Orlene, Mrs. Charles Major (formerly of the valley); and Horace Shawcroft of La Jara.

Alamosa Daily Courier, July 10, 1947, p. 2

CHARLES FRED BEST

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Charles F. Best in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Charles Fred Best, born September 2, 1869 at Chicago, Illinois

Name of father: John D. Best, a native of Nova Scotia

Name of mother: Martha Hooper, a native of Maine

Attended school or college: Denver, Colorado and Boston, Massachusetts

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: 1873

Married: Yes, June 29, 1894 at Chicago

Name of wife: Mabel PaDelford, a daughter of Wm. PaDelford and Susan Jenks

Name of children and years of birth: Whitman Best, born October 22, 1901

Avocation: Wholesale Grain

Death: Denver Post, May 24, 1918, p. 9

Rocky Mountain News, May 25, 1918, p. 7

Denver Times, May 25, 1918, p. 3

Sketches of Colorado, p. 174

Autograph: (signature) C. F. Best

Biography File

MRS. J. O. BILLIG

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. J. O. Billig
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Grace Adele Catherwood (Mrs. James Oakes Billig), born February 15, 1873 in New York

Name of father: Charles DeBesard Shepard, a native of Illinois

Name of mother: Ada Wilner Shepard, a native of New York

Attended school or college: Colorado Teacher's College; State University

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Graduate Teacher's College, 1894

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado: Greeley, 1890

Married: Yes, April 3, 1903, at Denver

Name of husband: James Oakes Billig, a son of A. N. Billig and Susan Oakes Billig

Name of children and years of birth: William Clinton Billig, born July 2, 1905

Avocation: Teaching

Give dates: 1895-1902

Biography File

MRS. J. O. BILLIG
8th and Baseline
Boulder, Colorado

COLORADO AUTHORS

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Birthplace and childhood: New York

Education: Colorado Teacher's College, graduate; Colorado State University, Special study.

Travel: To California as child - lived there year, 9 years old.

Influences affecting writings: Literary family, love of history and drama.

Personal data i.e. Hobbies, natural tendencies, special enthusiasms, etc.: Research work in history. Study of drama, biography.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF WRITINGS

*"The Faith of the Little Shepherd" (Christmas gift book), S. H. Sears & Co., New York, 1926.
Skeffington & Son, London, 1927.

*"Child of Pity" Fictionized biography of last (Alexei) Tzarevitch of Russia. (Radziwill & Catherwood.) Sears Publishing Co., 1930.

*Books giving title, publisher and date.

AUTOGRAPHED COPY OF EACH BOOK FOR THE COLORADO COLLECTION

CHARLINE J. BIRKINS

Appointment of Miss Charline J. Birkins of Sterling as director of the Denver Department of Welfare was announced yesterday by Guy R. Justis, manager of welfare.

For the past 11 years Miss Birkins has been employed as a district supervisor for the State Department of Welfare in Sterling. She replaces Miss Bernice I. Reed, who resigned several months ago.

Miss Birkins' duties in Sterling included the supervision of six county departments of public welfare. Five years before this she was an employe of the Denver Department of Welfare.

A graduate of Denver University she obtained her graduate social work training at Minnesota University and Denver University.

Miss Birkins is a member of the American Public Welfare Assn. and has served on a number of its committees. She is a member of the American Association of Social Workers and also is affiliated with the Colorado Conference of Social Welfare, serving as treasurer of that organization for three years.

Until last July, Miss Birkins was assistant province president for the Sigma Kappa sorority and now is serving as state alumnae chairman for the organization.

She also is president of the Sterling Quota Club. Born in Denver, Miss Birkins spent her childhood in the San Luis Valley. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Birkins of Alamosa.

Rocky Mountain News, November 20, 1952, p. 18.

MELVILLE BLACK, M.D.

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Melville Black, M.D.
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Melville Black, born March 15, 1866 at Washington, Iowa

Name of father: George Black, a native of Columbus, Ohio

Name of mother: Louisa Jane Melville Black, a native of Pittsburg, Ohio

Attended school or college: Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: June 1891

Married: Yes, April 2, 1896 at Denver

Name of wife: Eleanor Adelaide Cole Black, a daughter of Wm. Wallace Cole and Mary Jane Cole.

Avocation: Practice limited to the eye

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national state or municipal government:
Professor Ophthalmology, Medical Department of the University of Colorado.

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: After graduating in Medicine and a short term in general hospital work the active study of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat was begun in the New York Polyclinic and the New York Postgraduate School. In November, 1889, he entered the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital as an interne and served as 1st assistant, 2nd assistant and House Surgeon for a full term of eighteen months.

After graduating there he came to Denver to take the position of Professor of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology in the Medical Department of the University of Colorado. In 1897 he resigned from that chair to take the Chair of Ophthalmology in the Gross Medical School, this school later combined with the Denver Medical School forming the Denver and Gross School of Medicine in which he held the same chair.

In 1910 this School combined with the Medical Department of the University of Colorado and he continued to hold the chair of Ophthalmology in that institution. He is ophthalmologist to St. Luke's, St. Joseph's and the Children's hospitals. Oculist to the Burlington Railroad and Consulting Oculist to the Colorado and Southern railroad.

He was Secretary to the Colorado State Medical Society from 1905 to 1914. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Medical Society of the City and County of Denver from 1908 to 1913, and in 1915 was elected again to the same office for a term of five years. He was the president of the Board of Trustees of the Denver and Gross School of Medicine at the time this school combined with the Medical Department of the University of Colorado and took an active part in bringing about a union of these two schools, thus reducing the number of medical schools in this state to one.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Melville Black

Biography File

See also: Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 355

ELLIS BLACKMAN
Collbran Man Lives Wild West
By LEE OLSON
Rocky Mountain Empire Editor Of The Denver Post

COLLBRAN, Colo., Dec. 23. There are few men left in the west like Ellis Blackman, 79, trapper, mountaineer and bear killer.

His story reads like a chapter out of the wild west - and it is. He has killed more than 100 bears, more than 100 mountain lions and "probably" 500 coyotes. "It's hard to remember them all," he says.

Blackman is no government trapper. He's a rancher in this picturesque Plateau valley area who in 53 years of ranching has made more money from furs and bounties than he has from Herefords.

But for the Davy Crockett fan he has this advice: "Mountaineering is hard work."

Yet Blackman's heart is in the hills. Younger men sometimes have a tough time keeping up with him on a deer trail. And his hand and eye are steady with a .30-40.

This 6-foot 2-inch man, who weighs 218 pounds, has lived most of the history of settlement in the valley. He came to the west from Hunlock Creek, Pa., as a boy. His father, Daniel Blackman, followed the gold rush to Fairplay and later came with his family to the Collbran area, following Ute Indian trails.

The family had to have their belongings packed into the mountain stronghold by burro.

That was in 1884. Blackman grew up on the family ranch and ultimately began ranching on his own. But he had a flair for hunting and trapping - it provided income.

His feats in bear killing are myriad. He has wrestled wounded bears in "stump holes," gone into caves to kill them and been bitten by mountain lions.

He rates as one of his close shaves the time he decided to kill a bear, caught in one of his traps, with a club, rather than expend a bullet.

"That bear took that club away from me in short order," Blackman said. "I had a rough time. I always used the gun after that."

While going into caves after bears might sound dangerous, Blackman says it isn't. "They're hibernating and don't fight." He has crawled into caves seven times to kill bears.

Blackman only last week crawled into a cave and killed a bear.

Blackman estimates that in a good winter he made $1,800 on furs. He also has collected thousands of dollars in bounties.

Blackman took part in the sheep and cattle wars which swept western Colorado in the early days. "The ranchers went up and down the countryside on horseback," he said. "You had to take sides. I was a cattleman so I sided with them.

"I've shot sheep myself, and killed them with clubs. We had quite a war one day up on Sheep creek. A herder was killed."

Does Blackman know who killed the herder? "No," he said, "but I'm probably the only man left who knows where he's buried."

The ranch today is run by one of Blackman's seven children, Raymond, and his daughter-in-law, Betty. Ellis Blackman, however, still does his share of the ranch work. And come deer hunting season there's always a horse saddled and ready for Ellis.

"I can't hunt as much as I used to, though," he said. "But I can still talk about it. Just set me in a chair sometime and I'll tell bear stories for two days. I can promise you I won't repeat myself.

Denver Post, January 23, 1955, p. 36

MONTIE BLEVINS

North Park Cattleman

By ADAH B. BAILEY*

Montie Blevins has lived a long and eventful life; and from the coming of the first herd of cattle into North Park, Colorado, in 1879 he has taken a leading part in the cattle business here.

Born in Iowa in 1859, he crossed the plains to Colorado in 1864 with his father, mother and two sisters. This was the year the Indians committed more depredations than at any other time in the history of early-day travel. Even the Overland Stage could not travel for a while.

Montie was only five years old, but he says he remembers that trip very clearly. They were all so frightened as they would pass stage stations which had been burned down, piles of iron where wagons and camps had been burned. Indians buried in the trees, and graves with headboards at the side of the road where whites were buried--all these things showing so plainly what the Indians had been doing. But they had no trouble at all, making it through the whole trip without being molested.

Later that same winter, in the early part of 1865, Montie's mother died, after having given birth to a little girl. Relatives took the baby to raise, but Montie's father took care of the other children himself.

In the summer of 1866 the father left the children in Denver and went to Julesburg to put up hay. While there, every night the men took their beds out in the willows and hid all night to sleep. They also hid their horses in the willows.

In 1869 he located on a ranch in Pleasant Valley, in Larimer County. The children had to stay at the house alone while the father worked all day on the ranch. One day, while Montie and his two sisters were alone, they looked out and as far as they could see was a long string of Indians on horseback, coming single file towards their place. There was a building of some kind, perhaps a barn, out behind the house, and the children struck out on the run for this building, scared nearly to death. The big, fine-looking chief rode quite a bit ahead of the other Indians, and he called to them saying, "Don't be afraid, kids, we friendly Indians." It was Chief Friday of the Arapahoes, who always was a friend to the whites. He talked to the children a little while, and then all rode on.

Montie's first pony of his own was a glass-eyed one that his father bought from Joe Mason, the first postmaster and first white settler of Fort Collins. He rode this pony to school at La Porte.

Right across the road from the schoolhouse at La Porte lived the Provosts. John Baptiste Provost was the first permanent white settler in Larimer County. He married a fine Sioux squaw and they had one boy a little older than Montie and one a little younger. At noontime Montie and these boys would go over to Provost's house to play. In their exuberance, Montie said they would sometimes raise particular Cain. Then Mrs. Provost would finally get enough, and would cry out in Sioux, "See-e-e Chee-e-e," meaning "Baa-ad Bo-o-ys," and would look at them with a peculiar piercing, penetrating look. That usually settled things for a while.

At the age of fourteen Montie ran away from his father and never went back. He went to live with and to work for William S. Taylor, the kindly and famous pioneer of La Porte, who in early days had entertained Grant, Colfax, Bowles, and other notables at his Virginia Dale stage station.

In 1877, when Montie was eighteen years old he went to work for C. B. Mendenhall, who lived at Virginia Dale, on the old Pearson Place. He punched cattle for Mendenhall clear down to the Republican River.

The summer of 1879 a terrible drouth struck the Livermore, Virginia Dale and Fort Collins country, and the cattlemen had to hunt fresh pasture for their cattle. A large number of them drove their herds into North Park to graze. Montie Blevins brought in 3,000 head of steers and 600 head of horses for Mendenhall. Sam Brownlee had trailed the steers from Texas and he helped drive them into the Park. They branded them at what is still called the old Mendenhall Place. Mr. Mendenhall brought his family along and soon the cabins were built and corrals laid up. Montie Blevins was then twenty years old.

Then came the Meeker massacre that fall, and they all got scared and drove their cattle out, except Montie Blevins and Ed Davis, who were looking after the Mendenhall cattle. Less than half a dozen men stayed at Teller that winter. All the others got scared and left. Sam Haworth carried mail to them all winter, though, a lot of the way on snowshoes.

During the summer the cattle were all turned loose to rustle, nobody looking after them. Those Texas steers were great travelers. Montie says that when they got onto a trail they never stopped, but just kept on going. That winter, along about the first of January, 1880, Montie got word that some of their cattle were over in Middle Park and about to die of starvation.

Montie started after them, leaving Davis at the cabins. He went on horseback to Prince Dow's. Dow was batching up in the south end of the Park on Coyote Creek, and Big Frank Crozier, who had lived a lot with the Indians, was batching with him and trapping coyotes.

The next morning they went on up to the top of the range on horses, then Crozier took the horses back and Montie and Dow went on with snowshoes. They went on over the hill and had to camp in the open with only a cold lunch for supper and a blanket apiece to roll up in. That night it snowed ten inches and they nearly froze. Next morning they ate some cold lunch again and started into Middle Park. They snowshoed all day and just about gave out. It got dark. Prince Dow finally staggered over, and partly leaning on Montie, said, "I don't think I can go any farther." Montie coaxed him to try a little longer and then they heard a dog bark. Montie says it was the sweetest music he had ever heard. A little farther and they could see a light. They made it to the door of the cabin and knocked. It was Jack Rand's "Hermitage on the Muddy."

Old Jack Rand was very rough and tough. He had lived with the Indians a lot and was supposed to have killed several men. He came to the door and said gruffly, "Who are you? What do you want?" Montie said, "I am Montie Blevins." "Not old Henry Blevins' son?" "Yes." "Come in! Come in!" He put out his hands and dragged them in, gave them a great feed and put them to bed.

Harry Webber was there that night also. He was running cattle over near Kremmling and knew where the lost Mendenhall steers were. The next day he took some of his horses and went with Montie to find them and they drove them over onto Wolford Mountain where the snow did not lay on and left them there the rest of the winter. Dow stayed in Middle Park and Montie came back alone.

The first of May, 1880, Montie took two or three men and a dozen pack horses and went over and got the cattle. As they were returning they made camp up on the Arapahoe and laid up a corral. That old corral is still standing.

While they were making camp, a young white boy who was building fence for some ranchman up near there saw them from afar, thought they were Indians, and started running towards Pinkhampton, clear in the north end of the Park, following the streams and hiding in the willows. The miners for Teller were beginning to swarm in again and all stopped over night at Pinkhampton. When the boy finally reached there the next night and told them a big band of Indians was coming, the men sat up all night with their guns loaded and ready. Of course nothing happened, but the next day Mark A. Walden, the man for whom Walden, Colorado, was named, who was stopping there that night, got all the men to turn in and finish the old blockhouse at Pinkhampton. It still stands.

On April 11, 1883, Montie Blevins married Mr. Mendenhall's daughter Harriet. Her father had sold his place in North Park to Haas and Evans, and Blevins was running the outfit.

The winter of 1883-84 was a terribly hard one. At least half of all the cattle in North Park died. Blevins' outfit had 12,000 to start with and came out in the spring with 6,000. After this the cattlemen in North Park began to cut and put up hay for winter.

Ora Haley bought out Evans in 1885 and then the outfit was Haas and Haley. They sold out to Swift and Co. in 1887. Blevins worked for Swift five years on the same place and began buying other ranches for Swift. He bought the old 2 Bar by Walden, and clear down the Michigan to Henry Donelson's and also the old George Ward place where Vic Hanson is now; up the Michigan to Iva Allard's; the Hardy on the Canadian; from the Jack White place to where Vic Riley now lives; the Spicer ranch; and the Art Allard place on the Illinois--thousands of acres of land. He put cattle on all this land, started cutting and putting up hay, and ran the whole outfit for the Swift Company.

Finally Swift decided to close out their holdings in North Park and they began selling the ranches until all that was left was the Hardy ranch. In 1912 Montie Blevins, Clayton & Murnan bought the Hardy ranch, and that was the end of the Swift Company in North Park.

Mr. Blevins bought the J R ranch near Walden in 1901. This is the place where their five children grew up. He sold it to Ovid Allard in 1914. He formed a partnership with Harry Green and they ran the Mallon ranch and cattle business until 1921, when they dissolved partnership.

Since then he has not engaged actively in the cattle business, but he still takes a keen interest in all North Park's stock raising. He spends his winters with a son in Denver and summers in North Park; his favorite topic of conversation, of course, is early day cattle raising in North Park. He has the keenest of memories and lacks many years of looking his eighty-one years. Exceedingly tall, like Abe Lincoln, only much handsomer, he still stands out among any group of men.

* Mrs. Bailey lives in Walden, Colorado. This historical sketch won first prize in the Woman's Club State Contest this year. - Ed.

Colorado Magazine, January, 1941, p. 13-18

DR. JERRY C. BLISS

A man who shook hands with Lincoln alive and guarded him in death will make the Civil War veterans' pilgrimage to Gettysburg, June 29.

He is Dr. Jerry C. Bliss of 1389 Stuart st., retired physician, who is 92.

"I shook hands with Lincoln on the war president's first trip to Washington in '61, at Little Falls, N. Y. I was 15. Three years later, I was fighting for Lincoln and the Union. And when Lincoln's funeral train arrived at Springfield, I was detailed to the color guard while the body lay in state for 10 days."

In Good Health

Dr. Bliss will be accompanied to Gettysburg by his brother-in-law, Edward Farris, of Pine Nook, Colo.

He is in good health "except for a little neuritis in the legs," and expects to "enjoy the trip."

Reporters found Dr. Bliss at his favorite pastime, reading.

He was born in Jefferson County, New York, Sept. 12, 1845.

He enlisted in Company V, the 42d Wisconsin regiment, at Madison, Wis., in August, 1864.

Detached Service

"I was in the detached service," Dr. Bliss said, "and I saw very little action. My captain was R. J. Chase, the provost marshal, and I was his orderly."

Dr. Bliss was married in 1876 at Weywega, Wis., to Sarah Edwards, who died in 1913. The present Mrs. Bliss is the former Lillian Farris of Denver.

Dr. Bliss practiced in Wisconsin before coming to Denver to retire in 1903. He has a son and a daughter, Waldo J. Bliss of Boulder and Mrs. Gertrude Caldwell of Tulsa, Okla., and one grandchild.

Dr. Bliss is the only Lincoln guard left in Denver.

Rocky Mountain News, May 30, 1938, p. 5

JERRY C. BLISS

Denver's Last G.A.R. Member Will Be 99 Years Old Tuesday
Jerry C. Bliss, in His Teens When Gold Was Discovered,
Will be Honored at Afternoon Reception.

A bright-eyed little man who was already a war veteran when President Lincoln walked into Ford's theater to meet death, who was well into his teens when gold and silver were discovered in Colorado, and who has shaken the hands of three presidents, not including Franklin D. Roosevelt, will try Tuesday to help 150 of his guests understand what it means to look back on ninety-nine years of American history thru which he has lived.

He is the last surviving member in Denver of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Tuesday Jerry C. Bliss will be 99 years old. And tho he would be the last to admit it, he is probably a little bit lonely. It's not too hard to guess, however, because when you go to visit him he almost pleads with you to "stay a little longer."

Visitors' Questions Always Welcomed.

"Ask me some more questions," he will say in an effort to prolong the conversation. "Let me tell you some more about when I was a dispatch carrier for General Hooker," he begins. "Or maybe you'd like to know some more about my experiences in the provost marshal's office when I was an orderly and helped deliver prisoners from camp to camp."

While his eyes are merry, there is much of the nostalgic in his plea, "Let's talk some more."

He has been retired forty-one years and retirement is beginning to pall a little. A retired doctor of medicine, he has lived with his wife in the same house at 1389 Stuart street ever since coming to Denver from Wisconsin upon his retirement. He was born in Evans Mills, Jefferson county, New York, Sept. 12, 1945.

He attended Chicago Medical college and was graduated from the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery.

Entered Civil War At Early Age.

Barely old enough to join up, he entered the Civil war with company B, Forty-second Wisconsin infantry, and tho he served more than two years he never saw any action, since his duties as orderly and dispatch carrier kept him off the battle fronts.

He boasts of having shaken hands with Presidents Lincoln, Grant and Theodore Roosevelt. And if Governor Dewey doesn't win the election in November Bliss doesn't care whether he lives another year to be 100 or not.

"I know Dewey will be elected," he said. "He's just got to be."

An avid follower of news, Bliss is able to read the larger type in newspapers without the aid of glasses. He eats everything and says as far as he is concerned there is no such thing as rationing.

"I have everything I want and need," he said. "As for my teeth well, they've been in a glass of water for the last four years or more but I still manage to eat well."

He was grand marshal of the Memorial day parade last May, and hopes to have the same honor bestowed upon him next year.

A reception in the home from 3 to 5 p.m. will mark the birthday. One hundred and fifty friends and neighbors have been invited. A daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Caldwell, who lives in Muskogee, Okla., will not be able to attend, but Bliss' son, Waldo of Boulder, will be on hand to help his father celebrate.

Denver Post, September 10, 1944

MRS. AUGUSTA HAUCK BLOCK
Saturday's Picnic Recalls Pioneer Days for Denverite
By LOIS CRESS
Denver Post Staff Writer

Eighty-seven year old Mrs. Augusta Hauck Block, 2214 E. 17th Ave., is going picnicking Saturday.

"Oh, yes!" she replied, her eyes sparkling with anticipation, when she was asked this week if she were going.

For Mrs. Block, the picnic is not an ordinary summertime outdoor party. For her and for other members of the Pioneer Men and Women of Colorado, who are planning it, it's something special--a time to share reminiscences in a year when reminiscences are somehow very poignant.

The Saturday gathering will be the 87th annual picnic of the group, which really began as the Pioneer Ladies Aid in 1860. And for the 77th time, Elitch Gardens will be the picnic place.

Mrs. Block didn't attend the Pioneers' first picnic at the Gardens. But she remembers the second one distinctly. The year was 1883. She was 10 years old.

"It took eight hours to drive from the claim in the spring wagon," she recalled.

The "claim," Mrs. Block explained was northeast of what is now Boulder, and friendly Chief Naiwot (Left Hand) of the Arapahoes helped her father stake it out. It was there that her father, Joseph Hauck, built a log house which was Mrs. Block's birthplace and the family home.

The spring wagon, Mrs. Block elaborated, was used for weddings, as a hearse for funerals, for going to circuses and to Pioneer picnics.

Coming to Denver for the Pioneers' second picnic at Elitch's was doubly significant to Mrs. Block because it meant going to P. T. Barnum's circus and to the picnic.

Then she remembered how Elitch Gardens was then. Only a year before, she said, John and Mary Elitch had purchased 16 acres of the Chilcott farm. Lovely apple orchards and cottonwood groves filled the acres.

Guests were bidden to bring their baskets and picnic beneath the trees.

"The Pioneers had a band," Mrs. Block recalled. "Mr. Elitch had made a platform under the trees for dancing. They had benches and tables under the apple trees. We children played among the trees.

"Everyone opened baskets and put food on the tables," she continued. "Everyone joined in the buffet style picnic. And there was singing the old songs like 'All the Way From Pike' and the Stephen Foster songs.

Mrs. Block had still another memory of the early-day Pioneer picnics--the memory of Mary Butler Brown, the first Miss Colorado. She was so honored in 1876. "She was so beautiful," Mrs. Block said.

The Saturday picnic will conjure up a picture of Mary Butler Brown for Mrs. Block and perhaps a few others who remember her. Maude Fealy, who has returned to Denver after winning theatrical plaudits that began on the Elitch theater stage, will pay tribute to the early-day beauty in one of her original interpretations.

Sarah Steck Mundhenk will preside. Baskets of tempting food will be opened after the program. Stories told by great grandparents will be retold, and a handful of pioneers--among them Mrs. Block--will recall the pioneer days as they lived them.

Denver Post, June 26, 1959, p. 25.

AUGUSTA BLOCK
Out of the Past Comes a Few Facts About
Our Beloved Augusta Block

Augusta, daughter of pioneers, Robert and Louise Hauck, was born February 9, 1872, on the Hauck land claim, which the Chief of the Arapahoe Indians gave to Mr. Hauck in 1859. This was in Boulder Valley Colorado Territory. She was one of eight children.

Augusta was a natural born nurse, she nursed the sick from the time she was very young. She was also a good sportswoman, an expert fisherwoman and a good target shooter. She was and still is an excellent teacher. She taught sewing, darning and embroidery to a club of young girls ranging from 6 to 17; drawing, water colors, and china painting to several older groups. She also lectured to many groups on early Colorado history. Her story of the first flag in Colorado is both informative and entertaining.

But most of all Augusta Hauck Block was an organizer. She helped organize a Womens club to encourage culture among the women of Crested Butte. She took an active part in the teaching of Sunday school classes in the Congregational Church.

After the family moved to Denver she became active in Pioneer Men and Women Society of Colorado and served as their President for two terms.

Augusta's love of Colorado history came to be important. She has collected stories of places and events all of her life.

Augusta is best known to us for her work in the Territorial Daughters. She is a charter and an Honorary member. She served as our President for two terms from 1916 to 1918. She organized the War work done by us during World War One.

She was chairman of a committee of the Territorial Daughters when they placed a monument in Daniel's Park on June 29, 1923, marking the spot where Kit Carson built his last camp fire before he died. In May 1926, she was chairman of a committee, when we placed a monument near the ruins of old Fort Lupton on the Ewing farm. Again, in August of 1937, she was on the committee that placed our marker on the shore of Soda Lakes near Morrison, Colorado. Most of us, now active, remember September 12, 1959, when we marked the sight of the First Rural School, on the James Farm, in Weld County. Augusta was one of the main speakers. When the Territorial Daughters marked the sight of the First Woolen Mill, December 12, 1961, August was not able to be with us, but she had helped in the research, and was vitally interested in it.

Her interest in The Territorial Daughters was just one of many. She was the main speaker at many dedications through out our state. Two that are best known to us, are the marking of Fort Junction at Fredrick, Colorado, and the research and dedication of the Irwin Cemetery in Gunnison, Colorado, July 13, 1953.

Augusta now is 92, and in a nursing home, but she is still active as we well know from the picture and article that appeared in the Rocky Mountain News, December 19, 1963. She had contributed receipts and bits of history to the Pioneer Potluck Cookbook sponsored by The Volunteers of the State Historical Society of Colorado.

Facts and dates furnished by Josephine Miles; compiled by Marion B. Geick.
Printed in The Territorial Daughters of Colorado Newsletter, 1964

MRS. JAMES H. BLOOD
A Denver Pioneer
Celebrates Her 100th Birthday
Surrounded by Relatives and Friends

In January, 1862, a wagon train left Bellvue, Nebraska, for Denver, Colorado. In one of these covered wagons were two mothers with their eight babies, all under four years of age, each mother having four little ones. It took six long weeks to make the trek across the plains. But the babies were never without food, for the young mothers had filled flour sacks with zwiebach, and a cow was tied to the oxen drawn wagon, so there was always milk for the children.

One of these youngsters was Lina Elise Bartels, born July 23, 1860, the eighteen months old baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Bartels. Her father with his partner, Mr. Metz, owned a grocery store on Holliday and F Streets (now Market and Fifteenth), transporting all supplies to this new little settlement of about four to five thousand people in covered wagons.

Here Mr. and Mrs. Bartels lived and raised their family. Lina has lived to see Denver grow from a small community to a great metropolis. Her first home was on the west bank of Cherry Creek, the only brick house in Denver. Later the family lived on Sixteenth and California Streets, where the Denver Dry Goods Company is now located. She attended East Denver High School from which she graduated in 1880 in the second class to graduate from the school.

On September 20, 1883, she married James H. Blood, a young attorney. They had two sons, Herbert T. Blood and Walter W. Blood, both deceased, and two daughters, Alma Blood Fetzer and Helen Blood Hubbard (Mrs. Ralph B. Hubbard), both of Denver. Mr. James H. Blood died in 1934. Mrs. Blood is the proud grandmother of eight grandchildren, fifteen great grandchildren, and three great, great grandchildren. She is happy and content and enjoys telling her friends stories of the Indians and the pioneer days of Denver.

No source given

LINA BARTELS BLOOD

Denver Woman Finds City Prettier Than Century Ago

By RUDY CHELMINSKI

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Denver, in case you had any doubts, is a far prettier city now than it was during its infancy.

This is the opinion of a citizen who has lived here all but two of her 100 years. Mrs. Lina Blood, who now lives in the Lake Manor Nursing Home, 1655 Eaton st., came here in 1862.

She came, as did so many others of the time, in a covered wagon. Her father, Louis F. Bartels, was a grocer who pulled up stakes in Bellvue, Nebr., in search of better horizons in the Rocky Mountains.

Prettier Now

"Course, the city's prettier now than it used to be," said Mrs. Blood. "When I was a girl, there was hardly anything here, outside of prairie."

Mrs. Blood, who was 100 Saturday, obviously relished her reminiscences of pioneer Denver, and spoke articulately of those hard days.

"One thing I preferred about the old Denver was that I had my way more, then. But the city's gotten too big for that, now.

"When I was a child we used to live right next to Cherry Creek. Our place was the only brick house in Denver for a while. The Indians used to live down in the river bed below us, and I grew up with them. They were very nice playmates."

Her father and his partner operated a grocery store at Holiday and F sts. now 15th and Market sts.

Married in '83

Later the family moved to 16th and California sts., site of the present Denver Dry Goods Co. store.

After graduation from East High School, she was married in 1883, to James H. Blood, an attorney. The couple had two sons, both now deceased, and two daughters, Mrs. Alma Fetzer, and Mrs. Helen Hubbard, both of Denver.

Mrs. Blood reacted with enthusiasm when asked about some of the famous figures of early-day Denver.

"Ooh, do I remember Baby Doe!" she exclaimed with a hearty laugh. "She was just like a pretty little baby, but I'm afraid she got Horace Tabor into more trouble than he bargained for."

Tabor, Colorado's famed silver king, was, according to Mrs. Blood, "a very kind man. And I suppose Augusta, his first wife, was a fine woman," she added, "but she was like a washerwoman."

Mrs. Blood said she had no particular advice to give on her 100th birthday, nor any particular observations.

"I just enjoy myself. Don't try to make it too complicated."

Rocky Mountain News, July 24, 1960, p. 6

MRS. LINA ELISE BLOOD

Woman, 102, Still Pays Social Security

By RENDALL AYERS

Denver Post Staff Writer

At the age of 102 most people would begin thinking about taking it easy. Not Mrs. Lina Elise Blood. For at her age--she was 102 Monday--Mrs. Blood is still earning a salary and still paying her social security.

She is the only centenarian in Denver and one of three in Colorado who are receiving social security benefits from the federal government, records at the Denver social security office showed Wednesday.

Federal officials said the law allows a person over 72 to receive benefits regardless of how much they earn.

Mrs. Blood remains active in business circles by holding the position of president of the Linbert Investment Co.

The private, family-owned investment company was organized by Mrs. Blood and her husband, the late James H. Blood, too many years ago for her to recall the exact date. She has headed the company since her husband, a partner in the Denver law firm of Bartels & Blood, died in 1934.

She still holds controlling stock in the investment firm and actively functions as president.

Meetings of Linbert officers, all family members, are held at Casa-Del Nursing Home, 1325 Everett St., Lakewood, where Mrs. Blood lives, so she can preside.

Born July 23, 1860, at Bellevue, Neb., Mrs. Blood was 18 months old when she came to Denver with her parents in a covered wagon. She has lived here since, growing up in the booming atmosphere of the gold rush.

The family settled on Cherry Creek in 1862 and Mrs. Blood's father, Louis Bartels, operated a grocery store at Holladay and F Sts., now 15th and Market Sts.

Later the family moved to a home at the present site of the Denver Dry Goods Co., 16th and California Sts. She was a member of East High School's second graduating class in 1880.

The Bloods were married in 1883 and reared four children including two sons, the late Herbert and Walter, and two daughters, Mrs. Helen B. Hubbard and Mrs. Alma B. Fetzer, both of Denver.

The daughters presently are officers in Linbert Investment Co. Mrs. Fetzer as vice president and treasurer and Mrs. Hubbard as assistant secretary and assistant treasurer. Mrs. Hubbard's husband, Ralph, is secretary.

One of the birthday greeting cards presented Mrs. Blood came from Victor Christgau of Baltimore, Md., director of the U.S. Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance.

"May your path ahead be smooth, and may peace and contentment be your companions as you continue on your journey," the card read.

The peppery businesswoman makes it clear through her actions that she has found peace and contentment and that she has no intentions of changing her relationship with the fellows handling social security.

Denver Post, July 25, 1962, p. 3

BLUNDELL FAMILY

Spokane, Wash.
March 6, 1959

Miss Silva Tanbert, Head, Genealogy Division, Literature and History Dept., Denver Public Library,
1357 Broadway,
Denver 3, Colorado,

Dear Madam:

I am in receipt of your letter, of February 26, 1959, in which you list information regarding the BLUNDELL family. I appreciate very much your efforts to secure this information for me. I note that you are anxious to secure information regarding Colorado pioneers, and I shall be most happy to supply you with anything I may have or may obtain later. The William Blundell, listed in the manuscript in your department as having been born Aug. 14, 1843 and having arrived in Colorado, from Wisconsin, on May 3, 1860, was my father. Hugh Blundell, subject of the article from W. F. Stone's History of Colorado, was my brother. There are some minor errors in this sketch. My mother's maiden name was spelled Donelson not Donaldson. My parents arrived in Colorado in 1860 not 1861. I am quite sure that my father homesteaded his farm before 1880, as the family had lived on the place a number of years before that date, and the homestead patent was signed by President Chester A. Arthur who was in office from 1881 to 1885. Hugh Blundell died in 1918. I am the only living member of William Blundell's family. I was born at Brighton on July 27, 1889, and have resided in the Pacific Northwest since 1914.

Since first writing you, I have quite definitely determined that my paternal grandfather's name was JAMES BLUNDELL. On separate sheets I shall include some of the early Colorado history, as told me by my parents, and which apparently is not on record. Being now semi-retired I have taken up the idea of trying to compile a history of both the Blundell and Donelson families, as a hobby. My wife and I are both members of the Eastern Washington Genealogical Society, and I expect some suggestions on how to proceed from that source. Probably no one attempting a family history has ever had so little to start on as I had. So many who could have supplied information have passed on. However, some sources are beginning to produce some results. The lack of birth and death records, in early years of both Colorado and Wisconsin, make it hard to bridge the gap between the present and the early 1800s. The Blundell's of Iowa County, Wisconsin, mentioned in your letter, very possibly were related, as this county adjoins Grant and Richland Counties, in both of which my grandfather resided. If I succeed in getting together a worthwhile record, I shall be happy to furnish you with a copy if it would be of value to your department.

Thanking you for your courtesy and assistance,

Enc. 1.

Yours truly,

1114 W. York Ave.
Spokane 17, Wash.

Wm. A. Blundell.

BLUNDELL FAMILY

SOME EARLY HISTORY OF THE SOUTH PLATTE VALLEY IN COLORADO

Furnished by WILLIAM A. BLUNDELL, Spokane, Washington, March 6, 1959

My grandfathers, JAMES BLUNDELL AND THOMAS DONELSON, left their families in Grant County, Wisconsin, and went to Colorado with the 1859 gold rush. They spent the summer in the Clear Creek placer region but, like so many, found no great amount of gold. In the autumn of 1859, they established claim to adjoining ranches in the South Platte Valley. These claims, located in the river bottoms south and west of the present town of Brighton, were probably taken under the Miners' Law which at time prevailed in what was then Arapahoe County, Kansas Territory. They then returned to Wisconsin and, in the spring of 1860, brought their families to Colorado. James Blundell, who had served in the Black Hawk Indian War, was elected captain of the wagon train with which they traveled from the Missouri River.

They arrived in Colorado on May 3, 1860 and, at Denver, shelter was found for the families while cabins were built on the ranches. These early cabins were built in the river bottoms, and many were abandoned for houses on higher ground after what was known as the "Big Flood" of the South Platte in the 1860s.

A road, or trail, used by the Indians ran near the cabins, and Chief Left Hand and his band were frequent visitors. Usually they had something to "swap" for white man's food or other articles. The Blundell and Donelson families owned cabins in Denver to which the women and children were removed during the Indian troubles. The Donelson cabin stood on part of the ground occupied by the Tramway Building in the early part of this century.

A group of pioneer farms, along the South Platte River, are quite familiar to me as the owners were friends and neighbors of my parents and grandparents. Claims were filed on all of them in 1859. These ranches, beginning about fifteen miles north of Denver and named in order from south to north, were settled by GEORGE C. GRIFFIN; GEORGE W. HAZZARD (who married Mary Blundell, daughter of James Blundell); ANDREW HAGUS; a man whose name I do not have (This place was later owned by a Mr. Aichlemen); THOMAS DONELSON and JAMES BLUNDELL. Of these ranchers, Griffin, Hazzard and Donelson lived on their farms until their deaths. The other places were sold at various times to newcomers in the area.

Most of the earlier members of the Blundell and Donelson families are buried in a family cemetery which lies just to the east of the original Blundell and Donelson farms.

A little known early day settlement was called "The Seven Cabins." In this group of cabins, a number of men spent the winter of either 1858 or 1859. The site of this temporary settlement was on land that, at the time that I first saw it, was a part of the Thomas Donelson farm. This was west of the South Platte River and near the north-west corner of the farm. I do not know whether this was a part of Donelson's original claim, as he had purchased other land through the years. When my father, William Blundell, pointed out the site to me, the cabins had long disappeared and a good sized cottonwood tree was growing from a depression which had once been the settlement's well. During the early 1900s, my father tried to arouse some interest in placing a marker there, but so far as I know nothing came of it. He succeeded in interesting a Mr. Lee, who was then publisher of the Brighton Register, and they did some excavating at the site. I believe an article appeared in the Register about it at that time. I cannot give the exact year. The publisher, of whose given name I am not sure but think was George R., was the senior Mr. Lee. His son Ralph later published the paper for many years.

April 9, 1959, S.T.

BLUNT FAMILY
News Extra 100 Years Ago Saved Denver
By ROBERT L. PERKIN
Rocky Mountain News Writer

One hundred years ago Thursday a 4-column newspaper extra printed on brown wrapping paper appeared on the streets of Auraria in the Pikes Peak gold country.

The little broadside was devoted to a certification by Horace Greeley, oracle of the New York Tribune, and by A. D. Richardson and Henry Villard that the gold discoveries at Gregory Diggings were authentic.

Historians have written that this extra, the first ever published in infant Denver, saved the city and territory from depopulation.

Thousands of disgruntled and disappointed goldseekers then were streaming east across the prairie, convinced that the Pike's Peak gold rush was a hoax.

Turns the Tide

The Greeley extra of the Rocky Mountain News caught up with them on the trail. Many turned about and returned.

That was a century ago, to the day. And now a son and daughter of one of the men who set type for that historic extra still are living in Denver.

They are Fred C. Blunt of 350 Detroit st. and Miss Florence E. Blunt of 1359 Monroe st. Another son, Ralph W., is living in San Clemente, Calif.

They are children of Mark S. Blunt, a young pioneer who came west from Boston in June of 1859 to seek health and his fortune.

Blunt regained his health and became a prominent early Coloradan, the first postmaster of Golden, a rancher on the Arkansas, a Pueblo lawyer, territorial collector of internal revenue, registrar of the U.S. Land Office at Pueblo and clerk of the U.S. District Court there.

But before Mark Blunt went on to other fame, chance tapped him on the shoulder for the job of setting type for the famed Greeley extra.

Learned Trade

Both Blunt and his fellow Bostonian and companion-of-the-trail, George West, were members of the Boston Trading Co., which founded the city of Golden.

Both served apprenticeships as printers in the composing room of the Boston Transcript before they headed for the golden West.

Greeley, Richardson and Villard, had just ridden into town from Gregory Gulch. William N. Byers, founding editor of The News, wanted to rush their glorious report into print. But he was short of printers. Many of them had run off to the hills chasing gold.

Byers sent his partner, Thomas Gibson, out to hunt compositors. Gibson found Blunt and West.

Years later, in 1900, West recalled the day for Historian Jerome C. Smiley:

"My party had just arrived from across the plains and about noon were pulling through the sand of Cherry Creek at the Blake st. crossing, 20 or 30 teams of us, when we heard a shout from a man standing on a little foot bridge. It proved to be old man Gibson of The News.

Invitation to Work

"Hey there!" he ejaculated, "are there any printers in this crowd?"

"I told him there were. He asked us to come and set up an extra for him.

"Bill Summers, Mark Blunt and I went to the office, located in a 1 1/2-story log cabin on Ferry st., now 11th st., where we found Horace Greeley, A. D. Richardson and Henry Villard, who had just returned from the mountains.

"We then buckled to, set it up and worked off, I believe 500 copies on the old Washington hand press. For this we received five pennyweight of gold dust."

(A surviving copy of the Greeley extra sold for $600 in a 1954 auction of rare Western Americana in New York City.)

Fred Blunt, now 85 and in ill health recently, sat in his Detroit st. home Thursday on the centenary of his father's typesetting and recalled what his pioneering parent told him of the old days in Colorado.

"Daddie talked many times about setting type for The News," he remembered, "but unfortunately he never went into much detail.

"He and George West were good friends. As soon as the Greeley extra was printed they moved on to Golden, and later (in 1866) they founded the Colorado Transcript.

Consumptive

"My father was born near Boston. He contracted tuberculosis and decided he should go west for his health.

"Some of the men feared he would never make it to the Rockies. But he did. Half-way out he already was sufficiently recovered to sit up in the wagon, and a little later he was riding horseback."

Mark Blunt built his first log cabin near what is now Filius Park in the Denver Mountain Parks system, his son said.

Later, he established a trading post at Golden City and out of this arose the town's first postoffice. Blunt was appointed postmaster at Golden on April 19, 1861.

A few years later, Mark Blunt moved to the Arkansas Valley to establish a cattle ranch. The Blunt ranch was at the mouth of the St. Charles River about eight miles southeast of Pueblo.

Fred Blunt was born on the ranch Nov. 14, 1877, but grew up in Pueblo where his father had become a lawyer.

He remembers that there sometimes were Indian troubles at the ranch and that his father sent to St. Louis for the door and window frames set into the adobe bricks of the ranchhouse.

To Denver in 1910

Following his marriage more than a half-century ago, Fred Blunt and his wife lived for a time in Kansas City and then in Utah before moving to Denver in 1910. Blunt spent 20 years in the Denver postal service and retired in 1942.

His father died at 65 on May 12, 1897, while serving as clerk of the U.S. District Court at Pueblo.

"I'm proud to be Mark Blunt's son and to know that he had a big part to play in all the things now being celebrated in this Centennial year," Fred Blunt said.

Rocky Mountain News, June 12, 1959, p. 8 [with picture of Fred Blunt in the same article.]

JUDGE JOSEPH D. BLUNT

Fremont Lawyer Becomes Judge of Eleventh District
Joseph D. Blunt of Canon City Appointed in Compromise.

Governor Vivian announced late Monday the appointment of Joseph D. Blunt of Canon City, Fremont county judge and lawyer, as district judge of the eleventh judicial district.

Up to a week ago the choice for the judgeship lay between Emerson M. Eagleton of Canon City, now district attorney of the eleventh district, and Thomas Nevens, Salida attorney. Nelson F. Handy, the governor's secretary, then spent several days conferring with leading Republicans in the four counties of the district--Fremont, Chaffee, Park and Custer. The conference led to an agreement upon Judge Blunt.

A native of Maryland, Judge Blunt came to Fremont county with his parents at 6, and has lived there continuously since except for a few years in Denver.

He attended the public schools and worked in a general store, in the coal mines and later in the lumber and ore hauling business in Cripple Creek, earning money to attend the Michigan university law school, from which he was graduated in 1902. He was city attorney for Florence, Colo., many years. His successor as county judge will be named by the Fremont county board of commissioners.

As district judge he fills the vacancy created by the death of District Judge James L. Cooper several months ago. He probably will seek election at the next general election to fill the unexpired term.

Denver Post, June 8, 1943

MARK L. BLUNT

Historic figure in the early-day era of the Denver locality was Mark L. Blunt, first postmaster of Colorado and co-founder of Golden City. This photograph of Mr. Blunt was taken in the early '60s when he served as postmaster, justice of the peace and registrar of the city.

Photograph: Rocky Mountain News, January 12, 1942, p. 7

MARK L. BLUNT

Old Documents Reveal Local Postal Employee's Dad Was

Colorado's First Postmaster; Founded Golden

By PASQUALE MARRANZINO

Rocky Mountain News Writer

The gold rush of 1859, precipitated by a glowing report on Colorado mining published by Horace Greeley, provided an exciting atmosphere for the entrance of Mark L. Blunt upon the local scene.

Mr. Blunt, a fashionable Boston gentleman, in the company of George E. West, later adjutant general of Colorado, stopped their horses one morning, before a saloon on the banks of Cherry Creek to quench their thirsts and to investigate the subject of gold which had swept the territory like fire.

In the saloon they met a distraught individual who was deploring the gold strike in the famous Gregory diggings because it had robbed him of his typesetters before Mr. Greeley's report could be printed for distribution.

The man was William N. Byers, founder of The Rocky Mountain News.

The ensuing conversation uncovered the fact that Mr. Byers was talking to the two best typesetters, self-admitted, of the East--Mr. Blunt and Mr. West. In short order, therefore, the pony express was headed for St. Joseph, Mo., and the East with Mr. Greeley's printed report and the first chapter of the golden history of Colorado, set in type by Messrs. Blunt and West.

The story of the coming of Mr. Blunt to the Denver area came to light yesterday in the Denver postoffice, where his son, Fred C. Blunt, a postoffice employe, offered Postmaster James O. Stevic an original document proclaiming Mark L. Blunt the first postmaster of Colorado.

The circumstances surrounding the postmastership of Mr. Blunt are symbolic of the West of his day.

According to historical records preserved by the Blunt family, Mark Blunt and George West left Denver shortly after they had set up Mr. Greeley's report. This was June 1, 1859.

The two men journeyed to the present site of Golden, where they established a trading post called the Boston Co. A few months later they founded the town of Golden City and the Golden Transcript, which still is in operation today.

The Boston Co. soon became the center of civilization for the rough mining citizenry of the area along with the Indian population of the locality.

The mails, which previously had stopped at the Elephant Corral in Denver, were extended to the Boston Co., where Mr. Blunt took on the duties of postmaster as part of his routine.

On March 20, 1861, Mr. Blunt was the recipient of a strange document from Washington, which proclaimed him the postmaster of Golden City in the Territory of Colorado.

Established Ranch

The war years which followed saw Mr. Blunt take up the Union cause in the Missouri campaign, during which he acted as liaison officer.

In 1864, Mr. Blunt foresaw the future of the great Arkansas Valley and settled there at the mouth of the St. Charles River, where it enters the Arkansas, and established the first cattle ranch in that area.

In 1866 he was appointed collector of internal revenue for the territory, a position he retained until 1872, four years before the territory was granted statehood.

Again in 1862 Mr. Blunt was called into the government service when he was appointed registrar of the U.S. Land Office at Pueblo.

He retained this position until 1885. After a 10-year law practice in Pueblo, he was again appointed to a federal position as clerk of the U. S. District and Circuit Courts. He died in that office May 12, 1897.

A man with great foresight, Mr. Blunt preserved all the documents of his early ventures. The Blunt family retains records of the Boston Co., the records of Golden City, which he kept when he was justice of the peace and registrar, and a well-kept diary.

Son in Postal Service

Mr. Blunt was father of five children, four of them boys. Only Fred C. Blunt of 350 Detroit st. followed in the footsteps of his father in the postoffice service.

A veteran of the postal service since 1922, Fred Blunt will retire next Nov. 14, on his 65th birthday.

Edward A. Blunt and Lawrence C. Blunt, former Denver businessmen, are dead. Mark H. Blunt of Cheyenne and Florence E. Blunt, 963 Lafayette st., are the other surviving children.

Many of the historical heirlooms of the Blunt family will be turned over to Colorado museums, Fred Blunt said.

[A picture on the same newspaper page reads: "A son of Pioneer Mark L. Blunt continues in the service of the U. S. mails as did his father. He is Fred C. Blunt of 350 Detroit st., a clerk in the downtown postoffice terminal, who prides in including the honor of raising and lowering the flag among his postoffice duties."]

Rocky Mountain News, January 12, 1942, p. 7

MARK L. BLUNT

Dear J. F.: I have heard that an early trading post called the Boston Company and run by Mark L. Blunt was built near the present site of Golden. Can you tell me more about the trading post and about Blunt.

Sylvester Kamel
500 St. Paul st.

* * *

Dear Mr. Kamel: Mark L. Blunt was one of those Colorado pioneers who led a most interesting and satisfying life.

Hall's History of Colorado tells us that he was born May 23, 1832 in Boston. By the time he was 12, he was earning his own living. In his early teens he learned printing.

When the rush of '59 attracted national notice, he came West with George West, later editor of the Golden Transcript, and others. They formed the Boston Company and left St. Joseph, Mo., with ox wagons for Pikes Peak.

They arrived in Auraria, Colo., just a few days after Horace Greeley. Greeley had made a report on the Gregory diggings, and William N. Byers, editor of the Rocky Mountain News, wanted to publish the report as an extra.

All Byers' printers had left to hunt gold, so the editor immediately hired West, Blunt and William Summer to help him.

A few days later the men of the Boston Company moved on to the location of Golden. They helped establish the town by building one of the first cabins on the site and organizing the Golden Town Company. West, James MacDonald and Blunt then started a paper called "The Mountaineer."

In later years, Blunt held office as recorder of Golden, justice of the peace, and postmaster. He served with the Second Regiment of Colorado Volunteers in 1863 and, after this service, moved near Pueblo, on the Arkansas River.

In 1881 he became register of U. S. land at Pueblo, and later was an attorney for land cases, and a deputy clerk in the U.S. Circuit and District Courts for Colorado.

He was not the first, but was one of the first to climb Pikes Peak, attaining the summit in August 1860. --J.F.

Rocky Mountain News, August 5, 1956, p. 51

EUGENE ALLEN BOBBITT
Cowboy, 101, Has Colorful, Long Memory
By LARRY PEARSON
Rocky Mountain News Writer

"I've had a helluva long story . . . lots of memories . . . lots of fun . . . lots of good times."
Speaking was one of the most colorful characters in Colorado--Eugene Allen (Al) Bobbitt, a life-long cowboy who will be 102 Jan. 27.

Memories slowly drifted back into his mind as he sat on the glassed-in front porch of Mrs. Jent's Guest Home at 1649 Race st.

"Load it up!" said Al, extending an empty and battered pipe to one of the younger lodgers who promptly tamped in a bowlful of Douwe Egberts tobacco from the Royal Factories of Utrecht, Holland.

Born in Kentucky

"He loves cigars, too," said the lodger. "He grinds 'em up and stuffs 'em in his pipe."

Al, quite possibly the oldest cowboy in Colorado, was born in Kentucky on Jan. 27, 1862, as the Civil War raged. At the time of his birth, Brig. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant was leading 17,000 men to attack Ft. Henry on the Tennessee River. The fort fell Feb. 6.

Al went to the Dakota territory after leaving Kentucky. He's not quite sure of the year. But he says he was captured by Sioux Indians and held captive for about five days.

But he also credits the Sioux with keeping him from starvation.

He says he served as a deputy U.S. Marshal in the Cherokee Strip of Oklahoma before the great land rush.

Followed Trail

The old wrangler picked up a picture of his late wife, adjusted his wire-rimmed glasses and gazed at it briefly.

"We were married in Dodge City, Kan. back in 1893," he said. "This is what she looked like in those days. Later on we followed the trail to Colorado."

He picked up another picture, this one showing his son, Edgar, winning first money at bronco busting at Steamboat Springs in 1920.

Much of Al's life is sketchy. But apparently he was one of the outstanding rodeo riders of the early American West.

Rode Horse at 98

"I saw him ride a horse at 98," said Mrs. Ruth Lehr of Morrison, who helped care for Al about four years ago in the Pine Haven Nursing Home in Morrison.

"Al answered: 'Sonny, I've ridden more horses than you've ever seen.' And he went galloping off."

Mrs. Lehr said Al used to spin stories about riding with Buffalo Bill in his famous Wild West Show.

"He has done just about everything," she said. "He traded horses with the Indians, furnished horses during World War I, and rode in all the rodeos."

"I knew him when he had a horse named Pin Ears," said Mrs. Ira Gibson of 227 Knox ct.

"My first husband was quite a bronc rider back in those days in the early 1900s. This Pin Ears was quite a horse. I think there was only one person who ever rode him.

"It was out around Hot Sulphur Springs in Grand County. I think Mr. Bobbitt was the only one who could ride Pin Ears."

"The old cowboys up around Middle Park and South Park still tell tales about him," said Reuben Squire of 380 Harlan st., Lakewood.

"He was a horse buyer up there during World War I," Squire said. "He would buy horses and have them broken before selling them to the Army.

"He had a fella named Tommy Jackson, helping him break the horses. Jackson lives in Idaho Springs now. He was quite a cowboy. I've got a picture of him when he won the 1915 all-around rodeo championship in Kremmling.

"He suffered a stroke about three years ago," Squire said. "But he was up and around in about three weeks. He had two sons, and I think one of them is still living."

On the front porch of Mrs. Jent's Guest House, the very, very old Colorado cowboy pulled on his pipe and watched some yellow leaves flutter to the ground on Race st.

Rocky Mountain News, November 24, 1963, p. 16

OTTO BOCK

Date: September 25, 1937

No. 2 B884 D5 E16 F63
LCD/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION
INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. Otto Bock, Judge of the District Court
Second District, Denver, Colorado

Otto Bock*, born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, February 21, 1881; son of William and Minnie (Koehler) Bock.

William Bock, born in Germany, in 1846. He emigrated to America in 1868, and settled in Bloomington, Illinois. He graduated from the Lake Forest (Illinois) Normal School, in 1874, and later became a teacher in the Lutheran parochial schools. He resided at Caledonia and in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and for 22 years prior to his death, which occurred in 1904, maintained his residence in Chicago, Illinois. He was a Democrat. His wife, Minnie (Koehler) Bock, daughter of August and Augusta (Wendt) Koehler, was born in Wisconsin, in 1857, and died in 1909. William and Minnie (Koehler) Bock were the parents of 7 children, 5 of them sons, Otto being the fourth-born child.

Otto Bock, attended Lutheran parochial schools in the Middle West, and graduated from the John Marshall Law School, LL. B., in 1908. Because of ill health, he moved to Colorado, and in January 1909, was admitted to the bar, entering the practice of law in Denver. In 1912, he was elected a justice of the peace, and after serving in that office 7 months, resumed his professional activities. In November 1914, he became assistant U. S. Attorney for Colorado, serving 7 years, after which he was a member of the Colorado State Public Utilities Commission, 7 years. In July 1933, he was appointed judge of the District Court, Second Judicial District, in which position he is serving at the present time, having been elected to the office after his appointment. He was a candidate for mayor in 1931. Judge Bock, who is keenly interested in public utilities problems, is a former member of the executive committee of the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners. He is chairman of the Central Western Shippers Advisory Board. Judge Bock is a Democrat, and a member of the following: American Bar Association (member, public utility section); Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Denver Law Club (past president); Denver Athletic Club; State Historical Society of Colorado; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Lutheran Church.

On Aug. 24, 1911, Otto Bock married Hilda Schabarum, who was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, daughter of William and Anna (Wolff) Schabarum. The following children were born to Judge and Mrs. Bock: (1) William. (2) Richard. (3) Paul. (4) Edward. (5) Thomas.

* See Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado," vol. 2, p. 135.

Denver Post, May 16, 1926, p. 2; July 11, 1933, p. 6; January 1, 1938, p. 3

Rocky Mountain News, March 22, 1931, p. 1, Sec. 1; May 10, 1933, p. 1; July 8, 1933, p. 7

,

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Claude Boettcher
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Claude Kedzie Boettcher, born June 19, 1875 at Boulder, Colorado

Name of father: Charles Boettcher, a native of Germany

Name of mother: Fannie A. Boettcher, a native of United States

Attended school or college: Harvard University

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: B.S. Harvard University

Married: Yes, January 10, 1920 at New York

Name of wife: Edna C. Boettcher, the daughter of Doctor and Mrs. A. G. Case

Name of children and years of birth: Charles Boettcher II, born September 21, 1901

Avocation: Banker

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government:
Major U.S. Army - 1917-1919

Give autograph signature: (signed) Claude K. Boettcher

Rocky Mountain News, January 11, 1920, p. 3, Sec. 1

Rocky Mountain News, June 24, 1926

Denver Post, December 21, 1928, p. 3

Denver Post, December 13, 1933, p. 1

Rocky Mountain News, October 6, 1938, p. 1

Sketches of Colorado, p. 180

See Colorado Clipping File under Business men

Biography File

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Claude Boettcher Still Plays Key Role in Booming City
Denver's Mr. Finance in Driver's Seat at 80

By WES FRENCH

Rocky Mountain News Writer

The great metropolitan area of Denver of June 1955 is a vastly changed place from the barren plains, cattle paths and struggling young town of June 10, 1875.

On the latter date in Boulder was born a man who has not only witnessed the vast changes of the past 80 years, but has played an almost phenomenal part in them.

Last June 10, Claude K. Boettcher, Mr. Finance of Denver, passed his 80th birthday with as firm a grasp as ever on the economic, social and philanthropic life of the booming city.

History of Business World

A history of Denver's business world would find the name of Boettcher--his father, the late Charles Boettcher, or Claude K. himself--on virtually every page.

A reading of society pages--yellowed from years past, or fresh with new ink--would read the same. So would a listing of civic and charitable organizations, climaxed with the nationally famed Boettcher Foundation.

Claude K. Boettcher was born in Boulder where his father, a Prussian emigrant, was building a new store for a business he established there in 1874.

Claude K. lived in Leadville, where his father opened another store and where foundations for the Boettcher fortune were laid, for 11 years; then the family moved to Denver in 1890 and the son received his education here and in the East.

Graduated from Harvard U.

He was graduated from Harvard in 1897 and entered the business world in Denver, which by then was finding the name of Boettcher a guiding star in financial circles.

He became a partner in Boettcher & Co. and as such became connected with much of the development of Denver and the Rocky Mountain area. These industries included mining, transportation, entertainment, department stores, sugar, cement, livestock, hotels and utilities.

Among these businesses through the years have been the Colorado Fuel & Iron Corp., elected a director in 1930; the Brown Palace Hotel, purchased in the '30s; General Theaters Inc., elected a director in 1933; Great Western Sugar Co., resigned as a director in 1934; Amalgamated Sugar Co., named chairman of the board in 1934; American Beet Sugar Co., named chairman of the board in 1934.

Chairman of Sugar Firm

American Crystal Sugar Co., chairman of the board; Ideal Cement Co., elected president in 1948 to succeed his father who died that year at 96; Public Service Co. of Colorado, elected a director in 1943; Denver and Intermountain Railway, chairman of the board; Potash Co. of America, trustee.

As Denver's financial kingpin, Boettcher teamed up with the fabulous New York financier, William Zeckendorf, early in 1950. Purpose was to develop Courthouse Square and the then yet to be named Mile High Center at 1700 Broadway.

A dispute over cement vs. steel brought the team of Boettcher and Zeckendorf down with a crash three years later. Boettcher's Ideal Cement Co. is one of the largest in the nation, but Zeckendorf's Webb & Knapp insisted on using steel in the huge building.

Interested in Air Potential

Boettcher has been interested in Denver's air potential since the early days of aviation. In a Rocky Mountain News story in 1927 he announced that he was contemplating the purchase of an airplane to stimulate commercial aviation in Colorado. He said he felt that the only way to get a municipal airport was for Denverites to show a need for one.

On July 22, 1913, he was the subject of a Denver Times article in a series on "The Younger Generation." In the article he predicted a great future for the then slowly growing city and said the times were ripe for the making of great fortunes.

Even then, however, Denver was plagued by court decisions on irrigation projects in the West, but despite gloomy outlooks at the time, Boettcher was confident the city would overcome its problems.

Boettcher Foundation Formed

For many years the Boettcher family had made large gifts to charitable institutions in the area, but in 1937 their philanthropic activities were put on an organized basis with the formation of the Claude K. Boettcher Foundation

The foundation is devoted to religious, charitable or educational purposes of promoting the well-being of mankind within the state.

Other endeavors which have captured Boettcher's long interest in civic affairs include the Denver Museum of Natural History where a Boettcher wing was dedicated in 1950; Children's Hospital and the Community Chest, to name a few.

Delegate to GOP Convention

A life-long Republican, Boettcher was elected a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1926.

The Boettcher social position, long at the top in Denver, became of international importance during the past 20 years. In June of 1934 Mrs. Boettcher was presented to King George and Queen Mary at the Court of St. James. In March, 1939 the Boettchers purchased Southwood, the Palm Beach estate, which they made into a show place of the resort city. There, in 1941, they gave a dinner for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Their home at 400 E. Eighth ave., one of Denver's finest mansions, also has been the scene of many gatherings of Denver society during the years.

Rocky Mountain News, June 13, 1955, p. 5

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER
A Scene From Leadville--1886

Years ago every lad who was fortunate had a pony and cart.

He drove it through town with all the pride that a youngster of today has in sitting behind the wheel of his first automobile.

The picture above shows just such a lad.

The scene: Leadville, 1886. See the wooden sidewalk that led into boisterous Harrison ave.?

The name of the pony was Billy. He had been a circus pony and was very high-spirited. Sometimes when he was feeling his oats, he would kick at the little cart, and there was quite a job of repairing to be done.

The name of the dog was Paris. He was a great black poodle, and very smart.

And the young driver was wearing the uniform of Notre Dame Military School which was near the South Bend University. He was 11 when the picture was taken, and was sitting very proud and erect, as every driver of a pony cart should be.

His name? Claude K. Boettcher, now one of Denver's better known citizens.

Picture from Rocky Mountain News, October 17, 1956, p. 36

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Claude K. Boettcher, Denver empire builder and philanthropist who died June 9, left an estate worth more than $20 million.

Personal bonds in that amount were pledged in Denver County Court Monday by each of five co-executors named in Boettcher's will.

The estate was the largest ever filed in Denver.

Fred G. Bonfils, cofounder of the Denver Post, who died in 1933, left the next largest estate, in excess of $15 million.

The $20 million figure is far from the gross value of the Boettcher empire, or even his personal worth.

Not included under the probate bonds are life insurance and property held jointly with others.

SET UP FOUNDATION

In addition, Boettcher during his life set up the Boettcher Foundation, a philanthropy said to be worth many millions, and several family investment trusts, including Boettcher Corp. and Ideal Corp.

Sworn in as co-executors Monday before County Judge David Brofman were Charles Boettcher, the financier's son; Henry C. Van Schaack, Denver realty executive, and Howard Parks, vice president and trust officer of the Denver National Bank.

The two other co-executors, Boettcher's widow, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, and Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal Cement Co., had been sworn earlier by a notary public, with permission of the court.

Donald A. Graham, of Lewis, Grant & Webster, attorneys for the estate declined Monday to give any details on Boettcher's holdings. An inventory of the estate must be filed within 30 days.

Graham said his firm began work on the inventory a few days after Boettcher's death. He said it would take all the time allowed under the law to complete it.

NO REAL ESTATE

Boettcher left no real estate. The family mansion at 400 E. 8th Ave., belongs to Mrs. Boettcher. Other real estate holdings within the Boettcher empire, among them the Brown Palace Hotel, are held by the Boettcher Realty Corp.

Though none of the estate's components were revealed, they were known to include heavy holdings in two firms founded by Boettcher and his father, the late Charles Boettcher, Ideal Cement Co. and Potash Corp. of America.

Also included was a partnership in the Rocky Mountain region's largest investment banking house, Boettcher & Co.

Boettcher also was known to have held huge investments in Colorado's two biggest beet sugar producers, American Crystal Sugar Co., and Great Western Sugar Co., and many other firms.

Denver Post, July 29, 1957, p. 1

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Sets Record Here

By ED OSCHMANN

Rocky Mountain News Court Reporter

The largest will ever presented to County Court was admitted to probate Monday.

It is the estate of Claude K. Boettcher, 81-year-old industrialist and philanthropist, valued at more than $20 million, according to personal bonds of the five executors of his estate filed with the court.

The total of his estate is not reflected in the amount of bonds of the estate, which must be filed with the court within 30 days, will give a clue to the value of Mr. Boettcher's holdings.

SUBSTITUTE JURIST

His will was admitted to probate by County Judge Joseph A. Barron of Walsenburg, sitting for Judge David Brofman.

Executors of the estate who posted bonds with the court are Mr. Boettcher's wife, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher; his son, Charles Boettcher II; Cris Dobbins, president of the Ideal Cement Co.; the Denver National Bank, and Henry C. Van Schaack, president of Van Schaack & Co.

Judge Barron signed orders giving Mrs. Boettcher $5000 a month and Charles II $2500 a month during the period of administration of the estate.

Under terms of his will Mr. Boettcher gave away $831,000 in personal charitable bequests and trusts.

He gave outright cash bequests of $50,000 each to his wife, son and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mae B. Boettcher.

Another $50,000 was given to James F. Burns Jr. of New York City. His personal secretary for many years, Mrs. Louise C. Brown, was left $25,000.

$15,000 BEQUEST

Miss Louise A. Toogood, secretary-treasurer of the Boettcher Realty Co., was given $15,000.

M. O. Matthews of Ada, Okla., an officer and director of the Ideal Cement Co., one of the Boettcher holdings, was given $10,000.

Similar sums were left to Oakley F. Counts of Denver, a vice president of Ideal, and Laurence T. McBride of Denver, a statistician for Mr. Boettcher.

The cancer clinic of St. Luke's Hospital was left $50,000, and $25,000 was left in trust for scholarships at Harvard University.

The Boettcher Foundation was given $100,000 and directed that it be used by the foundation's board of trustees for the Boettcher School for Crippled Children at 1900 Downing st.

Another $100,000 was given Children's Hospital with direction that the money be added to its endowment funds and not to be used for building purposes.

Rocky Mountain News, July 30, 1957, p. 29

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

By ED OSCHMANN

Rocky Mountain News Court Reporter

The personal holdings of Claude K. Boettcher, 81-year-old industrial and philanthropist, were valued at $7,610,385 at the time of his death.

This was disclosed Friday when an inventory was filed in County Court by executors of his estate.

When his will was presented to the court for probate July 29, personal bonds of $20 million each were posted with the court by his executors.

The difference between the amount of the bonds and the inventoried value of his estate was explained by Howard E. Parks, vice president and trust officer of the Denver National Bank.

At the time Mr. Boettcher's will was filed for probate, Parks said, his executors had no full information as to the amount or value of the industrialist's holdings.

Parks explained it is the duty of an executor to post enough bond with the court to cover the anticipated amount of the estate.

He said it is possible an amended inventory of Mr. Boettcher's estate will be filed with the court but that it won't vary much from that filed Friday.

Parks said also state inheritance tax reports are being prepared on the basis of the inventory value.

According to the inventory Mr. Boettcher left no real estate. Cash and bank accounts totaled $689,416.02; bonds, $15,130; notes and accounts, $82,847.83; corporate stocks, $6,722,391.48, and all other personal property, $100,600.

HOLDINGS LISTED

Some of his holdings reflected in the inventory were 1827 shares of Cement Investors Co., $1,795,687; 3842 shares of Ideal Corp., $1,119,393; 50,000 shares of Potash Co. of America, $1,800,000; six shares of Ideal Cement Co., $399; 645 shares of General Securities Co., common stock, $622,663; 192 shares in the International Trust Co., $119,040; 3415 shares in Lone Star Cement, $124,078; 75 shares in the First National Bank, $35,250, and 3690 shares in the Boettcher Corp., $344,461.

The inventory listed his personal property as $100,000 in Boettcher & Co., and a 1946 Cadillac 7-passenger car valued at $250.

The executors of his estate paid a fee of $7611 to the court to file the inventory.

Under terms of his will he gave away $831,000 in personal charitable bequests.

The rest of his estate he directed be placed in trust for the benefit of his wife, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher; his son, Charles Boettcher II; a granddaughter, Mrs. LeRoy (Claudia) Hoffman, and another granddaughter, Mrs. Maurice (Anna Lou) Ohrel.

Rocky Mountain News, August 24, 1957, p. 16

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Claude K. Boettcher, reputedly one of the richest men in America, owned no real estate at the time of his death.

This was disclosed Friday as his executors filed his will for probate in Denver County Court.

Their documents placed the value of his personal holdings at "more than $1 million."

An estimate of the actual size of those holdings will be possible later this month, when the executors post bond for probate hearings. The bond must be large enough to cover the personal estate value.

Mr. Boettcher, financier and industrialist, died June 9 at the family home at 400 E. Eighth ave. Death came a day before his 82d birthday.

The will, signed June 12, 1948, left $831,000 in personal and charitable bequests and trusts.

Among the beneficiaries were the cancer clinic of St. Luke's Hospital, Boettcher School, Children's Hospital, the Rocky Mountain Harvard Club and the Boettcher Foundation.

He willed his partnership in Boettcher & Co. to the company's pension fund and his partners.

Named beneficiaries of trusts covering much of his estate were his widow, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher; his son, Charles Boettcher II, and two granddaughters, Mrs. LeRoy Hoffman and Mrs. Maurice Ohrel.

Rocky Mountain News, July 6, 1957, p. 8

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Civic, Business, Political Heads Pay Tribute to Boettcher

Colorado civic, business, political, and educational figures joined Monday in tribute to Claude Boettcher as an industrial, civic, and philanthropic leader.

Among those commenting:

Governor McNichols: "The whole state will mourn his passing. He was one of Colorado's great pioneers of financing and philanthropy."

Mayor Nicholson: "Mr. Boettcher's passing is a tremendous loss to the entire community and a personal loss to me. He has been my personal friend ever since I came to Colorado. He will be missed by many, many people."

Henry C. Van Schaack, Denver realtor and trustee of the Boettcher Foundation: "I think he was one of the greatest men Colorado ever had. My friendship with him has been a long, wonderful one, and it has been a great comfort to have his advice and counsel. It will be a terrific responsibility to carry on the work of the Foundation in Boettcher's name."

John Evans, former president of the First National Bank and grandson of John Evans, territorial governor of Colorado: "Mr. Boettcher was one of the great builders of the west, one of the greatest citizens we ever had. His whole interest has been in helping others less fortunate."

"He helped build the industry that underlies the west's current prosperity, and made sure the money he earned was used most fruitfully. He was a very close friend, and I am very much shocked by his death."

Lt. Gov. Frank L. Hays: "The state has lost a very fine citizen and one who has contributed just a terrific amount to the development of the west. I want to express my heartfelt sympathy to the members of his family."

Peter J. Berkeley, owner of Lainson's studio, located in the Brown Palace for 31 years:

"He was the most generous person I ever met. A friend. The Boettchers have done so many things for Denver."

"He personally designed the entrance to my new studio on the 17th St. side of the hotel--we moved there from the Tremont side about eight weeks ago. He was an architect by training and took a great interest in such things."

Charles O'Toole, manager of the Brown Palace Hotel: "Mr. Boettcher always took a keen interest in the Brown Palace. It was sort of a hobby with him. He insisted that all changes made in the hotel were in keeping with its old tradition of fine appointments and service."

"I've always had a great respect and affection for him, and his passing comes as a great shock."

William Zeckendorf, president of Webb & Knapp: "Denver has lost a great citizen and Webb & Knapp and the Zeckendorf family have lost a great friend. We have all admired Claude Boettcher and feel a distinct sense of loss as well as shock. We regret his death deeply. He was a man who probably did more for his community in a modest, moderate and unassuming way, of anyone we know. His life should be an example to other citizens of Denver."

Robert L. Stearns, president of the Boettcher Foundation and former president of the University of Colorado: "Mr. Boettcher left many monuments, but none greater than the Foundation established 20 years ago, which will continue to benefit the people of Colorado and the Rocky Mountain Empire."

Quigg Newton, president of the University of Colorado: "With the passing of Claude K. Boettcher, Colorado has lost a brilliant native son, a maker of Colorado history, a man with a deep faith in the future of the west, a creative genius in the field of business and industry, as well as a great philanthropist and a good citizen. His death marks the passing of a brilliant era of Colorado history."

[A picture on this page with caption: This studio portrait, taken around 1920, shows Claude K. Boettcher, his son, Charles Boettcher II (right) and father, the late Charles Boettcher (center).]

Denver Post, June 10, 1957, p. 22

See also:

Denver Post, June 10, 1957, pp. 1, 5, 10

Denver Post, June 11, 1957, pp. 2, 3, 5, 18

Denver Post, June 14, 1957, pp. 2, 5

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Boettcher Fortune Mystery

Claude K. Boettcher, Denver financier who died Sunday night, was one of the richest men in the nation.

The cloak of secrecy shrouding the extent of his family wealth has been a tight one for years.

Life Magazine recently said he was one of the 64 most wealthy men in the country. Private guesses on Denver's 17th St. say he was among the top 20 on the wealth scale.

But no one, during his life, came out with a formal estimate on how many millions of dollars in cash, securities and real estate holdings he controlled.

A list of Claude K. Boettcher's titles and the assets of wealthy corporations he and his father helped to found and develop are the only solid clue to his total wealth.

Boettcher was chairman of the board of Ideal Cement Co., which had net sales of $77.6 million in 1956 and net income of $14.9 million. His son, Charles Boettcher II, also serves on the board of Ideal, which his Prussian-born grandfather founded.

Claude K. Boettcher took over the reins of empire when his father, Charles Boettcher, died in 1948. But he had been aiding his father for years prior to that.

The Boettcher family made national headlines in 1934 when Charles II was kidnaped and later released after payment of $25,000 ransom. The same year he was chosen one of the ten best dressed men in America by Fifth Ave. tailors.

The family's success in the cement industry led to a break in 1953 with New York financier William Zeckendorf over construction of Mile High Center.

Zeckendorf insisted on a steel skeleton for the skyscraper. Boettcher withdrew from that project and the Courthouse Square development over the issue.

HUGE SUGAR HOLDINGS

Boettcher was chairman of the board of American Crystal Sugar Co., which has assets of $55.7 million and reported net income of $1,741,539 for 1956.

His father was a co-founder and he was a former officer and big stockholder in Great Western Sugar Co., assets $74 million, profit in 1956, $5 million.

Boettcher had holdings in Colorado Fuel & Iron Corp., which has total assets of $256.6 million and a 1956 net of $5,131,278.

He resigned as a director of Public Service Co. of Colorado several years ago, but his son has replaced him on the board of the firm. PSC has assets of $295 million and reported operating revenue of $83.2 million in 1956.

Boettcher was chairman of the executive committee of Potash Co. of America, with net assets of $30.5 million and 1956 sales of $19,032,148.

FIRM OWNS BROWN PALACE

He was a partner in his own investment firm of Boettcher & Co., one of the largest in the west. His Boettcher Realty Co. owns the Brown Palace Hotel and the First National Bank Bldg., plus much other downtown property and is building the multi-million-dollar Brown Palace West.

Boettcher also had huge holdings in General Theaters, Inc., which was merged with Fox Theaters in 1937.

Denver Post, June 10, 1957, p. 22 Pictures on page include Claude Boettcher as an army major in 1918 and the late Claude Boettcher in 1947 with W. A. Peterson and Henry C. Van Schaack.

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Associates Recall Claude Boettcher's Drive, Leadership

By ED WOLFF

Denver Post Staff Writer

A man with a knack of leadership born of an iron will and unfailing courtliness.
A prince of wealth to the manner born, who worked to build his domain until the day he died.

A man whose mind was always in the present, who "never reminisced."

A man with a deep concern for conservatism but who, when over 70, bought the first post-war executive airplane.

An eye for design and detail combined with vision and the courage to back it up.

These were the traits of Claude K. Boettcher recalled by those connected with his favorite enterprise, Ideal Cement Co., and his "hobby"--the Brown Palace Hotel.

The 82-year-old Boettcher's love of his empire carried him through business conferences as late as last Saturday, 24 hours before he died, when he discussed details of a new cement plant being built in New Mexico.

ACTIVE UNTIL END

Cris Dobbins, Ideal president, was in daily contact, either in person, or by telephone, with Boettcher for the last 15 years. He told of a conference with Boettcher that lasted far in the evening last week:

"I called him from Chicago Thursday, following a court decision highly favorable to Ideal. Though he'd had a bad day, he insisted I come to see him straight from Stapleton airport that evening.

"He refused to rest until I'd read him excerpts of the decision and newspaper clippings about Ideal's court victory," Dobbins said.

HE DIDN'T REMINISCE

Dr. Frank B. McGlone, Boettcher's doctor for the last five years, when asked if the financier had reminisced much during his illness, said:

"He was never a person to reminisce much. A great many people came in and out. He was always interested in his projects."

His pet project of recent years was the yet-to-be-completed Brown Palace West, of which Boettcher kept a detailed scale model in his bedroom.

The Brown Palace itself had been his "hobby" for years. He had conceived the Ship's Tavern, and had given the hotel many objects d'art from his own home or collected on his frequent trips around the world.

HOTEL DETAILS CHECKED

An engineer by college training, he went over every detail of the new structure, insisting on rounded corners and the proper color for the porcelainized metal skin to match the old building.

The proposed bulky bridge over Tremont Place, linking the two buildings, displeased him, and he ordered a sleek, white structure with flowers or plants the year 'round.

When the contract for the structure was let he asked how long it would take to build.

Two years, he was told.

"I'll give you just half that long."

Told a speedup would increase the structure's cost, Boettcher replied, pokerfaced: "I don't have much money, but at my age I have even less time."

He was 70 when World War II ended but his energy and drive was unabated. He is given almost the entire credit for Ideal Cement's seven-fold post-war growth.

FORESAW BIG GROWTH

"I remember a sales managers' dinner at his home in 1936," Dobbins said. "He predicted we would have a separate research division and plants in an area destined to undergo tremendous growth--the Rocky Mountain Empire, the Gulf Coast and California."

The predictions came true with the building of a research laboratory at Fort Collins and the erection or acquisition of 15 new plants from Alabama to Oregon.

Boettcher often ordered such big production capacities for these new plants--built on Ideal's first borrowed money--that his associates "thought he'd gone crazy."

It turned out, Dobbins said, that only Boettcher foresaw the magnitude of postwar growth.

The iron hand was enclosed in a glove of deep velvet. Associates of 40 years, such as M. O. Matthews, Ideal executive vice president, say they never heard Boettcher raise his voice.

Despite his public split with William K. Zeckendorf over whether the Mile-High Center should be concrete or steel.

Typical of Boettcher's manner was the way he handled an incident at an executives' dinner party he gave in his home, Matthews said.

"While Boettcher was speaking, two men at the far end of the table began a conversation of their own. Without changing his tone of voice, Boettcher said:

"My library is quite commodious. It is at the disposal of those who need to confer among themselves."

No pin dared drop until he finished speaking.

Boettcher's willingness to delegate responsibility inspired love and loyalty among his subordinates.

But there was something more, they say.

"When he talked to you, he gave you the feeling that no one in the world could interest him more," Charles O'Toole, manager of the Brown Palace, said.

"He went out of his way to tell people of his appreciation for their work," Dobbins says.

Barbers Walter Nowak and Bob Hoecherl of the Brown Palace barber shop, telling of chauffeur-driven trips to the Boettcher mansion to barber the ailing magnate, said:

"There were a lot of people coming in and out, talking business, and a lot of long distance calls.

"But he always took time, no matter how bad he felt, to talk to us and ask us how things were at the hotel.

"Somehow, it seemed more like a social call than an appointment."

Denver Post, June 11, 1957, p. 3

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER
Boettcher Rites Held At Home

Private services were held at the Boettcher mansion, 400 E. 8th Ave., at 11 a. m. Tuesday for Claude K. Boettcher, 82, financier who died there Sunday afternoon.

His body was cremated at the Fairmount crematorium immediately following the services. Boettcher's ashes were to be entombed in the Boettcher family mausoleum at the cemetery.

Only a small group of close relatives and friends attended the services, which lasted about 15 minutes.

The services were conducted by the Rev. Henry Foster, rector emeritus of the Episcopal Church of Ascension.

Funeral arrangements for the multi-millionaire industrialist and financier were made by the Olinger Mortuary. Olinger personnel served as pall bearers.

Three limousines followed the hearse to the cemetery.

Among those in the limousines were Mrs. Edna Boettcher, his wife; her sister, Mrs. Joe Schaefer of Denver; Boettcher's son, Charles Boettcher II of Denver; a nurse and the Rev. Mr. Foster, minister who conducted the services at the mansion; Boettcher's two granddaughters, Mrs. LeRoy Hoffman of New York City and Mrs. Maurice Ohrel of Fort Collins, and Boettcher's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles Boettcher II, and Cris Dobbins.

Among those who attended the services were Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Van Schaack, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Daly, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Stearns, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Malo, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Humphreys, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Lewis, all of Denver, and Quigg Newton, president of the University of Colorado.

Mrs. Humphreys is Boettcher's sister. She did not accompany the funeral procession to the cemetery.

The Boettcher casket bore a blanket of white roses when carried to the waiting hearse.

The financier's family earlier had requested that friends make contributions to Denver's Children's Hospital.

Denver Post, June 11, 1957, p. 3

CLAUDE KEDZIE BOETTCHER

By ALEX MURPHREE

Denver Post Staff Writer

The death of Claude Kedzie Boettcher ended a 47-year period of dominance in Denver's financial, industrial and developmental activity.

Boettcher controlled a vast business empire passed on to him by his father, the late Charles Boettcher and built painstakingly by him for nearly half a century.

The Boettcher story thus passed on Monday to the third generation, Charles Boettcher II, already long active in the family business interests.

Full of honor and power, active to the end, Boettcher would have observed his 82d birthday Monday.

For years philanthropic activity had been close to his heart and had had first call on his fortune.

His dominance was felt in real estate and building, the cement industry, investment banking, the sugar industry, the hotel business, the tramway--indeed, almost every phase of Denver's financial activity.

Since 1910, he had been a partner of Boettcher & Co., the controlling corporation of the family business interests.

He was president of Cement Investments, Inc., the Boettcher Realty Co., the Boettcher Corp., the Brown Palace Hotel, the Ideal Corp. He was vice president from 1925 to 1952 and board chairman since of the Ideal Cement Co.

Boettcher was board chairman of the American Crystal Sugar Co. and the Potash Co. of America.

That is the basic picture of Boettcher's financial interest which began with the pioneering of his father, the late Charles Boettcher who died in 1948 at the age of 96.

MOST IMPRESSIVE FEAT

Claude Boettcher's most impressive contribution to the life of Denver was, however, his contributions to philanthropies, education, hospitals and other institutions. That was what was recognized when an honorary doctorate was conferred on him by the University of Colorado in 1950.

Chief among these activities was heading up the Boettcher Foundation, endowed for about $5 million, in 1937. Out of this fund, scholarships have been provided for Colorado high school honor students for study, mostly in the field of the sciences.

As evidence of the Boettcher family's interest in philanthropy, the Boettcher School near Children's Hospital stands as an example. Here under Denver public schools' administration, children who are crippled or otherwise disabled have been able to complete their high school education in a building constructed specifically for their need.

Contributions have also gone into the thousands of dollars to Children's Hospital and General Rose Hospital as a gift from Claude Boettcher and his family.

In addition, Boettcher was a trustee of the Denver Museum of Natural History.

The Boettcher dynasty was founded by Claude Boettcher's father, a German immigrant who came to Cheyenne, Wyo., at the age of 17 to join his brother in the hardware business. The hardware stores, guided by Boettcher's business acumen soon became a chain with stores at Fort Collins, Greeley, Evans, Loveland and Boulder.

BORN IN BOULDER

During his second year at Fort Collins--that was 1875--Charles Boettcher married Fannie Augusta Cowan. They moved to Boulder three years later and it was there that Claude K. Boettcher was born, their first child.

In the same year, 1878, Charles Boettcher learned of the silver strike in Leadville. With customary promptness of decision and pioneering courage, he left almost at once for Leadville where mining interest he acquired paid off handsomely.

After 12 years he moved to Denver to open a wholesale hardware store on Larimer St. Then, the rise of business dominance in the growing community really started. Before leaving Leadville, he had built and operated the first electric plant there. He installed a power plant in Salt Lake City and had built a light and power system for St. Louis, Mo.

He retired at the age of 48--but not for long.

STARTS CEMENT FIRM

By 1900, Charles Boettcher had returned to full business activity and embarked on the major venture of his life, the creation of Ideal Cement Co., which began with a small plant at Portland, Colo., near Pueblo, in the closing months of 1899. The Colorado Portland Cement Co. continued to grow as Ideal Cement Co. into the first position in the industry in the western United States.

Gradually, Claude Boettcher, schooled in his father's financial practices and already active in all affairs of the Boettcher companies, began to take over control of the family business and industries.

Long before his father's death, Claude Boettcher had become a leading figure along Denver's 17th St.

GRADUATE OF HARVARD

Claude Boettcher was graduated from Harvard University in 1897 with a degree in engineering.

He married De Allan McMurtrie here in January, 1900. Of this union, a son, Charles Boettcher II, was born.

The marriage ended in divorce in 1919.

Boettcher married a second time in 1920, taking as his wife Mrs. Edna Case McElveen.

A Republican and Episcopalian, Boettcher belonged to many civic, social, fraternal and business organizations.

He held memberships in many clubs, the Denver Club, the Denver Country Club, Cherry Hills Country Club, Cherry Hills Saddle Club and the Cooking Club in Denver, the Pikes Peak Trails Club in Colorado Springs, the Harvard, Racquet and Brook clubs of New York city, and the Everglades, Bath and Tennis and Seminole Golf clubs of Florida.

Boettcher was also a member of Pi Eta fraternity, and the Denver and U. S. Chambers of Commerce. He was a trustee of the Denver Museum of Natural History and an advisory committee member for Children's Hospital.

Denver Post, June 10, 1957, p. 22

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER
Blood Clot Ends Storied Career
By WILLARD HASELBUSH
Denver Post Business Editor

Claude K. Boettcher, who built a pioneer Colorado fortune into an industrial and financial empire is dead.

Death came of heart failure at 6:30 p. m. Sunday in the second floor bedroom of the Boettcher mansion at 400 E. 8th Ave. on the eve of Boettcher's 82nd birthday.

Boettcher had been in ill health for years. Confined to his home, he still directed his far-flung business interests and held almost daily conferences with executives of his multi-million-dollar enterprises.

Dr. Frank B. McGlone, Denver internist who had treated the financier for five years, said a blood clot formed Sunday in a main vein leading to the heart.

Dr. McGlone said the clot cut off circulation to Boettcher's arms and legs and, finally, to his lungs. He said death came quietly with members of the immediate family at Boettcher's bedside.

PRIVATE SERVICES

Olinger Mortuaries said funeral services have been set tentatively for 11 a. m. Tuesday. They will be private.

Boettcher was a businessman to the end. Only Saturday he had conferences with aides on progress of the Brown Palace West, the 22-story annex to the family-owned Brown Palace Hotel.

Dr. McGlone said Boettcher kept scale models of proposed Brown Palace West rooms in his bedroom "and was very much interested."

Boettcher's financial empire embraced cement, sugar beets, livestock, utilities, steel, real estate, retail drygoods, theaters, transportation and banking.

SON OF IMMIGRANT

He was the son of a Prussian immigrant. Charles Boettcher, who came to Colorado at the age of 17 in 1869, while the state still was Indian Territory. The first Boettcher of an American dynasty began as a partner in a hardware store at Cheyenne, Wyo., and soon owned his own chain in several Colorado cities, including the silver boom town of Leadville.

Charles Boettcher founded the Ideal Cement Co., now a giant doing more than $52 million business annually with 13 plants across the nation. He also pioneered in the livestock and sugar beet industries.

Claude K. Boettcher was born in Boulder on June 10, 1875, where his father opened another hardware branch store.

He formally took over the Boettcher reins when his father died in 1948 although he had guided the enterprises for many years.

ACTIVE IN PHILANTHROPY

Philanthropy occupied much of Claude Boettcher's time and interest in later years. The Boettcher Foundation, of which he was a trustee, was set up to channel millions of dollars into charitable and educational pursuits.

In 1952, Dr. Robert L. Stearns resigned as president of the University of Colorado to head the Boettcher Foundation. He and Claude K. Boettcher established scholarships for promising young Colorado men and women. Patterned after the Rhodes Scholarships, they pay full tuition, fees and cash grants for attendance at any Colorado institution of higher learning.

PROPHETIC FORECAST

Just two years ago, on his 80th birthday, Boettcher granted a rare personal interview to The Denver Post.

He said Denver is experiencing its greatest economic boom and forecast accurately that the city's water shortage of water would be solved in time to keep the boom rolling.

"Luxury and wealth are all very well if you use them properly," he said on his 81st birthday. He added that it was a lot harder to give away money properly than it was to make it. Boettcher was a Republican with membership in scores of social fraternal and civic groups.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher; his son, Charles II; a sister, Mrs. Ruth Humphreys of Denver; two granddaughters, Mrs. Claudia Hoffman of New York and Mrs. Anna Lou Ohrel of Fort Collins, and five great grandchildren, Edward Thurn Hoffman of New York and Bernadette, Charles, Kathleen and John Hale Ohrel of Fort Collins.

The family requests no flowers. Friends who wish may make contributions to Children's Hospital.

Denver Post, June 10, 1957, p. 1

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

Boettcher Trusts, Bequests Filed in Court Total $800,000

By CHARLES ROOS

Denver Post Staff Writer

A preliminary indication of the size of the estate of Claude K. Boettcher, Denver financier, was given late Thursday when his will, listing cash bequests and trusts totaling almost $800,000, was lodged in county court.

No inventory of the estate was filed. The full extent of his shares in various multi-million-dollar enterprises has not been determined.

Boettcher died Sunday at his home, 400 E. 8th Ave., on the eve of his 82d birthday.

In his will, dated June 17, 1948, he named as executors his wife, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher; his son, Charles II; the Denver National Bank; Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal Cement Co. and long-time Boettcher associate, and Henry C. Van Schaack, Denver realty executive.

The will gave them broad powers in handling estate matters--in Boettcher's words, "every power of management that I might have if then personally living and acting."

Cash bequests of $50,000 each went to Charles Boettcher and his wife, Mae, and to Van Schaack.

OTHER BEQUESTS

The will listed other bequests to friends and business associates: To Edward D. Nicholson, Denver, retired United Air Lines official, $5,000; James F. Burns, New York, $5,000; Dobbins, $20,000; Oakley F. Counts, Denver, Ideal vice president, $10,000; the late Harry O. Warner, another Ideal vice president, who died last September, $5,000.

M. O. Matthews, Ada, Okla., officer and director of Ideal, $10,000; Miss Lillian A. Toogood, Denver, retired official of Boettcher Realty Co., $15,000; L. T. McBride, Denver, statistician for Boettcher, $10,000, and Mrs. Louise C. Brown, Boettcher's private secretary, $25,000.

The sum of $50,000 was left to the cancer clinic of St. Luke's Hospital, to be administered through the Boettcher Foundation, and $25,000 to the Rocky Mountain Harvard Club, also through the foundation.

The foundation also was given $100,000, to be used for the welfare of pupils of the Boettcher School for Crippled Children, 1900 Downing St., and $250,000 to be used without restriction.

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL

Boettcher left $100,000 to Children's Hospital, specifying that it be added to the institution's endowment fund and not for building. He made the same condition on the bequest to the Boettcher School.

His books, papers, clothing and firearms he left to his son.

One-half of his co-partnership interest in Boettcher & Co., Denver investment house, was left in trust for use in the pension fund for the firm's 77 employees. The other half will go in equal shares to the other partners.

A bequest of $15,000 is to be divided among his and Mrs. Boettcher's servants and employees.

The rest of the estate--an undetermined amount--will be set up in trust funds, about half for the benefit of Mrs. Boettcher during her lifetime and 12/20ths of the remainder for his son. At their deaths, these funds will go into the Boettcher Foundation.

FOR GRANDDAUGHTERS

Some 7/20ths of the remainder is to be held in trust for a granddaughter, Mrs. Claudia Hoffman, New York and 1/20th for his other granddaughter, Mrs. Anna Lou Ohrel, Fort Collins. According to the will, Mrs. Ohrel already had been provided for "by certain trust funds."

He requested that the court require no bonds or sureties of the executors. He specified that a decision of a majority of the executors be binding.

While the estate is in probate, he provided for monthly payments of at least $5,000 to his wife and $2,500 to his son.

Boettcher was said to be one of the wealthiest men in the United States, his interests including Ideal Cement, Great Western Sugar Co., American Crystal Sugar Co., Potash Co. of America, Boettcher & Co., and many others.

Denver Post, June 14, 1957, p. 2

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER
Boettcher Was State's Wealthiest Man

Claude K. Boettcher, the Denver financier and industrialist who died Sunday night, was Colorado's wealthiest man, and one of the richest in the nation.

In terms of personal wealth and cash readily available to him in his own name, it is possible that his fortune could have been exceeded in Colorado for, over the past 20 years, he had poured millions into the huge Boettcher Foundation.

But in terms of corporate control, there could be little doubt that Mr. Boettcher's worth ran into hundreds of millions and may have approached the billion dollar mark.

At the time of his death, he was an officer and/or major stockholder or was represented personally in a dozen of the West's most important business and industrial firms.

He was listed as the chairman of the board of the $87 million Ideal Cement Co., and of the $31 million Potash Co. of America--values determined by listing of net assets in the latest annual reports of these firms.

MORE MILLIONS

He was president of the Boettcher Corp. and of Boettcher & Co.--firms with assets running into many more millions. He was a director and principal shareholder in the $62 million American Crystal Sugar Co. and was president of the General Securities Co., according to papers of incorporation filed with the secretary of state.

He was a former officer and big stockholder in the $74 million Great Western Sugar Co., of which his father, Charles, was a co-founder, and was a reported shareholder in the $295 million Public Service Co.

His son, Charles Boettcher II, and the principal lieutenants in his business empire, held additional directorships or officerships in such major business institutions as the Public Service Co., and the Denver National Bank and the Colorado Milling & Elevator Co.

He was director of the Denver Tramway Corp. and was known to have had huge holdings in General Theaters Inc., which merged with Fox Theaters in 1937. He also had holdings in the $256 million Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

STARTED IN 1937

The Boettcher Foundation, which has given millions to education, health and other charitable institutions, was started in 1937. Although its holdings are a secret guarded as closely as the personal fortune of Mr. Boettcher, it was common knowledge that he had given it major portions of his holdings, while retaining control of those holdings for Foundation purposes.

Much of the fortune of his parents also went to the Foundation. The personal estate of his father was estimated at $2.4 million on his death in 1948, while the bulk of his mother's $4.7 million estate went to the Foundation upon her death in 1952.

Rocky Mountain News, June 11, 1957, p. 5

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER
Private Rites Slated Tuesday for Boettcher

Private funeral services will be held Tuesday morning in Olinger Mortuary, Speer blvd., for Claude K. Boettcher, pioneer Colorado resident and financial giant who died Sunday at his Denver home.

Burial will be in Fairmount.

Thousands of telegrams from throughout the nation poured into the Boettcher mansion at 400 E. Eighth ave. bringing condolences from his host of friends and admirers.

The messages came from all walks of life--from Gov. McNichols and Mayor Nicholson to those who labored in the vast financial industrial empire carved out by Mr. Boettcher and his late father, Charles K. Boettcher.

They came from among the countless scores who received aid through the years from the fabulous Boettcher Foundation, the charitable institution founded by the Boettchers.

Mr. Boettcher, who managed his far-flung business affairs from his home the past year despite failing health, died a day before his 82d birthday.

Immediate cause of death was a blood clot near the heart.

Born in Boulder, June 10, 1875, he succeed his father at the head of the financial empire, which embraced sugar beets, cement, livestock, utilities, steel, real estate, retail drygoods, theaters and transportation.

He was a Republican, a member of the Episcopal Church and scores of social, fraternal, civic and business organizations.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher; his son, Charles II; two granddaughters, Mrs. LeRoy (Claudia) Hoffman and Mrs. Maurice (Anna Lou) Ohrel; a sister, Mrs. Albert E. (Ruth) Humphrey, and a great-grandson, Thurn Hoffman.

Rocky Mountain News, June 11, 1957, p. 18.

CLAUDE K. BOETTCHER

C. K. Boettcher Wills $831,000 To Personal, Charitable Trusts

By ED OSCHMANN

Rocky Mountain News Court Reporter

Claude K. Boettcher gave away $831,000 in personal and charitable bequests and trusts, it was disclosed Thursday when his will was lodged with County Judge David Brofman.

His will was given to the court for safekeeping and not presented for probate. No other papers were filed with his will to indicate the extent of the wealth of the 81-year-old pioneer Coloradan and Denver industrial giant reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in the United States.

The Denver National Bank was named as one of the executors and trustee of his estate.

Bank officials said Wednesday it will be several days before the gross value of his estate can be determined.

Mr. Boettcher's will consisted of 17 pages and was dated June 17, 1948. His father, the late Charles Boettcher, died July 2, 1948, at the age of 96.

Under the terms of Mr. Boettcher's will he gave outright cash bequests of $50,000 each to his son, Charles Boettcher II and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mae B. Boettcher.

Another $50,000 bequest was left James F. Burns Jr. of New York. Mrs. Louise Brown, Mr. Boettcher's personal secretary for many years, was left $25,000 and Miss Louise A. Toogood, secretary-treasurer of the Boettcher Realty Co., was given $15,000.

M. O. Matthews of Ada, Okla., an officer and director of the Ideal Cement Co., was given $10,000.

IDENTICAL AMOUNTS

Similar sums were left Oakley F. Counts of Denver, a vice president of Ideal, and Laurence T. McBride of Denver, a statistician for Mr. Boettcher.

Harry O. Warner, a vice president of Ideal, who died last September, was left $5000 as was Edward D. Nicholson, a retired executive of United Air Lines.

Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal, was given $20,000.

The cancer clinic of St. Luke's Hospital was left $50,000 and $25,000 was left in trust with the Boettcher Foundation with directions that the income of the trust go semiannually to the Rocky Mountain Harvard Club for scholarships at Harvard University.

Henry C. Van Schaack, president of Van Schaack & Co., was left $50,000.

Mr. Boettcher gave the Boettcher Foundation $100,000 and directed that it be a segregated fund to be used by the foundation's board of trustees for the Boettcher School for Crippled Children at 1900 Downing st., "in promoting the educational and physical welfare of the pupils attending the school."

LIMITED SCOPE

He specified that the fund should not be used to construct additional buildings or facilities at the school.

Children's Hospital was given $100,000 with directions under the will that the money is to be added to its endowment funds and not to be used for building purposes.

A sum of $250,000 was given the Boettcher Foundation "for its own use and benefit."

The will directed that half of Mr. Boettcher's interest in the Boettcher & Co. partnership be given to the Denver National Bank as trustee under an agreement dated Dec. 29, 1943, and be used for the company's employees' pension fund.

The company employs about 77 persons. The remaining half of his interest in the partnership will go equally to members of the partnership.

He gave his executors $15,000 and directed that in their discretion the money be divided among the employees and servants who were in the employ of Mr. Boettcher and his wife at the time of his death.

EXECUTORS APPOINTED

He named as his executors his wife, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, his son, the bank, Van Schaack and Dobbins.

His will directed that one-half of the remainder of his estate be given in trust to the bank, Van Schaack and Dobbins and that the income of the trust be given to his wife.

Upon her death, under terms of his will, the trust will go to the Boettcher Foundation.

Of the remaining half of his estate Mr. Boettcher directed that twelve twentieths be placed in trust with the two men and the bank for the benefit of his son and upon his death that it go to the foundation.

Seven twentieths, he directed, be placed in trust for the benefit of a granddaughter, Mrs. LeRoy (Claudia) Hoffman, and upon her death the income go to her children. Should she die without leaving children the trust would go to the foundation.

The remaining twentieth is to be placed in trust for another granddaughter, Mrs. Maurice (Anna Lou) Ohrel under similar conditions as the trust created for Mrs. Hoffman.

Mr. Boettcher explained in his will the reason he did not leave Mrs. Ohrel as much as Mrs. Hoffman was that she has been amply provided for by "certain trust funds heretofore set up for her benefit."

His will directed that during the period of administration of his estate on the first day of every month his trustees and executor are to pay his wife $5000 and $2500 to his son.

Rocky Mountain News, June 14, 1957, p. 5

MRS. EDNA CASE BOETTCHER
Stroke Fatal to Mrs. Claude Boettcher

Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, a Denver social leader for nearly 40 years and widow of Claude K. Boettcher, died unexpectedly at her home, Monday night after suffering a stroke.

Associates said the internationally known socialite and civic leader had been in ill health since a fall several weeks ago in the Brown Palace Hotel. She had remained in the Boettcher mansion at 400 E. 8th Ave. since that time.

Mrs. Boettcher had lived alone there since the death of her husband June 9, 1957. Until illness forced a curtailment in Boettcher's activities several years before his death, the two were leaders of society in Denver and in Palm Beach, Fla.

Boettcher, who controlled a vast financial, industrial and philanthropic empire until his death was the son of Charles Boettcher, who came to Colorado as a German immigrant to found the giant family enterprises.

1ST HUSBAND DIES

Mrs. Boettcher was born in Pittsburg, Pa., the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Austin G. Case. She was married Oct. 20, 1903, to Gilbert McElveen. He died March 8, 1907.

Mrs. Boettcher was married to Claude K. Boettcher Jan. 10, 1920, a year after the divorce of Boettcher and his first wife, De Allan McMurtie.

In Denver, Mrs. Boettcher was most active in work for the Children's Hospital and the Boettcher School for Handicapped Children.

The latter institution was built by the Boettchers specifically for the needs of crippled and otherwise handicapped children. It is administered by the Denver Public Schools.

Along with the Boettcher mansion on E. 8th Ave., the Boettchers owned Southwood, a five-acre estate at Palm Beach where they entertained world figures.

The estate was bought by the couple in 1940. It was sold last April at a reported $300,000.

Mrs. Boettcher is survived by a sister, Mrs. Virginia C. Schaefer of Denver.

Private services for Mrs. Boettcher will be at 11 a. m. Wednesday at the Boettcher residence. Cremation will follow and the remains will be interred in the Boettcher area of the Fairmount Mausoleum.

Associates asked that in lieu of flowers contributions be made to the Children's Hospital Fund.

Denver Post, October 7, 1958, p. 1

MRS. EDNA CASE BOETTCHER
Mrs. Claude Boettcher Dies Unexpectedly

Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, widow of the late Colorado industrial and financial giant, Claude K. Boettcher, died unexpectedly Monday night after suffering a stroke.

Death came to Mrs. Boettcher in the same palatial mansion at 400 E. Eighth ave., where her husband died June 9, 1957, a day before his 82d birthday.

Active for many years in various civic, charitable and social enterprises, Mrs. Boettcher had remained comparatively inactive since illness incapacitated her late husband several years ago.

In June 1934, she was presented to King George and Queen Mary at the Court of St. James. Seven years later, she and her husband entertained the Duke and Duchess of Windsor at the Boettcher's Florida estate.

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., she came to Denver with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Austin G. Case. A captivating beauty, she became Mr. Boettcher's wife in ceremonies here in 1920.

During the succeeding years, she was at her husband's side as he ruled a financial empire which embraced sugar beets, cement, livestock, utilities, steel, real estate, retail drygoods, theaters and transports.

The Boettchers' civic and charitable interests, most embraced in the famed Boettcher Foundation, included Children's Hospital, Boettcher School, Denver Museum of Natural History and the Community Chest.

Mrs. Boettcher was a member of the Episcopal Church, the Denver Club, Denver Country Club and Cherry Hills Country Club.

She had lived alone in the huge, showplace mansion since her husband's death.

Surviving is her sister, Mrs. Virginia Schaefer of Denver.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Olinger Mortuary.

Rocky Mountain News, October 7, 1958, p. 5

MRS. EDNA CASE BOETTCHER
Mrs. Boettcher's Will Leaves $1 Million for Sister

Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, Denver social leader who died Monday, left a $1 million trust fund for the benefit of her sister, Mrs. Joe Schaefer of 765 Pennsylvania St.

This was revealed Friday as Mrs. Boettcher's will was lodged in the County Court of Judge David Brofman.

A petition to probate the will is not expected to be filed before next week. Usually a preliminary estimate of the value of an estate is listed in the probate petition.

Officers of The Denver National Bank, which is handling Mrs. Boettcher's estate, told The Denver Post Friday that the estate will be "considerably in excess of $1 million."

Claude K. Boettcher, pioneer industrial and financial leader who died June 9, 1957, left an estate worth $7,610,385, according to a County Court inventory.

His estate was the sixth largest ever inventoried in the Denver court. His wife was a chief beneficiary.

Bulk of Mrs. Boettcher's estate eventually will go to the Boettcher Foundation, a charitable organization set up by her husband.

The $1 million trust fund was set up for Mrs. Schaefer's benefit during her lifetime with payments to her "at least quarterly," according to the will. On her death the sum goes to the Boettcher Foundation.

Mrs. Boettcher also gave her sister an outright bequest of $50,000. A similar sum was given to her stepson, Charles Boettcher.

Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal Cement Co. and long-time associate of Claude Boettcher, was given $25,000. Children's Hospital Assn. was given $50,000.

Appointed executors of the estate were Dobbins; Henry C. Van Schaack, Denver real estate executive; and the Denver National Bank.

Denver Post, October 10, 1958, p. 16

MRS. EDNA CASE BOETTCHER

Boettcher Jewels to Intimates

The large jewelry collection of Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher was distributed for the most part among members of her family and friends, her will disclosed Friday in Denver County Court.

JEWELRY PICTURED

Attached to 10-page will were 15 photographs of jewelry which were keyed in with the bequests listed in the will to facilitate distribution and avoid mistakes.

Officials of the Denver National Bank, co-executor of Mrs. Boettcher's multi-million-dollar estate, said no estimate of the value of the jewelry collection could be made before a thorough inventory is made. The jewelry has been placed in a bank vault.

Among recipients of jewelry gifts named in the will were:

Mrs. Mae M. Boettcher, daughter of her stepson, Charles Boettcher II--a diamond chain necklace with three diamond clips.

Claudia Boettcher, daughter of Charles--several items plus a pair of bronze horses "now in my home at 400 E. 8th Ave."

Mrs. Clara M. Van Schaack, long-time friend--ruby and diamond clips, earrings and ring.

Mrs. Louise C. Brown, long-time secretary and friend of the family--diamond clip pin in the form of three feathers.

Mrs. Virginia C. Schaefer, sister of Mrs. Boettcher, was given several items of jewelry plus all of Mrs. Boettcher's clothing.

Mrs. Boettcher directed that after all the specific gifts are removed, the remaining jewelry be sold by the executors of the estate and the proceeds given to Children's Hospital Assn.

She gave her stepson a carved green jewel jade boat with glass case and a large crystal ball "having diameter of about eight inches, mounted on a silver stand."

$15,000 TO SERVANTS

A sum of $15,000 was set aside for division among "those employes and servants as may be in my employment at the time of death."

Mrs. Jane Bubb of 1937 E. Alameda Ave. was left $5,000.

The residuary estate--after all cash and other gifts are deducted--was given to the Boettcher Foundation.

Mrs. Boettcher expressed a wish in her will that none of her stock in nine corporations her husband helped promote would be disposed of by her executors during the term of a $1 million trust set up for her sister.

The companies were listed as: American Crystal Sugar Co., Boettcher Corp., Boettcher Realty Co., Cement Investors, Inc., The Denver National Bank, General Securities Co., Ideal Cement Co., Ideal Corp., and Potash Company of America.

Specific cash gifts provided in the will included:

Mrs. Schaefer and Charles Boettcher, $50,000 each; Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal Cement Co., and Boettcher Foundation, $25,000 each; Children's Hospital Assn., $50,000; Mrs. Louise Brown, $10,000.

The will was signed by Mrs. Boettcher on July 26, 1957, and was lodged with County Judge David Brofman by B. A. Smead Jr., trust officer of the Denver National Bank.

Denver Post, October 10, 1958, p. 16

MRS. EDNA CASE BOETTCHER

Edna Case Boettcher Leaves Estate of More Than $1 Million

The famed Boettcher mansion at 400 E. Eighth ave. will be turned over to the Boettcher Foundation.

The will made by Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, Denver social leader, makes no specific mention of the 27-room house, valued at more than $150,000.

It directs simply that "any property of mine not mentioned here be turned over to the Boettcher Foundation." Included is the 50-year-old mansion.

Stephen Hart, Mrs. Boettcher's lawyer, said the fate of the house with its 14 bedrooms and nine bathrooms is undecided.

It could conceivably be sold and the money used for charity, he said.

Another possibility is that it be turned into a museum, honoring Mrs. Boettcher's husband, Claude K. Boettcher, Colorado industrial leader.

Officers of the Denver National Bank, handling Mrs. Boettcher's will said Friday her estate will be more than $1 million.

Mrs. Boettcher's sister, Mrs. Joe Schaefer at 765 Pennsylvania st., was given a $1 million trust fund under the terms of the 10-page will, filed in Denver County Court.

Mrs. Schaefer also receives a bequest of $50,000. Another $50,000 was given to Mrs. Boettcher's stepson, Charles Boettcher II.

A third $50,000 was willed to Children's Hospital Assn. Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal Cement Co. and friend of Mrs. Boettcher's late husband, receives $25,000.

Inheriting Mrs. Boettcher's extensive jewelry collection, are:

Mrs. Mae M. Boettcher, wife of Charles Boettcher II, who receives a diamond necklace and three diamond clips.

Mrs. Clara M. Van Schaack, Mrs. Boettcher's close friend, given some ruby and diamond clips and matching earrings and ring.

Mrs. Schaefer, given an emerald-cut, 35-carat diamond ring, valued at $50,000, and several other pieces of jewelry.

Mrs. Louise C. Brown, secretary to Mrs. Boettcher's husband, who receives a diamond pin.

Mrs. Boettcher willed her stepson a carved green jade boat and a large crystal ball, mounted on a silver stand.

To Charles Boettcher II's daughter, Claudia, she left a pair of bronze horses in the Boettcher mansion.

A total of $15,000 was set aside to be divided among Mrs. Boettcher's employees. The rest of the estate goes to the Boettcher Foundation.

Named as executors of the estate are Chris Dobbins, Henry C. Van Schaack, Denver real estate magnate, and the Denver National Bank.

Rocky Mountain News, October 11, 1958, p. 15

MRS. EDNA CASE BOETTCHER

Boettcher Will Filed For Probate

The will of Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher was presented for probate Tuesday to County Judge David Brofman.

Value of her estate was listed in the probate petition as "more than $1 million."

Mrs. Boettcher, Denver social leader and widow of Claude K. Boettcher, pioneer industrialist, died Oct. 6.

A $1 million trust fund was set up for her sister, Mrs. Virginia C. Schaefer, 765 Pennsylvania St., and the bulk of the remainder of the estate was given to the Boettcher Foundation.

Presenting the will for probate was attorney Stephen Hart on behalf of the three executors--Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal Cement Co.; Henry C. Van Schaack, real estate executive; and the Denver National Bank.

A total of 26 beneficiaries were listed on the probate petition. Sixteen were employes of Mrs. Boettcher and will divide a $15,000 gift.

Recipients of cash gifts were:

Mrs. Schaefer and Charles Boettcher II, Mrs. Boettcher's stepson, $50,000 each; Mrs. Louise C. Brown, family secretary, $10,000; Dobbins, $25,000; Mrs. Jane Bubb, a friend, $5,000; Children's Hospital Assn., $50,000, and Boettcher Foundation, $25,000.

Denver Post, October 14, 1958, p. 2

MRS. EDNA CASE BOETTCHER

Mrs. Boettcher's Estate $4 Million

Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, widow of the Colorado financial leader, left an estate valued at almost $3.5 million an incomplete inventory filed in Denver County Court showed Monday.

Huerfano County Judge Joseph Barron, sitting for Denver County Judge David Brofman, admitted the will to probate Monday.

Signing $4 million bonds to act as executors were Cris Dobbins, president of Ideal Cement Co; Henry V. Van Schaack, Denver real estate executive; and Burton A. Smead Jr., trust officer for the Denver National Bank.

Smead said the inventory, when complete, will run "almost certainly in excess of $4 million."

Yet to be valued are the Boettcher mansion at 400 E. Eighth ave. with its furnishings and art objects and Mrs. Boettcher's large jewelry collection.

Claude K. Boettcher, Mrs. Boettcher's husband who died June 9, 1957, left an estate worth $7,610,385, according to a County Court inventory.

His wife was a chief beneficiary. She died Oct. 6.

The bulk of Mrs. Boettcher's estate, according to the inventory consists of $2,403,019 in corporate stocks.

Mrs. Boettcher left $383,775 in cash and bank accounts; $632,580 in bonds, and $6946 in notes.

Her personal property is valued at "at least" $20,996.

Listed under personal property are $3391 worth of clothes, and furs valued at $7105. Also listed is the 9-passenger family Cadillac sedan, valued at $6400.

Under corporate stocks are listed: Allied Chemical Corp., $23,210; American Crystal Sugar Co., $88,200 (preferred); American Crystal Co. (common) $155,225; Boettcher Corp., $138,334;

Boettcher Realty Co., (preferred) $31,110; Boettcher Realty Co., (common) $37,239; Cement Investors, Inc. (preferred) $214,368; Cement Investors Inc. (common) $105,271; Denver National Bank, $18,980;

First National Bank of Denver, $179,400; General Securities Co. (preferred) $24,454; General Securities Co., (common), $83,937; Great Western Sugar Co., $5887; Ideal Corp., $369,005; Kennecott Copper Corp., $5062; Potash Co. of America, $857,181;

Public Service Co. of New Mexico, $11,550; Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Inc., $29,375; Sinclair Oil Corp., $14,595; Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, $708; Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, $9700.

Under terms of the will the bulk of Mrs. Boettcher's estate goes to the Boettcher Foundation.

Rocky Mountain News, November 18, 1958, p. 58

MRS. FANNIE AUGUSTA BOETTCHER

Story of Fannie Boettcher is Epic of Old and New West Spectacular Career Carved by Brains and Financial Genius

By ROBERT STEINBRUNER

Denver Post Staff Writer

Charles Boettcher, 95, awed the public for two generations, first as a merchant baron and second by transfiguring Colorado's agriculture with a new sugar economy and Colorado's construction with a new cement industry.

His empires rose dramatically during the turbulent days of the early west. His spectacular accumulation of wealth came through mercantile trading, ranching, meat packing, real estate and finance, sugar and cement.

The passing years gradually dimmed his public prominence but brightened the distinction of his son, Claude, who took finance as his own special province.

All the while that "Boettcher" has been a name synonymous with great wealth and power, there was another family member who shunned the limelight, Fannie Augusta Boettcher, wife of Charles Boettcher, preferred to be backstage while the audiences watched her husband and son.

Caring nothing for social prominence and even less for any sort of personal acclaim, she was content to mind her own affairs and to travel. She scorned publicity--the same DENVER POST card files which show hundreds of entries for her husband and offspring bear not a single entry under her own name.

Her lifetime is not too far from the century mark, yet it needed the single event of a benefaction to the Kent School for Girls for the fact to become known that Fannie Boettcher is a spectacular figure in her own right.

Why "spectacular"? Several reasons may be mentioned here.

The first is a salient fact from the standpoint of individual character. It is an integrity, a straight-forwardness of will, an uncompromising persistence where principle is involved. It is a steadfastness to her personal code of honesty and morality that is a rarity in a century marked by dishonesty and lack of morals.

Her fearlessness in following her principles, and in addition her physical courage, are shown in an incident that happened last summer. The outer gate of her home at 1201 Grant street had accidentally been left unlocked, and a shabbily dressed itinerant made his way unsteadily to the front door.

The 93-year-old woman answered his ring at the door. Sniffing at the odor of alcohol that reached her, Mrs. Boettcher's hatred of excessive use of intoxicating liquor rose, and she summarily ordered the man off her porch.

His departure was slow and reluctant, so she stepped out on the porch where he could easily have reached her, seized the knocker of a Chinese brass gong and began a tattoo on the gong which hangs nearby.

"The last I saw of him he was running as fast as he could go," she said with the sense of humor that frequently appears.

BUILDS OWN FORTUNE

From a worldly viewpoint, another "spectacular" characteristic is the development, during the last quarter century of her life, of a latent financial genius of her own which compares with that of her husband and son.

Unsuspected during her earlier years, this native shrewdness with money has enabled her since 1920 to build her own fortune unaided from less than one-half million dollars to nearly 4 million dollars.

When Mrs. Boettcher legally separated from her husband in 1920 and was given a portion of a trust for separate maintenance, she naturally turned to the local basic industries Boettcher had founded. The personal matters which sundered the couple were not enough to sway her opinion of his business acumen. This firm and repeated crediting of her husband with a business skill that had few equals in the west is another demonstration of her devotion to principle.

Sugar stock was her first purchase in 1920, followed by more intensive investments in cement stock, others as well as that of the Ideal Cement company. There have been other types of investment, but these two dominate her holdings.

HAS LITTLE ASSISTANCE

She has looked after her interests with very little outside assistance, and still does. Most business is now transacted in her home, however, where she lives alone except for servants. Her mental vigor is unimpaired by her age, and her physical health is amazingly good.

The third fact of primary importance is related to the other two. That is, she has been devoted to Colorado and the mountain states, to the practical exclusion of all other places, except for the enjoyment of casual travel.

This devotion has led her to invest in the industries she knows--cement and sugar--which are the industries supporting so large a segment of the mountain population. It furthermore has a prominent place in the benefactions she bestows.

As quietly as she has lived, she has given to causes she considers worthy, for it can now be told that the gift of Ideal Cement company stock worth more than $55,000 to the Kent school is simply the most recent in a series.

The causes must meet rigid standards. They must be close at hand so they can be observed; there must be deserving need, and management of the receiving agency must be efficient. The Community Chest, to which she formerly gave generously, is now eliminated from her charity because the multiplicity of agencies makes it impossible to observe use of the money.

The Denver Red Cross and Children's hospital each have received blocks of stock in the cement company, since the value would be applied to Colorado and principally Denver beneficiaries.

Until she started giving the cement stock away about two years ago, Mrs. Boettcher was the largest single shareholder in the company, without her husband's knowledge of the fact.

Earlier, her benefactions were even more direct. Before World war II, the Denver Orphan's home was her pet interest. She learned the children were not getting enough fresh vegetables, and forthwith made a regular habit of buying fruits and vegetables in the country and herself unloading her crammed automobile at the back door of the institution.

Then she heard the children were very fond of maple syrup, and got little of it. Gallons upon gallons of syrup were delivered to the orphanage. Drinking fountains for the playyard were bought as soon as that lack became apparent, and she furnished the top floor of the home so as to make new arrivals more comfortable.

Other gifts are known to have been made to various charities, but she won't tell of them.

Denver Post, November 23, 1947, p. 6

MRS. FANNIE AUGUSTA BOETTCHER

Pioneer Won't Stay Idle
Story of Mrs. Boettcher
By ROBERT STEINBRUNER
Denver Post Staff Writer

A little old lady recently rode in her automobile from sugar factory to cement plant to sugar factory on the central Colorado plains, and then to another cement-making mill south of Denver.

She looked at big piles of sugar beets being processed, examined conditions of plant facilities, talked with superintendents, at Fort Lupton, Boettcher and Fort Collins. A couple of days later she was seeing the multi-million-dollar modernization of the cement installation in Portland, Colo.

SINCERE IN TRYING TO HELP

Mrs. Fannie Boettcher was, in her words, "looking after things." She has very substantial investments in these enterprises, her son, Claude, "has so many other things that take his time," and she wasn't going to let the matter of being 93 years old deter from her purpose.

This inspection of physical properties illustrates several characteristics of one of the most remarkable and least known people in Colorado.

Mrs. Boettcher's strength of mind, to advance on such a technical chore at her age, is apparent. Her maternal concern is not so obvious but is equally prominent, for she made her trip in a sincere belief she would be helping Claude with one of his many responsibilities. Mother and son are close to each other, in a family sense as well as a business sense.

The physical strength is itself a tribute to Colorado's health-giving climate. Mrs. Boettcher is certainly one of the longest-lived health seekers who ever came to the state.

It was in 1873 that a girl named Fannie Cowan came to the small sprawl of adobe and log buildings that was Fort Collins. An ailment she believes was malaria but then was called "ague" had induced her to travel to Fort Collins via the new Union Pacific railroad in advance of her parents.

The parents, John and Elizabeth Cowan, were transplanted Ohioans who were dissatisfied with the secessionist area around Lancaster, Mo., where their daughter was born. They intended to migrate to Colorado, but instead stopped in Kansas and never reached Colorado.

PROPOSALS OF MARRIAGE

Fannie, however, had a great-uncle, Andrew Cowan, to look after her in the frontier community, and remained even after her parents decided not to come. Among the proposals of marriage the eligible young woman received was one from Charles Boettcher, an enterprising immigrant boy from Germany who owned hardware and furniture stores in Fort Collins, Evans and Greeley.

The two were married in 1874--seventh-three years ago. In the fall of that year they moved to Boulder to set up a store. Their son, Claude, was born there in 1875.

The Leadville silver boom and its opportunities for a man of economic vision like Boettcher drew them to that city in 1879, and held them there eleven years. Bonanza ore bodies discovered on Fryer hill started a rush in 1878 which paled the gold rush that had hit the gulch earlier. Although Boettcher helped to stake some mining ventures--one water-filled mine, the Robert E. Lee, is still owned by the family--his foremost interest was in supplying needs of the mines and the people.

MANY ENTERPRISES LISTED

Mining machinery, tools and household equipment were among the enterprises, along with real estate, construction, mining and ranching.

The boom was not to die off until silver was demonetized in 1893, but Charles Boettcher's investments in Denver real estate and finance were beginning to overshadow the Leadville activities long before that year.

In 1888, in fact, construction of the present three-story mansion at 1201 Grant street was begun, and the family moved into it in 1890. Meat packing and founding of the regional cement and sugar beet industries followed.

Denver Post, November 24, 1947, p. 6

MRS. FANNIE AUGUSTA BOETTCHER
The Boettcher Story -- Travel Ranked High in Quiet Life
By ROBERT STEINBRUNER
Denver Post Staff Writer

Thirty years of travel across both oceans fill the memory of 93-year-old Mrs. Fannie A. Boettcher and crowd her big red brick house at 1201 Grant street with mementoes of distant places and times long past.

Other women enjoying her position have spent their energies and money in making displays--high and fancy living, giving and attending social functions, wearing expensive attire and jewelry.

Not so the wife of Charles Boettcher, pioneer merchant prince with the Midas touch. Mrs. Boettcher always has lived simply and has been hostess at very few large parties.

Her abstinence from exhibitions of the very rich plus her nature to prefer to be in the background plus her travel proclivities account for the almost total lack of knowledge that Denver has about one of its most unusual--and wealthiest--citizens.

One trip, to Europe with her husband in 1900, was of far-reaching importance to the entire Rocky Mountain Empire. Their daughter, Ruth, who was born in the Boettcher's "new" house in 1890 and who is now Mrs. A. E. Humphreys of Denver, accompanied them. Their son, Claude, was a benedict, just getting interested in the bond business, and stayed in the United States.

The European sugar beet industry had interested Charles Boettcher during a previous visit in 1885; on this trip, even while they examined places in Germany he knew in his early youth, he carefully studied the industry.

The result was that when the family started home, Boettcher shipped beet processing machinery and seed ahead of them. He was convinced the many days of sunshine and the rich soil of Colorado were "natural" for development of the sugar industry. Upon his arrival, he immediately started the Great Western Sugar company. The late Chester S. Morey, mercantile merchant, joined him soon after the venture started.

The first sugar beet factory in the west (others were already being tried in Michigan) was constructed at Grand Junction, Colo. It failed, because, as Mrs. Boettcher relates, "The cowboys wouldn't grow sugar beets." The factory was moved to Longmont. The industry was a quick success in that farming area, and additional plants soon sprang up in other cities.

All this construction impressed him with the fact that German-made cement was being used. Another idea formed--Colorado had the limestone and clays, and an asphalt plant at Portland, Colo., could be bought and converted to cement making.

A second major domestic industry thus was begun. Boettcher's partner in this case was the late Whitney Newton, pioneer lumberman. Newton was the father of the late James Quigg Newton, bond broker partner of Claude Boettcher, and was the grandfather of Denver's present mayor.

Mrs. Boettcher was in Yokohama in 1902 when that port was opened to foreign commerce, she was in London in 1911 when George V was crowned king, and was in Hamburg when the fires of World war I broke into flame in 1914.

All her half-dozen or more peregrinations were made "in style," although not lavishly. Able to afford all conveniences and comforts, on latter trips at least she always was attended by servants traveling with her, and there were such things as a private railroad car for transportation throughout India.

Denver Post, November 25, 1947, p. 5

MRS. FANNIE AUGUSTA BOETTCHER

Boettcher Widow Dies In Hospital

Mrs. Fannie Augusta Boettcher, 98, widow of late industrial king Charles Boettcher, died Sunday at General Rose Memorial hospital.

She had been living at the hospital for over a year, moving there from her mansion at 1201 Grant street.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Survivors include her son, Claude K. Boettcher, who manages the far-flung family investments and heads the Boettcher foundation, philanthropic organization set up to advance education and science within Colorado; a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Boettcher Humphries of Denver, and a grandson, Charles Boettcher II, also connected with the Boettcher investments and industries.

A native of Missouri, Mrs. Boettcher moved to Fort Collins in 1873, seeking a better climate because of poor health. There she met and married Charles Boettcher, a German immigrant engaged in the hardware business.

They were legally separated in 1920.

Denver Post, November 11, 1952, p. 1

MRS. FANNIE AUGUSTA BOETTCHER

Long, Philanthropic Career Ends With Death of Fannie Boettcher

The death of Fannie Augusta Boettcher Sunday ended a long, spectacular financial and philanthropic career, but one seemingly shrouded in mystery because of her iron determination to remain in the background.

Probably Colorado's wealthiest woman, Mrs. Boettcher was not a mover in Denver's smart society circles. So little was known of her, in fact, that The Denver Post copyrighted a series of stories about her in 1947 because of the difficulty involved in acquiring the information and the exclusiveness of their details.

Her attitude seemed typified by her huge, well-shuttered mansion at 1201 Grant street. The sixty-four-year-old red sandstone building was completely surrounded by high iron fences, and entrance to it was difficult.

The 98-year-old dowager's life paralleled that of her late husband--German immigrant Charles Boettcher, founder of the mighty Boettcher business empire--until their legal separation in 1920. After that she set about building her own private fortune through astute investments in her estranged husband's corporations, a move he never realized until she had acquired controlling interest in many of his ventures.

FORTUNE INCREASES

In 1947, her private fortune was conservatively estimated at $4 million. Twenty-seven years before, when she and Charley Boettcher separated, it had been about $500,000.

Born Fannie Augusta Cowan, daughter of John and Elizabeth Cowan, near Lancaster, Mo., she was taken to Kansas soon after her birth because her parents did not sympathize with secession sentiment in Missouri. Those were times of terrible border warfare before and during the American Civil war.

She moved to Fort Collins in 1873 to live with a great uncle, Andrew Cowan, in hopes of recovering from a bad case of what she later described as "the ague."

There she met young Charles Boettcher, a German immigrant, who even then was well on his way to fortune. He owned furniture and hardware stores in Fort Collins, Evans and Greeley.

They married and moved to Boulder, where they remained several years and where their son, Claude, was born. But in 1879 they began an eleven-year residence in Leadville during that once great city's biggest silver bonanza.

Boettcher invested lightly in mining ventures, but plunged heavily in what proved more worthwhile--mining machinery, tools, household goods and merchandise of every kind.

In 1890 they moved to the new Grant street mansion and took an extended European trip. The trip was profitable--Charley Boettcher, seeing German enterprise in sugar beets and cement, brought the ideas home with him.

The result was the Ideal Cement company at Portland, Colo., one of the family's biggest holdings, and the Great Western Sugar company, which created a revolution in western agriculture by introducing the sugar beet. Sugar beets are now the main crop in whole sections of the west.

Fannie Boettcher was the mother of two children--Claude, who succeeded his father as head of the Boettcher empire, and Ruth, who became Mrs. A. E. Humphries of Denver. She was the grandmother of Charles Boettcher II, now a power in family holdings and in 1933 the victim of a sensational kidnaping case.

Mrs. Boettcher traveled throughout the world. During her trips she acquired an extensive collection of native handiwork, which was displayed in the Grant street mansion.

GIFTS TO CHARITIES

Her seclusion from the press was so complete that The Denver Post's extensive clipping files contained nothing about her until 1947, when at 93 she began to give away large sums of money to charities she considered worthy.

Included were some $100,000 to the Kent school for girls for a new plant in Cherry Hills, and $128,000 in Ideal Cement securities to Children's hospital, to become a part of the institution's permanent endowment.

But though Mrs. Boettcher shunned the limelight, she was not inactive. She often took an energetic part in the direction of her investments, and by chauffeur-driven limousine it was not uncommon for her to personally inspect factory sites. As late as 1947 she was still active in this pursuit.

Not of large stature, she was reputed to be fearless. Once, when over 90, she was said to have routed a drunk who somehow had gotten into the Grant street mansion grounds. She got rid of him by the simple expedient of banging a large Chinese gong in his face. The drunk, who could probably have broken the aged woman over his knee, departed in peace--and in a hurry.

Denver Post, November 11, 1952, p. 17

MRS. FANNIE AUGUSTA BOETTCHER
Private Funeral Rites Set for Mrs. Boettcher

Private funeral services are being arranged for Mrs. Fannie Augusta Boettcher, 98, widow of the late Charles Boettcher, who died Sunday night at General Rose Memorial Hospital.

Spending much of her later years in seclusion at her home at 1201 Grant st., Mrs. Boettcher was counted one of Colorado's wealthiest women.

Her home, guarded by high fences and gates and where few gained admittance, was said to have contained many invaluable art treasures she had accumulated by extensive travel through the years.

Mrs. Boettcher was separated from her famous husband in 1920.

BORN IN MISSOURI

Mrs. Boettcher was born near Lancaster, Mo., the daughter of John and Elizabeth Cowan. After moving to Kansas with her family while in infancy, she later moved to Fort Collins in 1873 to live with her great-uncle, Andrew Cowan.

There she met Charles Boettcher, who was a German immigrant. Her husband began acquiring his fortune there, spreading his hardware and furniture business to Greeley, Evans and Boulder.

Later the couple moved to Leadville for 11 years, where Mr. Boettcher earned additional wealth in mining machinery, tools and general merchandise.

FORMATION OF BIG FIRMS

On a trip to Germany, Mr. Boettcher learned the sugar beet and cement business and brought new ideas back to Denver. This was the beginning of the Ideal Cement Co. and the Great Western Sugar Co.

Although she was active in her financial interests and in many charities, including the new Kent School for Girls and Children's Hospital, her name was seldom seen in print or heard by the general public.

Survivors are her son, Claude, and a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Boettcher Humphries, and a grandson, Charles Boettcher II.

Rocky Mountain News, November 11, 1952, p. 34

BOETTCHER MANSION

Boettcher Mansion Approved for Steve

The lavish and richly furnished Boettcher mansion, a 27-room showplace of an earlier Colorado era, will become Colorado's official governor's residence April 21.

Gov. McNichols and his family will move into the mansion from their Crestwood home three months later--in July.

Until he occupies the fabulous $500,000 residence at 400 E. Eighth ave., McNichols said Saturday, it will be open to the public under the sponsorship of the Colorado Historical Society.

OKd AFTER YEAR

McNichols' announcement of the state's official acceptance of the 53-year-old home came more than a year after it was first offered as a gift by trustees of the Boettcher Foundation.

After title to the imposing residence is transferred to the state in ceremonies there April 21, the public will have its first opportunity to view at first hand:

- An ornately beautiful crystal chandelier in the mansion's drawing room which once hung in the White House.
- A huge, rare Gobelin tapestry once owned by Russia's ruling family.
- A large antique desk--one of only three like it in the world--which was made for Louis XIV.

Those items are but three of scores of rare furnishings and art objects of museum quality collected around the world by Mr. and Mrs. Claude K. Boettcher before their deaths.

The 14-bedroom home and its rolling, gardened grounds were first offered to Colorado by foundation trustees in March of 1959.

Initial legislative enthusiasm at the tendered gift cooled, though, when a number of lawmakers estimated its maintenance costs would be unusually high.

The governor, too, was at first less than enthusiastic at the prospect of moving his family--which includes five children--into the huge mansion.

For a time it appeared the structure would go the way of nearly every other old, large home of wealthy early Denver families and be destroyed to make way for an apartment or office building.

McNichols, apparently influenced by the mansion's historical worth and long and previously fruitless attempts within the state to obtain a governor's mansion, renewed discussions with foundation officials several months ago.

"I finally decided," the governor said Saturday, "that Colorado deserves to have an official residence as much as other states. We certainly can find no finer than this grand old Denver home."

EXPRESSES PLEASURE

He added the offer was "simply too good an opportunity for the state of Colorado to pass up."

Cris Dobbins, vice chairman of the foundation's board of trustees, expressed pleasure at the governor's decision.

"We feel it is a fitting use for this historic old home that is handsomely located and appointed for use as a permanent governor's residence," Dobbins said.

The mansion was built in 1907 by Walter Cheesman, pioneer Denver railroad man and president of the old Denver Water Co. Both a city park and a dam in Denver's water system are named for Cheesman.

It was bought by Boettcher in 1926 and was his home until his death in 1957. His widow, Mrs. Edna Case Boettcher, lived on in the home until her death the following year.

The large white-columned colonial building has two dining rooms and nine baths.

PANELED LIBRARY

Of its many spacious, high-ceilinged first floor rooms, including a paneled library containing many rare books, the mansion's most striking area is the palatial, all-white Palm Room.

A 60-by-70-foot room separated from the home's formal gardens by a glass wall, the Palm Room has a floor of striking white marble. Its name is derived from a number of palm trees used as decorations in the huge area.

The formal gardens visible from the Palm Room are adorned with fountains and statuary.

Before his death, Claude K. Boettcher had expanded the business activities of his father, Charles Boettcher, into a financial empire embracing cement, sugar beet, steel, real estate and transportation enterprises.

Rocky Mountain News, April 10, 1960, p. 16

GEORGE H. BOLT
Dinner Honors Man in U.S. Job 50 Years

George H. Bolt of 1001 S. Columbine st., who recently completed 50 years of Government service, will be honored at a dinner here Saturday night.

He is still working at the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation after 45 years with the agency.

Not until he reaches the mandatory age of 70 next August, does Bolt want to leave.

"The thing that has made me the happiest," he said, "is being associated with an organization whose prime duty has been bringing good water to the thirsty land, to the building of this Western country."

LONGEST RECORD

A great-grandfather, Bolt has the longest service record of any federal employe in a 5-state Western region, according to the U.S. Civil Service Commission.

The dinner Saturday will commemorate the 80th anniversary of the Civil Service Act.

Sponsoring the banquet at the Cosmopolitan Hotel is the American Federation of Government Employes.

Bolt will receive a meritorious service award conferred by Interior Sec. Stewart L. Udall. It will be presented by Grant Bloodgood, the Reclamation Bureau's retiring chief engineer.

Now a budget analyst with the bureau at Denver Federal Center, Bolt began his career with the agency in 1917 as a junior clerk on the Huntley project in Montana.

His first federal job, starting in 1912 and continuing five years, was in Washington, D.C., with the former Bureau of Pensions, a predecessor of the Veterans Administration.

CHIEF CLERK

With the Reclamation Bureau, Bolt worked as chief clerk on the first reclamation project in Colorado, the Uncompaghe, in Delta, Montrose, and Gunnison Counties.

After serving in the same capacity on the Boulder Dam, Parker Dam, and Salt River projects, he transferred in 1936 to the chief engineer's office in Denver, where he has remained since.

Bolt said he plans to continue at the bureau until Aug. 31, "providing the good Lord is willing and the business holds up, which I feel sure it will."

Bolt and his wife have two daughters, six grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren who are twins.

The two daughters are Mrs. Elizabeth L. Harris, who is a secretary at the U.S. Bureau of Mines at the Federal Center here, and Mrs. May Dore of Gardner, Mont., whose husband works for the National Park Service.

Rocky Mountain News, January 18, 1963, p. 21

REV. DAVID F. BONE
Soldier-Preacher Going to Reunion

When the last few survivors of the confederate armies gather at Trinidad, Colo., Aug. 22 for their forty-ninth annual reunion, one of their number will be a Denver man, the Rev. David F. Bone of 1230 Hudson street.

Bone, who was 96 on Jan. 5 last, will look back to the time when he first joined the confederate army from Missouri as a youth of 18. For four years he tramped with the southern armies, took part in more than a score of battles and once was made a prisoner along with 400 others after the battle of Pleasant Hill.

"I wouldn't miss the reunion for anything," he said Tuesday. "My daughter, here, Mrs. Homer Talbot, will probably drive me down. It's a great thing for Colorado to have the reunion the first time it is held this far west."

GOVERNMENT'S GUEST AT GETTYSBURG

The automobile trip of more than 200 miles holds no fears for the soldier-preacher. Last year he traveled over 10,000 miles.

"I was the guest of the government at the seventh-fifth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg last year," he said. "We had a marvelous time there, and after I came back to Denver I went out to California to visit another daughter, Mrs. W. H. Gabbert.

"Then I attended the conference of Methodist ministers in St. Louis and also visited my other two children and their families. When I finally returned to Denver, I had traveled more than 10,000 miles."

Bone said he had been notified by Maj. E. R. Wiles, who is in charge of the reunion, that the veterans would be housed at Camp Harris in the Trinidad high school and would be fed free of charge in the school cafeteria.

COOL SPOT FOUND SOUTH OF LINE

"They are providing attendants for all those who stay there," he said, "but I suppose I will stay with some of my family at a hotel."

The rules of the confederate veterans' organization require that all reunions be held south of the Mason-Dixon line. So when plans were started for a gathering this year, leaders tried to find some place that would be cool.

They of course thought first of Colorado and discovered that Trinidad lies just south of the line. Also, a confederate veterans' home is maintained there, so decision was made to hold the reunion there during the last two weeks of August when the rest of the south is usually sweltering.

According to record, the stars and bars of the confederacy were flown in Colorado only once before. That was on April 24, 1860, just a few days after the bombardment of Fort Sumpter.

A group of southern sympathizers raised the confederate flag over the store operated by Wallingford & Murphy near Sixteenth and Larimer streets. After a near riot, one man in the crowd climbed to the top of the store and ripped the flag down. He was not molested and the crowd dispersed.

Unsuccessful attempts were made later to swing the territory to the southern side, and a number of volunteer bands were organized which joined the confederate armies.

Denver Post, August 15, 1939

Also see Rocky Mountain News, May 30, 1938, p. 5, for a picture of Rev. Mr. Bone at 95.

FREDERICK GILLMER BONFILS

Was Bonfils Descendant of Napoleon? Romantic Mystery Never Completely Cleared Up

By MILLARD F. EVERETT

"Strange as that may seem, the story of the romance brilliantly treading the ancestral background of Frederick Gilmer Bonfils, himself one of the most romantic of Western figures, has never been told. And because only the barest allusions have been made in print to his family, the question is still being asked: Did the blood of Napoleon Bonaparte course through Bonfils' veins? I have been asked that many times by Register readers since the beginning of this series," said Joseph Emerson Smith, "and I promised them the facts, all of them, just as Bonfils laid them before me for the 'obituary' the Associated Press had ordered and that I was preparing just before his death. Such an obituary is compiled while the famous personage is living, printed, and sent to member papers by the association for use when the 'flash' comes announcing demise." Mr. Smith continued:

Bonfils' grandfather, Francois, bore the name that in English means "good son," but that was assumed for reasons which had their origin in Rome. He was born in 1795 at Napoleon's birthplace, Ajaccio, Corsica, and was baptized in the Cathedral at Palermo. His godfather was a Colonel Casabianca, a cousin of Louis de Casabianca, descended from a noble Corsican family and the heroic commander of the French ship Orient in the battle of the Nile. Casabianca, badly wounded, fought the burning ship to the end. His ten-year-old son, Giacomo Jocante, who refused to leave the vessel and died in the endeavor to save his father, is the hero of Mrs. Hemans' ballad with its famous lines,

"The boy stood on the burning deck
From which all save he had fled."

Francois was graduated at the University of Pisa, where Carlo Buonaparte--as he spelled his name and as did Napoleon in his early years--father of the Emperor of France, took his degree in law. Scarcely had Francois received his diploma than he was summoned to France where Napoleon had returned from Elba to regain his throne. The lad joined his father, a colonel of a reorganized regiment, and became regimental adjutant.

After the fatal June 18, 1815, when the defeat at Waterloo crushed Napoleon's ambitions, father and son made their way to Paris. Closely related by blood to Bonaparte, they were sought but remained safely hidden in an old house in the ancient part of the city while Napoleon, realizing that escape was impossible, was preparing to surrender to the British. Once a squad of Allied soldiers searched the house while father and son climbed up the huge chimney to where a narrow recess, formed by a shelf cunningly built outward from the wall, concealed them. The soldiers looked up the chimney but saw only the blue sky at the top, the bulge in the wall being so gradual it was not distinguishable from below.

Disguised, they made their escape from Paris at night and headed for Rome. In the south of France, when danger threatened at an inn where they had taken lodging, they became separated. Francois reached Rome after a series of unavoidable delays to find that his father had gone to Constantinople to take service under the Sultan, and where afterwards he was slain. Francois took passage with the intention of joining his father but the ship was captured by Barbary pirates and for three years he was held captive. With other slaves he was put to work building the sea wall at Tunis.

Escaping, he made his way to Rome, where Napoleon's mother and other members of the family were residing. The mother, who was Letizia Ramolino, of a well-connected Corsican family when in 1764 she married Carlo Buonaparte, shared her son's exile at Elba. After his downfall at Waterloo she took up her residence at Rome, where Pope Pius VII gave her his protection and extended an unfailing consideration. With her were her son, Lucian, and her daughter, the gay and beautiful Marie Pauline, Duchess of Guastalla, whose charm Canova sculptured into marble in her statue as Venus reclining on a couch. Marie had accompanied her mother to Elba and had sought to share her brother's imprisonment at St. Helena.

Now she took young Francois under her care. He was received by His Holiness, Pope Pius, who evidenced interest in his adventures. At one of the levees he met Captain Benjamin Crowninshield from Salem, Mass., owner of the large yacht, Cleopatra, and one of the merchant princes of the then infant United States. The supposition in Salem was that Crowninshield was interested in effecting Napoleon's escape. Joseph Bonaparte had come to America, settled in Bordenton, N. J., and was known to be promoting plans for the rescue of his brother from St. Helena.

However that may be, Crowninshield sailed for Europe, went to Elba, met friends of Napoleon, and then proceeded to Rome, where he procured introductions to Napoleon's mother and sister. That they regarded him as more than an acquaintance is shown by the gifts, a jeweled snuff box with the portrait of the Emperor on the cover, an article he had used frequently; a lock of his hair, and a pair of his cavalry boots, among other keepsakes.

ACCEPTS INVITATION TO U. S.

Marie asked Crowninshield to take Francois to the United States. Grief for his father was pressing heavily on the young man, and, while they conversed at the levee, he impulsively accepted the American's invitation. Through a secretary at the Vatican, a passport was made out for "Salvatore Buonfiglio," the English of which is "good son." With this he hastened to Civita Vecchia, the port of Rome.

The morning broke dismally. A gray sky threatened rain. In the wind-stirred harbor the Cleopatra, snowy white, rode restlessly. A sudden resolve not to venture into a strange and, if reports were true, barbaric country, made him turn to Crowninshield as they stood on the breakwater, and say, "I am sorry, and you have been very kind, but I cannot go."

"A gentleman's promise is a promise," quietly remarked the American.

The postilion mounted the box of the coach, the driver cracked his whip over the four waiting horses, and a Vatican attaché who had accompanied the lad waved his hand in farewell. The youth who thereafter was to bear the name on his passport, Buonfiglio, smiled and shrugged his shoulder. His luggage was lowered by the Yankee sailors to the rowboat.

Two French officers boarded the Cleopatra. Two French vessels were berthed beside her and, when anchor was weighed, followed. The course was toward Corsica, and the Cleopatra soon dropped astern the two French ships. Crowninshield was to sail to Corsica to pick up adherents to Napoleon's cause and then to St. Helena to attempt rescue of the illustrious prisoner, but something went wrong. The two officers spoke to no one, ate at the table with Crowninshield, and kept to themselves. Francois saw three other Frenchmen on the Cleopatra. All were dropped at Gibraltar.

MARRIED ALDEN DESCENDANT

Francois was landed at Salem. He acquired fluent English. He met blue eyed, golden haired, dainty Lucinda Alden from Duxbury, Massachusetts, a descendant of John Alden and Priscilla, the winsome Puritan maid figuring so delightfully in Longfellow's poem, and married Lucinda. Crowninshield had told friends in confidence that Francois was said to be Napoleon's adopted son and the young foreigner with the dark and melancholy comeliness and courtly manner attracted much attention in Salem. Crowninshield wrote a book in which he told of the voyage, died suddenly, and the Cleopatra, hailed as the most beautiful of all yachts ever to be built up to that time, went around the Horn to become the property of the King of Hawaii.

A few months in St. Louis, and Francois moved to Lexington, Ky., where, until his death in 1849, he taught in the old Transylvania university. His children asked him many times to tell them about himself, who their ancestors were and their real name. He put them off, as was the wont of this man of mystery, saying that at his death they would find the family history written in detail. When he died, they searched the house minutely, even removing the bricks from the fireplace, but found nothing.

Was the mother of Francois a Ramolino? The children often asked this question, as the only daughter of the union of Francois and Lucinda was christened Cornelia Ramolino, and Ramolino was the name of Napoleon's mother. Indeed, all the children bore names connected with the Bonaparte family. In addition to Eugene Napoleon, there were Richard De Qua Sola and Francois Sauveur.

Lucinda, following her husband's death, went back to Massachusetts. Not for her the wilderness! Eugene Napoleon was graduated from Transylvania in 1849 and turned his eager face toward the Rocky mountains. The cholera halted him. Upon his recovery he journeyed to Missouri and lived with Francois Sauveur Bonfils, now a physician, who had purchased the old Chouteau place in St. Louis country, now known at Bonfils station. There had been but two transfers of this property, first from France to the famous merchant of St. Louis, then to Francois. Frederick G., son of Eugene Napoleon Bonfils, succeeded to the ownership.

Eugene Napoleon went to Troy, Mo., where he met and married in Pike county, Henrietta B. Lewis, who came from Charlottesville, Va. She was a second cousin of Captain Meriwether Lewis, private secretary of President Thomas Jefferson, who, with Captain William Clark, both officers of the United States army, commanded the exploring expedition from 1804 to 1806 to the sources of the Missouri river and thence across the Rocky mountains and down the Columbia river to the Pacific ocean.

Henrietta Lewis was also a cousin of Colonel Fielding Lewis, who married Betty, the only sister of George Washington, whose grave, after a long search, was found but ten years ago in the Lewis burial ground in Charlottesville. Thomas Jefferson said, "The Meriwether family is a very excellent family; the Lewis family is a very distinguished family."

Frederick Gilmer Bonfils was born of this marriage Dec. 31, 1860, at Troy. The middle name came from a relative, an uncle having married a Gilmer of the same family as that of Governor Gilmer of North Carolina.

Still restless, still seeking something he perhaps dreamed of finding over the horizon, Francois took the family to St. Louis, then a military post guarding the little known wilderness stretching west to the "shining mountains" and their mysteries, and the supply point for mountain men, the fur trappers, and Indian traders.

KNELT IN ST. LOUIS CATHEDRAL

Down by the yellow Mississippi stood the new stone Cathedral, with the golden-armored king bearing the fleur-de-lis, the statue of St. Louis, and here Eugene saw his father kneel and remain silent a long time, so that when the shadows fell the lad had to pluck at his coat to rouse him. (The little first Cathedral still stands and the golden figure still holds, in the busy, noisy levee section of a great metropolis, the banner of a once glorious France.) Wide-eyed, the boy saw the streets thronged with bronzed men in fringed buckskin trousers, fur caps, moccasins strangely beaded so that they flashed in the sun-swept dust. Red men, blanketed and impassive, were there, too, and something began to sing in his heart, the song of the West that was to call him back in after years.

Francois went as official interpreter with Admiral Bainbridge's fleet on a voyage to the Mediterranean. Upon his return to New England he took his young wife to Tuscaloosa, Ala., where he taught Romance languages in a newly established college. The distinguished Prince Colonna of the noble Roman family of that historic name, after arriving in New York, made the long journey by stage to visit him. From time to time came packages of money from France. One of the recollections of his son, the father of Frederick G. Bonfils, was seeing golden piles, slim towers of "louis d' or," on the professor's desk. There were many French refugees of noble and gentle blood in New Orleans and these were his friends.

But he was ever restless, and one day, after five years of teaching at Tuscaloosa, he took Lucinda and his little family to Nashville, Tenn. He had named one son Eugene Napoleon Bonfils--for he now pronounced and spelled the name in the French manner. Eugene, when eight or nine, one morning in the summer of 1837 was riding his pony up the road to a young ladies' school when he met a tall, kindly gentleman riding a bay mare. Eugene was strikingly handsome and a merry little fellow. The gentleman paused and the two had an interesting conversation. Eugene told his name and answered several questions, among them what he aspired to become, "a soldier."

"How would you like to go to West Point? I am Andrew Jackson," said the tall man in the high beaver hat.

Little Eugene galloped home and told his mother. She gathered him to her, crying, "No, indeed no, Eugene!"

GRANDMOTHER'S PICTURE FOUND

"Much of what has been told here became known only two or three years before Bonfils' death," concluded Mr. Smith. "Mrs. Alice Hewens of Boston, Mass., read in a news magazine an article on Bonfils in which was the statement, 'He is proud of his Bonaparte blood,' That set the kindly little old lady thinking that in the attic of her stately Back Bay mansion were a trunk and a painting that had been there many, many years. She wrote Bonfils asking whether his grandmother was Lucinda Alden of Duxbury; if so, she had been a friend of her family's and her father, who had a pretty gift of portraiture, had painted her shortly before her death in Salem. 'Lucinda's trunk, which she regarded so precious, was left with my family and is now, with father's painting of her, in my attic. If you are the grandson, you should have it,' Mrs. Hewens wrote. 'Lucinda made her home with my people in Salem in her last years.'

"Bonfils went east and returned with the trunk and canvas. In the trunk were letters, the ink now faded to a pale sepia but distinguishable; papers of her husband, documents, and a book, the Adventures of Captain Ben Crowninshield, in which was set forth at length the voyage back to Salem with 'Salvatore Buonfiglio.' They helped materially to clear up the mystery. The painting was beautifully done. It shows a woman who in her youth must have possessed great beauty. Old age and the sadness of her delicate features cannot hide the loveliness that won the heart of the mysterious young Corsican. In this strange way the grandmother he had never known returned to Bonfils to tell him what she knew, and that was much--but even she could not tell him the name for which 'good son' had been substituted on the Vatican passport."

Denver Catholic Register, November 20, 1941, p. 1

National Cyclopedia of American Biography, vol. 27, p. 24

MAJOR FREDERICK WALKER BONFILS

Major Bonfils Resigns; Buxton Named Post Business Manager

Maj. F. W. Bonfils, business manager of The Denver Post for the past twenty-six years, resigned Saturday, and Charles R. Buxton, advertising director for the past year, has been appointed to succeed him, it was announced by Palmer Hoyt, editor and publisher.

Major Bonfils' immediate plans include attention first to private business interests, he indicated. Buxton will take over his new duties as business manager Monday.

The advertising director's position will not be filled immediately, Hoyt said.

Major Bonfils' newspaper career began in September, 1924, when he joined The Post as assistant to the publisher, F. G. Bonfils. He left the editorial end of the business a year and a half later to become business manager.

He was graduated from West Point in 1916, and his military career included service in France in World war I with the Fourth Engineers, Fourth division. After the war he took graduate engineering work at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He then was assigned to duty with the corps of engineers at Cincinnati in flood and low water control on the Ohio river and locks and dams construction assignments. He resigned his commission in 1924 to join The Post.

Buxton is a veteran of both the newsroom and a business office on newspapers. He joined The Post in June, 1946, as assistant business manager, and a year ago was named advertising director. He was a member of the newsroom staff on the Oregonian in Portland, Ore., for seven years, where he was reporter, copy desk chief, executive sports editor and night city editor.

He served in the army for five years in World war II, and saw two and one-half years of service overseas with the Forty-first Infantry division in the southwest Pacific theater. Buxton was discharged with the rank of lieutenant colonel in 1946 and is a member of the reserve.

Denver Post, May 6, 1951, p. 3A

MAJOR FREDERICK WALKER BONFILS

Maj. Frederick Walker Bonfils, 62, of 3005 E. 8th Ave., former business manager of The Denver Post, died at St. Joseph's Hospital at 8:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Cause of death was hepatitis, an infection of the liver. He had been hospitalized since March 1.

The liver infection was a complication following an operation he underwent at General Rose Hospital last December.

Services for Major Bonfils were pending at the Olinger Mortuary.

Major Bonfils was the nephew of the late Frederick G. Bonfils, a co-founder of The Denver Post.

Major Bonfils was born Oct. 28, 1895, at Raton, N. M. He attended schools in New Mexico and California and was appointed to the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1912 as a member of the class of 1916.

At West Point, Major Bonfils was a member of the Army football team and was on the squad with President Eisenhower, a member of the class of 1915.

He received his regular Army commission in the Corps of Engineers in 1916, but remained at West Point as an instructor until the United States entered World War I.

SAW COMBAT SERVICE

During the war, Major Bonfils was an officer in the 4th Engineers battalion of the 4th Division during some of the heaviest fighting in France.

Major Bonfils remained in service after World War I and attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Cambridge, Mass., under Army appointment. He was graduated from MIT with a bachelor of science degree in engineering in 1922.

Major Bonfils served with the Corps of Engineers in flood control and lock and dam construction on the Ohio River until resigning his commission in September, 1924, to become assistant to his uncle Frederick G. Bonfils, at The Post.

Major Bonfils was made business manager of The Post in 1926, a position he held until his retirement in 1951.

Major Bonfils' first wife, Marion, died in Denver in 1940, in 1942 he married the former Lois Fisher of Denver.

After he came to The Post, Major Bonfils maintained his contact with military matters and became interested in aviation.

He became a pilot and served for several years in the late 1930s as commanding officer of the 120th Observation Squadron of the Colorado National Guard.

With the outbreak of World War II, Major Bonfils joined with Ray Wilson of Denver to open and operate a contract flying school at Chickasha, Okla., to give primary flight training to Army pilots. The school was closed at the end of the war.

In 1946, Major Bonfils and Wilson founded Monarch Air Lines in Denver. That firm was merged in 1950 with Challenger Air Lines and Arizona Airways to become the present Frontier Air Lines.

Major Bonfils was a former president and long-time member of the West Point Assn. of Denver. He also was a member of the Wigwam Club of Denver and of the Quiet Birdman, an organization of pilots.

AVID FISHERMAN

He was an avid dry fly fisherman and had fished throughout the United States, Canada, Alaska and Europe.

Survivors include his wife, Lois; a daughter, Mrs. Kay McCord of Denver; a son, Fred G. Bonfils, an engineer with the Allison division of General Motors at Indianapolis, Ind.; a brother, Col. E. B. Walker of Chevy Chase, Md.; a sister, Mrs. J. S. Williams of Coronado, Calif., and five grandchildren.

Denver Post, May 22, 1958, p. 3

MAJOR FREDERICK WALKER BONFILS

Maj. Frederick Walker Bonfils, 62, former business manager of The Denver Post who died May 21, left an estate valued at $500,000, according to a probate petition filed late Tuesday in Denver County Court.

Judge David Brofman set a hearing for June 16 on admitting Major Bonfils' will to probate. Co-executors of the estate are the widow, Mrs. Lois Bonfils of 3005 E. 8th Ave., and Attorney Stanford W. Gregory.

The petition showed that Major Bonfils' holdings included no real estate.

According to the will, bulk of the estate goes to the widow and two children, Frederick G. Bonfils of Indianapolis, Ind., and Mrs. Kay V. McCord of 1995 S. Perry Way.

Major Bonfils, a graduate of West Point, left $5,000 to the endowment fund of the U. S. Military Academy Assn. of Graduates.

He left $5,000 each to a brother, Col. E. B. Walker of Chevy Chase, Md., and to a sister, Mrs. Henrietta I. Williams of Coronado, Calif. A brother-in-law, Charles S. Munda of 1785 S. Marion St., was given $3,000.

FRIEND GETS $5,000

A Denver friend, Ray M. Wilson of 6737 Montview Blvd., was left $5,000.

Gifts of $500 each were left three godchildren, Barry Hughes of 6800 W. Jewell Ave., Sally Hughes of San Francisco and Heidi Walker of Fort Devens, Mass.

Denver Post, May 28, 1958, p. 34

Also see: Denver Post, May 23, 1948, p. 45

Rocky Mountain News, May 28, 1958, p. 43

MRS. FREDERICK W. BONFILS

Bonfils-Mead Rites Set for March 1

By DOROTHY JANE BURKE

Mrs. Frederick W. Bonfils and Kenneth A. Mead have chosen Tuesday, March 1, as the date for their wedding.

The wedding will take place at 3 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Mead's father, Edgar Mead in Greeley.

The Rev. Charles V. Young, pastor of the Trinity Episcopal Church in Greeley will perform the ceremony.

Guests at the wedding will include Mr. Mead's relatives, Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Denman of Victor, Mrs. Mabel M. Marsh and Dr. Ella Mead, both of Greeley and all aunts of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, the couple will leave on a short wedding trip to Santa Fe, N.M. They will then return to Denver for a few days. Then they will leave for an extended stay in Florida and the Virgin Islands.

They will make their home at 945 Monaco pkwy., Denver.

Rocky Mountain News, February 19, 1960, p. 66

HELEN BONFILS
Helen Bonfils Wed In New York

Miss Helen Bonfils, secretary-treasurer of the Denver Post and Denver philanthropist, revealed Friday her marriage in Irvington-on-the-Hudson, N.Y.

She was married on April 2 to Edward Michael Davis, Denver oil man. Miss Bonfils, Davis and Haila Stoddard are associated in the production of the play, "Come Play With Me," which opened Thursday in New York.

The surprise marriage took place at the Frank Gould estate in the Hudson River town.

Robert L. Reed, general counsel for Sun Oil Co., and Mrs. Reed were wedding attendants. A dinner party followed the ceremony at the Ardsley Country Club.

Prominent in Denver theater circles for many years, the former Miss Bonfils donated Bonfils Memorial Theater to the city and has frequently starred in productions there and at Elitch's summer theater.

She is the daughter of Frederick G. Bonfils, co-founder of the Post, and the widow of George Somnes, Broadway theatrical producer.

Davis is owner of Tiger Oil Co., with offices in the First National Bank Bldg. He is a former Texan with oil interests over the Southwest.

The couple will continue to keep their residence in the River House in New York City and at 707 Washington st. in Denver.

Their next visit to Denver will be in early June.

A New York judge officiated at the wedding, Miss Bonfils said, and added that a Catholic ceremony would take place later.

Rocky Mountain News, May 2, 1959, p. 5

HELEN BONFILS
Miss Bonfils Married To Oil Man

Announcement was made Friday of the marriage of Miss Helen G. Bonfils, prominent in theater circles in New York and Denver, and Edward Michael Davis, Denver oil man. They were married April 2.

The marriage ceremony was performed at the Frank Gould estate at Irvington-on-Hudson. Attending were Robert L. Reed, general counsel for the Sun Oil company, and Mrs. Reed. The party was entertained at dinner later by Mr. and Mrs. Reed at the Ardsley country club.

Mr. Davis is the owner of the Tiger Oil Company with offices in the First National Bank building and is associated with Miss Bonfils and Haila Stoddard in the production of "Come Play With Me" which opened at the York Theater in New York City Thursday night.

Denver Post, May 2, 1959, p. 3

DR. CLAUDE D. BONHAM

Medical Society's New President Started Out to Be Lawyer

By ROBERT BYERS

Denver Post Staff Writer

Claude D. Bonham, 52, new president of the Colorado Medical Society, set out to be a lawyer and sort of stumbled into medicine--much to the benefit of medicine.

This suave veteran of 25 years' practice in Boulder, Colo., reached the most recent pinnacle of his career Friday when he was installed as president of the 83-year-old state medical society.

Claude Bonham has spent his life reaching pinnacles, only to find further challenge and opportunity. He is not a man to rest, not even as the top state official in his profession.

Bonham comes from a long line of anything but doctors. His great-grandfather, David Bonham Sr., came to America alone at 15 from England in pre-Civil War years, drove a mule along the Erie canal and finally migrated to northwest Missouri where he almost single-handedly settled the community of Empire Prairie.

David Bonham Jr., grandfather to the Boulder specialist in obstetrics and gynecology, fought in the Civil War on the Union side, read for the law in the "old fashioned way," and served in the Missouri legislature that revised the state's constitution after the Civil War. Until his death in 1906, David Bonham Jr. was a circuit-riding judge and head of his own bank at King City, Mo.

FATHER WAS BANKER

Austin G. Bonham, Dr. Bonham's father, was cashier in the King City bank until his death in 1907. The doctor himself was born Nov. 12, 1900.

As a youngster in King City schools, young Claude Bonham entertained only two ideas on what he would do in life: Become a lawyer like his grandfather, or a merchant like his stepfather, Henry P. Long, head of the Long Mercantile Co. of King City, whom his mother married in 1909.

In high school, young Bonham managed to distinguish himself by talking. A strong debater and public speaker, Dr. Bonham still remembers the day in 1915 at Marysville, Mo., when he talked his way into a state declamation medal.

Probably because of his apparent bent for talking, Dr. Bonham had decided on a career in law when he went down to the state university at Columbia, Mo. Of those days, Dr. Bonham said:

"Those first two years, you know, are pretty general and I just found out I could do a lot better in the sciences than in the arts. So I decided to think about going on in science--but not medicine--just physiology and pharmacology."

However, at the end of his sophomore year at Missouri, Bonham found he had run out of undergraduate science courses to take and was required to enter the pre-clinical years of medical school if he wanted more.

URGED ON BY PROFESSOR

It was 1922 that Dr. Bonham took his bachelor's degree from M. U. and at the urging of an interested professor, stayed to begin work toward a master's in physiology and pharmacology--"I still hadn't decided to go into medicine."

Illness in 1923 interrupted his master's study, so Dr. Bonham arranged to enter the University of Pennsylvania graduate school in the fall of 1923 to resume his work. Still weak when fall arrived, Dr. Bonham took a "rain check" on Pennsylvania and came to Boulder as a special student in science "because I heard it was a good place to recuperate."

By spring of 1924, Claude Bonham had to reach a decision on Penn. Fortunately for Colorado, he accepted the offer from C. U. to continue his master's study in physiology and pharmacology at the just-completed C. U. medical school.

Bonham was married in early 1924, and in 1925 received his master's degree from Colorado.

Bonham by now had decided to teach science and faced the need for a doctorate degree--either Ph. D. or M. D. He explained:

"If the truth were known, I selected the M. D. because I didn't want to take German. Once in medical school and dealing with human beings in clinical situations, however, my mind changed suddenly from teaching to practice of medicine. Almost overnight I decided to become a medical doctor."

CALLS IT "EASY STREET"

A member of the C. U. medical class of 1927, Dr. Bonham took his internship--at $20 a month--at Colorado General Hospital from July, 1927, to June, 1928. From February to June, 1928, however, he assumed the double responsibility of interne and acting chief resident physician. That netted him a two-room furnished apartment, food and $100 a month.

"We were on easy street with that kind of money," he said.

In the fall of 1928, with the depression around the corner, Dr. and Mrs. Bonham started casting about for a place to hang a shingle. He said:

"We took a trip through the Pacific northwest and all the scenic beauty of the area, and were headed back to Denver to take a breath when we pulled off the road at the old 'eight mile corner' outside of Boulder.

"One look at that area and we knew right here was home.

Back at medical school, Bonham was put into contact with the late Dr. Walter W. Reed and his son, the late Dr. Walter K. Reed, both prominent Boulder physicians. Arrangements were made for Bonham's association with them and he occupied his first professional office Oct. 8, 1928, just 25 years ago.

The elder Dr. Reed died in early 1929 and Dr. Walter K. Reed and Bonham continued their association until World War II. Dr. Bonham started general surgery practice in 1934 and climaxed that in 1939 with admission as a fellow to the American College of Surgeons.

His activity in medical society affairs also dates from 1934 when he was elected, despite his youth, president of the Boulder county group. He served several terms as Boulder county delegate to the state society.

Dr. Bonham became a staff member of both Community hospital and Boulder County hospital at Boulder in 1928, was chief of staff at Community in 1936 and again in 1946, and chief of staff at Boulder County in 1941. He is consultant in obstetrics and gynecology at Boulder County Hospital and the Boulder Sanitarium, the former since 1946, when he limited his practice to ob and gyn work, and the latter since 1949.

Dr. Bonham became Maj. Claude O. Bonham, U. S. Army medical corps, in 1942 and served 33 months with the 11th field hospital in North Africa, Sicily and Italy. Down with arthritis in 1944, Dr. Bonham was sent to Fitzsimons army hospital for 11 months and was retired from the army in April, 1945.

BACK TO C. U. AFTER REST

After a short rest, Dr. Bonham went back to Colorado university as a graduate student in obstetrics and gynecology and reopened his professional practice at Boulder in 1946.

In 1948, he was a leader among several Boulder physicians in organizing the Boulder Medical Center and now heads the center's department of obstetrics and gynecology.

Dr. Bonham has risen to be state medical society president through usual channels. A member of the board of trustees in 1941 and again from 1945 to 1951, he was elected vice president for the 1951-52 term, and was named president-elect for the 1952-53 term, taking office this week during the society's convention in Denver.

Claude Bonham, though a specialist, is the first to admit that the backbone of medicine is and always will be the general practice "family" doctor.

"I'm not ashamed to admit that the thing I miss by specializing is the contact with the whole family."

Conservative in his own practice as regards untried theories, Dr. Bonham today enjoys wide respect for competency, ability and skill.

What will he do as president? His answer is:

"Since I have been in practice, we have seen the most dynamic period in the development of medicine. You might even call it kinetic.

"No longer can doctors hide behind their science and restrict themselves to a sheltered life, not contributing or taking part in community affairs.

"We have problems now relating to not only the actual practice of medicine and keeping it free, but we have problems of public relations that we as doctors must solve for the public good."

His inaugural address in Denver Friday was a call to doctors to recognize their responsibilities as citizens and physicians and meet them through a united program of educating not only the public but themselves.

Denver Post, October 4, 1953, p. 3AA

LEVI BOOTH

Early Lawyer's Kin Still Here

Mrs. Earl Wettengel's Grandfather Had Wild Experiences as Pioneer

Fresh from his studies at the University of Wisconsin, where he was a member of the first graduation class, Levi Booth packed his law library in a covered wagon and came to the Pikes Peak country in 1860.

The prospects he found for a young lawyer were anything but encouraging, with every frontiersman making for himself the laws he thought he could enforce.

Illustrative of the conditions which confronted the young barrister is the declaration credited to him that:

"My first client was hanged while I was getting out my law books."

Booth remained here for several months and then returned home to spend Christmas.

Early the following year he came back, with his family, moving to California Gulch, where H. A. W. Tabor was prying around in the hills, looking for "pay dirt."

FRIENDS OF TAHOES

Here his young wife--Mrs. Millie Booth--and Mrs. Augusta Tabor formed a fast friendship.

Winter found provisions at a premium, and Mrs. Booth, who had brought a heavy wagon train of such goods, opened a small store. From their wagon tarpaulin, she made shirts and gloves for the miners. Her husband, finding business good, built a counter in the front of the cabin and freighted in more supplies.

From California Gulch (Leadville) the Booths went to New Mexico, returning to the Cherry Creek settlements in May, 1864.

Their first night back they camped near the banks of Cherry Creek. It was that night that the famous flood of 1864 tore down Cherry Creek. Most of the precious law library and a good share of the rest of the family property washed downstream.

One member of the family by this time was a tiny girl, Lillie Belle Booth (Hollbrook), mother of Mrs. Earl Wettengel, who is the wife of Denver's present district attorney.

Booth anchored his infant daughter to a tree while he sought to rescue as many of the family possessions as possible.

BUY STAGE STATION

The horses and few books were about all that he saved, however.

The next day, the Booths began searching for a place to live.

In her search, Mrs. Booth stopped at the Four-Mile House on the Smoky Hill stage coach route into Denver.

A satisfactory agreement soon was made, calling for a down payment of $1,000.

Mrs. Booth pulled the money from her dress, closed the deal, and went back to their camp.

"Don't bother any more, Mr. Booth. I've bought a place," she told her husband.

The old Four-Mile House--originally of log, but later covered with clapboard and finally with brick--still stands. It now belongs to D. W. Working, an uncle of Mrs. Wettengel.

The Booths operated the historic place as a station on the stage lines for a time, and then turned their attention to farming.

Three generations of girls in the pioneer family have attended the University of Denver.

Mrs. Wettengel's mother, as a girl of 17, was a student there. Mrs. Wettengel also attended the institution when she was 17 and her daughter, Miss Lillie Wettengel, is now a D. U. student.

Rocky Mountain News, April 22, 1934, p. 10

TIMOTHY BORDEN

Timothy Borden, ranchman, was born in Sullivan county, N. Y. in Sept. 1826. He attended the common schools and worked on a farm until 1858, when he moved to the West, and locating in Clinton county, Iowa, again worked on a farm until 1861. He then came to Colorado and entered the gold mines of Summit county, where he was engaged in mining and prospecting during the next six years. He then decided to abandon mining for a time and located a ranch in South Park. The next season, however, he returned to the Summit county mines, but remained only during that season, returning at its close to his ranch. Having become possessed of about 2,000 acres of fine hay and grazing land, he stocked it with cattle and horses, and cut from the grass lands large quantities of fine hay.

Mr. Borden is a member of both the Masonic and Odd Fellows orders. In 1880 he was elected one of the commissioners of Park county and held the office many years, being chairman of the board for three years.

In 1849 he married Miss Adelia A. Williams of New York City. The town of Bordenville, where he now resides, was named for himself and brother, Mr. Olney A. Borden. Both families are widely known and as widely respected throughout Park county.

Since the foregoing was written Mrs. Borden has passed to her eternal rest. She was born in the city of New York in 1827, the daughter of Purdy and Maria Vredenburg, descended from the old Knickerbocker family, who were among the earliest settlers of Manhattan Island. Mrs. Borden died Feb. 4, 1892, mourned by a very large circle of admiring friends.

Hall, History of Colo., vol. 4, p. 89

MRS. LEONORA S. BOSWORTH

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. Leonora S. Bosworth
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Leonora Nettie Snyder-Bosworth (Mrs. Joab Otis Bosworth), born March 9, 1856 at Council Bluffs, Iowa

Name of father: George Snyder, a native of Norristown, Pennsylvania

Name of mother: Mary Rebecca Harding Snyder

Attended school or college: School, Academy, College, Monmouth, Illinois

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Graduated Monmouth College, B.S. 1875

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: September 1875

Married: September 30, 1879 in Denver, Colorado

Name of husband: Joab Otis Bosworth, the son of Dan L. and Lydia Case Bosworth

Names of children and years of birth:

1. Harold Otis Bosworth, born July 7, 1880, Denver. He died January 31, 1943 (see Denver Post, February 1, 1943, p. 9) He married Helen Boehmer. Their children were Otis Bosworth, Richard B. Bosworth and Eleanor Bosworth who married David Kirk Spitler.
2. Arthur Harding Bosworth, born 1886
3. Robert Graham, born 1888

Avocation: Mother

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

Death of husband J. O. Bosworth August 4, 1890 - age 42. The Bosworth Boys came up through Denver Public Schools, graduating from East Hugh under Dr. W. H. Smiley. Their course is interrupted by a year's travel abroad because of Arthur's too rapid growth and consequent delicate health. We sailed for Europe 1901. Harold graduated from Mass. Institute of Technology 1902; Arthur from Yale, 1908, Robert from Princeton and Harvard Law, 1911-1914. All marry at age of twenty-six. Robert enlisted for service in World War, 1916. From Training Camp - Captain Artillery - Sent over seas, 1917 - Returned to Denver, 1919.

Eight grand children. Eldest, son of Harold, aged 22, graduated from Princeton, 1930. Awarded Phi Beta Kappa Key. Zeph Palmer Scholarship of Twenty-five hundred dollars for years study and travel abroad. All residing in Denver.

NEWSPAPER ITEM

Joab O. Bosworth was an old resident of Denver, having resided here since 1871. He was a progressive citizen and was identified with many enterprises. He was a practical chemist and began business here as a druggist in the building where he met his death yesterday. Mr. Bosworth became identified as president with the Denver Fire Clay Company when it was organized in 1880, by Gen. Frank Case, manager, and W. T. Cornwaler, secretary. He was a leading church-member. At the time of his death he was an Elder of First Presbyterian church and Superintendent of the Sunday school of that church.

He left a wife and three children. Mr. Bosworth was a native of Iowa and 42 years of age. He was a member of Union Lodge No. 7, A.F. and A.M. and also of the Grand Lodge of Colorado. His kindly countenance is familiar to nearly every business man in Denver. He was the president of the Manufacturers' Exchange and had to some extent, interested himself in the Denver Natural Gas & Oil Company. Aside from this his business interests were in the Fire Clay Company alone. He left a pleasant home at 2956 Arapahoe Street, and other property altogether valued all told at about $50,000. There was an accident insurance on his life of $4,000 in the Traveler's, which will be paid.

(signed) (Mrs. J. O.) Leonora S. Bosworth
Denver - 1875-1930

Biography File

GEORGE W. BOWEN

George W. Bowen, capitalist, born in Centerville, Iowa, April 8, 1866, was the son of Charles Willard (born March 6, 1838, died July 18, 1902) and Anna W. (Boyles) Bowen. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, and then started out to make his own way in the world. He is a self made man, rising to prominence in business through his own energy and enterprise, until now he is at the head of many of the leading industries of the state. He came to Colorado in 1887, and became connected with the Colorado Supply Company at Rouse, in 1889. He remained in its employ, being a subsidiary company of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company, until 1895. From 1895, until 1903, he was in the service of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company and some of its subsidiary corporations. Since 1903, he has been connected with Victor-American Fuel Company and its predecessors.

Step by step from one field of enterprise to another, he has risen in the Colorado business world, until now he is president of the following companies:

The Victor-American Fuel Company
The Colorado & Southeastern Railroad Company
The Western Stores Company
The American Fuel Company
The Mountain Telegraph Company
The Redstone Marble Company
The Minnequa Town Company
The Wallace Mining Company
The Victor Fuel Company

He married, Nov. 24, 1903, in New York City, Helen, daughter of William Hicks, Brooklyn, N. Y. They have one child, Willard Osgood Bowen.

At one time Mr. Bowen resided in Pueblo, Colorado, but now makes Denver his home. He is a member of the Denver Club, Denver Country Club, Traffic Club, and the Rocky Mountain Club, New York City.

Sketches of Colorado, vol. 1, p. 414

HARRY T. BOWEN

Date: October 9, 1937

No. 2 B898 D5 E16 F89
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION
INDIANAPOLIS

Harry T. Bowen, President, Central Savings Bank & Trust Co.,
Denver, Colorado

Harry T. Bowen, born at Beacon, Iowa, January 8, 1873; son of John W. and Eleanor (Burdess) Bowen.

John W. Bowen, born in Wales. His father brought his family to America, and settled in Pennsylvania, in early days. John W. Bowen moved to Iowa prior to the Civil War, in which conflict he served as a soldier. After operating a general store in Iowa, he moved, in the late 1880's, to Odell, Nebraska, where he conducted a mercantile store, and engaged in the newspaper business. He later moved to Lincoln, Nebraska, and served as city clerk 6 years. He subsequently was adjutant of the Soldiers Home in Grand Island, Nebraska. He died in California about 1927. His wife, Eleanor (Burdess) Bowen, was born in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England.

Harry T. Bowen, attended public schools, after which he was employed as a bookkeeper by the city treasurer of Lincoln, Nebraska. He later was associated with the First National Bank, in Lincoln, after which he served as cashier of the First National Bank in Scottsbluff, Nebraska, until 1917. He then purchased a bank at Gering, Nebraska, and in 1920 sold the bank and moved to Denver, Colorado. In 1925, he became vice-president and cashier of the Central Savings Bank & Trust Co., of which he has been president since Dec. 1935. He is also secretary and treasurer of the Bowen Investment Co. Mr. Bowen, who is independent in politics, is a member of the Denver Chapter of the Citizens Historical Association, and of the Presbyterian Church. His hobby is motoring. He has many farms in Nebraska and Colorado.

In 1897, Harry T. Bowen married Alma Pike, daughter of Albert Pike. Mrs. Bowen was born in Vandalia, Illinois. Children: (1) Ralph L., who is secretary of the Mountain Finance Corporation, in Denver, Colorado. He is married, and is the father of 2 children: Robert Thomas, and Donald Wayne. (2) Wayne P.

JAMES C. BOWES

James Bowes, Former Indian Fighter, Dies
Pioneer Held Revival Meetings in Boom Mining Towns

James C. Bowes, 72, whose colorful and useful career included fighting Indians in Saskatchewan, Canada, and conducting religious revivals in the boom mining and cattle-raising towns of Colorado in the '90s, died in the Porter sanitarium Thursday afternoon.

Crippled by paralysis in 1903, Bowes was forced to relinquish the strenuous life of a traveling evangelist. He turned to the nondenominational missions in the lower part of Denver as a field of service.

He became a familiar figure to thousands of Denver residents, with his heavy gnarled cane, his stiff leg and shriveled hand, and his perpetual happy smile and friendly greeting.

When he died, his sister, Mrs. Florence Kent of Boston, Mass., who has been visiting here since June, was with him. Besides Mrs. Kent he is survived by a brother, Watson of Boston; a nephew, Watson E. Bowes of 1232 Clayton street, and a cousin, Joseph G. Croskill of 4701 West Hayward place.

Mr. Bowes was born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1863 and as a young man went to the frontier in Saskatchewan to establish a wheat farm. He came to Denver in 1890 and went into the real estate business with his brother, a Colorado pioneer who died eight years ago.

Denver Post or Rocky Mountain News, no date given

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Clint A. Bowman
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

WILLIAM CHASE BRADBURY

Biographical data to accompany portrait of William C. Bradbury
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Wm. Chase Bradbury, born at Taunton, Massachusetts, February 1, 1849

Name of father: Cotton C. Bradbury, a native of York, Maine

Name of mother: Rebecca Brewer, a native of Worcester, Massachusetts

Attended school: Hyde Park, Massachusetts, Boston, Massachusetts, and Providence, Rhode Island

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: None worth mentioning

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Colorado June 1871 and lived here ever since

Married: Evans, Colorado, August 27, 1872

Name of wife: Hattie A. Howe, daughter of Buckley H. and Elizabeth A. Howe.

Names of children and years of birth:

Buckley C., born June 12, 1873 - died June 11, 1882

Miriam, born December 25, 1874 - died May 31, 1899

Isabella A., born October 9, 1878

William C., born September 4, 1882 - died September 17, 1903

Luther F., born July 11, 1884

Harriet, March 1, 1886

George Edward, born September 11, 1893

Avocation: Railroad and irrigation contractor

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: None except one term as Alderman, Colorado Springs, about 1876

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: Fall of 1871 and winter of 1871-1872 Cow Puncher at cattle camp of Lyman, Colo. at Fremonts Orchard, Colo. 1873 to 1878 engaged in merchandise business handling paints, oils, glass, wall paper and artist's materials and gang of workmen connected with same, at Colorado Springs, during which time served one term as Alderman. Health failing, sold out and bought and operated mule freight train, also stage line, between Colo. Springs and Leadville. When in 1880 railroads were practically completed into Leadville, moved teams and outfit to Tres Piedras, New Mexico, where took charge of two saw-mills and tie camp, furnishing ties and timber for about 150 miles of the Denver & Rio Grande R. R. construction. Thence took first grading contract on Burlington Railroad then building into Denver, since which time until about 1910 actively engaged in general Railroad and Irrigation Construction, among other railroad contracts being those for Oregon Short Line, in Idaho, about 100 miles; Colorado Midland, 40 miles; Rock Island, between Missouri River and Colorado Springs, 120 miles; Chicago, Burlington & Northern, in Illinois and Wisconsin, about 50 miles; Union Pacific, aggregating about 300 miles; Pecos Valley, New Mexico, 97 miles; Chihuahua & Pacific, Old Mexico, 50 miles; Denver & Fort Worth, 60 miles; Milwaukee & St. Paul, 37 miles; Denver & Rio Grande, Burlington, Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. and numerous others. Also numerous Irrigation systems of Canals and Reservoirs, including Pecos Valley System in New Mexico; Wyoming Development Co. system in Wyoming; Idaho Mining & Irrigation system in Idaho; The Colorado, or "Bob Creek", system in the Arkansas Valley, Colo., and numerous other systems in Colorado and other States.

See Trail, 18:22, November 25

Please give autograph signature:

(signed) W. C. Bradbury

Biography File

ROLLIE W. BRADFORD
Rollie Bradford Estate Estimated at $325,000

GOLDEN, Colo. --Rollie W. Bradford, late chairman of the board of the Bradford-Robinson Printing Co., left an estate of more than $325,000 according to a petition for probate of his will on file Tuesday in Jefferson County Court.

Bradford died March 14 in St. Luke's Hospital after a short illness. He was 75.

The probate petition reflected a gross estate value of $325,000 with much of the property real estate held in joint tenancy with his widow, Mrs. Charlotte Bradford.

The will provides cash bequests of $5,000 each for two sons, William and Henry R. Bradford; two daughters-in-law, Mrs. Jean Simson Bradford and Mrs. Jean Davis Bradford; two grandsons, and to the Kappa Sigma Fraternity endowment fund.

Other cash bequests were made to employes and friends. The balance of the estate was willed to Mrs. Bradford.

Denver Post, April 4, 1961, p. 3

WARDER L. BRAERTON

Date: January 22, 1938

No. 2 B985 D5 E16 F154
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Warder L. Braerton, President, Braerton, Simonton, Brown, Inc.
527 Gas & Electric Building, Denver, Colorado

Warder L. Braerton, born at Hallowell, Kansas, September 4, 1881; son of Edward and Lula J. (Dunbar) Braerton.

Edward Braerton, born in Pa. he was a farmer. He died in 1881, and is buried near Hallowell, Kansas. His widow, Lula J. (Dunbar) Braerton, a native of Illinois, resides in Denver, Colorado. Her parents, Warder and Louise (Nardin) Dunbar, originally from Kentucky, moved to Illinois, and later settled near Hallowell, Kansas.

Warder L. Braerton, attended school at Hallowell, Kansas; student, Columbus (Kansas) High School; and graduated University of Kansas, A. B., 1903. He then was a teacher at Parsons (Kansas) High School, after which he was associated with the State Bank of Parsons. He served as secretary of the Carthage (Missouri) Gas Co., 1906-07, following which he was employed as a bookkeeper by the Louisiana Gas Co., in Shreveport, Louisiana. He then returned to Carthage, Missouri, where he was admitted to the State Bar of Missouri, in May 1909, after which he engaged in legal practice and in the insurance business in that city until 1910. Following that he engaged in the insurance, abstract, and loan business in Clovis, New Mexico, 1 year, and in September 1911, moved to Denver, Colorado, where he served as a special agent for the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., 14 years. In 1927, he established his present insurance business, Braerton, Simonton, Brown, Inc., the officers of which are as follows: Warder L. Braerton, president; Lee H. Simonton, vice-president; J. Leonard Brown, vice-president; Paul P. Rubincam, treasurer; and W. D. Wright, Jr., attorney. The firm, whose business covers Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico, employs 400 agents. Mr. Braerton, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Masonic Lodge; American Association of Insurance General Agents (president, 1936-37); Chamber of Commerce of the U. S. A.; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Denver Athletic Club; Wyco Club (in Wyoming); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Methodist Episcopal Church. His favorite recreation is fishing.

On September 11, 1907, Warder L. Braerton married Emily Gibson, daughter of Albert and Lillian (Griffith) Gibson, of Kansas City, Missouri. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Braerton: (1) Emily Louise, who, on January 31, 1931, married Robert W. Peters. They reside in Sterling, Colo., and are the parents of 3 children: Emily Joan, Mary Sue, and Nancy Lee. (2) Lillian Joan, who resides at home. (3) Mary Lee, who resides in Abilene, Kansas, with her husband, William Carroll. They are the parents of 1 child, James B. (4) Susan, who resides at home. (5) Lucy Jean, who was born in 1919. She died in 1920, and is buried in Crown Hill Cemetery, in Denver.

WILLIAM A. BRAIDEN
W. A. Braiden Estate Value Tops $50,000

William A. Braiden, 89, pioneer Colorado rancher and businessman, who died May 23, left an estate valued at "more than $50,000," according to a petition to probate his will presented to County Judge David Brofman.

Braiden bequeathed the bulk of his estate in trust for the benefit of his wife, Maude A., of 401 Hudson St., and his daughter, Mrs. Pauline B. Darley, wife of Dr. Ward Darley, president of the University of Colorado.

Darley, a niece, Mrs. Fay T. Graves of Monte Vista, Colo., and a nephew, Raymond Braiden of La Jara, Colo., were given $1,000 each. Two other nieces, Mrs. Clara Meinzer of Phoenix, Ariz., and Mrs. Roy Morton of Mentone, Calif., and a friend, Ivan Patten of 214 Colorado Blvd., were bequeathed $500 each.

A founder of the American National Cattlemen's Assn., Braiden came to Colorado from Ohio in 1884, settled at La Jara and built his ranch--which later became the famous T-Bone outfit--into a 35,000-acre holding.

Denver Post, June 3, 1955, p. 25

JEAN S. BREITENSTEIN

Date: October 9, 1937

No. 2 B899 D5 E16 F99
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Jean S. Breitenstein, Attorney, 718 Symes Building
Denver, Colorado

Jean S. Breitenstein, son of George J. and Ida S. (Sala) Breitenstein; born in Keokuk, Iowa, July 18, 1900.

George J. Breitenstein, son of Jacob, was born in Penrose, Iowa. He later moved to Keokuk, Iowa, where he engaged in the wholesale dry goods business several years. In 1906, he moved to Boulder, Colorado, and entered the real estate and insurance business. He is now a justice of the peace in that city. His wife, Ida S. (Sala) Breitenstein, was born in San Francisco, California, daughter of Margaret (Smith) Sala. Mrs. Breitenstein died in 1931, and is buried in Green Mountain Cemetery, in Boulder, Colorado. Her parents resided in southeastern Iowa. The first members of the Sala family in America came to this country during the Revolutionary War.

Jacob Breitenstein, father of George J., and son of Jean Frederick, served in the Germany Revolution of 1848, in which year he emigrated to America, settling in southeastern Iowa. He was a farmer. His father, Jean Frederick Breitenstein, and a cousin of his father, were officers in Napoleon's army, and participated in the Battle of Moscow during the invasion of Russia. They were given the ancestral Breitenstein Home on the Rhine by Napoleon.

Jean S. Breitenstein, attended public schools in Boulder, Colorado; graduated University of Colorado, B. A., 1922; and University of Colorado School of Law, LL. B., 1924. He practiced law at Craig, Colorado, 1 year, and since 1926 has engaged in legal practice in Denver, Colorado. He served as assistant state attorney general from January 1925, to January 1929, and as assistant U. S. attorney, from March 1930, to June 1933. Mr. Breitenstein, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Columbine Lodge No. 147, A. F. and A. M.; American Bar Association, Colo. Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Denver Law Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Congregational Church. His hobby is photography.

In 1925, Jean S. Breitenstein married Helen C. Thomas, of Wollaston, Massachusetts, daughter of Harry N. and Henrietta C. Thomas. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Breitenstein: (1) Eleanor Thomas, born August 24, 1926. (2) George C., born October 27, 1927. He died May 9, 1933, and is buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver.

CHARLES ROBERT BROCK, LL. D.

Lawyer

For more than a quarter of a century, from the very beginning of his practice in Colorado until the time of his death, Charles Robert Brock was a leader in the legal profession of the West. Coming to Denver from Kentucky after several years of experience and training in the courts of that State, he immediately attracted attention by his brilliant legal talents and profound knowledge of the law. Master of a persuasive eloquence, he possessed a keen, analytical mind and an imposing presence, was quick to see the possibilities of his cases and to press them to a successful conclusion. In all the years of his practice he remained preëminently the champion of every good cause, standing uncompromisingly for the right, and for this quite as much as for his many court victories, he was honored by the members of his profession and by the people of the State.

Mr. Brock was born near London, Laurel County, Kentucky, May 9, 1865, a son of Daniel R. and Mary (Lucas) Brock, a lineal descendant of John Brock, captain in the War of 1812 and of John Brock, who was first lieutenant of the 10th Regiment of Virginia in the War of the Revolution. Both families are numbered among the oldest and most substantial in the South. His parents were deeply religious, and their dearest wish was to provide their son with proper moral and religious training and every available means for intellectual development. In the latter respect facilities were limited and much of his early education he received from members of his family--from his father, who not only taught the country school which he attended for some time, but also instructed his son at home; from his mother; and from her sister, a teacher in the Laurel County schools. Later Mr. Brock attended the old Laurel Seminary, following which he secured a certificate of qualification and taught a country school.

From that time until he was twenty-one years old, he taught one term of five months each year, attending an academy at London, or Barbourville for a like term, and in this way he prepared for college. In January, 1887, he matriculated at the State College, now the University of Kentucky, and from this institution he was graduated in June, 1890, with the degree of Bachelor of Science. At his graduation he was selected by the faculty to deliver an address, choosing as his theme "Our Glory and Our Shame," which he developed into a powerful plea for independence in thought and action. High praise came to him for this effort on which an important Lexington journal commented as follows: "The evidence of intellectual vigor and moral courage to be found in this address is such as should reassure the faltering faith of every patriotic citizen of the commonwealth."

For the school year 1890-91, Mr. Brock acted as associate principal of the Laurel Seminary at London, during which period, in accordance with an ambition already formed, he took up the active study of law. During the following year he taught school in Williamsburg Institute, now Cumberland College, and in the time which he had available for this work, read law in the offices of the late R. D. Hill, one of the most capable and painstaking lawyers in southeastern Kentucky. Before the end of the year he was admitted to the bar of the State, and in June, 1892, he and Mr. Hill formed a partnership for the practice of law at London, under an arrangement whereby Mr. Brock was to be in charge of the office at that place. The partnership continued for three years, Mr. Hill having given his name essentially for the help and assurance which it afforded. When he felt that the young lawyer was able to proceed alone, the partnership was dissolved.

In the remaining years that he practiced at London, it is no exaggeration to say that Mr. Brock gathered about him the most desirable clientage the town and surrounding country afforded, those who had known him from childhood coming to seek and to follow his advice. In 1901, however, his solicitude for his wife's health brought about his removal to Denver, and in this city he made his home until his death. At first he took a desk in the law office of Mr. Stuart D. Walling, in the Ernest and Cranmer Building, and again began the task of building up a practice. Two years after his arrival word reached him in an unexpected moment that the Denver district attorney, having a vacancy on his staff, desired to fill the position with a man to whom he could entrust a share of the civil business of the city and that his name was being considered for the position. An arrangement was made by which he agreed to work for one month on trial without compensation, and if at the end of that time the district attorney was convinced of his ability to perform the duties desired, he was to be appointed. The appointment was made at the end of the month and for a year and a half his very successful connection with the office continued. He resigned to become associated with Milton Smith, with whom he remained in partnership through the years. When in the city attorney's office he had charge of litigation of considerable moment to Denver, including what was known as the "Wine Room Cases," which he argued in the Supreme Court of the United States. The basis of the writ of error from that tribunal was the contention that a charter provision which excluded women from saloons or rooms adjacent thereto constituted a discrimination against women as such in violation of the Constitution of the United States--a contention resisted by Mr. Brock and repudiated by the Supreme Court.

The firm of Smith and Brock became one of those most widely known in the courts of the West, enjoying a large and prosperous practice. During the decade from 1912 until 1922, it was known as Smith, Brock and Ferguson, but in the latter year the firm name became again Smith and Brock, the junior members including Elmer L. Brock, Mr. Brock's younger brother; John P. Akolt, E. R. Campbell, and Milton Smith, Jr. In its continued success the fine ability of Mr. Brock played a large part, and he frequently scored notable victories not only in the State courts, but in the United States Supreme Court, before which he appeared in many important cases. His growing prominence in Denver life was recognized as early as 1904 and in July of that year he was designated by the late Mayor Speer for the pleasant duty of presenting to the Cruiser Denver, then at Galveston, Texas, a silver service on behalf of the city of Denver. In connection therewith it was also his privilege to present to the cruiser a silver pitcher on behalf of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

In 1907 the Colorado Civil Service Commission was formed and Mr. Brock was selected by Governor Buchtel as one of the first members of that body, on which he served without compensation until 1911. An active Democrat, although independent in his support of principles and candidates, he neither sought nor desired political preferment, and his term on the Civil Service Commission of the State marked the limit of his activities in this sphere. He never lost, however, his vital interest in the civic welfare of his community and State.

Mr. Brock was a trustee of the University of Denver, and was made a member of the faculty of the law school in 1904, in which year he became professor of equity pleading. He delivered many lectures before the student body on this and other subjects. He was a staunch supporter of the Constitution of the United States and frequently lectured throughout Colorado upon the importance of upholding it. He was also the author of many pamphlets on this subject. In the work of the American Bar and Colorado Bar associations he was very active, serving as chairman of the public utility law section of the former in 1921 and 1922, and as president of the Denver Bar Association in 1920.

Aside from his legal engagements, Mr. Brock found time to participate in various other phases of Denver life. He was a member of the University Club, the Denver Club, the Denver Country Club, and the Motor Club of Colorado, while he was affiliated fraternally with Phi Delta Phi, the honorary legal society.

Mr. Brock worshiped in the faith of the Baptist church, and in Denver was a member of the First Church of that denomination, attending regularly upon its services, and contributing liberally of his means for its local support and for the maintenance of its work in foreign fields. Religion and religious activities entered largely into his life, and for more than twenty years he was a warm advocate of tithing, a practice which he consistently followed himself. From 1919 to 1922 he was president of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, and he served for many years as a trustee of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary. He delivered many lectures on religious subjects and in pamphlet form they were widely distributed.

In recognition of his distinguished career, the University of Kentucky at its Golden Jubilee in 1916 chose Mr. Brock as one of three alumni of the university upon whom to confer honorary degrees. At this time he received the degree of Doctor of Laws.

On June 1, 1893, at London, Kentucky, Mr. Brock married Katherine P. Brown, daughter of Judge William LeRoy Brown, attorney and Kentucky district judge, and of Emily (Pitman) Brown. His happy companionship with his wife was one of Mr. Brock's greatest joys, and he loved nothing more than their long evenings together at home during which they read many of the world's best books.

Mr. Brock's death occurred on July 2, 1928, to the great sorrow of the community which had come to know him and to love him well. The rugged strength of his character existed side by side with a fine gentleness and a consideration for others which won him the friendship of all those with whom he came in contact. Many fine tributes have been paid to his life and work, and of these several are quoted:

George C. Manley, a leading attorney of Denver, wrote of him: "I was always impressed with his clearness of mind, his courage, and good cheer. His value to both students and faculty of Denver University Law School was inestimable."

President Frank L. McVey, of Kentucky State University, expressed the grief of that institution at his passing in the following words: "He was a great honor to his alma mater, and an ornament to his profession. In his death the University has lost a dear friend."

Benjamin S. Read, president of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company at Atlanta, Georgia, paid this tribute to his memory: "He was an extraordinarily able man, of fine character and winning personality, and possessed an unusual capacity for leadership, not only in his profession, but in any cause having for its object the betterment of mankind."

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 147-150

Mrs. Brock's D.A.R. #254109

ALFRED JOHN BROMFIELD

Date: November 13, 1937

No. 2 B923 D5 E16 F118
MAS/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Alfred John Bromfield, President
Industrial Federal Savings & Loan Association, Denver, Colorado

Alfred John Bromfield, born in Denver, Colorado, June 27, 1897; son of Alfred John, Sr. and Jessie M. (Dalziel) Bromfield.

Alfred John Bromfield, Sr.*, born in London, England, July 27, 1864; son of the Rev. Edward T. and Georgianna Bromfield. When a young man, he emigrated to America. He later became business manager of The North American Review Publishing Co., of New York City, and later served in that same capacity for Samuel Langhorne Clemens (Mark Twain), several years. In 1887, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he was associated with Chain & Hardy, book dealers, and subsequently became engaged in the insurance business. He later was one of the 14 organizers of the Industrial Building & Loan Association, which now is known as the Industrial Federal Savings & Loan Association. He was secretary of the association, several years, later was elected vice-president, and subsequently served as president until his death, which occurred August 5, 1937. He was vice-president of the Federal National Bank, and a director of the Continental Trust Co., in Denver, 10 years. His wife, Jessie M. (Dalziel) Bromfield, whom he married in Germantown, Paennsylvania, in June 1887, was born in London, England, and came to America when young. She resides in Denver. Her parents were John Sanderson** and Jane (Dyke) Dalziel, the former of whom was an internationally known wood engraver and artist. Alfred John, Sr. and Jessie M. (Dalziel) Bromfield were the parents of 3 children: (1) Marguerite. (2) Dorothy. (3) Alfred John.

Alfred John Bromfield, attended public grade and high schools, in Denver, Colorado, graduating from the latter in 1916, and was a student of Colorado College, at Colorado Springs. He later was on a ranch on the Western Mountain Slope in Colorado, and from 1918 to 1925, operated a ranch in the Rocky Mountains. He subsequently returned to Denver, where he became engaged in the stock and bond business, and in 1928 became associated with his father, Alfred Bromfield, Sr., in the Industrial Federal Savings & Loan Association, of which he later was made vice-president, and in 1929 was elected vice-president and secretary, serving until the death of his father in 1937, at which time he became president of the company. In June 1928, the business was moved from Fifteenth and Tremont Streets to its present location, 740 Seventeenth Street, where it occupies the ground floor. The company, which employs approximately 20 persons, has modern banking equipment. Mr. Bromfield, who is president and a director of the Denver Rocky Mountain Park Improvement Association, is a member of the executive council of the U. S. Building and Loan League, and a member of the American Savings, Building & Loan Institute, of which he is vice-president, and a trustee. Mr. Bromfield, who is independent in politics, is a member of the following: Sigma Chi (fraternity); City Club; Advertising Club of Denver (a director); Wednesday Evening Seminar (literary club); and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobbies are his home, music, art, literature, and gardening.

In 1918, Alfred John Bromfield married Louesa Bancroft, daughter of Frank and Rosa Bancroft, of Denver. Mrs. Bromfield is a member of the Junior League. There are no children.

See Denver Post, September 15, 1937, p. 18

*For further data regarding Alfred John Bromfield, Sr., see Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 3, p. 786.

** For further data regarding John Sanderson Dalziel, see Colorado Historical Museum files. See also under John Sanderson Dalziel in this notebook.

See Colorado Clippings under Building & Loan Associations

Denver Post, August 6, 1937, p. 22

Rocky Mountain News, August 6, 1937, p. 1

Denver Post, September 23, 1938, p. 3

Rocky Mountain News, September 23, 1938, p. 20

DONALD BROMFIELD

Date: January 29, 1938

No. 2 B992 D5 E16 F159
MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Donald Bromfield, President, Garrett-Bromfield & Company, Inc.
212 Security Building, Denver, Colorado

Donald Bromfield, born in Plainfield, New Jersey, July 26, 1893; son of Lawrence B. and Edith (Dalziel) Bromfield.

Lawrence B. Bromfield, born in Toronto, Canada; son of the Rev. Edward J. and Georgiana Bromfield, the former of whom was a minister, and an editor. He was the father of 18 children, Lawrence B. being the fourteenth child. Lawrence B. Bromfield engaged in the publishing business, and later the advertising business, in New York State, and in 1905, moved to Denver, Colorado, where he became associated with his brother, Alfred John Bromfield, Sr.*, in the Industrial Building & Loan Association. He retired in 1928, and his death occurred in June 1937. His widow, Edith (Dalziel) Bromfield, who resides in Denver, was born in London, England, and when young, came to America with her parents, John Sanderson and Jane (Dyke) Dalziel. John Sanderson Dalziel**, who was an internationally known wood carver and engraver, and an artist, made the drawings and cuts for the illustrations in the first edition of the "Century Dictionary".

Donald Bromfield, attended grade and high schools in Denver, Colorado. In May 1917, he entered the U. S. Army, for service in the World War, and was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant, and later a 1st lieutenant. He served overseas with the 89th Division, and was wounded in the Battle of St. Mihiel (France). He was a member of the Army of Occupation, in Germany, and returned to the U. S., June 1, 1919. Following the war, Mr. Bromfield became associated with Wilson Cramner & Co., a brokerage firm, and on Jan. 1, 1930, organized Garrett-Bromfield & Co., Inc., in Denver, of which firm he is president, and VanHolt Garret, vice president. This company operates an investment and insurance business, and employs 20 persons. Mr. Bromfield is a Republican, and a member of the following: Investment Bankers Association of America (Rocky Mountain Group); National Association of Real Estate Boards; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Denver Club; Denver Country Club; Denver Polo Club; Wigwam Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. Mr. Bromfield, whose hobbies are fishing, and hunting, maintains a summer home in the mountains, at Evergreen, Colorado.

On April 10, 1920, Donald Bromfield married Helen Phipps, daughter of the Hon. Lawrence Cowle and Genevieve (Chandler) Phipps. Mrs. Bromfield is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. and Mrs. Bromfield are the parents of 3 children: (1) Genevieve C., born in 1925. (2) Edith D., born in 1928. (3) Donald, Jr., born in 1930.

The Hon. Lawrence Cowle Phipps***, father of Helen (Phipps) Bromfield, was born in Amwell Township, Washington Co., Pennsylvania, August 30, 1862. He graduated from Pittsburgh (Pennsylvania) High School, in 1879, after which he became associated with the Carnegie Steel Co., advancing to the position of first vice-president of the company. He retired from active business, April 1, 1901, and moved to Denver, Colorado. He served as president of the Colorado Taxpayers' Protective League, in 1913; as chairman of the Mountain Division, in the American Red Cross Campaign, in 1917; and as a member of the Colorado Council of Defense, in 1917. He was elected as a Republican, to the U. S. Senate, in 1918, entering upon his official duties, March 4, 1919, and was re-elected in 1924, for the term ending March 3, 1931. The Hon. Lawrence Cowle Phipps married Genevieve Chandler.

* For further data regarding Alfred John Bromfield, Sr., see Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 3, p. 786. Also, see Citizens Historical Assn. sketch of his son, Alfred John Bromfield, Jr.

** For further data regarding John Sanderson Dalziel, see the magazine, "Time," issue of July 1937. Also see John Sanderson Dalziel in this notebook.

*** For further data regarding the Hon. Lawrence Cowle Phipps, see "Biographical Dictionary of the American Congress, 1774-1927" (U. S. Govt. Printing Office, 1927), p. 1410. Also see Lawrence Cowle Phipps in this notebook.

LAWRENCE B. BROMFIELD

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Lawrence B. Bromfield
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Lawrence Beattie Bromfield, born at Toronto, Canada, April 13, 1868

Name of father: Edward Thomas Bromfield, a native of Coventry, England

Name of mother: Georgiana Sophia Musgrave, a native of London, England

Attended school or college: Schools and Business Colleges.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: In 1896 came to Denver, Colorado

Married: Yes, at Plainfield, New Jersey, June 1889

Name of wife: Edith Dalziel, daughter of John Dalziel and Jane Dalziel

Name of children and years of birth:

Lawrence Dalziel, born June 1891. Wife: Marjorie B., daughter, Marjorie Jane

Donald Coleman, born July, 1893. Wife: Helen Phipps

Merideth Churchill, born July 1902. Wife: Carol E. Son: Meredith, married Betty Hayden, daughter of Lewis Hayden. Son: Meredith Kramer Bromfield, born February 19, 1942

Avocation: Vice-President, Industrial Building & Loan Association

Autograph signature: (signed) Lawrence B. Bromfield

See:

Rocky Mountain News, Sept. 16, 1934, p. 1

Denver Post, June 25, 1937, p. 1

Rocky Mountain News, June 30, 1937, p. 5

Biography File

DONALD F. BROWN

Date: November 27, 1937

No. 2 B937 D5 E16 F122
MAS/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Donald F. Brown, born in Denver, Colorado, November 15, 1898; son of James B. and Mary (Lake) Brown.

James B. Brown, born in Newport, Rhode Island, son of James B., Sr. and ____ (Firth) Brown. In 1887, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he engaged in the insurance business 50 years, a part of which time he was an insurance adjuster and appraiser. He was a member of the Episcopal Church. He died in 1937, and is buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver. His wife, Mary (Lake) Brown, daughter of Irvin Lake, was born in Phillipsburg, New Jersey. She resides in Denver.

Donald F. Brown, attended the public schools of Denver. In 1917, he entered the U. S. Army for service in the World War. He served overseas with the 88th Division, and was honorably discharged in May 1919. In that year, he entered the security and bond business, later organizing the firm, Estee & Co., which he purchased in 1924, at which time he changed the name to Donald F. Brown & Co. The firm, which operates principally in Colorado, specializes in municipal bonds. Headquarters of the company are maintained in Denver. Mr. Brown is a Republican, and a member of the following: Investment Bankers Association of America; National Traders Association; Denver Country Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association and Episcopal Church. His hobbies are golf, hunting, and fishing.

In August 1924, Mr. Brown married Mrs. Janet (Mackintosh) Orr, daughter of Donald and Jessie Mackintosh, of Denver. Mrs. Brown, who is a graduate of Mt. Vernon Seminary (Washington, D. C.), is a member of the Presbyterian Church. She owns and operates 17 sheep ranches at Las Animas, Colorado. Her father, Donald Mackintosh, who was a rancher many years, died about 1919. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are the parents of 2 children: (1) Donald F., Jr., who was born in 1927. (2) Mackintosh, who was born in 1930. By a former marriage, Mrs. Brown was the mother of 1 child, Robert J. Orr, who was born in 1906. He was killed accidentally in 1922.

HENRY CORDES BROWN

Henry Cordes Brown, capitalist, born near St. Clairsville, Belmont county, Ohio, Nov. 18, 1820, died March 6, 1906, in San Diego, California, was the son of Samuel and Polly (Newkirk) Brown, and was descended from a patriotic and colonial New England family. His American ancestor was Nicholas, son of Edward and Jane (Lide) Brown of Inkberrow, (Iukbarrow), eight miles from Droitwich, Worcestershire, England. Nicholas was made a freeman at Lynn, Sept. 7, 1638, and a representative to the General Court in 1641, and in 1644, removed to Reading, Massachusetts, where he died Aug. 5, 1673. He was known as a public spirited man in the affairs of the town and colony. His son Cornelius Brown, resident of Reading, married, in 1665, Sarah, daughter of William (of Ipswich, who died Feb. 1, 1659) and Sarah Lampson. Their son, Samuel Brown, born Sept. 18, 1675, died 1722, a native of Reading, was a gentleman of high standing, who at the time of his death was wealthy for those days. His wife Mary, who died in 1778, took charge of the estate, which she successfully managed during a widowhood of more than fifty years. Elisha, their son, born Dec. 12, 1715, died 1756, married May 17, 1744, Elizabeth, born March 8, 1720, died Sept. 9, 1818, daughter of Simon and Hannah (Potter) Davis, a descendant of Dolor (1600-1673) and Margery (Willard) Davis. Elisha Brown moved to Cambridge in 1744, where he married Elizabeth Davis. To the wealth inherited from his father, he also added another fortune and died in Acton. They were the parents of four children: Hannah, Mary, Samuel and Elisha.

Samuel, their third child, who was the father of Henry C. Brown of Denver, was born Oct. 12, 1749, probably in Cambridge, but enlisted from Acton in the American Revolution, in which he held the rank of 2nd lieutenant, Capt. Patch's Company, Col. William Prescott's regiment. He participated in the engagements at Bunker Hill and Concord, and was at the siege of Boston. He was also in the Arnold expedition to Quebec, where he was wounded and taken prisoner, but paroled in Sept. 1776, and sent home. In 1800, when 51 years of age, Samuel Brown removed to St. Clairsville, Ohio, where he died in 1828, and was buried with military honors.

Henry C. Brown, through his grandmother Elizabeth (Davis) Brown, is also descended from old colonial stock. Her American ancestor, Dolor Davis, born in England in 1600, died in Barnstable, 1673, married in England, Margery, daughter of Maj. Simon Willard. Their son, Lieut. Simon Davis (1636-1673) married Mary, daughter of James Blood, and their son, Dr. Simon Davis, of Concord, born 1660, married Elizabeth, daughter of Henry and Eleanor (Hopkinson) Woodhouse. Their son, Simon Davis, of Concord, born Sept. 7, 1692, married, June 1, 1719, Hannah Potter (1690-1782), and they were the parents of Elizabeth (Davis) Brown. Through this line he is a descendant of Luke Potter (died 1697), who married in 1644, Mary, daughter of Walter Edmonds. Judah Potter, their son, and father of Hannah (Potter) Davis, married Grace, daughter of Captain Joshua and Hannah, born 1636, (Mason) Brooks. He was the son of Captain Thomas Brooks, and she the daughter of Captain Hugh and Esther Mason. In these ancestral lines, Henry Woodhouse, who died in Concord in 1700, was a representative to the General Court, in 1635, and 1690-92, and an officer in Phips expedition of 1690. Captain Hugh Mason, who died in Watertown, 1678, was among its first settlers, and was made a freeman in 1635; was a representative to the General Court ten terms; selectman twenty-five years; lieutenant, 1649; captain, 1652; commissioner, whose duty was to try small cases before days of a justice of the peace. Captain Mason at the age of 28 and his wife Esther, 22, came to Boston in the "Francis," from Ipswich county, Suffolk, England, April 1634. When in advanced years, he commanded his company in King Philip's War.

Samuel, the father of Henry C. Brown, married first, a daughter of Maj. Daniel Fletcher, a gallant officer in the American Revolution; second, Polly Newkirk, and of this last marriage, Henry C. was born, his mother dying when he was two years of age, and at seven he was left an orphan on his father's death.

Henry C. Brown was educated in the common schools, and at the Franklin Brooks Academy, St. Clairsville, remaining on a farm where he was apprenticed to a family named Carroll until 16. Later, learning the carpenters trade, as well as the business of an architect, he became an assistant to his brother, Isaac Brown, architect and builder, St. Louis, until 1852. He then crossed overland to California, driving an ox team, walking nearly all the way, making the journey in 110 days, to Hangtown, now Placerville, California. After a brief stop, he went to San Francisco, and a few weeks later to Portland, Ore. A month later going up the Columbia river, then crossing by land to the Willamette, thence to Olympia and Puget Sound country. There he formed a co-partnership with Roads and Peabody, and located and began the construction of a saw mill at the mouth of Whatcom river, emptying into Bellingham Bay, and for eight months engaged in the lumber business. Returning to San Francisco, he resumed the occupation of architect and builder, for three years, erecting some of the finest buildings of that period, including that of a bank, then the best structure in the city. Then going to Oroville and engaging in the building and the commission business, he accumulated $6,000 in six months. Returning to San Francisco again, he sailed in the clipper ship, "Golden Eagle," for Peru, South America, intending to go into business there. But his partner failing to arrive, he, after touring Lima and Calleo for 60 days, again sailed, taking voyage via Cape Horn for Hampton Roads, Va.; from there, visiting Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, he returned to St. Louis, Missouri May 3, 1858, after an absence of five years. He took passage a few days later up the Missouri river to Sioux City. Then removing to Decatur, Nebraska, remaining about two years, making investments and building a hotel. After heavy financial reverses, he removed to St. Joseph, Missouri, July 1, 1859.

Leaving the latter place during the year with his wife and one child (James H. Brown, now a leading Denver lawyer), and all of his worldly goods, and crossing the plains with an ox team, he arrived in Denver June 10, 1860. Again he became the architect, builder and carpenter. The first building he erected in this city, was a structure on Cherry Creek used by the M. E. congregation for a church until it was washed away by the flood of May 4, 1864. Two weeks before the flood he had removed to his pre-emption claim, taken up in 1863, a tract of land later known as Brown's addition to the City of Denver, which later became the fashionable residence section of the city. Ten acres out of the heart of this tract Mr. Brown donated for a building site, where now stands the magnificent Colorado State Capitol Building. This ten acre tract is now worth about a million dollars, and the original pre-emption claim, about $25,000,000. The Brown Palace Hotel, erected by Mr. Brown on this old tract, 1889-1892, cost more than $1,600,000. This handsome structure, built of granite, brown sandstone, and onyx, is nine stories high, and was completed in time for the Knight Templar Triennial Conclave, held for the first time in Denver, August, 1892. In 1873, he built the beautiful mansion later known as the "Tabor" residence, the finest in the city at that time.

In 1870 Mr. Brown became the owner of the Denver Tribune, which he sold in 1875, the paper being later absorbed by the Denver Republican. During his control of the Tribune, Mr. Brown was fearless in his editorial policy, denouncing wrongs as he saw them, whether emanating from those of either high or low degree. In this way he aroused opposition which caused him some trouble later, but with that grit and determination that always characterized his life, he triumphed over all obstacles. When Mr. Brown purchased the Tribune, it was a small paper, with poor equipment, and was published on a hand press. He erected a four storied building for the paper, corner of 16th and Market, and purchased modern machinery and type. The Tribune then started upon that brilliant career which later brought to its staff Eugene Field, Bill Nye, and other writers of national reputation. In the corner room of the first floor of his Tribune building, he and Mr. C. D. Gurley also established a bank.

Mr. Brown was a charter member of the old Board of Trade. He was also a member of the company organized to build the first railroad to Denver--the Denver Pacific, between Denver and Cheyenne; was associated with the interests that developed the present Denver City Tramway Company; assisted in establishing the Bank of Denver; and gave the first $1,000 to found the Denver City library.

The builder and promoter of great enterprises, a liberal patron to public and private institutions, Henry C. Brown stands among the foremost in Colorado history, and as an empire builder for the entire west. He had the honor of being a real Son of the Revolution, his father Samuel, often being known as "Bunker Hill" Brown. He took a deep interest in the work of the Sons of the Revolution, of which he was a member, and kindred organizations.

Henry C. Brown married first, Anna L., daughter of John Inskepp, in 1841, at St. Clairsville, Ohio. She died Jan. 5, 1854, leaving issue of this marriage two children: Anna M. (wife of Hubert R. Green, of Denver), born May 3, 1842; and, Benjamin F. Brown, born in Dec. 1843.

He married second, Aug. 3, 1858, in Decatur, Neb., Jane Cory, daughter of the Rev. James Thompson of Canandaigua, N. Y. They had three children: James Henry (q.v.) born in St. Joseph, Mo. Sept. 3, 1859; Carrie Marcia (wife of Robert T. Cassell), born July 18, 1868, in Denver, Colo.; and Sherman Thompson, born July 3, 1871 in Denver, and died Sept. 14, 1906.

Sketches of Colorado, pp. 177-178

MRS. MARY HOYT BROWN
Golden Civic Leader, Passes Away Sunday

Mary Hoyt Brown, an outstanding civic leader in Golden for the past half century in a wide variety of activities and wife of Norton H. Brown, 1607 Ford street, passed away Sunday morning, Feb. 3, at St. Anthony's hospital. She was taken there Christmas Eve for treatment of embolism and had been in a serious condition for several weeks.

Services were held Tuesday morning at Calvary Episcopal church at 11 o'clock under auspices of Woods Mortuary. Father David Mosher conducted the service. Internment was made in the family plot in Golden cemetery.

Born in Golden Dec. 28, 1882, Mary Hoyt Brown lived most of her life here, becoming an active, integral part of this community. She was the granddaughter of Judge and Mrs. J. M. Johnson, Sr., who came to Golden in 1859, three days after the Boston company arrived. Her mother, Ida Johnson, was six years old at that time. The Johnsons built a hotel shortly after coming here which was known as the Rocky Mountain House.

Mrs. Brown's father, Clarence Pattee Hoyt, came to Golden when he was 17 and joined the First Colorado Cavalry. Later he was interested in clay mining and cattle raising in this area and at one time was a United States Marshal. He served as warden at both Buena Vista and Canon City and became an outstanding authority on prison management.

After graduating from high school at Buena Vista, Mrs. Brown attended Lexington College, Lexington, Mo. To become a librarian she received training at Colorado A. and M. College and at Carnegie Library school, St. Louis.

During World War I, Mrs. Brown served as a nurse's aid at Camp Cody, Ariz., at the time of the 1918 influenza epidemic. Later she did nursing service in Golden.

In 1923 Mrs. Brown became librarian at the Colorado School of Mines and retired from this position in 1951. Her efforts in expanding this library were invaluable and she later was named Librarian Emeritus. At the last meeting of the Denver section of Mines Alumni association a resolution was introduced recommending that the Mines Alumni sections throughout the world be canvassed to determine their feeling toward naming the new Mines library for Mary Hoyt. Lt. Col. A. P. Nesbitt was named chairman to canvass the other sections.

Following her retirement as librarian at Mines, Mrs. Brown served as Petroleum Research librarian for the Rocky Mountain region from 1952-55. On May 21, 1955, she was united in marriage to Norton H. Brown of Golden.

Mrs. Brown's talents were many.

She was director of the Jefferson County Museum located in the Old County Courthouse and was influential in establishing it. She was executive secretary of the Jefferson County Relief Committee, 1932-32; member of the American Library Association and vice-president of the County Library Association 1927-29 and president in 1929-30; Chairman of the County Library Planning Commission 1936-37.

She belonged to the Society of American Archivists; Mt. Lookout chapter of D. A. R.; American Legion auxiliary of Taylor-Miller Post No. 2; National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs and of Golden B. P. W. club, serving as state vice-president, 1932-33, and president, 1934-36. In 1955 she was named Woman of the Year by the Golden club.

She was a founder of Calvary Band of the Girls' Friendly society and was vice-president of the national GFS organization in 1927. She was a member of Calvary Episcopal church for more than 70 years and sang in the choir for 60 years.

Mrs. Brown did several important bibliographies--Research Bibliography of Petroleum, Bibliography and Index of Mines, Mining Companies and Mills of Gilpin county, beginning with the discovery of gold in 1859 and Bibliography on Beryllium, the latter two appearing in Mines quarterlies.

From 1919-21, Mrs. Brown was secretary of the Jefferson County Red Cross Association. She was chairman of the United War Work Drive, vice-chairman of the Woman's Civil Defense council in World War II; chairman of the Red Cross blood donor service and Camp and Hospital council, chairman of the Jefferson County Women's War Finance committee.

Mrs. Brown was listed in Who's Who in American Education, Who's Who in Colorado and on the Pacific Coast.

Surviving Mrs. Brown are her husband, Norton H. Brown; a sister, Mrs. E. L. Larison, Missoula, Mont.; a brother, Maurice R. Hoyt, Anaconda, Mont.; a niece, Mrs. Russell E. Smith, whose husband is an attorney in Missoula; a nephew, Hoyt Larison, who is vice-president of the Columbia Paint company in Helena, Mont.; a grand-niece, Mrs. Daniel Zenk, of Germany, and a grand-nephew, son of the Hoyt Larisons.

Colorado Transcript, Golden, Colo., February 7, 1957, p. 1

MRS. MARY HOYT BROWN

She Loved Golden

By H. Fleet Parsons

Mary Hoyt Brown, who passed away Saturday after a comparatively short illness, has been one of Golden's most devoted and loyal citizens. I have known her, and worked with her on several projects, for considerably over fifty years. She was an organizer with much ability. As a member of the Golden Business and Professional Women she took an active part. Her work in organizing the library of the Colorado School of Mines has made it one of the most outstanding technical libraries in the country.

Gathering together the wreckage of the old original Jefferson County Museum and establishing it in the old Court House with the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Jefferson County Commissioners as co-sponsors, will always remain as a memorial to her ability as an organizer. From now on it should be called the Mary Hoyt Jefferson County Museum of pioneer history.

The many young women Mary Hoyt Brown has helped to train and secure permanent employment will never forget her kindness and words of encouragement. Mary loved Golden, and Golden loved Mary. We all join in extending to her husband, Norton Brown, our deepest sympathy and appreciation for the happiness he has brought to her during the last few years.

We also express our sympathy to her sister, Ruth, her brother Maurice, and all other members of this fine pioneer family.

Colorado Transcript, Golden, Colo., February 7, 1957, p. 2

DR. ARCHIE B. BRUSSE
Dr. Brusse's Estate Valued at $175,000

Dr. Archie B. Brusse, 70, Denver dentist who died last May 31, left an estate valued at more than $175,000, a probate petition presented to Denver County Judge David Brofman showed Wednesday.

Under terms of his will, Dr. Brusse left the bulk of his estate in trust to his wife, Dana, 620 St. Paul St.; a son, Martin, Littleton, and a daughter, Mrs. Cornelia Johnson, Seattle, Wash.

Dr. Brusse was graduated from the University of Denver dental school in 1912. He was one of the founders of the Rocky Mountain Society of Orthodontists in 1921.

Denver Post, June 24, 1959, p. 14

WILLIAM A. BRYANS (III)

Date: October 30, 1937

No. 2 B912 D5 E16 F106
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

William A. Bryans (III), son of William A. (II) and Vena (Allen) Bryans, born in Denver, Colorado, July 5, 1899.

William A. Bryans (II), son of William A. (I), was born in Pennsylvania. He attended the University of Michigan, and in 1890, together with his wife, moved to Colorado, settling at Aurora, where he served as attorney of Arapahoe County, and city attorney. He formerly served as assistant city attorney of Denver, Colorado, in which city he now resides with his wife, Vena (Allen) Bryans, who was born in Pennsylvania., daughter of Robert and Martha (Greenleaf) Allen.

William A. Bryans (III), attended public schools in Denver, Colorado, and graduated from the University of Denver School of Law, LL. B., in 1923. He began the practice of law in Ft. Collins, Colorado, in which city he still maintains an office. He now resides in Denver, Colorado, where he engages in legal practice, specializing in utility law. During the World War, he entered the U. S. Army, and was assigned to Company O, 3rd Battalion. He was stationed at Camp MacArthur, Waco, Texas, for the last 3 weeks of the war. Mr. Bryans is a director of the First National Bank, of Ft. Collins, Colorado, and formerly served as vice-president of the Larimer County (Colorado) Bar Association. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; B. P. O. E.; American Legion; Denver Athletic Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobbies are hunting, fishing, and riding.

In Oct. 1923, William A. Bryans (III) married Ruth Virginia Waldron, daughter of A. D. and Katherine (Philbin) Waldron, of Denver, Colorado. Mr. and Mrs. Bryans are the parents of 3 children: (1) William A. (IV), born April 13, 1927. (2) Richard Waldron, born May 19, 1931. (3) A child, born Oct. 23, 1937, who is as yet unnamed.

HON. FRANK BULKLEY
Head of Crested Butte Coal Companies
Dies Here of Heart Disease

Frank Bulkley widely known Colorado mine owner and operator, died yesterday afternoon at St. Luke's Hospital following a short illness of heart disease.

Mr. Bulkley was the father of Mrs. Harold Kountz, of Denver. Two sons, Ronald F. and Ralph G. Bulkley, also live here.

He was president of the Crested Butte Coal Co. and the Crested Butte Anthracite Mining Company, and held interests in other mining properties throughout the state.

Born in Washington, D. C., July 10, 1857, Mr. Bulkley was a descendant of Peter Bulkley, who founded Concord, Mass., in 1635.

He spent his early life in Michigan and attended various schools there. He came to Colorado when a young man, and won the degree of E. M. at the Colorado School of Mines.

For 16 years Mr. Bulkley was a trustee of the Colorado School of Mines, part of which time he was president of the Board of Directors. He was a member of the 5th Colorado General Assembly, and was also a former president of the Colorado Division, American Institute of Mining Engineers.

Mr. Bulkley was a member of the Denver Club, the Denver Country Club, Colorado Scientific Society, Denver Chamber of Commerce, and the National Geographic Society.

Besides his three children living here, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Joseph B. Blackburn, Detroit, and a sister, Mrs. James C. Wood, Cleveland, Ohio.

Funeral arrangements are in charge of the Rogers Mortuary.

The Denver News, March 26, 1928

HON. FRANK BULKLEY

During the years of his identification with the mining interests of Colorado, Mr. Bulkley has established a wide acquaintance among the men who are connected with this industry in the state and he has also gained a reputation for accuracy of judgment in all matters pertaining to this occupation. A resident of Aspen since 1888, he is especially interested in mines in this region, and has acted as general manager of the Chloride Mine. Bushwhacker Mining Company, Park Regent Mining Company, Mollie Gibson Consolidated Mining and Milling Company, and a number of smaller properties, and at this writing is manager of the Aspen Mining and Smelting Company. For some time he acted as general manager of the Grand River Coal and Coke Company of Garfield County, with headquarters in Glenwood Springs. He is connected with and interested in mines in Lake, Summit and Pitkin Counties, and together with others operates the Bulkley and New York mines in Summit County, which produce rich ore. The estimation in which he is held in mining circles is shown by the fact that he was selected to serve as a director of the Colorado School of Mines at Golden, and by re-appointment is serving his second term.

The progenitor of the Bulkley family in America was Peter Bulkley, who established the town of Concord, Conn., in 1636. Later representatives of the family took a prominent part in the nation's history. Some of the name took part in the Revolutionary war. Ex-Governor Bulkley, of Connecticut, was a member of one branch of the family. Judge G. T. Bulkley, our subject's grandfather, was born in Massachusetts and from there, in 1835, removed to Michigan. He had previously engaged in farm pursuits, but afterward engaged in merchandising and for some time acted as postmaster at Monroe, Mich., also as associate judge.

Gershom Bulkley, our subject's father, was born in Williamstown, Mass. For some time he was engaged in railroad building in Iowa, but later went to Michigan, where he continued in the railroading business. In politics he was a Democrat, though not an active one. He took an interest in Masonry, in which he attained several degrees. In 1891 he came to Colorado, where he died the following year. His wife, Fidelia, a native of New York, was a daughter of Asa T. Groendyoke, whose ancestors owned Staten Island at one time and were of Dutch extraction. He engaged in the mercantile business and in railroad building, and built the first railroad in Iowa west of the Mississippi River. Our subject has a brother and sister, and lost one sister when she was sixteen. His brother, Fred G., is engaged in mining in Leadville, where he is manager of the Ibex Mining Company; the sister is the wife of Dr. J. C. Wood, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Born in Washington, Iowa, July 10, 1857, our subject received his early education in the common schools and the University of Michigan. At twenty years of age he started out for himself, and for two years he followed civil engineering in Michigan. In 1879 he located in Leadville, Colo., where he was afterward connected with different mining properties, and from 1883 to 1888 acted as manager of the New Pittsburg Mining Company.

He became a prominent Democrat in Leadville, and while there, in 1884, was elected to the state legislature, being the only Democrat on the ticket who was elected. The majority which he received showed the high esteem in which he was held. Subsequently he was nominated for mayor of Leadville and also sheriff of Lake County. Owing to pressure of business duties he was obliged to decline these nominations. In 1888 he resigned his position as general manager of the New Pittsburg Mining Company, in order to accept inducements offered him to take charge of mining interests in Aspen.

In 1885 Mr. Bulkley married Miss Luella Bergstresser, daughter of Reuben Bergstresser, who was at one time a merchant in Illinois, but later engaged in mining in Leadville. To their union have been born four children: Louise, Ronald F., Ralph G. and Eleanor.

Portrait and Biographical Record of the State of Colorado

HON. FRANK BULKLEY

Death claimed Frank Bulkley, veteran mining engineer, coal operator and former member of the Colorado legislature, late Sunday at St. Luke's Hospital where he had been taken only a few days ago.

A heart seizure was the immediate cause of death.

Mr. Bulkley, 70 years old, had been a resident of Colorado since 1876 when he came to Leadville from Monroe, Wisconsin. He was prominently allied with early-day mining activities in Leadville and at Aspen until 1899, when he moved to Denver where he has since made his residence at 1065 Pennsylvania Street.

As Democratic Candidate from the Leadville district in 1884, Mr. Bulkley received the greatest majority of votes of any member of the 5th General Assembly - in addition to being the only man from his party in the legislature.

He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Colorado School of Mines for 16 years - from 1896 until 1912. During most of that time he was president of the body.

Associated with several of the biggest enterprises in Colorado, mining history, Mr. Bulkley's name belongs on a roster of famous engineers who have pioneered with the state and had a hand in its development. He was a member of numerous professional clubs and societies, having frequently been honored by the engineering fraternity.

Mr. Bulkley belonged to the Denver Club, and the Denver Country Club. He was a parishioner of St. John's Episcopal Church.

For years he had followed his profession only in an advisory capacity, but had retained his interests in the Crested Butte Coal Company and was active in its management until the sudden illness caused his removal to the hospital recently.

Mr. Bulkley is survived by two sons, Ronald and Ralph, both of Denver, and by two daughters, Mrs. Harold Kountz, Denver, and Mrs. Joseph Blackburn of Detroit, Michigan, and a sister, Mrs. J. C. Wood, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Rogers Mortuary at a time to be announced later.

Denver Post, March 26, 1928

MRS. RUTH SCOLLARD BULKLEY

On grounds of mental cruelty, Mrs. Ruth Scollard Bulkley, Denver socialite, was granted an interlocutory divorce from Ralph G. Bulkley, widely known investment broker, in the district court Friday by Judge Floyd P. Miles.

She testified her husband nagged and humiliated her and refrained from speaking to her for days. She also said they quarreled frequently with the result she became extremely nervous.

Just before the hearing opened, Bulkley withdrew an answer in which he had denied the cruelty charge.

The couple were married Jan. 17, 1922, in Dallas, Tex. and have a son Ralph G. Jr., 15. They long have been prominent in Denver society. Bulkley is a past president of the Denver Country club.

Under a property settlement reached out of court, Mrs. Bulkley will receive $150 monthly as alimony and will have the right to occupy the family home at 717 Emerson street until it is rented or sold. She also was given an automobile and other personal property and the title to certain real estate in Arapahoe county. In addition, Bulkley agreed to pay the cost of educating his son, certain family bills already incurred and premiums on insurance policies in which his wife is named beneficiary.

No order was entered by the court concerning custody of the couple's son. Attorneys said an agreement as to his custody had been made out of court.

Newspaper clipping, June 5, 1941

DONALD V. BURCH

$198,506 Claim on Estate Settled for $22,500 Here

County Judge David Brofman Thursday approved settlement of a $198,506 claim in the estate of Donald V. Burch, 47, Denver businessman, for $22,500.

The large claim was filed by Mrs. Norma L. Ward of Seattle, wife and administrator of the estate of Clark D. Ward, 32, of Seattle.

Ward was a passenger in a plane piloted by Burch June 24, 1954 when it collided in mid-air with another in which Harry E. Hightchew, 28, of Seattle was a passenger. It was piloted by John T. Benedict, chief pilot instructor of the Puget Sound Air Service Inc.

Hightchew was receiving instruction from Benedict at the time of the crash. Hightchew was the only survivor of the crash.

Burch left an estate valued at $100,000, according to County Court records.

A claim of $116,100 filed against Burch's estate by Mrs. Marjorie K. Benedict, wife of Benedict, was withdrawn.

Also withdrawn was another claim by Puget Sound Air Service Inc. for $1800.

Hightchew has filed a claim against Burch's estate for $76,100. He also has a suit pending in District Court against Burch's wife, Mrs. Alice V. Burch, and his estate for this amount.

Rocky Mountain News, September 9, 1955, p. 89

WILLIAM KENDAL BURCHINELL

William Kendal Burchinell is the highly capable and obliging secretary of the board of capitol managers for the state of Colorado. Mr. Burchinell is a native of Pennsylvania, born October 12, 1846, at Huntington, a son of Thomas and Anne Maria (Wilson) Burchinell, both of whom were natives of Maryland. The ancestors came from England in 1641, with Lord Baltimore and took an active part in the Revolutionary struggle.

William K. Burchinell obtained his education at Hollidaysburg Academy and in 1862 enlisted as a member of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania cavalry under Colonel Palmer. He served three years as a brave soldier in the Union cause, participating in the battle of Stone River, Chickamauga, the campaigns in front of Atlanta and Nashville. After being mustered out of service, Mr. Burchinell remained in the South until 1866, then returned and engaged in the planing mill business, with his father. Since 1898 he has been largely identified in mining operations in Colorado and Mexico.

He was an active politician and in 1873 was elected a member of the state legislature, serving during the session of 1873-4. In the month of February, 1875, he went to Colorado, as the receiver of the land office at Fairplay, having received his appointment by President U. S. Grant. He was re-appointed in 1879, when the offices were moved to Leadville. He was appointed by President Hayes a second time, serving in all, eight years. After retiring from his land office duties, he went to Denver and there engaged in the manufacturing business, becoming president of the Denver Machinery Company. In the autumn of 1891, he was elected sheriff of Arapahoe county and re-elected in 1893. He served faithfully and well for two terms and was appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the death of his successor--Sheriff Webb. He was serving as sheriff at the time of Governor Waite's memorable "War on the City Hall," and experienced the stormiest period known by any incumbent of that office. In February, 1906, he was appointed secretary of the board of capitol managers, which position he is still holding.

Mr. Burchinell is a member of the Masonic order, belonging to the A. F. & A. M. blue lodge No. 84, at Denver, Colorado Commandery No. 25, Denver Consistory and El Jebel Temple of the Mystic Shrine. Politically, it almost goes without saying, that Mr. Burchinell is a firm supporter of the principles of the Republican party, in both state and National affairs. As a citizen of influence and fidelity, Mr. Burchinell is well known and numbers his friends by the legion.

He was united in marriage in 1872 to Mant Cunningham, of Huntington, Pennsylvania, and they have one daughter, Anne, who is the wife of J. Grafton O'Bryan.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, pp. 238-239

HON. JAMES C. BURGER

Hon. James C. Burger of Denver, is one of the large men of the west who has had the wisdom and ability to get in touch with the agricultural and mining interests of the earth as well as financial and industrial interests. Not even content with this breadth of action he has attained high standing as a Republican leader and was the congressional nominee of his party in November, 1908. At present he is president of the Union Deposit and Trust Company which is the oldest financial concern in the city of Denver, having been organized in 1874.

Mr. Burger is a native of New York City, born November 24, 1866, son of James and Elizabeth (Nichol) Burger. The mother was of Scottish lineage and the father of substantial Dutch stock, the paternal ancestor having settled in New York about 1650 and became prominently identified with the metropolis and the state. James Burger, the father, was long engaged in the importation of teas, coffees and spices and was one of the representative New York merchants in these lines.

James C. Burger completed his education at Trinity school, New York, after which he became connected with a wholesale fruit house. In 1884, after mastering telegraphy, he entered the employ of a New York brokerage firm as an operator, but after making a close study of this business removed to Boston, Massachusetts. From 1889 until 1893 he conducted a brokerage business himself in that city, removing in the latter year to Denver, where he became the manager for the Morgan Brokerage Company. In 1897 he severed his connection with that firm and since that year has become largely interested in mining and farming enterprises. He has also been one of the promoters of the Lacombe Electric Light Company, of which he is now serving as vice president.

Since coming to Denver Mr. Burger has been active in the local and state campaigns of the Republican party. His valuable services in this regard as well as his high personal standing were the means of electing him to the state senate in 1905. He stood as the regular Republican nominee representing the First senatorial district and was honored by heading his party ticket with the largest vote cast for any member of it. As a legislator he served as chairman of the committee on state institutions and was appointed by the senate to attend to such duties even when the legislature was not in session. In this capacity he introduced a bill providing for a school for the unfortunate blind, which through his well considered management was enacted into a law. In all his senatorial career he kept faithfully in mind the wishes, not only of his immediate constituents but the welfare of the general public.

In Masonry Mr. Burger is connected with the blue lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Ancient York Lodge No. 89, of Nashua, New Hampshire; Royal Arch Chapter No. 1, of Denver; Denver Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar; Scottish Rite; El Jebel Temple, Mystic Shrine. For a number of years he has been a director and official in El Jebel Temple, being chairman of both its finance and house committees. In social circles he is known as president of the Denver Athletic Club, having been an active member of this organization for a number of years; as vice president of the Colorado County Club; an honorary life member of the Denver Press Club; and a director of the Denver Traffic Club.

In 1889 Mr. Burger was married in New York City to Miss Edith M. Brown, daughter of Robert Brown of Staten Island, New York. His wife is an accomplished lady and represents one of the old and prominent families of the Empire state.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 366

DR. CHARLES H. BURGIN

Dr. Charles H. Burgin, a leading physician of Delta, is a native of Bethany, Missouri, born on the 25th day of September, 1861, and is a son of Dr. Flanery N. and Mary J. (Winningham) Burgin, respectively born in Virginia and Missouri. His father was a physician and surgeon of long and active practice in Missouri and Kansas, and died in 1900. The son received his preliminary education in the public school of Loring and the high school of Lionville, Iowa, and pursued his professional studies at the St. Louis Medical College, from which he graduated May 10, 1898.

In the year of his graduation, Dr. Burgin commenced practice at Bethany, Missouri, where he remained until 1903, during that period conducting a substantial private practice and (for two years) serving as pension examiner. In the year mentioned he located at Delta, where he has since been both an active private practitioner and public official. In 1904 and in 1906 he was elected coroner on the Democratic ticket for two-year terms, being re-elected in 1908; has served as city health officer since 1904 and has been a member of the aldermanic board since 1907. His connection with professional organizations embraces the Delta County Medical Society, Colorado State Medical Society and the National Eclectic Medical Association. As a fraternalist, he is a member of Bethany Lodge No. 90, Missouri, A. F. & A. M., also of Delta Chapter No. 38, R. A. M., the K. of P., W. O. W. and Yeomen.

On September 14, 1882, Dr. Burgin married Miss Parallee G. Hopkins, daughter of James and Lydia E. Hopkins, of Bethany, Missouri, and the following children have been born to the union: James F., M. D., born July 11, 1883, an '08 graduate of the E. M. and I. Medical College, of Cincinnati, and a member of the Eclectic Philimaton Medical Society, as well as of the K. of P., now associated with his father in practice; the other children are Ernest W., Samuel Steele and Eva Burgin.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 242

MRS. SUSANNE PRICE FISH BURGOYNE

Very Much a Lady

Belle, 105, Relives Glorious Days of Past

By DOROTHEA LIMBERG

A world that is no more exists as glowing reality in the memory and fantasy of a gay and wizened little woman at Harbor Nursing home in Poulsbo.

Mrs. Suzanne Price Fish Burgoyne at 105 is as outdated as the fragile china doll of her coloring and delicate stature and her elegant manners.

Her world returns like tiny colored fragments in a kaleidoscope tumbled through 105 years of life and death, gaiety and sorrow, fortune and disaster, triggered by a memory that shuts out the present.

It is a world of a booming Colorado mining town, of a mansion on a hill, of San Diego before the turn of the century, of old San Francisco, of glittering balls and claret-velvet ball gowns, of petticoats and bustles, long white gloves and lace bonnets.

MRS. BURGOYNE is bedridden and almost alone in the world. She reads The Sun's front page daily. Her fragile arms make it impossible for her to hold open the paper and read the inside. She understands some of what she reads and sometimes talks about the news with her friends and nurses. But her crowded memory has little room for the present.

She is what she remembers.

"My father was very rich. His name was Thomas Price."

She was the beautiful dark-eyed daughter of a wealthy mine-owner, the darling of the old west town of Georgetown, Colo., where she was born at 5 a. m. on New Year's morning, 1854. Her father brought his bride from England to the rich mountains of Colorado before the great gold discoveries of 1859 and 1860. There they had two daughters, Suzanne, the eldest, and Emma.

"My husband was an eastern gentleman. I was 16, then."

To her town, sometime before 1870, came a debonnaire gentleman from Bangor, Maine, a miner with an education as an engineer. John Alonzo Fish was more than twice the age of Georgetown's belle, Suzanne Price, but he was cultured and elegant and soon became wealthy. He courted her with sonnets and waltzes, at balls and carriage rides and won her.

"The reception was one of the finest ever given in Georgetown . . . Mrs. J. A. Fish wore a cream colored nun's veiling with lace overskirt and diamonds. Her residence was brilliantly lighted and nothing was lacking in the arrangement to contribute to the enjoyment of the evening . . ." said The Georgetown Courier in 1875.

He built her a mansion on the side of the mountain. They topped Colorado social circles in the days of the boom. They traveled around the country, once attending a presidential ball. She recalls entertaining young soldiers away from home during one of the nation's wars. She had one son, Clarence, a child pictured in an old tintype among her mementos in long white lace frock standing before velvet drapes and massive fireplace.

"San Diego was my home, and San Francisco."

They moved into San Diego society before 1893. Then Mr. Fish died, but as a young wealthy widow, she continued to travel and mingle in social circles in Pacific coast cities from San Diego to Seattle.

Here her memory stops. There is no niche for her marriage to Mr. Burgoyne, for her life in San Francisco after the earthquake of 1906, for her second husband's death.

"She came to Suquamish in the early 1930s, still a beautiful delicate creature--slim as a willow in elegant clothes and with perfect manners. Still a belle," Mrs. Edwin Lund, a close Suquamish friend, said.

Mrs. Burgoyne moved into a cottage on the hill in Suquamish built as a summer home for her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsey McDonald of Seattle.

From there in a small diary she recorded her heartbreak at the death of her only son in 1934. She then had only two grandsons and a sister. Her sister died in 1940 and one grandson died as a youngster. The other was in the navy.

"She wasn't alone, though. There were so many friends. She loves people," Mrs. Walter Wilkins, a neighbor in Suquamish, said.

"Mrs. Burgoyne is a lady, a real lady. She used to come to call for tea, dressed formally in a hat and white gloves. At her house her silver, her table, everything had to be just right," Mrs. Wilkins explained.

When she was 96 she fell and lay helpless for some time before Mrs. Lund rushed her to a Bremerton doctor. Broken bones were set and healed, but she was bedridden and never returned home. She entered a nursing home in 1952.

She stays forever young, even now rolling up her hair by herself every night and never, never washing her face with water, using cream to cleanse the delicate and perfect complexion, marred only by wrinkles she doesn't see, and time which she won't acknowledge.

Newspaper article: "The Sun," 1959

ERNEST BURKHARDT

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B880 D5 E16 F46
WET/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Ernest Burkhardt, President
E. Burkhardt & Sons, Steel & Iron Works Company, Inc.,
869 South Broadway, Denver, Colorado

Ernest Burkhardt*, born in Thuringia, Germany, July 4, 1859; son of Louis and Lena (Bernhardt) Burkhardt.

Louis Burkhardt, born in Thuringia, Germany. His parents were natives of Thuringia. His father, Louis Burkhardt, Sr., engaged in the shoemaking trade in Hirschberg, Germany, in which city he died. Louis Burkhardt, after learning the shoemaking trade under his father's instruction, moved to Berlin, Germany, where he remained 6 years, at the end of which time he returned to Thuringia, and was declared a master of his trade. Following his marriage, he then established his own shoemaking business, which he operated the remainder of his life. He was a custom shoemaker and also did shoe repairing. He died in Germany in 1897. His wife, Lena (Bernhardt) Burkhardt, a native of Thuringia, Germany, died in Germany in 1898. Her parents, Henry and Mary (Oberlander) Bernhardt, also natives of Thuringia, died in Germany. Henry Bernhardt was a shoemaker in Hirschberg, Germany.

Ernest Burkhardt, attended school in Hirschberg, Germany, after which he was an apprentice in Hof, Germany, 4 years, learning the artsmith's and locksmith's trade. He then worked in various places in Germany 6 or 8 months, following which he practiced his trade in Dusseldorf, the art center of Germany, 2 years. In April 1881, he embarked for America, and, after a 12-day voyage, landed in New York, May 6, 1881. He then joined his brother in Detroit, Michigan, and became employed in a safe works.

In October 1881, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he was first employed in work on the Tabor Opera House. Mr. Burkhardt made the first wrought-iron fence and the first piece of ornamental iron work in the city, and in 1888 made the present gates of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1889, he established and became president of the Artistic Iron Works, and in the early 1890's changed the name of the company to E. Burkhardt & Sons, Steel & Iron Works Co., Inc., of which he since has been president. This company, which employs 60 to 75 men, manufactures structural steel for buildings and bridges, and ornamental steel for houses. The 12 and a half acres of land, on which the plant is located, was purchased in 1917. Mr. Burkhardt took out his first naturalization papers in 1885, and his last papers in 1896.

He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Steuben Society of America; Denver Turnverein; Harnhari Lodge; Sons of Herman Lodge; German Club; Arion Singing Society; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Lutheran Church. Mr. Burkhardt, whose hobby is traveling, has made 6 trips to Europe. He owns 2 chicken ranches, and is interested in the cultivation of trees and flowers, many varieties of which he has around his house.

In 1882, Ernest Burkhardt married Clara Wagner, who was born in Prussia, Germany, April 25, 1859. Mrs. Burkhardt came to America in 1878. Her parents, John and Christine Wagner, were born in Prussia, where they died. John Wagner was proprietor of a hotel, and later moved to a farm. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Burkhardt: (1) Lena, who resides in Denver, Colorado, with her husband, Alvin Baumgartel. They are the parents of 1 child, Alvin, Jr. (2) Ernest, who is deceased. (3) Louis, who is deceased. (4) Herman, who resides in Denver, with his wife, Dian Burkhardt. (5) Otto, who resides in Denver, with his wife, Mary (Halbekann) Burkhardt. They are the parents of 2 children: William, and Alfred. (6) Harry Alton**, who resides in Denver, with his wife, Emelia (Halbekann) Burkhardt. They are the parents of 2 children: Dorothy Mae, and Richard Harry.

* For further data regarding Ernest Burkhardt, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Lindermann Co., Inc., Publishers, Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 681.

** See sketch of Harry Alton Burkhardt in the Citizens Historical Association files.

HARRY ALTON BURKHARDT

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B880 D5 E16 F45
WET/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Harry Alton Burkhardt, Vice-President and General Superintendent,
E. Burkhardt & Sons, Steel & Iron Works Company, Inc.,
869 South Broadway, Denver, Colorado

Harry Alton Burkhardt, son of Ernest and Clara (Wagner) Burkhardt; born in Denver, Colorado, Jan. 20, 1893.

Ernest Burkhardt*, son of Louis and Lena (Bernhardt) Burkhardt, was born in Thuringia, Germany, July 4, 1859. He attended school in Hirschberg, Germany, after which he was an apprentice in Hof, Germany, 4 years, learning the artsmith's and locksmith's trade. He then worked in various places in Germany 6 or 8 months, following which he practiced his trade in Dusseldorf, the art center of Germany, 2 years. In April 1881, he embarked for America, and, after a 12-day voyage, landed in New York, May 6, 1881. He then joined his brother in Detroit, Michigan, and became employed in a safe works. In October 1881, he moved to Denver, Colo., where he was first employed in work on the Tabor Opera House. Mr. Burkhardt made the first wrought-iron fence and the first piece of ornamental iron work in the city, and in 1888 made the present gates of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1889, he established and became president of the Artistic Iron Works, and in the early 1890's changed the name of the company to E. Burkhardt & Sons, Steel & Iron Works Co., Inc., of which he since has been president. This company, which employs 60 to 75 men, manufactures structural steel for buildings and bridges, and ornamental steel for houses. The 12 and a half acres of land, on which the plant is located, was purchased in 1917.

Mr. Burkhardt took out his first naturalization papers in 1885, and his last papers in 1896. He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Steuben Society of America; Denver Turnverein; Harngari Lodge; Sons of Herman Lodge; German Club; Arion Singing Society; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Lutheran Church. Mr. Burkhardt, whose hobby is traveling, has made 6 trips to Europe. He owns 2 chicken ranches, and is interested in the cultivation of trees and flowers, many varieties of which he has around his house. His wife, Clara (Wagner) Burkhardt, whom he married in 1882, was born in Prussia, Germany, April 25, 1859. Mrs. Burkhardt came to America in 1879. Her parents, John and Christine Wagner, were born in Prussia, where they died. John Wagner was proprietor of a hotel, and later moved to a farm. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Burkhardt: (1) Lena, who resides in Denver, Colo., with her husband, Alvin Baumgartel. They are the parents of 1 child, Alvin, Jr. (2) Ernest, who is deceased. (3) Louis, who is deceased. (4) Herman, who resides in Denver, with his wife, Dian Burkhardt. (5) Otto, who resides in Denver, with his wife, Mary (Halbekann) Burkhardt. They are the parents of 2 children: William, and Alfred. (6) Harry Alton.

Louis Burkhardt, father of Ernest, was born in Thuringia, Germany. His parents were natives of Thuringia. His father, Louis Burkhardt, Sr., engaged in the shoemaking trade in Hirschberg, Germany, in which city he died. Louis Burkhardt, after learning the shoemaking trade under his father's instruction, moved to Berlin, Germany, where he remained 6 years, at the end of which time he returned to Thuringia, and was declared a master of his trade. Following his marriage, he then established his own shoemaking business, which he operated the remainder of his life. He was a custom shoemaker and also did shoe repairing. He died in Germany in 1897. His wife, Lena (Bernhardt) Burkhardt, a native of Thuringia, Germany, died in Germany in 1898. Her parents, Henry and Mary (Oberlander) Bernhardt, also natives of Thuringia, died in Germany. Henry Bernhardt was a shoemaker in Hirschberg, Germany.

Harry Alton Burkhardt, attended grade and high schools in Denver, Colorado, until 1913, after which he assisted his father with the shop work and in the erection of buildings, 5 or 6 years, since which time he has been general superintendent of E. Burkhardt & Sons, Steel & Iron Works Co., Inc. He has also been vice-president of the company since 1933. Mr. Burkhardt, who is independent in politics, is a member of the following: Motor Club of Colorado; Denver Athletic Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobbies are motoring, and traveling.

In 1917, Harry Alton Burkhardt married Emelia Halbekann, who was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, daughter of Joseph and Alvina Halbekann. Mr. and Mrs. Burkhardt are the parents of 2 children: (1) Dorothy Mae. (2) Richard Harry.

*See sketch of Ernest Burkhardt in the Citizens Historical Association files.

WILLIAM H. BURKHARDT

William H. Burkhardt, Well Known Resident, 90 Years Old Friday

By WILLIAM NELSON

William H. Burkhardt, on whose horse-drawn express wagon youngsters of the community sought rides for nearly half a century, will celebrate his 90th birthday anniversary tomorrow.

Many of Grand Junction's fathers and mothers of today remember when they ran after Mr. Burkhardt's wagon and jumped on the back steps to ride a block or two as he traveled about the city hauling trunks, suitcases, and innumerable other articles for residents of the city. The lads and lassies would often clamber up on the seat beside genial Mr. Burkhardt for a chat. He delights in telling about the rides.

Mr. Burkhardt resides at the Morrison convalescent home, 1044 Ute avenue, where he will celebrate his anniversary tomorrow. He sustained a hip fracture in a fall March 3 of last year and has resided at the home since that time.

Coming to Grand Junction in 1898, Mr. Burkhardt was employed as a brakeman on the Rio Grande railroad for two years. Mrs. Burkhardt died in April, 1900, and he decided to start an express wagon so that he could be at home to care for his children. He operated the wagon until several years ago when he retired from general work; but he continued hauling The Daily Sentinels each afternoon from this newspaper office to the post office until two years ago when he sold the horse and wagon.

Mr. Burkhardt's stand was on the Fourth and Main street corner for many years, but he later moved to the lot now occupied by Safeway store at Fourth and Rood. He started with a wagon with wide rim wheels when most of the streets were not surfaced, later changing to the wagon he used in recent years.

Always on time at The Daily Sentinel office, Mr. Burkhardt conscientiously handled the papers on the first step of their mail journey to destinations all over the nation.

Mr. Burkhardt was born Jan. 30, 1858, at Bethlehem, Pa.

A daughter, Mrs. Mary Foster, and a granddaughter, Ruth Marie Foster, reside at 538 North Fifth; a son, Wenzel, resides in Los Angeles, and another daughter, Mrs. Rose Anna McGrady, lives at Portland, Ore.

Altho his hearing has failed, Mr. Burkhardt is alert and reads a great deal.

Grand Junction Daily Sentinel, January 29, 1947

NORMAN G. BURNHAM M. D.

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Norman G. Burnham
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full Name: Norman Griswold Burnham, born at Berlin, Erie County, Ohio, Sept. 30, 1829

Name of father: Ellsworth Burnham, a native of Hebron, Connecticut

Name of mother: Maria Walker Burnham, a native of Vernost, Connecticut Attended school or college: Norwalk Academy, Ohio, Medina University, Medical E. M.

College Cincinnati, Cleveland Homer Medical College

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: American Medical Institute. Elected Honorary President, July Session 1912, Denver, Colorado

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: October 9, 1879

Married: Yes, at Medina, Ohio, May 7, 1861

Name of wife: Mary K. Treat Burnham, a daughter of Adna A. Treat and Jane Reiley Treat

Names of children and years of birth: Arthur T., born February 29, 1864; Marian G., born April 18, 1867; Florence J., born February 23, 1870; Norman G., born May 3, 1873

Avocation: Physician and Surgeon

Give dates: Graduation 1851 and 1854

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Charter member of the Colorado Humane Society.

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: After graduation was connected with a sanitarium two years in Northern Ohio. Was in active practice for nearly twelve years in Indianapolis, Indiana. Have been in active practice of my profession in Denver for 35 years -
Two and one half years on the Staff of the County Hospital. For one year president of a State Medical Society. Charter member of the Colorado Humane Society.

See Denver Post, July 20, 1919, p. 4, Section 1

Please give autograph signature.

(signed) Norman G. Burnham M. D.

Biography File

HIRAM BURTON

Name of Pioneer; Hiram Burton, born May 15, 1829 at Sand Lake near Albany, New York; died June 29, 1873 at Denver, Colorado; son of James Burton and Elizabeth Payne.

The dates of birth, marriage, death and place of residence of his parents and grand-parents were:

Father's name: James Burton, born Oct 26, 1792, at East Greenbush, New York; died August 25, 1861. Resided at East Greenbush, New York.

Mother's name: Elizabeth Payne, born January 6, 1798; died September 16, 1894 at Albany, New York.

Hiram Burton married Alida Boyd, born April 25, 1849 at Albany, New York; died June 29, 1873 at Denver Colorado. Hiram Burton lived at Albany, New York until 1852 when he settled in Chicago, moved to Denver, Arapahoe County, Colorado in 1860. Occupation or profession: He was a merchant. Education, membership in church, lodges or organizations: Bryant's Business College, Chicago; Dutch-Reform, Albany; Methodist Episcopal Church, Denver. His reasons for moving west, method of transportation and travel routes: To better condition, traveled from Chicago train, buckboard - Express, followed Coach trails. Conditions of the times: West booming and progressive.

Her parents and grand-parents were:

Father: Jesse Condi Boyd, born June 5, 1803 at Schenectady, New York; died June 6, 1891 at Montague, Michigan; buried Graceland Cemetery, Chicago, Illinois. He married Elsie Noble, on January 15, 1824 at Johnsburgh, New York. She was born January 8, 1805 at Nauhern, New York; died July 12, 1872 at Chicago. Jesse C. Boyd moved to Albany, New York in 1831 and to Chicago, Illinois in 1849.

Jesse Condi's father was James Boyd; his mother was Alida Condi.

Descendants of Hiram Burton and Alida Boyd:

Their oldest child: Elsie Noble, born January 7, 1852 at Albany, New York; married April 25, 1872 at Denver, Colorado to Herman Keeney Mund, residence, Denver, Colo. They had no children.

Their second child: Smith Payne, born September 16, 1853 at Albany, New York; died August 27, 1856 at Chicago, Illinois.

Their third child: Florence Burton, born November 11, 1857 at Chicago, Illinois; residence, Denver, Colo.

Their fourth child: Herbert Leslie Burton, born November 28, 1864 at Denver, Colorado; died December 15, 1935 at Denver, Colorado

Brothers and sisters (6 children in the family) of Hiram Burton

Hiram Burton, born 1829, married to Alida Boyd, resided in Denver, Colo.

Lavinia, born 1817, married James Martin, resided at Albany, New York

Elizabeth, born 1819, married Prof. Allen, resided at Albany, New York

Reuben, born 1821, resided at Albany, New York

Smith Payne, born 1824, married Lilla Abbott, resided at Boston, Mass.

Walter, born 1833, married Aunt Camilia, resided at Albany, New York

Brothers and sisters (12 children in the family) of Alida Burton

Alida Boyd Burton, resided at Denver, Colorado

Mary Boyd Ferris, resided at Albany, New York

Margaret Boyd Easton, resided at Albany, New York

Edward Noble Boyd, resided at Cambridge, New York

John Boyd

William Boyd

David Boyd

James Boyd, New York City

Robert Boyd, Chicago

Charles Lansing Boyd, Chicago

Twin daughters who died young

Information provided by Miss Florence Burton, 1230 Humboldt Street, Denver, Colo.

Compiled by Adelaide A. French, 460 Lafayette St.

WILLIAM H. BUSH

Leading Hotel Man's Life Ends Just Before Midnight.

One of Colorado's Best Known Men Who Helped to Build the State.

Strong Constitution Gave Signs of Withstanding the Shock of the Operation for Appendicitis, but an Unfortunate Act Changed the Conditions.

William H. Bush, the well known hotel man, died at St. Anthony's hospital at 11:45 o'clock last night.

Earlier in the evening it was reported in the corridors of the principal hotels of the city that Mr. Bush was rapidly sinking, and had but a few hours to live. During the day rumors were abroad which gave the impression that the naturally strong constitution of the sufferer would not long withstand the strain. Many expressions of regret were heard, and in business circles it was acknowledged that the loss of W. H. Bush to Colorado could hardly be replaced. Two weeks ago last Friday evening he was suddenly taken with severe pains which confined him to his bed at the Brown hotel. Drs. Leonard Freeman and E. F. Hershey were called, and upon their advice the patient was removed the following morning to St. Anthony's hospital, where an operation for appendicitis was performed at 3 p. m. of the same day. The disease developed with such alarming rapidity that the physicians agreed an immediate operation was imperative. For several hours after the operation the patient hovered between life and death, but his strength gradually returned, and up to last Saturday the physicians and faithful attendants at the hospital had every hope of complete recovery.

Unfortunately for the patient the nurse was absent from the room for a few moments last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Bush was naturally of a highly nervous temperament, and the long restraint fretted him considerably. He attempted to leave the bed, and in the effort the wound was reopened and a new set of troubles commenced. His constitution showed signs of weakening Sunday, and kidney disturbances, threatened fatal results. Dr. Hershey was almost constantly at the side of the patient during all the period of his illness, and extended every possible assistance that could be derived from medicine and careful attention. The stomach at last became involved, and yesterday the strength of the patient was sustained only by injections. In the morning Mr. Bush was somewhat stronger than on the preceding day, but last night his system slowly yielded under the strain of many hours, showing a gradual sinking until the end.

Retained Consciousness.

During the main part of the time, after he was taken down, the patient retained consciousness, and his brain was in normal condition. He conversed with friends who called, and recognized his brother James, who had been unremitting in his attention. James was at the bedside all day, and was in attendance last night at the end. It was evident as the evening passed that the patient would die from degeneration of the vessels of the brain incident upon a general decline of the entire system.

Man of Wonderful Energy.

Mr. Bush has been known throughout Colorado as one of the most enterprising and energetic men of business the state has ever known. He was entirely successful in the hotel field, and was foremost in many of the largest business movements started in the state. He has made several fortunes, and invested hundreds of thousands of dollars, both of his own money and of capital of England and the East in large enterprises. His advice, followed by other men, has in scores of instances yielded highly profitable returns. The Brown Palace hotel, one of the best conducted hotels of the continent, owes its success mainly to the indefatigable perseverance and industry of Mr. Bush. The many expressions of sympathy which were heard last evening indicate the high esteem in which he was held.

William H. Bush was born in Rose county, Ohio, January 14, 1841. His education was obtained in the public schools of the county, where he lived until he was 18. In 1864 he went to Leavenworth, Kan., and in 1867 to Fort Wallace. His entry to Colorado was in 1871, when he moved to Central City and opened the Teller house and engaged in mining. For seven years he conducted the hostelry which was one of the best known in the West. The Leadville rush carried him to that camp, where, in 1879, in company with Senator H. A. W. Tabor, he built the Clarendon hotel on Harrison avenue. After two years of managing he moved to Denver, where he took up his permanent residence. For several years he was connected with the management of the Windsor Hotel, and afterwards was one of the proprietors of the Metropole. The Metropole hotel and the Broadway theater were erected under his guidance, and he was largely interested in both. In conjunction with N. M. Tabor he took charge of the Brown Palace in 1892, and was active in the management of the affairs of that hotel up to the hour of his last illness.

Family Lives in London.

Mr. Bush was twice married, his second wife being in London, England, where she is confined by illness, at the present time. A married daughter by the second wife of Mr. Bush also lives in London. Mr. Bush spent half of his lifetime in Colorado, and was well known in all parts of the state. He engaged at different times in mining enterprises, but his main successes were in the hotel field. The Windsor hotel, under his management, reached such a degree of popularity that the hotel for a time paid dividends of $100,000 a year. The Brown, which he managed since the house was opened, has gained a national reputation and is regarded as one of the most creditable business enterprises ever started in Denver. It has attracted to the city a class of travel which would seldom come to Denver were it not for the magnificent hostelry, a monument to the genius and business ability of the best hotel manager Denver has ever known. Mr. Bush possessed many sterling qualities, which made him greatly liked by those who were in his service. He never failed to recognize honesty and ability in an employe and he was always kind and generous to the hotel force. He believed in retaining employes who proved themselves capable and willing to work for the interest of the house, and his kind expressions to employes will not soon be forgotten by those who were for years associated with him in the hotel business. Mr. Bush was frequently consulted by business friends as to enterprises which they were considering, and his service, if followed, generally led to success.

His labors in connection with the proposed international mining convention, which was to be held in Denver, will be remembered by many who felt as he did, that a great mining exhibition might prove a turning point in the history of the trying period through which the city and the state were passing. D. H. Moffat, for many years a firm friend of Mr. Bush, announced a contribution for the exposition, but lukewarmness on the part of wealthy mining men led to the abandonment of the exposition after special efforts for months had been directed toward the enterprise. Mr. Bush never ceased to regret that the extensive plans carefully prepared and conscientiously worked out in his office had not been carried out. He looked upon the exposition as the greatest work in which he had ever been engaged.

Hotel Manager for Miners.

Mr. Bush made the Teller house of Central City noted on account of the high class style in which it was conducted, and the opening of the house, in July, 1872, was one of the most notable society events Colorado had ever witnessed. Old-timers now living look back to that event and declare it has seldom been equaled in the state. At Leadville Mr. Bush operated the Clarendon upon the same liberal scale and entertained guests from all countries of the globe. He there engaged in a number of mining enterprises with Senator H. A. W. Tabor as his partner and was quite successful in his ventures. He was the original promoter of the Brown hotel and spent $5,000 upon excavations for the hotel before the work was finally assumed by Mr. Brown, after whom the house is named.

Plans of Recent Years.

A few months ago Mr. Bush decided that the city needed a new theater. He had been engaged in the theatrical business for a number of years with Peter McCourt as his partner and plans were drawn for a large theater upon a popular plan to be erected on Fifteenth street in the block owned by the Tramway company. It was the ambition of Mr. Bush to live to see the new house opened next fall. The death of the projector will doubtless delay the construction.

Mr. Bush, as related by a friend yesterday, was always full of expedients and always bubbling over with a new scheme for building up Denver. One day he entered the office of a friend and called his attention to a downtown property which he said could be bought for $30,000.

"That is too much money for the property," said his friend.

"I cannot agree with you," was the reply of Mr. Bush. "My judgment is that the property will readily sell for $50,000 within twelve months."

The purchase was finally made and within a year, as prophesied, the property changed hands for $50,000.

Mr. Bush in years past took an active part in politics, but of recent years he confined himself to looking after the precinct in which he lived. He generally carried the Windsor hotel precinct when manager of that house. He was a Republican in sentiment but not a radical. He was a great lover of music and in earlier life played well upon the violin and the guitar. One of the finest guitars in the West is to be seen in the elegant apartments he occupied at the Brown hotel. Mr. Bush was an extensive reader and during the last ten years he devoted a great deal of time to the best literature. He was a devoted student of Spanish writers and spoke the Spanish language as readily as though he were a native of Spain. His private library is largely composed of Spanish books.

Mr. Bush was broad in his views of men and things, and having traveled extensively in this country and Europe, he could talk most entertainingly of the busy world. He gave generously to charity, although he seldom spoke of such acts, and was never given to talk of himself and his achievement. If there was one predominating trait in his character it was love of Colorado and faith in the future of the state.

The body of Mr. Bush will be embalmed to-day and placed in Rogers' undertaking establishment, there to await instructions from Mrs. Bush, who was cabled last night.

The Rocky Mountain News, October 13, 1898, pages 1 and 5

MRS. WILLIAM H. (ELEANOR) BUSH

Illness Noted at Time of Her Husband's Death Proves Fatal.

Remains Will Be Cremated and Ashes Brought to Denver.

Husband and Wife Were Schoolmates Together and Their Union Was Tinged
With Quite an Interesting Romance.

A brief cable message addressed to Maxey Tabor yesterday conveyed intelligence of the death of Mrs. Eleanor Bush, widow of W. H. Bush of this city. Mrs. Bush died at Bailey's hotel, London, and her ashes will be placed in the grave of her husband at Fairmount cemetery. A month ago a letter was received in this city from Mrs. Bush in which she announced as her desire that when she died, her body should be cremated and the ashes deposited in the grave of her beloved husband. According to the cablegram, the wishes of Mrs. Bush will be carried out. The ashes will be deposited temporarily in the vault at the cemetery and the final ceremonies will take place later when H. S. Bigger, son-in-law of Mrs. Bush, and other friends of the family will be present. Mr. Bigger may possibly bring the ashes with him to Denver, as he is expected at an early day.

Although friends of Mrs. Bush have known for three years that she was a great sufferer from illness, the announcement of her death was a shock to many who sincerely mourn the departure of a most estimable woman. Mrs. Bush was born in Pickaway county, Ohio, fifty-five years ago, and at 16 years of age became the wife of W. H. Bush, then a bright young man just starting on his business career. It is claimed there was a tinge of romance in the union. The couple had been schoolmates and the attachment which then developed on the part of Mrs. Bush proved the main sentiment of her life. At the close of the civil war, Mr. Bush was engaged as the head of a business college at Columbus, O. In 1866 he moved to Leavenworth, Kans., and engaged successfully in the same line of business. He was attracted to the hotel field and was for a time proprietor of the Adams house at Manhattan, Kan. Later he was in charge of a supply store at Fort Wallace. He came to Colorado in 1872 and with his wife assumed charge of the Teller house at Central City. In 1879 he opened the Clarendon hotel at Leadville, his faithful wife accompanying him; in 1880 he assumed charge of the Windsor hotel in this city and in 1893 became one of the proprietors of the magnificent hostelry known as the Brown hotel. Mrs. Bush was with her husband in all the fluctuations of life and by her ladylike qualities and her genial disposition gained a wide circle of warm personal friends. Of late years her health failed, but frequent letters from her hand, addressed to Colorado friends, gave assurance that a warm spot ever remained in her heart for her Colorado acquaintances. She was the mother of a daughter, who became the wife of H. S. Bigger, a wealthy citizen of London. Two little granddaughters were especially close to Mrs. Bush and upon them she lavished her affection.

Mrs. Bush was a woman of striking personal appearance. She was kind hearted and gentle in every instinct and was a devout communicant of the Episcopal church. J. S. Bush, her brother-in-law, was almost overcome by the sad news yesterday, as he had many times received courtesies from one whom he recognized as his true friend under every circumstance.

The Rocky Mountain News, April 2, 1899, p. 12

FRANK SUMNER BYERS

Frank Byers, Son of News Founder, Valued Citizen
BY KENNETH C. LIGHTBURN

Frank S. Byers, son of William N. Byers, founder of the Denver Rocky Mountain News, might well be rated as South Denver's No. 1 citizen.

For nearly 50 years, Mr. Byers, prominent in Denver and Colorado social and business circles, has been a resident of South Denver. For the last 18 years, he has lived in near-retirement beneath the old cottonwood trees at 1800 S. Sherman st., content to entertain friends there and live in the past, when the entire region was virtually uninhabited and living was a hazardous occupation.

Prior to his occupancy of the Sherman st. house, Mr. Byers, a prominent figure in Colorado livestock interests, lived in the famous old Byers mansion built by his father in 1889. This home, long a show place in Denver, was located at 171 S. Washington st. Last year, it was sold to the Denver School Board to make room for school grounds adjacent to the school which bears the name of his father--Byers Junior High School.

Native of Nebraska

After the death of his father in 1903, Mr. Byers continued to live in the Washington st. mansion with his wife and his sister, Mrs. Mary Robinson, until 1917.

One of the five remaining '59ers, Mr. Byers has long been prominent in the Society of Colorado Pioneers, and has been president of that group three times. He is a life member of the Colorado State Historical and Natural History Society and has been a member of the board of directors of that group since 1922. In addition, he is at present first vice president of the Colorado Humane Society, and was appointed as a director of that organization in May, 1903, to fill a vacancy left by the death of his father.

Born in Omaha, Neb., on Oct. 15, 1855, Mr. Byers came to Cherry Creek, Kansas Territory (now Denver) with his parents in August, 1859, and during the winters of 1867 and 1868, he carried The Rocky Mountain News, founded by his father nine years before, on his pony. His route, 16 miles long, stretched thru the wilderness west of Denver, and with the money he earned in this manner got his start in the cattle business.

FIRST SETTLER

Several years later, he moved with his herd of cattle to Middle Park, and was the first white settler of that region. Still later, he began the operation of a general store in Hot Sulphur Springs, and after selling this, undertook the job of delivering the mail between Hot Sulphur Springs and Georgetown.

For 12 years, he operated a sawmill and a hotel in Hot Sulphur Springs and was treasurer of Grand County for two terms in the early '90s. He married Miss Mary L. Sullivan in Denver in January 1885.

Today, Mr. Byers is just a good citizen. Each year he gathers many of his friends together for a lawn party at his quiet South Denver home to celebrate the anniversary of the arrival of his parents in the region--Aug. 5.

Rocky Mountain News, December 6, 1935, p. 1

WILLIAM N. BYERS
1831-1903

William N. Byers was Colorado's first newspaperman. His beat was an exciting one . . . for he reported the building of the West.

Byers came to Denver City in the spring of 1859, bringing with him a hand press. On April 23, 1859, the Rocky Mountain News, Colorado's first newspaper, was born by candlelight in the damp, leaky attic of Uncle Dick Wootton's pioneer log store on the banks of Cherry Creek. Building and press were later washed away in the Cherry Creek flood of 1864 . . . but Byers resumed publication of the "News" one month later.

Byers was a pioneer in other fields, too. He was appointed postmaster of Denver City, surveyed and built the first telegraph line between Denver and Santa Fe, promoted the building of railroads, became a member of the first Nebraska Territorial Legislature. A monument to his pioneer spirit . . . The Rocky Mountain News . . . lives on and continues the job Byers started: building a greater city in the dynamic West.

Rocky Mountain News, April 26, 1959, p. 17

WILLIAM (BILL) NEWTON BYERS

By ROBERT L. PERKIN
Rocky Mountain News Writer

He didn't look much like an authentic pioneer, this young Ohioan with the straggling beard and the crippled right shoulder, standing there on Longs Peak with a flag in one hand and a bottle of wine in the other.

Only life-sized--or a little smaller. A man of less than average height, dressed in ordinary clothes. No big, rippling biceps. No fringed buckskin shirt. His well-worn leather belt cinched in the beginnings of a paunch which in the years immediately ahead would ripen into a proper little melon below his vest.

Beneath the belt the harness of a truss, pressing on the hernia that had, and would, trouble him all his life. Beneath the home-made workshirt, part of the right side of his collarbone was missing, torn away 10 years earlier by an accidental shotgun blast in an almost comic-opera incident.

Nothing much on a heroic scale about Bill Byers. He didn't much look the part he was playing.

Yet there he stood, ruptured and crippled shoulder and all at the crest of his beloved Rockies.

* * *

He thought he was standing at the crest of the continent, at the summit of the highest peak in America. Actually, there were a few higher mountains yet to be discovered in Colorado Territory.

Byers unfurled his flag, took a sip from the wine bottle and poured the rest over the stack of granite boulders he and his fellows had built.

The date was Aug. 23, 1868, and the hour was about 10 of a bright sunny morning, the high air, pure and clear before the afternoon's rainclouds gathered.

At 37, William Newton Byers, unschooled frontier farm boy, practical surveyor by trade, journalist by seizure of opportunity, already had participated in the adding of five states to that newly healed union. Now he was working on his sixth.

He could see much of it from where he stood on that bright morning in 1868. Off there below, down past the shoulder of then-unnamed Mt. Meeker and the Twin Sisters, stretched the fruited (but dry) plain, an ocean of late-summer brown.

* * *

To the north, south and west marched rank after purple rank of mountains, each of them, Bill Byers and everyone else hoped and believed, with a heart of gold or silver.

Byers, a mild man, thoughtful beyond his years, had killed no Indians as a preliminary to winning his West. Once upon a time he had set in council with them, beardless then, a youth scarcely yet 21, but mostly he had worked, planned and built.

He had graded roads where there had been none, plowed sod never before turned, built new gristmills and sawmills at unnamed places to which the only previous flour and boards had been hauled creaking miles behind oxen or mules.

He had helped build the first railroads in Iowa, and as a young surveyor had laid out the first section and township lines in the western part of that state. Then he had taken his compass and chains west on a 145-day trek on the Oregon Trail, cut timber to help build Portland.

Back on the Missouri in 1854, and "old stager" at the age of 23, he surveyed Eastern Nebraska Territory, mapped the city of Omaha, sat in the first territorial legislature and on the first Omaha city council. Now, and for the past nine years, he was writing and publishing the hopes and aspirations of the little city taking shape off there to the southeast where Cherry Creek brought a ribbon of green in from the "pineries" to join the broader green ribbon of the South Platte bottoms.

* * *

He could see his infant city, perhaps with a conscious parenthood, from where he stood with his wine bottle and flag.

No, there had been no Indians slain--though on occasion Byers had impaled a few redskins on his editorial pen.

And climbing unclimbed mountains, of course, Long's Peak was not the first, and it wouldn't be the last. There was something about an unclimbed mountain that caused an itch in Bill Byers' gizzard.

Nor was this mountaineering victory of Aug. 23--the Matterhorn had been climbed for the first time only three years earlier--an easy matter, of walking up a long hill. This mountain already had whipped Bill Byers in first encounter four years back.

In 1864, he and an ornithologist friend, Dr. Jacob W. Velie, had attempted the peak from the north and east. It was popularly regarded, not only as America's highest peak, but as eternally invincible.

For more than a century it had been a massive, looming guidepost for Indians, fur traders and explorers; everyone looked at its sheer eastern face and decided it was unscalable.

* * *

Byers had watched the peak in its moods of sun and snow out of the window of his printing-office in Denver City, but he had to find out for himself whether a man could get up there.

He and Dr. Velie camped at timberline. Next day they made it to the top of the "east peak"--possibly Meeker or the 13,456-foot summit now known as Storm Peak--only to discover their goal lay beyond a "stupendous chasm, half a mile in width and fully as much in depth, which ran up against the vertical face of the main peak."

The climbers on the brink of the chasm marveled at what they saw. Byers wrote:

" . . . the loftiest mountain in the United States; in its stupendous proportions and sublime grandeur, it can hardly be equalled and certainly not excelled." He told about the ramble in the columns of his Rocky Mountain News, a little 4-sheet newspaper he had founded in 1859 a few days after this same peak had guided him up the Platte out of the prairie ocean of Nebraska.

The mountain now had turned him back. In his pocket diary, Byers jotted down that Longs Peak was "inaccessable." (His spelling, picked up only from the reading of books, was never a strong point.) But was it really? Byers watched the peak out his window and wondered. A man could always try again; defeat was permanent only if you let it be.

He was ready when the matter came up again. The war was over. Maj. John Wesley Powell came West with one good arm (the other he had left on the battlefield) as a naturalist and scientific explorer.

* * *

Byers took him around Colorado, showed him how to catch trout with a scrap of beef marinated in whisky and casually suggested that maybe, after all, Long's Peak could be climbed. Powell took the bait like a cutthroat going for whisky-beef.

This time the approach was from the west. The party left Grand Lake on horseback, a few supplies on a pack mule. Powell had a barometer and two thermometers along. That night, Aug. 20, the barometer showed the camp was at 11,500 feet and the frost was "quite sharp."

For two days the explorers fought their way among the crags and ridges which are visible from Denver as the recumbant Chiefs Head, stretching to the southwest from the summit of Long's. The labor was hard and the disappointments several. Twice, a high approach was gained only to discover, as Byers and Dr. Velie had discovered four years earlier on the other side of the mountain, that a chasm lay athwart the route.

Discouraged, the party dropped down into what is now known as Wild Basin for one last try from the south. A cold night with wind and rain was spent in the shelter of a boulder. But the day dawned fair, as mountain days often do, and by 6 a.m. the climbers were strung out, inching their way up the steep couloir on Longs Peak's southwestern flank.

* * *

At 10 o'clock they were at the summit, without mishap. Byers' hernia was aching and the fingers of Maj. Powell's one hand were raw from clutching at handholds, but the peak had been won. Byers broke out his bottle of wine.

As Wallace Stegner has written, it could only have been Byers out of all the men in the Powell team who would have bothered with a bottle of wine through two strenuous days of battle with the cliffs and ridges of a hostile mountain.

And in his introduction to this series of essays President Kennedy commented on "the frontiersmen who were never content until they had crossed the last river and climbed the last hill." The words seem to fit like a homespun workshirt around the maimed, none-too-husky shoulders of young Bill Byers.

One can suppose that, maimed or not, the shoulders were decently square at the top of Longs Peak on that bright August morning in 1868.

[There are two pictures of Bill Byers with this article. The caption of one reads: "Bill Byers at 70, two years remaining of his long and active life, pauses to picnic above timberline on his Aug. 14, 1901 climb up 13,000-foot Byers Peak in Middle Park." The other reads: "Unfurling flags on peaks was a family habit. Here William N. Byers' son, Frank S., and daughter, Mrs. William F. Robinson, plant a flagstaff at the Summit of Byers Peak, named for their father."]

Rocky Mountain News, May 23, 1962, p. 14

ROBERT CAMPBELL

Rocky Mountain Trapper's Estate Sought by Many

ST. LOUIS, March 31. --The last heir of adventurous Robert Campbell, trapper, Indian fighter and pioneer merchant, sits in his silent gray house in downtown St. Louis, helpless and unaware of the bitter legal fight over his family's fortunes.

Robert Campbell was, according to a famous contemporary, Washington Irving, one of a group "whose adventures and exploits partake of the wildest spirit of romance."

Today Robert Campbell's youngest son, Hazlett, lives in a few square feet of the Locust st. house, his greatest adventure a journey across a last-century room to gaze down on crowding traffic of the neighborhood.

UNABLE TO TALK

He has been ill since his father's death in 1879 in what his physician describes as a mental retreat from life. A virtual invalid, he is no longer able to greet even the doctor in spoken words.

After his Indian fighting and fur-trading ventures in the Rocky Mountains, Robert Campbell returned to St. Louis with a small fortune. This grew in various enterprises and Campbell achieved recognition as business leader, military colonel in Mexican War times and as a philanthropist.

His gray house, now stranded in the stream of progress which has passed it by for half a century, was an abode of gaiety 50 years ago. There, according to a local historian, "they dispensed hospitality on the largest scale . . . many of the most distinguished personages of the times not only of America but from abroad, were their guests . . ."

DIVIDED FOUR WAYS

The Campbells had 13 children, of whom all but three sons died in infancy. For them and their mother Campbell drew up, according to English usage, a "deed of settlement in trust," putting his property in trust for them in equal shares of one-fourth each.

It was dated 1877. Mrs. Campbell died in 1882.

James, Yale '82, and Hugh, Washington University, '67, lived abroad in 1890, and James died in Paris. He left his estate to Hugh, who gave up his travels and society to care for the invalid brother, for whom the father had provided a special trust, "against some unforeseen misfortune or visitation of Providence."

Hugh Campbell sought diversion in quiet kindnesses, many of them to boys of the neighborhood. Two of them, Adolph and Harry Furman, alleging agreement to adopt, have sued for his $1,250,000 estate.

BEQUEST TO YALE

Hugh died in 1931. His will provided the income should go for life to his brother, and that the principal should go to Yale University for a memorial to James.

Two suits have been brought by Hazlett's guardian, one to set aside the deed of 1877 and redivide the original estate, the other to set aside Hugh's will and its bequest to Yale.

Hazlett, with an income of tens of thousands, can spend but a fraction of it. But there are collateral relatives of Hazlett Campbell -- about 30 on the Campbell side in Ireland, and a dozen or more in St. Louis County and Tennessee.

They are heirs presumptive of his estate, even if Hugh's will stands, or the Furmans win their suit on appeal.

Newspaper article, no source or date given.

THOMAS PATTERSON CAMPBELL

Date: January 8, 1938

No. 2 B970 D5 E16 F144
MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Thomas Patterson Campbell, President, Campbell Investment Company
1024 Patterson Building, Denver, Colorado

Thomas Patterson Campbell, born in Denver, Colorado, July 27, 1896; son of Richard Crawford and Margaret (Patterson) Campbell.

Richard Crawford Campbell*, born in Wheeling, West Virginia in 1865; son of Archibald and Anna (Crawford) Campbell, the former of whom was the grandson of Thomas Campbell, who emigrated from Scotland to America in 1812, settling near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Richard Crawford Campbell owned and published the "Wheeling Intelligencer", and in 1895, moved to Denver, Colorado, where he became part owner and business manager of the "Rocky Mountain News", which his father-in-law, the Hon. Thomas MacDonald Patterson**, had purchased in 1893. In 1920, Richard Crawford Campbell established the Campbell Investment Co., a real estate and investment business, in Denver, of which he served as president, and his wife as vice-president. During 1923-24, the company, which originally was located in the Florence Block, erected a modern, steel constructed, 10-story building, known as the Patterson Building, on the site of Thomas MacDonald Patterson's home, where he resided from 1880 to 1893. The Campbell Investment Co. has extensive real estate holdings in Denver, and owns and operates The Albany Hotel, a 7-story building, of 165 rooms, acquired by the Hon. Thomas MacDonald Patterson, in 1873. An addition to the hotel, comprising 165 rooms, is being constructed. The Campbell Investment Co. also owns and controls the Creede (Colorado) Mills, Inc., which operates a concentration plant for lead and silver ore from the Creede district. Richard Crawford Campbell died in Denver, in 1930. His wife, Margaret (Patterson) Campbell, daughter of the Hon. Thomas MacDonald and Katherine (Grafton) Patterson, was born in Crawfordsville, Indiana, in 1870, and died in Denver, in 1929.

The Hon. Thomas MacDonald Patterson, father of Margaret (Patterson) Campbell, was born in County Carlow, Ireland, November 4, 1839, and was the son of James Patterson, who emigrated from County Antrim, Ireland, to America, in the early 1840's, and settled in Long Island, New York, where he was a jeweler and silversmith. In the late 1850's, he moved to Crawfordsville, Indiana, and established a jewelry store in that city. Thomas MacDonald Patterson moved to Denver, Colorado, in 1872. He was elected a territorial representative to the Forty-fourth Congress, and served from March 4, 1875, to August 1, 1876, during which time Colorado became a state. He was elected a U. S. Senator, by the Colorado Legislature, and served in Congress, 1901-07. In 1893, he purchased the "Rocky Mountain News", of Denver, of which paper he was editor until 1913, at which time the paper was sold to John Shaffer, of Chicago. The Hon. Thomas MacDonald Patterson died in Denver, July 23, 1916. His wife, Katharine (Grafton) Patterson, died in 1905. Both are buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver.

Thomas Patterson Campbell, attended public schools in Denver; graduated, Dartmouth College (Hanover, New Hampshire), B.S., in 1918; and Massachusetts Institute of Technology (Cambridge), B.S. in electrochemical engineering, in 1921. After engaging in engineering work, he attended the Colorado School of Mines (Golden, Colorado), graduating, B.S., in metallurgy, which science he applies in connection with his mining interests. Mr. Campbell serves as president of the Campbell Investment Co., of Denver, which company was established by his father. In June 1917, Thomas Patterson Campbell entered the U. S. Army, for service in the World War, and served overseas with an American Ambulance Unit, until December 1917, at which time he was transferred to the American Air Service, and commissioned a 2nd lieutenant. He then returned to the U. S., and was stationed in Texas, with the Air Training Forces, being honorably discharged, as a gun instructor, in Ft. Worth, Texas, in January 1919. Mr. Campbell is independent in politics, and a member of the following: Denver Country Club; Denver Athletic Club; Cactus Club; Denver Chamber of Commerce; American Legion; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. Mr. Campbell, who is a licensed airplane pilot, owns his own plane, and makes flying his hobby. His favorite recreations are tennis, and contract bridge.

In 1918, Thomas Patterson Campbell married Miriam Savage, daughter of Thomas F. and Lydia (Smith) Savage, residents of Denver, Colorado, and natives of New York State and Kansas, respectively. Mrs. Campbell, who is an accomplished pianist, was one of the organizers of Pro Musica, in Denver. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell: (1) Richard Crawford, born in 1919. (2) Thomas, Jr., who was born in 1920, and died in 1921. He is buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver. (3) Donn Carr, born in 1923.

* For further data regarding Richard Crawford Campbell, see "Encyclopedia of American Biography" (published by the American Historical Society).

** For further data regarding the Hon. Thomas MacDonald Patterson, see the following: "Biographical Directory of the American Congress, 1774-1927" (U. S. Government Printing Office, 1928), p. 1391; James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 5, p. 382. Jerome C. Smiley, "Semi-Centennial History of the State of Colorado" (Lewis Publishing Co., Chicago, 1913), vol. 2, p. 1; "Encyclopedia of Biography of Colorado" (Century Publishing & Engraving Co., Chicago, 1901), vol. 1, p. 213; "Portrait and Biographical Record of Denver and Vicinity, Colorado" (Chapman Publishing Co., Chicago, 1898), p. 1236; "Portrait and Biographical Record of the State of Colorado" (Chapman Publishing Co., Chicago, 1899), p. 160; and Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 16.

National Cyclopedia of American Biography, v. 12, p. 555
Colorado and Its People, v. 4, p. 638

WALTER M. CAMPBELL

Date: October 9, 1937

No. 2 B898 D5 E16 F95
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Walter M. Campbell, Attorney
Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

Walter M. Campbell, son of G. F. and Mary Alice (Price) Campbell; born at Greenfield, Tennessee, December 5, 1881.

G. F. Campbell, son of George Washington and Elizabeth Campbell, was born at Greenfield, Tennessee. He engaged in farming, and in the grocery business, many years, and is now living, retired in Tennessee. His wife, Mary Alice (Price) Campbell, daughter of William Price, was born at Greenfield, Tennessee.

George Washington Campbell, father of G. F. Campbell, was born in Tennessee, in 1813. He was of Scotch descent. He was a lawyer, and a farmer, and served as county commissioner, 30 years.

Walter M. Campbell, attended Greenfield (Tennessee) College, Cherry Brothers College (Bowling Green, Kentucky), and Southwestern Baptist University (Jackson, Tennessee), and graduated from Cumberland University Law School, in Lebanon, Tennessee, in 1905. He practiced law in Dyersburg, Tennessee, from 1905 to 1919, since which time he has practiced in Denver, Colorado. He was associated with Hughes & Dorsey, from 1920 until February 1923, at which time he was employed by the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co., of which he is now serving as assistant general attorney. Mr. Campbell, who is a Democrat, is a member of the following: Denver Bar Association; Denver Law Club; Alpha Tau Omega (fraternity); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobby is motoring.

On August 14, 1907, Walter M. Campbell married Effie Norman, daughter of Mathews Norman. Mrs. Campbell was born at Greenfield, Tennessee. Children: (1) Audrey, who was born Nov. 4, 1909. She died in Aug. 1910. (2) Mary Alice, who graduated from the Colorado Woman's College, and later from the University of Mississippi with an A. B. degree. She resides at home. (3) Walter M., Jr., who was born in 1922.

ALBERT E. CARLTON
'Doomed' Man Made Fortune at Cripple Creek
EDITED By JACK FOSTER
Research by Ruth Beckwith

Dear J. F.: I think it would be interesting to your readers to tell something about Bert Carlton who came to Colorado as a young man, expecting to die from TB. But he lived to make a fortune at Cripple Creek. A. W.

Dear A. W.: A. E. (Bert) Carlton came to Colorado in 1889, and went to Cripple Creek early in the 90s to start a transfer business with his brother Leslie.

His company prospered along with the town and he branched out into the coal business, and soon was able to buy the First National Bank of Cripple Creek.

He extended his interests to gold mining, acquiring a great deal of mine property. He organized the Holly sugar Corp., and was active in the development of the Midland Terminal Railroad.

Marshall Sprague tells about the life of this determined young man, in his book "Money Mountain." One of the more exciting chapters is about his complicated love life.

He secretly married Eva Stanton while he was visiting his home in Illinois. She stayed there, and he returned to Colorado, "to prove that he was out of the invalid class by earning a half million dollars."

Meanwhile his mother had decided upon a wife for him. Miss Mary Quigley of Colorado Springs. "Bert couldn't think of any objections," and permitted himself to become engaged.

The next incident in his love life occurred when he met Ethel Frizzell at a ball given at the opening of the National Hotel in Cripple Creek. This time he fell in love in earnest. Sprague writes: "Bert's new score: one secret wife, two fiancées."

But it took about five years to untangle the threads. Miss Quigley had a broken heart to nurse, Eva became a divorcee with money, and Bert and Ethel were married in New York.

After this excitement was over, Carlton's life by no means ceased to be colorful. He was involved in the strikes and labor troubles that harrassed the mining town; he was mixed up in the rate war and fights over the new railroad that came up from Colorado Springs; and later he became embroiled in gaining control of most of the mines in Cripple Creek so that by 1903 his production records amounted to $227,000,000.

Sprague sums up Carlton's influence on the town of Cripple Creek in these words: "The valiant spirit of the man who, back in 1891, expected to be dead of TB in six months, lives on in the clanking corridors of the Carlton Mill, in scores of Carlton mines, in the damp depth of Carlton Tunnel."

[Article contains a picture with the caption: A. E. Carlton, who became the "King of the Cripple Creek Gold Camps," as he looked soon after he went to the mining town to operate a transfer business. This picture was supplied by Albert Whitmore of Parshall, Colo.]

Rocky Mountain News, January 10, 1954, p. 47

LOUIS G. CARPENTER

SUPPLEMENTAL APPLICATION

of Louis G. Carpenter, descendant of Benjamin Ketcham

I, Louis G. Carpenter, am a lineal descendant of Benjamin Ketcham, who was born in Connecticut on the ___ day of May, 1753, and died in New Cornwall, Orange Co., N.Y. on the ___ day of May, 1833, and who assisted in establishing American Independence.

I was born on the twenty-eighth day of March, 1861.

(1) I am the son of Charles Ketcham Carpenter, born 1826, died 1884, and his wife Jennet Coryell (Coriell), born 1831, died 1899, married 1847.

(2) grandson of Daniel Powell Carpenter, born 1781, died 1852, and his wife Anna Ketcham, born 1786, died 18___, married 1807.

(3) great grandson of Benjamin Ketcham, born 1753, died 1833, and his wife Mary G____ (name not known at present).

The services of my ancestor, BENJAMIN KETCHAM (No. 3) during the War of the Revolution were as follows:

He was Minute Man from Aug. 1775 to March 1776, Samuel Raymond, Captain and Col. Nichols, enlisting from Cornwall, N.Y., then from July 1, 1776 to Jan. 1777, under the same officers.

The above record is from the U.S. Pension office, where when he was nearly 80 years old, and helpless, he applied for a pension which was granted him Nov. 28, 1832. He died in May, 1833.

He also served in the 1st regiment Orange Co. Militia, Maj. Zachariah DuBois, his name being listed among those entitled to Land Bounty Rights given in New York in the Revolution, 2nd. ed. p. 253.

His specific performance during his enlistments is not definitely known. It is known that the regiments of that vicinity were almost constantly called out because of the importance of the Hudson river passage, that importance also causing Washington to make his headquarters in that immediate vicinity for a longer period than elsewhere.

BENJAMIN KETCHAM, it is known by family records, was wounded in the head, but he lived after all for 50 years thereafter, dying May 1833, buried on John Orr place, Mountainville (Ketchamville).

For the dates of service 1775 to 1777: records of the U. S. Pension Office

For service in DuBois regiment: records printed in N. Y. in the Revolution

For date of death, and wound: family records of the Ketchams at Mountainville P.O. formerly known at "Ketchamville", a grandson for years being postmaster, and until his death within the last two years.

LOUIS G. CARPENTER

[Letter from L. G. Carpenter to John H. Garnsey providing information and a chart of family genealogy]

May 6, 1920

John H. Garnsey
Joliet National Bank Building
Joliet, Ill.

Dear Mr. Garnsey:-

While it is quite a long time since your courtesy in handing me information regarding the Henderson family was received, I have not forgotten that I was to give you some supplementary data. In that chart you took so much pains to make, you had no information regarding the descendants of Jennet Henderson, and therefore I will supply some additional. I find that I do not have here available the dates of the Coryell children's deaths, but to make those available would take more time than I can very well take now. That data is not available at my office. But for the general purpose, you probably do not care for those dates, but should you wish them, I will furnish them.

Besides the descendants of JENNET I can add to your record, that Mrs. Nellie (Edward Bath) of Norway, born 1850 has one son with 3 sons and 1 daughter aged about 21.

A David W. Foster, born 1860, lives at Palmer, Nebraska, son of Angeline Tillinghast. He married a cousin.

John M. Henderson was much interested in family history. And presumably he kept a fuller record than any one else of the children. My grandmother evidently kept her interest, but at the time of her death, from an accident, her children were not much interested, though they had remembered a considerable. She seems to have been as a rule accurate in her recollections -- or her children believe so -- and a good memory. As some of these traditions do not fit in completely with those which you have, I have been hoping to learn those which came from John M. Henderson. He seems to have kept up an active correspondence. His descendants are the only ones who have qualified in the D.A.R. through Edward Henderson, so in that regard he had more information, than my relatives at least. They have entered through other ancestors, and did not know of Edwards connection with the Revolutionary war. I have started some inquiry, but so far have not gotten hold of any of the descendants.

Along that line, I would be glad to know why you think this Edward of ours came from Colrain. I do not mean to say that you are wrong, but I have found it difficult to reconcile the other traditions as yet. The contradictory traditions should perhaps not be given weight, but at present I do not have enough data to feel like discarding them. Mr. John M. Drew, a grandson of Jennet H. -- now 86 years old -- has evidently been much interested, but his information too comes through his Aunt Caroline (Sherwood) who is also the source of much that we have, and is not independent reports. In her account written to my mother, she speaks of the local war in Vermont, not in the histories, in which Edward was mixed up. That war was new to me, but on investigating, I find a good deal of data regarding the Vermont-New York land troubles -- the Green Mountain Boys, and some other data she gives is confirmed, thou it seemed improbable at first. Such was the reported move from Pittstown (now of N.Y.) to Bennington because of the local troubles about 1780 &c. She, as also Mrs. Bath, have some traditions regarding his connection with French-Indian war, with Irish political troubles, that at first seemed extremely improbable. Too improbable to be made up. But the contemporary circumstances show that it is possible. There was the occasion for the migration of 1712-18 from Ireland of the protestants, their home persecution, their adhesion to James &c.

The records show what there are.

Thanking you Truly
L. G. Carpenter

DESCENDANTS OF JENNET HENDERSON (Mrs. John H. Sherwood) Daughter of Edward and Mary. She was born June 3, 1776, died Oct. 4, 1848.

Born at Pittstown, N.Y. near Bennington, moving to Bennington about 1781, then to Manchester, and to Norway, N.Y. about 1792.

Married 1795 JOHN H. SHERWOOD of the neighboring town of Fairfield.

Lived at Fairfield and Norway until about 1812, then to Seneca Co. and then to Wayne, Steuben Co., where they lived the rest of their life.

He was born 1775, Jan. 18, at Williamstown, Mass., died Nov. 5, 1857

3d Generation

ANSON 1797-1864 married twice

EDWARD H. 1798-1820 unmarried

THERESA MARIE 1800-Nov. 28, 1842 (Mrs. Elias Birdsall, Wayne, N.Y.

ELIZA 1802 Dec. 16-Jan. 13, 1855 (Mrs. George Coriell) married 1820

MATILDA 1802 Dec 16-Jan. 26, 1869 (Mrs. John Drew) Hammondsport, N.Y.

ROLLIN 1805, Oct 15-1815 1st marriage ____ 2nd married cousin, Mary Drew

MARY 1807-1886 (Mrs. Elias R. Wightman who died 1840, then later Mrs. ____ Helm, Connorsville, Indiana

JENNET 1809-1840 died spinster in Texas

HUGH 1812-1834

CAROLINE 1818-about 1890 (Mrs. ____ Helm, brother of Mary's husband, lived at Wabash, Indiana

4th Generation

ANSON dyed his hair and enlisted in army; died in service 1864

1st wife children: Edward, Franklin, Eliza Ann, Elvira (The above remained in N.Y. when he came to Michigan), Gaylord, Hugh, Mary (These 3 children came to Michigan with him in 1844.

2nd wife children: Charles, Levi reported to have lived near Bay City, Michigan, Charlotte Adell, married and lived near Lapeer. Know nothing of their histories, except that Gaylord was well to do, had two children, Duaine and Charles. His widow lived at Buffalo.

THERESA lived near Wayne, Steuben Co., N.Y. Several children. Mr. Drew probably knows of them.

ELIZA married George Coriell, 1820, at Wayne, Steuben Co. Lived there and at Bath, Mt. Morris until they went to Michigan in 1844. He had in the meantime spent a year in Texas with his brother-in-law Wightman, who was Austins surveyor. There is a "Coryell County" from that date. Lived in south of Lapeer Co. She died in 1855, result of an accident; he lived until 1875.

Coryell children: (1) Abraham, 1821-about 1900. (2) Matilda (Mrs. Darius Rogers, Maple Rapids, Clinton Co., Michigan) [born] 1823, died in the nineties. (3) Rollin or Charles R., 1825, married Mary Drew for 2nd wife his cousin was in Minn. at Winona about 1860, lived Jonesville, Mich. Graduate of the Albany Normal School, teacher too. Died about 1886. (4) Elizabeth, 1827 (Mrs. William Rudd, Orion, Mich.) She died about 1855 or 6. (5) William H., 1832, died about 1912, Grand Rapids, Mich. (6) Jennette, 1831-1899 (Mrs. Charles K. Carpenter) lived on the land they took up. (My mother). (7) Charles, 1834-about 1895. (8) John Sherwood C., 1836. Moved to Kansas 1871 or 2, lived at Junction City, most of his children there. (8) Mary Martha, 1840 (Mrs. Daniel Lyon who died about 1874) Still living at Junction City, Kansas. (9) Eliza Jane, 1844 (Mrs. Ira Carpenter, Orion, Mich.) still living.

MATILDA SHERWOOD DREW (Mrs. John Drew 1802-1861)

James Schuyler	1826-1891 at Winona, Minn. Married Mary Clark
Edward B.	1827-1902 in Minn. Has son, professor in University
Mary Drew	1828-1906 Married her cousin, C. R. Coryell. No children
B. Frank	1831-1882 One son, Walter S., in Hammondsport
John Milton	1833 Living at St. Joseph, Mo. 1 son, 2 daughters
Jennette	1843-1918 (Mrs. M. H. Dildine, of Hammondsport)
Eliza C.	1846-1902 (Mrs. J. L. Dildine, Lived at Buffalo)

MARY HELM After spending from 1828-1840 in Texas, after marrying _____ Helm, lived at Connorsville, Indiana. Had I think one child. Was philanthropic.

CAROLINE Married brother of the preceding Helm. Had a son and a daughter.

5th Generation from Edward Henderson

Children of Abraham and Coryell and Katherine Hummer

Byron G., born about 1850-1916, R. R. trainman. Died Bay City, Michigan

Francis (Mrs. Bert Webster) now living at Oxford, Michigan, lived for a long time on the farm of George Coryell, which adjoined that of Abraham, born about 1855

Milton S., born 1861, now living on the father's place

Catherine, born about 1865, Mrs. _____ living in Detroit

Children of Matilda and Darius Rogers

Rollin

Emma, lived in Texas

Mary, Mrs. Herman Goette, died about 1878, left 2 children

Simon, 1857- Jeweler, Portland, Oregon, for long time at Pewamo, Michigan

Children of Rollin, married Dian _____ of N. Y.

Minnie, born 1856-1919 (Mrs. Harry Emmons, Detroit, Michigan) 2 daughters, 1 died recently Ashtabula, Ohio, 1 unmarried - Blanche and Lulu

Rolla J., 1862- Lives Birmingham, near Detroit. Nurseryman. Several children. One son in aviation service with fine record

Addie, about 1866. Married her cousin Myron, son of John. Lives at Junction City, Kans. Several children.

Fred G., about 1868. Lives in N.Y. city. With Laff rgue Co., piano manufacturers. Several children.

Children of Elizabeth, married William Rudd, died of consumption in the fifties
George, born about 1851, living near Junction City, Kansas, since 1871
Lucy (Mrs. Milan Thomas), born about 1854 or 5. Lived near Junction City.
Both have several children

Children of William H. Lived near Williamston, Mich., then in late years at Grand Rapids
Ada (Mrs. _____ Cripps, a preacher)
Eva Dian (Mrs. Wm. McBain of Grand Rapids), 1858- , several children
Luella (Mrs. _____) 1862-
Sherman S. (1864-5) with a piano firm, Chicago
Several others

Children of Jennette, 1831-1899 (Mrs. Charles K. Carpenter, 1826-1884)
Clinton, died infancy
Rolla Clinton, 1852-1919, College Professor, Michigan, 1875-1890; Cornell University, 1890-1917. Naomi (Mrs. Harry Buckingham), married Marion Dewey, 3 children, Ithaca, N.Y.
Emma Blanche (Mrs. Charles H. Seeley), born 1857, now Lewistown, Mont., 2 children Mabel, 1886 and Carroll 3 children
William Leland, 1854- , Lawyer, Supreme court Judge &c, married Elizabeth Ferguson; Lela (Mrs. Dr. Fred Buesser), 1 child; Rolla Louis, unmarried
Louis George, 1861, m. Mary J. Cliff. Son, Chas. Louis 1889- m. Mildred Pearce, 1 son, age 5, C. L. Jr. Captain in France, now Capt. in reserve. [Daughter], Mary Jennette, 1892, (Mrs. Roe Emery), 1 son, Walter C., born Aug 1918. Lived Estes Park, Colo., Glacier Park, Mont. Lived in Colorado since 1888, mostly College Professor.
Mary Lucy, 1866- (Mrs. Nelson S. Mayo, Chicago) one of owners of Abbot Alkaloidal Laboratories, live near Wilson Ave. [Children]: Marguerite, 1891; Dorothy, 1893; Robert; Louise Jennette, 1875 (Mrs. Mark Wheeler, Col. U.S.A., now living at San Antonio, Texas. Children: Charles, Robert, Harriet, Edward - Oldest about 14

Children of Charles, married Sarah Hersey who is still living, Rochester, Michigan.
One daughter, Jennette, about 1866- , married _____ George, live Rochester, Mich.
They have one daughter [and] a son, with Michigan troops at Archangel.

Children of John S. Coryell and Nancy Thomas
Frank Dufay, 1861- , lives at Junction City, Kansas, married Clara Maria ("Doll") Thomas.
Their children are:
Rolla Thomas, 1884, married Ora Hamilton, son DuFay Hamilton Coryell
Chas. Lincoln, 1882, married Bessie Winslow, live Neodosha, Kansas
Maud Amelia, 1888, married Chas. Drake Turnbull, live Hartford, Conn. Three children, Alice Coryell; John C., Jas. C.
Ruth Elizabeth, 1889, Mrs. Homer P. Ramsdell. No children
Martha, 1899-1911

George Byron, 1901, Student

Myron Lavert Coryell, 1863; married his cousin Addie Coryell of Jonesville, Michigan. Children, 3, Marguerite Alene, Katherine Frances, Myron Rollin

Mary Coryell, 1868-1869

Charlie, 1870-71

Minnie Blanche, 1875 ("Dot"), Mrs. Frederick Durland, 1 son, Frank C.

Helen Caroline, 1877, Mrs. Chas. H. Gove, 1 son, Coryell Chas., 1902-

Ada Nancy, 1881, Mrs. Horace M. Pierce, 1 daughter, Mary Elizabeth. Lives in Junction City

John Ralph, 1886. M. D.; Major, in France. In Grand Rapids, Mich. Unmarried

Children of Mary Martha Coryell (Mrs. Daniel S. Lyon)

Claire, 1866 (Mrs. Henry Brooks), Junction City, Kansas. Three children: Kent L., 1889; Alan Leslie, 1892-1917; Mary Catherine, 1905

Eliza Jennett, 1869, Mrs. Arthur M. Kerr. Children: Gerald Lee, 1893, married Marguerite Fox; one daughter, Jean Marie, 1897 (Mrs. Wm. Tuttle Hamilton, Capt. USA), one son, Wm. Tuttle, 1918

George Joseph, 1874, unmarried, Junction City, Kansas

Charles Louis, 1875, married Jeanie Finlay. Five children: Charles Orin, 1899; Andrew Finlay, 1900; Margaret Marie, 1906; Hugh Daniel, 1908; Martha Jean, 1910.

Children of Eliza Jane, born 1844 (Mrs. Ira Carpenter, Orion, Mich.)

Frank G., born about 1867. Lives at Sioux City, Iowa. Mechanical engineer for packing industry.

Grace, Mrs. Hammond, lives Kalamazoo, Michigan

FREDERICK W. CARRINGER

Date: December 18, 1937

No. 2 B956 D5 E16 F137
MAS/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Frederick W. Carringer, President, Midland Federal Savings & Loan Co.
Midland Savings Building, Denver, Colorado

Frederick W. Carringer, born in Monmouth, Illinois, April 1, 1876; son of Anthony S. and Maria (Moyer) Carringer.

Anthony S. Carringer, born in Pennsylvania, in 1840. He was a blacksmith, and served as such in the Civil War. About 1896, he came to Colorado, as a mining prospector. He was killed in a mine accident in 1910, and is buried at Empire, Colorado. His wife, Maria (Moyer) Carringer, who was a native of Pennsylvania, died in Chicago, in 1918, and is buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, in Chicago. Her mother was ____ (Spangler) Moyer. Franklin Eugene Carringer*, a son of Anthony S. and Maria (Moyer) Carringer, resides, retired, in Denver.

Frederick W. Carringer, attended grade and high schools, in Monmouth, Illinois. In 1893, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he became identified with the Midland Savings & Loan Co. (now the Midland Federal Savings & Loan Co.), which was founded in Denver, August 24, 1891, by A. C. Fisk, M. C. McKenzie, E. T. Weiant, C. H. Colby, Franklin Eugene Carringer, N. Q. Tanquary, and E. C. Mason. The above men incorporated the business, electing N. Q. Tanquary, president, and Franklin Eugene Carringer, secretary. The firm, which was originally located on the ground floor of The Albany Hotel, later occupied various prominent locations in Denver, and in 1925, erected their present modern 10-floor building, which is air-conditioned. The company entered business, under a state charter, and was federalized October 14, 1937, at which time the name was changed to the Midland Federal Savings & Loan Co. Franklin Eugene Carringer became president of the firm, in 1900, in which year Frederick W. Carringer became secretary-treasurer. In 1935, following the retirement of his brother, Franklin Eugene, Frederick W. Carringer became president of the firm, which operates in Denver, Colorado, Oklahoma, and Arkansas. Their purpose is the promotion of thrift, and home ownership. Loans are made only on improved city property. Present officers of the firm are as follows: Frederick W. Carringer, president and a director; Frederick W. Ruble, vice-president and a director; Edward C. House, vice-president; Ray A. Jaeger, vice-president; and Moses Frank, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Carringer, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Masonic Lodge; Colorado Building and Loan League; Oklahoma Building and Loan League; Arkansas Building and Loan League; National Building and Loan Association (member, Southwest Conference; vice-president in 1931); Denver Chamber of Commerce; Denver Country Club; Rotary Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. Mr. Carringer was a member of the Temple Male Quartette, of the Plymouth Congregational Church, 27 years. His hobbies are music, and golf.

In 1898, Frederick W. Carringer married Elizabeth (called Daisy) Olds, daughter of Bernard and Elizabeth (Cross) Olds, the latter of whom was the daughter of J. B. Cross, of Highgate Center, Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Carringer are the parents of 2 children: (1) Elizabeth, born in 1900. She graduated from Wellesley (Massachusetts) College, with a B. A. degree. She married Edward C. House. They reside in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and are the parents of 3 children, Elizabeth (called Betty) Chandler, Edward Chandler, and Frederick Bishop. (2) Catherine, born in 1908. She graduated from the University of Denver, with an A. B. degree. On December 16, 1937, she married Carl Rotte, of Philadelphia, and New York City. They reside in Orange, New York.

* For further data regarding Franklin Eugene Carringer, see Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 3, p. 54; and James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 90.

National Cyclopedia of American Biography, vol. A, p. 146

FAY H. CARROLL

Date: December 11, 1937

No. 2 B947 D5 E16 F127
MAS/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Fay H. Carroll, Secretary-Treasurer, Colorado Life Company
Fifth Floor, Conoco Building, Denver, Colorado

Fay H. Carroll, son of Henry O. and Margaret (Printice) Carroll; born in Greenville, Michigan, June 25, 1892.

Henry O. Carroll, son of Amasa P. Carroll, was born in Ohio, December 6, 1847. On December 14, 1863, he enlisted for service in the Civil War, and was assigned to Company E, 130th Regiment, Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He was with Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman on the latter's march to the sea, and was honorably discharged at Charlotte, North Carolina, December 2, 1865. He then settled in Greenville, Michigan, where he engaged in the lumber business. He died August 1, 1920. His wife, Margaret (Printice) Carroll, was born in Pennsylvania, Oct. 24, 1851, and died June 13, 1912. Henry O. and Margaret (Printice) Carroll, who are buried in Greenville, Michigan, were the parents of 3 children: (1) Effie, born Dec. 8, 1878. She resides in Ann Arbor, Michigan. She is the widow of Dr. William H. Lester, who died October 8, 1932. (2) Orval Amasa, born May 18, 1884. He resides at Galesburg, Michigan. (3) Fay H.

Amasa P. Carroll, father of Henry O., and son of Elijah and Pacia (Smith) Carroll, was born January 31, 1815. Elijah Carroll was born January 27, 1771, and his wife, Pacia (Smith) Carroll, was born April 15, 1774.

Fay H. Carroll, attended public grade and high schools, in Greenville, Michigan, graduating from the latter June 15, 1911; graduated, Albuquerque (New Mexico) Business College, December 1, 1921; and later took courses in accounting and business administration at this college, graduating in 1922. In 1912, he was employed by the Detroit (Michigan) City Gas Co., and later was assistant manager for Ernst & Ernst, accountants, in Denver, Colorado. He received an appointment to the U. S. Bureau of Internal Revenue, and in 1919 was sent to New Mexico. He subsequently returned to Denver, where in July 1929, he became accountant and actuary for the Colorado Life Co.*, of which he was made head of the bookkeeping department in 1930, and treasurer in July of that year. Since October 1934, he has served as secretary-treasurer of the company. On April 15, 1917, he enlisted for service in the World War at the First Officers' Training Camp, at Ft. Sheridan, Illinois, and served in the 7th Company, 10th Provisional Regiment. Because of physical disability, he was honorably discharged, August 8, 1917. Mr. Carroll, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Masonic Lodge, and Consistory; American Legion; B. P. O. E.; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobbies are hunting, fishing, and ice skating.

On October 16, 1926, Fay H. Carroll married June A. Russell, daughter of John and Agnes Russell, natives of Glasgow, Scotland, and London, England, respectively. Mrs. Carroll was born September 24, 1896. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll are the parents of one child, Margaret A. Carroll, born May 13, 1928.

* For further data regarding the Colorado Life Co., see sketch of James Milton Campbell in Citizens Historical Association files.

KIT (CHRISTOPHER) CARSON

Kit (Christopher) Carson was born Dec. 24, 1809 in Madison Co., Ky., and died May 23, 1868, in Fort Lyon, Colorado. He was General Fremont's guide and perhaps the most famous of all frontier scouts in the Rocky Mountain region.

The surname CARSON means the son of Car, or Kar. This is a contraction of the Scandinavian baptismal name Karl, meaning a husbandman or rustic.

The Headquarters of General Carson, during the heyday was Taos, New Mexico.

[This information is in the form of pencil illustrations by Frank Clay Cross, including a picture of Kit Carson.]

National Cyclopedia of American Biography, vol. 3, p. 273

KIT CARSON III

Kit Carson Finds Horses Lack Stamina of Old

Kit Carson III, 71-year-old grandson of the original Mountain Man, came to the National Western Stock Show Thursday afternoon.

He left with the comment, "The cattle are better than they used to be, but the horses don't have the stamina."

It was Carson's first visit to the Stock Show in 15 years. He runs a trading post in Alamosa in partnership with his son, William.

"When I punched cattle for Billy Adams (former governor who died last year), they had long horns and weren't anything like these," Carson said. "I think the cattle are better. But I don't like today's horses."

He was watching the cutting horse contest when he added, "These horses look a lot prettier than the horses of my day, but I don't think they've got the stamina."

Carson said it's been his life long ambition to "go West." He was born in Ft. Garland, and so far has gone West exactly 24 miles -- to Alamosa.

His son, Kit Carson IV, was killed in World War II.

"It just shows how times change," Carson commented. "My grandfathers on both sides fought in the Civil War on horses, and my sons were both in the Air Force during the last war."

Carson's maternal grandfather was Tom Tobin, who killed the Espinosa desperadoes who were terrorizing the San Luis Valley in 1863.

[This article includes a picture of Kit Carson III.]

Rocky Mountain News, January 21, 1955, p. 18

GEORGE F. CARTER

Line of George F. Carter

Resident of Denver, Colorado, 1879 to 1896

John Adams, son of Henry Adams of Devonshire, England, died at Menotomy (now Arlington, Massachusetts) in 1708, aged 85.

Joseph Adams, oldest son of John Adams, born at Devonshire; married Feb. 21, 1687, Margaret, daughter of Thomas and Mary Blanford Eams of Sudbury, Mass.

Joseph Adams, Jr., (Cambridge records him as Lieut. Joseph Adams), born 1685; married, Jan. 18, 1710 Rebecca, daughter of William and Rebecca (Rolfe) Cutter.

Thomas Adams (captain), born at Cambridge Aug. 20, 1713; married Lydia Chadwick of Worcester, Mass.

Hannah Adams, born April 13, 1743, second wife of Walter Russell, active participator in the war of the Revolution, who died Mar. 5, 1782, leaving her a widow with eight children. Hannah married second Enos Jones of Ashburnham, Mass., with his ten children. She died aged 96 years, 6 months.

Thomas Russell, 3rd son of Walter and Hannah Adams Russell, born at Menotomy June 9, 1767; died Aug. 19, 1823; married Margaret Adams in Menotomy Nov. 25, 1788; moved to Russell Hill, Ashburnham, Mass.

Charles Russell, born Sept. 10, 1804; died June 23, 1865; married Nov. 4, 1829, Sarah Phillips, daughter of Samuel Phillips. She died Jan. 31, 1838, leaving three children.

Sarah Amanda Russell, daughter of Charles and Sarah Phillips Russell, born Dec. 4, 1830; married Mar. 31, 1852 George F. Carter of Leominster, Mass.; died in Denver, Colo., Nov. 7, 1896; buried in Fairmount Park. Children born in Westminster, Mass: Charles M., Waldo, Cora Louisa, and Albert Carter.

Charles M. Carter, son of Sarah Amanda Russell Carter and George F. Carter, born Westminster, Mass., 1853; went to Denver 1879; married Nellie J. _____; member Denver Typographical Union, no. 49; lived 4 years Salt Lake City; 30 years in employ of Egan Printing Co., Secretary-Treasurer Typographical Union; died in Denver April 18, 1934, aged 81. Children: Genevieve, Harley W., and Waldo W. Carter.

Cora Louisa Carter, born September 2, 1861, at Academy Hill, Westminster, Mass.; teacher in Denver Public Schools; Sister Cora Fidelis in Episcopal Church order; on staff of Oaks Home, Denver. Last address we have is care of Mrs. Spence, 706 Pine St., Boulder, Colo.

Genevieve Carter, m. ____ Reybold. Children: Douglas, Anne Clark, Shirley Louise, Helen Wilder.

Information given by Dr. John A. Lowe, former librarian, Rochester Public Library

PERRY JAMES CARTER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Perry James Carter
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Perry James Carter, born at Pittsfield, Ohio, August 28, 1883

Name of father: James Townsend Carter, a native of Greenville, New York

Name of mother: Sarah Maria Gill, a native of Pittsfield, Ohio

Attended school or college: Oberlin, Ohio; Chicago, Illinois

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: August 3, 1927

Married: Yes, at Boone, Iowa, September 17, 1907

Name of wife: Marie Brickson, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Brickson

Biography File

JOSEPH B. CASS
OSCAR D. CASS

Dear J. F.: I would like to have some information about my grandfather and uncle, Joseph B. Cass and Oscar D. Cass.

I think they had the first bank here in the '60s. Later they owned the Cass and Graham block.

My grandfather thought there was no future for Denver and my grandmother wanted to go back to Chicago, so my uncle Oscar bought him out.

Ruth A. Ungemach
Denver

Dear Mrs. Ungemach: Dr. Oscar Cass came to Colorado in May, 1860, and practiced medicine here until November of that year. Together with a Dr. Hamilton, who later became surgeon of the First Colorado Volunteers, he started a small hospital which continued for a short time.

He had obtained a knowledge of mining and gold dust when spending some time in California. And he opened a broker's office in Denver. He was joined by his brother Joseph B. Cass from Leavenworth, Kan.

They operated a profitable business in banking, buying and selling gold dust, lending money and also freighting goods across the plains. In partnership with Dr. J. W. Graham they built the Cass & Graham Block.

In 1865 they sold their building and business to Ben Holladay who operated a stage line. Dr. Oscar Cass invested heavily in Denver real estate and was one of the builders of the city.

An item in the Denver Times dated July 8, 1872 mentions Joe B. Cass: "The pleasant rumor reaches us that Joe B. Cass, an 'old timer' of Denver, has struck a big thing in the Lincoln Lode up in the Fairplay region. His friends here will unite with us in rejoicing over the good fortune. Joe has dragged along between wind and water for several years, keeping a stiff upper lip under all discouragements; and now that there is a silver lining to his cloud, no one will feel envious or unhappy over the information."

Rocky Mountain News, April 13, 1952, p. 6A

JAMES MICHAEL CAVANAUGH
Hon. James M. Cavanaugh Dies Yesterday at Leadville
A Brief Sketch of His Career in the West

Hon. James M. Cavanaugh died at the Clarendon at 2 o'clock this afternoon of erysipelas.

The intelligence conveyed in the above dispatch is the more saddening in that it was wholly and totally unexpected. Death is ever and necessarily mournful, but when it strikes at some conspicuous and honored member of society, without even so much as a sign or shadow of warning, the shock is all the more terrible and overpowering. It is now only a few days since Mr. Cavanaugh returned to our city, after an absence of thirteen years, and his reception was of the most cordial and endearing character. On all hands and from every class of society there was a hearty welcome, and the desire seemed almost universal that Mr. Cavanaugh should again "pitch his tent" in our midst and resume a citizenship the loss of which even the state itself could ill-afford. And then, how genial and generous and warm-hearted was the honored dead! How bright of speech, how cordial in greeting, and what a flood of sunshine there seemed to radiate from that cherished manhood! How glad he seemed to be once more with those among whom he had spent so many of the most earnest and significant years of his eventful life, and with what confidence he looked forward to the future. Alas! that to-day we must record the untimely death of such a man, and pay a last tribute to such a sunnyheart and glorious nature. Alas! that one possessed of such great possibilities should have been cut down in the very promise of his prime, and when every avenue of honor and distinction seemed to be at his command.

Mr. Cavanaugh's life has been full of change and incident. He represented both Minnesota and Montana in congress, and was conspicuous in giving stability and prosperity to our own young territory. He was a man whose heart and pocket were always open to the appeals of charity--a man who delighted in doing good deeds unseen of men. He was versatile and brilliant, but seemed almost devoid of ambition, and the positions he has held were almost forced upon him.

His home was his heaven, and his wife and children the angels of his heart and hope. That he should have been cut down away from all these dearest ties is the most terrible feature of this shocking event, and one to contemplate with fear and apprehension.

Mr. Cavanaugh was born near the city of St. Johns, New Brunswick, in 1822. He read law in Worcester, Massachusetts, and came to Colorado in 1861. He immediately secured a large practice and was the democratic candidate for congress in the same year. In 1866 he went to Montana, and represented that territory for two terms in the national congress. At the expiration of his second term, he settled in New York city, where he remained till he concluded to resume his residence in Colorado. He was possessed of ample means but intended settling permanently in Leadville and continuing the practice of his profession.

It is only a week since he left Denver in the best of health and spirits, and apparently with everything to insure his success and happiness. And now he is dead. And though the decrees of the Almighty are not to be questioned and we can but bow our heads in chastened submission to the fiat of Omnipotence, we may be sure that the memory of such a man will be forever green -- so long as manhood and merit are cherished among men.

Rocky Mountain News, October 31, 1879, p. 8, col. 3

BEN MARK CHERRINGTON

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Ben Mark Cherrington
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Ben Mark Cherrington, born at Gibbon, Nebraska, November 1, 1885

Name of father: George W. Cherrington, a native of England

Name of mother: Laura Ida Frick, a native of America

Attended school or college: Omaha, Nebraska High School; Nebraska Wesleyan University; Nebraska State University, A. B. degree 1911; University of California, M.A. 1922; Columbia University, Columbia residence requirements completed for Doctor's degree 1924-1927.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: June, 1919

Married: Yes, at Denver, Colorado, June 1924

Name of wife: Edith Harper, daughter of Henry A. Harper and Mary Reece

Name of children and years of birth: Anne Mary Cherrington, born 1929

Avocation: Travel

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: 1913-16, Social Engineer, Berkeley, California, employed by Board of Education at Berkeley, California (See Colorado Clippings under University of Denver; Denver Post, July 28, 1938, p. 10; Rocky Mountain News, July 28, 1938, p. 1; Rocky Mountain News, February 25, 1939, p. 3)

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

1907	Director Playgrounds, Omaha, Nebraska
1917	Religious Work Director, Camp Lewis, Y.M.C.A.
1911-17	General Secretary, University of California, Y.M.C.A.
1919-26	National Secretary, Student Y.M.C.A.
1926-	Director of Foundation for the Advancement of the Social Sciences, University of Denver.
1928-	Chairman, Department of International Relations, University of Denver

HONORS AND RECOGNITION

University of Nebraska - Delta Sigma Rho, Pi Alpha Tau, President, Y.M.C.A., Debating Team.
University of California - Winged Helmet.
Columbia University - Kappa Delta Pi.
University of Denver - Pi Gamma Mu.

MEMBER: Colorado Social Science Association; American Academy of Political and Social Science, Institute of Pacific Relations, National Council Student Christian Movement of America, Colorado Council of Religious Education, Educational Committee. Member of the following Denver clubs: Mile High, University Club, Cactus Club. Fellow, Colorado-Wyoming Academy of Science; President, Colorado-Wyoming Social Science Association, 1929-30. Awarded trip to Europe for research, 1921, by National Council, Y.M.C.A.

BOOKS, REPORTS AND ARTICLES WRITTEN OR EDITED

Books: "The British Labor Movement" - 1922; "Ten Studies in the Sermon on the Mount" - 1925

Reports: "A Survey of Social and Economic Status of University Students and Professors in Europe" - 1921; "The European Student Relief Movement" - 1924; "American Students engaged in Industry" - annual survey & report, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923; "The Denver Tramway Strike" - 1920

Articles: Contributions to "Student World," "The New Student," "The Intercollegian," etc., on religious and social subjects.

ADDITIONAL ITEMS OF TRAINING OR ACHIEVEMENT

In 1920 created the "Students in Industry Movement" - i.e., University women and men employed as workers during summer - now an international movement.

1922 - developed the "Pilgrimages of Friendship" Movement - University men and women annually sent on tours of friendship to students of Europe, Mexico and Orient.

1922 - originated first "Farmer-Labor" Summer School in America.

1921 - Joint organizer with Sherwood Eddy of first American Seminar in Europe.

1920 - created the annual "Faculty Conference on Religion" for professors in the Rocky Mountain area.

1921, 1924, 1929 - Member American Seminar in Europe.

1929 - Director International Student Seminar, Geneva, Switzerland.

Please give autograph signature.

(signed)

B. M. Cherrington

Biography File

CHIPETA, WIFE OF CHIEF OURAY
Ouray's Wife, Chipeta, Revered in State's History
Edited by JACK FOSTER
Research by Ruth Beckwith

Dear J. F.: Can you tell me when and where Ute Chief Ouray's wife Chipeta died, and where she is buried? Also her approximate age? One writer thinks she must have been killed by soldiers who were after the outlaw Chief Colorow to return him to the reservation in Southwestern Colorado in the 1880s. After Ouray's death, she became an outcast and joined Colorow and his small party of runaways. Also, did someone write a book about Chipeta?

Everett Bair

Dear Mr. Bair: Mrs. C. W. Wiegel, writing in the Colorado Magazine (October 1928) tells about Ouray and his wife Chipeta.

Ouray, who was chief of all the Ute tribes of Colorado, married Chipeta in 1859. She was a highly respected and much loved princess of the Utes, and became widely known for her intellect and kindness. For a great many years, up to the death of Ouray, they lived near the present town of Montrose.

Chief Ouray took sick suddenly while on a visit to Ignacio and died there Aug. 24, 1880. He was secretly buried in a cave, but later his body was removed to the Indian cemetery on the reservation near Ignacio. Chipeta was present at the first burial ceremony, as was Colorow.

But I could not find anything to indicate that Chipeta had joined Colorow and his party. According to Mrs. Wiegel, Chipeta moved to the Ute reservation in Utah after Ouray's death and died there in August 1924.

Dr. Leroy Hafen of the State Historical Society tells me that Chipeta was about 80 when she died, although there are no definite records.

Chipeta's body was brought back to Colorado by a group of Montrose citizens and placed in a beautiful mausoleum on the old homesite there. Several acres of ground were purchased and the place became Ouray Memorial Park.

A monument was erected to the memory of Ouray and Chipeta, and a concrete tepee was built over the spring where they got their water.

I do not know of any book written about Chipeta, but at least two poems have been published about her. One by Eugene Field tells of the famous horseback ride she took to command the Indians to stop further hostilities in the White River uprising in 1879.

"She rode where old Ouray dare not ride --
A path through the wilderness, rough and wild;
She rode to plead for woman and child --
She rode by the yawning chasm's side . . . "

[A picture accompanies this article captioned: This print from Leslies' Illustrated Newspaper (December 1879) shows the residence of Ouray, chief of the Tabeguache Utes and head man of the Ute Nation. The carriage in front of the house was presented by Governor McCook. --Denver Public Library Western Collection]

Rocky Mountain News, February 14, 1954, p. 46

THEODORE AENEAS FRANK CHISHOLM

Date: December 11, 1937

No. 2 B954 D5 E16 F133
MAS/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Theodore Aeneas Frank Chisholm, Attorney
911 Midland Savings Building, Denver, Colorado

Theodore Aeneas Frank Chisholm*, born in Denver, Colorado, June 25, 1897; son of Colin A. and Frances (Johnstone) Chisholm.

Colin A. Chisholm, born in Inverness County, Scotland; son of Theodore and Margaret (McKenzie) Chisholm, the former of whom was the son of Colin and Mary (Macdonell) Chisholm. Colin A. Chisholm graduated from the University of Edinburgh (Scotland), with an LL. D. degree. In 1877, he emigrated to America, settling in Denver, Colorado, where he became associated with the Hon. Edward Oliver Wolcott and Mr. Waterman, in the law firm, Wolcott & Waterman. The Hon. Edward Oliver Wolcott was elected to the U. S. Senate in 1889. Colin A. Chisholm served as president of the Zang Brewing Co., in Denver, at one time. He died in 1921, and is buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, in Denver. He was a member of the Colorado Bar Association, and the Denver Athletic Club. His wife, Frances (Johnstone) Chisholm, daughter of Robert and Catherine (Waldron) Johnstone, was born in Toronto, Canada. She resides in Denver. Colin A. and Frances (Johnstone) Chisholm were the parents of 3 children: (1) Theodore Aeneas Frank. (2) Thelma, who was born July 17, 1899. She graduated from Oxford (England) University with the degrees, Doctor of Music, and Doctor of Languages, about 1921. She conducts private music and language lessons in Denver. (3) Colin H., who was born September 15, 1902.

Theodore Aeneas Frank Chisholm attended grade schools in Denver, and the East Denver High School; graduate, Regis College (Denver), 1915; student, University of Colorado; graduate, University of Denver, LL. B., 1925. On April 16, 1917, Mr. Chisholm entered the U. S. Army for service in the World War. He was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant, at Ft. Riley, Kansas, August 16, 1917. He served overseas with the 28th Division, and on October 16, 1918, was commissioned a 1st lieutenant, and attached to the 2nd Division, serving in the Army of Occupation. He was honorably discharged July 18, 1918. In September 1925, he began the practice of his profession in Denver, where he specializes in corporation, tax, probate, and insurance law. He has been a member of the local Civil Service Commission, since September 1935, having been appointed at that time. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Phi Delta Phi, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternities (past president, University of Colorado Chapter of the latter); Denver Athletic Club; University Club; American Legion (commander of Leo Leyden Post in 1929; State Judge Advocate of the American Legion, 1930-31); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Catholic Church. His hobbies are handball, swimming, and fishing. Mr. Chisholm is not married.

* For further data regarding the Chisholm family, see "History of the Chisholms", a book published in Scotland. Genealogical records of the Chisholm family (dating back to 1133) are in the possession of Theodore Aeneas Frank Chisholm.

ARMOND CHOURY

Experiences in the San Luis Valley<sup>1</sup>
As Told by Armond Choury to Agnes King<sup>2</sup>

I came to the United States from France at the age of nineteen years. A friend had written me a glowing account of a rich mine opening up two miles north of Zapata Ranch in the northeast corner of the San Luis Valley. Owners of the mine lived in Hartford, Connecticut.

I arrived in Alamosa on the 21st day of June, 1880, looked around and found a team going to Zapata Ranch (then owned by Ady & Durkee. In fact Durkee was the man of Durkee's salad dressing, etc.).

With my friends I stayed three months at the mine waiting for eastern owners to send money to work the mine. For some reason the money never came so I went to Mosca Pass and spent a month there with Charles Holly, brother of Doug Holly, who later lived at Mosca Pass and operated the Mosca Pass toll road.

I ran around a lot seeing the country and looking for work, finally landed back in Alamosa, heard there that there was a railroad near Raton, New Mexico. Asked fare to Trinidad. It was ten cents a mile. Now I would walk twenty or thirty miles a day, so decided I could make good wages walking, so walked to Trinidad. Got a job on railroad at Raton and worked there until twentieth of October.

Came back to Zapata to work, but no funds had arrived to work the mine, so I stayed at Zapata until after election. I must tell you about that election. (Mr. Choury here laughed heartily at the remembrance of his first election in the United States.) Mr. Ady had his headquarters at Zapata. When I came in election morning Mr. Ady took me in a low 'dobe room where election was being held. A long table made of rough boards supported on rough benches, a cigar box with a hole cut in the lid were the only furnishings. Three judges were seated at the table. I asked, "Mr. Ady, where are your clerks?" He replied, "So far we have no clerks and we want you to be one of the clerks."

I told him there were three reasons why I could not serve as clerk. "First, I am not a citizen of the United States; second, I am only twenty years old; third, I know nothing on earth about your elections in this country." Mr. Ady replied: "I defy anyone here to find anything in the election law that says a clerk has to be a citizen, and as far as your age is concerned, we will just forget that." I told him I would serve, but he would have to take the consequences. So I served as clerk of the election.

The tickets were little narrow strips of paper -- one ticket for Republicans and one for Democrats. Fifty votes were cast -- eighteen cowboys from Medano Springs and Zapata Ranch,

---

<sup>1</sup> Mr. Choury was one of our early pioneers. He was a young man of eighty years at the time I interviewed him, but died soon thereafter. He talked very entertainingly in a clear, strong voice, using the very best of English. His memory was excellent, remembering the smallest details of his early life in the San Luis Valley.

<sup>2</sup> For many years preceding his death Mr. Choury lived in San Luis, Colorado. Mrs. King, of Blanca, has lived in the San Luis Valley for sixty years continuously. Ed.

Ady and Durkee, T. B. Seely and his partner, House, some Spanish people, and several voters from Mosca Pass.

Times were bad and cattlemen were turning off help, so it looked bad for me for work. A fellow by name of Ed Murphy, a prospector, had a rich claim almost on top of the range on North Zapata Canyon and asked me to go up and prospect a while. I told him I had no grub. Mr. Ady said, "I will let you have a quarter of beef and a sack of flour," so we packed up and took to the hills. Went up by Charles Holly's mine. He told us the eastern parties had never come across with any funds, so there would be no work there. We went on up to Murphy's cabin, a hard climb through deep snow. The day after we got up to the cabin another heavy snow fell. All we could do was to get wood and keep warm. Had some two- and three-year-old magazines for reading material. Murphy was a banjo enthusiast, I had taken my flute along. We spent a lot of time playing banjo and flute.

The fourth of December our grub gave out. We held a conference as to what to do next. We had to do something, for we were out of grub and broke. Murphy said, "Let's go to Pueblo. We can get work there, for I hear much building is going on there." Pueblo was only a straggling little town just beginning to grow.

We struck out down the mountain to Zapata. No work there. They had laid off all men except just enough to feed the cattle. We walked on to Mosca Pass. Dr. Hastings, a brother-in-law of Durkee, lived there, kept a store of necessities and had charge of the Mosca Pass toll road at that time. It was quite a walk from Zapata to Mosca Pass through the snow. We asked Dr. Hastings if we could stay over night. He answered, "You are welcome, boys." He asked where we were headed for. We told him Pueblo. "On foot?" he asked. We told him "Yes." "Any money?" We told him "No." He said, "Boys, that is poor business afoot, no money, so far, snow so deep and weather so cold. As you boys know, I have to keep this road open for travel, so if you boys will help me shovel the snow out of the road, I will pay you $2.00 and board." This sounded good to us, so we went to work. The snow was two to four feet deep and it was really back-breaking work to shovel snow for ten hours a day. We worked at this for five days.

The day after we got through shoveling snow, I was sitting on the step reading when a man rode up. Looking up I noticed he was a Spaniard of small stature and very dark. I went back to my reading, when someone tapped me on the shoulder. Glancing up, I saw it was the man who had just ridden up. He asked me my name. I told him and asked his. He said "Miguel Espinosa." (No relation of the noted outlaw Espinosa.) He asked what I was reading. I told him "A Spanish book of adventure." "That is a good book. I have read it," he replied. He then asked if I was Spanish. I told him no, that I came from France, but lived just across the border from Spain. He then asked, "How is it that you speak Spanish so fluently?" "I learned Spanish in the University of France." told him I could teach school also. He remarked, "That is indeed strange. I was just on my way to San Luis to see if I could find a teacher for our school at Medano Springs, and have found one right here." I told him, "Your School Board may not approve of me as a teacher." He laughed. "I am the President of the Board, other members of the Board are my nephews, and what I do will be all right with them."

Then I asked him where the school was located. He replied, "About five miles south of Trujillo's and three miles east of Meadow Springs ranch building." He was, or seemed to be, much pleased, and said, "We will go to San Luis tomorrow and see about a teacher's certificate -- that is, if you can ride horseback." "Yes," I told him, "I served my time, was in cavalry before I left France." He rented a horse for me and the next morning after our arrival in San Luis went to see the County Superintendent of Schools. Charles Johns was Superintendent at that time. Mr. Johns asked for my qualifications for teaching. I told him I had never taught school, showed him my credentials, among them my B.A. Degree from University of France in Paris. After considering for a few minutes, he said, "I do not think it necessary for you to take a teacher's examination at this time, your credentials are enough, so I will issue you a teacher's certificate." I went back to Meadow Springs with Mr. Espinosa. He lived in an adobe house and school was held in one room of his house. Salary was $50.00 a month and room and board. The patrons of the school furnished the wood, school boys chopped it, the girls swept and dusted, I built fires, so they were out only the teacher's salary.

After my school closed I secured work at a saw-mill two miles north of Mosca Pass, worked there for four months, then went to Rico and worked until time for my school to open again. This time I taught in a little adobe house south of South Zapata buildings. Taught two five-month terms of school in this little building.

In 1889 went to San Luis to teach, was also appointed Post Master there. San Luis at that time consisted of a number of adobe buildings.

In 1891 Francisco Sanchez, a prosperous rancher and sheep-man, was elected Treasurer of Costilla County. (At that time Costilla County was much larger than now. In 1913 the northern half of it was consolidated in Alamosa County.) At that date Costilla County went to Baca Grant line north. Mr. Sanchez came to see me and said, "Choury, I am in a predicament. I am County Treasurer, but I know nothing about it, in fact can hardly write my own name. What I want to know is, will you serve as my deputy?" "What salary or what is there in it for me?" "I do not know what it pays," he replied. "I'll tell you it cost me $400.00 to get elected. If I get this back in two years and have the honor of being County Treasurer, you may have all the rest that is in it." I told him, "That is a bargain," so I became County Treasurer and served in this capacity for thirty-three years. Not all this time under above setup or as deputy though, and I also did a great deal of work in other county offices.

[Mr. Choury told me to call again and he would give me a good story on early days in Fort Garland and San Luis vicinity, but I did not get to go back and talk to him, and it was not long before the grand old gentleman died and left his colorful life of early-day experiences.]

NOTES TAKEN BY LEROY R. HAFEN IN AN INTERVIEW WITH MR. CHOURY
AT HIS HOME IN SAN LUIS IN JULY, 1930.<sup>3</sup>

I came here to San Luis in 1880 from New York, having been there eight months. Bielshowski (a Pole) and Posthoff (a German) were extensive wool buyers in northern New Mexico and southern Colorado. Their first store was at Costilla. They had branch stores at Fort

---

<sup>3</sup> Inasmuch as these notes pertain to Mr. Choury, I have added them here.--Ed.

Garland, Bandito, and Del Norte. Their store at Fort Garland was one hundred yards south of the fort quadrangle, hence they could sell whisky, while the sutler's store could not.

The fort had from 500 to 1,500 men. There were over 300 there in 1883. Once it had a whole regiment of colored cavalry there. The officers of the fort came to San Luis for their parties. Alexander St. Clair (great grandson of General St. Clair) succeeded General Washington. St. Clair came in response to an advertisement of St. Vrain and Easterday for a millright. He came here in 1858 and put up their grist mill. Then he put up a machine shop.

Present Costilla County is the only county in the state that has no public land. All the land is in the Sangre de Cristo Grant. Jacals were the first houses in Culebra Valley. They were made of poles set upright in the ground and plastered up. The poles were six or seven inches in diameter.

Moses Hallett came here to San Luis to hold court. They set up a big tent beside the jail and held court in it.

The settlers here raised wheat, corn, beans. Now the town is maintained mostly by laborers who go off to work at the Walsenburg mines or the Pueblo mills.<sup>4</sup>

Colorado Magazine, May, 1947

---

<sup>4</sup> McGrath's Pioneers says Mr. Choury married Mary St. Clair on October 19, 1887.--Ed.

MISS CHARLOTTE R. CHRISTIAN

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Miss Charlotte R. Christian
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Charlotte Ruth Christian, born at Leadville, Colorado, November 4, 1884

Name of father: Charles Jacob Christian, a native of Pottsville, Pennsylvania

Name of mother: Mary Catherine (Leffler) Christian, a native of Pottsville, Pennsylvania

Attended school or college: University of Denver (Bachelor of Arts degree, 1928); Colorado State Teachers College (State Teachers Certificate, 1928)

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Honorary State Teachers Certificate, Colorado, 1920.

Married: No

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Teacher, Denver Public Schools, 1909-

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Charlotte R. Christian

Biography File

GEORGE HENRY CHURCH

Out of the Past Come Memories of
George Henry Church

George Henry Church arrived in Colorado via ox train in 1859 and went directly to the mountains where he started investing in mining claims. These did not prove profitable, so he returned to Iowa and there married Sarah Henderson Miller. Coming back to Colorado on their honeymoon via covered wagon in 1861, they made their home at the mouth of Mount Vernon Canyon. Later, after a short stop near Haystack Mountain which is now between Boulder and Longmont, they moved in the spring of 1864 to Jefferson County to an area now identified as 104th and Wadsworth Blvd., or at the underpass where the Colorado and Southern railroad crosses Wadsworth.

At this point, the Church's established the first stage stop north of Denver on the road to Cheyenne, for the Overland Stage Company, and provided meals, lodging for travelers, and a livery for exchange of horses.

Realizing that water was necessary to make the valley productive, a ditch was constructed from the mouth of Coal Creek Canyon to provide water for the first irrigation reservoir built in the State, Church's Upper Lake. This project took place in 1870-71. Land acquisition in the area then began. Church's Lower Lake was built to store more water and irrigate more land. A contract was entered into with Golden and Ralston Creek Ditch Company, to acquire rights of way and to extend this ditch to cover the Church lands. The ditch takes water from Clear Creek near Golden, still operating and is known as the Church Ditch.

To provide additional water for the Church Ditch in the early 90's, a feeder ditch was built on the west side of Berthoud Pass to pick up water from First and Second Creeks. A tunnel under the Pass was built, and thus the first trans-continental diversion water system was born. This water then flowed into Clear Creek and was then picked up in the Church Ditch. The City of Golden recently acquired part of this water.

In 1869, Mr. Church brought the first Hereford cattle to the area, being shipped by train to Cheyenne and then driven to Jefferson County. Later, as his herd of cattle increased, a grazing practice followed for many years was to drive the cattle to summer grass over Rollins Pass (Corona) into Middle Park, and to return them to the plains late in the fall. Distinction was also gained by planting successfully the first wheat in the State.

Mr. and Mrs. Church lived a long and gainful life in Jefferson County, leaving one son, John Frank Church, who carried forward many of his father's early day projects. Living in the area currently is one grandson, Marcus F. Church, and Alice Tucker Haselwood, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Tucker. Mrs. Tucker was an adopted daughter as well as a niece of the Church's. The original Stage Stop area was purchased some twenty years ago and is still owned by Marcus F. Church.

The Territorial Daughters of Colorado, ca November 1963

ELROY NEWTON CLARK

Date: September 4, 1937

No. 2 B867 D5 E16 F23
LCD/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Elroy Newton Clark, Lawyer
Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

Elroy Newton Clark*, born at North Hero, Grand Isle County, Vermont, July 22, 1860; son of Ransom Loup and Sarah Ann (Hyde) Clark.

Ransom Loup Clark, born at Alburg, Grande Isle County, Vermont, in 1820. His father, Stephen Clark, was a farmer. Ransom Loup Clark who also engaged in farming, died in 1890. His wife, Sarah Ann (Hyde) Clark, daughter of Reuben and Rebecca (Tobias) Hyde, was born at North Hero, Vermont. She died in 1912. They were the parents of 8 children, 5 of whom were sons. Elroy Newton was the 7th child in order of birth.

Reuben Hyde, father of Sarah Ann (Hyde) Clark, and son of Jonathan Hyde, was born at North Hero, Vermont. He was a farmer. He married Rebecca Tobias. Jonathan Hyde, who was born at New Milford, Connecticut, in 1767, was the son of Jacob Hyde, the latter of whom was born at New Milford, in 1730. Jacob Hyde was the son of Jacob Hyde, Sr., who was born in 1703, and served as a captain in the Revolutionary War. Jacob Hyde, Sr. was the son of Thomas Hyde, who was born in Norwich, Connecticut, in 1672. Thomas Hyde was the son of Samuel Hyde, who was born in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1637. His father, William Hyde, who was born in England, in 1597, came to America with the Rev. Thomas Hocker, in 1633, and settled at Newton, Massachusetts. In 1636, he located in Hartford, Connecticut, and in 1660, was one of the original proprietors of Norwich, Connecticut.

Elroy Newton Clark, the subject of this sketch, resided on the home farm until 14 years of age, and attended the Barre (Vermont) Academy. He graduated with an A. B. degree from the University of Vermont in 1885, and in 1892, received an LL. B. degree from Georgetown University, in Washington, D. C. He financed his college education by teaching school, and was principal of the public schools at Fort Dodge, Iowa, following his graduation from the University of Vermont. After receiving his LL. B. degree, Mr. Clark practiced law in Chicago, Illinois, until March 1898, since which time he has continued in the legal profession in Denver. He served as general attorney for the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company from 1896 until his retirement in 1931, and was chief of the legal department of the railroad system during the World War. Mr. Clark, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Sons of the American Revolution; Delta Psi, and Phi Beta Kappa (fraternities); and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobby is fishing.

On July 1, 1901, Mr. Clark married Alice Babcock Calkins, daughter of Frank A. Calkins. Mrs. Clark was born in New York City. They are the parents of 1 child, Ruth Moulton, who was born in Denver, Nov. 14, 1906. She is at home.

* For further data regarding Elroy Newton Clark, see "Who's Who in America" (1938-1939), vol. 20, p. 561; and Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 3, p. 32.

MRS. GEORGE T. CLARK

Mrs. George Clark Recalls Leadville Gold Rush in '79
Distinguished Pioneer Was Friend of George M. Pullman and Lived in Cripple Creek During Boom

She and her husband were intimate friends of George M. Pullman in Central City.

They spent some time in Leadville during the boom of 1879 and were in Cripple Creek during the big gold rush. Her husband was Denver's third mayor.

These are a few of the high lights in the life of a distinguished pioneer, Mrs. George T. Clark, who makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. W. G. Wigginton, 1621 Leyden st.

REACHES BOULDER IN 1860

Eighty-four years ago, Katherine M. Goss was born in New York state. In 1860, the Goss family reached Boulder after a trip of three weeks over the plains. Frequently on the trip, they saw Indians, buffalo and antelope.

The Goss family had the first window panes in Boulder, as Goss had brought a little box of panes overland with him.

Two daughters, Katherine Adele and Harriett, were bells and beauties, and were so rosy-cheeked that they were often accused of using cosmetics. "No, they were painted by God," said a pioneer, and perhaps this was the first time the popular quip was used.

In 1864, Rev. O. O. Willard of the First Methodist Church, Denver, married Katherine and George T. Clark.

The bridegroom gave his bride a lovely little home on Arapahoe st. at 16th. It was furnished beautifully, everything having been brought from New York by a family who wanted to return East and cancel all connections with the "wild West."

Clark had a bank in Central City. Later he was the first cashier of the First National Bank, Denver, and the third mayor of Denver, being often referred to as the "boy mayor."

MOVE TO CENTRAL CITY

When General Sherman visited the city in 1864, he invited Mrs. George T. Clark to lead the grand march with him.

In 1865, the Clarks moved to Central City, where their daughter, Fannie Adele, was born two years later. In 1874, their son, Frank Goss, was born in Denver.

Mrs. Clark always has been a great lover of art and the beautiful, and did much in pioneer days to bring culture into the primitive West. She is a member of the Pioneer Ladies' Aid and honorary member of the Territorial Daughters. She has been almost an invalid for a year.

[A picture accompanies this article with the caption: Mrs. George T. Clark, another revered Territorial mother.]

Rocky Mountain News, December 16, 1927

JOHN R. CLEAVELAND

Chair named by his wife and daughter, Ruth Cleaveland Bates

John R. Cleaveland was born in Quincy, Ill., June 19, 1840, where he spent his childhood and received his education.

Feeling the urge for the "wide open spaces" he started in the spring of 1862 with a mule team and covered wagon, reaching Denver in August. He located in Central City the following year where later he was appointed postmaster. While holding this office he was sent to Washington for the purpose of changing the Central City post office from third to second class. the following year he was elected Clerk and Recorder of Gilpin County and during his first term in office he went to New Orleans and married Miss Helen B. Worrall. They returned to Central City to make their home.

Later moving to Denver he entered into partnership with George M. Collier, a former publisher and editor of a newspaper in Black Hawk. They established The Collier and Cleaveland Lithographing Company and continued in that business for many years.

Mr. Cleaveland passed away in 1928 in Pasadena, California.

Glory that was Gold by Central City Opera Association

DR. ROY LEON CLEERE

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B878 D5 E16 F41
LCD/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION
INDIANAPOLIS

Dr. Roy Leon Cleere, Secretary and Executive Officer
Colorado State Board of Health, Denver, Colorado

Roy Leon Cleere, born at Madisonville, Texas, December 20, 1905; son of James L. and Florence (Randolph) Cleere.

James L. Cleere, born in Oakland, Tennessee. His father, Dr. John Cleere, who was a physician, was the son of Richard Cleere, a farmer. James L. Cleere, in 1891, moved to Madisonville, Texas, where he became engaged in the livery business. He now is a merchant at Madisonville. His wife, Florence (Randolph) Cleere, daughter of Harvey and ___ (Grey) Randolph, was born in Huntsville, Texas. Harvey Randolph was a merchant, and an early settler of Texas.

Roy Leon Cleere, graduate, Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas (College Station), B.S., 1927; University of Texas School of Medicine (Galveston), M. D., 1929; graduate student, Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health, 1935-36. He served his internship at Kansas City (Missouri) General Hospital, after which he was resident physician to Presbyterian Hospital, in Denver, Colorado. Dr. Cleere, who maintained a private practice of medicine, in Denver, 1931-35, was appointed secretary and executive officer of the Colorado State Board of Health, March 1, 1935, and now serves in that capacity. He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A.F. and A.M.; American Medical Association; Colorado State Medical Society; The Medical Society of the City and County of Denver; American Public Health Association; Alpha Kappa Kappa (fraternity); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Christian Church. His hobby is golf.

On June 10, 1931, Dr. Roy Leon Cleere married Alice Stemmons, daughter of John and Alma (Zimmerman) Stemmons. Mrs. Cleere was born at Bowers Mill, Missouri. There are no children.

See Rocky Mountain News, August 25, 1935, p. 7
Colorado and Its People, vol. 4, pp. 255-56.

NEWCOMB CLEVELAND

Date: January 15, 1938

No. 2 B979 D5 E16 F151
MAS/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Newcomb Cleveland, President, Cleveland & Miller, Inc.
834 Gas & Electric Building, Denver, Colorado

Newcomb Cleveland*, born in Waukegan, Illinois, September 24, 1864; son of Frederick and Gertrude Maria (Van Vranken) Cleveland.

Frederick Cleveland, born in Vermont; son of Newcomb (I) and Gertrude Maria (Freleigh) Cleveland, the former of whom was a cousin of President Grover Cleveland. Frederick Cleveland, who was a druggist in Waukegan, Illinois, originated the formula for Cleveland's baking powder, and about 1870, established in Albany, New York, a company for the manufacture of same. He died in 1897, and is buried in Albany, New York. His wife, Gertrude Maria (Van Vranken) Cleveland, who was a native of Niskayuna, Schenectady County, New York, died in October 1918, and is buried in Albany, New York. She was the daughter of William and Catherine (Van Vranken) Van Vranken.

Newcomb Cleveland, attended the Albany (New York) Academy, and in 1886, graduated with B. A. and A. M. degrees from Hamilton College, in Clinton, New York. He was first employed by his father in the baking powder company, and later became secretary-treasurer of James Gould & Co., railroad car manufacturers, with which firm he remained 5 years. He subsequently was identified with Crane & Breed, buggy manufacturers of Cincinnati, Ohio. In February 1903, Mr. Cleveland settled in Denver, Colorado, where he entered the life insurance business, and later engaged in the surety bond business. He was manager of the Denver Dry Goods Co., 7 years, and in 1913, purchased a part ownership in the Leonard Jones Insurance Co., which was established in 1897. He later purchased Mr. Jones' interest in the firm, of which Mr. Cleveland has been sole owner and president, 20 years. The present firm, known as Cleveland & Miller, Inc., was organized in 1933, with the following officers: Newcomb Cleveland, president; E. J. Miller, vice-president; and Mary Raia, secretary. Business territory of the firm extends throughout Colorado, Wyoming, and New Mexico, as well as the El Paso District in Texas. They employ 400 agents, as well as 15 office workers. Mr. Cleveland, who served as president of the Tuberculosis Association of the City and County of Denver, 8 years, is a member of the Advisory Board for the New York World's Fair of 1939. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: National Economic League; University Club; Rotary Club; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America; sons of the American Revolution (past president for Colorado); Chi Psi (fraternity); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Central Presbyterian Church (elder; chairman, board of trustees).

On October 5, 1887, Newcomb Cleveland married Clara Louise Mather, daughter of Andrew A. Mather, of Otsego, New York. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland: (1) Dr. Mather, who graduated from Yale University in 1911, and from the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, in 1915. He is an orthopedic surgeon. He married Susan Colgate, daughter of James C. Colgate, a New York City banker. Dr. and Mrs. Cleveland are the parents of 6 children, Susan Colby, James Colgate, Mather, Jr., Mary Evelyn Colgate, Newcomb, and Patience Mather. (2) Gertrude Van Vranken, wife of Alston Madden McCarty. They reside in Denver. They were the parents of 3 children: Alston Madden, Jr.; Ann, who was born in 1919, and died in 1931; and Cleveland Mather. (3) Newcomb, who died in infancy. (4) Helen, who died in infancy. (5) Clara Louise who died September 17, 1936, and is buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver. She married Arthur Le Fever, and they were the parents of 1 child, Catherine Newcomb Le Fever.

* For further data regarding the Cleveland family, see "Who's Who in Denver"; and "Cleveland Genealogy", published in 1897.

See Rocky Mountain News, September 27, 1931, p. 1, sec. 2
The Encyclopedia of Biography, v. 31, p. 109

CLARENCE COBB

Date: January 8, 1938

No. 2 B970 D5 E16 F145
MAS/DFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Clarence Cobb, Co-Partner, Cobb & Stebbins
1010 Gas & Electric Building, Denver, Colorado

Clarence Cobb*, son of Charles Denison and Sarah Ella (Buckingham) Cobb; born in Denver, Colorado, June 18, 1871.

Charles Denison Cobb**, son of Charles Denison, Sr., was born in Lexington, Missouri, June 15, 1844. In 1861, he was appointed a recruiting officer in the Missouri State Guard with the rank of captain, but he resigned when the State identified itself with the Confederacy by passing the ordinance of secession, thus merging the State Guard into Confederate troops. He moved to Denver, Colorado, in 1863, following which he operated a pony express between Denver and Wyoming, and served also as an army post trader at Ft. Fetterman, Wyoming, awhile. In 1870, he established the insurance business of Crater & Cobb, in Denver, which firm later became known as Cobb, Winnie & Wilson, and subsequently adopted its present name, Cobb & Stebbins. Charles Denison Cobb, who was a Democrat, served as secretary of Riverside Cemetery a number of years. He was a member of the following: Denver School Board; City Council; I. O. O. F. (grand master of Colorado); and Episcopal Church (a vestryman, 50 years). He died May 9, 1914, and is buried in Riverside Cemetery. He was married twice. His first wife, Sarah Ella (Buckingham) Cobb, daughter of Dr. Richard Greene and Caroline (De Forest) Buckingham, died December 30, 1878, and is buried in Riverside Cemetery, in Denver. Four children were born of this marriage. On November 25, 1880, Charles Denison Cobb married, second, Florence Buckingham, another daughter of Dr. Richard Greene and Caroline (De Forest) Buckingham. The two children born of this marriage died in infancy.

Dr. Richard Greene and Caroline (De Forest) Buckingham, parents of Sarah Ella and Florence (Buckingham) Cobb, resided in Lexington, Missouri, at one time. In 1864, Dr. Richard Greene Buckingham moved to Denver, Colorado, where he became one of the city's leading pioneer physicians. He served as president of the Denver School Board in the 1860's, and was co-organizer of the Colorado State Medical Society.

Charles Denison Cobb, Sr., father of Charles Denison, moved to St. Louis, Missouri, when a young man. He was a merchant in that city several years. He died in Columbus, Missouri, in 1850. His wife, who was born in Ireland, came to America when 13 years of age. She died in 1895. They were the parents of 7 children, the sixth being Charles Denison. The name Charles in the Cobb family was used for five generations prior to the birth of Charles Denison Cobb, Sr. Early ancestors of the family emigrated from Kent, England, to America in Colonial days, and settled at Barnstable, Massachusetts.

Clarence Cobb, attended grade and high schools in Denver, Colorado, and graduated from Holbrook Military Academy, in Ossining, New York, in 1891. Immediately following that he became associated with his father's insurance business in Denver, becoming president of the firm in 1914. The business is now known as Cobb & Stebbins. Mr. Cobb is a member of the following: National Underwriters Association, Inc.; Western Underwriters Association; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Denver Athletic Club (a life member); Mile High Club (a charter member); Cactus Club (treasurer, and a charter member); Motor Club of Colorado (a life member); Denver Country Club; Denver Club; Denver Art Institute, Inc.; Y.M.C.A.; Sons of Colorado; Mountain Park Association; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and St. John's Cathedral (Episcopal). His hobbies are fishing, hunting, and golf. Mr. Cobb spends considerable time on his 50,000-acre preserve in Deer Creek Valley, Colorado, where he maintains a 10-room cabin.

In 1919, Clarence Cobb married Marguerite Bennett, daughter of Horace W. Bennett. Mr. and Mrs. Cobb are the parents of 1 child, Charles Bennett, who was born March 31, 1926.

* For further data regarding Clarence Cobb, see Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 20.

** For further data regarding Charles Denison Cobb, see William N. Byers, "Encyclopedia of Biography of Colorado" (Century Publishing & Engraving Co., Chicago, 1901), vol. 1, p. 388; and Wilbur Fiske Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 201.

Colorado and Its People, vol. 3, p. 204

MRS. JANE NUGENT COCHEMS
Salida Doctor's Widow Leaves $1,797,448

Mrs. Jane Nugent Cochems, 68, widow of a pioneer Salida physician and surgeon, left a personal estate valued at $1,797,448.

This was disclosed Monday when a bond for this amount was filed with County Court by executors of her estate. Mrs. Cochems died Oct. 1.

In addition, Mrs. Cochems left real estate valued at $85,000.

Mrs. Cochems was the widow of the late Dr. Frank N. Cochems, 85, who died Dec. 31, 1953.

Under terms of her will, Mrs. Cochems gave her housekeeper, Mrs. Cecelia Dubbert, $10,000. Mrs. Cochems lived at 401 Westwood dr.

Another $10,000 was given a distant cousin of Dr. Cochems, Waldo Hahn, who lived in Florida.

TRUST FUNDS

The rest of her estate will be divided into two trust funds to be known as the Dr. Frank N. Cochems Fund and the Jane Nugent Cochems Fund.

From the fund named for her husband she directed that $25,000 be set aside and the income given to a relative of her husband's, Allie Belle Cochems of Sturgeon Bay, Wis.

Another $25,000 will be set aside from the fund and from it paid each year, until the fund is exhausted, $2500 as a prize to the doctor who writes the best paper in the opinion of the judges on the subject of "The Diagnosis, Etiology and Treatment of Thrombophlebitis."

Her will directs that $50,000 from the fund be paid out during the next 10 years to old and indigent doctors who have been residents of Colorado for at least 10 years.

LIBRARY FUND

A sum of $100,000 will be taken from the fund and given to the Library Endowment Fund of the Denver Medical Society for investment with the income to be used for the purchase of books and the maintenance of a new library now under construction.

Mrs. Cochems directed that a suitable plaque or marker be erected in recognition of her "beloved husband."

The rest of the fund of her husband is to be divided into six equal parts and distributed to nine of his relatives.

From the "Jane Nugent Cochems Fund" Mrs. Cochems directed that half of it be given to a niece, Mrs. Lucile Foster DeWitt of 2589 Glencoe st., and the other half be divided equally between 13 of her relatives.

Rocky Mountain News, December 4, 1956, p. 12

MRS. JANE NUGENT COCHEMS
Mrs. Cochems Estate Value $1.7 Million

The estate of the late Mrs. Jane Nugent Cochems, who died Oct. 1, was valued Monday at $1,797,448.

A bond was filed by administrators in County Court with Judge Harry R. Sayre of Trinidad sitting for Judge David Brofman.

Mrs. Cochem's will, previously filed, set up two trust funds totaling $1 million to aid the Denver Medical projects and for assistance to "old, indigent Colorado doctors." The trust funds are named for her late husband, Frank N. Cochems, pioneer Colorado physician, and herself. The rest of the estate was to be divided among relatives and friends with one-half to go to a niece, Mrs. Lucille Foster DeWitte of 2589 Glencoe St.

Denver Post, December 4, 1956, p. 22

MRS. JANE NUGENT COCHEMS
Salida Doctor's Widow Leaves $1 Million Estate

Mrs. Jane Nugent Cochems, 69, widow of a pioneer Salida physician and surgeon, who died Oct. 1, left an estate valued at more than $1 million.

A petition requesting the probate of her will, filed with County Judge David Brofman, listed the value of her estate at more than $185,000.

However, it was understood that her estate is valued at more than $1 million.

A paragraph in her will said that her contemplated net estate after taxes and expenses of administration would be approximately $700,000.

Mrs. Cochems is the widow of Dr. Frank N. Cochems, 85, who died Dec. 31, 1953.

HOUSEKEEPER REWARDED

Under terms of her will Mrs. Cochems gave her housekeeper, Mrs. Cecelia Dubbert $10,000. Mrs. Cochems lived at 401 Westwood dr.

Another $1000 was given to a distant cousin of Dr. Cochems, Waldo Hahn, who lived in Florida.

The rest of her estate she directed to be divided into two trust funds to be known as the Dr. Frank N. Cochems Fund and the Jane Nugent Cochems Fund.

From the fund named for her husband she directed that $25,000 be set aside and the income given to a relative of her husband's, Allie Belle Cochems of Sturgeon Bay, Wis.

Another $25,000 she directed to be set aside and from it paid each year, until the fund is exhausted, $2500 as a prize to the doctor who writes the best paper in the opinion of the judges on the subject of "The Diagnosis, Etiology and Treatment of Thrombo-phlebitis."

INDIGENT DOCTORS

Her will directed that $50,000 from the fund be paid out during the next 10 years to old indigent doctors who have been residents of Colorado for at least 10 years.

A sum of $100,000 will be taken from the fund and given to the Library Endowment Fund of the Denver Medical Society for investment with the income to be used for the purchase of books and maintenance of the library building now under construction.

She directed that a suitable plaque or marker be erected in recognition of her "beloved husband."

The rest of the fund of her husband is to be divided into six equal parts and distributed to nine of his relatives.

Ivor Wingren is attorney and co-executor of her estate.

Rocky Mountain News, October 17, 1956, p. 52

MISS MABEL COE
Miss Mabel Coe Rites Set Monday

Miss Mabel Coe, 71, of Chipita Park, will be buried Monday at Mount Hope Cemetery in Topeka, Kans. Penwell-Gabel Mortuary in Topeka has charge of services and interment.

Memorial services will be held at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at the Church of the Wildwood in Green Mountain Falls, with the Rev. Conard Pyle officiating.

A memorial is being established for her with the Church of the Wildwood. Gifts may be made thru Miss Dorothy Sabin Jones in Chipita Park. Out of this, memorial flowers are being provided for the services at Topeka on Monday and at the church on Thursday. A perpetual memorial will then be established.

Miss Coe's body was found Friday afternoon in her Chipita Park home. She is believed to have died Wednesday.

She was born Nov. 17, 1891, in Rock Falls, Ill., the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Decius Octavius Coe. Miss Coe was a resident of Chipita Park since 1938.

She served as postmistress at Chipita Park during the 1940's, was treasurer of the Church of the Wildwood and was a member of the Ute Pass Library board, and other philanthropic activities of the Ute Pass area.

Before making her home in Colorado, and following her graduation from Washburn Municipal University in Topeka, Miss Coe served as an administrator at the Central Congregational Church in Topeka.

Miss Coe is survived by her brother Harry Kirk Coe, Topeka; a sister Miss Helen Ruth Coe of Los Angeles; a niece, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Coe Glasson, Scotia, N. Y., and two nephews, Douglas O. Coe of Denver and Willis Gleed Coe of Westfield, N. J.

Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph, December 23, 1962

COLE FAMILY RECORD

This family lived in Bloomfield, Greene Co. Indiana

John Cole, born Sept. 21, 1815, Kentucky, died May 1841(?) in Greene Co. Indiana, married 1 ? , 2 ? He was the son of Jesse Cole of Kentucky

Children:

1. William H. Cole, born Jan 20, 1841, died Dec. 7, 1876
2. Susan R. Cole, born July 27, 1842, died Aug. 3, 1842

Rachel J. Bradford, born June 7, 1825, died May 11, 1879, daughter of William Bradford of Greene Co. Indiana, married John Cole

Children:

1. Samuel R. Cole, born Aug. 23, 1845, died May 3, 1935
2. John W. Cole, born June 28, 1848, died Oct. 15, 1917
3. Jesse Thomas Cole, born Dec. 1, 1850, died Oct. 7, 1865
4. Cynthia A. Cole, born Feb. 13, 1853
5. Louise C. Cole, born Oct. 6, 1856, died Aug 1935
6. Edward G. Cole, born Sept. 30, 1859, died May 23, 1869
7. Elijah G. Cole, born July 12, 1861, died Jan. 9, 1878
8. Martha A. Cole, born Oct. 4, 1866, died May 24, 1938
9. Thomas E. Cole, born Mar. 12, 1869

1. Samuel R. Cole married Teressa Snowden (born Jan. 13, 1841, died Aug. 12, 1935), June 19, 1876. He died in Shelburn, Sullivan Co. Indiana
2. John W. Cole married Flora Jane Howe May 7, 1889. He died in Weld Co. Colo., buried Fairmount cemetery
4. Cynthia Ann Cole married David Frye. She died Feb. 23, 1931, buried Worthington, Indiana
5. Louise C. Cole married George Ford. She died in California
8. Martha A. Cole married Isaac Abram. She died in Indianapolis, Indiana at home of daughter Gertrude Brinson

Presented by Mrs. Ethel M. Cole Wills, 447 So. Hope St., Los Angeles, California

SPENCER COLE
Ancestral Chart

Spencer Cole, born Mar. 3, 1877 at Des Moines, Iowa, son of Samuel D. Cole and Eudora K.

Father: Samuel D. Cole, born Oct. 22, 1842 at New York, died July 1, 1895 at Des Moines, son of Spencer Cole and Almeda H. He married Eudora K., (born July 14, 1848 at New Bedford, Mass, died July 2, 1899 at Des Moines) Oct, 11, 1867 at Salem, Wisconsin.

Grandfather: Spencer Cole, born Mar 1, 1809 at Sterling, Conn., died Apr 27, 1863 at Salem, Wisconsin, son of Samuel Cole and Alice Pulman. He married Almeda H. (died Feb. 20, 1853 at Troy, N. Y.) Oct. 8, 1839 at Clifton, N.Y.

Great Grandfather: Thomas Cole, born Aug. 25, 1735 at Sterling, Conn., died Oct. 25, 1827 at Oxford, N.Y., son of John Cole Jr. He married Miriam K. (born 1737, died Dec. 15, 1827 at Oxford) Dec. 7, 1757. He was a private in the New York Militia.

Great Great Grandfather: John Cole Jr., born 1705 in England, married 1st - sister of Benjamin Franklin (?), married 2nd, Mary Bowen.

Great Great Great Grandfather: John Cole, born 1670 in England, settled in Rehoboth, now Sesunk, Rhode Island.

COLORADO PIONEER DENTISTS

Easing Pioneer Toothaches

By ROBERT L. PERKIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Denver and the dental profession struggled into existence at the same time.

The American Dental Assn. celebrates its 100th anniversary this year along with the centennial of the Rush to the Rockies, and the early dentists had waged a long fight to establish the integrity of their profession.

Denver pioneers with toothache were cared for at first by medical doctors who did a little tooth-pulling and pain-easing on the side. Fillings were unknown in the Pikes Peak country, and loss of a set of false teeth was a major tragedy with the nearest dentist no closer than the Missouri River.

FIRST DENTISTS

The first dentists to come to Denver were Drs. B. Wesley Rogers in 1867 and William Smedley in 1870, according to a history compiled by the Colorado State Dental Assn. in 1926.

The first city directory issued by D. O. Wilhelm in 1866, however, lists Drs. C. P. Moffett and E. A. Crocker, under the classification of dentists and locates both on Larimer st. between F (15th) and G (16th).

By April 1887 there were enough dentists in Denver that thought could be given to the formation of a dental society. A preliminary meeting was held in the office of Dr. J. M. Norman on F st., and this session represents the origin of the Colorado State Dental Assn.

Present were Drs. C. H. Bagley, J. H. Beals, Sylvanus Davis, George J. Hartung, H. P. Kelley, J. M. Norman, J. M. Porter, B. W. Rogers, P. T. Smith and F. H. Sutherland.

A permanent organization was effected on June 18, 1887. Dr. William Smedley was elected president. Dr. John W. Gramis of Colorado Springs was chosen vice president, and Dr. J. N. Chipley of Pueblo, corresponding secretary.

DENTAL COLLEGE

About the same time proposals were made to establish a dental college in connection with the University of Denver. The dental school was organized later in 1887 and in 1890 was admitted to membership in the National Assn. of Dental Faculties.

First dean of the school was Dr. A. B. Robbins, M.D. and D.D.S. Graduates in the first class of 1889 numbered four: Anna D. Chamberlain, Leonard A. Sanderson, E. W. Varley and Wilbur R. Wilson.

A second dental school was established in 1896 in connection with the University of Colorado Medical School at 18th and Stout.

The DU school, however, obtained a restraining order from the courts which forced CU to drop its dental course. The school was reorganized in 1897 as the Colorado College of Dental Surgery and was conducted until 1901, when the two warring dental schools were consolidated as a DU department. DU was forced to discontinue the school in 1932, but not before it had trained many prominent dentists now practicing in Denver.

Rocky Mountain News, May 6, 1959, p. 49

COLORADO PIONEER DESCENDANTS

Pioneer Descendants Bid to Celebration

Fifty prominent Denver residents, who are descendants of the first families of Denver of 50 or more years ago, have received invitations from the Mayor's Committee to attend the Denver Pre-Centennial Celebration at the Coliseum Wednesday evening.

With their husbands and wives, they will sit in the boxes of the Coliseum, behind the platform for former Denver residents who are to receive "Distinguished Citizenship" awards. Following the ceremonies, they and their guests will be honored at a champagne party in the Tiffin Inn.

The evening's festivities, scheduled to begin at 7:45 p. m., will include a historical pageant, narrated by Jack Foster, "The Last 100 Years," and Palmer Hoyt, "The Next 100 Years." Coloradan Ralph Edwards will salute a prominent Denverite on his "This Is Your Life" television program, broadcast from the Coliseum, and Ted Mack, University of Denver alumnus, will emcee a local talent show. The municipal band will provide additional entertainment.

Among those invited to the celebration are John Evans Jr., great-grandson of John Evans, second governor of Colorado; Charles Boettcher II, grandson of millionaire industrialist Charles Boettcher; A. E. Humphreys Jr., son of pioneer mining and milling industrialist A. E. Humphreys; and William Coors, grandson of the brewery founder Adolph Coors, early day settler and philanthropist.

Also, Miss Helen Bonfils, daughter of F. G. Bonfils; Mrs. John Vroman, daughter of Horace W. Bennett; Mrs. Elizabeth Titus Fisher, niece of Verner Z. Reed, and Mrs. Pierpont Fuller, granddaughter of W. G. Fisher.

Also, Miss Caroline Bancroft, granddaughter of Dr. Frederick J. Bancroft; Mrs. Thomas Knowles, granddaughter of Charles B. Kountz; and Merriam Berger, grandson of William Bart Berger.

Edwin Kassler; Robert Stearns, grandson of John L. Stearns and Mrs. Stearns, granddaughter of Gov. Frederick W. Pitkin; Mrs. George Garrey, daughter of A. E. Reynolds; Frank Ashley, grandson of E. M. Ashley.

Also, Mrs. Emily C. Wilson, granddaughter of Eben Smith; Mitchell Benedick, grandson of Col. Leonard H. Eicholtz; Mrs. Thomas Cosgriff, great-granddaughter of W. E. Bethel; William Sweet Jr., grandson of Gov. William E. Sweet; and Dr. Alfred C. Hicks II, grandson of Nelson Hicks.

W. W. Grant III, grandson of Dr. W. W. Grant; Mrs. George Hayden Jr., granddaughter of Gov. Henry Buchtel; Louis P. Bansbach Jr., grandson of Anthony Bansbach; and John Ryland, grandson of Gov. Job Cooper.

Denver Post, October 23, 1958, p. 67

COLORADO PIONEER DOCTORS

Bought His Lots With Bacon

By ROBERT L. PERKIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

First efforts toward organization of a medical society came in June 1860.

The Rocky Mountain News on June 6 carried a report on the meeting, held June 2. Dr. W. M. Belt was named chairman and Dr. Drake McDowell secretary and a resolution was adopted forming the Jefferson Medical Society, named for the extra-legal Jefferson Territory which the people of the Pike's Peak region had formed.

Appointed to committees were Drs. J. J. Saville, Sylvester Rankin and S. E. Kennedy. On June 4 the society met again and elected Dr. Belt as president, Dr. McDowell vice president, Dr. Saville treasurer and Dr. Kennedy secretary. Chosen as curators were Drs. J. F. Hamilton, O. D. Cass and Rankin.

The society also published a standard bill of rates which included a $3 fee for home calls and a charge of $25 to $100 for "curing syphilis."

But the Jefferson Medical Society fell by the wayside during the lean Civil War days. In 1864 another attempt at organization was made. On Sept. 24, Drs. W. F. McClelland, E. C. Strode, Field and Gant met with Dr. E. C. Gehrung in his office on 15th st. between Larimer and Market sts. to form a new society. It failed to flourish, and another short-lived attempt was made in 1868.

In 1871 a lasting association was formed. The doctors of the town met on April 4 in the office of Dr. R. G. Buckingham, who had come west in 1863. Eight doctors were present. Among them: Arnold Stedman, W. H. Williams, George R. Bibb, W. F. McClelland and E. E. Heimberger.

IMPORTANT MEET

At a second meeting, April 11, the Denver Medical Assn. was organized. Dr. Buckingham was chosen as president. Other officers: A. L. Justice, vice president; Stedman, recording secretary; Williams, corresponding secretary; Gehrung, treasurer; and Justice, Heimberger and Buckingham, censors. Others present that day included Drs. Frederick J. Bancroft, who had arrived in 1866, J. Swinburne Dickinson, Henry K. Steele, McClelland, Elsner and Bibb.

A territorial society grew out of the Denver association. The first convention was held in the Denver District Courtroom on Sept. 19, 1871. Temporary officers were Drs. G. S. M. McMurtrie of Central City and R. J. Collins of Georgetown. Twenty-four doctors attended, representing Denver, Central City, Georgetown, Laporte, Black Hawk, Pueblo and Idaho Springs. Dr. Buckingham again was chosen as president.

The organization named itself the Colorado Medical Society, but because Colorado then was a territory, it became generally known as the Territorial Medical Society. The duties of some of its standing committees indicate something of the nature of medical practice in the 1870s. One was named on topography, another on climatology and epidemics -- climate and altitude then were prime factors in medical care.

COMMITTEES

Another committee was named to investigate the materia medica of Colorado, the natural herbs which could be used as medicines in a day when each doctor's black bag was a pharmacy.

Still another committee was to keep an eye on the curative qualities of mineral springs, particularly hot ones like those at Idaho Springs and Hot Sulphur Springs.

The society's second meeting was held Sept. 24, 1872, in Denver's First Presbyterian Church, 15th and Arapahoe sts., to hear professional reports on catarrh, disease in Colorado, Colorado materia medica, obstetrics, vesical calculus, encephaloid tumor, fibroid of the uterus and diseases peculiar to high altitude.

Membership by 1872 was 27. When the third annual meeting rolled around in 1873, there were 42 members and the treasury balance stood at 75 cents. Membership climbed slowly to 301 by 1900.

Today the Colorado State Medical Society has 2353 members, 1020 of them in Denver county.

Dr. J. N. Hall, who came to Colorado in 1883, collected many anecdotes and reminiscences of the early doctors and medical practice in the state. Dr. McClelland, he recalled, once traded a wagonload of bacon he brought from Iowa in 1862 for the lots at the corner of 15th and Lawrence sts. upon which the McClelland Bldg. later was constructed.

HUGE DR. BANCROFT

There were many stories about the huge Dr. Bancroft, whose stature in the profession seems to have matched his bulk: over six feet tall and weighing 270 to 300 pounds. It is related that Dr. Bancroft traded much of Capitol Hill south of E. 14th ave. for a specially built carriage with heavy duty springs which would not sag to one side as he drove through Denver's muddy or dusty streets on his rounds.

On a consultation visit to Greeley, Dr. Bancroft once broke the springs of a buggy owned by his friend, Dr. Jesse Hawes, a very small, wiry ex-cavalryman. Next time Dr. Bancroft visited Greeley, Dr. Hawes met him with a haywagon drawn by four horses. A ladder helped the giant Denver doctor up onto the wagon, where he and Dr. Hawes seated themselves on a bale of hay and drove through Greeley laughing, Dr. Hall records, "like schoolboys."

Dr. Bancroft was physician for the early stagelines and later for the railroads and was one of the founders of St. Luke's Hospital. He also had a wide acquaintance among the ranchers and the Indians.

He once made the mistake, in repairing a double fracture, of setting a cowboy's bowed legs straight. "It took me a half hour of the hardest talking I ever did to keep that fellow from suing me for malpractice," he recalled.

One of his Indian friends was Chief Colorow of the Utes, whose ample girth almost matched his own. Meeting on the street one day, Dr. Bancroft patted Colorow's large tummy and inquired. "Papoose?" Colorow immediately patted the doctor's stomach and returned, "Heap papoose!"

[A picture of "Dr. O. D. Cass...early day Denver doctor and curator of the Jefferson Medical Society" accompanies this article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 1, 1959, p. 75

COLORADO PIONEER DOCTORS

Colorado Doctors Alert to New Wonders of Science

Early Crusader Against TB

By ROBERT L. PERKIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Dr. Charles Denison, for whom the library-auditorium at the CU Medical Center is named, not only crusaded for a cleanup of Denver sanitary conditions and water supplies in the 1870s but also was an early general in the war on TB.

Less than three months after Kock announced in Germany the discovery of the tubercle bacillus, Dr. Denison was lecturing to the Colorado State Medical Society at its 1882 meeting in Pueblo on the contagiousness of the newly identified disease.

Colorado doctors were similarly alert to the new wonder of X-ray.

X-RAY IN COLORADO

Roentgen announced his discovery at Wurzburg, Germany, on Dec. 28, 1895. Two months later, on Feb. 25, 1896, and half the world away, the new rays were demonstrated to the Denver and Arapahoe Medical Society in the Brown Palace Hotel by Drs. William Strieby and Florian Cajori, Colorado College physicists.

In the same month, Dr. Chauncey Eugene Tennant of Denver began use of the X-ray in his medical practice, according to Dr. W. Walter Wasson, historian of radiology in Colorado. In April of 1896, Dr. Tennant made what apparently was the first X-ray film ever admitted by a court as evidence. The film was admitted into the court of Judge Owen E. Le Fevre on April 14, 1896, and no earlier record of X-ray evidence has come to light.

During the same month, the new rays were again demonstrated to interested Denver doctors by Dr. E. P. Hershey, and electricians took an X-ray picture of Dr. W. F. Hassenplug's right hand, in which a buckshot charge was embedded.

There were several public demonstrations of the mysterious see-through rays in Denver that spring: at the Unity Church, University Club and for a week on the roof of the Denver Dry Goods Co. In June, Dr. Hershey gave a demonstration to the Colorado State Medical Society's annual meeting.

Meanwhile, Col. C. F. Lacombe, Denver electrical engineer, had taken what is believed to be the first X-ray film used to locate a bullet in the human body.

Dr. Tennant and a photographer for The Rocky Mountain News earlier had taken an X-ray photo which was published in the paper to show the wonders of the new discovery.

Dr. George A. Stover began working in radiology in Denver in 1897, and he limited his practice to the field in 1903 as one of the first four radiology specialists in America. Dr. Stover was a martyr to his new science. The long exposures used in the early days of X-ray left him severely burned on many occasions. He died at 44 after numerous skin grafting operations and the loss of two fingers.

Scientific leadership by the Colorado medical profession has continued to the present day.

DR. RENA SABIN

Colorado gave medical science Central City-born Dr. Florence Rena Sabin, who was enshrined last month in Statuary Hall at Washington, D.C., as one of America's greatest woman scientists. Dr. Sabin also is enshrined in the code of health laws which affects the lives of every Coloradan daily. The Sabin Health Laws were adopted in the late '40s after a hard-hitting crusade by the famous little grey-haired woman with the support of The Rocky Mountain News and the state medical society.

Dr. Sabin's scientific fame rested on her work as a Rockefeller Institute and Johns Hopkins cytologist, a student of living cells. A biography of her life and work by Elinor Bluemel recently was published by the University of Colorado Press.

More recently, national and international honors have come to Denver doctors and medical scientists for leading the way in heart surgery at Colorado General, Fitzsimons Army, National Jewish and Children's Hospitals; in asthma at the Jewish National Home for Asthmatic Children; in basic research and the drug treatment of tuberculosis at National Jewish Hospital; research on viruses, human growth, hypothermia (deep-freeze anesthesia) and embryology at the CU Medical Center: the first laboratory production of living cells in the Sabin Research Labs of the CU center.

Colorado medicine has come a long way in 100 years from the treatment of cancer with clover-blossom tea to the fantastic growing of pure "clones" of living cells under the microscope.

Rocky Mountain News, May 5, 1959, p. 43

COLORADO PIONEER DOCTORS

The Medics Loved West

By ROBERT L. PERKIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Dr. W. A. Kickland of Ft. Collins was a country doctor of high skill, and he loved the Western country he cared for.

A consultant from Denver who submitted a bill for his services to a remote farm family drew a bit of scathing frankness from Dr. Kickland on the buggy ride back to Ft. Collins:

"I have my opinion of a doctor who would charge a patient anything for driving 150 miles on such a lovely June day as this."

Dr. Ben Matthews, who had taught boxing and wrestling in Omaha before coming to Denver, eked out the slim returns of a beginning practice as a part-time blacksmith. He spent many days laboriously sharpening rockdrills used in the drilling of the Moffat Tunnel.

MOUNTAIN MAN

Another "mountain man" of the early Colorado medical profession was Dr. W. W. Tichenor of Rifle, known far and wide as an inveterate and skilled hunter. Dr. Tichenor could put 10 rifle bullets through a 4-inch circle at 100 yards in 30 seconds. He also bore across the top of his bald head a long scar from a bullet fired by an Indian rifle on a buffalo hunt in Kansas.

Dr. Hall himself knew old Jim Baker, the early trapper, hunter and mountain man of the Rockies who made Denver his home. Baker, Dr. Hall remembered, had many black pigmented scars over his cheek and around his right eye as a result of burns from early slow-burning black powder used in the rifles of the fur trade era.

Dr. Hall cared for Buffalo Bill Cody in his last illness during World War I and also knew Oliver P. (Old Scout) Wiggins, friend of Kit Carson and Fremont, who had helped handprint the first issue of The Rocky Mountain News. Wiggins, Colo., is named for him, and he named his ranch Byers after the founding editor of The News.

SPANNED ERAS

Another Denver doctor who lived from the pioneer era to modern times was Dr. John Elsner, whose mansion stood on 14th st. at the site of the present City Auditorium parking lot. Dr. Elsner arrived in Denver in 1866 as captain of a wagon train, and he recalled one stage station, a stopping-point on the trail, where the knives and forks were chained to the dining table to discourage immigrants from adding to their supplies of housewares.

Initial efforts of the Colorado medical profession to establish standards and police itself were augmented with the formation of the State Board of Medical Examiners in 1881. By 1898 the profession was so firmly established and respected that it played host to the annual convention of the American Medical Assn.

The AMA returned to Denver for its winter clinical session in 1952. More than 6500 doctors attended, and the meeting made medical history with a national television broadcast of the Caesarean delivery of a baby at Colorado General Hospital.

Colorado doctors were making medical history many years earlier. Despite the relatively small size of their profession, the quality was high and some local doctors won national and international accolades for notable discoveries and advances in medical science.

HEALTHY WEST

Some of the famous Colorado doctors came West for their health in the days when sunshine and fresh air were the treatments for tuberculosis. Denver's emergence as a medical center of national rank probably dates from the arrival in the 1880s and '90s of these highly skilled doctors, and the thousands of health-seekers who came here and thus drew more and more doctors to care for them.

One of the health-seeking doctors was Dr. Henry Sewall, who made his name revered in his professions. Dr. Sewall's pioneering investigations in physiology were widely hailed. He proved that pigeons could be immunized against rattlesnake venom, a finding which was one of the steps leading to antitoxin for diphtheria, once a death-dealing scourge.

Rocky Mountain News, May 4, 1959, p. 59

COLORADO PIONEER DOCTORS

Carnations to Brighten City's 1st Doctor's Day Fete

By ROBERT L. PERKIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Red carnations will bloom Wednesday on the lapels of the 1200 physicians of Denver in observation of the city's first Doctor's Day.

The doctors' wives, through their Woman's Auxiliary to the Denver Medical Society, will pass out the carnations and sponsor the observance, which marks the 85th anniversary of the founding of the society as Colorado's first professional medical organization.

Committees of four auxiliary members each will take up stations in the 14 private and public hospitals of the city at 7 a.m. Wednesday to pin the Doctor's Day carnations on the lapels of the physicians as they arrive to make their morning rounds.

* * *

The day will continue with a reception for members of the society and their wives at the Denver Medical Library, 1601 E. 19th ave., from 4 to 7 p.m.

Doctor's Day with its red carnations originated in Georgia several years ago, but this will be the first observance in Colorado. Objective of the auxiliary in sponsoring the occasion is to promote "the well being and honor of the medical profession and the commemoration of the physician's efforts toward better health."

Denver's first Doctor's Day will point to a tradition of service going back to April 11, 1871.

On that date, five years before Colorado became a state, 12 doctors gathered in the office of Dr. W. F. McClelland to form the Denver Medical Assn., direct lineal forebear of the present Denver Medical Society and the first medical organization in the Territory of Colorado.

* * *

The 12 original members of the group were Drs. F. J. Bancroft, George R. Bibb, R. G. Buckingham, J. S. Dickinson, John Elsner, E. C. Gehrung, D. E. Heimberger, A. L. Justice, Arnold Stedman, H. K. Steele, W. H. Williams and McClelland. They chose Dr. Buckingham as their first president, Dr. Justice as vice president, Dr. Stedman as recording secretary, Dr. Williams as corresponding secretary and Dr. Gehrung as treasurer.

Dr. Buckingham was born in Troy, N. Y., in 1816 and had come to Denver in 1863, only five years after the town was founded. He was to become one of the young city's most prominent citizens, serving in the Territorial Senate in 1874 and as mayor in 1876.

He practiced in Denver until shortly before his death in 1889.

* * *

Before the year 1871 was out, 55 Denver doctors had subscribed to the group's constitution and joined the association. At this time the city's population was about 5000 persons.

One of the early subjects discussed was "The Sanitary Condition of Denver."

Upshot of the discussion was a recommendation by the association for establishment of a "a sanitary system for Denver so organized as to create individual responsibility with officers competent to perform these functions."

This resolution was the origin of the present city Health Department.

Within two months after they had organized the Denver doctors set about to establish the state-wide organization which was to become the Colorado State Medical Society.

* * *

At a meeting June 16, 1871, again in Dr. McClelland's busy office, the Denver association instructed its secretary to notify all physicians residing in the Territory that a meeting would be held in Denver on Sept. 19, 1871, to form a territorial medical association.

When that meeting was held, Dr. Buckingham was elected first president of the territorial society.

Dr. McClelland, in charge of both organization meetings, had been practicing in Denver since 1862. He received his M.D. degree from Jefferson Medical College in 1849, and practiced in Council Bluffs, Iowa, before journeying across the plains to Denver.

Dr. McClelland was the Colorado doctor's first delegate to the American Medical Assn.

* * *

Of the 55 first signers of the constitution of the Denver society, only one, Dr. W. R. Buchtel, has a relative by the same surname practicing medicine in Denver today.

Dr. William R. Buchtel was born in 1845 in Ohio. He was graduated from the Chicago Medical College and in April 1864, became surgeon of military railroads under Gen. Sherman. He was married in 1871 to the second daughter of P. T. Barnum, famous showman, and the couple came west to Colorado to seek a cure for Dr. Buchtel's tuberculosis.

After a few years on a ranch near Denver, he was able to return to practice in the city and was an active member of the medical profession until his death in 1912. The section of Denver known as Barnum was at one time owned by his wife, to whom it was deeded by her father.

Dr. F. C. Buchtel's son, Dr. Henry A. Buchtel III, is an active member of the Denver Medical Society today, the fourth generation of doctors in his family and the great-nephew of one of the signers of the first constitution of the society.

* * *

The Denver society is the first of a number of medical organizations formed before the turn of the century in an era when kitchen tables were used for surgery and Arapahoe County Hospital (now Denver General) proudly reported, in 1892, that it had placed in service "an excellent 2-horse ambulance" and made a connection with the city sewer.

The Denver Clinical and Pathological Society was formed July 14, 1892, for the scientific discussion of case histories and exchange of medical knowledge. The society still meets regularly in Denver.

On May 26, 1894, three physicians -- Drs. E. A. Sheets, I. B. Perkins and John T. Davison -- founded the Denver Medical Club as an alumni group of the old Denver Medical College. This group also still meets regularly.

[Pictures of Dr. A. L. Justice, Dr. Arnold Stedman, Dr. R. G. Buckingham and Dr. W. H. Williams accompany this article.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 8, 1956, p. 12

COLORADO PIONEER DOCTORS

By ROBERT L. PERKIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

The Colorado medical profession has given the city, state and national civic and political leaders as well as surgeons and family bedside doctors.

Colorado's second territorial governor, John Evans, 1862-1865, was a noted physician before he became a financier and statesman. Dr. Evans received his M.D. degree from the old Clermont Academy in Philadelphia in 1838.

He practiced first in Attica, Ind., and soon became one of the very earliest voices pleading for more humane treatment of the mentally ill. He obtained establishment of the first Indiana insane asylum and served as its first superintendent.

Later he became a professor in the Rush Medical College in Chicago. During the 1848-49 cholera epidemic in the Midwest, Dr. Evans published a monograph suggesting that perhaps this disease was contagious and that quarantines should be invoked. He also was one of the founders of Mercy Hospital in Chicago, as well as Northwestern University in 1853.

DOCTOR-MAYORS

Two Denver physicians became mayors of the city. Dr. R. G. Buckingham, one of the handful of pioneer medics, was mayor 1876-1877. Dr. J. M. Perkins held the mayor's chair in 1913-15 when Denver was experimenting with a commission form of Government.

Dr. Perkins was commissioner of health and was elected by his fellow commissioners to the honorary and ceremonial post of mayor. His widow still is living in Denver at 1315 Clayton st. A son, Dr. Earl Perkins, recently retired, after a long medical career, and a nephew, Dr. James M. Perkins, is today an active leader in Denver medical circles.

One of Colorado's four cabinet members also was a physician and a pioneer in the developing field of psychiatry. Dr. Hubert Work began practice in Greeley in 1885 and later established Woodcroft Hospital in Pueblo in 1896 for treatment of mental ills.

In addition to his professional work, Dr. Work became a state and national Republican leader, holding the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee for one term. He was appointed postmaster general in 1922, and the following year was made Interior Secretary, serving until 1928.

EARLIEST MEDICS

Aside from redskin medicine men, the first physicians to practice their arts and sciences on Colorado soil probably were in the Army or volunteer surgeons which accompanied the early exploration parties.

If there were doctors accompanying the various Spanish expeditions which earlier probed into the Rockies and out onto the plains, their names are not known. Possibly there were barbers along, bringing their equipment for bleeding; the shallow basin with the cut-out brim which is familiar as the helmet of that good knight, Don Quixote.

One of the 25 men in the expedition of Lt. Zebulon Montgomery Pike was Dr. John Hamilton Robinson, volunteer surgeon and probably the first American physician to visit the Shining Mountains. Dr. Robinson was only 24 and he became close companion-of-the-trail to the also young explorer.

"Dr. Robinson has accompanied me the whole route," Pike said in an official report, "is still with me, and of whom I take pleasure in acknowledging I have received important services as my companion in danger and hardships, counsellor in difficulties and to whose chemical, botanical, and minerological knowledge, the expedition was greatly indebted. In short sir, he is a young gentleman of talents, honor, and perseverance, possessing, in my humble opinion, a military mind and would, I believe, in case of augmentation of the army, enter if he could obtain a rank above a subaltern."

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

Dr. Robinson later became a soldier of fortune, helped the Mexican army in its fight for freedom from Spain, retired as a brigadier general and settled in Natchez, Miss., to resume medical practice.

The next doctor to visit Colorado was Dr. Edwin James, surgeon, botanist, geologist and subsequently the historian of the Maj. Stephen Long expedition of 1820. On June 13 Dr. James was one of three men in the Long party who made the first recorded ascent of Pikes Peak.

Major Long named the peak for James, and is so appeared on maps for nearly a quarter-century. Fremont changed the designation to Pikes Peak in 1843, and the name of the exploring surgeon later was given the peak west of Denver through which the Moffat Tunnel was bored.

In his later years Dr. James became an ardent temperance worker, although in his account of the Long expedition he tells how he passed out medicinal whiskey to the men to help them celebrate the Fourth of July while encamped near the present site of Brighton.

Dr. F. Adolph Wislizenus, refugee German revolutionist who received his medical education in Zurich and Paris, made a 6-month tramp through the Rockies and Colorado in 1839.

[A photo accompanying this article is captioned: "The late Dr. J. M. Perkins, who was mayor of Denver from 1913 to 1915, examines the throat of a youngster at the opening of a dispensary back in the teens."]

Rocky Mountain News, April 29, 1959, p. 41

COLORADO PIONEER WOMEN
U. S. Official Praises Colo. Pioneer Women
By GENE WORTSMAN
Rocky Mountain News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 24 --Gold was the thing that first brought women to Colorado, where they found life dangerous, long and hard.

Immediate rewards were few, "But," said Elmer F. Bennett, undersecretary of the Interior Department, "to them Colorado owes much of her vitality and strength."

Bennett took 41 pages to describe "pioneer women of Colorado" to the Potomac Corral of the Westerners here.

Among the women he described was Elizabeth Minerva Sumner Byers, wife of the founder of The Rocky Mountain News. Bennett called the Byers "one of the most important husband and wife partnerships ever to reach Colorado gold fields."

100th ANNIVERSARY

"By a strange coincidence," Bennett added, "your meeting of the Potomac Corral tonight falls on the 100th anniversary of the appearance of The Rocky Mountain News. I do not know how many newspapers of the United States, if any, can equal its history of 100 years, but certainly they are very few."

Bennett said Julia Archibald, who married James N. Holmes, was one of the first white women to reach Colorado.

The Nova Scotia woman was immortalized in a book, "A Bloomer Girl on Pikes Peak -- 1858."

She traveled with her husband by wagon train and on Aug. 5, 1858, she was the first woman to reach the top of Pikes Peak -- wearing bloomers.

Katrina Wolf, a native of Germany who married Henri Murat, a Frenchman, became known as "the mother of Colorado," said Bennett.

They reached the South Platte on Nov. 3, 1858, and a few months later were in Auraria where Katrina made the first United States flag in Colorado using a flannel petticoat, a silk petticoat and a flannel dress.

Bennett said the woman who gave birth to the first child in the new Pikes Peak settlement was Mrs. William McGaa. The birth occurred on March 3, 1859.

PHILANTHROPIST

"The only woman among the 18 persons honored in the life-sized stained glass portraits placed in the Colorado Capitol in 1900," said Bennett, "was Mrs. Frances Wisebart Jacobs, a pioneer philanthropist who arrived at Central City in 1863. She came across the plains in a covered wagon. In Colorado's history, she is known as the 'mother of charities.'"

Bennett mentioned these other pioneer women of Colorado -- Ellen Kellog Hunt, wife of Alexander E. Hunt, one of Colorado's territorial governors.

Miss Indiana Sopris and Miss India Ring, the first and second women school teachers to arrive in Denver.

Martha Stallings, who married Joel Estes Sr., founders of Estes Park.

Augusta and Baby Doe Tabor, first and second wives of Horace Tabor.

"Silverheels," a dance hall girl at Fairplay who administered to the sick during an epidemic and for whom a mountain was named.

The Indian girl Amache who married John Wesley Prowers, rancher, legislator, banker of Las Animas.

Mate Smith, who left a $32-a-month school teaching job in Pennsylvania to take one at $70 a month near Longmont and who loaned part of her first pay to building an irrigation project.

Rebecca Hill, who married Ben Eaton, who became governor.

Shawsheen, the Indian woman whom federal troops saved from Cheyennes in 1863 and who, in 1879, repaid the debt by saving Mrs. Nathan C. Meeker, a captive of the Utes.

Rocky Mountain News, April 25, 1959, p. 21

COLORADO PIONEER WOMEN
Endured Hardships Settling West
Raids of Indians Constantly Feared By Frontier Wives

The women who came to Colorado in the early '60s were brave of heart and steadfast of purpose, and they willingly left home and kindred in the East to journey toward the untried land of promise in the sunset country.

It required six weeks to make the trip from the Missouri River to Denver by the prairie schooner route -- six weeks without properly prepared food, six weeks of physical discomfort by day and night, six weeks of fear and dread of attacking Indians.

But this was only the prelude to their story of peril and privation.

INCREDIBLE STORY

There is the incredible story of Mrs. Elizabeth Crowley, who came across the plains on her wedding journey in '59. She and her young husband escaped three massacres, survived three floods and still persisted in building a home in West Denver.

And there is the moving story of Mrs. D. Tom Smith, told in her own words to a friend long ago.

"When we reached Denver it was just a little handful of houses. We decided to swell the number and soon began to build a house of our own.

"We were not contented, however, because we came right in the midst of the worst of the Indian raids. All that year we had terrible trouble with the red devils, as we called them.

LOST ON PRAIRIE

"It was necessary for my husband to go to another camp; but I could not follow him until after the birth of my baby. Just myself, my baby and our driver started on that perilous journey. When we were right out on the middle of the plains we lost the trail. The driver got out of the wagon and went ahead to look for it.

"While he was gone I saw the Indians coming, so I whipped up the horses and drove like mad across the prairie -- all by myself. I thought every minute they would get me and the baby; but I drove and drove and yelled and shouted to the horses, never daring to look back. The darkness of night was all that saved us.

"When morning came and I believed we were safe, I fell upon my knees and offered a prayer of thanksgiving; but my job was soon turned into mourning.

BABY IS DEAD

"When I took my baby up and hugged him close to my heart I found the little one cold in death. I wrapped the precious little form in a blanket and laid it down in the straw in the wagon bed while I drove for miles and miles before I came to the settlement."

Another story, familiar to every pioneer, is related by Mrs. Henry M. Sales, who came to Colorado in '61 when she was a child. Her story of the massacre of the Hungate family is historical:

"This family, consisting of a father and mother and three children, came to Colorado like all the rest to glean a living.

WHOLE FAMILY SCALPED

"One day, when I was a little girl," she said, "I noticed quite a crowd standing around a wagon which was in front of the jail located on what is now Larimer st. My childish curiosity got the best of me, so I crossed the road to where the wagon stood and climbed up on one of the wheels. Looking over the edge of the box I saw a sight too horrible for words. There in the bottom of the old wagon, lying on the bedding of coarse straw, were the bodies of this entire family, their heads scalped, with the exception of the baby's and great slits in their bodies where their hearts had been taken out. The baby's throat was gashed from ear to ear."

Mrs. Henry C. Sutman of Monongahela, Pa., a daughter of the Rev. A. R. Day, who organized the first Presbyterian Church in Denver, writes quaintly of her participation in a bogus Indian raid:

"At that time Denver was scarcely more than a village and its inhabitants were in constant fear lest some one of the hostile bands of Indians roving over the plains should suddenly swoop down upon them, murdering, plundering and burning as was their fiendish delight. This terror kept every man on the alert, ready to defend the venturesome men, brave women and helpless children in case of danger.

INDIANS ARE COMING

"The expected call came one summer evening in 1864.

"A man came tearing up the street on a foaming horse, loudly calling, 'The Indians! the Indians! Fly to shelter.' He declared he had seen a large band on the warpath and they were coming so fast they could not be far behind him.

"Of course, we were all desperately frightened and did not lose a moment's time in preparing for flight to the mint, then the strongest building in town, where the women and children were to be guarded. An aunt, Mrs. William J. Phillips, had me in charge on that historic journey to the mint.

"Panic-stricken people, some only partially dressed, others carrying all sorts of ridiculous articles -- one old woman was bending under the burden of her feather bed -- were hurrying to places of safety. From the hysterical screams heard on the outskirts we were sure the Indians had already reached the town and were scalping the first victims. Our little group, led by my father and mother, quickened its pace, when I suddenly discovered that a precious possession of mine had been left behind -- and, Indians or no Indians, I must have it.

WANTED HOOPSKIRTS

"Hoopskirts were 'in' for small girls as well as women, and I was the proud possessor of a set. Please try to imagine how very precious they were when they had to be brought in wagons for hundreds of miles, and do not blame a small girl too severely for holding up such a procession, until she could be properly prepared to be scalped. There was a tantrum in the street, which was promptly suppressed by Aunt Minnie, a most determined young woman, who shook me soundly and sent me off mintward at a lively pace.

"We found the mint crowded with frightened women and children, while outside were the men, being armed and given directions how to meet the expected attack.

"All night long the mothers sat with their children gathered close in their arms, breathing prayers for deliverance from the savage foe -- and all night long, until the dawn came, the men paced back and forth, ready at the first sound of the dreaded war-hoop to fight for their own as long as life remained."

TOLD TO KILL SELVES

"The women were instructed, if all the men were killed, to set fire to the building and die in it, rather than be subjected to the cruelty of the redskin fiends. It was a cheerful prospect.

"We waited and waited, but the morning sun rose to find the little city still lying safe at the foot of the Rockies, and no Indians anywhere in sight.

"The men proposed that, as the Indians did not come to us, that they go to them. Accordingly they did so, to find that the supposed Indian camp was nothing more nor less than a peacefully-sleeping lumber camp. The lumber men, in getting their oxen to the corral, often made a great deal of noise."

GEORGETOWN TRIP

Mrs. Phillips came to Denver in 1861 and traveled to Georgetown on top of a load of groceries, carrying a baby and a bird cage with three birds, on her lap. At Idaho Springs she found the comfort and shelter of the Beebee House, and from this point she decided to follow the trail afoot -- baby, birds and bundles, and all.

Later she returned to Denver and was here in time to participate in the perils of the flood, the Indian raids, and all the other hair-raising experiences of the early days.

Mrs. Minnie Cort-Phillips, as she is sometimes called, played an important part in Colorado's development by "finishing" some of Denver's distinguished matrons. As teacher of painting and drawing in Wolfe Hall when that first school for girls was established by Bishop Randall, she was well known to all of Denver's first families.

It is a disputed fact whether or not the Countess Katrina Murat was the first white woman to come to Colorado. She arrived here in 1858 with her husband, Count Henry Murat, said to be a relative of Napoleon. No one doubted their noble connections and they became prominent and progressive members of the little community. Further distinction was conferred on them by the fact that they once entertained Horace Greeley. The countess was our first laundress and her husband a barber. The journalist was stopping at one of the hotels of the city but the hilarity of the robust guests so disturbed him that the Murats took him to their home, where he remained during his visit here. It is also recounted that Henry Murat charged him $5 for a shave and a haircut, whether before or during his time as their guest is not recorded, but the fabulous price is said to have aroused the ire of the famous Greeley considerably.

Rocky Mountain News, April 22, 1939, p. 2

COLORADO SOD HOUSE PIONEERS

Coloradans Recall Life in Sod Houses

EDITED by JACK FOSTER

Research by Frances Melrose

Many letters and phone calls were received as a result of an inquiry about sod houses, which was published April 12 in the Colorado Question Box. Excerpts from a few of them follow:

Dear J. F.: My father, S. L. Howell, homesteaded near Vona, Colo., in Kit Carson County in 1890. Your article on sod houses was most interesting to me, because the homestead my father built was a sod house in which we lived from 1890 to 1912.

Glenn Howell
4100 S. Lincoln st.

Dear J. F.: If the party who wrote you inquiring about sod houses will contact me, I may be able to add a little to his information.

As a youngster, I helped build a sod house in Eastern Colorado and lived in it for a number of years.

A. M. Roehling
4709 W. 34th ave.

Dear J. F.: When I was married in 1904, we went to live with my husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Norris. They lived in an old sod house in Godfrey Bottoms on the old Denver - Greeley highway. We lived there until 1927.

The house was made of sod, with walls 2 1/2 feet thick, plastered outside and in. Inside we always papered the ceiling and walls. It was warm in winter and cool in summer. Our four children were born there.

The house still stands, but the present owner has weather-boarded it on the outside. I have a picture of it, taken more than 50 years ago.

Mrs. Ernest C. Norris
La Salle, Colo.

Dear J. F.: As a child, I lived in a sod house in the area of West Four Mile Creek, not far from Canon City. My brother and I made a flower garden on the roof.

There were a number of these cabins in the vicinity, and I am sure some still are standing. To reach them, take the road heading out of Canon City, going around the prison grounds, toward the Royal Gorge. But do not take the Gorge turn-off. Keep going until you reach West Four Mile Creek. Cabins of logs with sod roofs line both sides of the creek as far as Guffey.

My parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Cheney, came to Denver in a covered wagon and went to Cripple Creek about 1892. My father built the Midland Terminal Depot there. About 1900 they left Cripple Creek to build the house at West Four Mile Creek.

Mrs. Orpha Hall
3445 W. 53d ave.

Rocky Mountain News, May 3, 1959, p. 9a

MR. AND MRS. JUSTUS COMBS

'Love Too Much to Bicker,' Is Golden Wedding Secret

Mr. and Mrs. Justus Combs, among the first settlers in South Denver, were feted yesterday at a celebration at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Mackin Musgrove, Arapahoe County coroner, in honor of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Mr. Combs, who is 75, and his wife, Susanna, 69, took up their residence at 1488 S. Logan st. in 1896. As children they had romped about together in Bavaria.

Mr. Combs came here at the age of 14. Several years later his bride-to-be arrived, and they were married six weeks afterward.

Honor guests at an elaborate banquet set for them by Mrs. Musgrove, the Combs told the secret of their happiness in marriage.

"We were too much in love to bicker over our differences," said Mrs. Combs. "It always has been a 50-50 proposition with us."

Present at the celebration were three sons of the couple -- Charles of Portland, Ore.; Albert of Los Angeles, Calif.; and George of Oakland, Calif.; and their wives. All came here especially for the occasion.

Four grandchildren -- Ida, Anna, and Joseph Mackin and Charles Combs Jr. -- also were present. Another grandchild, Mrs. Frances Van Every of San Francisco, Calif., and great-grandchild, Carolyn Gale Van Every, were unable to come to Denver for the celebration.

[A picture accompanies this article with the caption: Fifty years of wedded happiness were celebrated yesterday at a family reunion at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Mackin Musgrove, Arapahoe County coroner, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Justus Combs, shown here. Mr. and Mrs. Combs, who first met in Bavaria, attribute their successful wedded life to a "50-50" understanding at the time of their marriage. --Photo by Out West Studio.]

Rocky Mountain News, June 3, 1934, p. 20

ALEXIS COMPARET
Bernhardt Discovers Comparet
Why Brown's Name Is Not There
By EDWARD RING

In any list of Colorado artists the name of Alexis Comparet deserves a place, though an inconspicuous one. He was not a great citizen like Henry Read, a versatile genius like George Elbert Burr, or a painter of mountain storms and sunsets like Charles Partridge Adams. Twilight on the lonely prairies, a deserted city park in the autumn rain, a mountain lake with its fringe of trees and background of night -- these were his themes. And in his restricted field he has no rival in Colorado, and few rivals anywhere.

Comparet came from Paris in the late '70s and lived in Denver until his death, about 20 years later. He was always ill, solitary, poor. A victim of locomotor ataxia, he was all but helpless in his last years. His work at this period of his life, considering his handicaps, is remarkable. He always carried an air of mystery. Shortly after reaching Denver he changed the spelling of his name to the Italian form, Compera.

Regarding his past he was always reticent. To cut himself off from his life abroad and its associations, to bury himself in his Far Western home, was his evident object. Of the shadow which darkened his days he never spoke. One conjecture is as good as another -- unrequited love, disgrace, baffled ambition. No one in Denver knew or will ever know his secret. An occurrence, however, of the mid-nineties indicates that Comparet's youth must have been one of promise and hope and romance.

Sarah Bernhardt played "Fedora" at the Broadway Theater. The great tragedienne was then at the zenith of her power. Surrounded by a magnificent French company in the most thrilling of the Sardo plays, in the famous role created for her, Bernhardt's performance could never be forgotten. It marked, I am sure, the culmination of my experience of the theater.

IT WAS A NIGHT FOR SOCIETY

Denver society was brilliant in the Gay Nineties, and the evening was a great social, as well as artistic, event. Toward midnight, when the curtain went down, Bernhardt asked attaches of the theater if they could direct her to the home of Alexis Comparet. None knew his address, but somebody was pressed into service as a guide. A carriage was called. After much running about, Comparet was located in a room on the top story of the Club Bldg. on Arapahoe st.

The meeting between the sleepy, startled artist and his visitor was described by its only witness as very Frenchy and dramatic. The party repaired at once to a wine and delicatessen shop on Larimer st., where a basket was filled with provisions for a bountiful supper.

And in the dingy little studio, Bernhardt and Comparet jabbered French at each other until dawn. She left the exile to a few brief years of life, an obscure death and an unmarked grave. She returned to the scenes of their early memories, to be mourned when her time came as France has mourned for none of her children since Victor Hugo.

PICTURES HANG IN MANY HOMES.

Comparet's pictures hang in many Denver collections. His masterpiece, possibly, belonged to the late Edward B. Field. Miss Anne Evans had an example of his best style.

A well-known canvas is called The Haunted House, a theme with which Comparet was thoroughly at home. Somber browns and grays are its only colors. Night enfolds a little farmhouse on its distant hill. A dim light burns in its single window. The wind is blowing.

Great trees bend and clouds scurry across the sky. The very spirit of the wind lives in this little painting -- wind of the great Southwest, soft, electric and strong. Telling its story of the Painted Desert, Mesa Verde and its long-lost race, the enchanted Mesa, moonlight canons and crests of snow under the summer stars.

We have heard it on more than one mountain peak, Genessee, Wildcat, Cheyenne. It inspired the poetry of Eugene Field, the prose of Helen Hunt Jackson, the brush of Harvey Young. Wherever we may wander, it follows us and calls us home. Have you never heard it? Then you are not a Coloradan.

WHY BROWN'S NAME WAS NOT USED

On a wall in the Civic Center are inscribed the names of Denver's benefactors. But the citizen whose gift in value was far beyond all others is not included and never will be. The following tells, or attempts to tell, why.

Henry C. Brown was an Argonaut of the early '60s. He made the long and adventuresome trek from Illinois in a covered wagon. Availing himself of the liberal homestead laws, he filed on the land which is now Capitol Hill. His career as a dry farmer was one of such hardship and futility he decided to quit and go back. He tried to trade his land for a yoke of oxen and a wagon. There were no takers. He could not leave. Discouraged and disillusioned he remained a settler under compulsion.

In the early years of the '70s, the Territory of Colorado was ambitious and became a state. The Legislature elected John Evans and Jerome B. Chaffee senators. They went to Washington and were accorded seats on the floor of the Senate but of course had no vote.

There were several rivals for the capital of the future state. The fight was bitter. Besides Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo and Leadville urged their claims. At the foot of Pikes Peak, in the very center of Colorado, General Palmer had created a town of great beauty. Pueblo, Jay Gould had said, would be the greatest city in the West. Leadville and its riches had worldwide fame.

Then Henry C. Brown, who had platted his land as a city addition, gave to Colorado the two blocks bounded by E. Colfax ave., Grant st., E. 14th ave. and Lincoln st. Bayard Taylor said the crest of Capitol Hill, with its mountain horizon, was the finest site for a capitol in the world. This, I think is true. I have seen, in our own country and abroad, finer capitol buildings but never a comparable site. Henry C. Brown's gift decided the issue. Denver became the capital of the state.

Rocky Mountain News, November 30, 1941, p. 15

CECIL R. CONNER
Denver Ad Exec Given Top Honor

Cecil R. Conner, Denver advertising executive since 1912, Thursday was named regional winner of the first annual Silver Award given by the Advertising Federation of America and Printer's Ink Magazine.

The silver medal was presented to Conner by Lee Fondren, vice president of the Advertising Federation of America, at the monthly meeting of the Denver Advertising Club in the Park Lane Hotel.

Conner is president and treasurer of the Conner Advertising Agency Inc., which he established May 1, 1912.

Conner termed the national award a "great incentive for all advertising personnel in the nation to do everything possible to raise standards of advertising service."

Conner, a native of Indiana, was graduated from Colorado Springs High School in 1901 and came to Denver in 1904 as news editor of the Daily Mining Record.

Later he was employed in various editorial capacities on The Rocky Mountain News, the Denver Post and the now-extinct Denver Republican and Denver Times.

He became a member of the Denver Advertising Club Oct. 5, 1911, and was elected to the presidency in 1916. He became a charter member, by invitation, of the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies and National Outdoor Advertising Bureau in 1917.

Conner served on the Denver Advertising Club's committee that handled publicity to finance the downtown YWCA Building and represented the club for six years on the board of directors of the Denver Chamber of Commerce.

During his half-century in advertising, Conner's accounts have included the Orpheum Theater, Lakeside and Elitch's Amusement Parks, and many other entertainment enterprises.

Conner's agency was the first locally owned 4-A agency in the Rocky Mountain area and is still the oldest 4-A agency in this region.

Selection of Conner as recipient of the Silver Award was made by the Denver Advertising Club's advisory committee, which is composed of past presidents of the club.

[A picture of Cecil Conner accompanies this article.]

Rocky Mountain News, January 29, 1960, p. 25

JOHN G. CONSTANCE

Mailman Leaves $400,000 Fortune

The story of how a mailman built a $400,000 estate on investment tips from Capitol Hill financiers to whom he delivered mail was revealed Tuesday by the probate of his will.

The estate was left by John G. Constance, 91, who lived alone in a five-room cottage at 3915 W. 25th Ave. and wore 30-year-old suits.

Constance died Aug. 9, a few hours after he suffered a heart attack during a shopping trip in the neighborhood.

Constance, who would have been 92 on Oct. 21, was born in Newport, Ky. His parents died soon after his birth and he made his home with a grandfather.

When he was 15, he left home after a tiff with the grandfather and came to Denver. His first job was as a bell boy at the old Windsor Hotel. Later he had a bakery truck route.

In the early 1900s he inherited $20,000 from his grandfather. About the same time he went to work for the Postoffice Dept. and was assigned to deliver mail on Capitol Hill.

Some of the city's richest men lived along his route and Constance became friendly with many of them, including financier Claude K. Boettcher.

"He used to go in and talk to them and he took their advice on investments," recalled his son-in-law, Denver attorney B. O. Wheeler.

Once, Wheeler said, his father-in-law lived in the Boettcher home for several months while the Boettchers were out of town.

RETIRED IN 1930

In 1930 Constance retired from his $2,100-a-year mailman's job and devoted himself to his investments.

A lone wolf who was proud of his independence, he lived alone after his second wife died about six years ago.

"He wouldn't live any place else," said Wheeler. "Three or four times a week we'd go to visit him."

His father-in-law was careful about money, Wheeler said, but not penurious.

Even in the last few years, he said, Constance would walk several miles rather than take a bus. "I like to walk. Why pay bus fare?" he told his son-in-law.

Constance left most of his estate, which includes real estate mortgages and utility and oil company stocks, to his only relative, Mrs. Wheeler.

BEQUESTS TO FRIENDS

Bequests totaling $11,000 went to five friends -- George Kimsey, a real estate broker; Mrs. Etta Brown, 2915 Jay St., a former North Denver neighbor; Jack Pavey, Tucson, Ariz.; William Scheffer, 3535 Bryant St., a fellow postoffice worker, and Esther Shuler, a real estate saleswoman.

Denver Post, September 13, 1960, p. 1

CAPT. MARY P. CONVERSE

Capt. Mary Converse to 'Sail' To New Home in California

By GENE LINDBERG

Denver Post Staff Writer

Capt. Mary P. Converse, 84, Denver's famous sea-going great-grandmother, is leaving the city for good, she said Friday. She's moving to California, leaving about Feb. 10.

"I've got children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren scattered from coast to coast, and I might just as well live near some of 'em," Mrs. Converse said. "So I'm going out to Camarillo, Calif., where my son, Elisha E. Converse, is fixing up a house for me. That's between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara.

"I'm not as active as I used to be. Matter of fact, I haven't played tennis since I was 80. But I warned 'em out there to fix up the courts. I might want to try it again."

Captain Converse is proud of her sea-faring title, and it's the real McCoy. In September, 1955, she once more passed examinations validating her master's ticket in the U.S. merchant marine for another five years. She's the only woman in the United States licensed to command craft of any tonnage on the high seas, and has logged some 33,799 miles on salt water.

To the navy and its allied services Captain Mary is a living legend of World war II. During the years of that conflict she taught navigation to more than 2,500 navy, coast guard and merchant marine students at her Denver home. They called her "Granny."

Captain Converse was born to Mary Parker in Walden, Mass., 1872. Her husband, Harry E. Converse, was a wealthy Boston shoe manufacturer and yachtsman. They had five children, four of whom are still living. Her husband died in 1921. Four years later, having "tired of Boston tea parties" Mrs. Converse moved to Denver. She had taken out first papers in the merchant marine in 1900, during her yachting days. But she was 67 when again she turned to navigation, eventually winding up with master's papers.

Besides her son in California, Mrs. Converse has two in Massachusetts -- Parker Converse of Marion and Roger W. of Boston. Her daughter, Mrs. John Butler, lives in Winnetka, Ill. There are eighteen grandchildren, thirteen of them married, and at last count there were forty-four great-grandchildren.

The Converse home at 195 High St. is now for sale.

[A photo of Capt. Converse accompanies this article.]

Denver Post, January 25, 1957, p. 5

CAPT. MARY P. CONVERSE
Weighs Anchor in Denver
Capt. Mary P. Converse Moving to Coast
By GENE LINDBERG
Denver Post Staff Writer

Capt. Mary P. Converse will leave Denver Friday for her new home in Camarillo, Calif. She will go by air.

Tuesday, the day before the movers came, Denver's famous sea-going great-grandmother posed for the last of a long succession of camera portraits made of her during her many years of residence at 195 High St.

The big, two-story Converse home where Captain Mary taught navigation to more than 2,500 navy, coast guard and merchant marine students during World War II, has been sold. She is moving her belongings, including thousands of books, to a home prepared for her near Santa Barbara, Calif., by her son, Elisha E. Converse.

The last photograph of Captain Converse made at that address is really two portraits in one, for she is shown with a recent oil portrait of herself painted last August by Chip T. M. Wood, Denver artist. It shows her seated on deck aboard a vessel wearing her captain's uniform and holding in her left hand one of her most prized possessions -- an ancient astrolabe, forerunner of the navigator's sextant. Inscribed in Arabic, the old bronze instrument is some 400 years old, Captain Converse says.

Over her shoulder, small in the distance in the oil painting, is a likeness of the "Penelope," the big sea-going yacht which Captain Mary and her husband, Harry E. Converse, sailed out of Boston harbor back at the turn of the century. Her husband died in 1921 and four years later Captain Converse moved to Denver.

[The photo described is included in the article.]

Denver Post, February 6, 1957, p. 3

DR. PERSIFOR MARSDEN COOKE
Ten Relatives Settle For 10 Pct. of Estate

Ten relatives objecting to admitting to probate the will of a wealthy Denver physician and banker settled their claims in County Court Tuesday for approximately 10 percent of his $350,000 estate.

Six of the group filed objections with the court to admitting to probate the will of Dr. Persifor Marsden Cooke, who died March 31, 1954.

Under terms of his will he directed that his estate be placed in trust with the Denver National Bank, with which he was associated from 1899 until his retirement in 1922.

He directed that income from the trust be used for the benefit of his wife, Mrs. Helen Archibold Cooke, who died in 1948.

He provided that in the event of her death that his estate go to the Denver Museum of Natural History.

Six relatives filed objections with the court, contending the will left by Dr. Cooke was not his last will and testament.

The museum negotiated a settlement, approved by County Judge David Brofman, with the six and four other relatives. They settled for a total of $30,000. They are:

Two sisters, Jessie G. Willcox, and Elisabeth Bonbright of Englewood, N. J., who will receive $600 each; two nephews, Thomas Cooke of Morristown, N.J., and Hedley V. Cooke of Bethesda, Md., $3000 each; two nieces, Anne S. Brewster of Seabright, N.J., and Katherine C. Greeff of New York City, $3000 each.

Two other nephews, Edward S. Cooke of South Orange, N.J., and John S. Cooke of Chatham, N.J., $2000 each; a grandnephew, Joseph M. Junkin and a grandniece, Sydney Junkin, both of Bethesda, $1500 each.

Rocky Mountain News, August 13, 1955, p. 13

MEREDITH KIMBERLEY COOPER

Wanderer Returns

Man 'Missing' 11 Years Turns Up to Claim $23,000 Bequest

A Denver man who disappeared more than 11 years ago and lost all contact with his family reappeared Tuesday and became eligible to receive half of a $46,000 estate left by his father.

Meredith Kimberley Cooper, 42, son of John W. Cooper, 91, of 3578 S. Pennsylvania St., Englewood, who died Jan. 23, walked into Denver county court "to find out about a will being probated here."

Cooper identified himself to Tony Ferretti, bailiff to Judge David Brofman, who in turn led him to Paul Pomponio, chief deputy clerk, who showed the missing heir the file in his father's estate case.

The father, a resident of Denver since 1886 and a Public Service Co. employe for 55 years, provided in his will that half of his estate would go to a daughter, Mrs. Eva J. Pritchette, with whom he lived.

He placed the remainder of the estate in trust for a period of five years. During that period the executor, the Denver National Bank, was to attempt to determine if the son were alive.

According to the court petition, the son's "residence, whereabouts and existence have been unknown for more than 11 years."

The son was to receive the remaining estate if found in five years. If not, the daughter would receive the entire estate.

Meredith Cooper identified himself to counsel for the estate and then made a brief visit to his Englewood sister. He told her he had been "traveling over the country prospecting."

After the brief visit, Cooper was "missing" again Wednesday.

He told his sister he was going to Utah and had no forwarding address. He said he would write.

Denver Post, April 13, 1955, p. 11

MEREDITH KIMBERLEY COOPER

Missing Son Claims Part Of Estate

A son, missing for 11 years, appeared at Denver County Court Tuesday to claim his share of a $32,000 estate left by his father.

Meredith Kimberley Cooper, 42, laid claim to half the $32,000 left by his father, John W. Cooper, 91, a retired Public Service Co. employe, who died Jan. 23.

In his will, Mr. Cooper left half his estate to a daughter, Eva J. Pirtchette of 3578 S. Pennsylvania st., Englewood, and placed the remainder in trust for the son whose whereabouts had not been known for 11 years.

The will directed the trust be retained for five years, and if after that time the son was not located, it be given to the daughter.

William F. McGlone, attorney and executor of the trust through the Denver National Bank, said Meredith Cooper had satisfactorily identified himself as the missing heir.

According to McGlone, the son said he had been traveling extensively throughout the West on prospecting expeditions and learned of his father's death through a newspaper article.

Rocky Mountain News, April 13, 1955, p. 9

JOB A. COOPER

J. A. Cooper, cashier of the German National Bank, was born in Bond Co., Ill., Nov. 6, 1843. He is of English descent, his father coming from England in 1820 and settling in New York, from which State he emigrated to Bond Co., Ill., in 1840, being among the early settlers of that part of the State.

The subject of this sketch left the farm at ten years of age, to attend school at Knoxville, Ill., where he remained five years, going from there to Knox College, Galesburg. There he continued as a student until, in 1864, he entered the volunteer service of the United States, as Second Sergeant of Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-Seventh Illinois Infantry. He was in Memphis when Gen. Forrest made his raid upon that city in August, 1864. On the muster out of his regiment, near the close of the war, he returned to college, graduating in 1865. He then began the study of law in Greenville, Ill., and was admitted to practice in 1867. In 1868, he was elected Clerk of the Circuit Court of Bond County, for four years.

In May, 1872, he came to Denver and formed a law partnership with Hon. A. C. Phelps, which continued for about a year. He then engaged in the insurance business until April, 1876, when he was elected Vice President of the German National Bank, and at once took an active part in the management of its affairs. In December, 1876, he was chosen cashier, and still acts in that capacity. He has shown himself an efficient, capable manager of the finances of the institution, and demonstrated his eminent fitness for the position he occupies.

He was elected to the City Council in the spring of 1876, re-elected in the fall of 1877, and served as President of the Council. He has been Treasurer of the State University at Boulder, since its organization under the State Government, in 1876.

He was married, September 17, 1867, to Miss Jennie O. Barnes, of Galesburg, Ill., and has four children.

History of the City of Denver, Arapahoe County and Colorado. 1880. pp. 364-365

JOB A. COOPER
JANE O. COOPER

Chairs named by their daughters,
Mrs. Lucius Storrs and Mrs. Dwight Ryland

JOB A. COOPER was born in 1843 on an Illinois farm. He was graduated from Knox College and soon after married Jane Olivia Barnes, also born in Illinois and a graduate of Rockford College.

Together with high hopes and confidence, this young couple turned their faces further westward and in 1872 took up their abode in beautiful Colorado - which remained to them just that, "beautiful, beloved Colorado" throughout their entire happy, active lives. Colorado never failed or disappointed them - and they never failed or disappointed Colorado.

Mr. Cooper first practiced law but later gave it up to become a banker. Besides banking he was interested in and identified with various mining projects, cattle business and early railroad construction. He was elected governor of the state in 1888 and died in 1899, a devoted citizen, a great and loyal believer in Colorado.

The following is an excerpt from an article printed in a Denver newspaper on the occasion of Mrs. Cooper's death in 1918.

" . . . But the greatest work of her active life began nine years ago when she first became interested in Frank Craig. Craig had then pitched a single tent outside the city limits. This he shared with two strangers, like himself, sick and down and out. A story published in a paper telling how he shared his tent and bread to help others get well, touched Mrs. Cooper's heart.

She donated the land on which the colony now stands, had the first hospital building erected, conceived and carried out the plan of the tent city, interested her friends and gave her entire time and strength from that time until the day of her accident, to the building up of the colony.

No man has been received at Craig Colony but Mrs. Cooper came out at once to greet him and make him comfortable. Her blessings followed every man who went away cured. She comforted every man who lost the fight." . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were survived by four children: Mrs. E. S. Kassler, Mrs. Lucius Storrs, Mrs. Dwight Ryland and Mr. Charles J. Cooper.

The Glory that was Gold: The Central City Opera House, a Permanent Memorial to Colorado Pioneers. 1936. p. 45

JOB ADAMS COOPER

Hon. Job Adams Cooper, governor of Colorado, 1889-91, was born near Greenville, Bond County, Ill., and is a son of Charles and Maria (Hadley) Cooper, members of old English families. His father, who was born at Maidstone, County Kent, England, forty miles south of London, was a son of Thomas Cooper, a paper manufacturer of Kent County, who came to the United States late in life and died at Yolo, Cal., when eighty-nine years of age. Charles was one of a large family of children who eventually came to America. He was educated at Maidstone and at the age of fifteen crossed the ocean on a sailing vessel, settling in Newark, N. J., where he learned the carriage manufacturer's trade. At the age of twenty-two he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he engaged in the lumber business. It was there that he married Miss Hadley. Removing to Illinois in 1840, he became a pioneer of Bond County, where he improved a valuable farm and continued to reside until his death, in 1865, at the age of fifty-nine years. Fraternally a Mason, he was active in the work of his order. He was a firm supporter of Democratic tenets. During the war he was loyal to the Union and assisted in raising troops for the Federal service. His wife died at fifty-nine years of age, and of their seven children, five of whom reached maturity, only two are living, Thomas Cooper, of Morgan County, Colo., and Job Adams Cooper.

The last-named was educated at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., from which institution he was graduated in 1865, with the degree of A. B. Three years later the degree of A.M. was conferred upon him by his alma mater. While a student in Knox College, in May, 1864, he enlisted, with many other students, in Company C, One hundred and Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, Capt. B. M. Veatch, and served until mustered out in the latter part of the same year. He was stationed near Memphis when the Confederate general, Forest, made his memorable raid.

In Galesburg, Ill., September 17, 1867, Mr. Cooper married Miss Jane O. Barnes, daughter of Rev. Romulus E. Barnes, one of the early Congregational home missionaries of Illinois. She, too, is identified with that denomination and has done much work of a benevolent nature. She was educated in Rockford Seminary in Illinois, and is a lady whose culture makes her a valuable acquisition in the most select social circles. The four children that comprise the family are named as follows: Olivia D., wife of Edwin S. Kassler; Mary Louise, Mrs. Lucius S. Storrs, of St. Paul, Minn.; Charles J., a graduate of Knox College, class of 1897, and now engaged in the real estate business in Denver; and Genevieve P., a graduate of Ogontz School, near Philadelphia.

On completing his literary studies at Galesburg, Mr. Cooper began to read law with Judge S. P. Moore, at Greenville, and in 1867 he was admitted to the bar, after which he opened an office for practice in Greenville. In 1868 he was elected circuit clerk and recorder of Bond County, which position he continued to fill until he resigned, on coming to Denver in 1872. He arrived in this city May 14, and was admitted to practice at the bar here September 1, 1872. Forming a partnership with A. C. Phelps, as Phelps & Cooper, he gave his attention closely to his law practice. Afterward, for about two years, he was interested in a fire insurance agency, but retired from the insurance business in order to accept a position with the German Bank (later the German National Bank of Denver).

During the early years of his residence in the west, he was interested in the stock business, buying cattle in Texas and feeding them on Colorado ranches. Sometimes he shipped as many as two trains full of cattle a day from Brush, on the Burlington Railroad. The advent of settlers, however caused him to retire from the business.

During the years that followed he became known as a keen, discriminating financier and public-spirited man. His circle of acquaintances increased, and his influence waxed constantly greater. The esteem in which he was held and the prominence which he had attained made the choice of his name by the Republicans for the gubernatorial chair a most happy selection. He was elected by a majority of ten thousand (which was considered large at that time) over his Democratic opponent, Thomas M. Patterson, of the Rocky Mountain News. He took the oath of office January 1, 1889, succeeding Governor Adams at the expiration of the latter's first term. He had never been a partisan politician, and, although always a staunch supporter of the Republican party, he had not actively identified himself with party matters; however, he was well known throughout the state as a successful, honest, progressive and efficient business man, and it was the desire of the party to have such a man fill the executive chair.

On his retirement from the office of governor, he accepted the position of president of the National Bank of Commerce, and this he filled successfully and ably until 1897, when he resigned; since then he has devoted his attention to the management of his large and valuable property interests in this state and to mining at Cripple Creek as a member of the Tornado Gold Mining Company. In 1868 he erected, on the corner of Grant and Colfax, the elegant residence where he has since (and especially during his term as governor) entertained with a lavish and genial hospitality. In 1891 he began the erection of the substantial block known as the Cooper building, which is situated on the corner of Seventeenth and Curtis streets, and which, in its interior finish, is surpassed by no block in the state.

During Governor Cooper's term the superstructure of the magnificent state capitol approached completion. He has been a member of the state board of capitol managers for six years, and yet holds that position. During his term the state also made a notable advance in mining, stock-raising and commerce. The commonwealth reached the climax of its development and attained a prosperity never before enjoyed, and indeed, dreamed of by few. The World's Fair preparations were being made while he was at the head of the government, and he took an active part in arranging for a representation of Colorado at the Fair that would do justice to the industries of the state.

As an executive official he was conservative in judgment, never hasty in his decisions, but firm in carrying out any given course of action when once decided upon. He possessed a sagacity sound, well defined and trustworthy and was a man of profound foresight. Having made a study of constitutional law, he was well versed in the principles of wise statesmanship and public policy, and was admirably fitted to stand at the head of the greatest state in the mountain regions of the west.

Portrait and Biographical Record of the State of Colorado. 1899. pp. 55-56

JOB ADAMS COOPER

Joe Adams Cooper, late governor of Colorado and original owner of the Cooper building in Denver, was born at Greenville, Bond county, Illinois, November 6, 1843. His grandfather, Thomas Cooper, was a paper manufacturer in Kent county, England, but late in life he came to America with his family, including his son, Charles, the father of the subject of this sketch. The elder Cooper died in Yolo, California, at eighty-nine years of age.

Charles Cooper was fifteen years old when he arrived in America with his father. He learned the carriage trade at Newark, New Jersey, and when twenty-two years old he entered the lumber business in Cincinnati, Ohio. Later he removed to Greenville, Illinois. His wife was Maria Hadley.

Job Adams Cooper was attending Knox college at Greenville, when he enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry. he served until he was mustered out the latter part of the same year. He was stationed at Memphis when the Confederate general Forrest made his raid. After his army experience, the young man returned to Knox college, from which he graduated in 1865 with a B. A. degree. Three years later his alma mater conferred upon him the Master of Arts degree. He entered the law offices of Judge S. P. Moore, at Greenville, and read law until he was admitted to the bar in 1867. The following year the future governor of Colorado opened a law office in his native city, but soon afterward he was elected clerk and recorder of Bond county and served in that position until 1872, when he resigned to come to Denver.

He arrived in Denver May 14, 1872, and was admitted to the Colorado bar September 1, 1872. Immediately he formed a law partnership with A. C. Phelps, under the firm name of Phelps and Cooper. Afterward he became interested in a fire insurance company, but after two years' experience in this he was given a position with the German bank, which later became the German National Bank of Denver. From then on his ascent was rapid.

A few men had begun to buy Texas steers, feed them on the ranches of Colorado, and ship them to the eastern markets. Mr. Cooper was quick to see the possibilities of this business. He invested heavily in Texas cattle and became one of the biggest dealers. Oftentimes he shipped as many as two trainloads of cattle from Brush on one day.

In 1888 he was a candidate for governor against Thomas M. Patterson, editor of the Rocky Mountain News, and was elected with a plurality of 10,000 votes. He was inaugurated governor January 1, 1889. On his retirement from the office of chief executive, Governor Cooper began the erection of the Cooper building, one of the finest business blocks in Denver. The same year he was elected president of the Chamber of Commerce, where he remained until he retired in 1897. He built his residence at Grant street and Colfax avenue in 1888.

Governor Cooper died January 20, 1899. His body lay in state in the Capitol and was viewed by thousands of his fellow citizens. At the time of his death he was a member of the board of capitol managers.

Governor Cooper was married September 17, 1867, at Galesburg, Illinois, to Jane O. Barnes, daughter of the Rev. Romulus E. Barnes, one of the early Congregational ministers of Illinois. Four children were born to them. They are: Olivia D., wife of Edward S. Kassler; Mary Louise, wife of Lucius J. Storrs, of Springfield, Mo.; Charles J., and Genevieve P., wife of Dwight E. Ryland.

Sketches of Colorado, v. 1, p. 78

COORS FAMILY
Who Are the Coors?
By MORTON L. MARGOLIN
Rocky Mountain News Writer

WHO ARE THE COORS?

The family name has dominated the headlines for almost a week since the mysterious disappearance of Adolph (Ad) Coors III.

But ask anyone in this part of the country what Coors is, and the first image that will come to mind will be a beer can.

The Coors rank among Colorado's foremost industrialists, but you won't find them in the standard histories of Colorado.

Their name is almost a household word in scientific laboratories all over the world, but none of them is listed in Who's Who.

LAST FAMILY HISTORY

They've been among America's very wealthy families for three generations. But the family firm, base of their wealth, is not listed on any stock exchange. All the stock is owned by people named Coors.

The last authorized family history available at the Denver Public Library consists of a short biography of Adolph Herman Joseph Coors, founder of the family business. It was published in 1911.

That brief reference, a mention in the Social Register, and an extraordinarily high ranking business and credit rating in the Thomas Register of American Manufacturers are all you'll find for the precise reason that the family strives to remain faceless.

The reasons:

Just exactly what happened to Adolph Coors III last week, plus bitter experience in the past with those who have tried to win sensational monetary settlements for real or fancied injuries.

Friends of the Coors say they have lived for years with the fear that someone in the family would be kidnapped. It was tried with Adolph Coors Jr., but the plot was uncovered in time and the plotters were jailed.

STRANGE PHILOSOPHY

Bigger in terms of business than they've ever been since Adolph Sr. came to Colorado in April, 1872, the Coors run their industries on a philosophy almost unheard of in today's corporate world:

Avoid mergers. Shun borrowing. Ban plush executive offices. And don't toot your own horn.

Adolph Herman Joseph Coors, founder of the line, was born in Prussia on Feb. 4, 1847. His father was a miller. He went to public schools until the age of 13, and then was apprenticed to the operator of a book and stationery store.

That lasted two years, and when the boy's father died, the 15-year-old apprentice quit and set out to learn the art of making beer.

The following year he left Prussia for Chicago, where he worked in a brewery, wielded a pick and shovel on the Chicago barge canal construction, and worked for a short time as a fireman. He also took a turn as an apprentice bricklayer and stone cutter.

A year after he came to Chicago, Coors was foreman at a brewery in Naperville, Ill. Three years later he came to Denver, working the first month as a gardener.

SETTLED IN GOLDEN

He still had his eye on the beer business, and he settled in Golden, where he bought a half-interest in an ale brewery, operated by top-hatted, cane-swinging Joseph Schueler.

In one of the rare interviews given by a member of the family Bill Coors, president of the Brewery, told how his grandfather did the work while his partner strutted and directed. Finally Coors had to buy out Schueler. And he borrowed the money to do it.

Coors moved the brewery to the site of an old tannery on the edge of Golden, built a home which still exists inside the present-day brewery, and used the adjoining ground as an orchard and beer garden.

As the market for his product grew with the Denver area, Coors borrowed $90,000 to expand the brewery. No sooner was the new building underway than a flash flood roared down Clear Creek and washed the building away. The next morning he went back to Denver bankers and got another $90,000 to rebuild what he had lost.

That was in 1874, the last time any Coors has borrowed for business expansion.

WON'T BE DONE

"Any expansion we can't handle from retained earnings, just won't be done," said grandson Joe Coors, who now heads the Coors Porcelain Co.

In the early 1880s, Coors decided the price he was paying Eastern glassmakers for bottles was excessive, and he built his own bottle plant. It was a boon to his competitors, for the bottles Coors made for 40 cents a dozen, were gathered and resold after use to others for 10 cents a dozen.

But the bottle making venture paid off. It was the origin of the porcelain company, which today turns out some of the most exacting scientific equipment in the world, and in the last few years has pioneered in the manufacture of nose cones for missiles. In recent years Coors also has been making aluminum cans for beer.

The fine porcelain development came about as a result of World War I. Coors, his wife and three daughters had gone to Europe to visit the graves of his parents. They were trapped when war broke out, and it was months before they could come home.

When they did return to Golden, they found public sentiment hostile to Coors because of his German birth. Deeply hurt, Coors spent a fortune to turn his pottery and bottle plant into a means of providing the laboratory dishes vitally needed but no longer available because of the embargo on German goods.

After the war came a double blow -- depression and prohibition. But the Coors family kept the industry going by expanding porcelain manufacture, making dishes and cooking utensils, and malted milk. They also put out some non-alcoholic beverages.

DIES IN ACCIDENT

Adolph Coors Sr. was killed June 5, 1929, in an accidental fall from his sixth floor hotel room in Virginia Beach, Va., where he had gone to recover from an attack of influenza. His eldest son, Adolph II, took over.

In addition to Adolph II, the founder of the family left five other children.

They are Herman F. Coors, now of Tucson, Ariz.; Grover Coors, deceased; Mrs. Augusta Coors Collbran of Empire, Colo.; Mrs. Bertha Coors Munroe of New York City, and Mrs. Louise Coors Porter of Denver. The daughters are now all widows.

Adolph Coors II, and his wife have four children.

They are Adolph Coors III, (the missing man) now chairman of the board; William K. Coors, president of the brewery; Joseph Coors, head of the porcelain operation, and Mrs. May Louise Coors Tooker of Besford, N.Y.

"Ad" Coors married Mary Grant. They have four children, Mary Brooke, 18; Cecily Grant, 16; Adolph IV, 14, and James Grant, 10.

All of the brothers have chemical engineering degrees from Cornell University. All worked in the plant and could handle any job on the premises until "Ad" disappeared last week.

[Picture accompanying this article: Adolph Coors Sr., founder of the firm; Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Coors II; William K. Coors, President of the brewery; Joseph Coors, head of porcelain firm; and Coors Brewery of Golden]

Rocky Mountain News, February 14, 1960, p. 8

MRS. LOUISE COORS

Mrs. Louise Coors, 80, of Golden, Colo., widow of Adolph Coors Sr., died Friday in Los Angeles after a few weeks of illness, according to word received at Golden by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Adolph Coors Jr.

All her six children were at her bedside. They are Mrs. John H. Porter of Denver, Mrs. Augusta Coors-Collbran of Los Angeles, Mrs. Harold Munroe of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Adolph Coors Jr. of Golden, Grover of Carlsbad, Calif., and Herman F. Coors of Inglewood, Calif.

Mrs. Coors, whose maiden name was Louise Magdalena Weber, was born in St. Louis July 28, 1861, and came to Colorado in early childhood. On April 12, 1879, at Golden, she was married to Adolph Coors, who was to become a millionaire Colorado industrialist and founder of the Coors plant there.

Adolph Coors Sr. was 82 when he died in a fall from a window of a resort hotel at Virginia Beach, Va., June 5, 1929. The family long had been prominent in society here.

Mrs. Coors is survived by fifteen grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren in addition to her three sons and three daughters. Her regular custom was to spend her winters on the west coast, visiting her sons and daughter there, and she usually went to Honolulu for the midwinter season. She had been ill only a few weeks. She and her husband had celebrated their golden wedding in the spring of the year he was killed.

Mrs. Coors' body will be returned to Golden for the funeral and burial beside that of her husband there. No definite arrangements are possible yet, according to Mrs. Coors Jr. The funeral party probably cannot reach here before Monday.

Denver Post, October 17, 1941

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM COPELAND

Mr. and Mrs. William Copeland of 2230 Ogden St., celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Dec. 30 at a family dinner at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Emmett Dalton, 3504 York St.

They were married in Littleton, Colo., Dec. 28, 1910, and have lived in Denver for 50 years.

Copeland was a Pullman porter for Union Pacific Railroad until he retired in 1959.

The couple has three daughters, Mrs. Virgil Spikener of Henderson, Colo., Mrs. Dalton, and Mrs. Hubert Johnson of 2230 Ogden St.; a son, Victor of Los Angeles, Calif., 12 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren.

Denver Post, January 8, 1961, p. 4AAAA

JOHN JAY CORNISH
Biographical Information

John Jay Cornish was born 15 June 1824 at New York City, New York. He died 26 Oct. 1898 at Del Norte, Rio Grande County, Colo. He married Sarah Jane Bowne (?) on 13 June 1847. She was born 23 Feb. 1824 at New York City, N. Y. (or N. J.) and died 24 Feb. 1899 at Saguache, Colo. They had 7 children:

1. Marcia E. Cornish, born 30 June 1853; died 14 Feb. 1859.
2. Susan Amelia Cornish, born 10 Sept. 1855; died 17 Oct. 1939. She married Bruno Ungewiss 15 July 1872.
3. Mary Ida Cornish, born 29 Sept. 1857; died 1 April 1939. She married Eugene Higgins 12 Dec. 1880.
4. Florence Ella Cornish, born 29 Oct. 1859; died 16 July 1916. She married Milton Welsh.
5. Francis Edwin Cornish, born 24 Aug. 1862 in Wisconsin.
6. Sarah Emma Cornish, born 13 Feb. 1865. She married Erastus P. Kenady(?)
7. John Albert Cornish, born 25 Feb. 1867 at Dodgeville, Iowa; died 8 Feb. 1955 in Wisconsin. He married Elizabeth T. Creason 20 Jan. 1894 (1855 Colo. census of Rio Grande County gives birthplace as Missouri).

Fathers name: Jacob Miller Cornish

Mother's name: Susan Williams Patricke

From written family records of George O. Cornish, Warmer Robins, Ga.

JERRY COULEHAN

Colorado Question Box

Edited by JACK FOSTER

Research by Frances Melrose

A Wheat Ridge reader, F. Y., writes this week that the Wheat Ridge Lions Club is planning to create a historical park on a portion of the old Coulehan ranch, near W. 44th ave. and Teller st.

The property has been donated by Judge Samuel W. Johnson of 7475 W. 48th ave., and the park is to be named in memory of the judge's late wife, Elizabeth. F. Y. asks for a little background history of the ranch.

Judge Johnson's records show that the quarter section bordering on what is now W. 44th and Wadsworth aves. was homesteaded in 1869 by Henry Stevens.

* * *

Stevens operated a sawmill at Bergen Park, and some of the choicest logs from his mill were used to build a small cabin on the homestead. This little cabin still stands on the property and is to be included in the Johnson Park. [A picture accompanies the article.]

On May 21, 1875, Stevens sold the property to Jerry Coulehan for $3000.

Coulehan was one of Colorado's most energetic and interesting pioneers. His story is told both in the Denver Republican (May 23, 1899) and in Stone's History of Colorado (Vol. 4).

Coulehan was born in Ireland in 1838 and came to the United States with his parents when he was 2 years old. As a young man he helped survey the Rock Island Railroad from Blue Island to Joliet, Ill., and later conducted a transfer business at Iowa City, Iowa.

Adventure in the West lured him to Colorado in May 1860. He built the second house in Mill City and entered the grocery business. The business was unsuccessful, but this didn't discourage Coulehan.

He went to Omaha for the winter and returned to Colorado the following spring with a load of provisions. On this trip he drove a team of oxen across the plains the first time in his life. During a part of the journey, he was forced to travel barefooted.

This venture was successful, and Coulehan continued making trips, buying and selling provisions.

Several years later he took eight wagons of his own, plus 40 for the firm of Jennings, Godby & Walker, and freighted them from Denver to Salt Lake City under almost impossible conditions.

The winter was severe, and the wagons at points traveled through snow 18 inches deep. Fifteen yoke of oxen to the team were needed to pull them through.

Indian troubles were rife. The Redmen pursued the wagon train from the Blue River up to the Laramie plains, and it was reported that only Coulehan's "admirable vigilance prevented a massacre."

* * *

Tiring of freighting, he entered business in Denver with Henry Lee in 1874, dealing in agricultural implements. Four years later he gave up the business and started developing his ranch property. The Republican reports that he had "one of the most beautiful farms in Colorado, embracing 10 acres in alfalfa, 16 acres in fruit, grain and vegetables."

Coulehan died in May 1899, following a heart attack. The widow subdivided the ranch, according to Judge Johnson, and sold it in portions. Judge Johnson bought one of these portions.

Rocky Mountain News, October 2, 1955, p. 60

MRS. ANNE COULTER
At 87, She's Possibly The Oldest Inventor

Mrs. Anne Coulter of 2314 E. 12th ave. at the age of 87 is possibly the oldest person in the country to get a patent and have her invention manufactured.

She has developed a plastic cushion which can be used as an inflatable air cushion, ice bag, hot water bag or even as a life preserver. In addition she has patented a plastic bed pan pad, reducing the discomfort of patients who must use a bed pan.

The inspiration for the two inventions came from Mrs. Coulter's long service in the medical field. Building up a large practice as a practical nurse, after coming to Denver in 1915, she opened a small nursing home in 1918. She remained in this business until last year when she sold the Samaritan Nursing Home which she operated.

Her plastic cushion was originally designed for use in hospitals. However, when so many uses for it were discovered, Mrs. Coulter thought it would be wiser to put it on the market for use in private homes.

Both inventions are being manufactured by the Medical and Dental Accessories Co. of 2800 S. Elati st. in Englewood.

Refusing to let her years get her down, Mrs. Coulter remains sharp and active. Since the sale of her nursing home, she has taken up painting, chiefly landscapes. She continues a lifelong love of fishing, frequently spending a day at one of the nearby lakes.

[A photo of Mrs. Coulter accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, August 5, 1962, p. 36

WILLIAM ZANE COZENS
Chair named by Lafayette Hanchett

No peace official in troublesome times had more courage and faithfulness to his duty than William Zane Cozens. Born on July 2, 1830 in Longueuil, Ottawa, Canada, he came to Colorado May 31, 1859, and on December 30, 1860 he and Mary York of Enniskillen, Ireland, were the first couple married by Bishop Macheboeuf.

Elected the first sheriff of Gilpin County in 1860 he held office until 1867. In 1872 he engaged in ranching in Middle Park, where he died January 17, 1904.

In 1865 he was ordered to raise a company to protect the United States mails and freight from the Indians. From his office door he selected in two hours sixty men who served for eighty days.

When a mob attempted to lynch the murderer Van Horn, he quelled a riot with his force of will. Through a ruse he put his prisoner safely in jail. The mob arrived and he stood with black eyes flashing and a gun in each hand and drew a line in the street with the toe of his boot. Those remarkably clear penetrating eyes told them that he spoke the truth in saying that the first man who crossed the line would be killed. That night Van Horn was removed to Denver. The citizens realized the next day that Cozens had tricked them but general satisfaction was manifested that order had prevailed. Van Horn was returned to Central City for trial, found guilty and sentenced. The execution in January 1864 was the first legal hanging in Colorado, and was convincing proof not only in Central City but throughout the territory that finally there was a firm and just law in the land. There was a realization that the era of the Vigilantes had ended.

Bill Cozens worked marvels in the preservation of peace. Miners, citizens, and desperadoes alike had full respect for him and although noted as an expert with a revolver he never shot anyone in all his career. His value and judgment of men and his stand for justice are undimmed in the annals of the state, and he remains for all an illuminating example of the ideal type of the pioneer sheriff.

Glory That Was Gold

PHILIP WENDELL CRANNELL

Biographical data of Philip Wendell Crannell to accompany portrait
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library.

Full name: Philip Wendell Crannell, born at Albany, New York, Dec. 26, 1861

Name of father: Matthew Crannell, Jr., a native of Albany, New York

Name of mother: Laura Adell Prink, a native of Pennsylvania

Attended school or college: Public Schools, High School, Albany, New York; Dartmouth College, A. B., Phi Beta Kappa; Rochester Theological Seminary

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Doctor of Divinity, 1901, Ottawa University, Ottawa, Kansas; Doctor of Divinity, Dartmouth College, 1913

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Home and Summer Home in Colorado since 1904; full home in Colorado since 1926

Married: Yes, at Luverne, Minnesota, April 2, 1884

Name of wife: Fannie Eleanor Grout, the daughter of Thadeus P. Grout and Jane M. Ingalls

Names of children and years of birth: Effie Eureka, born January 29, 1887; Florence Luverne, born May 15, 1891 (Mrs. C. B. Means)

Vocation: Minister of Christ

Give dates: Ordained November 9, 1888; Pastor, 1888-1904; President Theological Seminary, 1903-1926; Chair of Religion, C.W.C., 1927-31; Retired

Give autograph signature: (signed) Philip Wendell Crannell

Refer to "Who's Who in America", and to Biography furnished to Library.

Denver Post, Dec. 2, 1936, p. 12

Rocky Mountain News, Dec. 3, 1936, p. 5

Denver Post, April 2, 1934, p. 5

The Encyclopedia of Biography, v. 8, p. 266

Biography File

ALEXANDER CREE

A Colorado pioneer passed away on April 22, near Fort Morgan, Colo., at the age of 79 years. Mr. Cree came to Colorado in 1860. In 1861 he enlisted in the First Colorado Cavalry, serving three full years, and was discharged in October, 1864. He located at Georgetown, Colo., where he was editor of the Georgetown Miner, and also engaged in the mercantile business. In 1894 he moved to Denver, residing here until 1915, when he purchased a farm near Fort Morgan. A wife and married daughter survive.

Trail, v. 11, May 1919, #12, p. 28

ALEXANDER CREE

Alex Cree apparently accompanied his father (John) to Colorado in 1860. The following on Alex Cree is from a group of clippings which a former resident gave to the Colorado State Historical Society. They were undated except for the date 1919. The source was not noted.

"The deceased was born in Ohio in 1840. In 1850 his parents moved to Iowa and made their home in Saylorville, Polk County until 1860 when the family came to Colorado. Alex Cree was one of the first to respond to the call of Captain Sam for volunteers in 1861 and enlisted in Co. F. 1st Colorado in which he served 3 years. After the war he was associated with his father John Cree and for 12 years Mr. Cree Sr. was one of the most progressive mining men of the district. He then moved to Denver where he died January 22, 1893. From 1871 to 1875 Alex Cree was associated with Frank J. Wood in the Stationery business here (Georgetown). He was appointed Postmaster in 1878.

In 1872 Mr. Cree purchased The Colorado Miner and installed Stephen Decator Bross as editor. In May 1872 Rev. R. Weiser was appointed editor and held the position until 1873. In September 1872 he launched a daily paper with T. O. Bigney as local news editor. In March 1873 Edward O. Wolcott became editor and associate owner. The following July, Cree and Wolcott dissolved and Alexander Cree became sole owner with E. H. N. Patterson as editor. In March 1874 the Daily Miner was discontinued and in April Mr. Patterson became associate in ownership acquiring sole ownership in 1877.

Subsequently Mr. Cree took charge of the hardware business of his sister's deceased husband, A. F. Curtis. In November 1893 he moved to Denver and for a number of years was employed in the Public Library.

He was prominent in Masonic circles and pioneer organizations. He is survived by his widow and a daughter.

From Random Clippings, Colorado State Historical Society Library

CREE FAMILY IN COLORADO

From Official Records of Soldiers in the War of the Rebellion Roll of the Adjutant General of Colorado:

Theodore G. Cree was Captain of Company A 3rd Colorado Cavalry and was at Sand Creek 1864. Records give his age as 22 and he was from Denver.

From Hall's History of Colorado, v. 2, p. 555:

COLORADO PIONEERS (list)
Name	Residence	Arrival	Birthplace & Date	Died
John Cree	Denver	June 1860	Ohio	Jan. 22, 1895, Denver
Alex Cree	Georgetown	June 1860	Ohio, Mar. 18, 1840	Apr. 22, 1919, Fort Morgan, Colorado

From Beardsley, Isaac H., Echoes from Mountain and Plain:

p. 305: "John Cree was a local elder. He was a superior class reader and always at his post ready for duty. He was born in Belmont County, Ohio Oct. 31, 1810 and died in Denver Jan. 7, 1893."

p. 241: "Rev. John helped with erection of a log church between Nevada and Eureka gulches Dec. 25, 1868."

p. 271: "Local elder preached at Ralston crossing and organized a class there in 1866."

From McGrath, Real Pioneers of Colorado, v. 1, p. 304 (typed manuscript):

"Alexander Cree came to Colorado in 1860. In 1861 he enlisted in the First Colorado Cavalry serving three full years and was discharged in October 1864. He located in Georgetown, Colorado, where he was editor of the GEORGETOWN MINER and also engaged in mercantile business.

"In 1894 he moved to Denver residing here until 1915 when he purchased a farm near Fort Morgan. Mr. Cree passed away at his home near Ft. Morgan, Colorado on April 22, 1919 at the age of 79 years. A wife and married daughter survive."

From Wilbur Fiske Stone, History of Colorado (Methodist Episcopal Church), v. 3, p. 664.

"The first quarterly meeting held at Mountain City was one of the most extraordinary in this or any other country. There were present thousands of people from every state and territory in the Union and almost every country of Europe, declaring the wonderful works of God. The brethren erected a good hewed-log church on the ridge between Nevada and Eureka gulches and it was opened with appropriate services December 25, 1860. Rev. John Cree, John W. Stanton, John Reed, J. C. Anderson, D. S. Green, and others, were prominent in the construction and furnishing of this place of worship.

From Denver City Directory:

1890:

Cree, Arthur C. clk, G. H. Raymond, r. 817 Broadway

Cree, James, carpenter, r. Milleson's add., nr. Water Wks.

Cree, John, miner, r. 418 Clark

Cree, Theodore G., mining, r. 817 Broadway

1893:

Cree, Arthur C., r. 301 31st av

Cree, Jesse Miss, nurse St. Lukes Hospital

Cree, John, mining, r. 418 Clark

Cree, Robert B., washer, Model Steam Laundry

Cree, Theodore G., mining, r. 111 31st av.

Cree, William C., special agent Lancashire Ins. Co. r. 55 So. Washington av.

1895:

Cree, Alexander, grocer, 1355 Santa Fe

1898

Cree, Alexander, r. 1355 Santa Fe

NICHOLAS C. CREEDE
The Prospector and Silver Queen
by Cy Warman 1894
Great Divide Publishing Co., Denver, Colorado

The Story of the Life of Nicholas C. Creede
Note by Edna Harvey Joseph, Jasper, Indiana

N. C. Creede was born April 4, 1842, in Lancaster Township, Wells County, Indiana, to John and Inez Anna Guthrie Harvey who were married December 24, 1835, in Union County, Indiana. John Harvey, born in Pennsylvania, died Sept. 1845, buried at Murray, Wells County, Indiana, son of Henderson and Martha McConnell Harvey, grandson of Wm. and Mary Harvey, and Francis and Isabella McConnell of Franklin County, Pennsylvania.

After John's death, Anna Inez, took her 6 children in 1846 and went to Jasper County, Iowa. It is said she had a brother Faulkner there, born August 9, 1828 (Bible date). Here on August 20, 1848, she married Solomon Fry, born December 16, 1812 (died Minnesota or Dakota) and had 4 more children. Two died. A granddaughter is Mrs. Austin Elmer Dodd, 221 Bridge St., Arting, Washington; also Mrs. Thomas Dixon Darnell, Box 812, Encinitas, California. Mrs. Dodd has a picture of Anna Inez. Mrs. Darnell has a copy of the above book. She remembers when N. C. Creede came to Texas to see her father, McConnell Harvey, brother of N. C. Creede. They have several things of N. C. Creede given to them by him. On this trip the two brothers went to see their mother who died February 6, 1887.

N. C. Creede married and soon divorced. They adopted a daughter who was not heard of after the San Francisco earthquake.

N. C. Creede died July 12, 1897 in Los Angeles. His estate disappeared.

N. C. Creede was a brother of Judge John W. Harvey, Leon, Iowa. Died in 1913

N. C. Creede was a first cousin to my grandpa - John Harvey, Markel, Indiana, who died in 1917.

Mrs. Edna Harvey Joseph (Allen F.), Jasper, Indiana, 1962

MARY MARTHA CREGER
Biographical Information

Name: Mary Martha Creger

Address: New Castle, Colorado

Born: February 8, 1865 at Denver, Colorado

Married to: James H. Creger, March 23, ____, at Denver, Colorado

Children: James Alex, born January 18, 1886, at Morrison; died January 22, 1898

Father's Name: Jabez Hopkins Vandeventer, born in Iowa; died at Carbondale, Colorado Mother's Name: Rebekah Herndon, born at Bloomington, Illinois; died at New Castle, Colorado

Brothers and Sisters:

1. Jabez H. Vandeventer, born at Denver, Colorado
2. D. & R. T. Vandeventer, born at Denver, Colorado
3. Alpharetta Hadsall, born at Russell Gulch
4. Elsie M. Gay, born in Iowa
5. Douglas Hiram Vandeventer, born in Iowa

Biographical Information Concerning Parents: Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jabez Vandeventer, came to Denver in 1861 by ox team and had two children at that time. At that time there were only two stores in Denver, board side-walks and street lamps. The Indians were plentiful at that time and were very peaceable with the whites but fought with other tribes.

Biographical Information Concerning Self: Mary Martha Creger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vandeventer, resides at New Castle and is 93 years and 8 months. Has a wonderful mind for that age. Has had two strokes and not able to get around. She was born in Denver and recalls many interesting incidents of the past. Passed away December 3, 1958 at New Castle, Colorado.

Compiled by Mrs. Jennie Westley, Mrs. Creger's adopted daughter and sent in by Natasha Boyd.

DR. JOHN DOUGLAS CRISP

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Dr. John Crisp
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: John Douglas Crisp, born May 9, 1858, at Scott County, Illinois

Name of father: John Andrews Crisp, a native of Tennessee

Name of mother: Mary Ellen Constock, a native of Illinois

Attended school or college: Public and High Schools of Exeter, Illinois; Missouri University and Denver Medical College.

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Missouri University, 1892, LL. B.; Denver Medical, 1905, M. D.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: 1893 to Colorado and Denver

Married: Yes, at Exeter, Illinois, September 4, 1878

Name of wife: Ada Morris, daughter of John W. and Mary J. Morris

Name of children and years of birth: John Manfaid Crisp, May 20, 1879

Avocation: Physician and Surgeon now.

Give dates: Lawyer, 1882-84; Journalist, 1884-93; Author, 1893-1900

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Never held an office.

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: Born in a log cabin, on Apple Pie Ridge, Scott County, Illinois. Great-grand-son on Paternal side of Maj. Andrews of Revolutionary fame. Went through two Universities for two degrees on my own resources. Half owned and edited The Holden Enterprise (Missouri) for ten years. Was managing Editor of The Galveston (Daily) Tribune for two years. Author of "Orpah" a historical novel, and numerous short stories.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Jno. D. Crisp

Also see: National Cyclopedia of American Biography, v. 18, p. 142

Biography File

THOMAS BERNARD CROKE

The House of Croke

Tom Croke, Irrigation Pioneer Who 'Never Knew When to Stop,' Built a Mansion That Set a New Denver Style

By EDITH EUDORA KOHL

When the monumental straight-walled mansion went up on Quality hill at East Eleventh avenue and Pennsylvania street folk looked at it and said "Tom Croke never knows when to stop in anything."

Standing close to the street with a broad flight of steps to the main entrance, the four-story structure of smooth red stone towered like a chiseled mountain wall, a notable contrast to the elaborate carving which had been the vogue.

By the mid '80s the residential section of Denver which became Capitol hill was said to house more millionaires than any other like area in the world.

A REAL "DENVER STYLE"

There was a new trend in development and in building. More native materials were being produced. Colorado stone and lava rock were largely replacing brick. Architects, having reached trail's end in historical styles, were creating new designs so distinctively handsome that they were called the "Denver style," later copied in many other cities. Denver mansions had become noted for their grandeur and art.

The Croke residence, known as a "Denver design," stands today as a real monument to two wagon-trail pioneer families and as the permanent home of a later frontiersman whose work has been nationally recognized. It cost more than $100,000.

When Croke moved into the new edifice he was a widower with two children, a boy and a girl. His mother and sister became heads of his household in which there was but little formal entertaining.

Thomas Bernard Croke, the former young school teacher from Wisconsin, had made a fortune without even a nugget from a mine. Starting as a $50-a-month clerk with Daniels & Fisher he had become manager and co-owner of a carpet and drapery store of that firm and later established his own mercantile business. His main life work, however, was development of agriculture and irrigation.

Young Croke invested his savings in cheap railroad lands until he had title to 3,500 acres six miles north of Denver, inclosed by twenty-seven miles of barbwire fence.

It was then that friends, skeptical of this rough "desert land" began to say that Croke never knew when to stop.

He developed it into one of the foremost private experimental ranches in the Rocky Mountain Empire. With fifty miles of irrigation ditches, a dozen reservoirs, 1,200 acres in various crops and 36,000 trees, 6,000 of them in orchards, this place became a "discovery lode" of western agriculture. Here many varieties of seed and tree were tested and developed for adaptability to this climate. (Today, these farms, at Broomfield, are operated by Thomas B. Croke Jr. and the region is now one of the most prolific irrigation districts in the west.)

In 1897 he had married Euretta Burdick of Denver. They had seven children. When the family moved to the ranch, the mansion on East Eleventh became the home of the well-known pioneer, Senator Thomas M. Patterson. Lawyer, publisher and United States senator, Patterson was known as one of the most dynamic and militant figures in Colorado.

Starting his career in Denver, 1872, as a lawyer he became a power in politics as the "boss" of the Democratic party of Colorado, which he forsook for a time to become a national leader of the short-lived Populists.

At one time Patterson owned and published two of Denver's early day newspapers -- the Times and later the News, through which he carried on his tenacious fights in politics, in civic and personal interests.

The Patterson's only child, Margaret, was married to Richard Crawford Campbell, business manager of Patterson's newspapers and other of his interests. The Pattersons and Campbells purchased the Croke mansion where the two families lived for many years.

Patterson died there in 1916, leaving an estate of 2-to-3 million dollars. His wife had also died there some years earlier. The Campbells had two children, Mary Montjoy, and Thomas Patterson.

The interior of the house followed the general pattern of many of Denver's early homes. It was notable mainly for its spaciousness, massiveness and fine finish. The hand-polished oak on either side of the double doors, casings and fireplaces were sawed from the same log in order that the grain might match. This house was elegant in its simplicity. A great fireplace in the reception hall with its heavy oak pillars and polished marble gave a warm welcome.

Thomas Patterson Campbell, now manager of Denver parks and improvements, seems to be more familiar with this historical home than anyone else. He recalls the great playroom on the top floor where the servants' quarters also were located. The ballroom was on the ground, or semi-basement floor. The kitchens, laundry and other utility rooms were located in a wing connected to the main building by an imposing archway.

Thomas B. Croke was builder of many things in Denver other than this palace. One of these was Loretto Heights college. When Mother Pancratia Bonfils planned the building of such an institution he became her supporter and underwrote the bond issue with his own money. He was one of five prominent citizens including Mrs. Owen Le Favre to organize the Denver Community Chest.

BOUGHT BY DR. SUDAN

Probably one of Tom Croke's most important contributions to posterity was the seven daughters and his namesake son, all citizens of Colorado, whom he left to carry on when he died in 1939 at the age of 87. They are Mesdames R. T. Chase, R. J. McDonald Jr., George Dabney, Harry Urling, Henry J. Meier and a son, Thomas B. Croke Jr., all of Denver, Mrs. Howard Babcock of Trinidad and May M. Bruce of Los Angeles. The older son, Harold, was fatally injured while playing in a baseball game in that city. Mrs. Thomas Croke Sr. still lives in Denver.

A short time ago, after passing into the hands of investors and being used as an apartment house, the property on Eleventh and Pennsylvania was purchased as a permanent home by Dr. Archer Chester Sudan, frontier physician of Kremmling, Colo., who last January was given the award of the American Medical society as the outstanding practitioner of America. (Rocky Mountain Empire magazine, March 7, 1948).

Denver Post, September 12, 1948, p. 7

MRS. MAGGIE CROW
Frontier Woman Recalls Early Days
By EDITH EUDORA KOHL
Denver Post Staff Writer

The progressive woman of today is taking no small part in the running of our country but Maggie Crow of Morrison, Colo., who is still doing her part, also helped us build it.

Maggie (Mrs. W. L. Crow) has no college degree, never ran for congress or carried a Carrie Nation hatchet, but she did drive a stagecoach carrying mail thru the mountains, panned gold in the famous Tarryall "diggin's" and swung an ax in a logging camp to help make a living and keep the home fires burning -- the home fires around which the west and all America was built.

She is one of the few women left who crossed the plains in a covered wagon, yet in no sense can she be relegated to a dead-and-gone era either in her work or her ideas.

It was in 1881 that Maggie Maple, 14, had come west with her family from eastern Nebraska to Morrison, near Denver. In 1887 she married William Crow and they went to Creede, that silver bonanza which in the boom had 1,000 miners and 30,000 people trying to strike it rich without pick and shovel, or striking it as the notorious outlaws Bob Ford and Soapy Smith were doing with a saloon and gambling den.

The Crows ran a tent factory (in a tent) for a man named Birch who Mrs. Crow believes to be living in Pueblo. He ran a chain of tent factories in the big mining camps to beat the housing shortage and incidentally to make a stake without digging. After the big fire swept Creede it became a tent town.

"It was a wild place," Mrs. Crow says, "with a killing a day on an average. One day as I left the tent with my little girl, Dora, a miscarried shot whizzed straight thru it. We barely missed the bullet."

From a box of treasures she pulled out a wicked looking revolver and held it close for inspection. The pistol had belonged to Bob Ford, the man who killed Jesse James. Ford gave it to her husband in appreciation of carpenter work Crow had done for him when carpenters were at a higher premium than silver.

The six-shooter, a big heavy frontier model Colt .45, is said to be the weapon that killed Jesse James April 3, 1882. The gun, which had been in Ford's possession many years, had killed thirteen men as its thirteen deep-cut notches testify.

On a day in 1892 when Bob Ford had made a cleanup in Creede he said to Crow, "I'm a little tired of killin's, Bill." He had killed a man a month previously. "I always carry a gun for protection, but when my time comes I ain't goin' to have a chance to use it."

A couple of weeks later a man named Kelly, Ed O. Kelly of the James boys' gang, walked into the tent-saloon with a double-barrel shotgun loaded with slugs and caught Bob Ford alone at the bar.

"Turn around, Ford," he announced calmly. "It's against my principles to shoot a man in the back."

Ford wheeled, but before he could draw Kelly let go both barrels thru his neck. Kelly spent ten years in Canon City for the crime, but he had avenged the killing of Jesse James.

* * *

In the overnight exodus from Creede, when silver went down and people went out like a retreating army to the gold camps or wherever they could find a job, the Crows went back to the old homestead at Morrison.

In 1895 the mountain folk along Turkey creek petitioned the government for mail service. They were advised if they could find someone to run a postoffice and a volunteer carrier for a period of six months the postal department would furnish daily service between Morrison and Conifer.

Men of the community had to make a living, so Mrs. Anna Biggar, a resident of the region, agreed to run the postoffice while Maggie Crow trotted out her horse and buggy as mail carrier, making the trip twice weekly with the help of a neighbor, Mrs. Naomi Found.

"We were to get the cancellation of the stamps as pay," Mrs. Crow laughed, "but all the mail handled seemed to be coming in and powerful little going out. My share of the income for the six months was 73 cents and I had fed the horse."

But the mail route was established and that fall she started out, under government contract, with regular stagecoach, team and revolver to protect the mail against robbers who lined roads in those days. The contract stipulated that the carrier also could haul passengers, freight -- anything but "dynamite or whisky, both of which the U. S. government considers dangerous . . ."

"I've had some rough looking characters to haul thru these mountains," Mrs. Crow recalls, "when I kept that gun handy and my eye on the passenger, but I never was held up. Once I had a woman from Pennsylvania who wanted to see the rattlesnake a man was trying to get out of a pile of brush, so I stopped the coach, lighted a piece of paper, held it close and out slithered the snake like a streak of lightning.

"One of the men shot it and Miss Pennsylvania said, 'Wasn't the west exciting?' She'd really seen a rattlesnake."

* * *

For two years while her husband worked in a sawmill, Maggie Crow, relieved once in a while by her daughter, Dora, made the forty-mile round trip daily between Morrison and Conifer. For a while the new postoffice was on beyond Conifer at Beaver ranch.

"Every morning," Mrs. Crow says, "I got breakfast, curried and harnessed the horses and was on the road at 6:30, leaving the three children to do the chores before school time. I've made that trip thru storms and snowdrifts with it 25 degrees below zero and never missed but three days in the two years. That was during a terrible blizzard."

But, she explains in a firm quiet voice, she had a rig with a top to it, and side curtains if you please!

"When I got too cold I sat on the rock I'd heated in the oven, put the lines around my neck and my hands and feet under me and gave the horses their heads. It was wonderful how they kept to that narrow mountainous road."

For the service covering 12,500 miles the postoffice department paid $640 a year -- $2 a trip. Uncle Sam's meager wages was supplemented by the route box service charge of 25 cents each, paid by eight or ten ranchers along the way, the few passenger fares and the light freight carried.

When the contract was up she moved her family into the mountains, where Bill had a logging contract, took her saw and ax and went to work helping to cut logs for the sawmills which could not meet the crying demand for lumber.

"How did I do it?" she answered my query. "I have always gone on the principle I can do anything anybody else can do -- if I make up my mind to it. That winter was a hard one. We needed the money and had to finish the contract on time. And folk needed houses."

* * *

When Dora Snedeker, the Crows' only daughter, died in the flu epidemic of World war I, leaving four little children, Maggie Crow took the two boys, Walter, 7, and Ray, the 7-month-old baby, to rear, keeping the two girls, Irene, 8, and Edith, 5, part of the time.

On the death of her husband two years later Maggie Crow, not knowing what step to take next, picked up the four children and moved up to the old ghost town of Lincoln, near Breckenridge, where her sons, Vernon and Floyd, were placer mining, and went to panning gold.

"There was no great run of pay dirt there at the time," she told me, "but in between the job of taking care of the family I was able to pan out $2 or $3 a day. I would set Ray, the baby, beside me with a little frying pan and for hours he would play he was panning gold. We sold all the dust we mined to a gold buyer up there."

Maggie also has mined in the famous old Tarryall diggings near Hamilton, where the Crows had leases. There they used a hydraulic outfit and it was Maggie's job to run the sluice, keeping it free of dirt and rock.

"The boys always wanted me with them," this mother rejoiced, "and we all worked together, they helping me run the house, taking the heavy jobs off my shoulders. And I enjoyed working with them."

With the money made from dust they educated the two grandsons, helped to rear the two girls and bought a couple of mining claims in Webster pass twenty miles above Bailey on the old Montezuma toll road.

In 1933, Mrs. Crow, then 67, helped to clear two miles of that road of rock and debris to reach the mine which they call the Gray Wolf. There they had mined out gold and silver in small quantities and dug a 150-foot tunnel to the main lode when the war started and the gold mines closed down.

Ray Snedeker, who is now in the police department in Denver, served in the air forces in the European theater, and Walter, now employed in Sterling, served in the Pacific with the navy. Irene is Mrs. M. A. Pritts, 851 Leyden street, Denver, and Edith, now Mrs. C. E. Luisenmeyer, is living in Reno, Nev.

* * *

This summer Mrs. Crow and her elder son, Vernon, are opening the Gray Wolf again in which showings of tungsten and molybdenum have been found.

"We have had the ore assayed," she says, "and Vernon knows rocks."

They have bought a tent as guest quarters, for Maggie is sure there will be more company weekends than the house will hold. She will do the cooking, of course, besides "just puttering around the mine."

I wanted to know just how this woman reacted to life after all she had been thru.

"Do you feel, Mrs. Crow, that your life has been too hard, that the struggles and hardships have not been worth it to your country?"

"No, I do not feel that way about it," she declared. "I feel my life has been well spent. I did the best I could always, my duty as it came. Pioneer women had no time to bemoan the hardships or to think about trivial things. Or our rights -- which woman talk so much about." She had served as president of the school board for six years because folk thought educating the children was the woman's job.

As to the women of today and the place they are taking in public affairs, she says frankly, "I think part of it is all right -- and part of it isn't. In the early days when a woman did a man's work or filled his shoes it was only to help him, to support his efforts, not to compete." After a moment's deliberation she added, "I am sure that women must get back into the home if this country is to remain as strong as we built it. We need more home fires burning. It is the law of nature."

Amazed, I looked at this woman of eighty who thought life had not been too hard. Only yesterday she had come from the new grave of her youngest child, Floyd, 42, who was killed in a bus accident at Ouray in which nine men lost their lives and nine were injured on their way home from the mines of the American Smelting & Refining company.

This had been the greatest tragedy of her life and she deplored the chaos and recklessness of today.

"All the lawlessness of the old west, all the killings, were nothing compared to those of the present when crime runs wild and the driver of every car is a potential killer. Automobiles killing innocent people wholesale are far more dangerous than all the Indians, wild animals and six-shooters ever were, and the gentlemen criminals worse than the outlaw."

* * *

The sun slanted thru the kitchen window across the tear-stained work-lined face of the bereaved mother who thought the Rocky Mountain Empire was worth all the pioneers had put into it.

Camping equipment and supplies were piled on the porch ready to load in the car -- a nice big car which would make the trip to the Gray Wolf easier than those she had made in the old stagecoach.

With her straight shoulders squared she walked out to the yard where her son Vernon was waiting. She was not giving up, not after all these years of meeting life as it came.

Maggie Crow was ready to start over the hills toward the setting sun and the mine which she is confident has a silver -- or gold -- lining.

A woman who helped to build the west and still doing her part to keep it going.

[Pictures accompanying the article are: (1) "First Jefferson county stage coach that regularly made the drive from Morrison to Conifer. Mrs. Crow, then the mail carrier, is shown in the rig. Her daughter, Dora, stands at the wheel." (2) "Mrs. Crow demonstrated how she used the rake and sluice box in washing gold at the Tarryall diggings." (3) "Mrs. Crow . . . inspects Gray Wolf Mine sample." (4) "Maggie panning gold." (5) "Vernon Crow at Wolf Mine." (6) Floyd Crow" (7) "Vernon Crow with first school teacher, Mrs. Beatrice G. Fraser." (8) "Mrs. Crow with Colt .45 six-shooter owned by Bob Ford, who killed Jesse James."]

Denver Post, August 4, 1946, p. 2, Magazine Section

NEIL R. CULLEN

Date: September 25, 1937

No. 2 B887 D5 E16 F69
WET/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Neil R. Cullen, President, Cullen-Thompson Motor Company, Inc.,
1000 Broadway, Denver, Colorado

Neil R. Cullen, born in Muscatine, Iowa, June 7, 1897; son of Frank and Mary (Robinson) Cullen.

Frank Cullen, born in Ireland. He emigrated to America shortly before 1861, and during the Civil War served in the artillery, receiving a leg injury which impaired the use of that limb the remainder of his life. After the war, he engaged in the road contracting business in Iowa. He was retired 20 years, and died in August 1912. His widow, Mary (Robinson) Cullen, daughter of John Robinson, was born in Illinois, and resides in Muscatine, Iowa.

Neil R. Cullen, attended grade and high schools in Iowa. He then engaged in the automobile business in Denver, Colorado, with a brother, from 1917 to 1924, in which latter year he established his present Chrysler and Plymouth automobile agency. This firm, known as the Cullen-Thompson Motor Co., which was incorporated in 1932, employs approximately 85 persons, and has the following officers: Neil R. Cullen, president; and W. J. Thompson, secretary and treasurer. The company occupies 60,000 square feet of floor space in a building located at 1000 Broadway. Mr. Cullen formerly was a director of the Optimist Club of Denver. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: Denver Chamber of Commerce; Rotary Club; Denver Country Club; Lakewood Country Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobbies are hunting, golf, and travel. Mr. Cullen, who has traveled extensively both in the U. S. and abroad, has recently returned from a trip to Russia. He is not married.

GEORGE HARDIN CURFMAN

Date: November 6, 1937

No. 2 B918 D5 E16 F115
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

George Hardin Curfman, Physician and Surgeon
445 Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

George Hardin Curfman, son of John Colvin and Lenora Alice (Alexander) Curfman; born in Maryville, Missouri, November 4, 1877.

John Colvin Curfman, son of Christian and Margaret (Gehret) Curfman, who were married May 10, 1841, after which they resided in Fairfield, Iowa. John Colvin Curfman moved from Fairfield, Iowa, to Maryville, Missouri, and established the first hardware store in that city. He engaged in the hardware business there from 1887 to 1896, and later retired from business. Although not a lawyer, he was elected judge of Nodaway County, Missouri, a position he held 6 years. He died in 1912, and is buried in Maryville, Missouri. His widow, Lenora Alice (Alexander) Curfman, who was born in 1850, resides in Maryville. Mrs. Curfman is of Scotch-Irish descent. Her parents were Joseph Eusebius and ____ (Culver) Alexander*, the latter of whom was from Vermont.

George Hardin Curfman, attended Maryville (Missouri) Seminary; graduate of Northwestern University, A. B., 1900; Northwestern University Medical School, M. D., 1905; interne, Cook County Hospital in Chicago, Illinois. He practiced medicine in Salida, Colorado, until September 1, 1936, since which time he has engaged in a general medical and surgical practice in Denver, Colo. He is also employed as chief physician and surgeon by the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co. Dr. Curfman, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Masonic Lodge, Colorado Consistory No. 1, and El Jebel Temple Shrine; American College of Surgeons; American Association of Railway Surgeons; Colorado State Medical Society (president, 1926); Medical Society of the City and County of Denver; Denver Athletic Club; Alpha Kappa Kappa, Alpha Omega Alpha, and Phi Beta Kappa (fraternities); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobbies are fishing, and hunting. Dr. Curfman has contributed articles on general medicine to the American and state medical journals.

On June 12, 1907, Dr. George Hardin Curfman married Elsie Drucilla Gelvin, of Missouri, daughter of David A. Gelvin. Five children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Curfman: (1) Robert Young, born June 4, 1908. He died in 1911, and is buried in Maryville, Missouri. (2) Mary Martha, born November 20, 1910. She graduated from Northwestern University with an A. B. degree in 1932. (3) Lenora Jane, born August 19, 1913. She graduated from the Ward-Belmont School, in 1936. (4) George Hardin, Jr., born May 16, 1915. He graduated from the Virginia Military Institute, in June 1936. (5) Elise Louise, born November 16, 1918. She attended the Ward-Belmont School, in Nashville, Tennessee.

* For further data regarding the Alexander family, see the "Scotch-Irish in America", written by Judge McCormick, of the Louisiana Supreme Court.

Also see: National Cyclopedia of American Biography, v. C, p. 444

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS A. CURTICE

After an illness of a week, Louis A. Curtice, a pioneer hotel man who had lived in Denver for 50 years, and who built the Curtice Hotel, at Thirteenth and California streets, years ago, died December 1st at his home, 2208 California street, at the age of 80 years. Mr. Curtice had been ailing for some time and recently went to California in an effort to recuperate. Ten days after the death of her husband, Mrs. Jennie Curtice, his wife, passed away and was laid to rest beside him by the Colorado Pioneers. Journeying together through years of married life, death parted them but a few days.

The Trail, v. III, no. 7, December 1910

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS A. CURTICE

L. A. Curtice, accompanied Byers' party to goldfields in February 1859. He was long a prominent real estate dealer in Denver and lived as early as 1866 and possibly earlier in Cheyenne Ave., Auraria, on west side of the street between what is now Curtis and Champa. (Cheyenne Ave. is now Ninth St., W.D.)

Mrs. Curtis [Curtice] was a most elegant lady, a New England woman, rather petite, with gentle and pleasant manners, was well educated and a prominent woman in Church activities. They had no children, but she had adopted a child named Mary ____? always called Mary Curtice, who was treated as a favored daughter, well dressed, sent to school and placed in good society, but she disappeared from their lives later on, so the elderly couple lived alone, and died within a few days of one another. On p. _ is photograph of their home on Cheyenne Ave., Auraria, but with some few alterations from old appearance: This house must have been built in the sixties, perhaps was a very early brick house.

Henrietta E. Bromwell, Fiftyniners' Directory: Colorado Argonauts of 1858-1859, v. I, p. 74

LOUIS A. CURTICE
Pioneer of Ox-team Days, is Dead

Louis A. Curtice, a Denver pioneer, died early yesterday morning from old age, at 2208 California Street, where he made his home for the last several months. He was 80 years of age and is survived by his wife and a nephew, George D. Curtice, county commissioner, both of whom reside in this city.

For some time Curtice has not been in the best of health, and for a month prior to his death, has been making preparations for a trip to California where he was going for the health of his wife, as well as for his own.

Curtice was born in Albany, New York. In 1862, with his wife and brother, William J. Curtice, he trekked across the country with an ox team and located in Denver, which was then in its infancy. He never engaged in any active business other than farming on a small scale. At one time he owned considerable land in what is now the heart of the city. During the later years of his life, Curtice lived in retirement.

Daily News, Denver, Colorado, December 3, 1910, p. 3.

DIED

Brownell - in Ballston, New York, May 24. Mary A. Brownell, aged 61 years, and mother of Mrs. L. A. Curtice and Mrs. J. A. Pierce. The deceased passed the summer of 1869 in Colorado. She will be sadly remembered by the many here who were quickly and favorably impressed by her estimable qualities.

Rocky Mountain News, June 1, 1873, p. 4.

CURTICE

Curtice - The funeral of S. Jennie Curtice, widow of the late Louis A. Curtice, will be held from Walley and Rollins Undertaking Parlors, 1408 Larimer Street, Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, under the auspices of the Colorado Pioneers.

Rocky Mountain News, December 11, 1910.

Curtice - in Denver. Louis A. Curtice aged 75 years.
Daily News, Denver, Colorado, December 3, 1910.

Curtice - Died in Denver, December 9, S. Jennie Curtice, widow of the late Louis A. Curtice.
Daily News, Denver, Colorado, December 10, 1910, p. 9.

LUCIUS MONTROSE CUTHBERT

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Lucius Cuthbert
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Lucius Montrose Cuthbert, born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, August 17, 1856

Name of father: Rev. James Hazzard Cuthbert, D.D., a native of Beaufort, South Carolina, born in 1830; died in 1894

Name of mother: Julia Elizabeth d'Antiguac Turpin Cuthbert, a native of Augusta, Georgia. She was a daughter of Wm. H. and Marie Antoinette d'Antiguac Turpin Attended school or college: Preparatory School of Columbian College; Columbian (now George Washington) University; Columbian Law School, Washington, D. C.

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: A.B. and A.M., Columbian University 1876; LL.B., Columbian Law School 1878

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Denver, Colorado from Washington D. C. in June 1881.

Married: Denver, Colorado, October 24, 1900

Name of wife: Gertrude, daughter of U. S. Senator N. P. Hill of Colorado and Alice Hale Hill

Names of children and years of birth: Gertrude, born in Denver, July 25, 1901; Alice Middleton, born in Denver August 25, 1902; and Lucius Montrose Jr. born in Denver, April 4, 1904, died in Denver August 17, 1906

Avocation: Attorney at Law

Give dates: Practiced Law in Denver continuously, June 1881 to June 1908. Retired from practice. Now President, United Oil Companies of Colorado

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Member, U.S. Geological Survey under Professor F. V. Hayden for a few months, and in Colorado with Dr. Eliot Coues Department of Natural History summer of 1876; Member of Colorado State Board of Peace Commissioners since its organization.

Give brief incidents of special interest: Resided in Denver continuously since June 1881. Residence, since 1901, at No. 1350 Logan St. Lecture on Roman Law at Colorado State University, Boulder, Colo. President, Denver Branch of the Archaeological Institute of America 1911-1914. Delegate, Universal Congress of Lawyers and jurists, St. Louis, Missouri, 1904. Delegate, Lake Mohouk Conferences on International Arbitration, 1914-1915. Member: American Bar Association; Board of Directors Denver Chamber of Commerce; Executive Committee Colorado Tax Payers Protective League; Board of Directors Tourist Bureau; Denver Convention League; St. Luke's Hospital, Denver, and Chamber of Commerce.

Member: Denver University, Denver Athletic and Denver Country Clubs, Denver; Union and University Clubs, New York; Metropolitan Club, Washington D. C. and Cheyenne Mountain Country Club, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

See Rocky Mountain News, December 12, 1915, p. 5

Denver Post, December 12, 1915, p. 9

Sketches of Colorado, p. 194

Smiley, History of Colorado, v. 2, p. 224

Please give autograph signature.

(signed)

L. M. Cuthbert

Biography File

CLARENCE JOSEPH DALY

Date: September 25, 1937

No. 2 B886 D5 E16 F66
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Clarence Joseph Daly, President, Capitol Life Insurance Co.,
Capitol Life Building, Denver, Colorado

Clarence Joseph Daly*, son of Thomas Franklin and Elthea Belle (Cooper) Daly; born in Leadville, Colorado, March 16, 1888.

Thomas Franklin Daly*, son of John and Margaret (Touhy) Daly, was born in West Superior, Douglas County, Wisconsin, in 1858. He attended grade school at Lake Linden, Michigan, until 1860, at which time he was employed as mill boy by the Calumet and Hecla Copper Co. In 1882, he moved to Leadville, Colorado, where he engaged in the mining business. In 1886, he entered the insurance business, and subsequently represented such companies as the United States Life Insurance Co., the New York Life Insurance Co., the London Guarantee & Accident Co., and the Hartford Steam Boiler Insurance Co. In 1895, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where, in 1905, he established the Capitol Life Insurance Co., of which he served as president until his death, which occurred in 1921. Mr. Daly, who was a Democrat, was a member of the Denver Club, Denver Country Club, and El Paso Club. His wife, Elthea Belle (Cooper***) Daly, whom he married in Leadville, Colorado, in 1887, was the daughter of Charles S. and Josephine (Brewster) Cooper, of Galesburg, Illinois. Charles S. Cooper served as a captain of artillery in the Civil War, following which he and his wife moved to Memphis, Tennessee. Thomas Franklin and Elthea Belle (Cooper) Daly were the parents of 3 children, of whom Clarence Joseph was the only son, and youngest child.

Clarence Joseph Daly, attended public schools in Leadville, Colorado, 1 year, and then in Denver, Colorado; student, Holbrook Military Academy (Ossining, New York), 3 years; student, Hamilton College (Utica, New York), 2 years. He then was employed in the Chicago office of the London Guarantee & Accident Co. awhile, after which he became associated with the Capitol Life Insurance Co., in Denver, of which firm he has been president since 1921. During the World War, he served in the aviation section of the U. S. Army, and was stationed at Great Lakes, Illinois. Mr. Daly, who is independent in politics, is a member of the following: American Life Convention (resident vice-president); National Association of Life Underwriters; Denver Chamber of Commerce; City Club; Denver Country Club; Cherry Hills Club; Denver Athletic Club; State Historical Society of Colorado; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobbies are golf, and motoring.

On January 6, 1908, in Denver, Colorado, Clarence Joseph Daly married Marie A. Genter, of Colorado Springs, Colorado. Mrs. Daly was born in Salt Lake City, Utah. Her father, E. W. Genter, who died October 3, 1928, was a miner. He organized the Colorado Irrigation Co., and built the Castlewood Dam. Mr. and Mrs. Daly are the parents of 2 children: (1) Thomas Franklin (II), who was born July 2, 1910. He attended Williams College, 2 years, and later Northwestern University. On March 6, 1931, he married Elizabeth Bratton, daughter of Commander and Mrs. L. E. Bratton. Mr. and Mrs. Daly were the parents of 1 child, Joan Marie, who was born August 26, 1932. On December 11, 1936, Thomas Franklin Daly (II) married, 2nd, Mary Shaw, who was born in Fort Collins, Colorado, daughter of George and Mary (Harding) Shaw. (2) Elizabeth Marie, who was born December 20, 1911. On June 2, 1934, she married Frank F. Foster. Mrs. Foster resides in Denver, with her son, Frank F., Jr., who was born October 29, 1935.

* For further data regarding Clarence Joseph Daly, and his father, Thomas Franklin Daly, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Publishers, Denver, 1927), vol. 4, pp. 661 and 162, respectively; and Wilbur F. Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, pp. 571 and 244, respectively.

*** For further data regarding Elthea Belle (Cooper) Daly, see genealogical records of the Brewster family.

Denver Commercial 17:10, September 3, 1925

Mrs. Thomas F. Daly, DAR# 124200

THOMAS F. DALY

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Thomas F. Daly
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Thomas F. Daly, born in Douglas County, Wisconsin

Name of father: John Daly, a native of Ireland

Name of mother: Margaret Daly, a native of Ireland

Attended school or college: Common Schools of Michigan. No college.

Give names, dates, honorary degrees: None

Married: Yes, at Leadville, Colorado in 1887

Name of wife: Elthea B. Cooper (DAR #124200), a daughter of Chas. S. Cooper

Name of children and years of birth: Clarence Joseph Daly, born in 1888; Imogene Elizabeth Daly, born in 1890; Helen Josephine Dale, born in 1895

Avocation: Insurance Agent

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: None except in private enterprise. Manager, Western Department, London Guarantee & Accident Co., Ltd.; President, Capitol Life Insurance Company

See: Rocky Mountain News, August 27, 1921, p. 1

Times, August 27, 1921, p. 3

Denver Post, August 27, 1921, p. 3

Times, September 8, 1921, p. 5

Colorado Clipping File

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Thos. F. Daly

Biography File

MRS. THOMAS F. DALY
Mrs. Daly Leaves $1.2 Million Estate

Mrs. Thomas F. Daly, late Denver civic and social leader, left an estate valued at $1,235,063, an inventory filed before Denver County Judge David Brofman revealed Wednesday.

Stocks valued at $1,203,200 made up the bulk of her estate, including $1,076,625 worth of stock in Associates Investments Co. and Daly Investment Co. stock, valued at $126,300.

Mrs. Daly was the wife of Thomas F. Daly, founder of Capitol Life Insurance Co. She died Jan. 8 at 95.

Her will, dated April 24, 1941, leaves her entire estate in trust for her children, Mrs. Helen Daly Peale of Greenwich, Conn.; Clarence J. Daly, and Mrs. Imogene Daly of Denver, and three grandchildren.

Rocky Mountain News, March 21, 1963, p. 51

JOHN S. DALZIEL

See:

Denver Post, August 20, 1937, p. 19

Denver Post, February 6, 1941, p. 1

Denver Post, October 4, 1931

Denver Post, October 8, 1936, p. 1

Denver Post, October 12, 1934, p. 1

Rocky Mountain News, July 31, 1932, p. 16

Rocky Mountain News, March 4, 1934, p. 1

Rocky Mountain News, October 8, 1936, p. 2

Rocky Mountain News, August 20, 1934, p. 1

Time Magazine, July 1937

MAJOR WILLIAM COOKE DANIELS

Chance Remark Led to Building of Denver's Famed D & F Tower

By EVA HODGES

Denver Post Staff Writer

An impatient remark was the inspiration for the Daniels & Fisher's store tower, Denver's most famous landmark for almost half a century.

It was made by Miss Florence Martin of Denver, close friend of William Cooke Daniels, son of the founder of the store, and his English wife, Cicely.

Daniels, dashing young explorer, businessman and bon vivant, died in Argentina in March, 1918. His wife died six months later in the Claridge hotel, London, in the World War I flu epidemic.

But in the untroubled era before the war, when Miss Martin made her home with the young couple, the days seemed always bright when they were floating down the Nile, exploring India, skiing in Switzerland, living in England, or in the romantic Chateau de la Motte in France.

"BETTER BUILD A TOWER"

In 1907, Daniels -- then in France -- was bursting with enthusiasm over plans to enlarge D&F's.

The store had recently moved "uptown" to 16th and Lawrence Sts., despite dire predictions of former neighbors on Larimer St. that its trade would never follow it "way out in the sticks."

"Mr. Daniels was talking, talking all the time about what sort of architecture he should have," Miss Martin recalls. "Finally, I got bored with it and said 'Oh, you'd better build a tower!'"

"That's just what I'll do!" Daniels agreed.

COMPLETED IN 1910

The D&F tower, a replica of the famous Campanile at Venice, was completed in 1910, and awed Denverites were told that it was one of the highest in the world.

Miss Martin first saw Denver in 1907 when Daniels brought her and his wife to visit the city in which his father had made a fortune.

Eleven years later, in 1919 -- the year following the couple's deaths -- she made a more somber pilgrimage here. Both Daniels and Mrs. Daniels had made her a principal beneficiary of their wills, and "I came here to attend to some business on my way to my home in Australia," she said.

But Miss Martin was so enchanted with the climate and the people that she has made her home in Denver ever since.

In memory of the Daniels, she gave 1,040 acres of mountain land -- "Daniels park," -- one of Denver's favorite picnic sites -- to the city. She established the Cooke Daniels lecture fund, through which the Denver Art museum brings distinguished visiting lecturers to the city.

"I don't want to talk about myself," Miss Martin, now 87, protested recently in the book-lined study of the colonial-style, white-washed brick home which Burnham Hoyt designed for her at 3825 E. Warren Ave.

"But I would like to talk about the Daniels."

Miss Martin first met William Cooke Daniels at Sydney, Australia, her home.

"WAITING FOR YACHT"

"A great friend, a doctor there, invited me to dinner one night to meet Mr. Daniels," she recalled. "He was waiting for a yacht he had chartered for an expedition to New Guinea.

"During the evening I discovered that he had fallen very much in love with a girl he'd met on the boat coming to Australia -- an English girl who was visiting her uncle, the bishop of south Australia."

In fact, the young adventurer was so dazedly in love that he had all but lost interest in the expedition to the island of Papua, New Guinea, where few white men had ever been before.

"I'll ask the young lady to stay with me when her visit to relatives is over," Miss Martin volunteered.

MARRIED IN 1906

The results of the 16-month expedition won the young Denverite his election to the Royal Geographic society and numerous scientific plaudits.

But, more important to our story, Cicely Banner visited Miss Martin until Daniels could return to Australia to resume his courtship of her.

After their marriage in London in 1906, they invited Miss Martin to make her home with them.

What sort of man was William Daniels?

CAME TO DENVER WHEN 4

William was 4 when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Daniels, brought him to Denver from Kansas.

A prosperous Leavenworth, Kan., merchant, the elder Daniels had earlier (1864) sent an associate to open a store in Denver. No dreamer of quick fortunes, Daniels was to bring a new load of stout miners' boots for sale to the silver prospectors.

There was a time after the death of his gentle, poetic-appearing mother, when the youth was grief stricken and unmanageable, according to his accounts.

His father enrolled him in three different schools in Denver. William set fire to them, one after another. Finally, when no Denver school would accept the unruly lad, his father gave him a generous allowance, sent him east, and told him to educate himself.

CAMPED OUT-OF-DOORS

Haunted by a fear of tuberculosis, which had killed his mother, Daniels camped out-of-doors near the prep school he selected, and, by dint of simple, healthful living, managed to save enough money to pay for the education of a schoolmate, as well as his own.

He attended Yale university and worked for a time as a reporter on the New York Star.

But the urge to travel was irresistible. He was 19 and in Japan studying the lives of Buddhist monks, when word reached him of the death of his father in 1890.

He returned to Denver to take his place in the family enterprise.

BOUGHT FISHER STORE

In 1897 he bought out the interest of the store owned by the W. G. Fisher interests, but retained Fisher's name "for reasons of sentiment."

Daniels proved to be an unusually enlightened executive for his day. Among the innovations he made at D&F's -- and in the department store field -- was the annual two weeks' vacation with pay, a credit union for employees, sickness insurance, and a school for the little "cash" girls, who grew to womanhood in the store's employ.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war in February, 1898, he enlisted as a volunteer and was given the commission of major. He contracted typhoid fever and was one of the few survivors of Montauk hospital.

The title of "major" fit as handsomely as one of his Seville Row suits, and he was always referred to in print thereafter as "Maj. William Cooke Daniels."

WENT TO ENGLAND

At the close of the war he went to England, in time, the expedition to New Guinea was in the planning stage.

Though he continued to think of Denver as "home," the intellectual and cultural life of England and the continent held him like a magnet.

Yet "he was the whole heart and soul of the store," Miss Martin maintains. "He wanted a much better class of business than the store attracted during his father's lifetime, and very soon he had the best store between New York and San Francisco.

"He lived in Europe, of course," she added, "but he used to come to Denver every several years and put in concentrated time running the store."

DENVERITES WELCOMED

Denverites traveling abroad were always assured of a welcome at the English estate or the French chateau, built during the reign of Francis I.

An exception was Mrs. Crawford Hill, arbiter of Denver society for several decades, and "a charming woman," according to Miss Martin.

"But we rather used to avoid her," she admitted. "She'd arrive in Paris, surround herself with other American bridge players, and never leave her hotel."

Remaining cooped up indoors when the world outside was so full of a number of things was the energetic trio's idea of nothing at all.

PLANNED SCHOONER

For one thing, shortly before World War I, Major Daniels was engrossed with plans for a new schooner, which was to carry the three around the world.

"He wanted to put my cabin in a spot where I didn't want it, and we had a number of arguments about that," Miss Martin said. "Then, suddenly, I had a premonition that none of us would ever sail in the boat, and I let him have his way."

With the outbreak of hostilities, Major Daniels sent his wife and Miss Martin to Switzerland, a neutral haven. He returned to the United States to volunteer his services.

The few remaining pages before his death are blurred. He was in Argentina, perhaps on a government mission, The Denver Post surmised in its story on his death. The physical weakness he had battled since his bout with typhoid fever was believed responsible for his final illness at the age of 47.

SHOCK TO WIFE

The news of his death came as a "terrible shock" to his wife. In a chalet on Las de Thoune, near Gunten, Switzerland, the two women had set up a club and school for wounded Allied soldiers.

In the club, the men could relax over their purchases of coffee, rolls and jam for a ha'penny (one cent).

Miss Martin and Mrs. Daniels were especially proud of the wool rugs which they taught the men to weave in the school, and which were popular at exhibitions throughout Switzerland.

In the fall of 1918, with their supplies of wool running low, the two decided to make the dangerous trip to England to obtain more.

BOTH WERE ILL

"She was quite ill, and I was too, but it had been so difficult to make arrangements for the trip that we decided to go anyhow," Miss Martin said.

A physician was summoned soon after they checked into the Claridge hotel. Mrs. Daniels died a short time later. She was 34.

"The doctor told me later that he had hoped to save her, but that he thought I would certainly die," Miss Martin recalls.

Two maids accompanying the women also died in the epidemic. By the time Miss Martin rallied sufficiently to return to Switzerland, most of the soldiers who had attended the club and school were names on crosses in the village cemetery.

YOUNGER THAN MISS MARTIN

At the time of her death, Mrs. Daniels was approximately 15 years younger than Miss Martin.

"I always regarded her as a sort of adopted daughter," Miss Martin explained. "She really was a sort of saint. I have never known anyone who had such a beautiful character."

In Denver Miss Martin constructed a home on Wildcat mountain, near Sedalia, which she called "Valnino."

"Val" was the name by which Major Daniels called his wife, who was born on St. Valentine's day. "Nino" was her name for him. The home burned in February, 1936.

OTHER RESIDENCES

Until she built her present home in 1938, Miss Martin lived in several residences, including, at times, Wolhurst, and the Crawford Hill mansion at E. 9th Ave. and Sherman St., now the Town club.

Miss Martin was born in Australia, the daughter of Sir James Martin, prime minister and chief justice of New South Wales, and Lady Martin.

She was the tenth of 16 children. On the grounds of the family home, with its terraced gardens, tea and coffee trees and exotic flowers, each child had his or her own garden.

Miss Martin became active in the Denver Garden Club as soon as she had put down roots here. She has long been a patron of the arts, and of Denver Civic theater.

Until a recent illness, she continued to travel widely -- to Europe, Australia and Hawaii.

"I like to be in other places, but I don't like to get to them," she explained. "I hate steamers and trains and living out of trunks. I fly everywhere now."

As beneficiary of a trust fund, Miss Martin has had no direct connection with Daniels & Fisher's for a number of years. But she had a keen, nostalgic interest in the store.

"Major Daniels always thought it would have to move further uptown -- though he really didn't want it to," she said of plans to establish a new D&F's on Courthouse square.

"I hope and think it will be a very successful store. But I will regret seeing the tower lose its significance."

[Pictures accompanying this article are of Miss Florence Martin, Mrs. Cicely Daniels, Maj. William Cooke Daniels and the Daniels' Chateau de la Motte in France.]

Denver Post, June 26, 1955, p. 35C

WILLIAM C. DANKS

Date: October 2, 1937

No. 2 B891 D5 E16 F81
LCD/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. William C. Danks, Member,
Colorado Public Utilities Commission, Denver, Colorado

William C. Danks, born in Effingham, Illinois, December 16, 1875; son of Joseph and Addie (Cooley) Danks.

Joseph Danks, who is deceased, moved from Passaic, New Jersey, to Illinois. His wife, Addie (Cooley) Danks, lives in Effingham Co., Illinois.

William C. Danks, attended schools in Effingham County, Illinois; Austin College; Lincoln (Illinois) College; graduated, Northern Illinois College of Law, LL. B., in 1899, and LL. M., in 1900. He practiced law at Great Falls, Montana, 1900-05, and in 1906, established law offices in Denver, Colorado. He served as supervisor of the City and County of Denver, in 1912; as a councilman, in 1916; as a member of the Board of Water Commissioners, in 1924; and as adjutant general of Colorado, 1931-34. Since 1935, he has been a member of the Colorado Public Utilities Commission. In 1898, Mr. Danks enlisted in the U. S. Army for service in the Spanish-American War, and served as a noncommissioned officer in an Illinois Cavalry unit. In 1917, he enlisted for service in the World War, and served with Colorado, Massachusetts, and New York units. He was overseas, 1 year, during which time he was commissioned a lieutenant colonel of the Infantry. He was honorably discharged, with the rank of colonel, in 1919. He served in the Colorado National Guard, rising from a private to the rank of brigadier general. Mr. Danks is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A.F. and A.M., York Rite Commandery (Knights Templar), Scottish Rite Consistory (32nd degree), and Shrine; O. E. S.; American Legion; United Spanish War Veterans; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobby is Percheron horses and Shorthorn cattle. During the past 25 years, Mr. Danks has operated stock ranches in Arapahoe, Routt, and Douglas Counties, Colorado, and resides on Cold Spring Ranch, at Larkspur, Douglas County.

In 1902, William C. Danks married Matilda E. Lanham, of Logan County, Illinois, daughter of Thomas W. and Jane (Bryson) Lanham, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Danks are the parents of 5 children: (1) Edna M., wife of Albert Latham. They reside in Denver, and are the parents of 3 children, Albert, Jr., Willarae, and Robert Latham. (2) Willa E., wife of J. H. Marschner. They reside in Denver, and are the parents of 1 child, William Melvin Marschner. (3) Josephine J., wife of Myron Donald. They reside at Steamboat Springs, Colorado, and are the parents of 1 child, Joan Donald. (4) Raymond Bryson, who graduated from the University of Denver, A. B., in 1937. (5) Fern Louri, a student of East Denver High School.

CLYDE C. DAWSON

Attorney at Law

A distinguished member of the Denver bar, although of late years a great part of his time had been spent in Washington, where his firm maintained an office in the interest of its corporate clients, Clyde C. Dawson in the earlier part of his career was engaged in a number of important trials involving both criminal and civil law, in both State and Federal courts.

Born in Dallas County, Iowa, February 8, 1864, he was the son of Dr. Jesse W. and Caroline (Price) Dawson, both of whom were natives of Ohio. They resided in Iowa for several years, but in January, 1876, they removed to Cañon city, Colorado. There Clyde C. Dawson, who had begun his education in the public schools of his native State, continued his studies, and he was graduated with the first class that completed the high school course in Cañon City in 1884. Through the succeeding scholastic years he was a student in Denver University, and then entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where he was graduated from the law department in the class of 1888 with the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

Returning to Cañon City, he entered upon the practice of his profession, January 1, 1889, and became a member of the law firm of Waldo & Dawson. Later, a third partner was added, and the style of the firm became Waldo, Dawson & Stump. He continued in practice in Cañon City until 1910, when he sought a broader field of labor by removing to Denver, Colorado, where, on January 1 of that year, he became a member of the firm then known as Hayt, Dawson & Wright. Since 1918 the firm became Dawson & Wright. Mr. Dawson gave much attention to irrigation law, and was one of the counsel representing the State of Colorado in the case of Kansas versus Colorado, the case being an original proceeding in the Supreme Court of the United States. Mr. Dawson took part in the oral argument of this case. He was also one of counsel in the case of the United States versus the Beaver Power Company, of Utah, and took part in the argument before the United States Supreme Court. He appeared in that tribunal in other cases and practiced in all the various State and Federal courts, being recognized as one of the most prominent men in his profession in Colorado.

In what was known as the strike case, in Frémont County, Colorado, growing out of the coal strike in the southern fields, he acted as prosecutor in aid of the district attorney. The trial lasted for sixty days and resulted in the conviction of the two leaders of the strike in that region. In what was known as the Penitentiary graft case, tried in the same county, he successfully defended those charged with a conspiracy to defraud the State. Later he defended Rienzi C. Dickens, charged with the murder of his father at Longmont, Colorado. This was one of the most notable murder trials in the annals of Colorado jurisprudence. On the first trial the defendant was convicted of murder in the first degree, but Mr. Dawson carried the case to the Supreme Court of Colorado, obtained a reversal on error, and an order for a new trial. This second trial, which took place at Greeley, Colorado, resulted in the acquittal of the defendant.

Mr. Dawson was a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and was Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias in 1897-98, and afterwards Supreme Representative. He belonged to the Denver Club, the University Club of Denver, the Denver and Cherry Hills Country Clubs, was a life member of the Congressional Club, of Washington, D. C., and also a member of the Columbia Club and the Racquet Club of that city. He was a member of the Colorado Bar Association, the Denver Bar Association, and of the American Bar Association.

He had long been a factor in Republican politics in Colorado, and had been an earnest supporter of the party ever since leaving his law school, but had never sought office. He was a delegate to the national Republican conventions of 1904 and 1908, and was the Republican nominee in 1912 for United States Senator. In 1924 he was a Presidential elector and took an active part in the campaign on behalf of the State and National tickets. During the fall and winter of 1923-24 he served as a member of the fact finding commission appointed by the Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior to make a complete review of the operations of the Federal Reclamation Service since its inauguration a quarter of a century ago, and to report recommendations as to improvements in this service, and suggest needed legislation. The report of this commission is embodied in Senate Document No. 92, Sixty-eighth Congress, first session, and covers some 230 pages. It was transmitted to the Congress in a special message by President Coolidge, commending it to the consideration of that body.

For four years prior to May, 1924, when his term expired, Mr. Dawson served as a member of the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce, representing the Eighth District, made up of several mountain States, including Colorado. While Mr. Dawson spent the greater part of his time in Washington since 1917, where the offices of Dawson & Wright are in the Investment Building, Fifteenth and K streets, Northwest, he maintained his home in Denver and returned often enough to keep in touch with the offices of the firm in the First National Bank Building, that city. His favorite sport was hunting, and as he preferred big game, most of his recreation was found in the far west. Mr. Dawson passed away June 21, 1927, mourned by many friends and associates throughout the country.

On September 23, 1899, Mr. Dawson married Kathryn Russell, daughter of Charles H. Russell, of Woodstock, Illinois, but at the time a resident of Cañon City, Colorado. Two children were born of this union: Katherine, born in 1904; Clyde C., Jr., born in 1905. [ Mrs. Dawson's D.A.R. # 639227]

[A picture of Clyde Dawson accompanies the article.]

Encyclopedia of Biography, p. 50-52

Also see:

Smiley, History of Colorado, p. 107

National Cyclopedia of American Biography, v. 21, p. 134

MRS. ELIZABETH DAYTON

By LARRY PEARSON

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Regis College will receive a bequest of $750,000 -- largest gift in its 85-year history -- from the late Mrs. Elizabeth Dayton.

The Very Rev. Richard F. Ryan, Regis president, said "The legacy left to Regis College by Mrs. Elizabeth Dayton is simply magnificent and constitutes by far the largest gift made to Regis College in its 85-year history.

"We are tremendously encouraged by the confidence placed in Regis College by Mrs. Dayton in making this gift, and we realize it raises grave obligations of responsible stewardship on our part," Father Ryan said.

"In this sense, the Dayton bequest constitutes a wonderful encouragement and a ringing challenge to all who care about Regis College."

Mrs. Dayton, longtime Denver resident and widow of William L. Dayton, died in Swedish Hospital on March 12.

Her husband, a prominent Denver attorney, died in 1921. Mrs. Dayton's will recently was offered for probate in Denver County Court.

The Dayton estate is expected to exceed $1 million. It named several local and national charitable organizations as recipients of smaller bequests in addition to that to Regis. These include:

The National Assn. for Mental Health, New York City, one-eighth of the residuary estate, or about $125,000.

Columbia University Law School, New York City, one-eighth of the residuary estate, or about $125,000.

The following Denver organizations and persons will receive $3000:

Craig Rehabilitation Center, Dominican Sisters of the Sick Poor, Archbishop Urban J. Vehr, St. Clara's Orphanage, Mt. St. Vincent's Home, Booth Memorial Hospital, Convent of the Good Shepherd, Denver Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Florence Crittenton Home, Multiple Sclerosis Society and the Sands House Assn.

Goodwill Industries will receive wearing apparel from the estate.

The American Foundation for the Blind, New York City, and St. Columbans Foreign Mission Society of St. Columbans, Nebr., each will receive $3000.

Relatives and friends named in the will as beneficiaries include:

Doris Dayton Parisette of Danbury, Conn., various articles of personal jewelry; Josephine Dayton Heissenbottle of Hendersonville, N. C., various articles of personal jewelry;

Dan Barton of Stone Mountain, Ga., grandnephew, $2000; Dave Barton, of Redondo Beach, Calif., grandnephew, $2000; Dan Harrington of Evanston, Ill., nephew, $2000, and Rose Flynn of San Jose, Calif., niece, $2000.

Regarding the gift to Regis, Father Ryan called upon all faculty, students, alumni and friends of Regis College to join in a corporate expression of gratitude and prayerful commendation to God for both Mr. and Mrs. Dayton.

At the same time, he invited all the citizens of Denver to rejoice with Regis because, by her bequests, Mrs. Dayton "not only strengthened many of our city's essential institutions but particularly has advanced the cause of private higher education at a critical hour."

Father Ryan said the gift could scarcely come at a more propitious time, because Regis has just launched the first phase of a $10 million building program.

He also noted that under the terms of the bequest, the college may use the funds to construct a building to be known as the Mr. and Mrs. William L. Dayton Memorial, or for some other purpose at the discretion of the trustees of the college.

Father Ryan expressed warm approval for this discretionary power given to Regis by Mrs. Dayton because this permits the trustees to apply the funds to meet the greatest needs of the college.

Marmaduke B. Holt is the attorney for the estate, and the First National Bank of Denver is executor.

Rocky Mountain News, May 5, 1963, p. 5

MRS. ELIZABETH DAYTON

This is the story of a broken-hearted little old lady who gave away $1 million.

Her name was Elizabeth Dayton, and the story -- part of it, at least -- lies in a will offered for probate in Denver County Court.

In that will, Mrs. Dayton bequeathed $750,000 to Regis College, $125,000 to the National Association for Mental Health, $125,000 to the Columbia University Law School, and a total of $39,000 to 13 charities.

But the story is more than just the will.

It is the story of a love that lasted beyond the grave.

The beginnings are sketchy.

Mrs. Dayton was born Elizabeth Harrington on Jan. 8, 1883, in Lakawaxen, Pa., a river town about 90 miles north of Philadelphia. She came to Denver about the turn of the century, and shortly afterwards accepted a job as secretary to an up-and-coming lawyer named William L. Dayton, who had attended Columbia Law School.

Then on Oct. 6, 1904, this story appeared on Page 2 of The Denver Post:

"William L. Dayton, a young attorney of this city, created a ripple of surprise among his friends by suddenly disappearing last night without leaving a word of any nature. This morning, it was found that Mr. Dayton had been married to Miss Elizabeth Harrington. The young lady is prominent in social circles. Not a single friend of either of the participants in the recent marriage suspected what had occurred.

"Mr. Dayton is said to a very quiet and conservative young man, hence the surprise among his friends is all the more keen. No one knows where the couple are spending their honeymoon."

The Daytons built a fine home at 671 Humboldt St. A friend, Miss Edna Potter of 685 Humboldt St., recalled that Mrs. Dayton -- a thin, attractive woman -- was "very active in social circles," and that her husband was "very brilliant and very influential."

Dayton went into partnership with another noted lawyer, Wilbur F. Denious Sr. He was prominently mentioned for appointment as a federal district judge, and served as president of both the Denver and Colorado Bar Associations.

Then, on Dec. 26, 1921, Dayton died of pneumonia.

"Mrs. Dayton was just broken-hearted," Miss Potter remembered. "They were terribly close to each other. I guess you can be too close to somebody you love . . ."

There were no children.

In time Mrs. Dayton sold the Humboldt St. house and moved into the Park Lane Hotel, 450 S. Marion St. She began traveling extensively.

"It was a kind of therapy for her," Miss Potter said. "Like I say, she was a broken-hearted, desolate soul.

She was well fixed financially, but money couldn't fill empty years.

"She had outlived her friends," said Elmer Johnson, First National Bank trust officer. "I called on her from time to time. She was always alone."

Mrs. Dayton began having her groceries brought up to her apartment, and she seldom went out.

Monsignor John P. Morgan, her pastor at St. John's Catholic Church, E. 7th Ave. and Elizabeth St., remembered seeing her when she'd come to mass, but after mass "she never had much to say about herself."

Her attorney, Marmaduke B. Holt, described her as "a rather retiring lady who lived quietly and modestly. I wish I knew more about her, but I don't."

Holt said Mrs. Dayton was concerned that her estate be wisely used, and she instructed him to make discrete investigations before drawing up her will. Regis and others named in the will had no notice such investigations were being made.

In recent years, Mrs. Dayton's health began failing. She moved to the Swedish Nursing Home, 3401 S. Clarkson St., Englewood.

And there, on March 12, she died. There were only a few lines of agate type under the funeral notice headings to mark her passing.

Saturday, she lost the obscurity she had cultivated during the latter half of her lifetime.

Saturday, she became the broken-hearted little old lady who gave away $1 million.

Denver Post, May 5, 1963, p. 3A

JOHN HENRY DENISON

Biographical data to accompany portrait of John Henry Denison
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: John Henry Denison, born at Royalton, Vermont, July 15, 1855

Name of father: Dudley Chase Denison, a native of Vermont

Name of mother: Eunice Dunbar, a native of Vermont

Attended school or college: University of Vermont

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: A.B., 1877; LL.D., 1920.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: 1881

Married: Chicago, 1884

Name of wife: Agnes Hawley, the daughter of Benj. R. Hawley and H. Rosamond (Hall)

Name of children and years of birth: Rosamond, born in 1885; Dudley Stanton (deceased), born in 1888; Rachel Chase, born in 1900

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Professor of Law, University of Colorado, 1897-9; University of Denver, 1901; Judge, District Court, Denver, 1913-1918; Justice Supreme Court, Colorado, 1919-1928.

Biography File

GENERAL JAMES WILLIAM DENVER
He Was Famous Except in City Named for Him
Denver a Soldier, Lawyer, Editor

(Editor's Note: This is the second of two articles on Gen. James William Denver, for whom our city is named, which were prepared especially for The Rocky Mountain News by Mrs. Louisa Ward Arps of the Denver Public Library, an authority on Denver's life.)

By LOUISA WARD ARPS

The boy whose dreams of becoming a farmer were shattered by early rheumatism grew up to up to read the burial service over fellow pioneers on the long wagon trek to the gold of California.

When James William Denver was a youth he wanted to become a farmer in the then frontier lands of Missouri, but a virulent attack of rheumatism forced him to change his mind.

The rheumatism, however, had little lasting effect. General Denver grew into a strapping man of 260 pounds, veteran of two wars, freighter of goods to the goldfields, organizer of a rescue team to save emigrants in the high Sierra from the fate of the ill-starred Donner party.

General Denver was born Oct. 23, 1817, near Winchester, Va., but moved at an early age to Wilmington, Ohio, where he lies buried. He was oldest of 11 children, which perhaps accounts for the 18 postoffices in the United States named Denver.

* * *

His grandfather, Patrick Denver, fled from Ireland after his side lost in one of the Irish rebellions and settled in Virginia in 1804. His son, also Patrick, came out of the War of 1812 as a U. S. Army captain.

After recovering from rheumatism, young Mr. Denver went west in the early 1840s when Missouri still was unsurveyed. He looked for a surveyor's job, but accepted a country school teacher's position in Kentucky. A year of teaching gave him the funds to take a law degree in 1844 in Cincinnati, and he hung up his shingle in Xenia, Ohio, filling the long wait between clients by editing the Thomas Jefferson, a jovial Democratic newspaper.

He later settled at Platte City, Mo., where he organized and became captain of Company H, 12th Volunteer Regiment, for the Mexican War. Captain Denver was laid low by yellow fever after many battles and was unable to be with his company in the battle at Mexico City.

* * *

He organized in 1873 the Mexican War Veterans and presided over the American Legion of his day until his death in 1892.

After being mustered out in 1848, Captain Denver returned to Platte City and bought the Argus, which he edited only until the following year, when the California gold bug got him. He organized a party of 34 and set out.

His daughter's memoirs say her father used "the little-known Snake River route." If she meant the "known Little Snake River route," the Denver party passed along the northern edge of present Colorado, through Brown's Hole and saw old "Fort Misery," officially Fort Davy Crockett.

Cholera killed eight of the group en route. Each time a man sickened, the wagon wheels would stop until the man died. Then Captain Denver read the burial service and another grave was added along the trail of the Forty-Niners.

* * *

After practicing law in Sacramento, Captain Denver in 1851 went north to Trinity County and carried on a dry goods freighting business between Humboldt Bay and the mines. He made such a good impression on his customers that they elected him, without asking his permission, to the state senate.

The Legislature appropriated funds for the relief of emigrant trains crossing the Sierra, and Captain Denver spent the summer of 1852 leading the relief expedition -- except for his short return to Sacramento for the Aug. 2 duel which haunted his political career.

Captain Denver was appointed California's secretary of state in 1853 and ran for Congress while still holding the office. He won, and headed for Washington via Panama in 1855. Remembering the difficulties he had in crossing the isthmus, Captain Denver urged in Congress not one but three transcontinental railroads.

His most valuable contribution to the West in Congress was his defeat of a land grab scheme. By recommending that the old Spanish law be followed, a law that distinguished mineral claims from surface claims, he started the present system of land rights.

About a year after he returned to the States, Captain Denver married an Ohio girl named Louisa Rombach. They had two daughters and two sons, one of whom became a congressman from Ohio.

In 1857 President Buchanan appointed Captain Denver -- he did not run for re-election -- commissioner of Indian affairs, and Captain Denver went west to negotiate with the Indians. A picture of him doing that hangs in the Denver room of the old Morton House in Nebraska City.

* * *

Captain Denver became the sixth territorial governor of Kansas in May, 1858, and served until October, resigning after significant success in quelling the pre-Civil War disturbances. He resigned to accept reappointment as commissioner of Indian affairs.

One day in the summer of 1858, General Denver wrote later, "It occurred to me that here was quite a crowd of people going into a new country where there were no laws or officers . . . At once I appointed a full set of officers, County Judge H. P. A. Smith, an old California friend and native of Maine, Sheriff Edward Wynkoop . . . There being no county seat for Arapahoe County, it became the duty of these officers to locate it, so they laid out a town just below the mouth of Cherry Creek and did me the honor to name it after me."

Many historians have said General Denver never visited his namesake. Actually he was here twice, staying at the American House in August, 1872, and at the Windsor in September, 1882. At neither time was any special attention paid him, which rather hurt his feelings.

General Denver's portrait hangs in the Statehouse and the State Museum, where there is also the saddle he used in the Civil War. There is no statue of General Denver in Denver. The State Historical Society refused an offer of one on the ground General Denver's contribution to the city was "too slight." Which is true, but he helped make the West.

[A photograph of Gen. Denver accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, February 14, 1950, p. 12

GENERAL JAMES WILLIAM DENVER

How Denver Was Named
Rifle Duel Hurt A General's Career
By ROSCOE FLEMING

We owe much to the man who, however unknowingly, gave our city its nice, crisp, clean-sounding name. Suppose the governor of Kansas Territory in 1859 had been named William Kalamazoo, Robert Ypsilanti or Howard Walla Walla?

His full name instead was James William Denver.

He was briefly in the local news a couple years ago when his son (yes, that's right, so recent we are) died in the family homestead in Ohio.

Houston Waring's Littleton Independent did a sketch of General Denver about then, and Louisa Arps earlier had a nice profile.

Contrary to legend, he did at least twice during the 70's and 80's visit the town named after him, which was growing into a regional metropolis.

General Denver was a distinguished man and but for an unfortunate incident might have gone higher than he did, which was to the various posts of secretary of state of California (he was a '49'er), U. S. commissioner of Indian affairs, brigadier general of volunteers by appointment of Abraham Lincoln, congressman and governor of Kansas Territory.

* * *

After the Civil War he practiced law in Washington and headed the Assn. of Mexican War Veterans until his death in 1892.

The "unfortunate incident" grew out of the headstrong customs of early California, which included dueling.

Denver had been named the governor of California in 1852 to supervise the supply trains which were freighting food and other necessities to the immigrants.

Edward Gilbert, editor of the Daily Alta California, and one of California's first two congressmen, lit into the way Denver was managing the supply trains. The matter led to a challenge, and then to a duel with rifles at 40 paces.

* * *

Denver had had his rifle sighted the night before, and on the first exchange of shots he fired into the air.

Then he wanted to shake hands, but Gilbert refused.

"I suppose I must defend myself then," remarked Denver, returned to his post, and shot Gilbert. He tried only to wing him, but the bullet went into Gilbert's heart and killed him.

Nobody in California thought much of such things in those days, and Denver was elected to Congress, where he distinguished himself by introducing a bill authorizing three separate transcontinental railroads.

But when he was mentioned in 1876 and 1884 as a possible Democratic candidate for president or vice president, the party discarded him each time because "a distorted version" of his duel with Gilbert was widely printed.

* * *

The way he gave his name to our city, all unknowingly, may have led to the curious bashfulness Denver (the city) has always exhibited toward him.

The State Historical Society once reportedly ruled that his contribution was "too slight" for a statue, which explains why there is no bronze horror of him around.

Denver had been named governor of Kansas Territory by President Buchanan to clean it up. He set aside Arapahoe County, Kansas, and sent a party of three Kansans to organize it.

With them was General William Larimer, no slouch as a promoter, who promptly organized the Denver City Town Company in November, 1858.

He thought maybe if he named it after Governor Denver, the latter might be flattered into granting favors.

The Pony Express hadn't brought the news that Denver had already resigned, and had returned East. But his name stuck to our settlement.

[A photograph of Gen. Denver accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, May 9, 1959, p. 8

GENERAL JAMES WILLIAM DENVER

Fatal Duel Hurt Denver Politically
City Named For General

Denver is named for James William Denver, lawyer, statesman and Civil War general.

He might have been president of the United States except for a duel in which he killed a famous California editor -- after deliberately missing with a first shot.

James Denver was born near Winchester, Va., Oct. 23, 1817, and was reared on a farm near Wilmington, Ohio.

He practiced law and edited a weekly newspaper, the Thomas Jefferson, at Xenia, Ohio, and then moved west to Plattsburg and later to Platte City, Mo., where he edited the Platte Argus. He was commissioned a captain in 1847 for the Mexican War and served on the campaign from Vera Cruz to Mexico City.

TO STATE SENATE

He returned to Platte City but when word came of gold discoveries in California, he crossed the plains to Sacramento with the '49ers. The young lawyer-soldier became a man of prominence in the affairs of the new state.

Denver was elected to the California State Senate in 1851 and the following year was chosen by the governor to head a $25,000 relief expedition to rescue immigrants caught in the heavy snows of the Sierras. The expedition led to a controversy with Edward Gilbert, editor of the Alta Californian.

After an exchange of uncomplimentary letters, Gilbert challenged Denver to a duel. The two men met Aug. 2, 1852, at dawn -- rifles at 40 paces -- in Oak Grove near Sacramento, Gilbert wearing a green coat to make himself a less conspicuous mark against the foliage. Denver, a crack rifle shot, deliberately missed the outraged editor on the first shot, but Gilbert came close.

Denver walked away, assuming Gilbert's honor had been satisfied in the bloodless exchange. But Gilbert was unsatisfied. He demanded a second round. The rifles barked again. Denver again was unscathed, but Gilbert was down, a slug through his chest. He died where he fell.

ELECTED TO CONGRESS

Despite the fatal duel, Denver was named California's secretary of state in the spring of 1853. In the autumn of 1854 he was elected to Congress from California and was active in Washington in pushing legislation for the first transcontinental railroad.

Before his term was completed President Buchanan appointed Denver in 1857 as commissioner of Indian affairs, and he spent much of the latter part of the year on the frontier in Nebraska and Kansas Territories investigating the conduct and needs of the redskin wards.

Late in 1857 he was appointed secretary of Kansas Territory and 11 days later became acting governor until May 12, 1858, when Buchanan elevated him to the governorship of the territory, then bleeding and strife-torn over the slavery question. Denver served as governor until Oct. 10, 1858, when he resigned to be reappointed commissioner of Indian affairs.

During his governorship the Pikes Peak excitement hit on the Western fringes of his already troubled territory. One party of gold-seekers set out from Leavenworth, K. T., on Oct. 3, 1858, and arrived at Cherry Creek on Nov. 16.

CLAIM JUMPERS

They jumped the claim of the town of St. Charles which had been laid out northeast of the creek and on the night of Nov. 17 organized the Denver City Town Co., naming their town for the territorial governor who had resigned seven days after they took to the trail.

An account of the naming of the town was given by Denver in a letter dated Nov. 14, 1890, to William Larimer, one of the leaders of the Leavenworth party and treasurer of the Denver City Town Co., for whom Larimer st. is named. Denver wrote:

"Your letter of Nov. 4th, with enclosure, has just overtaken me here, and I proceed at once to comply with your request to give you some account of the naming of the City of Denver, in Colorado.

GOLD DISCOVERED

"When I was Governor of Kansas, in July 1858, a report came to the settlement that gold had been discovered at Pike's Peak; at that time the Territory of Kansas extended westward to the summit of the Rocky Mountains, and the first territorial legislature had divided it all into counties, as far west as the line running north and south in the neighborhood of the mouth of the Smokey Hill fork of the Kansas River; and all beyond that line was designated as Arapahoe County.

"Arapahoe County was also organized by the first territorial legislature, and a full set of County officers appointed, but they had all left the country, and at the beginning of 1858, there was probably not a white man in it. The Report of the discovery of gold produced a great commotion, and quite a number of companies were at once organized to explore the country, and engage in mining.

QUITE A CROWD

"One day, while looking at some of the men breaking mules near my office, in Lecompton, it occurred to me that here was quite a crowd of people going out into a new country where there were no laws or officers to administer or enforce the laws, and that there was danger of difficulties occurring out there similar to those we had just experienced in Kansas, and which we were then greatly gratified at having overcome and quieted.

"I examined the laws and ascertained that Arapahoe County had been organized as above stated; that the officers had all abandoned it, and that the organic act of Congress organizing the Territory of Kansas had made it the duty of the Governor to fill all vacancies in office, where not otherwise provided by law, and here was a case directly to the point.

"So I, at once, appointed a full set of county officers for Arapahoe County from among these gentlemen whom I knew were going out there.

"For County Judge I appointed H. P. A. Smith, an old California friend, and native of Maine; for Sheriff, Edward Wynkoop; for County Treasurer, General Larimer; the names of the others, I believe, I have forgotten.

"They proceeded out towards the foot of the Rocky Mountains, and learned that the place where the gold was discovered was in Cherry Creek, a tributary of the Platte River, about 70 or 75 miles north of Pike's Peak, and to that point they directed their course.

"There being no county seat for Arapahoe County, it became the duty of these officers to locate it; so they laid out a town just below the mouth of Cherry Creek, and did me the honor to name it after me. This is about the whole story.

"You will see that the town of Denver was located for the county seat of Arapahoe County, in the Territory of Kansas, and has grown to a large, elegantly built, and flourishing city, the capitol of the fine State of Colorado, but still retaining the County of Arapahoe . . . "

Later in 1875 and again in 1883, Denver paid visits to his namesake city, and he complained in letters that the public attention given him was scant.

When the Civil War broke out, he was appointed by Lincoln as a brigadier general of volunteers and served in William T. Sherman's Third Brigade until April 1863. He then re-entered the practice of law in Washington and at Wilmington, his boyhood home.

Denver now was a man of national prominence as soldier, Western pioneer, ex-congressman and Washington lawyer. In 1876 and again in 1884 his name was advanced as Democratic candidate for the presidency.

On both occasions opponents dragged out the old story of his fatal duel with editor Gilbert in 1852, and Denver was passed over.

TWICE CANDIDATE

During the same period Denver twice was candidate for Congress from Ohio, in 1870 and in 1886, and lost both times.

After the 1888 defeat Gen. Denver retired from politics and devoted himself to his Washington law practice and the presidency of the Mexican War Veterans' Assn., which he had helped organize in 1873 and which he headed until his death.

Denver died in Washington Aug. 9, 1892. He is buried in Sugar Grove Cemetery in Wilmington.

The Denver Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade dispatched to the family a memorial resolution.

"He was both patriot and sage. He was a pioneer who saw and foretold the mighty possibilities of the West, and his name will be held in grateful remembrance so long as the proud city which bears his name shall endure."

[Two photographs of Gen. James W. Denver, 1851 and 1892, accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 19, 1959, p. 40A

MATTHEW ROMBACH DENVER

Denver Famous Name in Ohio, Too
More on Family Who Gave Mile High City Moniker

By ROBERT L. PERKIN
Rocky Mountain News Writer

Denver is a famous name in Ohio, too.

Not as the name of a city but as the family name of two men much honored in the small city of Wilmington in Clinton County.

Gen. James William Denver, for whom Colorado's capital is named, lies buried in Wilmington's Sugar Grove Cemetery.

His son, Matthew Rombach Denver, at 82, is one of Wilmington's leading industrialists and bankers and the last of the Denvers.

Recent information about General Denver and his son came to The Rocky Mountain News this week from Mrs. J. W. Madden of 1222 Delaware st., whose family lives in Dayton, Ohio.

RECEIVES BROCHURE

Mrs. Madden received from Dayton an advertising brochure for the General Denver Hotel in Wilmington and a clipping of a feature story about "Ohio's 'Mr. Denver'" from a Dayton newspaper.

The story about Matthew Denver reports that only five major cities in the country are named for native-born Americans: Denver, Washington, Cleveland, Dallas and Houston. Of the five men whose names became cities, only Denver has a son still living.

Denver's namesake was born Oct. 23, 1817, at Winchester, Va., but moved as a small boy to Wilmington with his parents. He became a civil engineer, a country school teacher, a lawyer and a soldier, serving as a captain in the Mexican War and a brigadier general in the Civil War.

CALIFORNIA BOUND

He was a '49er to California, where he became a state legislator, secretary of state and finally went to Washington in 1855 as Congressman. He might have gone even higher in politics except for a California duel he fought in 1852. He killed his opponent with a rifle shot.

Memory of the duel hung over him and he lost out twice when his name was presented to the Democratic national conventions of 1876 and 1884 as a presidential candidate.

Denver was appointed governor of Kansas Territory in 1858, an appointment which led to the attaching of his name to a gold rush boomtown on the far western frontier. Some said the name was chosen in an effort to obtain special privileges from the governor.

LAST SURVIVOR

General Denver in 1856 had married an Ohio girl, Louisa Rombach. They had two daughters and two sons, James and Matthew.

Matthew, last survivor of the Denvers, was born Dec. 21, 1870, in Wilmington, when his father was 53. Young Matt went to school in Wilmington and was graduated from Georgetown University in Washington, where his father died Aug. 9, 1892.

Although the family was wealthy, General Denver had rigid ideas about how a son should be reared. Matthew worked as a hired hand on his maternal grandfather's extensive farm during the summers, and one summer wrapped bits in the Irwin Auger Bit Co., of which he now is president.

The Irwin firm today is the world's largest manufacturer of wood boring tools and Wilmington's major industry. Matthew Denver also heads the Clinton County National Bank, in which he began work as a bookkeeper at the age of 22.

He became cashier of the bank in 1898 when his brother, James, died and has held the presidency since 1903.

ALSO IN POLITICS

Young Matthew shared his father's interest in politics. He served three terms in the Ohio House of Representatives, became a member of the Democratic State Central Committee at 26, and followed his father to Congress in 1906.

At 82, according to the Dayton newspaper article, Mr. Denver still puts in a full day's work, six days a week. He spends the morning at the auger bit plant, the afternoon at the bank, even though he has been confined to a wheel chair for the past five years.

He has been in Denver several times and was one of Ohio's delegates to the Democratic convention here in 1908.

"The fact that the city of Denver carries our family name has always meant a good deal to me," he said.

[A picture of Matthew Denver and one of The General Denver Hotel in Wilmington, Ohio, accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 19, 1953, p. 16

WILLIAM A. DEUEL
Pioneer Railroad Builder Is Dead
Active in Construction of Julesburg Branch of Union Pacific

William A. Deuel, pioneer railroad builder and widely known throughout the United States in railway circles, died yesterday at Mercy Hospital following an operation. He was 73 years old and was a resident of Denver for many years, being associated with the Union Pacific railway as a contracting agent and builder in the early days and later filling the same position with the Moffat Road. A son, Harry A. Deuel, was promoted to the position of assistant general manager of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company in the Pueblo Steel works yesterday.

The aged railroad man received his education in his life work in the service of the Kansas Branch of the Union Pacific.

He was instrumental in building of the Julesburg Branch of the Union Pacific and a town in Morgan County was given his name in recognition of his services in that work.

He was made general superintendent of the Moffat Road in April, 1906, and two years later was elected a director to succeed the late Walter S. Cheesman. Shortly after the death of David H. Moffat in 1911 Mr. Deuel retired from active service, devoting the remainder of his life to his family and, with Mrs. Deuel, residing at the home of Mrs. F. W. Billings, a daughter, the wife of the treasurer of the Broadway Theatre . . .

He is survived by his widow, three sons and one daughter. The sons are Harry A.; E.W., superintendent of the D. & R. G. railroad at Gunnison, Colorado, and T.A. Deuel, division engineer of the Texas Pacific Railway Company at Dallas, Texas.

The funeral will be conducted from the Rogers Mortuary at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and will be under the direction of the Blue Lodge of Masons. Interment will be in Fairmount cemetery.

Denver Post, May 10, 1916, p. 9

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DeVIVIER
To Observe 60th Anniversary

Open House will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 21 in observance of the 60th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John DeVivier at their home 1504 Willow. While the anniversary is later in the week, children of the long-time Canon City couple have planned the open house ahead of the Christmas holiday. Request has been made that callers forgo gifts.

The children are Mrs. John Prather, Canon City, Mrs. Ray Ertman, Fountain; Mrs. Dwight Mullins, Colorado Springs; Mrs. Clifford Beach, Lakewood; Jack DeVivier, Denver and Frank DeVivier, Canon City. (Daily Record photo by Jack Borjes)

[A photograph of Mr. and Mrs. John DeVivier accompanies the article.]

Canon City Daily Record, December 18, 1958

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DeVIVIER

John DeViviers Honored By Family To Celebrate 60th Anniversary

The 60th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John DeVivier, who have spent virtually their entire lifetimes in Fremont county, was the inspiration for a family celebration on Sunday, December 21.

The important day began with family attendance in a group at services at Mountain View United Presbyterian Church, of which the DeViviers have been long-time devoted members.

After the worship services, the group went to the McKinley school gymnasium for a holiday meal prepared and served by the Lincoln Park Home Demonstration club under the direction of Mrs. L. H. Hammel, who also arranged the festive decorations.

Silvered pine boughs, Christmas holly and red carnations were combined for an artistic effect and attention was focused on the anniversary by the large silver letters "60th" centering the big dinner table.

Places were laid for Mr. and Mrs. John DeVivier, Mr. and Mrs. Jack DeVivier of Englewood, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ertmann of Fountain, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Mullins and Jim of Colorado Springs, Mr. and Mrs. John Prather and Dennis, Vivian and Donna Marie.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Beach and Terry of Lakewood, Frank DeVivier, Jack Mullins of Colorado Springs and his fiance, Miss Beverly Bean, also of Colorado Springs.

In the afternoon, all went to the DeVivier house at 1504 Willow -- where they have lived for the past 58 years -- and an open house was held with approximately 100 guests coming from Canon City, Pueblo, Lamar, Colorado Springs and Denver to share in the occasion.

Decorations in the home were those used at the dinner. The sheet cake was decorated with "60th" in red on each individual serving.

Pouring were the Mmes. Wilson Plummer, Jack DeVivier, John Prather, Clifford Beach, Ray Ertmann and Dwight Mullins. Greeting the guests at the door were the Messrs. Frank DeVivier, Jim Mullins and Dennis Prather. Terry Beach was in charge of the guest book.

Assisting with other reception details were the Misses Vivian and Donna Marie Prather and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hammel.

The honorees were remembered with almost 100 cards of congratulation in addition to flowers, gifts and other remembrances. Highlight of the occasion was the presentation to them of a television set by their six children -- Jack DeVivier of Englewood, Mrs. Ray Ertmann of Fountain, Mrs. Dwight Mullins of Colorado Springs, Frank DeVivier of Canon City, Mrs. Clifford Beach of Lakewood, Mrs. John Prather of Canon City -- and their families.

Both Mr. and Mrs. DeVivier came from Belgium early in their childhood and settled with their families in the Chandler and Rockvale areas and are among the few remaining pioneers of this region. This year at Florence Pioneer Day they were honored as the oldest married couple in attendance.

They were married December 24, 1898, at the Canon City court house and have continued to reside in this community throughout the intervening years, when he was employed as coal miner and farmer until retirement several years ago.

In addition to the six children, their family numbers eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Canon City Record, December 29, 1958

JOHN P. DICKINSON***
Life in Eastern Colorado

I will try to give you a short sketch of my life as requested by the State Historical Society. I was born on September 15, 1855, in Richmond, Indiana, as recorded in our large family bible. My father came from Lincolnshire, England, in 1842 on a sailing vessel -- a "sailor." He landed at New Orleans, made his way up the Mississippi and Ohio rivers to Cincinnati, Ohio, his destination being Richmond, Indiana.

Here he met my mother, who was the daughter of John Pool, who had trekked from Pasapatank County, North Carolina, about 1820.

My father's family, as well as my mother's family, were members of the Society of Friends -- often called Quakers. Richmond, Indiana, had a very large Quaker membership and was often called a Quaker town. Earlham College, situated near Richmond, was a Quaker college.

In 1857 my father and mother with a family of five emigrated to Leavenworth, Kansas. They came all the way by steamboat -- down the Ohio and up the Mississippi and Missouri rivers to Leavenworth. My first recollections are about Leavenworth County and Leavenworth City. The city was the largest town west of St. Louis. Kansas City had not come prominently into the picture at that time.

The years 1855 to 1861 were stirring ones in that part of Kansas, as Missouri was a slave state and the slave owners were strong for extending slavery into Kansas. Our people were known as abolitionists, and were just as strong to keep slavery out of Kansas. Quakers do not believe in war, but most of them will fight if imposed on too much. My father went through the "Border War," as it was locally known. It is now known as the Civil War and started in Eastern Kansas.

We lived on a farm twelve miles west of Leavenworth, near what was called the Lecompton Road, a road that ran west and southwest from Leavenworth to the Kaw, or Kansas, River to the town of Lecomptom, which was for a time designated as the Territorial capital of Kansas. This was while Buchanan was President.

Leavenworth was the headquarters of several freighting firms, one of which, Russell, Majors & Waddell, was the greatest freighting firm of the period. It owned many hundreds of work cattle, horses and mules, and also hundreds of big, heavy freighting wagons. From our home I could see these covered wagons coming and going from morning until night, on their way to Denver, Santa Fe, Fort Union, and other points west and southwest. Later as I grew older I would hear the "bull whackers" and "mule skimmers" talking of their experiences in crossing the plains. Indian, buffalo, antelope and other experiences were much talked about.

My mind was continually on the West, so in July, 1874, my chance came and I signed up with a government surveying party (not working for the government, but for a private contractor who had a government contract) known as Moonlight & Deaford of Leavenworth. They had a contract to survey a tract of land in southwest Kansas thirty miles square. We shipped from Atchison, Kansas, by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad about one P.M. and arrived in Dodge City about noon the next day. Dodge City was not much of a town then, as at that time there was but one row of buildings facing the railroad tracks. There was one fair hotel named the Dodge House, and one large mercantile store named Charles Wrath & Co. Most of the rest of the buildings were dance halls and saloons. The cattle trade had not reached as far west as Dodge City at that time, being centered at Great Bend. Dodge was kept up mostly by people from Fort Dodge, located nearby, and by buffalo hunters. Just east of Dodge City there were miles of buffalo bones piled along the right-of-way awaiting shipment, and the vacant lots were piled high with buffalo hides which were tied down so that the wind would not blow them away.

After a few days in Dodge City getting ready, we started on our way to where our work was located. This was about eighty miles southwest of Dodge City, just south of the railroad station called Lakin. Our outfit consisted of about forty men, eighty wagons, and forty work cattle. We made our way to the forks of the Cimarron River, where our main camp was to be situated. Then we divided up into four squads, each with a compassman, two chainmen, one man to put in the section corners, one to drive the yoke of oxen, and a flagman. I was the flagman in my squad.

We had a two-wheel cart drawn by two oxen, a barrel on one side filled with water for the oxen, and a keg on the other side for the men. Each man had his bed of two blankets.

The first job of the survey would be to measure the township, six miles square, and then divide this into tracts one mile square. We walked about twenty-five to twenty-eight miles a day, and camped out on the open prairie. It was a very level country and we could see many miles in all directions. As the Indians were not friendly, we camped out in the open so that they could not sneak up on us. As we were working all the time in one township we would not get very far in either direction. When we reached the north line of the township we turned back to the south.

We finished our work in a little over two months. We saw several bands of Indians traveling through. They did not molest us, but one band did set fire to the prairie in an attempt to drive us out.

We finished our work and returned to Leavenworth in October, but as there was nothing there for me to do I decided to go to Denver. The direct route was the Kansas Pacific and the fare was $42.50; but by going by way of Omaha and Cheyenne -- 240 miles farther -- and riding an emigrant train on the Union Pacific the fare was $25.50. So I left Leavenworth on December 22 by the old Kansas City, St. Joe & Council Bluffs Railroad and rode the 178 miles to Council Bluffs; then by the Union Pacific to Cheyenne; then to Denver by the Denver Pacific. I arrived in Denver at 7 o'clock A.M. December 26, and did not spend one dollar in the four nights and three days that I traveled.

I had a sister living in Denver and she gave me a home. Her husband was a printer. I did odd jobs around the newspaper printing office during the winter. The papers were the Denver Tribune and The Colorado Farmer.

I was at the Kansas Pacific and Denver Pacific depot at the foot of 22nd Street in February, 1875, when Governor John L. Routt came to Colorado to take the office of Territorial Governor. He was appointed by President Grant and relieved Governor McCook. Routt was the last Territorial Governor, and the first State Governor.

On March 26, 1875, I commenced working for the William T. Holt Company, which ranched fifty miles east of Colorado Springs, running both cattle and sheep. Eastern Colorado at that time was a wide open country with no fences. Barbed wire had not come into use in this part of the country at that time. Cattle and sheep lived the year around on the native grass. One could ride from the Holt ranch to the Arkansas River without seeing anyone and then on into Texas. No one lived between the Union Pacific and the settlements in Texas except a few on the Arkansas River. The same might be said of the country north of the Union Pacific. From Hugo north one could ride to Montana without seeing any inhabitants or ranch houses except for a few on the Platte River.

My first job with the Holt Company was working about the sheep ranch and herding sheep. It did not take me long to get all the sheep herding I wanted. A very lonesome job. I prevailed on the manager to put me with the cattle outfit, and when he did I would not have changed places with General Grant, the President of the United States. During the winter months the cattle from this part would all drift with the storms to the Arkansas River, and in the spring would be scattered for about 100 miles along the river from about where Rocky Ford is situated east into Kansas and it was the work of the cattle outfits of the Divide Country, as this region was known, to get the cattle back on the home range.

Very few people now living know what an old time Roundup was like. A cow outfit would consist of a mess wagon to carry the beds and food, a cook, about eight riders (each rider had about four horses to ride -- a different horse for different kinds of work), a foreman, and a horse herder. The outfit would start to work about May 1st down in Kansas east of the present state line. When all of the outfits got together there would be sometimes thirty or more wagons and 200 or more riders with five to eight hundred horses. This group would include most of the cow outfits of the Divide Country, those along the Arkansas River and a few from the Platte River country. To tell all about what our work was would take too long and is another story. I followed this life for eleven years working for the same company all the time.

When we had good seasons, good grass and mild winters and good prices, cattlemen made money, but when dry seasons prevailed, followed by hard winters, it was a different story. The year 1880 was a very dry year, and the winter of 1880-81 very severe with heavy losses; 1881 to 1884 were good years with good grass and good cattle prices; but in 1884 a change came. The grass was good and prices were good when a disease known as the Texas Fever broke out among the native cattle and caused great losses. The disease was caused by shipping cattle from Texas instead of driving them. The cattle came from eastern Texas, a low brush country, and had their legs covered with ticks. The ticks dropped off, crawled up on the grass, and the native cattle eating the grass took the ticks into their stomachs, causing the fever. The native cattle died by the thousands. Strange to say, it did not affect the Texas cattle.

The year 1885 was a good year, but the winter of 1885-86 was very severe and was complicated by another development of civilization. Irrigation ditches were being built along the Arkansas and the bottoms were fenced up and when the cattle drifted with the storms to the river they could not get down into the bottoms among the cottonwood trees for protection. They just walked up and down the fences along the ditches until they died. A friend and I formed a partnership, got a wagon and team and went to the river and started skinning dead cattle. This was dirty work but paid well, and one can work very hard when he is about broke and the work pays well. In two and a half months we netted $1,500.00.

The great losses and the changed conditions caused the end of the open-range cattle business in Eastern Colorado. Cattle owners had to reduce their herds and keep them from drifting away in the winter time. I leased some land from the Union Pacific Railroad, fenced it and tried keeping cattle in pastures. This did not prove to be very profitable business as we had some dry years and low prices. When cattle were confined to one or two sections of land the grass soon was all gone. After a few years of trying this way of running cattle I gave it up and started working for the Union Pacific.

I was employed at the Hugo, Colorado, roundhouse with the title of Storekeeper, but I was just a sort of utility man, and did whatever the foreman told me to do. I did not belong to any organization and the foreman would tell me to do most any job without causing a strike. I worked at this job about two years, which brings me up to the year 1888.

Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland were candidates for President of the United States. Eastern Colorado was being settled up with homesteaders. New counties were being agitated with most of the towns of any magnitude wanting to be county seats. Locally, the most important issue in the election was the candidacy of Edward O. Wolcott for U. S. Senator, and nearly every man nominated by the Republicans was for or against Wolcott, with very few against. The election came along and Hugo lined up against the Wolcott candidacy for the reason that Wolcott was the attorney for the Burlington Railroad and the engine men were on a strike.

Harrison, all of the Republican state officers and a large majority of the legislature were elected. All had supported Wolcott. I, with half a dozen others, had held out for Wolcott in Hugo, but we were in the minority. After the legislature met our leaders who had fought Wolcott went up to Denver to get Lincoln County formed. The leaders of the legislature -- the Seventh General Assembly -- told them to go to the ones they had supported to get their county. They then sent for me. A certain man who had formerly been a cattleman near Hugo was a State Senator for Denver. His name was Frank T. Cochrane, and he had formerly lived in Hugo. He was my good friend.

As I was still working in the roundhouse I made my way to Denver on a freight train and had never had any experiences with a Legislature. I went to the Assembly building at 18th and Market Street, where the Seventh General Assembly met, and stood outside the railing which separated the Senators from the lobby. Mr. Cochrane, seeing me come up to the railing, said: "John, what can I do for you!" I said, "Frank, I want you to have Lincoln County created and have me appointed County Treasurer." I will not tell all that was said and all that happened except to say that he did have Lincoln County created and that I was appointed County Treasurer. The office did not pay very much but it helped me and I held it seven years, then lost out in a political upheaval.

There was a bankrupt lumber and hardware business in Hugo, which was of very little value and I bought this business out. During my early life in Leavenworth I had worked in a lumber yard piling lumber, and had some knowledge of the lumber business. This business also included coal. I started with very little, but increased the business all the time until I was doing all the business, or nearly all, for sixty miles up and down the Union Pacific from River Bend to Kit Carson and fifty miles north and south. I followed this business for eleven years. My trade was mostly with the ranchers. When the homesteaders came thick I sold out, as I knew what would happen to them when they tried to depend on farming.

After being defeated for County Treasurer in 1895 I had my mind set on getting a position in Hugo. I felt that in 1896 we would have a Republican President and so I worked accordingly for the position of Receiver of Public Money at the Hugo Land Office. McKinley was elected and I received the appointment. I was reappointed by Roosevelt and Taft, and held the office nearly sixteen years. During most of this time I was still handling cattle in a limited way and made good profits. During my term of Receiver of the Land Office we handled the largest homestead entry business of any office in the United States, and got through the job without any trouble. After holding this important position for nearly sixteen years my accounts were audited and approved by both the Commissioner of the Land Office and Treasury Department within a period of three months. If I had been required to pass a Civil Service examination I do not know whether or not I could have been appointed, as I doubt if I could have passed an examination, but I was able to run a United States Land Office.

In 1918 I was elected State Senator for the 27th Senatorial District, comprising the counties of Douglas, Elbert, Lincoln, Kit Carson and Cheyenne, and was re-elected in 1922. I took part in some very important legislation by helping to defeat bad legislation. I was next to the high man on the important State Affairs Committee when the Ku Klux Klan was in power. The Committee held nearly all of the Klan's bills and they were never let out of the committee. I was also a member of the House of Representatives of the 30th and 31st General Assembly, and those two Assemblies helped defeat some bad measures.

In November, 1903, the Lincoln County Bank was formed, with Gordon Jones as President, myself as Vice President, and E. I. Thompson as Cashier. On January 1, 1907, the Lincoln County Bank became the First National Bank of Hugo, with the same officers. In 1917 Mr. Jones died and Mr. Thompson became president. The bank is still open with Mr. Thompson as President and John P. Dickinson as Vice President. Deposits are now around $800,000 and the bank serves a large territory.

Regarding my family life and social affairs, it was on a farm in Leavenworth County, Kansas, that I first met the young woman, Anna P. Saunders, who later became my wife. We met and became friends. I came to Colorado in December, 1874, and she came in 1879. We met again and renewed our friendship, and decided to put it on a lifetime basis. We were married December 28, 1880, in Denver. We moved into our present home in Hugo in November, 1882. During all the sixty-one years of our married life we always worked together with the idea that what was good for one was good for both. We traveled together and endured hardships together and enjoyed a fair degree of prosperity together. While Hugo has always been our home we have spent our winters for over 20 years at the Albany Hotel in Denver, which we have called our Denver home for the last 37 years.

We have one daughter, Muriel, born December 22, 1882. She was educated in the Hugo, Denver, and Boulder schools. She married in 1904 to Dr. Wm. H. Rothwell, and died in the Holy Cross Hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah, on October 12, 1905, leaving a daughter Anna who died at the age of fourteen months; so we have no children or grand-children. Mrs. Dickinson died on March 16, 1942, in Mercy Hospital in Denver.

We loved to travel and see the world, but in our early life were not able to go very much. We went to Chicago to see the World's Fair in 1894, and this to us was the greatest and most interesting of all the World Fairs. We also went to Buffalo in 1901, and took in the Fair and Niagara Falls. We went to New Orleans in 1903 with a cattlemen's excursion. New Orleans was then a very interesting city. On the same trip we went to Pensacola, Florida, another interesting old city -- as old as St. Augustine. From that time on we made an occasional trip back and forth across the United States and through Canada, visiting most of the large cities.

In 1928 we took the supreme trip, a Clark's Tour trip around the world. From New York we sailed on January 16th for Cuba, then through the Panama Canal to Los Angeles. Then to Hawaii, Japan, Shanghai, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Java, Singapore, Rangoon, Burma, Calcutta, Ceylon, and Bombay. Then to Cairo. Saw the Pyramids and other places of interest before going on to Jerusalem, Greece, Naples, Genoa, and all the principal cities of Italy. Then to Marseilles, Paris, London and back to New York on June 5th. This was the most wonderful and successful trip one could take. Nearly five months and good weather all the time. Neither of us was seasick and we did not see a wave over 20 feet high all during the trip. We never received an unkind look from anyone. As a result of this trip I now have the geography of the Pacific Ocean in mind, and I know how far it is from one point to another, which is a great satisfaction in these war times.

As to my political life, I grew up in a Republican family -- our family being Quakers, who were nearly 100 per cent Republicans, due to the Slavery question. When I was a boy the Missourians just across the river from us were slave owners and 100 per cent Democrats, while the Kansans were anti-slave and 100 percent Republicans. So I started off a Republican and followed the Grant and Colfax band wagon in 1868, the Grant and Wilson ticket in 1872. When I came to Colorado in 1874 and started working on a cattle and sheep ranch the tariff was an issue. The sheep growers wanted a tariff on wool and the cattlemen wanted a tariff on cattle and hides, so it just suited my ideas.

When Lincoln County was formed in 1889 I was made a member of the Republican State Central Committee, and when the Woman Suffrage amendment came into effect my wife was also made a member, and held that position until she died. One or both of us were members of the committee for fifty-two years.

In summing up my life in Eastern Colorado I would not change any of it if I could. I have enjoyed good health, endured hardships, and enjoyed success. No one can enjoy success who has not endured hardships. In all these hardships, trials and tribulation I have always received the support and encouragement of a loving and brave wife. When conditions were bad and things looked dark she had words of cheer and encouragement, and what little success I have had in life is owing in great measure to her cheerful and helpful ways. She was a Catholic and had an abiding faith in her religion, but never criticized anyone of a different faith. While we grew up in different religious faiths we never had a difference on this account. Our beliefs were alike, the only difference being the form.

* Senator Dickinson lives in Hugo, Colorado. --Ed.

[A portrait of Senator Dickinson accompanies the article.]

Colorado Magazine, September 1942, pp. 189-197

THOMAS A. DICKSON

Date: September 25, 1937

No. 2 B887 D5 E16 F70
WET/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Thomas A. Dickson, President, Colorado Iron Works Co.,
1624 Seventeenth St., Denver, Colorado

Thomas A. Dickson, born in Leadville, Colorado, March 7, 1886; son of Thomas A., Sr. and Edith (Brown) Dickson.

Thomas A. Dickson, Sr., born at Pittsfield, Illinois, in 1854; son of Thomas Dickson, who was born at Pittsfield, Illinois, where he later was a merchant. He died at Pittsfield, in the early 1890's. His wife also was born at Pittsfield, where she died when 91 years of age. Thomas A. Dickson, Sr. moved to Colorado, in 1879, settling in Leadville, where he practiced law. He also served as district judge. He was a graduate of the University of Michigan. He died in 1903. His wife, Edith (Brown) Dickson, daughter of George M. and Georgia (Dunning) Brown, was born in Bangor, Maine, in 1857. She resides in Brookline, Massachusetts.

George M. Brown, father of Edith (Brown) Dickson, was a tea and spice merchant. He enlisted for service in the Civil War, and was commissioned a major. While in the service, he received an injury which rendered him a cripple for life. After the war, he operated an Army post store, many years, following which he retired. He died in Bangor, Maine. His wife, Georgia (Dunning) Brown, died in Bangor, Maine, when 90 years of age. Members of the Dunning family operated a shipyard in Maine.

Thomas A. Dickson, attended grade and high schools, in Leadville, Colorado. He then served an apprenticeship in the boiler shop of the Colorado Iron Works Co., approximately 2 years, during which time he was employed on construction work. He then was employed in a cyanide plant at Florence, Colorado, where he served as an assayer, 18 months, following which, for 18 months, he was assayer and chemist for an American firm, in Mexico. He subsequently was employed as follows: by the American Smelting & Refining Co., a short time; as assistant chemist, and later chief chemist for 1 year, for the Murray (Utah) Smelter Works; chemist and smelter superintendent for a firm in Ayutla, Jalisco, Mexico, 2 and a half years; was employed in California; was assistant superintendent of the Modern Smelting & Refining Co., at Utah Junction, near Denver, 6 months; was a commercial traveler for the Colorado Iron Works Co., of Denver, his territory covering the southwestern United States, and Mexico, 1 year; was research manager of the Goldfield (Nevada) Consolidated Smelting & Refining Co., 1 year; was employed in Mexico, 3 months, leaving because of bandits; returned to Goldfield, Nevada, where he remained a short time; and was in charge of a smelter, near Tucson, Arizona, 5 years. In the spring of 1917, he became a salesman for the Colorado Iron Works Co. In the fall of the same year, he was made general manager of the company, of which he was elected vice-president in 1920. Since 1936, he has been president of the Colorado Iron Works Co. This company, the home office of which is located in Denver, was established in 1860. They specialize in milling and smelting equipment, and build a complete line of ore-treating equipment. Products are shipped internationally. Mr. Dickson's uncle, J. W. Nesmith, who died in 1906, formerly served as president of the company. Mr. Dickson conceived the idea for the General Iron Works, of which he is vice-president and a director. This company handles all manufacturing for the Colorado Iron Works Co., the Stearns-Rogers Manufacturing Co., and the Vulcan Iron Works. They maintain the best shop in this part of the United States. Mr. Dickson, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Denver Athletic Club; Teknik Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. His hobby is golf.

In 1918, Mr. Dickson married Mary Hover, daughter of W. A. and Mariana (Vought) Hover, the former of whom is a druggist in Denver. Mrs. Dickson was born in Denver. Mr. and Mrs. Dickson are the parents of 1 child, George Richard Dickson, who was born in 1926.

MRS. CAROLINE DIER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. Caroline Dier
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Caroline Lawrence Dier, born at Washington, D. C., October 21, 1877

Name of father: Major C. H. Lawrence, a native of New Hampshire

Name of mother: Anne Elizabeth (Birch) Lawrence, a native of Georgetown, District of Columbia.

Attended school or college: Washington, D.C. Public Schools; High School, Lewiston Boarding School, Shenandoah Valley, Virginia; Peabody Normal School, Washington, D. C.; Sargent School, Cambridge, Massachusetts

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: September, 1905

Married (1): June 1894 to Walter Trowbridge Wright. Mr. Wright died April 1897.

Names of children and years of birth: Eleanor Lawrence Wright, born July, 1895.

Married (2): 1905 to John Q. Dier in Colorado.

Names of children and years of birth: John Lawrence Dier, Denver, born in June, 1906; William A. Dier, Denver, born in March, 1910

Avocation: Writer - Public Speaker - Reader. First published verse appeared in Boston Transcript 1897. Contributing to Christian Science Monitor since 1920.

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Major of all Conservation and Liberty Loan Campaigns during World War; Major of Denver Community Chest Drive (North Side) four years; President, Parent Teacher Association, Edison School, two years; President, Parent Teacher Association, North Side High School, two years; President, Colorado Branch League of American Pen Woman, two years; President, Alpha Chapter Delphian Society, two years.

Biography File

HON. WILLIAM ARTHUR DIER

Leading Law Exponent

It has been said by colleagues of the late Hon. William A. Dier, of Golden, Colorado, that of all men at the bar of that State, his opinions, both legally and morally, most frequently coincided with fact, as shown by subsequent events. His mind was gyroscopic -- fundamentally a balance of its own, uninfluenced by outside magnetism or thought. Such was the concentrated esteem in which Mr. Dier, one of the ablest exponents of the law that Colorado has known, was held by members of his profession and also by a great body of the laymen in the territory that was the scene of his triumphs and constructive citizenship. He was also a journalist of marked ability, possessing a prolific pen and the gift of facile phrase.

Born in Montreal, Province of Quebec, Canada, May 14, 1850, William Arthur Dier was the son of John and Elizabeth (Door) Dier. In early life, Judge Dier, as he later came to be known, came to the United States and completed his academic education at the University of Illinois. At the age of eighteen years he began teaching school at Forreston, Illinois, and for several years thereafter was happily engaged in giving instruction to others. He was twenty-three years of age when, in 1873, he went to Wyoming, and as a member of a surveying party he spent a year in that territory. Before entering that line and during his stay with the surveyors he passed his spare time from his work in the study of law. In 1875, having arrived at Golden, Colorado, he elected to make that thriving young town his home and the center of his professional efforts. In that year he was received into the office of White & Hughes, Golden's leading law firm, and was also appointed justice of the peace. In his new connection he completed his law studies, and on January 18, 1876, passed the territorial bar examination and was admitted to practice.

Endowed by nature and equipped by training beyond that with which many practitioners are furnished, Judge Dier was not long in making his name at the Colorado bar. As a practitioner he was thorough in the preparation of his cases; his integrity was of the highest order; and he had the judicial temperament and a ready gift of speech that made him a redoubtable foe and one of the ablest of advocates. In office practice he was regarded as one of the safest of counselors, and his clientele comprised some of the most desirable citizens and corporations of the jurisdiction.

Judge Dier's ability as an expounder of the law quite naturally brought him into official connection with the tribunals of Jefferson County, Colorado. A staunch Republican, he was often persuaded to stand for office and he held several offices connected with the county courts, until 1888, in which year he was elected district attorney for the First Judicial District of Colorado, and held that position for several years, demonstrating his fitness for being the chief law officer of that jurisdiction in a manner that won for him the laudations of bench and bar and the law-abiding public. He continued to grow in the popular favor, and from the standpoint of the law, he became one of Colorado's most prominent men. During his notable career he had represented on one side or the other the principals in nearly all the important litigation in his district. His influence was widespread in the State, and his leadership in the political life of the commonwealth was recognized by the most astute politicians of his time.

One of Judge Dier's versatile accomplishments was his power of descriptive narrative. This he employed to a great extent and in a most delightful manner over a considerable number of years as western correspondent for an "eastern" newspaper. He wrote on a variety of subjects, from politics to travel, and his brilliantly constructed articles were informative and reformatory by turn. Excerpts from some of his contributions, made in 1874, to the "Forreston (Illinois) Journal" will serve to convey to those who have this memorial before them something of Judge Dier's gift for communing with nature and for rare political discernment:

On "A Trip to Gray's Peak, Colorado," which he and a number of friends made for the purpose of observing the sunrise:

We are a little late to see the changing shades before sunrise, as the orb of day made his appearance just as we reached the summit, but we had a good idea of the scene from its brilliancy . . . The whole eastern horizon was of a beautiful golden shade, and the sun appeared like a huge ball of fire.

The surrounding peaks and ridges were bathed in sunlight, while the canyons and gulches were in gloomy shadow more forcibly contrasted by the light above them. Away to the east the Platte River could be seen, looking in the sunlight like a silver ribbon. The reflection of the sun on the roofs of Denver could also be distinctly seen. To the south was South Park, over every mile of whose surface we could see. It is in reality a park, being quite level, wooded in places, and well watered by fine streams.

From an article entitled "Westward Ho":

As we speed along we soon begin to notice the ravages of grasshoppers upon the crops of Nebraska, more especially the corn crop. West of a point forty miles from Omaha the latter crop is entirely destroyed. Nothing is left but the bare and dead stalks. There are thousands of acres of such, and the scene is desolate indeed. Other crops suffered, but not to so great an extent.

. . . . At many of the stations are seen degenerate specimens of the untutored savage, surnamed Pawnees. Their exhibitions of archery excite the most extravagant praise from the unsophisticated "pilgrims," and a sort of awe, unexplainable, creeps over them, as poor Lo, wrapped in the brightest of red blankets, approaches and with the air of a philosopher asks for -- "five cents."

But the poetry in their nature is most beautifully brought to the surface in the scramble after nickels, thrown from car windows by their friends and admirers. With an earnestness worthy of a better purpose, blankets are thrown aside as encumbrances, and -- what a shocking spectacle -- they dive here and there, each intent on securing his share of the coin. At such times each one's motto seems to be -- "heads, I win; tails, you lose."

Writing on the subject, "From Colorado," he made the following comment upon the discovery of the bodies of two brothers-in-law, reputable citizens, who had been murdered for robbery while on a hunting trip:

The murderers have so far eluded all efforts made for their capture, and having a long start on justice, may be successful in cheating the gallows of its prey. When they are caught, it is probable that the Territory will not be put to much expense for their trial, especially if they are brought into this part of the country. There are but few, if any, men in the county not willing to pull on the rope that would lift them to dance a lively jig on nothing.

. . . . And if there is an orthodox hell, the fiends will richly deserve all its endless torture -- and for such there ought to be one if there isn't -- for thus suddenly robbing society of two of its best members.

Regarding the Sioux uprising and their depredations, in 1874, he wrote in part:

. . . . It is evident that a general uprising of the Sioux and other tribes is in progress, and the government should not be tardy in preparing to meet the emergency. Now is the time to teach those savages an important lesson. Their ponies are poor and weak; food is scarce and difficult to obtain, the buffalo being out of reach, and decisive action now on the part of the government would be so effective, that they would probably remember it for years to come. Our Eastern would-be statesmen are clamoring for a reduction of the Regular Army, and making a great hubbub about National expenses. A few of them ought to be banished to our frontier to receive the tender mercies of the Sioux, which, I think, would awaken them to the realities of border life, and might cause them to change their minds in regard to the necessity of putting the army upon a peace footing! Let the advice of General Sheridan be taken and some of the pampered scions of the government, now reposing in luxurious idleness in Eastern palace forts, be sent with their commands to try the realities of army life on the border. The people have educated and now support them; let them be put at the service of the people and their worthless lives destroyed, if need be, to make room for others equally worthless.

Rehearsing something of the intimate and sideline matters concerning "Our Late Election" (1874), he wrote:

Perhaps a short review of our political history will not be uninteresting to your readers. Last winter Governor Elbert was removed from the executive office of the Territory, by the President, for alleged malfeasance in office, and McCook, our present chief ruler, nominated and, after a long and desperate struggle in Congress, confirmed . . . .

They (Governor Elbert and his associates) didn't profess to leave the party at all, but proposed in a sly, sneaking sort of way to "slap Grant in the face," by voting their opponents' ticket! So it turned out that Colorado, Republican by a large majority, elected the Democratic candidate for Congress, Thos. M. Patterson, by a majority of nearly three thousand votes . . . .

Victory has perched upon our banners for so long, that we have grown careless and apathetic, and perhaps it were better to suffer defeat, which may bring us to understanding our condition better.

However, it is a disagreeable pill to swallow, with the facts in the case as they are, but it is to be hoped that it will thoroughly purge the party system and render it active once again.

Judge Dier was identified with the Free and Accepted Masons, Blue Lodge, No. 1, Golden, Colorado; and the Royal Arch Chapter of that order. He had his religious fellowship with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Golden, and was known for the broadness of his views and his tolerant attitude towards those of other faiths.

In the city of Golden, in 1877, Judge Dier married Althea Quaintance, daughter of Jesse Quaintance, a very wealthy farmer and stockman, of Ohio. He invented and was the patentee of a quartz mill which was put in use in Colorado gold mines in 1874. His daughter Althea passed her early girlhood schooldays in Bucyrus, Ohio, and afterwards lived at Golden, Colorado. She was graduated from the Bucyrus High School and studied at Vassar College. To Judge and Mrs. Dier were born four children: 1. Marion, died in infancy. 2. John Q., a well-known attorney. 3. Mrs. Katherine (Dier) Lowther. 4. Mrs. Caroline (Dier) Brawner; the two last named are prominent women in Golden.

The death of Judge William Arthur Dier, on November 12, 1925, removed from all those associations which he had dignified and honored one of the most remarkable and at the same time one of the most useful men of his time and place. It is both fitting and proper that this memorial shall be closed with tributes from sources which best knew of his worth and the great service he had rendered.

From the report of the Colorado Bar Association's twenty-ninth annual meeting, held July 14-16, 1926:

In his profession he can rightly be classed as having been an attorney of the old school in which the highest ethics of the profession were taught and practiced. While the fee for his services was a necessity to compensate him for his labors, yet that fee was made subordinate to the interests of his client, whether that client was a private individual, a corporation, or the public which he was often called upon to serve. He met with success because in this he deserved to be successful. None knew better than he the intricacies of the law and how it sometimes happens that through these the most just cause fails to triumph in the courts, and it was his habit to go carefully into these matters with a client before entering upon litigation in his behalf. So conscientious was he in this respect that sometimes a client of litigious or impatient disposition would feel disappointed in the advice he gave, only to be later convinced, sometimes to his own loss, that the advice given was for his own advantage and against the financial interest of the giver, for by this method he often failed to get the larger fees that prolonged litigation would have brought him. In the end this worked to his advantage, for his clients grew to heed and trust his advice and to recommend his services to others. And thus, day in and day out, for fifty years that have now ended, he labored in his profession, finding pleasure in his work to the last. . . . One feature of his character deserves to be mentioned. I never heard him make use of an indelicate word or one that I should hesitate to write here. This is rare among men, whose conversation at times among their intimates is more free than necessary.

He was a good man; honest in his dealings; kind in his treatment of all; fulfilling his obligations, both civic and professional; keeping the faith; deserving and receiving the respect and affection of all who knew him; true to all the duties of a citizen and a counselor and friend.

The "Colorado Transcript," of Golden, printed a rare tribute from the pen of Susan Hubbard Martin, in which she said, in part:

All men do not for fifty years escape criticism in their separate and especial communities, but Judge W. A. Dier, from the time he first came to Golden up to the time he left it to occupy a "house not made with hands," was never criticized because there was nothing to criticize him for. He did not parade his Christianity, but quietly lived it. He was always kindly, always courteous, and always devoted to his friends. He did many kind deeds in such a gentle way that those about him did not even know they were performed. He was a better man than even his closest friends realized. Neither was he a common man, for his intellectual gifts lifted him above the ordinary level. He had a legal mind and he wanted justice done where it was due, and as much as lay in his power he saw that it was executed.

He was always one to observe professional courtesy and his clients were each one safe with him. The progress he made in his profession, too, made him known not only in Golden but in cities outside of it, and because of these things, the place this quiet, studious man occupied will be hard to fill. At present he has no successor, and probably never will have.

* * * * *

And how true this is or him:

Judge W. A. Dier was a safe man. His friends took no chances with him. If their fortunes went upon the rocks, it was no fault of his. He never urged "get rich quick" projects. He always advised safety and caution. He did not expect to be benefited himself -- that was the last thing he thought of. What he wanted was the best for his friends.

There is too much noise and disturbance in the world. These quiet, self-contained, level-headed people are like oases in the deserts, and grains of gold in common sand. They pour oil on troubled waters and are a blessing wherever they are. The disturbing and unlovely things of life somehow melt away before their dignity and poise, and in Judge Dier's serenity elements like these took themselves off.

* * * * *

There are not many men who had more courtesy or more refinement. He was one of nature's real aristocrats. Nothing could make him anything else -- yet he was easy to approach and ready to sympathize and help. Everyone of us has lost a friend. Everyone of us cannot help but be benefited by a life lived so beautifully and quietly and so well in accord with the teaching of One who said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Appreciation of Judge Dier by Jesse W. Rubey, president of the Rubey National Bank, of Golden, Colorado:

I never saw him in private audience or in contested council disputes wherein he ever wavered from those deep-seated convictions of right and justice, which seemed to be inculcated in his pure soul. He was always fair, he was always just, in all his dealings with mankind.

My life has been made better from the association with him. His departure leaves a place vacant and unfilled. The community has lost a lifelong friend and a staunch advocate towards all things that are elevating, uplifting and ennobling.

His reward is assured, for "He has kept the faith and henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness." I thank God that no ignoble act has ever marked the path of my departed friend. His memory shall live with me always, even though I must now add a last and loving farewell.

[A portrait and signature of Wm. A. Dier accompanies the article.]

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 207-212

THOMAS A. DINES

Date: August 28, 1937

No. 2 B858 D5 E16 F9
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Thomas A. Dines, President, The U. S. National Bank, 817 Seventeenth Street, Denver, Colorado

Thomas A. Dines*, son of Charles W. and Alta (Hopper) Dines, born in Macomb, Illinois, January 31, 1880

Charles W. Dines, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Dodd) Dines, was born at Shelbyville, Missouri. He was a merchant and a cattle dealer. He later was clerk of McDonough County, Illinois, during which time he resided in Macomb. He subsequently served as deputy Secretary of State, in Springfield, Illinois, where he died in 1913. His wife, Alta (Hopper) Dines, was born at Blandinsville, Illinois. She died in September 1910. Her parents, Anselm P. and Cynthia (Harmon) Hopper, were born in New York State, and Ohio, respectively. Anselm P. Hopper, who was a miller, moved to Illinois in early days. Charles W. and Alta (Hopper) Dines were the parents of 9 children. Their son, Orville Lee Dines**, formerly practiced law in Denver.

Thomas Dines, father of Charles W., and son of William, was born in Dorchester County, Maryland. He settled in Missouri in pioneer days, and later moved to Illinois. His wife, Elizabeth (Dodd) Dines, was born in Virginia.

Thomas A. Dines, was employed in various capacities when a boy. He was employed in Tacoma, Washington, 5 years, following which in 1909, he entered the employ of the Grand Valley National Bank, in Grand Junction, Colorado. He later was associated with the American National Bank, in Alamosa, Colorado, of which bank he became cashier. In 1913, he became associated with the Midwest Oil interests in Denver, becoming president of the Midwest Refining Co. The Standard Oil Co., of Indiana, later assumed control of this firm, and Mr. Dines was made vice-president of the organization in Denver. He later became president of the Midwest Oil Co. Since January 1936, he has served as president of The U. S. National Bank, in Denver. He is president of the Utah Oil Refining Co., and of the board of trustees of the University of Denver, vice-president of the Community Chest, a trustee of the Denver Art Museum, and the Colorado Museum of Natural History, and a director of the following: American Petroleum Institute; Denver Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City; Denver Joint Stock Land Bank; and Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation. Mr. Dines is independent in politics, and a member of the following: Denver Club; Cherry Hills Club; Denver Country Club; Mile High Club; Riverside Duck Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Methodist Church. His hobbies are hunting, golf and fishing.

In 1907, Mr. Dines married Frances Allen, who was born in Petersburg, Virginia, daughter of Edward M. and Katherine (Triplett) Allen. Mr. and Mrs. Dines are the parents of 2 children: (1)

Donna Virginia, who is the wife of Andrew W. Cruse, of Washington, D. C. (2) Thomas Marshall, who is employed by The U. S. National Bank, in Denver.

* For further data regarding Thomas A. Dines, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-1937), vol. 19, p. 734; and James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 5, p. 170.

** For further data regarding Orville Lee Dines, see Wilbur Fisk Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 346; and Citizens Historical Association files.

WALTER DIXON

Biographical data to accompany portrait of W. A. Dixon
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Walter Abbottson Dixon, born at New York City, New York, April 22, 1864

Name of father: Alexander Hamilton Dixon, a native of the United States of America

Name of mother: Emma Bryson, a native of the United States of America

Attended school: New York City, New York

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: None

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: February 13, 1894

Married: Yes, at Brooklyn, New York, October 2, 1889

Name of wife: Etta Fox, daughter of John Fox and Susan Sharkey

Names of children and years of birth: Marjorie Adele Dixon, born September 13, 1890

Avocation: 1st Vice President and General Manager, The Great Western Sugar Co.

Give dates: 1880-1882, New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, New York City; 1882-1894, Delaware Lackawanna & Western Railroad, New York City; 1894-1900, Colorado & Southern Railroad, Denver, Colorado; 1900-1903, Colorado & Northwestern Railroad, Boulder, Colorado; 1903-1915, Great Western Sugar Company, Denver, Colorado

Autograph signature (signed) W. A. Dixon

Biography File

DAVID CHILD DODGE

David Child Dodge was born on a farm in Shirley Township, Massachusetts, November 17th, 1837. He is the youngest of a family of six children.

Two brothers, Richard and William Dodge, came from England to Salem, Massachusetts about 1638. From them are descended almost all the Dodes in America; David C. Dodge was a descendent of Richard.

Col. Dodge's mother was Susanna Woolley, a descendent of the Bentleys. His maternal great-grandfather, Joshua Bentley, was one of the two men who rowed Paul Revere across the Charles River on the night of the famous ride in 1775. His great-uncle was Dr. William Bentley, a noted scholar and linguist, a Unitarian minister of Salem, Massachusetts.

At three years of age, David C. Dodge began attending a country school taught by his oldest sister. Later he helped with the farm work when not in school. He attended Lawrence Academy in Groton, Massachusetts. His favorite studies were mathematics and physics. At the age of fifteen years and three months he left school but had done his work so well that he had a good knowledge of Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry and Theoretical Surveying, all of which he used later in his railroad work.

Col. Dodge began railroad work in February, 1853 on what is now a branch line of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway system in Illinois. From 1856 to 1864 he worked in the construction of the Chicago, Iowa and Nebraska R. R. now a part of the main line of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway from Chicago to Omaha.

In January 1864 he was sent to Chattanooga, Tennessee and spent several months in the Commissary Department of the United States Army during the Civil War. From June until October 1864 he was in the Quartermaster's Department at Memphis, Tennessee. Here he barely escaped being taken prisoner when the house in which he was quartered was raided by the Rebel General Forrest's Cavalry.

Returning to Iowa in October 1864, he became General Agent for the Chicago & Northwestern Railway at Nevada, Iowa. Nevada was at that time the terminus of the road. Later, when the road was completed to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and the Union Pacific Railroad had reached North Platte, Nebraska, he was made General Agent for the Northwestern Railway for Colorado and New Mexico, with headquarters in Denver, Colorado.

Regarding the history of the next twenty years, we quote from an editorial in the Rocky Mountain News, June 25th, 1901:

On Sunday next, June 30, Colonel D. C. Dodge will retire from the active management of the Rio Grande Western, and perhaps from all future active railroad work. His long and honorable and successful connection with railroading in this state and Utah, calls for an appropriate acknowledgement on the occasion of his retirement.

Colonel Dodge began railroading as an engineer in connection with one of the early roads that now constitute a part of the Chicago & Northwestern system, in 1853, and the year 1864 found him the general agent of that line in Nevada, Iowa. In 1865 he was transferred to Denver, which city has ever since been his home. In 1870, when the Kansas Pacific was completed to Denver, he became the general western agent of that road. When the Denver & Rio Grande was completed and opened to traffic to Colorado Springs in 1871, Colonel Dodge became its first general freight and ticket agent. This position brought him in association with General William J. Palmer, then President of the Rio Grande. The two men became fast friends - personal and in business. To this personal partnership if such it may be termed, General Palmer brought financial sagacity and ability, and Colonel Dodge a practical knowledge of the details of railroading and rare executive capacity. These two men constructed the Rio Grande system, extended it to Ogden and made it an influential factor in the development of Colorado and the West, as well as in trans-continental business. Colonel Dodge became its general manager.

The events which led to the overthrow of the Palmer-Dodge management of the Denver and Rio Grande need not be reviewed, but they succeeded in retaining the Rio Grande Western, and in making it one of the best paying railroad properties in the West, Colonel Dodge being continuously its vice president and general manager. Its sale to the Denver & Rio Grande and the consolidation of the two roads relieved Colonel Dodge from his official duties. With one or both lines he has been continuously connected for thirty years.

The construction of the Rio Grande required financial nerve, daring enterprise, and unbounded confidence in the future of the Rocky Mountain country. Its operation required the very highest qualities of executive control, and a policy which looked to the creation of traffic by encouraging the development of natural resources, the establishment of industries, and the building up of the country tributary to the system. To these ends Colonel Dodge's management was especially directed, and the road became a factor in the progress and growth of the state. It was a wise, liberal, progressive policy, and one that his successors will do well to imitate. As he lays down the burden of thirty years, let due credit be given him for what he has accomplished for Colorado and Utah.

As a railway manager in all of its departments, he probably has equals, but certainly no superiors. He retires with a just and well earned fame, and whatever may be the future of this great property, under managements yet to come, no reference can ever be made to its history without a tribute to the creative genius, the practical knowledge, the cool, unbiased judgment and splendid executive ability of David C. Dodge.

* * * * *

From 1885 to 1888 Colonel Dodge spent most of his time in Mexico, holding the position of 2nd vice president and general manager of the Mexican National Railroad. General W. J. Palmer was at that time president of the Mexican National. The road extended from the City of Mexico north to San Miguel and south from Corpus Christi via Laredo to Saltillo. During these three years the country was surveyed and contracts were let for building the road from Saltillo to San Miguel. This and the branch to Lake Patzquarc were built while Col. Dodge was in Mexico. This road, like the Denver & Rio Grande and Rio Grande Western, was a narrow gauge road. When the link was completed, the Mexican National became one of the two trunk lines between the United States border and the City of Mexico.

In 1888 Col. Dodge resigned his position with the Mexican National, but continued the management of the Rio Grande Western Railway in Utah and commenced the work of improving and standard gauging the track between Grand Junction, Colorado and Ogden, Utah. The work was completed and standard gauge trains began running between these points in June 1890.

Colonel Dodge and General W. J. Palmer were associated in railroad building from 1872 to 1901, and were fast friends until the time of General Palmer's death in March 1909.

Denver Post. June 29, 1901.

"Col. Dodge is one of the really great figures in the history of Colorado. Today he retires from the Rio Grande Western Railway, with which his name and fame have been connected ever since the road was built. The retirement of such a man as Col. Dodge should not be permitted to pass without some fitting recognition of it and it is eminently proper that that recognition should come from the pen of Frank Hall, himself a commonwealth builder, and author of the History of Colorado. It follows:

When I first knew Colonel David C. Dodge he was a railway agent 600 miles from any kind of a railway station. Yet he was doing business right along with the residents of Denver through a line of prairie schooners propelled by Mexican bull-whackers with long whip-lashes that cracked like pistol shots and at every explosion, tore more or less hide and hair from the helpless cattle which, though slow of movement, were doing their level best to get there.

Away up in the hills, at Central City in the old Register office, there is an imposing marble stone originally intended for a grave yard, that one of Colonel Dodge's trains brought out from the river. That's one of our mutual reminiscences. It was a good stone and Dodge charged me a good round price for toting it. I have always felt that there should be a rebate coming, but it has never come.

Denver was a little bit of a frontier village then, with hopes for the future which, like its cattle trains, materialized very slowly. Every man knew every other man. I met every day this railway agent without a railway, and sometimes stopped to talk with him. His hair and long beard that extended down to his waist belt were as black as jet in those days. You will notice the difference in his photograph of today. No man in Denver gave forth a more fascinating smile or talked in softer tones than D. C. Dodge, yet I confidently challenge any newspaper man living to say that he ever got an interview with him that told him anything that he wanted to know.

Looking back over the 35 years of his life in Colorado, and then at the event of his retirement from the Rio Grande Western today, there is a feeling that the two great systems which he in a large degree created, and with which he was the director general from their inception, ought to rise up in protest, since the ruling spirit has gone out. Let us take a brief glance at his career.

Born in Massachusetts, he began railway engineering at the age of 15 on the old Fox River Valley road at Elgin, Ill., thence to the general freight and passenger agency of the Chicago, Iowa and Nebraska in 1856. Then for a year or so he was in General Grant's army as commissary at Chattanooga, and later in the quartermaster's office at Memphis. In October, 1864, he was made general agent of the Chicago & Northwestern at its western terminus, and in June 1865 came to Denver to capture what business he could for that line here and in New Mexico. When, in 1870, the Kansas Pacific was completed to this city, he stepped again into active railroading, his natural element. General Palmer appointed him general freight and passenger agent of the Denver & Rio Grande June 1, 1872, just after its completion to Colorado Springs and then being built towards Pueblo and the Southwest. In 1878-79, came the bitter conflict between the Rio Grande and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe under W. B. Strong, when there was a mighty clash of forces over the possession of the little narrow gateway of the Arkansas in the Grand Canon. Forts were built, filled with armed men, and there were shooting, confusion, strife and war-like movements on every side. Dodge was general manager, and the reader may rest assured that he managed things, that in that long and memorable struggle, one of the greatest that ever occurred on the western frontier, with consummate skill and force. The story is too long for an ordinary press article, but its echoes resounded throughout the world of finance for countless millions were involved. While Dodge never aimed a gun in that series of battles, his vast executive power was felt at every turn, and best of all, terminated victoriously for the Rio Grande.

At the time he assumed charge of the road, its entire equipment consisted of twelve locomotives - little bits of things - some of which may now be seen peacefully sleeping upon the rusted iron rails way out beyond the machine shops at Burnham station, seven little narrow gauge passenger cars, four combined baggage, mail, and express cars, four open observation cars, 208 freight cars, twenty-two dump cars, twenty-one hand and push cars and two old-fashioned snow plows. That was all it had, but it was sufficient for the period. It was a little toy railroad with a little toy outfit which a crowd of hoodlum boys might easily have run away with. The total freight tonnage of the road for 1872 (exclusive of construction material) was 36,272 tons; the number of passenger fares collected for the year was 25,158. But even that amount of business was considered phenomenal compared with the old A. Jacobs stage line and the superseded wagon trains. It afforded material for the newspapers to whoop up things over the prospective greatness of Colorado, just as they now do over less important events.

From first to last Colonel Dodge was the devoted friend and forceful coadjutor of General William J. Palmer, whose plans embraced a scheme calculated to forever dominate the entire commerce of the Rocky Mountains in the west and southwest, the Union Pacific having appropriated the northerly division.

His purpose was to build branches to every town and mining camp whose mines or other resources gave promise of richness and permanency, and to build so swiftly as to deter ambitious rivals from invading his field, and to make the Rio Grande the controlling factor not in local affairs alone, but also ultimately in transcontinental traffic. It was a sublime conception, showing marvelous courage, sweeping comprehensiveness, the dash and daring of this remarkable leader of men. Better than all, both he and Dodge have lived to witness its consummation in fullest measure.

In all his list of adherents, and there were some mighty men among them, there was no man for whom Palmer entertained more profound regard, in whom he reposed greater confidence, than D. C. Dodge. For he was a faithful, rigidly honest, far-sighted and thoroughly capable administrator of his affairs, constantly watching every movement of his adversaries, anticipating every need, supervising every detail of management and construction. In the old days which tried men's souls to the uttermost, the amount of labor he performed was prodigious. He rested neither by night nor by day so long as important work was required of him.

It will be a strange thing for those who have known D. C. Dodge through all the better, grander years of his well spent life to meet him without a railroad in his pocket, for he has so long been the embodiment of much that is greatest in our civilization and progress. Whether he retires for good to devote his remaining years to other pursuits, we do not know, for one might as well tackle the sphynx of Egypt for information of what it is going to do as this tall, stately, white-haired, white-bearded king of railroaders, known from Maine to San Francisco as one of the great masters of the trade. But whatever his line of future conduct, all who know him will cheerfully accord him their best wishes for success, and none more cordially than the writer of this sketch."

* * * * *

Between 1901 and 1907 Colonel Dodge was connected with no railroad work. He was, however, not idle. With faith in the west, he invested his money in western enterprises. He was personally interested in the construction of the Great Western Sugar Company plant in Loveland, Colorado, the Western Packing Company plant near Denver, the Denver Union Water Company plant and the Shirley Hotels.

In 1907 Mr. D. H. Moffat and his associates connected with the Denver & Northwestern Railway, persuaded Colonel Dodge to form a syndicate for the purpose of extending the "Moffat Road" from Yarmony to Steamboat Springs, in order to open up the rich farming and coal country in Routt County in northwestern Colorado. Colonel Dodge reluctantly accepted the presidency of the Denver-Steamboat Construction Company and returned to railroad building. With his usual energy he directed the work and completed the road as far as Steamboat Springs in January 1909.

We quote again from the Denver Republican of May 24, 1911:

"Colonel David Child Dodge of this city has shown the way. He has donned his armor again; he is in charge of the operations of the Moffat road, an institution which means so much to Denver and in a lesser degree, to other parts of Colorado. Colonel Dodge is an empire builder; he had done so well for Colorado that all of Colorado conceded him a period of rest; but he was needed for active service and he responded with a will to the call. His example should be encouragement to the younger generation of men. Colonel Dodge was entitled to a halcyon period. He had been in the harness for nearly half a century, almost all of that time in the railroad business, beginning in the early fifties as a chainman in an engineering corps and mounting to the top rung of the railroad ladder. From the material viewpoint, Colonel Dodge prospered and only the call of duty required him to volunteer at this time. But the death of David H. Moffat, before the latter's great work was completed, required that a leader among men, trusted by his community, should come forward and take up the work. No better choice could have been made than in placing Colonel Dodge in active control of Moffat Road operations. He took part in the construction of the principal roads in this state and lived to see them prosper under conditions which no longer prevail in the railroad and economic world.

For years past, Colonel Dodge has been the head and front of a movement to secure fair treatment for this state from the great railroad combinations in New York. He was the first to recognize that Colorado must deal differently with the railroad situation from what was the rule under the old regime. As a railroad expert he knows how much Colorado has suffered and is suffering at the hands of the foreign combinations.

All Denver, without respect to past differences or alliances, must get behind Colonel Dodge and the patriotic citizens who have subscribed so liberally to maintain the Moffat road a local institution. Denver must work out its own salvation. From the railroad standpoint, just now it is on a side track. The state at large is the worst served state in the union. Millions a year are lost through the refusal of the trunk line combinations to repair and extend their tracks, to say nothing of the combined refusal to put Denver on the main line.

The Moffat road is the key to the situation."

* * * * *

Colonel Dodge's strength of character, his broad views on all subjects, his unbiased judgment and uniform kindness, made him a power wherever he is known.

During the last seven years of his connection with the Rio Grande Western Railway as General Manager, he recognized no labor union, union and non-union men working with little friction, side by side. There was an understanding between the General Manager and the men that no labor leader was needed to settle difficulties which might arise. When the men felt that they had a grievance, a committee was sent directly to Colonel Dodge and the matter was frankly and fully discussed. If the claim of the men was just and right, it was allowed; if it was wrong or harmful, the committee was shown the wrong and went back to enlighten their comrades.

Thus the confidence of the men was obtained and retained, and they felt that good work was appreciated; that justice and fairness were shown them.

Colonel Dodge's home life was always ideal. Although he cared nothing for fashionable society, he loved his friends and they were always made welcome in his home. He was always a great reader and found much pleasure in informing himself on a wide range of subjects and in having the best books about him. He traveled extensively and intelligently and visited every state in the Union as well as most of the Mexican states. He also visited Europe, Hawaii, Panama and the West Indies.

Colonel Dodge was twice married. His first wife was Emily K. Oatman, whom he married in New York City in 1859 and who died in Denver in 1897. George B. Dodge, who died in 1916, was Colonel Dodge's only son. He had two grandsons and one granddaughter, Lieut. David C. Dodge, now in service in France, John Bentley Dodge, manager of the Shirley Hotel, Denver, and Mrs. Carrol T. Brown of Denver, all living. His second wife was Nannie O. Smith, for many years before her marriage a teacher in East Denver High School. She survives him.

In summing up Colonel Dodge's character, we must not forget his modesty, generosity, public spirit and helpfulness. Men in the highest positions, as well as those in the most lowly walks of life, came to him for valued advice or financial assistance and always found in him a helpful friend. He literally obeyed the command "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth" and only the "Recording Angel" can tell of his kind deeds. Quiet, undemonstrative, genuine, always listening to both sides of a question before passing judgment; a man whose word was always as good as his bond; a true friend; a model neighbor, one can truly say of him, such men as he make a nation great.

Colonel Dodge was taken ill July 14th and died July 19th, 1918.

Denver Post, Friday, July 19, 1918.

There's an ache in the heart of Denver today. There's a feeling of loneliness - for a protector, a friend, a sort of parent, who is missing. For the man to whom Denver owes a great measure of its greatness is gone. David Child Dodge, co-builder of a great part of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, indefatigable worker for the development of the West, and especially of Denver, is dead.

Sunday morning Colonel Dodge, apparently healthy as always, was over-seeing his ranch, Shirley Farm, near Denver, when he was suddenly attacked by acute indigestion. Drs. Walter M. Dake and E. C. Hill were called. They relieved the indigestion but were unable to alleviate the strain which the attack had placed upon the Colonel's heart. The result was that he died at 3 o'clock Friday morning in his Denver home, 1173 Pennsylvania Avenue, where he had been brought from his ranch.

And in the death of Colonel Dodge, a real builder of the West traveled into the beyond. For to him was due a great part of the development of this mountain country, the ranches, the mines, the industries. A builder always, he chose as his best field Colorado - and in Colorado he achieved his greatest results.

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 51

FRANK L. DODGE

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Frank L. Dodge
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Frank Leroy Dodge, born at Piermont, New Hampshire

Name of father: George Dodge, a native of New Hampshire

Name of mother: Zora Dodge, a native of New Hampshire

Attended school or college: Piermont, New Hampshire and Bradford, Vermont

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: None

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Colorado in October, 1885

Married: Yes, at Denver, Colorado, April 15, 1891

Name of wife: Dora E. Dodge, daughter of Captain Hamilton E. Kelly and Sarah Kelly

Names of children and years of birth: None

Avocation: Postmaster, Denver, Colorado

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Member of School Board in District No. 7, Denver, Colorado, 1901-1904; elected Representative in the State Assembly of Colorado, from the City and County of Denver, 1906, and served 1907 and 1908; elected Board of Aldermen from Ward 13, City and County of Denver, in April, 1908 - 2-year term, April, 1910 - 2-year term, also reelected in 1910 and 1912; elected State Senator, City and County of Denver, 1914 - 4-year term; again in 1918 - 4-year term; appointed Postmaster by President Harding, March 18, 1922, reappointed March 22, 1926 by President Coolidge, and again reappointed March 18, 1930 by President Hoover. Third term expires March 18, 1934.

Give brief incidents of historical interest: Discontinued school in 1881. Went to Kansas in 1881 and lived there three years, and worked on a farm. Returned to New Hampshire in the spring of 1884. Resided in Salem, Massachusetts for about a year and worked in a carpet store. Came to Colorado in 1885, first locating in Manitou, where I resided from October, 1885 to January, 1887. Came to Denver in January, 1887, and was connected with the C. A. Branham Carpet Co. for about a year. Then I became connected with the Joslin Drygoods Company and was with them until 1919. Engaged in business for myself under the name Dodge-Berringer Company from 1919 to 1922. Appointed Postmaster March 18, 1922, and have had no other occupation since that time.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Frank L. Dodge

Biography File

MRS. NANNIE O. S. DODGE

(By RICHARD E. LEACH)

Mrs. Nannie O. Smith Dodge, who died at her late residence, 1173 Pennsylvania Street, Denver, Colorado, on Tuesday evening, January 19, 1926, was one of the most notable women of her day.

The daughter of Brainerd and Nancy Hawley Smith, she was born January 28, 1854, at Sunderland, Massachusetts. As a child she went with her parents to Rosemond, Illinois, and removed to Normal, Illinois, at the close of the Civil War. She graduated from high school in 1872 at Normal. The late Aaron Gove, of Denver, was the principal of that high school, and Charles A. Bradley, now principal of the Manual Training High School of Denver, was a member of her class. She taught for one year in the primary department of Aaron Gove's school at Normal and then passed fifteen months in Europe, studying music and the German language in Stuttgart, Germany, and touring the continent. In 1875 she accepted a position as instructor in German and music in the Arapahoe School, Denver, in the high school course then offered. She remained at the school, which became East Denver High School, for twenty-two years, resigning in 1897. On January 11, 1899, she married Colonel David Child Dodge, railroad builder and capitalist. He died July 19, 1918. Since his death she passed much of her time quietly at home. So runs the chronology of her life.

Mrs. Dodge was a woman of remarkable personality possessed of striking qualities which made her exceptionally noteworthy among her contemporaries. She was a prodigious worker, one capable of continued effort. Enthusiasm was her marked characteristic, thus she thoroughly enjoyed the struggle of existence. A woman who thought, and who thought deeply and keenly, it was not only her great privilege to supervise the mental development of hundreds of children who met her daily during the course of her twenty-two years of service in the high school of this city, but it was also given her to counsel and advise, as only a woman of her acumen and understanding could do, for a period of eighteen years, one of the most outstanding state-builders this region has ever known, her husband, the late Colonel D. C. Dodge, to whom she was devoted. That she received much from life cannot be questioned. Travel, culture, wealth, happiness in domestic life, wide acquaintance and multiplicity of friends, capacity for research work, appreciation of the best in art, music and the fine sciences, -- all were hers. It would be hard to find a woman more blessed with the plentitude of accompaniments which make life worth while and expansive. True, she was childless but then she had her sisters and brothers and their children upon whom to lavish her affection. And she was extremely rich in the possession of the hearts of multitudes of her former pupils. But manifold as were her blessings it is doubtful if she received as much as she gave. For hers was a life of service. She gave constantly, unendingly. Gave of her time, her mind, her very self. Gave until her health broke and her strength failed. And in the disposition made of her estate the principle of unselfish service that dominated her while living still persists in the gifts made to posterity.

Over a score of years of her busy, active life centered in the school room. Every morning during that time she played the accompaniment on the piano to the hymn sung at the opening session. She had charge of a school room. She taught classes daily. She participated in every phase of school life, attended school society meetings, partook of hikes and excursions for botanical and geological specimens, entered fully and whole-heartedly into the life going on about her. The instruction she imparted was the best of its kind, for she was a natural teacher. She had a true love for her work and labored without thought of self. She was a mine of information and inspiration. Her reading was omnivorous, her memory retentive, and her instinct of helpfulness ever evident and dependable. It is much to be doubted if any other teacher ever exerted so powerful and constant an influence for good over the pupils in the school as she did during the twenty odd years of her service. And when the school routine was laid aside and the new phase of life entered in upon she never for an instant lost sight of her former pupils. Up to the very hour of her last illness she was in touch with almost all of the hundreds she had taught.

Mrs. Dodge was thrifty by nature and lived within her means always. By her own efforts she accumulated a competence. Through her marriage she became very wealthy. But she ever had a nice discrimination in money matters. She was a good manager. She never refused to extend a helping hand to those in need. But the help she gave was constructive. If she made a loan she watched the effect. If not repaid, she would know the reason why payment was not made. She did not believe in making things too easy for those in difficulties but she made it a practice to encourage a delinquent to acquire the ability to overcome difficulty by the exertion of his or her own strength. And if she helped the struggling, she did so from her own funds that she had earned and saved and put aside for that purpose. She never had to call upon her husband to assist her in carrying on her benevolences. Countless of her former pupils have reason to bless her for her careful, painful and upbuilding supervision of their tangled finances, and none ever appealed to her in vain. If her activity had been limited to this sole sphere of service, her life would have been amply justified.

After leaving the schools she married and for eighteen years was a wife in all that the word implies. Colonel Dodge was a captain of men. A railroad builder and executive primarily, he was a man of many minds who attained eminence as a matter of right in whatever he undertook to do. Although he amassed a comfortable fortune in middle age, he did not for that reason abate his efforts, but he made use of his money, and continued his business career. He was much like the late Collis P. Huntington. He worked up to the hour of his death in his eighty-first year. He was a force in the community. He was well read, keenly interested in the topics of the day, and kept abreast of the current literature and art. To him she was a real help-mate. She was equipped to enter into his innermost thoughts and help him solve his problems. She admired him and loved him and gave him unstintingly of the best that was in her. For this every act and deed she had instant and ready understanding and intense and enthusiastic sympathy. In her love for him she merged all her heart and her hope and her life. Not for a moment did her love falter or her devotion fail and, for her, married life with him marked the glory of her existence. And when the death of her husband came her own life ended. It is true that after he died her mind still functioned and she held herself to her duties, but her actual activities were fitful and uncertain. She published his biography in 1923 and she indulged herself in writing and making addresses occasionally based on reminiscences of the past, but there was no more creative work. The light of her life was gone.

Only portions of her unusual life have been touched upon in this sketch, space does not permit an extended biography. But reference must be made to certain of her accomplishments. She was a lover of art and had rare appreciation of the best and, with her husband, collected many notable pictures. She was a book lover and knew her wares. She dug deep into the Baconian-Shakesperian controversy and wrote much upon the subject. Now and again she delved into verse. She spoke before audiences easily and made frequent public addresses. But she was never obtrusive. She never sought to attract attention to herself. But without any effort or intention on her part, even in spite of her natural inclination to remain in the background, she was always one of the best known and most widely recognized women in the community in which she lived. For such was her personality that all sorts and conditions of men, women and children were drawn to her and, once knowing her, remained her friends.

It is announced that East Denver High School will devote a day to a memorial service for her at which service one of her former pupils will speak. It is likely that this will become an annual custom, but whether or not it does so, matters not. For Mrs. Dodge won for herself a place among the immortals. Those who knew her will never forget her gracious presence. She will live on in their hearts.

The Trail, pp. 12-14

RICHARD DENVER DOLMAN
Denver's First Child Named Denver, Kin Claims
By ALEX MURPHREE
Denver Post Staff Writer

A Kansas cousin of Richard Denver Dolman, who died in Denver in 1937 at the solid age of 88, writes The Denver Post to lay claim for his kinsman to recognition as "the first white child born in Denver."

Noting that honor was accorded in a recent Post to Mrs. Mary Butler Brown, Vernon M. Wilson of Topeka, Kan., after giving The Post "the facts" in a letter, generously concedes -- all anger spent -- that Mary Butler Brown "was probably the first female child born in Denver."

Sure enough the files of the Denver Post contain repeated stories about Richard Denver Dolman, dating from 'way back, conceding the title of "first white child born in Denver" to him.

Wilson, "being something of a historian and genealogist," draws his facts from the "Dolman Compendium" which was compiled by his cousin Philip Harold Dolman.

ONLY HOUSE IN DENVER

Richard Denver Dolman, his cousin says, was born in a frame house, the only one in Denver at the time, Oct. 24, 1859, at an address which would now be 1421 Lawrence St. Dolman's father built the house and called it the Kansas hotel. Dolman's mother ran a home bakery, selling "bread for $4 a loaf and cookies for 25c each," according to information vouchsafed the Post by "the first child" himself back in 1924.

"This baby," says Wilson, "was the first in Denver and in recognition of this fact the town committeemen wished him named 'Denver.' He was named by the secretary of the town company who also asked that he be named after him. The secretary was Richard Whitsett.

"The town company then presented the baby with a city lot, located where the Union station now stands.

"The population of Denver at that time was about 300 white persons."

After Dolman's first wife died, he married Margaret Martin of Colorado Springs in 1923, moved to Denver and lived at 4700 S. Ogden St. until his death.

Dolman has a son living in Temple, Okla., and a daughter living in Tacoma, Wash.

In one of several interviews Dolman gave The Denver Post, he recalled going to school in a log cabin on the west side of Cherry Creek.

He also explained that Denver might never have been established if it hadn't been for a toll bridge, built across the South Platte river, on the trail to Golden, where the only gold strike had so far been made.

The toll was "$50 or $100" and, by the time they got here, many of the would-be prospectors had to stop in Denver until they could get together enough money to get to t'other side.

Any of the Butlers or the Browns want to take issue with the Dolmans and the Wilsons?

[A photograph of Richard Dolman accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, September 6, 1955, p. 12

RICHARD DENVER DOLMAN
First Denver Child Reported Part Indian

Richard Denver Dolman or Mrs. Mary Butler Brown? Either might lay claim to being the first "white" child born in Denver.

But Lewis A. Lincoln of Estes Park believes the title of first child born in Denver should go to William Denver McGaa.

"In these days of racial tolerance," Lincoln wrote The Denver Post, "I am unwilling to have the honor of being Denver's 'first-born' taken from William Denver McGaa. What difference does it make whether he was white or three-quarters white? He got here first . . ."

McGaa, Lincoln notes, was part Arapahoe Indian.

"His father was 'Old Bill' McGaa, one of the incorporators of the village of Denver in 1858. Denver was actually started, first cabin, in 1856," Lincoln observes.

"Some of your records will show that Old Bill McGaa held a celebration in his lodge (not house) on the arrival of his baby and named him William Denver McGaa.

"I knew William Denver McGaa on the Pine Ridge Indian reservation where he was for many years a prosperous rancher on the White River. His wife, at the time of the pioneer's death, was the youngest daughter of Baptiste Pourier, a Frenchman. It was Pourier who hauled the first load of logs to build the first cabin, Denver Trading Post, in 1856."

Denver Post, September 9, 1955, p. 25

MRS. ELIVERA DOUD

Married at 16

Mrs. Doud's Father Swedish Immigrant

By LYNN LILLISTON

Denver Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Elivera Doud was born the daughter of a Swedish immigrant who became a successful businessman in America.

She died Wednesday night, the nation's most famous mother-in-law and one of Denver's best known residents.

Mrs. Doud had lived in Denver since 1906 when she and her husband, John Sheldon Doud, moved here from Boone, Iowa. The family had occupied the house at 750 Lafayette St. since that time.

Doud had retired from the meat packing business in Boone when he moved here and devoted himself to handling his own investments during his residence in Denver. He died June 23, 1951.

Mrs. Doud had taken her first plane trip and was in Paris visiting the Eisenhowers when Doud died.

President Eisenhower then was supreme commander of NATO forces in Europe. Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Doud flew back to Denver for the services.

RETURNED TO PARIS

After her husband's death, Mrs. Doud made another long visit to Paris. After Eisenhower's inauguration for his first term as president in 1953, Mrs. Doud became practically a permanent guest at the White House.

An Associated Press reporter once wrote that Mrs. Doud's relationship with Eisenhower "refuted every mother-in-law joke ever made." It was largely at the president's insistence that Mrs. Doud made lengthy stays at the White House.

In 1958 she was named national mother-in-law of the year.

"Min" Doud, as she often was called, took Washington life characteristically in stride. On the eve of Eisenhower's first inauguration she stayed up for Washington parties with the then Maj. John Eisenhower, her grandson, while the president-elect and Mamie rested.

During Eisenhower's campaign in 1952 Mrs. Doud traveled 35,000 miles across America on their special train with her daughter and son-in-law.

SUMMER WHITE HOUSE

The house at 750 Lafayette St. became the Summer White House in 1953. It was there on Sept. 25, 1955, that the president suffered a heart attack.

The Eisenhowers visited Mrs. Doud here many times, particularly after her health began to fail. Whether or not accompanied by Eisenhower, the first lady always came to Denver in May for Mrs. Doud's combination birthday-Mothers' Day observance.

Both President and Mrs. Eisenhower were here two months ago.

Born at Boone, May 13, 1878, Elivera Carlson Doud was the daughter of Swedish-born parents, the Carl Carlsons. Mrs. Doud's brother, Joel Carlson, a banker, still lives in the family home at Boone.

John Sheldon Doud was sent to Boone by his father, a Chicago meat packer to set up a meat packing business in the late 1800's. He made Elivera Carlson his bride in 1894 when she was only three months past her 16th birthday.

MAMIE BORN IN 1896

The young couple honeymooned in New Orleans, La. Mamie Geneva Doud was born at Boone in 1896 and when she was 9 months old the Douds moved, making brief stays in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Pueblo and Colorado Springs, before settling in Denver in 1906.

Commenting once on her youthful marriage, Mrs. Doud said:

"You might say I never had a girlhood. I don't know why I married so young but it worked well for 57 years."

Mamie was Mrs. Doud's first child and the other surviving daughter, Frances Moore (always called "Mike"), the youngest. The Douds lost their two middle girls to illness in their teens. It was for the health of one of them that the family started wintering at San Antonio, Tex. It was there that Mamie Doud met a young Army second lieutenant named Dwight David Eisenhower, then stationed at nearby Ft. Sam Houston.

Mrs. Doud got her nickname many years ago when Mamie and Mike started calling their parents "Andy" and "Min" after characters in the Andy Gump comic strip. Doud, a stern disciplinarian, didn't keep his nickname long but Mrs. Doud's stuck with her.

Mamie, as wife of the president, wanted her mother to remain at the White House, but Mrs. Doud returned to Colorado.

One reason for her decision to live in Denver, Mrs. Doud said, was that Mamie was "a worrier" and would worry all the time if they lived together.

And, said Mrs. Doud, "I get homesick when I'm away from the mountains."

The Doud home in Denver became a sight-seeing attraction. Secret Service agents were posted there 24 hours a day.

PLAYED HARMONICA

Mrs. Doud like to play cards and until recent years played the harmonica. Her favorite card game was canasta but she seldom played with Mamie, saying her daughter "plays with a vengeance and is an expert."

Mrs. Doud avoided the limelight and seldom granted an interview or expressed an opinion in public.

Always trim, she was able to wear her wedding dress when she and her husband celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 1944.

In addition to Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Doud is survived by her brother, Joel Carlson, Boone banker; five grandchildren including Lt. Col. John Eisenhower, the Eisenhower's only child, and nine great-grandchildren.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

Gov. Steve McNichols said Thursday that in the death of Mrs. Elivera Doud "Colorado has lost its No. 1 citizen."

McNichols said he was extending the sympathy of the entire state to Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower and the president.

"Just like her daughter, Mrs. Doud was a grand and gracious lady," the governor said.

[A photograph of Mrs. Doud accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, September 29, 1960, p. 1-3

See also Rocky Mountain News, September 30, 1960, p. 5

FREDERIC H. DOUGLAS

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Frederic H. Douglas
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Frederic Huntington Douglas, born at Evergreen, Colorado on October 29, 1897

Name of father: Charles Winfred Douglas, a native of Oswego, New York

Name of mother: Josepha Williams Douglas, a native of Fortress Monroe, Virginia, but a Detroit family for many generations.

Attended school or college: Tutors and public schools here and abroad to 1913; Hoosick School, Hoosick, New York, 1910-1916; one term at Harvard Military School, Los Angeles, 1913; University of Colorado, 1917-1921; part of a term at Princeton, 1916; Special Student, Michigan, 1921-22; Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, 1922-26.

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: A. B., University of Colorado, 1921

Married: Yes, at Philadelphia on May 21, 1926

Name of wife: Freda Bendix Gillespie, the daughter of A. L. Gillespie and Lily Bendix

Names of children and years of birth: Eve and Ann Pauline, twins born December 31, 1928 and adopted January 1, 1929

Avocation: Artist; Curator of Indian Art; Denver Art Museum since June 1929

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: President of School Board, District 30, Evergreen, Jefferson County, Colorado, 1929-1932

Give brief incidents of historical interest: Trips to Europe, 1901, 1904-06, 1908, 1923, 1925, 1926; Trips around World, 1923, 1927-28; Trips to Indian Country of G. W., 1911, 1913, 1916, 1918, 1921, 1923, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1930.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Frederic H. Douglas

Biography File

WARWICK M. DOWNING

Date: October 9, 1937

No. 2 B898 D5 E16 F98
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION
INDIANAPOLIS

Warwick M. Downing, Attorney,
Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

Warwick M. Downing, son of Dr. James M. and Ella Margaret (Summers) Downing; born in Macomb, Illinois, January 14, 1875.

Dr. James M. Downing, son of Miller and Sarah (Mount) Downing, was born in Pennsylvania. He later moved to Illinois, and in 1889 to Denver, Colorado. He was a dentist. He died in 1908. His wife, Ella Margaret (Summers) Downing, a native of Quincy, Illinois, died in 1896. Her parents, Nathaniel and Sarah (Parsons) Summers, were early settlers in Illinois. Nathaniel Summers was a farmer.

Miller Downing, father of Dr. James M., and son of Richard (III) and Elizabeth (Miller) Downing, was born in Downingtown, Pennsylvania. He was a farmer. His wife, Sarah (Mount) Downing, was born at Mountville, Virginia.

Richard Downing (III), father of Miller, and son of Richard (II), was born near Downingtown, Pennsylvania. He married Elizabeth Miller. Richard Downing (II), son of Richard (I), was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Richard Downing (I) was the son of Thomas, a native of England, who emigrated to America with William Penn.

Warwick M. Downing, graduated from the University of Michigan Law School, in 1895, since which time he has engaged in a general practice of law in Denver, Colorado. He is a member of the State Highway Advisory Board, and the Colorado State Gas Conservation Commission, and is a representative for Colorado on the Inter-State Oil Compact. He formerly was a member of the Denver Park Board 9 years, and of the Mountain Parks Advisory Commission, 15 years. He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Denver Athletic Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. Mr. Downing, who makes motoring his hobby, has visited every state in the United States.

On October 12, 1896, Warwick M. Downing married Emma Leet, who was born in New Orleans, Louisiana. Mr. and Mrs. Downing are divorced. Children: (1) Richard, who is practicing law with his father. He is married, and is the father of 4 children: Ann, Richard, Warwick, and Charles. (2) Virginia.

In 1915, Mr. Downing married, 2nd, Mary Virginia Hannahan, of Chicago, Illinois.

Sketches of Colorado, p. 334

CECIL MEAD DRAPER
4035 E. 18th Ave., Denver, Colorado
Attorney
SAR #56758; Colo. 826

Born: February 20, 1900, Pleasanton, Linn Co., Kansas

Son of: William Tell Draper, Jr., b. 8/6/1868
Mamie Lucy Mead, b. 8/24/1871; m. 3/27/1895

G-son of: Albert H. Mead, b. 10/19/1846, d. 3/3/1934
(1st) Lucy Jane Murray, b. 8/20/1846, d. 9/27/1884, m. 10/12/1870

GG-son of: John Henry Mead, b. 1/22/1822, d. 8/22/1900
Polly Anne Williams, b. 5/23/1826, d. 7/23/1915, m. 12/31/1845

GGG-son of: Ezra Mead, b. 5/26/1800, d. 11/26/1871
Mary Hogaboom, b. 1800, d. 4/4/1885

GGGG-son of: Enos Mead, b. 6/30/1764, d. 12/21/1829
Martha _____, b. 7/16/1769, d. 7/27/1838

GGGGG-son of* Nehemiah Mead, b. 11/7/17 ?
(2d) Sarah Knapp, b. d. m. 1/22/1756

GGGGGG-son of: Jonathan Mead, b. 1684
Esther Butler, b. d. m. 12/7/1713

Claim thru: Nehemiah Mead who was born in Horseneck (Greenwich), Connecticut on the 17th day of Nov. 17 ? and died in Crum Elbow, Dutchess Co., New York, while serving in the capacity of Private in the Dutchess County, New York Militia.

New York in the Revolution, by James A. Roberts, Dutchess County, N. Y. page 244. Enlisted Men, Dutchess Co., New York Militia, 4th Company: Nehemiah Mead. Private.

References: Family Records, Mead-Draper manuscripts from Family Bibles and narratives of the older generations, and published vital records.
The Mead Genealogy, By Lucius Egbert Weaver, pub. 1917.
The Mead Genealogy, Mead's Hist. of Greenwich, Conn.
Early Conn. Marriages by Bailey, Vol. 6, p. 48, Nehemiah Mead.
1790 Census Albany County, N. Y. Nehemiah Mead.
Residence during Rev. Dutchess Co., later West Mt. and Glenn Falls.

Wife: Virginia Lee St. John

Children: Cynthia St. John Draper, b. Dec. 10, 1932
Cecily Mead Draper, b. Apr. 29, 1935

Military service: Private S.A.T.C. Creighton University, Omaha, Neb. Oct. 1, 1918 to Dec. 11, 1918; army serial No. 5308113.

Dated: Denver, Colorado, March 27, 1939.

NATHANIEL WILSON DUKE

Merchant

Descended from a long line of antecedents nearly all of whom were professional men, Nathaniel Wilson Duke was the first of his line to achieve a distinct success as a merchant, yet the heritage of action, industry, mentality and devotion to a principle was so deeply interwoven that he never took a backward step in his steady march toward his goal. He became one of the leading business men of Colorado, one of the eminent citizens of Pueblo, with which community he had mingled for more than half a century.

There was in the blood of Mr. Duke the aristocracy of the pioneers of America, both of his parents having been descended from families of high respectability, members of which emigrated to this country in the early days of its history and here established themselves in various occupations. Yet he was eminently catholic in his attitude toward all men, broad minded to the last degree, public spirited, energetic, wholesome in his living and in his business. He was possessed of a keen mentality, a sound judgment of conditions and an analytical power that enabled him to visualize the future and mould it to the form best suited to his purpose. He was fair to competitors and operated his business as he would have liked others to do in their intercourse with him, thus setting for a rising generation a standard of ethics that spelled fair play for all. His operations extended into five States and in every one of them his word was his bond, for he was a student of men and never broke faith.

Kindly by nature, he was devoted to his home, and friendships once made were never severed save by death. He liked people about him and preferred them to gather in his home rather than to seek them in clubs and other organizations, although he was generous of his praise of those whose tastes differed from his own or who sought their recreations in fields afar from his choice. When he first saw Pueblo it was a frontier town of small population. When he left it, it was a city of importance, a bustling center of trade, with a prosperous present and a brilliant future. He had been a great factor in this development, working alongside the constructive pioneers who had settled there at the close of the Civil War and who had builded effectively and enduringly. Mr. Duke died in Pueblo, December 17, 1893, in his forty-eighth year.

Nathaniel Wilson Duke was born in Maysville, Kentucky, February 17, 1846, a son of Thomas Alexander Duke, a physician who practiced his profession in Pueblo in the latter years of his life and died in 1883. He was the son of a physician and his antecedents were all professional men. His wife was Sarah Wilson, her forebears having been pioneers of Maryland, who migrated to Kentucky, both of his grandfathers having settled in that State in company with Daniel Boone, later returning to Maryland and spending the remainder of their days on the ancestral estates, the Duke family also having originated there.

Nathaniel was educated in private schools and at an early age accepted a position in Paducah, Kentucky, with the Wells-Fargo Express Company, as agent, later being transferred to Independence, Missouri. He there became associated in business with a cousin and by him was introduced to a business man from Colorado, who induced the young man to return to that State with him. This was the real beginning of his business career, for the man was John A. Thatcher, a brother of Mahlon D. Thatcher, both of them prominently identified with the progress of Colorado, the second brother eventually becoming the wealthiest man in the State. He entered the employ of Mr. Thatcher in 1868 and became a valuable attaché. Interesting himself in general politics, he was elected on the Democratic ticket to the office of treasurer of Pueblo County, the first man to beat a Republican in that district, serving in the office during 1872 and 1874. With Charles Henkel he established, in equal partnership, the wholesale grocery business of the Henkel-Duke Mercantile Company, in Pueblo, building it up to one of the most important enterprises in that section of the State, with business in Colorado, Texas, New Mexico, Utah and Kansas. He was the first city treasurer and the first city clerk of Pueblo. He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church and a lover of whist, indulging himself with his close friends in his stately home, situated in spacious grounds in one of the most aristocratic sections of the city.

Nathaniel Wilson Duke married in Pueblo, Colorado, March 14, 1872, Ella Ayres, daughter of Daniel Douglas Ayres and a direct descendant of Captain John Ayres, who came from England in 1640 and settled in Massachusetts. Her father was one of the early pioneers of Colorado, coming by stage from Omaha and settling in Pueblo. They had four children: Clara Ella, Thomas Alexander, Kate May and Nathaniel Wilson; both sons are leading business men of Pueblo, engaged in mercantile lines.

Mr. Duke will figure in the history of Colorado as one of its most progressive pioneer citizens, a man of courage, high character, industry and achievement, who came to Pueblo in its infancy and helped to build it into a center of commercial activity. He will be happily remembered as a kindly man, of great moral courage, who asked no more than he was ready to give and who served faithfully and well in the capacities he undertook.

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 115-117

JESSE JACKSON DUNAGAN
Families of Colorado Pioneers

Pioneer's Ancestry

Name of Pioneer: Jesse Jackson Dunagan, born August 5, 1833 at Saline County, Missouri, died February 10, 1905 at Denver, Colorado, son of Benjamin Dunagan and Elizabeth _____.

The dates of birth, marriage, death and place of residence of his parents and grand-parents were:

Father's name: Benjamin Dunagan, born June 7, 1812, at Knoxville, Tennessee; died May 19, 1898, at North Platte, Nebraska. Resided at Greene Co., Tennessee, Iowa, Colorado (1860-1870?).

Mother's name: Elizabeth _____, born circa 1814 at Greene Co., Tennessee; died circa 1884 at Grafton, Nebraska.

Father's father: Nicholas Dunagan (Dunican), born circa 1792 at Tennessee; died circa 1850 at Greene Co., Tennessee. Resided in Tennessee, Iowa and Tennessee.

Father's mother: Rebecca _____, born circa 1795 at Carolinian

Pioneer's Wife's Ancestry

The Pioneer married Delilah E. Garvin, born August 14, 1851, at Carlyle, Illinois; died November 23, 1932, at Denver, Colorado. Her parents and grand-parents were:

Father's name: William Anderson Garvin, born March 8, 1818, at Lancaster, Kentucky; died July 9, 1899, at Denver, Colorado. Resided in Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Colorado (1860); married January 12, 1837 at Indiana.

Mother's name: Sarah Hutchinson, born January 9, 1819, at Lancaster, Kentucky; died November 9, 1899 at Erie, Kansas.

Father's father: John Garvin, born January 7, 1772, at James River, Virginia; resided in Virginia and Kentucky.

Father's mother: Margaret Sutton, born April 7, 1792, married March 5, 1811, at Lancaster, Kentucky.

Mother's father: Randolph Hutchinson; resided in Kentucky.

Mother's mother: Elizabeth Worner (Werner)

Earlier ancestry, or comments concerning any of the above as to military service, biography, etc. Nicholas Dunagan's father was Daniel. He spelled his name Dunikin, Dunihan, Dunnaghan, Dunican, Donachan, and Dunnacann. He enlisted in Revolution at Amherst Co., Virginia in January or February, 1776. For full details write Melvin H. Schoberlin.

Concerning Pioneer (name) Jesse Jackson Dunagan who lived at _____, Iowa until 1859 when he settled in Gilpin and Boulder Counties, Colorado.

Other places in which he lived: Longmont, Colorado, where he kept the St. Vrain Hotel. Evans, Colorado, where he was instrumental in bringing about the settlement of the St. Lawrence Colony.

Occupation or profession: Building contractor: built some of the first houses in Cheyenne; Miner; Pharmacist: at one time owned three drug stores in Denver -- 13th & Larimer, Windsor Hotel.

Civic offices or military service: Alderman First Ward, Denver, in the 1890's; Member of school board, Denver, in the 1890's.

Education, membership in church, lodges or organizations: Graduate, school of pharmacy; Member of the Methodist Church; Member of the Masons, Orangemen.

Reasons for moving west, method of transportation, and travel routes: Was looking for a place where he could stretch to his full height. Descended from pioneer stock. Came in Ox-drawn wagons.

Early day experiences: Had an encounter with the Indians, in which he saved himself by giving Masonic signs to his captors. Wrote poetry in the early 1860's.

Name and address of informant and compiler: Melvin H. Schoberlin, 959 9th St., Denver.

Descendants of Colorado Pioneers
Children of Jesse J. Dunagan and Delilah E. Garvin Dunagan

Their oldest child: Lulah Maye, married 1899 (?) at Denver to Vivian E. Hatch; residences at Ogden, Utah, and Denver. No children.

Their second child: Jessie Imogen, born October 6, 1886, at Denver, Colorado; married November 9, 1911 at Denver, Colorado to John Fred Schoberlin; residence at Denver. (By a previous marriage had Gladys Vernice Hale, born 1901 at Ogden, Utah; married 1924 to Charles J. Torongo, Ogden, Utah.) Melvin H. Schoberlin: born at Mogollon, New Mexico, December 17, 1912; married (1) Blanche Thornton, had Dianne Leotine Schoberlin, July 16, 1933; married (2) Margaret G. Watson, September 16, 1938 at Greeley.

Brothers and Sisters of Pioneer Husband, Jesse J. Dunagan

1. James Henry, born 1850; married to Mary Coats, residence Colby, Kansas
2. Wm. Franklin, born 1832
3. Eliza, married Brooks, residence Missouri
4. Martha Anna, born 1845, married Kuhns, residence at Grafton, Nebraska
5. Rebecca, born 1854, married to Besack, residence at North Platte, Nebraska

6. Mary Eliz. born 1856, married to Ditsworth (and others), residence at Trail, Oregon

Brothers and Sisters of Pioneer Wife, Delilah E. Garvin

1. Benjamin G.
2. John Randolph
3. James G.
4. William G.
5. Charles Philo
6. Margaret (Short)
7. Elizabeth (Mahem)
8. Anne (Weed)
9. Sarah (Beckman)
10. Mary

Names and addresses of members of the family who have family history, bible records, or local histories, etc.: Mrs. Lulah M. Hatch, 959 Ninth Street, Denver.

Name and address of informant: Melvin H. Schoberlin, 959 9th St., Denver, Colorado

D. SHAW DUNCAN

Biographical data to accompany portrait of D. Shaw Duncan
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: David Shaw Duncan, born at Kilsyth, Scotland on October 14, 1876

Name of father: David Duncan, a native of Scotland

Name of mother: Margaret Shaw, a native of Scotland

Attended school or college: Ph.B. (1900), A.B., (1901), A.M. (1904) Taylor University, Upland, Indiana; Ph.D. (1906) University of Denver; B.D., Iliff School of Theology (1913); United-Free Church College, Glasgow, Scotland (1902-03); Harvard University (Summer 1911).

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: LL.D., 1924, Taylor University

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: June, 1905

Married: Yes, at Marion, Indiana, 1903

Name of wife: Laura Lovenia Walton, the daughter of David Wakefield Walton and Margaret Eleanor Pittenger

Names of children and years of birth: David Robardson Lincoln Duncan, born February 12, 1909; married _____ Wagner, daughter of Mrs. Emily Wagner, Buffalo, New York.

Avocation: Professor of History and Political Science

Give brief incidents of historical interest: Came to the United States at the age of three; attended the grade Schools at Pittsburgh, and South Fork, Pennsylvania. Took a course in Business at Potts Shorthand College, Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Became Stenographer to Bingham Stephens (later Judge of the Common Pleas of Cambria County, Pennsylvania), also Robert S. Murphy (District Attorney of Cambria County, later Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania under Governor Stuart); Principal, Walnut Street Night School, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, 1901; Professor, Greek, Taylor University, Upland, Indiana, 1903-1905; Instructor History and Economics, 1906-1908; Assistant Professor of History, 1908; Professor of History and Head of the Department since 1910; Acting Dean, 1922-23; Assistant and Associate Dean, 1923-26; Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, University of Denver, since 1926.

A member of: American Historical Association; American Political Science Association; American Society of International Law; American Academy of Political and Social Science; Academy of Political Science; American Association of University Professors; American Association for the Advance of Science; Colorado-Wyoming Academy of Science; Fellow Royal Historical Society (London).

Also a member of the following fraternities: Alpha Kappa Psi Fraternity (National President 1915-19); Beta Theta Pi; Beta Gamma Sigma; Delta Mu Delta; Kappa Delta Pi; Pi Gamma Mu; Schoolmasters Club (Colorado).

Please give autograph signature:

(signed) D. Shaw Duncan

Biography File

DAVID SHAW DUNCAN

In Memoriam

Death has a way of etching in bold relief a man and his work, until qualities which had been only casually accepted are seen clearly. So is it with Chancellor David Shaw Duncan, whose almost sudden death by heart failure on March 7 brought sharp sorrow to his wide circle of friends, and then a glimpse of his greatness. Not all at once, but increasingly, like dawn ascending the darkened sky, they became aware of the superb qualities of him -- his delight in the paths of knowledge, his profound respect for the lessons of history, his varied appreciations of many things beautiful and good, his capacity for making friends with young and old, the deep assurance of his faith in life and man and God, achieved by profound and courageous ways; an administrator true to every trust reposed in him, with unrelenting zeal for his responsibilities; a teacher with rare gift to make ancient story relevant, vital, and something for a person to grow on; a man whose quality of character and measure of service made them who knew him well proud to call him friend.

The Rotary Club of Denver, in a set of beautiful resolutions, said this concerning him:

"Like a great oak that falls in the forest, David Shaw Duncan, Chancellor of the University of Denver, and one of the outstanding members of the Rotary Club of Denver, has been called to his reward. He possessed rare intellectual endowments and lived his life on the higher levels of human thought, serving in his University connection of more than forty years a noble purpose in shaping the lives of thousands of grateful students who were under his care. He was more than teacher, more than educator; he was a spokesman for the highest ideals of life, a student of world events, an interpreter of human history with the capacity of a statesman and the vision of a prophet. To him there came a clear understanding of world movements, the march of empires, the trend of human thoughts that wear the deeper grooves of history, the frantic struggles of men for power and the vain reliance of nations on the use of force; all these he examined with an open mind, with scorn or pity for men's mistakes, and deep sympathy for their deathless hopes and worthy aims not realized."

As a teacher, his colleagues yielded him the crown, and his pupils remembered him with increasing gratitude. By patient, diligent, thorough study through the years he achieved vast resources of precise, accurate information in the fields of history and political science. Add to that a consummate skill for organizing material, a remarkable ability for simple language and plain speech, and undiminishing enthusiasm for his work, and you begin to see what earned for David Shaw Duncan high recognitions. But there is another side to the shield. He loved young people even more than his subject. He possessed in remarkable degree a sensitiveness to their thought and feeling reactions, and responded to them with high respect and unfailing courtesy. He seemed to have a natural gift for stimulating discussion and for developing a love for learning. In teaching history he was always teaching more than history; he actually was sharing his accumulated wisdom about life.

For thirty-five years he served the University of Denver, most of the time as teacher, the rest of the time as administrator, up to the very last day of his life giving the best he had to give. Concerning his service of the office of Chancellor, Thomas A. Dines, President of the Board of Trustees, wrote the following statement:

"A few short years ago, the whole country was in a feverishly optimistic mood, and programs of expansion were being undertaken everywhere. The University of Denver was no exception. Then came the period of economic depression, and our University was not exempt from its blighting hand. The days were anxious ones for all of us. Budgets were unbalanced, and income was shrinking. Then at the urgent solicitation of all departments of the University, faculty, students, administration personnel and trustees, David Shaw Duncan accepted the difficult responsibility of leadership. During these six years he has done a wonderful work. He was the right man for the task to be done. He balanced the budgets and paid the debts, until today the school is free of debt and has a modest surplus. Moreover, he adjusted difficult problems of personnel with rare tact and wisdom, and achieved for the University a higher standing in the community it serves and in the nation. And so today, in the name of all those who called him to this high office, I want to express our keen appreciation, and our deep gratitude and affection for him. He did the task he was asked to do with rare courage, high integrity, deep devotion, and unflinching courtesy. I have said on other occasions and I now repeat, I know of no other individual who could have done so well what he has done. When the history of the University is written, there will be found in it the name of no one who has made a greater contribution to its stability than the man who has been our Chancellor for the last six years."

David Shaw Duncan was born in Kilsyth, Scotland, October 14, 1876, and was brought to the United States by his parents when he was three years old. The family settled first in Pennsylvania, where the son attended public school. From Taylor University, Upland, Indiana, in 1900 he received the degree of Ph.B., in 1901 the degree of A.B., and in 1904 the degree of A.M. His career as an educator started when he became principal of the Walnut Street Night School in Johnstown, Pa., in 1901. From 1903 to 1905 he taught Greek at Taylor. December 24, 1903, he married Miss Laura L. Walton, a graduate of the School of Music of Taylor University, and at the time of their marriage, a member of the teaching staff. Their son David is now teaching at the University of Denver. During the academic year 1902-1903, Dr. Duncan was a graduate student at Trinity College, Glasgow, Scotland. He was a graduate student in Harvard the summer of 1911.

He came to the University of Denver in June, 1905, to spend a year of study as a candidate for the degree of Ph.D., which he received in June, 1906. That fall he accepted his first assignment in the University of Denver as instructor in the department of history and economics. Successively he became assistant professor, professor of political science and head of the department of history, acting dean and later dean of the school of Liberal Arts, dean of the Graduate School, dean emeritus, head of the division of social science, and in 1935 the Chancellor. In 1913 he received from the Iliff School of Theology the degree of B.D., in 1924 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from Taylor University, and the same degree from Colorado College in 1940. When Gamma Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa was installed at the University of Denver last November, Chancellor Duncan was inducted as one of the first two honorary alumni members. He was a member of the American Historical Society, the American Political Science Society, the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the Society of Church History, and the American Society of University Professors. He was a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and of the Royal Historical Society of London. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi, Alpha Kappa Psi, Kappa Delta Pi, Phi Delta Kappa, Delta Mu Delta, Beta Gamma Sigma, Pi Gamma Mu, and Omicron Delta Kappa. During the World War he was chaplain of the Third Colorado Regiment, and was R. O. T. C. and S. A. T. C. officer on the campus. In Denver he was a member of the Rotary International, the Schoolmasters, the Antithesis, the University, and Mile High Clubs, the Masonic Order, and Warren Methodist Church.

Through the years Chancellor Duncan cultivated in himself a wide range of tastes and appreciations. He greatly enjoyed hearing good music, and liked to sing and to play the piano. He delighted in poetry and fine literature, found absorbing interest in history and biography, and thoroughly revelled in philosophy and theology. He acquired a taste for many kinds of beautiful things -- paintings and etchings, rugs, tapestries, fine china, glassware and pottery, sculpture and architecture. Not that he possessed any special endowment along these lines. No, his appreciations were all achieved. His genius consisted in his love for learning, and in his extraordinary capacity for patience, courage, and taking pains.

From the porch of his Estes Park cottage there is a peaceful, healing view. Just below there is a road, reddish-brown, stretching away to the right and left, with cars passing occasionally, bringing people to the hills for rest. Beyond the road there is a lush meadow with a clear stream running through and cattle grazing, and beyond that pine-forested foothills, rising easily to timberline, and then quite swiftly to rugged, snow-crowned Long's Peak. Chancellor and Mrs. Duncan came to this place eagerly, joyfully whenever they could. He loved to sit on the porch, leaning his body, mind, and soul on the strength-restoring landscape. "There is something consoling and assuring about it," he said one day, "beauty of color, form, vastness, power, and profound hush. These things in themselves are delightful, but somehow it gives me the feeling that there is a Beauty beyond beauty which the soul of man can always trust."

One Sunday afternoon he went with one of his friends for a stroll in the foothills. On the way back they came upon several firm, rugged pine knots, just crammed full of fireplace glory. "I'll come back tomorrow and get these," he said. "Why not take them along now?" asked the friend; "I'll help you carry them." "No, not today," replied the Chancellor, kindly. "They're not worth it." The friend understood; it was Sunday. Not that the Chancellor thought it wrong to carry wood on Sunday, nor that he identified Sunday observance with precepts, nor that he used a set of rules as a measuring rod of piety. But he had chosen for himself a few principles of self-discipline concerning his use of time, money, food, and energy, and these principles he maintained by strict obedience. He was more concerned about the self-discipline than the principles, perhaps, for he wanted to feel master of himself. "Whenever I want anything," he once said, "I count the cost, and if I decide that it is worth the price, I insist on paying for it." Yes, he had marvellous capacity for self-discipline. That is probably what made him so trustworthy, responsible, predictable. His word was as good as his bond. He was very practical, and yet an idealist; wisely conservative, but keeping his eyes on the stars.

One evening he was sitting at dinner with friends. "I had a happy experience this morning," he said, as the food was being served. "A little form of grace came to my mind whole, as vividly as though it were written out before my eyes." These were the lines:

"Accept our thanks and words of praise,
For strength in life, and length of days,
For food, and friends and hope of heaven,
Make us to be a holy leaven."

He was truly a devout man, with utter freedom from cant or the dross of pretense. He made a habit of sincere prayer, morning and evening. He deliberately cultivated a consciousness of the life and power of God. He trusted his faith. And he was always expecting to discover something new.

Chancellor Duncan's last public address was at the Founders' Day banquet, March 4. He spoke on "Horizons." With his amazing skill for marshalling facts, he traced the history of the University, and then went on to speak prophetically of the future. "A well founded university lives for ages," he said. "Its influence runs through all time. Why, there is nothing in all a man's life-time that he can do that will be so permanent in its beneficial results as founding an institution of learning that will live on, and work, year after year, age after age, after he is laid in the grave." Then with characteristic vision he quoted the following poem:

"Horizons stretch ahead!
Curtain of fog
And man engendered smoke
May close them down awhile
And shut them from the sight;
But shimmering green
Behind the veil they lie.
Be not dismayed;
Horizons stretch ahead."

Sensing an accent of farewell in his speech, the large company of alumni rose and applauded in sincere expression of their profound appreciation of him. Then the Chancellor signalled for his wife to come and stand near him and share with him, and together they received a long and genuine acclaim. It was an impressive token of high regard and affection for their 35 years of service, and it was perfectly deserved.

Three days later he was suddenly away. On the afternoon of Monday, March 10, in the chapel where he had so often spoken and listened, the service of remembrance was held. The platform was utterly banked with flowers of tender affection and sympathy. Students, colleagues and friends crowded the room. Representative members of the faculty and student body served as guard of honor during the period from high noon until two o'clock when the casket rested in the chapel. Two young woman students played several of his favorite hymns on the organ -- "Lead, Kindly Light," "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," and "Crossing the Bar." Bishop Wilbur E. Hammaker read several faith-assuring passages of scripture -- "The Lord is my shepherd," "Lord, Thou has been our dwelling place," "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" and "In my Father's house are many mansions." Then a fine, sincere tribute read by Thomas A. Dines, President of the Board of Trustees, and a prayer of thanksgiving expressed by Frederick J. Cox, pastor of Warren Methodist Church. Members of the faculties of the University of Denver and of the Iliff School of Theology, and members of the Board of Trustees of the University were honorary pall bearers. The active pall bearers were: John Evans, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees; Thomas A. Dines, President of the Board of Trustees; Dr. Heber R. Harper, former chancellor; Dr. Wilbur D. Engle, vice chancellor emeritus; I. F. Downer, treasurer of the University and trustee; Peter H. Holme, William S. Iliff, and Wilbur F. Denious, trustees.

At Fairmount Mausoleum these verses, often used by Chancellor Duncan in last rites which he conducted for others, were read:

"Now the laborer's task is o'er;
Now the battle day is past;
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyager at last.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

* *

"Death does not end our friendships true;
We are all debtors to the dead;
There wait on everything we do
The splendid souls who've gone ahead.
To them I hold that we are bound
By double pledges to be fine;
Who once has had a friend has found
The link 'twixt mortal and divine."
Frederick J. Cox.

The University of Denver Pioneer, Memorial Pamphlet [Includes a photograph of David Shaw Duncan.]

DONALD C. DUNKLEE
Who's New in the Legislature
Dunklee Family Long in Politics
By ALLEGRA SAUNDERS

Donald C. Dunklee of Denver, member of a pioneer Colorado family, has been elected on the Democratic ticket to the house of representatives. The Dunklee family has long been a part of the political and civic life of Denver. Donald Dunklee's grandfather, George F. Dunklee, was a Denver district court judge more than thirty years. He retired from the bench two years ago at the age of 88 to practice law.

Donald's father, E. V. Dunklee, served six years in the legislature. He was elected in 1914 to the house of representatives, later to the senate, 1917 to 1921. He ran for congress from Denver in 1932 on a dry platform when the country was going all out to repeal prohibition laws.

FAMILY SERVES

The Dunklee family works in unison with whatever is timely, whether it be war or politics. During World war II every member of the family was either in the war or playing a vital part in the war effort. Donald's brother, David, was an armaments officer for a B-29 group in the air force and was in the army four years. His youngest brother Edward, now 19, is an ensign in the merchant marine. He has been in Europe, Japan and the Philippines and is now on his way to South America.

A sister, Dorcas, was with the Red Cross in India eighteen months as a club director. Donald's father served in the judge advocate general's division as a major. His mother spent several years during the war with the Red Cross as chairman of the prisoner of war service.

AVIATION CADET

Donald Dunklee went into the army as an aviation cadet June 22, 1941, and was sent to Lowry field to learn aerial photography. He went overseas with the first American fighter group to England. He served three and a half years in the European theater. He was an aerial photographer in the Mediterranean and an Allied air force representative of supply on the surrender of the Germans in the Mediterranean theater.

Later he was sent to South America with the photographic reconnaissance wing. This was the largest photographic installation in the world. Dunklee represented Lowry and Buckley fields as assistant director of the photographic school. He was discharged from the army with the rank of major.

He was on terminal leave in California at the time he was placed on the Democratic primary ticket.

IN LAW SCHOOL

Like most of the veterans of the war, Dunklee has been looking around to see what fields are open to him. However, the matter of education comes first. He was graduated from Yale in 1940 and was attending the D. U. law school when he entered the service. Now he is again attending D. U. law school and has one more year to go. He is taking flying under the G. I. bill.

Dunklee feels that more veterans should take an interest in politics.

"We who have traveled around over foreign countries can see just how important matters of government can be and our interest and work should be to see that such conditions as exist abroad do not happen here," he said.

He is working on a bill for compulsory insurance on all cars. He is interested in the health program and approves the points of Dr. Florence Sabin's recommendation. He is interested, too, in furthering Colorado's winter sports program.

[A photograph of Donald C. Dunklee accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, December 26, 1946, p. 4

GEORGE F. DUNKLEE

Date: September 25, 1937

No. 2 B884 D5 E16 F59
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION
INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. George F. Dunklee, Judge of the District Court,
Denver, Colorado

George F. Dunklee*, born at Landaff, New Hampshire, May 7, 1858; son of George J. and Alzina M. (Keyes) Dunklee.

George J. Dunklee, born at Lisbon, New Hampshire, June 23, 1823; son of Moses and Jemima (Jesseman) Dunklee. Moses Dunklee's father, Robert Dunklee, was of Scotch descent, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Sometime after 1858, George J. Dunklee moved with his family to Caledonia County, Vermont. He died in Denver, Colorado, in March 1917. His wife, Alzina M. (Keyes) Dunklee, who was born at Guildhall, Vermont, died in 1905. They were the parents of 5 children. Dr. George Kinney Dunklee*, a grandson of George J. and Alzina M. (Keyes) Dunklee, began the practice of medicine and surgery in Denver, Colorado, in 1917.

George F. Dunklee, was reared in Vermont. He graduated from the Lyndon Literary Institute, of Lyndon Center, Vermont, in June 1881, following which he taught school in Vermont, until 1882. He then moved to Trinidad, Colorado. He later taught school in New Mexico, until 1885, after which he settled in Denver, Colorado, where he read law in the office of John Q. Charles, and later in the offices of Patterson & Thomas. He was admitted to the bar, March 12, 1887. He served as attorney of Arapahoe County, Colorado, 1901-02. He later served as judge of the Second Judicial District, until December 16, 1922, at which time he took office as judge of the District Court, in Denver, in which capacity he since has served. In 1925, Judge Dunklee visited Mexico, Cuba, and Yucatan. In 1926, he visited Scotland, Ireland, France, Spain and Italy. He has delivered many lectures based on his travels. He was president of the Denver Bar Association, in 1903. Judge Dunklee is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Commandery (K. T.), Consistory (32nd degree), and Shrine; I. O. O. F.; Elks Lodge; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association.

On June 20, 1883, Mr. Dunklee married Mary E. Vaughan, who was born in St. Johnsbury, Vermont. Her father, Major Roswell C. Vaughan, was a soldier in the Union Army, during the Civil War. The Hon. George F. and Mrs. Dunklee are the parents of 1 child, Edward V. Dunklee, who was a student of the University of Colorado, in Boulder. He is an attorney in Denver. He is married, and is the father of 4 children, David V., Donald P., Dorcas M., and Edward F.

* For further data regarding the Hon. George F. Dunklee, and Dr. George Kinney Dunklee, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 5, pp. 432 and 252, respectively. Regarding the Hon. George F. Dunklee, see Jerome C. Smiley, "History of Colorado" (Lewis Publishing Co., Chicago, 1913), vol. 2, p. 310.

EMMA GOURLEY DuROY
Biographical Information

Date: October 13, 1943

Name: Emma Gourley DuRoy

Address: 546 So. Emerson St., Denver, Colorado

Born: November 11, 1887 at Grand Island, Nebraska

Married to: Charles F. DuRoy (Deceased October 23, 1941)

Date: October 7, 1913    At: Denver Colorado

Children: Robert Mignon DuRoy, born April 12, 1918 at Denver, Colorado

Name of father: Thomas Wm. Gourley, born January 1, 1853 at Sarahsville, Ohio

Name of mother (maiden): Eva Hogler Lozier Gourley, born February 20, 1864 at Hoboken, New Jersey

Brothers and sisters: Mabel Sophia Gourley-Brownell, born December 3, 1883 at Grand Island, Nebraska; John C. Gourley, born May 6, 1889 at Grand Island, Nebraska; Myrtle C. Gourley-Twidale, born July 15, 1892, deceased July 15, 1925

Registrant's occupation: Bookkeeper and Steno

Education: 3 years college

Societies and clubs: Business Women's

CARRIE CRAIG DYER
Out of the Past Come Memories of Mrs. Charles Dyer, Sr.

After the Civil War my father, W. H. Craig and his brother Howard, came West from Iowa for adventure.

W. H. Craig settled in Denver, Colorado, where he found employment at Star Mill, in 1871, run by J. K. Muller who later organized the "Colorado Milling and Elevator Company".

In 1883, my father married Nellie Jenkins from Minersville, Pennsylvania. To this union five children were born in Denver, Colorado.

When gold was discovered in Cripple Creek, Dad joined the fortune seekers but like hundreds of others found nothing.

After the Cripple Creek fire, he left for Southwestern Colorado when the "Ute Indian Reservation" was opened for home-steading. He homesteaded, 160 acres, six miles South of Durango, Colorado in 1898 and brought his family down.

The trip was made in a covered wagon and proved a wonderful experience for the children, who now tell their children about the trip and the hardships of home-steading.

I, Carrie Craig Dyer, am the only living member of this family and live on the original home-stead, which we bought from my parents in 1920.

A niece, Carolyn Shryock and myself are members of The Territorial Daughters from Durango, Colorado.

The Territorial Daughters of Colorado, 1964

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM G. EDMONDSON

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Edmondson of 405 E. 6th Ave. will celebrate their 57th wedding anniversary Sunday with a family dinner at the home of their daughter in Grand Lake.

All five of their children, 11 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren will be present.

The couple was married Aug. 29, 1897, in Milton, Iowa. Mr. Edmondson entered his father's bank in Milton as cashier and worked his way to vice president. The couple moved to Denver in 1944 where Mr. Edmondson entered the vault department of the American National bank. He is still employed there.

Mr. Edmondson was born Nov. 30, 1875, in Oak Point, Iowa. Mrs. Edmondson was born Feb. 6, 1878, in Milton.

Their children are Mrs. Ray E. Ruske of Grand Lake, Mrs. Edith Milligan of Pulaski, Iowa; William G. Edmondson Jr. of Chicago, Prof. Jay M. Edmondson of Columbus, Ohio, and Prof. Vol. G. Edmondson of Norman, Okla.

Denver Post, August 29, 1954, p. 7D

J. STANLEY EDWARDS

Date: January 29, 1938

No. 2 B992 D5 E16 F158
MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

J. Stanley Edwards, General Agent, Aetna Life Insurance Co.
310 Patterson Building, Denver, Colorado

J. Stanley Edwards*, born in Pembroke, Ontario, Canada, March 29, 1872; son of the Rev. Andrew Wesley and Miriam Electa (Marvin) Edwards.

The Rev. Andrew Wesley Edwards, born in Ontario, Canada; son of William (?) and ____ (Young) Edwards. He graduated from Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, Illinois, in 1881, and from the Garrett Biblical Institute, in Chicago. He was a Methodist missionary, in western Canada, and established 7 Methodist Churches in Manitoba, Canada. In 1880, he came to the United States, and settled in Minnesota, where he served as a Methodist minister. He later moved to Denver, Colorado, and in 1890, became manager of the local office of the Aetna Life Insurance Co. He died in 1897. His wife, Miriam Electa (Marvin) Edwards, daughter of Guy and Margaret (Kennedy) Marvin, was born in New York State. She died in 1914. She was a member of the D. A. R. The Rev. Andrew Wesley and Miriam Electa (Marvin) Edwards are buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver.

J. Stanley Edwards, attended public schools in Canada, and high school in St. Paul, Minnesota. He took a preparatory course at Hamline University, in St. Paul, and graduated from the University of Denver, B. S., in 1894. During that year, he became associated with his father in the firm, Edwards & Son, representatives of the Aetna Life Insurance Co., in Denver, Colorado, and since 1907, has been general agent for that company, maintaining offices in Denver. Mr. Edwards' territory extends throughout Colorado and Wyoming, and he employs 50 agents. He served as president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, in 1920. He is a member of the Senior Council, National Life Underwriters; an honorary life member of the Colorado Association of Life Underwriters, in which organization he has held all offices; and is a director and a trustee of the American College of Life Underwriters, which he assisted in organizing. Mr. Edwards has addressed life insurance meetings and conventions throughout the United States and Canada, and has written various articles on the subject of life insurance. He is the author of the books, "Life Insurance for Business Needs", published by Harper & Brothers, in 1917, and "Forty Unusual Plans for Selling Life Insurance", published in 1926. Mr. Edwards was formerly a lecturer on life insurance at the University of Denver, and the University of Colorado, at Boulder, Colorado. He is a trustee, and a member of the executive committee of the University of Denver, and served as chairman of the campaign for raising the $1,000,000.00 endowment fund for that university. He was at one time president of the University of Denver Alumni Association. Mr. Edwards was one of the organizers, and chairman of the building committee of the Warren Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, in Denver, and served as chairman of the board, several years. He is a director, and past president of the Community Chest.

Mr. Edwards is independent in politics, and a member of the following: Masonic Lodge, Chapter, Commandery (K. T.), Scottish Rite, and Shrine; Denver Chamber of Commerce (a past director); Motor Club of Colorado (life member); Denver Athletic Club (life member); Beta Theta Pi, and Kappa Tau Alpha (fraternities); Sons of the American Revolution; State Historical Society of Colorado; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, of Denver (a trustee). Mr. Edwards, whose hobby is fishing, owns a summer home in the mountains, at Glen Park, Colorado, near Palmer Lake.

On December 31, 1896, J. Stanley Edwards married Mabel Dean Walker, of Denver, daughter of John M. and Elizabeth A. Walker. John M. Walker died November 21, 1929, and his wife, Elizabeth A. Walker, a native of Springfield, Illinois, died August 22, 1937. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards are the parents of 2 children: (1) Beatrice G., born July 21, 1902. She graduated from the University of Denver, in 1924, and serves as resident chemist in biology, at Harvard University. (2) Walker Stanley, born July 23, 1910. He is associated with his father, in the insurance business.

* For further data regarding J. Stanley Edwards, see "Who's Who in Denver, 1931-1932"; and Wilbur Fisk Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clark Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 808.

Also see: National Register of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, p. 146

LOREN M. EDWARDS

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Loren M. Edwards
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Loren McClain Edwards, D.D., born at Rising Sun, Indiana, November 14, 1877

Name of father: Rev. Charles Curtis Edwards, a native of Jefferson County, Indiana

Name of mother: Anna Belle McClain Edwards, a native of Hamilton, Ohio

Attended school or college: Moores Hill, now Evansville College, Indiana; Drew Theological Seminary; Columbia University; Trinity Theological College, Glasgow, Scotland

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Doctor of Divinity, Depauw University, 1913; Moores Hill College, Doctor of Divinity, 1909

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: August, 1920

Married: Yes, at Seymour, Indiana, September 14, 1905

Name of wife: Florence Sargent Edwards, daughter of Rev. James A. and Sarah Isabelle Sargent

Names of children and years of birth: Justin Sargent Edwards, born April 7, 1908; Mary Elizabeth Edwards, born February 23, 1910, died young

Avocation: Methodist Minister

Give dates: Began ministry in 1899; now pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church; First Methodist Episcopal Church, Colorado Springs, Colorado, 1939

Give brief incidents of historical interest: Author of the following books: Every Church Its Own Evangelist, The Spectrum of Religion, What is Left of the Apostles Creed?, Brochure of Poems - The Light of Christmas and Other Poems

Member of World Service Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Mason, Knight Templar, Scottish Rite 32nd degree, Shriner, Traveller and lecturer.

Please give autography signature: (signed) Loren M. Edwards

Biography File

MERRICK KNIGHT EDWARDS

Attorney

Though cut down prematurely in the prime of his manhood, Mr. Edwards had already made for himself a very high reputation as a lawyer in the city of his adoption, Denver, Colorado. Not only was he ranked as one of that State's most successful and most able attorneys, but he had gained for himself the respect and admiration of his fellow citizens for his many fine qualities of the mind and of the heart. Aggressive and willing to fight hard for any cause which had gained his support, he was yet always modest in spirit and manner, courteous in his treatment of others, charitable and kind.

Merrick Knight Edwards was born at Adrian, Michigan, June 25, 1880, a son of Alfred and Julia Elizabeth (Knight) Edwards. On his father's side he was a descendant of Jonathan Edwards, famous American theologian and one of the early presidents of Princeton. His father, who was born in 1844, was for many years prominently active in agricultural pursuits and now makes his home in Aurora, Illinois. His mother was a descendant of one of the pioneer families of New York State, where they had settled when that section was still subject to occasional attacks from Indians.

The subject of this article was educated in the public schools of Michigan and graduated from high school when sixteen years of age. After one year at that institution he taught school for some time and then attended a Normal School, from which he graduated in 1899. Though then only nineteen years old he became principal of the high school at Galesburg, Michigan. Two years later he reentered the University of Michigan, graduating in 1904 with the highest average grade ever achieved by any male student of the university up to that time. The next two years he spent in the law office of a brother-in-law, devoting himself so assiduously to the reading of law that, after he had entered the University of Michigan Law School in 1906, he was able to graduate in 1907. Later that year he entered the law office of Waldron & Thompson of Denver, Colorado.

By 1909 he had made such progress as a lawyer that he found himself in a position to open his own office in Denver. His intelligence and energy were so highly organized that the practice of law came to him as a matter of course. His actions and motives were guided by such a high degree of conscience and his interpretation of law was so unaffectedly unerring that those who knew him best always considered him an uncompromising champion of right. No case which he handled personally was ever lost by him, a fact attributed to his uncanny ability to choose always the right side, morally as well as legally. Naturally his practice gradually grew to exceptional proportions. In many respects it was unusually lucrative, though throughout his career he frequently handled numerous cases for needy people without any charge, his only requirement in such instances being that the case was meritorious. Though he was frequently urged to accept nomination or appointment to high public offices, he always refused. This he did not out of any lack of interest in public affairs, but because he firmly believed that the type of work for which he had so carefully and consistently prepared himself, was too important to be interrupted, even if only temporarily, by passing interests.

However, he was very actively and effectively interested in religious work, serving for a number of years as a member of the board of trustees of the Central Presbyterian Church of Denver, and as a member of the board of managers of the Presbyterian Hospital of Denver. He was also a member of several Masonic bodies, the Denver Chamber of Commerce, the Colorado Bar Association and the University of Michigan Alumni Association of Colorado. In politics he was a supporter of the Republican party. He was a liberal contributor to organized charity and also frequently made individual donations, always selecting some means of giving which would spare the pride of the recipient of his gifts. This was characteristic of his innate kindness and consideration of others, qualities which were also proven by the fact that he paid not only all his own expenses from the time he started in high school to the time of his graduation from college, but also assisted in educating his four sisters. He was a man of the greatest determination. From early youth on he was imbued with the desire to develop his abilities to the highest degree of effectiveness possible. This, in turn, led him to have a very high and consistent respect for value of his time and ability, but in spite of these convictions he was utterly unselfish when he once had decided that an object was worthy of sacrifice or endeavor. He was both unselfish and wise in his choice of that towards which all his efforts should be bent. Possessed with indefatigable energy, indomitable will and righteousness of purpose, he was one of the few men who could and did convert a highly idealistic point of view into a practical working program without ever assuming a "better than thou" attitude.

Mr. Edwards married at Denver, Colorado, in 1911, Ethel Marian Davis, a daughter of Evan Davis, an owner of large ranches and farms, of Wheatland, Wyoming. Mrs. Edwards was born and reared in Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards were the parents of one daughter, Jean Edwards. His family and home were Mr. Edwards' greatest and only enjoyment, outside of his professional work.

By his early and untimely death a life of great achievements and even greater promise was cut short. Had fate permitted this life to reach a natural and full development, it would undoubtedly have reached unusual success and added still further to his fine reputation. Even as it was his passing left a great void, a fine record of achievement and a very deep sense of loss for all those whose life had touched his.

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 78-80

ELISHA EGGLESTON
Colorado Pioneer

Bigot Eggleston (Dorchester, Massachusetts) whose son Darius was born Sept. 24, 1775, who married Mary E. _____, who was born Jan. 3, 1777.

To Darius and Mary E. were born: Asa, Aug. 14, 1794; Amos, Aug. 19, 1796; Corning, Mar. 18, 1798; Anna, Oct. 24, 1800; Lester, Sept. 30, 1802; Elisha, July 29, 1804; Betsy and Mary, Apr. 9, 1806; Betsey, Feb. 2, 1808; Lucy, Feb. 14, 1810; Lydia, Aug. 16, 1812; Achsah, May 18, 1815; Sally, Mar. 27, 1817; Nancy, Aug. 24, 1820

Fayetteville, N. Y.; Zachariah Kinne whose children were: Esop, Rachel, Cyrus, Benjamin and Phineas

Elisha Eggleston married (1) Rachel Kinne at Syracuse, N. Y. Their children were: Montgomery Elias, Theodore, George Washington, Susan, William Wallace, Wellington Kinne (a dentist at Salida, Colorado 1883-1893, to Grand Junction 1893), Charles Byron and Albert Lawrence.

Elisha Eggleston married (2) Betty (Elizabeth Merrill?) whose children were: Rachel, Willis, Frank, Cyrus and Warren.

In 1861 Elisha Eggleston and eight younger children came to Colorado, settling near Boulder. My father Wellington Kinne, and his brother, Charles Byron, returned to Iowa in 1863 and enlisted in the First Iowa Cavalry, serving until honorably discharged. Some years ago the Eggleston genealogy was traced back to the New England States, record being found of them as long ago as 1650. Kindly trace back this history for me, also of the Kinne family, giving any historical events of interest, also any service in any of the wars.

Mrs. J. M. Nelson
Durango, Colorado
R.F.D. 2

GEORGE WAYNE EISENHOUR
Kin of Gen. Eisenhower Is Ft. Logan Instructor

Fort Logan has one instructor in the clerical school who has a special reason for scanning the headlines daily, keeping in close touch with the latest developments on America's second front. He is Pvt. George Wayne Eisenhower, 26, cousin of Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in supreme command of the American forces in north Africa.

Because Private Eisenhower's branch of the family uses a simplified spelling of their name, he was able to keep his relationship with the general secret for a time. It isn't that he's not proud. You can see the beam on his face when the general's name is mentioned. It's just that Private Eisenhower wants to "get by on my own effort."

The father of the Fort Logan soldier and General Eisenhower are first cousins. Private Eisenhower saw the American military leader just before his departure overseas to take command of the American forces in Africa.

Eisenhower was inducted into the army last June 6. He worked his way thru Berea college in Kentucky and was a mathematics teacher in West Virginia before his entrance in the service.

Denver Post, December 6, 1942, p. 17

MRS. MAMIE GENEVA DOUD EISENHOWER
Persistency Won General Eisenhower a Bride in Denver

In love and war persistency brings results.

The legend goes that the day after Dwight David Eisenhower, today's man of the hour in north Africa, met Mamie Geneva Doud of Denver in 1915 he telephoned her fifteen times.

They were married a few months later at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sheldon Doud of 750 Lafayette street.

"I was persistent," Lieutenant General Eisenhower, commander in chief of the American expeditionary forces in north Africa, once said about his whirlwind courtship.

The same virtue characterizes the Yanks' whirlwind campaign in Africa since the second front opened Saturday night.

The invasion of Vichy-controlled Africa threw the spotlight on General Eisenhower and his wife, who spent her girlhood in Denver.

The general also is well known here, having served as a major at Fort Logan for eighteen months in 1925-26. The Eisenhowers have visited in Denver many times.

Residing now in Washington at the Wardman Park hotel, Mrs. Eisenhower says of the general's personality:

"Ike has the most engaging grin of anybody I've ever met, tho when he turns it off his face is as bleak as the plains of Kansas."

STAR HALFBACK AT WEST POINT

Her reference to Kansas is based on his upbringing. Born in Denison, Tex., 52 years ago, he was reared in Abilene, Kan., one of five brothers who were nicknamed alternately "Big Ike" and "Little Ike." His youngest brother, Milton, is executive director of the office of war information.

As a boy, Eisenhower studied the campaigns of Caesar and Alexander and later absorbed strategical theories of the German military prophet Clausewitz and the geopolitics of Hitler's teacher, Dr. Karl Haushofer.

Eisenhower was graduated in 1915 from West Point, where he was a star halfback until a leg was broken. He was assigned to the Nineteenth Infantry at San Antonio.

WAS PIONEER IN TANK DEVELOPMENT

In World war I, Eisenhower pioneered in development of the infant tank corps. After the war he fought for greater emphasis on the land battleships. He also has been a partisan of airpower, and only his wife's objections kept him from transferring to the air corps.

Eisenhower is a student both on and off duty. Mrs. Eisenhower says she never wearies of hearing her husband talk.

"I've been married to him for twenty-six years," she says, "and I can still sit and listen to him by the hour. He's a very fascinating man."

Their son, John, has completed his first year at West Point and promises to follow in the footsteps of his illustrious father.

Probably Denver Post or Rocky Mountain News article, no date.

EMMETT EDWARD ELLINGTON
Confectioner

When but a youth of sixteen years of age, the late Emmett Edward Ellington entered the confectionery business in Missouri, and when he located in Pueblo, Colorado, started there in that same line in a small way. With care and foresight he conducted his business, and by his natural ability and a strong personality, he became one of that city's leading business men.

Mr. Ellington was born in Sturgeon, Boone County, Missouri, August 1, 1866, the son of William T. and Mary (Monroe) Ellington, the former a widely-known minister of the Methodist Church, South, who was a circuit rider for many years in Northern Missouri, and who came to Pueblo, continuing his pastorate in Colorado. The Ellington family was of substantial Scotch-Irish ancestry.

The early education of Mr. Ellington was acquired in Columbia, Missouri. As stated, however, at the age of sixteen years he started in the confectionary business, operating his place at Huntsville, Missouri, and then for a time he assisted his brother, a civil engineer, in carrying out some surveys for the Great Northern Railway. Later he journeyed West and finally located in Pueblo, where he established himself in the confectionery business. He was well liked and speedily built up an extensive business, receiving the patronage of all the leading citizens and organizations in his line of catering. He was an active member of the Knights of Pythias, as well as of the Woodmen of the World. He was very fond of traveling and with his wife went abroad four times, once around the world, and practically all over the United States and Canada.

On June 24, 1913, Mr. Ellington married Anna Massie, daughter of Marion and Nancy Massie, of Lebanon, Missouri. They occupied a very charming home in the finest residential section of Pueblo, where Mrs. Ellington still resides.

It was on February 28, 1927, that the many friends of Mr. Ellington were greatly shocked to hear of his death. Messages of sorrow were sent to his widow from all quarters, all of which expressed the sympathy the community felt, and the assurance of every person who knew him that with his passing there had gone one whose loss would be felt for a long period and whose place it would be very hard to fill.

[A portrait and autograph of E. E. Ellington accompany the article.]

Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 36, pp. 257-258

MRS. ANNE ELLIS

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. Anne Ellis
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Annie Laurie (Anne Lavine) Ellis, born in Missouri, 1875 or 1876

Name of father: Albert Lawrence Heister, a native of Pennsylvania

Name of mother: Rachel Swearengen (Swereingen), a native of Tennessee

Attended school or college: As far as the "fifth reader" in Bonanza, Colorado

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: (oh dear)

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: 1877

Name of husband: (1) George Fleming, October 4, 1895, Gunnison, Colorado; (2) Herbert Ellis, June 1901, Saguache, Colorado

Names of children and years of birth: Neeta Hope Fleming, born July 4, 1896; Joy Hope Fleming, born August 24, 1898; Earl Ellis, born June 4, 1902

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Treasurer of Saguache County, Colorado, from January 1919 to January 1925

Biography File

DANIEL B. ELLIS

Daniel B. Ellis is a member of the law firm of Rogers, Ellis and Johnson, corporation and commercial lawyers, successors to Rogers, Cuthbert and Ellis. Its members are well known to the profession. Mr. Ellis was born at Clinton, Iowa, September 9, 1857, a son of Lyman A. and Mary (Buckley) Ellis, the former a native of Vermont and the latter of Connecticut. Lyman A. Ellis was a leading lawyer of Clinton, Iowa, and was for sixteen years district attorney and for eight years a member of the Iowa state senate.

Daniel B. Ellis is a graduate of the State University of Iowa, of the class of 1877 and degree of A. B. He prepared for the law, was admitted to the Iowa bar in 1883; was in practice with his father at Clinton until 1888, when he came to Denver, and at once associated himself with Henry T. Rogers, formerly of Chicago, and Lucius M. Cuthbert, formerly of Washington, D.C. Mr. Ellis is a member of the University Club, the Denver Country Club, the Colorado Traffic Club, the Denver Bar Association and American Bar Association, and is a Republican in politics. By his marriage in 1885 to Laura F. Smith of Boston he has a son, Erl Hubert, now a student at the State University of Colorado. In 1905 he married his present wife, who was Mary Alice Hardin, daughter of Thomas A. Hardin of Fulton, Illinois.

Semi-Centennial History of the State of Colorado, vol. II, p. 392

GUY LA VERNE EMERSON

Date: November 6, 1937

No. 2 B918 D5 E16 F112
MAS/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Guy La Verne Emerson, President, Treasure Mountain Gold Mining Co.
801 Midland Savings Building, Denver, Colorado

Guy La Verne Emerson*, born at Ponca, Nebraska, January 6, 1876; son of Eugene H. and Harriet (Raymond) Emerson.

Eugene H. Emerson, son of William Allen and Emily (Hapgood) Emerson. William Allen Emerson was the son of Allen Emerson. Eugene H. Emerson engaged in the pine lumber business in southern Missouri, and later was in the hotel business in Missouri. He served in the Civil War. He died in 1934, and is buried in Oregon. His wife, Harriet (Raymond) Emerson, daughter of Ebenezer and ____ (Bermin ?) Raymond, died in 1903, and is buried in Missouri.

Guy La Verne Emerson, graduated from Mountain Grove (Missouri) Academy, in 1892, and was a student of the University of Missouri, freshman year, in 1896. He was admitted to the bar in 1898. He subsequently was employed as follows: clerk, Farmers Bank, Butler, Missouri, (1892-95); stenographer to general attorney for Indian Territory, Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad Co., 1896-98, and was assistant to general attorney, 1898-99; law clerk with the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, U. S. Department of the Interior, Muskogee, Indian Territory, from 1899-1902; assistant cashier, Mercantile National Bank of Pueblo, Colorado, 1902; organized Silverton National Bank, 1905, and was cashier until 1911; salesman, E. B. Shapker & Co., investments, 1911-14; partner, Anderson, Hyney & Co. (Chicago), investment bonds, 1911-25; vice-president, Hyney, Emerson & Co., 1926-28; sales manager, True, Webber & Co., 1926-28; manager of Retail Sales (Chicago) for John Nickerson & Co., of New York City, 1928-29; and vice-president, T. L. Chapman & Co. (Chicago), wholesale investment securities, 1929-32. He then moved to Denver, Colorado, where since 1933, he has been president of the Treasure Mountain Gold Mining Co.**, the original mines of which were controlled by members of the Emerson family. Mr. Emerson served as secretary of the Colorado Bankers Association, 1910-11, and as president, in 1911. He is a Democrat, and a member of the Denver Chapter of the Citizens Historical Association, and a life member of the Masonic Denver Colorado Consistory No. 1. His hobby is tramping in the mountains.

On March 27, 1911, Guy La Verne Emerson married Laura Leesburg, daughter of G. Leesburg. Mrs. Emerson died in La Grange, Illinois, June 9, 1921, and is buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver.

On August 2, 1924, Guy La Verne Emerson married Grace Gertrude Stiles, daughter of John M. and Luella Stiles, of Mt. Gilead, Ohio. John M. Stiles died about 1917. In December 1928, Mr. Emerson's stepdaughter, Countess de Casa Bagona, was married to Senor Jose Chacon Benito, who is a director of the Treasure Mountain Gold Mining Co. They reside in Denver.

* For further data regarding Guy La Verne Emerson, see "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" (Institute for Research in Biography, Inc., New York, 1936), p. 298.

** For further data regarding the Treasure Mountain Gold Mining Co., see Citizens Historical Association files.

(Mrs. Emerson D.A.R. # 243892)

CHARLES ROLLAND ENOS

Date: September 4, 1937

No. 2 B867 D5 E16 F24
LCD/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Charles Rolland Enos, Attorney,
Midland Savings Building, Denver, Colorado

Charles Rolland Enos*, son of Dr. Charles Wolcott and Sarah Elizabeth (Cory) Enos; born in Denver, Colorado, August 12, 1894

Dr. Charles Wolcott Enos**, son of Dr. Charles R. and Eliza Ann (Thorp) Enos, was born at Marine, Madison County, Illinois, December 13, 1849. He graduated from the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri, in 1874; was a student in the New York Ophthalmic Hospital (special course), 1880-81; received a certificate from Dr. Knapp's Ophthalmic and Oral Institute; and was a graduate student of Hahnemann Medical College (Chicago), in 1883. After graduating from the Homeopathic Medical College, Dr. Charles Wolcott Enos moved to Jerseyville, Illinois, where he engaged in the practice of his profession until May 1889, at which time he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he engaged in the practice of medicine until his death, which occurred in 1916. He was one of the organizers of the Denver Homeopathic Club. He was a Prohibitionist, and in 1884 was a candidate for Secretary of State of Illinois. His wife, Sarah Elizabeth (Cory) Enos, daughter of Abner and Margaret S. Cory, was born in Illinois. She resides in Denver. Dr. Charles Wolcott and Sarah Elizabeth (Cory) Enos were the parents of 3 children: (1) Herbert C. (2) Grace E. (3) Charles Rolland.

Dr. Charles R. Enos, father of Dr. Charles Wolcott Enos, was born in New York State, in 1814. He attended school there, and in 1873, entered the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri, from which he received the M. D. degree. Before studying medicine, he moved to Illinois, where he engaged in farming near Marine. He later engaged in the practice of medicine in Jersey County, Illinois, where he died. His wife, Eliza Ann (Thorp) Enos, who was born in 1826, died in May 1897. Members of her family went from Holland to England, and later emigrated to America. Dr. Charles R. and Eliza Ann (Thorp) Enos were the parents of 10 children: (1) Sarah Cordelia. (2) George. (3) Charles Wolcott. (4) Ida Viola, wife of Theodore S. Ellison. (5) William H. (6) Joseph W. (7) Dudley. (8) Lawrence. (9) Clinton. (10) Grace.

Charles Rolland Enos, attended East Denver High School, graduated from the prep. department of the University of Denver, and was a student in the law school of the University of Virginia, 1912-16. He was admitted to the bar in 1916, at which time he began the practice of law in Denver, Colorado. He enlisted for service in the World War, and in May 1917 was assigned to the first officers' training camp at Ft. Riley, Kansas. He was commissioned a 1st lieutenant in the Motor Transport Service, and served overseas, from December 25, 1917 to July 17, 1919. He was honorably discharged as a lieutenant. He returned to Denver, and resumed his practice of law, being associated with William V. Hodges, until May 1922, since which time he has engaged in the private practice of his profession. Mr. Enos, who served as chairman of the Republican party, from September 1934 to February 12, 1937, was elected national committeeman. He is a member of the following: Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Denver Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobby is golf. He owns a country home located near Denver.

On October 4, 1922, Charles Rolland Enos married Mrs. Rebecca (Littlepage) Wood, of Charleston, West Virginia. By a former marriage, Mrs. Enos is the mother of 3 children, George R., Rebecca, and Mary Kemp Wood.

* For further data regarding Charles Rolland Enos, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 662.

** For further data regarding Dr. Charles Wolcott Enos, see "Portrait and Biographical Record of Denver and Vicinity" (Chapman Publishing Co., Chicago, 1899), p. 412.

LOUIS F. EPPICH

Funeral services for Louis F. Eppich, veteran Denver realtor, will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday at Olinger Mortuary, Magnolia st. Cremation will be at Fairmount.

Mr. Eppich died Tuesday in his home, 918 York st., after a short illness. He was 86.

Born in Chicago, he came to Denver with his parents at an early age and attended Denver schools. He worked for the Rio Grande Railroad before entering the real estate business in 1897.

Mr. Eppich served on the planning commission under Mayor Stapleton and for many years was chairman of the Denver Zoning Board. He was largely responsible for planning the Valley Highway.

He was past president of Denver Board of Realtors, Colorado Assn. of Realtors and National Assn. of Real Estate Boards.

He was a member of Cherry Hills Country Club, Denver Club, Rotary, Scottish Rite, Consistory No. 1, El Jebel Shrine and Fifth Church of Christ, Scientist. He was Past Master of Albert Pike Blue Lodge No. 117.

Surviving are his wife, Jeannette A.; two daughters, Mrs. Louise Root of Hingham, Mass., and Mrs. Elizabeth Jones of Denver; two sisters, Mrs. William Pechman of Denver and Mrs. Ada Smith of Los Angeles, and three grandsons.

Rocky Mountain News, April 14, 1954, p. 58

LOUIS F. EPPICH

Services for Louis F. Eppich, 86, of 918 York St., Denver real estate man, will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday at the Olinger Mortuary, E. Colfax Ave. and Magnolia St. Cremation will be at Fairmount.

Mr. Eppich died Tuesday at his home.

He was born on March 3, 1868, in Chicago, Ill., and came to Denver with his parents in 1884.

Mr. Eppich founded his own real estate agency, L. F. Eppich, Inc., in 1897. He managed the company until about 10 years ago when it was merged with the Van Schaack & Co.

Mr. Eppich was past president of the Denver Real Estate Exchange and of the state and national associations of Real Estate Boards. He was a member of the original zoning commission in Denver and president of the Denver planning commission from 1930 to 1946.

Survivors include his widow, Jeannette; two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones of Denver and Mrs. Louise Root of Hingham, Mass.; two sisters, Mrs. William A. Pechman of Denver and Mrs. Ada Eppich Smith of Los Angeles; three grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Denver Post, April 14, 1954, p. 43

LOUIS F. EPPICH
Eppich Estate $267,000

Louis F. Eppich, 86, of 918 York St., Denver real estate man who died Tuesday, left an estate valued at $267,000, a petition to probate his will showed Saturday in county court.

Half the estate will be placed in trust for the benefit of his wife, Jeannette. After $11,000 in specific bequests are made, the remainder of the estate will be divided by two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Jones, 1044 Columbine St., and Mrs. Louise E. Root, Hingham, Mass.

In his will, Eppich gave $3,000 to a sister, Mrs. Ada E. Smith, San Marino, Calif., and $3,000 to his secretary, Mrs. Ella Parr James, 25 E. 18th Ave.

He also willed $1,000 each to Shriner Hospital for Crippled Children at Salt Lake City; Fifth Church of Christ Scientist, Denver; St. Paul's English Lutheran Church, Denver; Wide Horizon Sanitarium, Wheat Ridge.

Albert Pike Lodge 117, AF&AM, and Colorado Consistory No. 1, A&ASR, were given $500 each.

Eppich, a resident of Denver since 1884, founded his own real estate agency in 1897 and managed it until it merged with Van Schaack & Co. 10 years ago. He was president of the Denver planning commission from 1930 to 1946.

Denver Post, April 17, 1954, p. 3

LOUIS F. EPPICH
Denver Realtor Leaves $267,000

Louis F. Eppich, 86, veteran Denver realtor who died April 13, left an estate valued at $267,000, his will filed for probate in County Court disclosed Friday.

He directed that half of his estate be placed in trust for the benefit of his wife, Mrs. Jeannette A. Eppich of 918 York st.

From the remaining half he directed that $3000 each be given to a sister, Ada E. Smith of San Marino, Calif., and Ella Parr James, his secretary for many years.

Sums of $1000 each were left to Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children, the Fifth Church of Christ, Scientist of Denver, St. Paul's English Lutheran Church and the Mountain States Home Inc. for the Wide Horizon Sanitarium, 8900 E. 38th ave.

The Albert Pike Lodge No. 117 AF&AM and Colorado Consistory No. 1 each were left $500.

The rest of Eppich's estate will be divided equally between two daughters, Mrs. Louise E. Root of Hingham, Mass., and Mrs. Elizabeth E. Jones of 1044 Columbine st.

Rocky Mountain News, April 17, 1954, p. 8

MRS. EVA BELLA ZERN ESKUCHE

Families of Colorado Pioneers

Pioneer's Ancestry

Name of Pioneer: Mrs. Eva Bella Zern Eskuche, born December 14, 1867, at Denver, Colorado, died December 5, 1949, at Denver, Colorado, daughter of William Zern and Eve C. Zern.

The dates of birth, marriage, death, and place of residence of her parents and grandparents were:

Father's name: William Zern, born September 13, 1819, at Ohio, died July 12, 1891, at Denver, resided at 2138 Welton at death. His father's name was Solomon Zern.

Mother's name: Eve Cathrene Reed, born April 16, 1823, at Reed, Pennsylvania, died April 18, 1905, at Denver, Colorado. Her father's name was John Reed.

Pioneer's Husband's Ancestry

The Pioneer married Geo. C. Eskuche, (born December 23, 1866 in Brooklyn, New York,) at Denver, Colorado. He died November 22, 1896, at Denver, Colorado.

His father's name: John Henry Eskuche. His mother's name: Anna Pauline Duefel.

Information Concerning Pioneer

The Zern family came to Colorado in 1866 from Pottsville, Pennsylvania. They lived at 15th & Champa st. (opposite G. E. Building) where Eva B. Eskuche was born, until he built a home at Arapahoe between 14th and 15th streets (sold for $15,000), Arapahoe County, Denver. He built another home at 2138 Welton Street - house still standing.

Occupation: Mr. Zern was a carpenter and cabinet maker who did expert work - having worked for the wealthiest families in Denver - all high class work.

Mr. Zern was School Teacher in his younger days in Pottsville. He attended Lutheran Church there and was Sunday School Superintendent for a good many years. He and his family attended Presbyterian church in Denver as there was no Lutheran church here. Eva Bella joined St. Paul's Church at the time of dedication, she being a Charter Member. She was educated here and when she married Geo. C. Eskuche, they went to Brooklyn where Mr. Eskuche died, she coming back to Denver to live with her people and raise her family. The Zern family came west to start anew as Mr. Zern's partner proved unfair. He called Colorado God's Country and staid here - altho he intended going to California but never got there. They traveled west partly by water and stage coach - the coach ahead of them was taken by the Indians. The Indians came to their home for food many times and tried to steal Eva Bella Zern who was a baby at the time.

Compiler: Anna R. Eskuche, 3746 Quitman, Denver, Colorado

JOHN EVANS
Colorado Governors
2nd Territorial Governor, 1862-1865

John Evans was born in Ohio, of Quaker stock, and had a distinguished career as a physician and public servant in Indiana and Illinois before coming West; sufficient accomplishment for several ordinary men. Legislative advancement, hospitals for the physically and mentally ill, a denominational publishing house, a famous religious paper were all originated by him. In addition he served in professional organizations, did editorial work, held public office, was on the staff of Rush Medical College, engaged in real estate and railroad promotion as well as financial operations, helped to found Northwestern University and was one of the delegates to the Convention that nominated Lincoln for the Presidency. Evansville, Indiana, was named for him.

Coming to what is now Colorado, he was appointed 2nd Territorial Governor and in the remaining thirty-five years of his life was not only instrumental in bringing the first railroad to Denver, but founded Colorado Seminary which became Denver University, built the Evans Block, and was a generally useful citizen, noted for his philanthropy, his opposition to slavery and his unusual ability. Evans Avenue in Denver and impressive Mount Evans were named for him.

SOURCES:

Hinshaw - Quaker Records of Pennsylvania, Ohio & Virginia, v. 1, p. 1061; v. 5, p. 35
R. B. Kennedy - Historical & Biographical Record of Logan Co., Ohio
History of Warren County, Ohio, p. 839
Edw. McMechan - Life of Governor Evans
Evans and Related Families - Chart in Denver Public Library
Dictionary of American Biography
Baker & Hafen - History of Colorado, v. 4, p. 10, 18, 63
History of Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, v. 2, p. 72
D.A.R. Lineages #444, 1593, 82370, 90703
Mayflower Index (Mrs. Evans)
Hills - Planters of Cape Cod, v. 1 & 2
Virkus - Compendium of American Genealogy, v. 5, p. 449; v. 7, p. 169
Mayflower Descendant, v. 12, p. 117
Ferrill - Sketches of Colorado, p. 58
Vital Records of Dartmouth and Rochester, Mass.
White - National Cyclopedia of American Biography
History of Waynesville, Ohio
Family Records
Times, October 11, 1878, p. 4; News, July 3-7, 1897; June 12, 1948; Republican, July 3-7, 1897
Stone - History of Colorado, v. 2, p. 8
Trail Magazine, v. 14, #2, June 1921
Rocky Mountain News, October 13, 1911, p. 7
Post, June 17, 1921

JOHN EVANS

Date: September 11, 1937

No. 2 B869 D5 E16 F29
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

John Evans, President, First National Bank of Denver,
Denver, Colorado

John Evans*, son of William Gray and Cornelia Lunt (Gray) Evans; born in Denver, Colorado, September 24, 1884.

William Gray Evans**, son of the Hon. Dr. John and Margaret P. (Gray) Evans, was born at Evanston, Illinois, December 16, 1855. He attended public schools in Denver, Colorado, and a preparatory school in England, and graduated from Northwestern University, B. S., in 1877. He assisted in the organization of the Denver Electric and Cable Co. in 1885, and served as president of its successor, the Denver Tramway Co., 1902-12. He was co-founder in 1902 of the Denver Northwestern & Pacific Railroad, which later became known as the Denver & Salt Lake Railway Co. (now a part of the Moffat line). In 1919, he formulated plans which resulted in the creation of the Moffat Tunnel District. During the latter years of his life he devoted most of his time to the affairs of the Evans Investment Co. He was president of the board of trustees of the University of Denver. During the World War he helped in the organization of a group of western states for the American National Red Cross, and afterward was instrumental in bringing Fitzsimmons General Hospital to Aurora and in the establishment of the flying field near Clayton College. Mr. Evans, who was active in the civic life of Denver, was a member of the following: Masonic Lodge (Knights Templar); University Club; and Tuna Club. His hobby was sports, especially fishing. He died in Denver, October 21, 1924. His wife, Cornelia Lunt (Gray) Evans, whom he married in 1883, was born at Oshkosh, Wisconsin. She was the daughter of William Patten Gray. William Gray and Cornelia Lunt (Gray) Evans were the parents of 4 children: (1) John. (2) Josephine. (3) Katherine. (4) Margaret, who married Mr. Davis.

The Hon. Dr. John Evans***, father of William Gray, and son of David and Rachel Evans, was born in Waynesville, Ohio, March 9, 1814. He received an M. D. degree in 1838, after which he practiced medicine and surgery in Attica, Indiana, and later in Chicago, Illinois. He was professor of medicine in Rush Medical College, in Chicago, 1845-56, and was a member of the City Council of Chicago, 1852-53. He was editor of the "Medical and Surgical Journal" several years, and established the Illinois General Hospital of the Lakes, which later became Mercy Hospital. In 1853, he advocated the founding of Northwestern University, and helped select a suburb of Chicago for its site, which afterward was named Evanston in his honor. He served as president of the board of trustees of the university, 42 years. In 1861, he accepted appointment as territorial governor of Colorado, which office he filled from 1862 to 1865. In 1863, he was co-founder of the University of Denver, of which he served as president of the board of trustees until his death, which occurred July 2, 1897. He became a member of the board of directors of the Denver Pacific Railroad & Telegraph Co. in 1867. His wife, Hannah (Canby) Evans, whom he married in Ohio in 1839, was the daughter of Joseph Canby. A few years after her death, Dr. Evans married, 2nd, Margaret P. Gray, a daughter of Samuel Gray, of Bowdoinham, Maine.

Margaret P. (Gray) Evans died in Denver in 1906. The following children were living at the time of Dr. Evans' death: (1) William G. (2) Evan E. *** (3) Anne. (Horace A. Gray, brother of Margaret P. (Gray) Evans, death: Denver Post, August 24, 1948, p. 15.)

David and Rachel Evans, parents of the Hon. Dr. John Evans, moved from Pennsylvania to Ohio in pioneer days. Benjamin and Owen Evans, brothers of David, continued to engage in the tool manufacturing business in Philadelphia, which trade their father had practiced. The Evans family were originally Quakers in Philadelphia.

John Evans, attended public schools in Denver; student, University of Denver; graduate, Massachusetts Institute of Technology (Boston), B. S. in Electrical Engineering, 1907. He then was employed successively as electrical engineer, chief engineer, and assistant general manager by the Denver Tramway Co., 1907-11, and now is a director of the company. He was chairman of the board of directors of the Denver Union Water Co. from 1911 to 1916, in which latter year he was elected president of the International Trust Co., a position he held until 1923, and at the present time is chairman of the executive committee and a director of the company. Mr. Evans is president of the First National Bank of Denver, of the Evans Investment Co., and of the board of trustees of the University of Denver. During the World War, he participated in Liberty Loan campaigns, and served as state chairman of the Capital Issues committee, as provost marshal of Colorado, and as chairman of the state committee of War Savings in Colorado. He is a member of the following: Denver Club; University Club (in Denver and New York); Denver Country Club; Polo Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association.

On November 11, 1908, in Denver, John Evans married Gladys Cheesman. They are the parents of 3 children: (1) Alice, who resides in Denver with her husband, Hudson Moore, Jr. They are the parents of 3 children: Hudson Moore (III), Barbara Standish, and Walter Cheesman. (2) John, Jr. (3) Anne (II).

* For further data regarding John Evans, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-1937), vol. 19, p. 831; and James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 63.

** Regarding William Gray Evans, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 18.

*** Regarding the Hon. Dr. John Evans, and his son, Evan E., see Wilbur F. Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, pp. 52 and 8, respectively. See the following for further data regarding the Hon. Dr. John Evans: William N. Byers, "Encyclopedia of Biography of Colorado" (Century Publishing and Engraving Co., Chicago, 1901), vol. 1, p. 440; James E. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 10; and "Portrait and Biographical Record of the State of Colorado" (Chapman Publishing Co., Chicago, 1899), p. 1381.

EVANS FAMILY
The Evans Epic
John Evans Sired a Remarkable Family, Four Generations
Of Which Have Served Well Denver and the Entire West

It was on a May day of 1862 that an eager crowd in the Denver diggin's watched a well-built man of distinguished bearing step down from a stagecoach. He greeted them in a friendly and confident manner, looked across the uncharted spaces, then raised his eyes to the hills in prayer.

He was Dr. John Evans of Chicago, territorial governor newly appointed by President Lincoln to lead this infant commonwealth through the crises of Civil and Indian wars and economic upheaval. And no story of Denver's historic mansions and their builders would be complete without the Evans family that reaches from the governor's humble cabin in the wilderness to the beautiful home of his grandson, John Evans II, in the metropolis of this modern empire.

Already a man of national eminence, Governor Evans at 48 had brought with him to the Rockies a quarter century of trailblazing experience on the midwest frontier. Always on the fringe of civilization he was not discouraged with the territory's small scattered population.

The pioneering of the Evanses goes back to the 1600s and the Quakers of Pennsylvania to which his family belonged. A land people, they also were tool makers, with John's grandfather Benjamin making a fortune from invention of the screw auger. John Evans grew up on the homestead of his parents, David and Rachel, at Waynesville, Ohio.

In 1838 he had begun his career as a doctor, carrying his medicine case on horseback across the prairies of northern Illinois. At Attica, Indiana, he had promoted the building of the first insane asylum of that region and operated it for a time. But it was in the cholera epidemic that swept the midwest in '48 that he won national acclaim.

After study abroad Dr. Evans had served a decade on the faculty of Rush Medical college of Chicago, promoted the American Medical Association, and established Illinois General, now Mercy, hospital.

One night in a little church at Attica, Evans had been converted to the Methodist faith, later to become a lifelong member of the national board of that church. Under it, in 1853, he had founded Northwestern University at Evanston, the now-noted Chicago suburb named in his honor. On that open prairie he also had built his home.

Soon after the governor's arrival in Denver he founded a like institution, chartered as Colorado seminary, the first school of higher education in Colorado. From that beginning grew the present great University of Denver. Until his death Evans served as president of the boards and a loyal benefactor of both colleges.

In '63 Governor Evans built his home (concurrent with that of the university across the street) at Fourteenth and Arapahoe streets, present site of the Tramway building. Though not to be compared with the gingerbread palaces of the '80s, the Evanses two-story brick house with its iron-fenced grounds reaching down to Cherry creek was the pride of the outpost.

It was a daring thing, folk said, to build such a house and so far out . . . The homes of that day were one-story frames; David Moffat's only a story and a half. With the Civil war on, Indians running rampant, half of Denver's 2,500 population floaters and miners, the Evanses were "even settin' out trees and flowers."

The house quickly became the official business and social center for the territory. In it generals, editors, statesmen and a president - Ulysses S. Grant - were entertained. Transactions involving millions and the molding of a vast empire were made in its library. And here the state of Colorado was born.

A GRACIOUS HOSTESS

In front of the house, treaties were made with the Indian tribes who came to deal with the man representing the White Father in Washington.

Beautiful Mrs. Evans, daughter of the Samuel Grays of colonial fame, was a gracious hostess. Married to John Evans since '53, she proved herself a valiant leader in the building of a home-and-social structure in a new and still raw young gold camp. She also was a patron of art and sculpture in the university.

In '65 Evans resigned the governorship to run successfully for election as United States senator. (His influence in national politics dated back to 1854, when he had been an organizing member of the birth of the Republican party. Later he had been a "powerful delegate" in the nomination of Abraham Lincoln for the presidency.)

Now the Colorado territory was slated to become a state, but though Evans spent two winters in Washington waiting for that to happen, President Johnson vetoed two successive statehood bills and thus he was never permitted to assume his seat. But he utilized his time in arranging land grants for Colorado's first proposed railroad, the Denver Pacific to Cheyenne, Wyo.

The foundation for the commonwealth laid, Evans (still called "The Governor") quit public office in 1867 to devote his time to its building. He built the Denver & South Park railroad to Leadville and was made president of the Denver Pacific, previously having been a promoter of the Chicago branch of the Pennsylvania and other lines.

LEADER IN PROGRESS

With railroad builders David Moffat and Walter Cheesman, John Evans became one of the "Iron Trail Trio" bringing transportation that opened new mines, agricultural fields and commerce in all parts of the empire.

In almost every phase of Colorado's early development John Evans was a vital figure. The fortune he had made in midwest railroads and real estate he spent in religious and educational projects.

In '73 the Evanses enlarged their house to three stories with conservatory, a carriage house -- and a basement, the first in the territory. In its picturesque setting of lawns and trees this home was even more the center of attraction. But he felt severely the panic of 1873, with mines, railroads and even the seminary closed down!

Evans paid off the school's indebtedness, staked many neighbors, astutely manipulated the survival of basic enterprises and calmly declared that some day Denver "would be one of America's three greatest railroad centers and hub of the mining industry." His faith inspired new hope in others.

Many pioneers later moved up to Brown's bluff and more majestic mansions. But in the Arapahoe street home the Evanses reared their three children and there John Evans, 83, passed away in 1897.

William G. Evans, the eldest son, became successor to that great empire builder. Born in '55 he had been his father's co-worker and partner for many years.

A leader in almost every progressive movement, he is said to have done more than any other one man in promoting development of remote areas to production. As president of the Denver Tramway company that his father helped to organize, Will Evans erected the Tramway building on the site of the old home. He also had a part in actual construction of four railroads, including the Denver & Rio Grande and the Moffat.

PROUD FISHERMAN

This calm, mild-mannered man who'd "rather be licked than make a speech" had an inborn pioneer spirit and a sense of grave responsibility that made him a champion at licking the many railroad problems arising in the growing west and to these he devoted his later years.

He was a lover of sports. And his pride, next to railroads and Denver university, was his prowess as a fisherman. (He held the world's tuna record for six years.)

He was married in '83 to Cornelia Lunt Gray, daughter of a prominent early day settler. They had four children. When he died in 1924 he was not a wealthy man, having staked a fortune in the fight for the Moffat road and other ventures. But he had no complaints. To such men "build the country!" was the supreme command.

Meanwhile the younger son of the governor, Evan Elbert, had become prominent in business and social circles but showed no proclivity for public affairs. He had become successful in real estate and insurance in California before taking charge of the Evans Investment company in Denver. His own real estate holdings were large. He was married to Kathryn Farrell of West Virginia and they had a daughter, Madelyn. He died in 1921.

Anne Evans, youngest of the family, was honored as one of Colorado's most outstanding women. Educated in Berlin and Paris, the vivacious Anne had every opportunity for a brilliant social career.

Preferring constructive work she became a leader in art and culture, giving much time to Denver university. She was a founder of the Denver Art Museum and staked poor artists as her father had staked prospectors. She belonged to the Denver Library commission, was appointed member of the New York World's Fair committee, and was the guiding spirit of the Central City Opera House association, of which she was co-founder and chief promoter. Great of heart and mind, she reigned queen in her own domain and was a regal presence "at formal gatherings in her rose silk and point lace."

Memorials to Gov. John Evans are still being established, including a recent student council building at Northwestern university, and a proposed statue by Colorado in the capitol's Hall of Fame in Washington.

But none other is so significant as that imposing red brick mansion with its iron-fenced roof and gardens at West Thirteenth avenue and Bannock street in Denver. It stands dignified in an old residential district with the western sun reflecting against its tall windows and lighting the time-darkened walls. This house, occupied by members of the family for the past sixty years, is one of the most widely renowned of Denver's historic homes. Diagonally across the street is another landmark -- the Memorial chapel. Built by John Evans, it was the first Methodist church in the state. It is now a part of Grace Community church.

STILL THE EVANS HOME

The main part of the Bannock street house was built in the early 80's by William N. Byers, noted pioneer newspaper publisher, and about '87 became the lifetime home of William Evans. Here his family was reared; and here, too, John Evans' widow, Margaret, and daughter Anne lived after the governor's death, establishing their home in the large addition built for the purpose. Mrs. John Evans passed away in 1906 and Anne in 1941. She had lived here some forty years.

Today the old mansion is still the home of Cornelia (Mrs. William) Evans, and her daughters, Katherine and Josephine Evans. Another daughter, Margaret, is Mrs. Robin H. Davis of Denver.

The Evanses were never "strong for show," and though Will Evans often said as he entered the front door that this was "the nicest place on earth," there was nothing grandiose about it. Furnished and decorated in excellent taste, its high note was that of spaciousness and comfort. Many pieces of the furniture are now priceless antiques.

The Evans progeny did not step into their ancestors' shoes. They grew into them.

John Evans II, only son of William and sole grandson of the governor, began his career in the engineering department of Denver Tramway company. Having been promoted to chief, the young electrical engineer from Boston Tech had made another Evans-Cheesman alliance when he fell in love with Gladys, only child of the distinguished Walter Cheesman, for whom Cheesman park and Cheesman dam were named.

His marriage to the charming and intelligent Gladys was a historic social event in the city. To them were born three children, John III, Alice and Anne.

John II became chairman of the board of the Tramway and of the Denver Union Water company, and was president of the International Trust company for a number of years.

After his father's death he became the Evans' family standard-bearer in keeping pace with the expansion and reorganization of established enterprises of which Denver was the hub. In 1928 he was elected also as president of the First National bank, a position he still holds.

He also was prominent in civic and educational affairs, and it is a fitting sequence that upon the reorganization of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad in 1947, when the Moffat became a part of that system, that John Evans was elected chairman of the board.

Four generations of the family have served on the board of Denver university. (William G., having succeeded his late father as chairman of the board, served until his death and was succeeded by his son, John II, who held that office for some twenty years. John Evans III is now a board member in his turn.)

John Evans II has been president and a principal supporter, also, of the Colorado Historical society for the past two decades.

The John Evans place at South Race street and East Alameda avenue, near the Country Club, is a proud example of the beautiful homes the families of early day settlers stayed to build.

This home in its original modest size was established some forty years ago on a lone hill near the city reservoir. When the reservoir was removed Evans acquired the land and expanded house and grounds into a magnificent country estate.

There is an Old World charm about this low, rambling house, cloistered within a dense forest of trees in the heart of the exclusive Country club district that has been built up around it. Both Evans and Cheesman, genuine lovers of horticulture, could leave their business affairs any time to set out a few trees, and today Mrs. John Evans is the able president of the Forestry and Horticulture society of Colorado.

These grounds, with their winding driveways, high retaining walls and great flights of stone steps bordered by tall pines and spruce, are picturesque and imposing in a warmly natural way.

Beyond the high gates at the top of the hill sits the white stucco house opening on to broad flagstone terraces and the formal garden with its famous lily pool. This garden and magnificent entrance are of ancient Roman influence. There is no other landscaping. The many varieties of trees and shrubs were just planted, say the Evanses, and purposely left to grow up wild.

At first there were only three bedrooms and the living rooms were smaller. "But at the time it was all we needed," the unassuming Mrs. Evans reflects. "We had no family then -- and not too much money."

The house, enlarged in a long ell around the hill, was not built to conform to any rigid architectural school. The Evanses class it simply as a country or ranch style, with one low-ceilinged room after another opening onto the great outdoors.

But the stateliness of the large reception room is a far cry from the average ranch house. The floor is of Colorado marble laid in large brown and white blocks. High-backed chairs and sofas and other rare antique furniture placed in order around the room give it a courtly air.

Over the fireplace hangs a large mirror in ornamental silver frame which, with the grandfather's clock in the library and other rare pieces, came from the Cheesman (now the Claude K. Boettcher) mansion.

The plain smooth walls consistently are a solid off-white. In pleasing contrast the floors are of brown walnut inlaid in square-and-diamond-shape designs, and much of the furniture is of walnut.

One of the most alluring features is the low-arched casement windows all around the house and the many matching doors between reception hall, drawing room, dining room and conservatory, opening together and in turn upon the grounds. The long dining room has six such doorways.

The drapes of both windows and doorways are fine linen tapestry of a beige-brown background with artistic patterns in old rose and other delicate colors.

The great drawing room, opening onto the Roman garden on one side and the conservatory on the other, is magnificent, yet not stiffly so. Furniture, like the house, conforms to no style or period. Between two of the sixteen-foot wide arched windows is a beautiful life-size portrait of a golden haired girl in blue -- Anne, the Evans' younger daughter. Rich tapestries decorate the opposite wall.

From there one wanders through the conservatory, whose palms and flowers make a background for the white marble floor and fountain and the vine-trellised windows.

Off one end of the conservatory is the long dining room, handsome in its walnut furniture and artistic bronzed wall lights around the room, all of Adams design. One white wall makes a beautiful background for another portrait, that of charming Alice Evans.

Across the hall from the library are the breakfast room and Mr. Evans' study. One of the most outstanding breakfast rooms in the west is that of the Evans home. The floor, wall base and table are of white Colorado marble, and the walls pale green. The artistic furniture is of wrought iron and white leather and the heavy linen drapes also are of white. With its colorful plants and flowers and green pines fairly hanging in at the windows that face the mountains, and the sun streaming in through the paned-glass ceiling, it is indeed striking.

From this room extends the long row of bedrooms down the ell. Garages and service rooms are built into the hill under the house.

Though many distinguished guests and groups are royally entertained here, informal gatherings of family and friends are far more frequent. "We do little formal entertaining or attending what is called high society functions these days," Mrs. Evans says. "Mr. Evans has not the time and he likes a quiet home life."

John Evans with his business acumen and quiet, unassuming manner is another "chip off the old block."

Alice Evans is Mrs. Hudson Moore Jr., Anne, Mrs. Frank Freyer. Both families live in Denver. And young John Evans III, a paratrooper in World war II, and married to Mary Daly, is connected with the Evans interests as president of the Evans Investment company.

Rocky Mountain News, Empire Magazine Section, Denver Mansions Series, XXX, March 27, 1949, p. 2

EVANS FAMILY

Captain William P. Gray, Aged Father of Mrs. Evans, Dead

Captain William P. Gray, brother-in-law of the late Governor John Evans and father of Mrs. William G. Evans and of Horace A. Gray, both of this city, died at the Evans home, 1310 Bannock street, late yesterday afternoon. He was 82 years old.

Captain Gray was a marine officer and spent a good part of his life in the navy. He was born in Bowdoinham, Maine, in 1827, on Christmas. When Governor Evans was in the statehouse, Captain Gray acted as his agent in Chicago, and in 1878 he began to assist the governor in his work in Denver. For several years he had lived in retirement at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Evans.

William G. Evans is in New York, but will reach Denver in time for the funeral, which occurs Sunday. Mrs. Evans is in Paris.

Denver Times, July 7, 1910, p. 2, col. 2

ARTHUR D. FAIRBANKS

Date: October 9, 1937

No. 2 B898 D5 E16 F88
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Arthur D. Fairbanks, U. S. Marshal
Denver, Colorado

Arthur D. Fairbanks, born in Greeley, Colorado, October 7, 1880; son of the Rev. Alonzo D. and Annette J. (Taplin) Fairbanks.

The Rev. Alonzo D. Fairbanks, born in Vermont, in 1836. He was a Methodist minister. In 1878, he moved his wife, to Colorado, where he held various pastorates. He died in 1933. His wife, Annette J. (Taplin) Fairbanks, who was born in Vermont in 1840, died in 1924. She was a member of the first Women's Christian Temperance Union in Colorado, and organized the second Women's Christian Temperance Union in this State.

Arthur D. Fairbanks, was a student of Oberlin (Ohio) College; and of the University of Colorado. He read law, but was not admitted to the bar. He was employed as a clerk in banks, and stores, and was associated with the real estate business. He later established a hardware store, after which he was secretary-treasurer of the Rensberg Mercantile Co., in Raton, New Mexico, 4 years. He subsequently was a commercial traveler for the John Deere Plow Co., 7 years, his territory covering western Colorado. Mr. Fairbanks then organized and was president of the Delta (Colorado) Hardware Co., the Colorado-Utah Hardware Co. in Grand Junction (Colorado), and the Montrose (Colorado) Hardware Co. He subsequently engaged in the automobile business at Delta, Colorado, following which he engaged in the sheep and cattle business. On April 1, 1936, he was appointed U. S. Marshal for the state of Colorado, which position he since has held. He formerly served as president of the Delta (Colorado) Canning Co., and the Delta (Colorado) Rotary Club. Mr. Fairbanks, who is a Democrat, is a member of the B.P.O.E. No. 1235 (Delta, Colorado, past exalted ruler), and the Denver Chapter of the Citizens Historical Association. His hobbies are golf, and fishing.

In 1902, Mr. Fairbanks married Mary Dale Redding, who was born at Westerville, Ohio, daughter of J. C. Redding. Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks are the parents of 3 children: (1) Helen Dale. (2) John W. (3) Florence Annette, who married Jack O'Connor. Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor reside at Akron, Colorado.

GUY W. FALLER

Date: January 15, 1938

No. 2 B979 D5 E16 F147
MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Guy W. Faller, Vice-President and General Manager
Public Service Company of Colorado
Denver, Colorado

Guy W. Faller, born at North Freedom, Wisconsin, April 16, 1878; son of William and Georgiana (Lycan) Faller.

William Faller, born at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, February 26, 1845; son of Henry (?) Faller, a farmer, who was born in Germany. His father, Henry(?) Faller, Sr., was a native of Germany. William Faller, who was a farmer, and later a salesman for a wholesale grocery firm, moved with his wife, to North Freedom, Wisconsin, in 1876, and engaged in the retail grocery business in that city. He served as recorder and registrar of deeds, in Sauk County, Wisconsin, and subsequently was identified with the U. S. Internal Revenue Dept., in Wisconsin. He enlisted in the 3rd Regiment, Wisconsin Cavalry, and served throughout the Civil War. He died at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in February 1908. He was a member of the Methodist Church. his wife, Georgiana (Lycan) Faller, whom he married in 1876, was born at Sumpter, Sauk County, Wisconsin, August 17, 1849, and died in January 1929. Prior to her marriage, she was a schoolteacher. William and Georgiana (Lycan) Faller are buried at Baraboo, Wisconsin.

Guy W. Faller, attended public schools at Baraboo, Wisconsin, and graduated from the United States Naval Academy, as an engineer, in 1898. He served in the U. S. Navy until January 1, 1903, at which time he resigned, having been on active duty in the Spanish-American War, serving on the U.S.S. "Oregon", during the Philippine Insurrection. He also participated in the Boxer Rebellion. From 1902 to April 1904, Mr. Faller was employed by the Madison (Wisconsin) Gas & Electric Co., as operating engineer of the company's steam plant, and as superintendent of gas and electricity distribution. From April 1904 to February 1913, he was associated with the Denver (Colorado) Gas & Electric Co., serving as assistant foreman of the street department; as engineer and superintendent of the gas distribution department; and as superintendent, in charge of the gas and steam heating departments. In February 1913, he became general superintendent of the City Light & Water Co., of Amarillo, Texas, and in June 1915, was made vice-president and general manager of that company, which position he held until May 1923. He served as secretary-treasurer of the Amarillo Street Railway Co. from February 1913, until June 1915, and as vice-president of the company until May 1923. He was Federal Receiver of the latter company, from 1917 to 1919. In May 1923, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where, until October 1923, he served as assistant manager of the Denver Gas & Electric Light Co., and from May 1923 to October 1930, was identified with the firm, Henry L. Doherty & Co., of Denver, serving as director of the Doherty Training Course. In 1923, Mr. Faller was appointed assistant vice-president of the Public Service Co. of Colo.*, in Denver, and since October 1924, has held the position of vice-president. Since March 1, 1934, he also has served as general manager of the company. He was made a director of the company in 1924.

Mr. Faller was a member of the Amarillo (Texas) School Board. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: Masonic Lodge, Amarillo (Texas) Chapter No. 196 (R. A. M.), Coronal Commandery No. 36 (K. T.), Colorado Consistory No. 1, and El Jebel Temple Shrine; Elks Lodge; University Club; Denver Club; Lakewood Country Club; Cherry Hills Country Club; Denver Press Club; Denver Country Club; Denver Athletic Club; Rotary Club; Wigwam Fishing Club; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S.; United Spanish War Veterans; Naval Marine Post No. 101 (honorary member); Navy Wardroom Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobbies are golf, and photography. Mr. Faller owns a cabin called "Turkey Creek Inn", located at Turkey Creek, Colorado.

On November 6, 1905, Guy W. Faller married Celia M. Astle, daughter of George C. and Alice (Dean) Astle, who died in 1926 and 1903, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Faller are the parents of 2 children: (1) Donald Dean, born May 22, 1907. He graduated from the Colorado School of Mines, in 1930. He married Katharine Wiley, and they reside in Toledo, Ohio. They are the parents of 1 child, Donald Dean Faller, Jr. (2) Alice Lycan, born June 27, 1910. She graduated from the University of Colorado, in 1932. She married Gilbert H. Buckman, and they reside in Palisade, Colorado.

* See sketch of the Public Service Co. of Colorado.
Mrs. Faller D.A.R. #206704

GUY WILLIAM FALLER

Faller Celebrates 40 Years of Activity in Public Utilities
President of Colorado Company Recalls Resignation as Naval Officer to Take First Job as Gas and Electric Firm Official.

Forty years ago the United States navy lost a promising officer to the utility industry. Instead of becoming an admiral, Guy W. Faller is president of one of the best-managed utility corporations in the United States.

What he might have been was recalled to Faller, president of the Public Service Company of Colorado, in one of the scores of letters and telegrams received Monday morning bearing congratulations and good wishes as the former navy man entered upon the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of his association with a utility. Associates from New York city came to Denver to offer personal congratulations.

"Of course the sea has its pull, always has had," Faller said as he sat behind a desk piled high with seasonal chrysanthemums, tribute of his office staff, "but today as never before a man must stick to the task he is best fitted to do if we as Americans are to do our full share in winning this war, which we MUST win and I don't mean maybe. Normally, I might want to retire and do things I have always wanted to do. Not now. Here I stay and work!"

LAMB SENT BY FORT COLLINS GROUP

There was a saltiness about Faller's statement of intention which vitalized the atmosphere of the office in which he sat and as he spoke there came a commanding bleat from a crate standing in a corner.

The bleat was from Lambert, a tiny angora lamb sent from employes of the Fort Collins Public Service company with an admonition, "If meat rationing goes into effect, you'll know what to do with me."

A researcher into the reasons why Faller has succeeded need not go beyond the sentiments expressed in the anniversary messages from associates in high places, from men in other callings, from women in organizations he has helped, as they have come from all sections of the country and other parts of the world. By grapevine these friends learned that Faller is celebrating an anniversary.

SERVED IN NAVY THRU TWO CAMPAIGNS

But behind these messages attesting character, loyalty, ability to dish and to take, appreciation for human weaknesses and strength, running the gamut of what men think and feel and talk about, are the starting facts. Faller is a native of Wisconsin, born in North Freedom April 16, 1878. He went to public schools, then to the United States naval academy, class of 1898. He served actively in the Spanish-American war in the Philippines and the Boxer insurrection and came home when peace was declared and resigned to go into business.

His first job was with the Madison Gas & Electric company as operating engineer of the steam plant and superintendent of gas and electric distribution at Madison, Wis. Then he came to Denver in 1904 to join the forces of the former Gas & Electric company as assistant foreman of the street department and to handle other duties. From here in 1913 he went to Amarillo, Tex., as general superintendent of the City Light & Water company, with a dip into management for the street railway company there.

They liked and respected Faller in Amarillo as in Madison, as the messages attest and the people in Denver have grown to love and respect and depend on him since he returned here as assistant manager of the Denver Gas & Electric company and began his steady, sure climb up and up to the president's chair in the Henry L. Doherty company in 1940.

TOOK YEAR OFF FOR WORLD TRAVEL

He married, in Denver, Celia M. Adtle and established a home. One year he took time off to see that part of the world he had not seen as a navy man.

"I wanted to know what people were thinking," he said, "and, what is more important, why they were believing certain things we bunch under the name of religion. I found what I had often thought that different people struggle by different paths to get to God -- that power from which men draw strength to go on living and facing all the burdens of life. I've never doubted there is a God since I returned and settled down at my job again.

"We need that faith now to help us thru. Problems are countless. I try to face personal and business problems objectively, meet them as they come, and to get the best answers, I try to find a bit of silence."

There was no pose or preachiness in Faller's explanation of how he meets and works out some of the most serious problems besetting the human mind.

ONLY MEMBER OF NAVAL CLASS STILL ACTIVE

Again, that attitude explained the sentiments of devotion in the messages piled high on the president's desk. It explained why, when every other member of Faller's class at Annapolis has retired, he continues at full swing to carry on. When he closes his desk, the day's work done, Faller goes to a gracious home at 2500 Colorado boulevard. He has had two sons and a daughter. Donald elected to go into the army and is a second lieutenant. His daughter Alice, wife of Gilbert Buckman, lives in Denver. The third son, William George, died some years ago.

Faller holds membership in many clubs, is a member of the Colorado Consistory No. 1, El Jebel temple, an honorary member of Naval Marine Post No. 101, Veterans of Foreign Wars, United States Spanish War Veterans and other equally important organizations. Being a reserve officer of the United States navy, he stands ready to "get into the thick of it," if called, and again he doesn't mean maybe, or talk to hear himself.

"We've all got to fight and work and do some lively believing praying too," he said.

[A photograph of Guy William Faller accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, October 12, 1942, p. 13

Rocky Mountain News, October 13, 1942, p. 11

JOHN B. FARISH

John B. Farish, a noted mining engineer, was born in San Francisco, Cal., July 3, 1854. His father, A. T. Farish, was born in North Carolina, in 1810; emigrated when twenty-one years old to Tennessee, where he was a pioneer and one of the founders of Memphis. He arrived in California by the overland route in Sept. 1849, and engaged first in mining, subsequently in the mercantile trade. His family followed, via Panama, in 1852.

John B. was educated in the public schools of San Francisco, and entered the university at fifteen years of age. Financial misfortune succeeded and within the year he went to the gold mines of Sierra county, where he worked in various positions for several years, then returned to San Francisco and completed his education as a mining engineer. In March, 1879, he came to Colorado and located in Leadville opening an assay office, but in May was appointed superintendent of the Silver Cliff mine in Custer county, where he remained about one year, then went to Nevada, California and New Mexico, in each of which states he was in charge of large operations on important mines.

In 1883 he assumed the management of mines at Leadville and in Park county, but in the following spring settled in Denver, established an assay office and also acted as consulting mining engineer for eastern and European investors. In this capacity he has traveled very extensively in all parts of North America. Mr. Farish has attained high rank among the more eminent in his profession.

Frank Hall, The History of Colorado, v. 4, p. 439

MRS. BERTHA KOCH FEIST
Bertha Feist Celebrates 90th Birthday Saturday

One of Aspen's best-loved, best-known citizens celebrated her 90th birthday in Pitkin County Hospital last Saturday, as many of her Aspen friends stopped by to give her their best wishes.

In the hospital for over two years, Mrs. Bertha Koch Feist is among Aspen's oldest residents. Among those feting her with presents and birthday cakes were Mrs. William Shaw, Mrs. Gene Bascom, Mrs. Pearl Maltzberger, Mrs. Fritz Benedict, Art Youngberg and her nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Koch from Grand Valley.

Before she broke her hip and entered the hospital Bertha Feist lived alone in a weathered brown house on Aspen's West Francis street. As she had, the house had grown old with Aspen, and although her children matured and grew away from the old structure, it was her home and she would not leave.

She came to Aspen first at the age of 17 in 1885. Accompanied by her brother's wife, who had been visiting in Ohio, she crossed Independence pass in the heavy, cumbersome stage sled. At the time this was the only road open from Leadville and the East to Aspen.

That first visit lasted almost a year. Brother Harry was an important businessman. Brother Billy was Aspen's first postmaster.

A year has many days, but Bertha's first year on the Roaring Fork had too few, and it was with regret that she left the relatively free life of the mining community to return to Toledo and her family. Her father had been one of the founders of Aspen. A college professor, he had been sent by the U. S. Government to Colorado to investigate mining conditions and while in the Rockies helped found and lay out the town of Ute, Aspen's predecessor in the valley.

To Bertha, Toledo was home. She had many friends. She liked her life as an 1887-styled debutante. But all the time, while at school, shopping in the city or attending dances, she held the image of a Rocky Mountain town in the back of her mind. When Colorado visitor C. J. Feist asked her to marry him and return to Aspen, she accepted.

Although dates and combinations of dates with events are difficult for her to bring into focus, she remembers the next few years clearly. First she and her husband lived in Aspen where Feist was passenger agent for the Kit Carson Stage. Once each day her husband greeted the steaming horses that drew the bulky stage over Independence Pass, and once each day he speeded departing passengers on their way to the world outside.

Later they moved to Glenwood Springs where Feist was express agent for the D. R. G. & W., then went into business as a baker. Trade was brisk, business good, the mines disgorged tons of rich ore and the Feists prospered. But only for a few years. In 1903 the bottom dropped with the silver panic. Silver was demonetized. Everyone suffered.

Bertha remembers the panic well. No one had money. Silver was almost worthless and that is what men mined. She and her husband gave up the bakery and returned to Aspen. "We could not stay open when everyone could only pay with credit," she explains.

Working in brother Harry's sawmill, plus one or two lucky strikes while leasing a section of the Durant mine, enabled Feist to make a living. But living was hard.

As she grew from a young wife into a matron Bertha devoted the energy of which she always had ample store, into community enterprises. During World War I she worked for the Red Cross. Later she was a leading figure in the Women's Civic Club, and although many of their efforts proved futile -- drunks shot holes in their street signs, pranksters stole their trash barrels -- the club was responsible for many civic improvements. During many of these same years she was president of the Ladies Aid Society of the Community church, a job she held for 26 years.

Although she is now 90 years old, she can still look to the future. Each day she keeps abreast of the news, reads her paper, listens to her radio. And although she has lived with much of Aspen's history, she still hopes to live with more. And without a doubt she will enjoy what comes.

Aspen Times, July 24, 1958, p. 4

MRS. JENNIE FELLOWS

Five Generations
(Photograph)

Five generations pose for their portrait during a recent reunion in Denver. Youngest member of the clan, 6-month-old Melanna Sue Prante, is held by her mother, Mrs. Melvin Prante, 29, of 1581 So. Pennsylvania st. Seated are, right to left, Mrs. Lucille Elliott, 48, of 1829 S. Pearl st., grandmother; Mrs. Jennie Fellows, 89, of 937 Perry st., great-great-grandmother, and Mrs. George Tomlin, 68, of Malta Bend, Mo., great-grandmother. Mrs. Fellows will be 90 on Sunday.

Rocky Mountain News, August 5, 1964, p. 20

JOHN ALBERT FERGUSON

Mansion Magnificent

Within the Austere Walls of His Home, John Ferguson Created an Unrivaled Grandeur That Survives to This Day
By EDITH EUDORA KOHL

Conservative John Albert Ferguson, a pioneer in western insurance, spared nothing to achieve interior grandeur when he built his huge and otherwise austere looking early Denver home at East Seventh avenue and Washington street.

The twenty-two-room mansion's lines are Spanish, with brick and white stucco walls, a red-tiled roof and rows of arched windows. Broad stone steps lead to an ornate front door which opens on a magnificent interior -- a 95-foot vista of foyer, reception hall and Elizabethan drawing room, at the end of which is a twenty-foot picture window.

The drawing room is said to have few rivals of that design in America. Another exceptional feature is a welled stairway of pearl gray Italian marble. "This marble," Says Prof. Eugene Steinberg of Denver university, an authority on old world architecture, "is most precious and its use confined almost entirely to royal palaces and buildings of state. It is most unusual to see it in a private home."

Architectural experts are amazed that these and other fabulous features should be found in a Denver mansion built in the nineties when the west was yet a raw frontier.

Ferguson was the son of a Scottish-born Iowa banker. He started at 18 as an agent in Iowa for a New York insurance company, then moved into the Dakotas and on to Colorado as head of that company for the Rocky Mountain region. He became one of the most prominent men of his day in this profession and for a time was stationed in London. At 34 Ferguson retired from the insurance business to become one of Denver's leading real estate investors and builders.

As an outcome of his building experience, Ferguson invented a pressure- and weather-resistant concrete block which at the time was heralded as one that would "revolutionize the building industry." Ferguson netted a fortune from patents on this invention.

Mrs. Ferguson was the former Carrie Johnson, sister of Caleb Johnson of the Palmolive manufacturing family. The Fergusons had a son, John A. Jr., and two daughters, Lulu and Elizabeth.

The marriage of John to Katherine Morey, and of Lulu to Arthur H. Bosworth, linked three of Denver's leading pioneer families. Ferguson now is prominently connected with the Morey Mercantile company and other enterprises. Bosworth is president of Bosworth-Sullivan & Co., investment bankers. Elizabeth is Mrs. Thomas Penning of New York.

When ill health forced the elder Ferguson to move to Florida, the Denver home was sold during World war I to John G. McMurtry, founder of the McMurtry Glass & Paint Manufacturing company. Ferguson died in Florida in 1927 at the age of 66.

McMurtry, however, died of pneumonia at 49 soon after moving into the home. Mrs. McMurtry, the former Caro Gove, daughter of Aaron Gove, Denver's pioneer educator, continued to live in the home with her two children, Caro and John G. Jr.

Although Mrs. McMurtry lived retiringly, the mansion always was open to her friends and her children's associates who recall the happy, homey life within those walls.

Caro McMurtry's marriage in 1938 to Leonard Aitken Jr., an investment banker, was a brilliant social event. After John's marriage to Virginia Symes and his entry into military service in World war II, Mrs. McMurtry lived alone in the mansion, attended to by a few servants, until her death in 1945.

The home was then purchased by B. T. Poxson, a mining man who operates the old Creede properties of David Moffat, Walter Cheesman and other pioneer mining kings.

Through the years the home has lost none of its grandeur, and many of the original furnishings remain intact. The foyer, lined with vari-colored Carrara marble, leads into the large reception hall. To the right of the hall, French doors and windows open onto the grounds facing East Seventh avenue. The windows are draped in dark red silk which show effectively against the white walls bordered in a Spanish design in heavy bas relief.

To the left side of the hall are the marble stairs with solid marble walls enclosing them to the pearl gray, rose tinted landing which is also of the rare marble.

The walls of the forty-five-foot drawingroom are of solid, dark oak paneled to the ceiling which is white with oak trim in Gothic design. The ornately carved crown plates above the windows are gold plated.

The shirred curtains of silk are a light mauve while the heavy drapes are of rich brown velvet with valances bordered in gold. Unique Italian wooden lamp fixtures painted with gold leaf grace the walls of the room.

Two sets of French doors on either side of the fireplace, which is of white Italian marble, open onto the conservatory, overlooking the avenue while the window at the rear gives a full view of the arch-walled garden.

At the opposite end of the drawingroom, a grand piano has as its background a huge gold-plated mirror. Many pieces of the original furniture are in oak to match the walls. Other pieces, now removed, were upholstered in gold and red satin and plush.

The conservatory, floored in black tile, runs the full length of the drawingroom downstairs, and the four-room suite on the second floor. The brick arches above the windows are painted in the Spanish design of burnt orange and turquoise with corded silken drapes of the orange.

Paralleling the drawingroom is a stately diningroom finished lavishly in solid red mahogany with silken drapes and rugs of royal blue. The fireplace in this room is also of the Carrara marble. The walls are done in heavy brocaded satin with a mauve background and other pastel shades showing in the artistic design.

The same artistry of design and appointment is carried to the second floor where a four-room suite -- livingroom and three bedrooms -- opens onto the conservatory, which is used here as a sun parlor. This wing is done mainly in pastel green with matching drapes of silks and satins in fleur de lis designs. The two bathrooms of this suite are elaborately equipped, one with a mirrored backwall and crystal chandelier.

Imported chandeliers grace the glistening marble stairways and halls of both floors, and the master suite. Guest rooms are also attractively finished. The servants' apartment on the third floor has five rooms and bath.

Denver Post, December 26, 1948, Denver Mansions Series, XXVI

MRS. KATE FERRETTI
Milliner Ferretti Marks Her Fiftieth Year
By GRETCHEN
Denver Post Fashion Editor

If you lived several hundred years you still couldn't begin to wear all the hats Kate Ferretti has designed during her career.

This year marks the Denver-born designer's half century milestone in millinery fashions and have brought her no little fame and customers galore from near and far who invariably become her devotees.

"I wouldn't even attempt to count the hats I've made, but you'd be surprised how many women come here especially to show me hats I designed for them 25 years ago," said gentle, artistic Kate, whose talent is inborn.

Her father, Henri Malnati, an artist and hand stone carver, came to Denver from Italy to cut the stones for the State Capitol in 1895 and later for the Denver Mint. At age 13, Kate, steeped in her esthetic Italian heritage, showed special art talent which she decided to express in the field of fashions.

While attending school, she also studied hat-making. "I really learned from ground up," she said.

FIRST SUCCESS

Her first millinery show, presented 30 years ago for the Junior League, was a grand success. "I designed every hat for that show and sold every last one. Woman even grabbed them from each other's hands," Kate laughed. "I've enjoyed every minute of it because I love beauty and my customers inspire me to create hats that bring out their inner beauty and personalities."

Of course, in anyone's career some "rain must fall," but Kate, true to her artistic nature, always manages to turn it into sunshine.

For instance, she said the going was rough 25 years ago. "I had saved $750 and owed most of it to a New York millinery supply house. But the World's Fair was on in New York, so I decided to let the bill slide and take the kids to the fair. It was a hard decision to make and though I felt a bit guilty we had the time of our lives and we came back to Denver so happy and inspired. I designed hats that sold like crazy. Thirty days later, I was able to pay my bill and order more supplies."

FAMILY HELPS

Kate was widowed four years ago. Members of her family help her in her work. They are a daughter, Mrs. Ann Pace, and sons, Joe, a bachelor, and Jack. Jack's wife, Maria, an Italian girl from Florence who modeled at the Petti Palace, also is in the business.

It's become a tremendously successful family affair and now, twice a year, Kate and her sons travel to Europe on buying trips. They purchase Italian and Parisian couture creations including coats, dresses and boutique items that double the seasonal excitement in the unique Ferretti shop at 4235 Tejon St.

The shop was once coach house and stable on the old Ira Boyd Humphrey estate which Kate purchased 25 years ago. She remodeled the big house that now has an upstairs apartment for Jack and his wife while Kate and son Joe have the run of the first floor. "We turned the barn into our shop and workrooms where we really live and work most of the time," Kate said.

Every hour of the day, the shop's mirrored walls and crystal chandeliers reflect the images of chic women clamoring for custom-designed Ferretti hats and imported fashions.

Modest though Kate is, she becomes exuberant at mention of two subjects -- her hats and her children. "I couldn't do without them" she says with affection. "Joe and Jack have become fashion experts and know more about the business than I do."

But Kate's still the boss and the creative artist according to her devoted sons and daughter Ann, who inherit her fine fashion taste and flair for high-style designs.

To celebrate her 50th anniversary in millinery designing, the Fashion Group planned a dinner honoring Kate.

But typical of the generous Italian spirit, Kate Ferretti and her charming clan, "turned the tables" and hosted the whole group Thursday night at a real Italian supper party at the Ferretti home.

[Photographs of Kate Ferretti and her shop accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, February 16, 1962, p. 29

MRS. MARY FERRIER

Denver Woman, 97, Insists On Walking to Polls Tuesday
Those Who Don't Vote Should Be Ashamed, She Says

Denverites who fail to vote Tuesday in the municipal elections should take a look at Mrs. Mary Ferrier of 1349 Downing st.-- and feel ashamed.

For Mrs. Ferrier will leave her apartment "soon after the polls are open" Tuesday, walk the 3½ blocks to her polling place at Emerson School and cast a vote for Bert Keating.

Thousands of other Denver residents will do the same thing.

But few among them will be able to match Mrs. Ferrier's 97 years.

"People who don't vote should be ashamed of themselves," the sprightly and alert Mrs. Ferrier said. "You tell them for me, young fella, I'd prefer they vote for Mr. Keating but, more important, they should vote."

SHE LIKES KEATING

Mrs. Ferrier, a member of the Baptist Church and whose "whole family votes Republican," said she liked Keating because "he's a good man and has helped all the old people.

"And he will make a good mayor," she added.

Mrs. Ferrier was born in Lancaster, Pa., on Dec. 13, 1857.

"My father had lost his own cotton factory in a fire," she said, "and he and my mother were traveling around the country. My dad built cotton factories for other fellas."

The family moved to Little Falls, Minn., when Mrs. Ferrier was 9. She grew up there and was married.

"I buried my husband and three children at LaCrosse, Wis., and have been kind of bumming around ever since," she said. "I lived in Portland, Ore. for awhile and came to Denver 22 years ago."

SHE BAKES PIES

She said she expects to stay here "permanently" because "I've already paid for my grave at Fairmount Cemetery -- not that I expect to be there very soon."

Mrs. Ferrier manages to care for her apartment and still "bake a pretty good pie now and again for my neighbor, Luther Johnson."

Johnson, who will accompany Mrs. Ferrier when she votes, said the remarkable old lady has had numerous offers of rides to and from the polls but has insisted on walking.

[A photograph of Mrs. Mary Ferrier accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, June 21, 1955, p. 1

ALICE MacHARG FERRIL

By TOM GAVIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Alice MacHarg Ferril -- artist, poetess, author, musician -- was 90 Monday.

And she didn't much like it.

"I think I would rather be in my late 30s," she said, reflectively. "Yes, the late 30s would be fine."

It was a fine day for a birthday, though.

The late afternoon shadow of her 67-year-old home at 2123 Downing st. deepened the green of the grass in the small yard visible from her chair. A tall bush drooped beneath the weight of white blossoms and yellow tulips vied with iris for attention.

Colorful Room

But even more colorful Monday was Mrs. Ferril's living room.

"Haven't my friends been kind?" she said, gesturing at bouquets covering virtually every level surface.

"I've always thought that people were pretty much the same the world over, that some were good and others bad. But it seems I always happened to stumble into the good people."

While the whiteness of her hair and the fine lines given her face by time bear out the 90 years she wishes were fewer, Mrs. Ferril is a still-young woman.

Becomes Alive

Her carved wooden rocker becomes almost alive beneath her as she shifts from one to another visitor, participating to the hilt in conversation, recollection, conjecture.

And the tall-ceilinged, oak-trimmed room has had more than its share of each.

Mrs. Ferril, who grasped at all the arts -- and who still plays the piano and 5-stringed banjo was the wife of William C. Ferril, a pioneer editor, historian and Denver newspaperman in the hectic time of Eugene Field.

One of their children is Tom Ferril, or Thomas Hornsby Ferril, depending upon whether you know him as author, essayist, nationally-recognized poet or husband of the publisher of Denver's weekly Rocky Mountain Herald.

Read by Thousands

One of Ferril's poems, lettered beneath the murals lining the rotunda of Colorado's Capitol Bldg., is read by thousands of persons each year.

But the now-old Statehouse was only a hole in the ground when Mrs. Ferril came to Denver in 1886 from her Mohawk Valley home.

The then-19-year-old girl lived with an aunt on 14th ave., across from what is now Civic Center.

"It was called Capitol ave., then," she remembered, "and they were just hauling the huge granite blocks for the Capitol's foundation. It took four to six mules to haul each stone."

Native Prairie

"Civic Center was called the Evans Block, then, and it was just native prairie. I suppose there were rattlesnakes there, but I didn't see any. I used to climb through the fence and pick wildflowers."

A newly-graduated student from the Rome Academy in New York, the young Miss MacHarg enrolled in Denver University's new art school near 14th and Arapahoe sts.

Her first recognition as an artist -- a skill she employed as recently as three years ago -- came when Mrs. Ferril's two paintings won both first and second prizes in a school competition. The first prize of $50 in gold had been offered by the wife of former Gov. John Evans.

Denver in 1886 was a grand place for a young girl, she recalls.

"There were a great many mining students attending the school in Golden."

Sharp Memories

Mrs. Ferril has two sharp memories of a horseback trip, about that time, to the summit of Pikes Peak.

"It was harder coming down," she said.

"And I remember hearing at the hotel in Manitou Springs that a society belle was there. Being an unsophisticated small-town girl, I waited around for hours to see what a real belle looked like.

"She was an unimposing looking little girl."

Mrs. Ferril's lack of reverence at that first glimpse of society's envoy apparently rubbed off on her son -- as the Brown Palace learned last year when it required him to don a management-furnished tie to dine in the Palace Arms.

Hangman's Noose

Ferril wore the tie -- knotted in a hangman's noose -- refused to surrender it at meal's end and later described it in his weekly column as "an abominable necktie, a cheap rayon necktie, a Father's Day clearance sale necktie, a flamboyant necktie of abstract design combining gangrene squid with magenta bars sinister."

Mrs. Ferril looked out the front window at the no-longer-modish neighborhood and at the Downing st. Monday.

"A lot of people ask why we haven't moved away," she said. "We don't want to. We like it here."

As she looked, another car drew up before the house. A woman carrying another bouquet stepped out and walked to the door.

Alice MacHarg Ferril -- artist, poetess, author, musician -- was 90 Monday.

[A photograph of Alice MacHarg Ferril accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 28, 1957, p. 12

THOMAS HORNSBY FERRIL

Born Feb. 25, 1896 in Denver. East High School and Colorado College graduate. Formerly Rocky Mountain News staff member. Official in public relations for Great Western Sugar Co. since 1926. Associate and contributing editor of the weekly paper, Rocky Mountain Herald, since 1918; owner since 1942.

Has published four books of poetry: "High Passage," "Westering," "Trial by Time," "New and Selected Poems;" also one book of prose essays, "I Hate Thursday." Winner of a host of poetry awards and honorary degrees.

Wrote ". . . And Perhaps Happiness," play in verse produced at Central City in 1958. Wrote poetic texts for murals in the rotunda of the Colorado Capitol

His poems, "Words for Time," was given symphonic interpretation in 1952 and was performed by the Denver Symphony and chorus of 100 from Colorado University. Repeated in 1954 in Potsdam, N. Y., spring festival; again in 1956 with Ferril reading the poem at Red Rocks Theater on "Wide Wide World" -- the first nationwide TV program to originate in Denver.

Ferril has recorded many of his poems for Library of Congress and for the Voice of America.

[A photograph of Thomas Hornsby Ferril accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 18, 1962, p. 10

Also see: Denver Post, June 4, 1962, p. 15, col. 2

WILL C. FERRIL FAMILY

Brinkley Hornsby was born in North Carolina, August 3, 1801, son of William Hornsby and Esther Ann Falls, daughter of James Falls, who was born in North Carolina, May 15, 1800, one of several children of James Falls by his first marriage, in which tradition says that his wife was Rachel Ferguson. . . . Brinkley Hornsby and Esther Ann Falls were married in Rhea county, Tennessee, January 13, 1828, and to them were born in Tennessee, four sons and three daughters. Esther Ann (Falls) Hornsby died August 13, 1843.

Brinkley Hornsby married a second time in Henry county, Missouri, Mrs. Attilia White Trolinger, a widow of Henry Trolinger, of Virginia, who by her first husband had several children. Her maiden name was Attilia White Cecil, born in Montgomery county, Virginia, February 23, 1808, daughter of Philip and Polly (Wigal) Cecil. . . .

Of this second marriage of Brinkley Hornsby was born one son, who died in his youth. Attilia was the beloved mother who cared for the children of Brinkley Hornsby by his first wife, and also the orphan and motherless children of the Hornsby and Trolinger families, who were given a home at the Hornsby place. She was blind in her old age, living to be about 90 years of age. Her birthday parties at the old Hornsby farm in Johnson county were made prominent events by many friends. She often traveled between Johnson county, Missouri, and Lawrence, Kansas, when sickness in the family needed her attention. The journey was not always an easy one, for there were no railroads in those days. She was a most remarkable woman, and bore out in her part, the excellent traditions of the Cecils of Maryland and Virginia.

Copied from: Rocky Mountain Herald, July 18, 1931, p. 4

"Brinkley Hornsby, a Prophet of Ninety Years ago, and Some Reminiscences" by Will C. Ferril

HAROLD N. FERRIS

Harold N. Ferris, widely known for his civic activities, is retiring as tax accountant for Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co. after 42 years in the telephone business.

A native of Illinois, Ferris went to Grand Junction, Colo., as a young man and started with Mountain States as an installer and repairman there in 1915.

During World War I he served in the U. S. Engineer Corps and graduated from officer training school at Angers, France.

After the war, he resumed his work with Mountain States at Denver in 1919. In 1922 he transferred to Boise, Ida., as state accounting supervisor and returned to the chief accountant's office in Denver two years later.

After temporary assignments in the company's state accounting offices at Phoenix, Ariz., Cheyenne and Helena, Mont., Ferris was named tax accountant in 1943.

He is past president of the Rocky Mountain Telephone Pioneers of America and of the Frederick H. Reid chapter No. 8 of the Pioneers. The organization is made up of employees who have passed 20 years of service with Bell System.

Ferris is a past commander of Leyden-Chiles-Wickersham Post No. 1 of the American Legion, past commander of the Colorado department of the Legion and past chairman of the Legion's Colorado child welfare commission. He has held numerous appointive offices in the Legion on the local, state and national level.

During World war II he was vice president of the veterans advisory council and a director of the USO.

He has been active in many community campaigns for Community Chest, Red Cross and United Fund.

Ferris is a member of the choir of St. John's Episcopal Cathedral and has taken part in many choral and community singing activities. He is also a member of the Masons and the Shrine and is active in the Shrine Chanters organization.

Ferris and his wife, the former Gladys Rice of Denver, live at 1159 Ash St. Their daughter Peggy, Mrs. W. S. Smith, lives in Seattle and their son Robert in Englewood.

[A photograph of Harold N. Ferris accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, September 15, 1957, p. 32C

COL. WENDELL W. FERTIG
Ex-Mindanao Chief Returns to Colorado

Col. Wendell W. Fertig, the Coloradan who commanded the U. S. and Filipino guerrillas on Mindanao Island during World War II, has come home to Colorado after retiring from a 30-year military career.

Colonel Fertig, who from 1947 to 1951 was professor of military science and tactics at Colorado School of Mines in Golden, is now a mining engineer consulting minerals division chief, with Ball Associates, oil, gas and minerals consultants of Denver and Washington, D. C., with offices here in the C. A. Johnson Bldg. He and Mrs. Fertig have bought a home at 4070 Estes St. in Wheat Ridge.

A native of La Junta, Colo., Colonel Fertig attended the University of Colorado, later was graduated from the School of Mines in 1924 with a mining engineering degree.

Upon graduation from Mines, Fertig was commissioned in the U. S. engineer reserves. In 1936 he went to the Philippines as a mining engineer. When war with Japan threatened, he was called into active army service. He was with General MacArthur on Bataan and 10 days before the fall of Corregidor he was flown out to Mindanao, where he organized guerrilla resistance that persisted till the return of MacArthur and the liberation of the islands. There were some 126 U.S. military men and more than 19,000 Filipinos under Colonel Fertig. They kept in touch with U.S. forces by radio and submarine.

After the war, Colonel Fertig was appointed to the Colorado School of Mines position. He was called back to active service in Washington in 1951, as deputy chief of psychological warfare.

In 1954 he was ordered to Formosa with the military aid and assistance group (MAAG) and in 1955 was transferred to Korea as deputy chief of staff with the same group there. He returned to Washington in 1955, was retired as a colonel of engineers. Since then he has been with the Ball Associates firm in Washington and now in Denver.

Colonel Fertig said Friday the members of the Mindanao guerrilla command, officially known as the Philippine Tenth Military District, will hold its first reunion July 25 to 27 at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago, and approximately half of the 126 U.S. members will attend, including some who are coming from the Philippines to be present.

[A photograph of Colonel Fertig accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, July 2, 1956, p. 18

EUGENE FIELD

Field Elects A Mayor Of the Town

By EDWARD RING

Edward Ring, who for more than 40 years has watched the changing colors of life in Denver, continues his story today of interesting characters of the city.

I have mentioned Eugene Field. He came to Denver in 1850 and left here in 1883. He was a wild and unrestrained character in a wild and unrestrained town. It was not until he went to Chicago to become a columnist on the Chicago News, the first, it is said, of the now numerous cult of American columnists, that he began to take himself seriously and to create the works that have put his name among the immortals. Oddly enough, at about the same time Denver itself emerged from its hobble-de-hoy period and began to assume the dignity and sophistication of a city.

A deservedly popular citizen of that day was Wolfe Londoner, proprietor of a palatial grocery store on Arapahoe st. between 16th and 17th sts. The building, I believe, still bears his name. As I pass the Piggly Wiggly and Red and Whites of our day I sometimes recall Wolfe Londoner's sumptuous establishment.

In his Capitol Hill home, as Mr. Londoner sat down to breakfast one morning and opened the newspaper this, on the front page in big capitals and scare lines, was what met his eye:

"Invitation!

"In appreciation of our colored citizens, of whom he is a great admirer, Wolfe Londoner invites every member of that race in Denver to come to his store at 4 o'clock this afternoon, where each will receive a present of a fine watermelon."

It Was Field At His Worst

Mr. Londoner knew what this meant. It was Eugene Field at his worst. For Field was the worst of pests in human shape, that nuisance of nuisances, a practical joker. Wolfe knew that at 4 o'clock every Negro in Denver would be at the store expecting his watermelon. What would happen if the mob were disappointed he could only conjecture. He must act, and act quickly.

Finishing a hasty breakfast, he hurried down to the railroad yards where fortunately three trainloads of melons had just arrived. Wolfe bought them all, thousands of them. Express wagons and delivery trucks were called into requisition and, after a busy day, the store and the sidewalk outside were piled high with watermelons. And sure enough, at 4 o'clock, Arapahoe st. from 16th to 17th st. was a sea of dark faces. The melons were duly distributed, the great day passed in peace and the night was one of feasting and merriment in Denver's Darktown.

That fall, Wolfe Londoner was a candidate for mayor of Denver. On election night the early returns were discouraging. North Denver and East Denver and South Denver reported majorities for his opponent. But later in the evening when the returns arrived from the colored district, there was a landslide for Londoner, which carried him to victory.

Long afterward as he told me the story, Wolfe remarked, "Well, Ed, I may never have cast my bread upon the waters, but I did cast my watermelons on Denver's Ethiopia, and the scriptural promise may be true."

Rocky Mountain News, November 23, 1941, p. 15

MRS. CHARLES A. FINDING

The Story of a Colorado Pioneer

By Evelyn Bradley, Breckenridge High School

(This essay won first prize in our 1924 Essay Contest.

It is written in the first person as though told by Mrs. Finding.)

Early in the year 1859 my father, Marshall Silverthorn, decided to come to Colorado for his health, arriving in Denver May 17, 1859. Improving rapidly in health, he came back to Pennsylvania for his family. With his wife and three children he started for Denver early in March, 1860. We came by train to St. Louis, then by boat to Omaha. We were two weeks on the boat, as we did not travel at night. After a short visit in Council Bluffs we outfitted for the trip. We were six weeks on the plains. We did not travel on Sundays, but devoted this day to washing, cooking, and baking for the following week.

Twice during the trip the Indians were determined that my father should trade my mother for some of their ponies. The last time they were inclined to be rather ugly and father had quite a time with them.

We arrived in Denver May 18, 1860, just a year and a day after my father's first arrival. We rented a house or four rooms situated at Fourteenth and Lawrence. This house was built of rough boards with no paint and most of the windows covered with white muslin. It was called the Denver House, after General Denver. The house was owned by Sam Dolman, who went back to Kansas with his family. We paid $85 a month rent.

Soon some friends of father wanted to board with us -- George Clark of Clark and Grubers, Major Filmore, Judge Hallett and others. With so many, mother had more than she could do and hired a daughter of Old Left Hand, an Indian chief of the Arapahoes.

I remember one day a number of Indians were around the house and mother wanted a small pair of moccasins for my little brother, who had stepped on some prickly pears near the house, hurting his feet very badly. We could not get all the needles picked out. Mother went with the Indians into the dining room, asking me to watch that the Indians outside did not enter and steal anything. I was afraid, so as soon as she had gone, I crawled under the bed and from there watched the open door. Very soon a squaw peeped through the crack in the door and, seeing something handy there, stepped in and put it under her blanket. It was my new sunbonnet, made with casings and pasteboard run in, called slats.

After the trade of sugar and moccasins had taken place and the Indians had gone, I crawled out from my hiding place and said, "Mother, one of the squaws took my sunbonnet."

Catching me by the hand, she replied, "Come out and show me which one." I was frightened but had to go. Mother asked them if they had the bonnet but they denied having it. I pointed out the one who took it; she denied having it; so mother took hold of her elbows, raised them, and the sunbonnet fell out of the folds of her blanket. Mother folded up the slats and boxed the squaw's ears. They all began to cry out. In a few minutes many whites and Indians were gathered there. Our friends cried out, "Oh, don't, Mrs. Silverthorne, we will all be killed." However, the Indians soon quieted down and walked away. They were always stealing everything they could, but their specialties were soap, blueing, and sugar.

In the fall of 1860 I went to school in Denver in a little log, one-room school building which stood on McGaa Street, on the banks of Cherry Creek. Miss Helen Ring was my teacher.

One day a man came down riding on a white horse and tied the horse to a large cottonwood tree just in front of the school house. Miss Ring said, "Children, I am afraid there is going to be trouble, so I will open the window and you crawl out and run home just as quickly as you can."

The man was George Steele, a notorious character, and had ridden to town to make William N. Byers, the editor of the Rocky Mountain News, retract some statements regarding this man Steele's career. This Mr. Byers refused to do. Mother wrapped sister, brother and myself in buffalo robes and put us in the attic so that no stray bullets could touch us, since friends of Steele had gathered close to our home, prepared to fight for him. Afterwards Steele was shot and killed at Bradford's Corner, now known as Larimer and Sixteenth Streets.

About the same time a young man, named Jim Gordan, who, when under the influence of liquor, was very quarrelsome, had killed a young German. After several trials he was acquitted under the flimsy excuse of "No Jurisdiction." This angered the Germans and they took it into their own hands and hung Gordan on a Saturday in July, 1860. I witnessed this hanging.

Nine years later, 1869, I saw Musgrove hung under the Larimer Street bridge. He was a stock thief, a general outlaw.

In the latter part of May, 1861, we started for Georgia Gulch, but stopped at Breckenridge. Here we rented a house that had been a store, owned by O. A. Whittemore and C. P. Elder. There was one very large front room and a smaller room in the back which we used as a bedroom and kitchen. The floor of the kitchen was made of very old sluice boxes that had been worn until the knots stood out, caused by constant washing of water and gravel. As a rule these boxes were burned and the ashes panned for the gold that would collect in the knots and crevices. The front room had a dirt floor with shelves and a counter running along one side. Father took a team and hauled sawdust from an old sawmill above town and covered this dirt floor to the depth of six inches. Mother sewed burlap sacks together and made a carpet. Then father made pins such as are used for fastening tents down and then nailed the burlap down with these. All dust sifted through, so they were easy to keep clean. In this room we made three beds, end to end, on the floor, by placing two logs, one on top of the other. The enclosure was filled with hay, then feather beds that had been brought from Pennsylvania were placed on this. This room was a dining room during the day to accommodate those who came to Breckenridge and had no place to go. The postoffice was in the front part of this room and a pigeon-holed box about three by five feet held all the mail.

Saturday was the general eastern mail day and the miners all came down to get their mail. There were two other arrivals of mail during the week, but Saturday's mail was the principal one. The letters were distributed by calling out the names, the men answered "Here," and the letters were tossed to them. In a few months mother was asked to bake pies to sell the day the men came down for the mail, and on Saturday morning she would bake between forty and fifty pies. These were sold with a quart of milk and paid for in gold dust, which I weighed out. I would take in between thirty and forty dollars.

One summer I was sent down to the Placer Mine to take father's lunch to him. I walked slowly along, picking strawberries and wild flowers, and had been home only a few minutes when one of the men came running up and asked mother if I was home. A large buffalo had come along very angry and had torn up all the sluice boxes and followed my trail up, crossing the river just before he reached town, which was all that saved me.

In the spring of 1862 we bought another house and moved into it. Here I helped father build a fireplace and a cellar. I carried all the stone for the fireplace and brought up the dirt from the cellar in a bucket. We then papered the walls of the house with newspapers.

In the fall of 1863 we went to Denver, that my sister and I might enter school. We bought a home on Arapahoe Street, just where the Tramway cars now come out of the loop. This property we sold to the Tramway Company in 1892.

We attended a private school in the Rectory of old St. John's Church on Fourteenth and Arapahoe Streets, taught by Miss Irene Sopris, who later married Mr. J. S. Brown of Brown Brothers Mercantile Company.

Each year early in June we would drive to Breckenridge, taking about four days for the trip. All provisions had to be hauled from Denver. We would leave for the mountains early in May and would drive to Hamilton. Father returned next day to Denver for more provisions, while we would continue our journey over Boreas Pass, leaving Hamilton about eleven or twelve o'clock at night when it was very frosty in order to walk on the crust of the snow.

In January, 1873, I was married to Chas. A. Finding, and the next year was the last we were compelled to walk over the range. I carried our little baby in my arms, a distance of fifteen miles.

In 1879 my sister married J. C. Wilson, a well known resident of Colorado. Going back in our story to the year 1867, we made a trip east. We took with us an Indian chief's jacket that had a fringe of two hundred and four human scalps. This was to show the Easterners what the Indians were doing out here. No wonder they thought this the "Wild and Wooley West."

At that time the Union Pacific Railroad came only as far as North Platte. Finding the stage coach reservations all engaged, we decided to buy a team of horses. One of the party had a light wagon which we rode in and we had another for provisions and baggage. The Indians were then getting very troublesome. Then authorities at North Platte refused to let us start out unless we promised to drive fast enough to catch up with a company of Infantry. There were eight teams in our party.

We left the road after a while and drove down near the river where a company of soldiers were camped, but two of the wagon loads decided to stay on the road near the bluffs. While eating lunch we heard them cry out "Indians, Indians," and then saw the Indians swoop down and circling around ride away with their horses. We came to the rescue of these people and then all together we hurried on, arriving at Beauvias's Crossing, and camped all night. After supper two soldiers came up and asked mother if she and Miss McCune would go and see two soldiers who had deserted and had been found wounded badly in the bluffs. The searching party had found them and brought them to camp. They were dying and kept calling for their mothers. The boys died at daybreak, happy in the thought that their mothers were with them.

We were taken across North Platte on a ferry, and then we hurried on to catch the soldiers who were camped that night near the river so the Indians could not surround them.

Just before reaching Wisconsin Ranch we saw a stage coming from Denver. On the stage was a young man who had come out to repair some telegraph wires that the Indians had cut. While talking to the driver and this young man, we saw the coach going to Denver coming, and since the road was very narrow, we had to hurry on. We soon heard shots, and turning around, saw the coach coming down the hill just as fast as the horses could travel. The other coach turned around and followed. The young telegraph operator had been killed. They said it seemed as though the Indians came right out of the bluffs. Following this, there was no more trouble with the Indians until after we left the soldiers at Fort Morgan. We camped that night at Stevens Ranch, sixty-five miles from Denver. We put our horses in the barn, thinking they would be safe there, and we slept in the house. About twelve o'clock we heard a shot and saw a light in the barn. There was much excitement in camp. Our captain had given orders that anything moving should be shot. The men on guard crawled along and told the captain something was moving. The captain raised on his elbow and fired. Something jumped into the air; they found it to be an Indian. Upon investigation we found our horses had been stolen. We could see the Indians all along the horizon. A few minutes after this Indian had been killed, we heard the coach from Denver coming. We told them our horses had been stolen and that one Indian had been killed and that we expected an attack at daybreak. Father wrote a telegram asking for help and gave it to the driver to send from the first telegraph station along the way.

When the word reached Fort Morgan the next morning a few soldiers hurried out. Among them was a young brother of General Philip Sheridan who had just graduated from West Point.

We traveled along and reached Living Springs before sundown. A sad company we were, expecting never to see the rising sun again. We had been hardly an hour when we saw in the distance people on horseback and in wagons. They proved to be friends coming from Denver to help us out. Our sadness soon turned to joy. Father broke down and cried brokenly, "I did not know I had so many friends."

We reached Denver safely and had a joyous welcome.

The telegram father had sent is now in the Museum in Denver and may be seen at any time.

The Sand Creek Battle, the Massacre of the Hungate family and the Denver flood, together with the Indian scare in Denver, were outstanding events of 1864 to 1867 which all pioneers well remember.

Old Chief Colorow at one time threatened to kill mother and burn Breckenridge down because she would not cook extra meals for him and his squaws.

One day a team of runaway horses ran over my father, wounding him badly. The Indians heard he had been killed. An Indian chief who was our friend called his tribe together and held their burial services for father. This one old Indian chief would often say to us, "If the Indians go to make war on you, I tell you." Most of the Indians were able to speak in English fairly well.

There are countless more incidents I could tell, but words are limited.

"We all shed a tear for those who were here,
But have gone to the unknown to explore;
But we trust they are blest, and their souls have found rest,
'Neath the shades on the Evergreen Shore."

[A photograph of Mrs. Charles A. Finding accompanies the article.]

The Colorado Magazine, January, 1925, vol. 9, no. 1

EBEN FINE

He's Been Praising Colorado 50 Years

By ROBIN ARNET and RAY WALKER

Boulder, Colo., July 12. -- On the 17th of July, a small frail-looking man of 89 will mount the platform of the Colorado Chautauqua in Boulder, to give a talk on the subject, "Boulder and the Pioneers." The experience will not be novel for Eben Fine -- it will be his 46th consecutive year of appearing on that same platform.

In the past half-century, Eben Fine has delivered over 2,000 lectures in 31 states to more than a million people. He has addressed audiences in 25 state universities and colleges, and in hundreds of high schools across the United States. And in nearly all of these lectures, Fine has talked about the subject nearest his heart -- the wonders of Colorado.

For over 50 years, Eben Fine has been one of Colorado's most effective publicity agents.

Fine bears his 89 years with sprightly humor. His agile, retentive mind recalls without effort the mass events that mark his long life. He never appears to grope for a date, and frequently mentions the very hour of the day an incident occurred 50 or 60 years ago.

Fine came to Boulder in 1886 at age 20 to work in a drug store for $50 a month -- $10 more than he had been making in Holden, Mo., where he was the highest salaried man in town. A boyhood friend with whom he still corresponds is J. C. Penney, who once worked for a business firm in Holden. By 1906, he was able to purchase his own store, "The Temple Drug," located in the old Masonic building at 14th and Pearl in Boulder, the present site of the Walgreen Drug Store.

Fine's career as lecturer started by accident. In 1905, he and his wife had taken a month's trip through Mexico. Mrs. Fine called on her husband to show the pictures he had taken in Mexico to some "friends" and tell about it.

"How many invitations will you send out?" he asked. "About 250," she replied. Eben paled. "But we'll have to hire a hall!" he said. His wife nodded, and Eben Fine was launched on a lecture career that now has lasted 50 years.

One of his talks was heard by the president of the National Druggists' Association, who invited him to address the yearly convention in Dallas.

Among his audience in Dallas were two high officials of the Burlington railroad, who decided that Fine should be on the road for Burlington, stimulating interest in the scenic wonders of Colorado. Fine agreed.

For 15 years, from 1923 to 1938, Eben Fine toured the nation for the Burlington and the Boulder Commerce Assn. -- telling the people of New Orleans about Colorado's glaciers; talking to Nebraskans about the Rocky Mountain National Parks; speaking in Bullock's Department Store in Los Angeles of the "picturesque pine, the coy columbine, the regal blue spruce, and 'silences made to hear.'"

Since 1938, Fine has lectured independently.

So on July 17 Fine will round out 50 years of lecturing.

The Boulder Historical Society wants Fine to be chairman of the Boulder Centennial to be held in 1958. So far, he has refused to accept. "I suspect," he smiles, with wry humor, "that I will be unable to attend because of a previous engagement with the undertaker."

[A photograph of Eben Fine accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, July 12, 1955, p. 44

MRS. A. G. (LIZABETH) FISH
Denver Club Leader Active at 82 Years
By KAY KING

One of Denver's oldest and most honored club leaders is Mrs. A. G. Fish, charter member and founder of many prominent organizations of the city.

Although Mrs. Fish will be observing her eighty-second birthday in October she is still active in the many groups proud to claim her membership.

She began club activity shortly after her arrival in Colorado in the early 1900s, when she organized some of the first Denver county Parent-Teacher clubs in schools where her children attended.

Her love of nature and gardening inspired the founding of the Home Garden club, the first of the local garden clubs, and the Civic Garden club. She is a founder of the group known as the Colorado Service club and organizer of the Past Presidents club.

Mrs. Fish, herself an outstanding journalist, then organized the Denver Press council, a group unique in the west. Borrowing the idea from a similar club in her native Missouri, she has brought together press chairmen from all Denver clubs.

Still lending her journalistic talents to use, Lizabeth Fish is editor of the Garden Quarterly, the official organ of the Colorado Federation of Garden Clubs, and is past editor of the magazines of the Colorado Federation of Women's clubs and Colorado Parent-Teacher. She has published two books of poetry, "Chinook" and "Wild Iris."

She is a member of the Denver Woman's Press club, League of American Pen Women, Poetry Society of Colorado, Colorado Poetry Fellowship. She is past president of the Colorado Federation of Woman's clubs, past president of the Woman's club of Denver, and past director of the state federated clubs. A special honor was awarded her when she was named the outstanding woman of federated clubs and represented Colorado to the national clubs in Atlantic City.

Her background includes graduation from the normal school in St. Louis, Mo. After teaching for ten years, she studied domestic science at Harvard and the University at Harvard and the University of Chicago, then returned to St. Louis to organize the first home economics department in that city.

Her life is still filled with her activities and interests, including her fascination for minerals and science, her delight of entertaining, and her love of nature and gardening.

[A photograph of Mrs. A. G. Fish accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, April 22, 1951, p. 41

MRS. A. G. FISH
Denver Press Council Honors Its Founder

The Denver Press council met yesterday for a luncheon meeting at which the group celebrated the 29th birthday of the club and paid tribute to the founder and first president of the organization, Mrs. A. G. Fish.

Mrs. Fish is one of Denver's oldest and most active club leaders. At 83 she is still to be found working diligently for the various organizations in which she is interested.

Mrs. Fish moved to Denver from Jefferson County in 1913 with her husband and four children. She organized some of the first Denver County Parent-Teacher associations in schools which were attended by her children.

The active club woman also founded the Home Garden Club, first of the local groups of this type, and the Civic Garden Club. She began the Colorado Service Club and organized the Past President's Club and the Colorado Made Goods Club.

At present she is member of the League of American Pen Women, the Denver Women's Press Club, the Woman's Club of Denver and past president of the Colorado Federation of Women's Clubs, honorary president of the Colorado Federation of Garden Clubs and past editor of the Garden Club magazine. A journalist herself, she has published two books of poetry, "Chinook" and "Wild Iris."

A special honor was awarded her several years ago when she was named the outstanding woman of federated clubs and represented Colorado at meetings of the national clubs in Atlantic City.

[A photograph of Mrs. A. G. Fish accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, January 14, 1953, p. 35

ALBERT G. FISH

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B880 D5 E16 F47
WET/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Albert G. Fish, President, Midwest Steel & Iron Works Co., Inc.
25 Larimer Street, Denver, Colorado

Albert G. Fish, born in St. Louis, Missouri, June 1, 1860; son of Orlando and Martha Jane (Goodrich) Fish.

Orlando Fish, born in New York State, about 1828; son of Silas and Susannah (Walden) Fish. Silas Fish, who was a farmer, was born in New York State, and about 1842 moved to a farm near Ravenna, Ohio, in which state he died. Orlando Fish accompanied his parents to Ohio about 1842, and about 1851 moved to St. Louis, Missouri, where he engaged in carpentry, contracting, and building. He died in that city. His wife, Martha Jane (Goodrich) Fish, whom he married in St. Louis, November 24, 1853, was born in Columbus, Ohio, September 9, 1828, and died in St. Louis, March 3, 1916. She was the daughter of John and Clarissa (Andrews) Goodrich.

John Goodrich, father of Martha Jane (Goodrich) Fish, was born in Wethersfield, Connecticut, July 30, 1793. He died in Texas, in 1835. His wife, Clarissa (Andrews) Goodrich, whom he married December 1, 1818, was born at Burlington, Connecticut, December 29, 1800, and died January 19, 1873. She was the daughter of Timothy (II) and Clarissa (Beckwith) Andrews.

Timothy Andrews (II), father of Clarissa (Andrews) Goodrich, and son of Samuel and Mary (Johnson) Andrews, was born in Newington, Connecticut, August 27, 1766. He died at Liberty, Ohio, August 27, 1840. His wife, Clarissa (Beckwith) Andrews, whom he married in 1793, was born in 1760, and died in September 1817. She was the daughter of Deacon Thomas Beckwith.

Samuel Andrews, father of Timothy (II), and son of Timothy (I) and Thankful (Hunn) Andrews, was born in Newington, Connecticut, April 27, 1741. He was a soldier in the French and Indian War, and later in the Revolutionary War. He died at Burlington, Connecticut, in March 1808. He married Mary Johnson.

Timothy Andrews (I), father of Samuel, and son of Joseph and Susannah (Hough) Andrews, was born February 23, 1717. He was disabled in 1755 while serving in the French and Indian War. He died May 30, 1765. His wife, Thankful (Hunn) Andrews, whom he married in Weatherford, Connecticut, September 9, 1736, was the daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Dia) Hunn, of Weatherford, Connecticut.

Joseph Andrews, father of Timothy, and son of Daniel, was born at Farmington, Connecticut, August 10, 1676. His wife, Susannah (Hough) Andrews, whom he married February 10, 1707, was the daughter of Samuel Hough. Daniel Andrews, father of Joseph, and son of John and Mary Andrews, was born at Farmington, Connecticut, May 27, 1649. He became a church member in 1692, and died April 16, 1731. John Andrews, father of Daniel, was one of 84 proprietors of Tunis (later known as Farmington), Connecticut, in 1672. The town of Tunis was declared a free colony by the General Court, May 20, 1658. John Andrews died in 1681. His wife, Mary Andrews, died in 1694.

Albert G. Fish, attended grade and high schools in St. Louis, Missouri, after which he was a machinist's apprentice in that city from 1874 to 1880. He then was employed as a draftsman in an office for patent applications for inventors, and later served in a similar capacity for the Shikle-Harrison & Howard Iron Works, in St. Louis, 2 years. Following that he was employed as an estimator by the Koken Iron Works, of St. Louis, of which firm he subsequently served as secretary until 1899. He then established the Banner Iron Works, in St. Louis, of which company he served as president until 1908, at which time he sold the business and moved to Colorado, where he was employed on a ranch near Golden, 1 year. At the end of that time he purchased control of the Jackson-Richter Iron Works, in Denver, of which firm he became president. In 1920, the business became known as the Midwest Steel & Iron Works Co., Inc. This company, which manufactures structural steel for buildings and bridges, and ornamental iron for stairways, etc., employs approximately 100 persons, and occupies about 30,000 square feet of floor space. They have a branch office in Pueblo, Colorado, and transact most of their business in the Rocky Mountain district. Officers of the company are as follows: Albert G. Fish, president and treasurer; H. J. Lump, vice-president; and W. E. Geer, secretary. Mr. Fish is a member of the finance committee of the Manufacturers & Wholesalers Indemnity Association. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Consistory (32nd degree), and Shrine; Denver Athletic Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Unitarian Church. His hobby is painting.

In 1903, Albert G. Fish married Lisbeth Gladfelter, who was born near St. Louis, Missouri, a short distance from the farm formerly owned by President Ulysses S. Grant. Mrs. Fish was the daughter of Dr. Noah and Elizabeth Gladfelter. Dr. Gladfelter served as a physician in the army in the Civil War, during which he was commissioned a major by President Abraham Lincoln. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fish: (1) Edgar, who died when 10 years of age. (2) Hazel, who died in 1919. She married Joseph Cunningham, and they were the parents of 1 child, Paul. (3) Ruth, who died in 1916. (4) Martha, who resides in Denver, Colorado, with her husband, Burton W. Melcher. They are the parents of 3 children: Frances, Albert, and Burton W., Jr. (5) Esther, who resides in Denver, with her husband, Donald Bear, who is the director of an art museum in that city. They are the parents of 2 children: Donna, and Gretel. (6) Alberta. (7) Theodore, who is dead. (8) Frederick.

MRS. SARAH GOODY FISH

95th Birthday Brings Joy to Pioneer Denver Mother

Came to Colorado by Wagon Team in 1865

By MARILYN HANCOCK

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Red carnations and a birthday cake are holding equal places of honor at 805 Santa Fe dr. today. There Mrs. Sarah Goody Fish, who was 95 on the eve of Mother's Day, is celebrating doubly.

Surrounded by Jackson prints of Colorado given her by the famous early-day Western artist who was her friend, Mrs. Fish was as delighted as a child yesterday with her big birthday cake and blazing candles.

Ill for more than a year, the white-haired little old lady was scarcely able to hold the cake she was eating.

"She has been very sick but is getting better," said her son, F. D. Goody, who lives with her. "Until a year ago last December she was very active, but now she spends most of her time in bed.

"She loves to remember the early days in Colorado when her father was active in mining and building enterprises here," her son said.

Born May 10, 1852, in LaFayette, Ind., she came to Colorado in 1865. "It took the 43 wagon teams three months to cross the prairie," Goody said. "She said the grasshoppers were so thick sometimes the travelers couldn't even see the sun.

"Indians would slow up travel by stealing flour and then spilling it along the trail. When it rained the flour became slippery and hazardous. But she always claimed they had more trouble with the soldiers stealing their cattle for food than with the Indians," said Goody.

"Manitou Springs, Seven Falls and all that country was mother's stamping grounds after her family started a general store in Colorado City," Mr. Goody said.

Her father, John Baker, constructed many of Denver's early-day buildings. It is said he once owned a half interest in Sloan's Lake, which he sold for a flask of whiskey and a load of brick.

"She is one of Denver's earliest pioneers and loves to relive her youthful experiences," Goody said.

Mrs. Fish has one other son, C. B. Goody, also of 805 Santa Fe dr. Another son, Clarence Goody, died in 1933. She has 10 grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

Rocky Mountain News, May 11, 1947, p. 20, picture on page 1

LOUIS E. FISKE
Golfer 'Lou' Fiske Retired Steel Tycoon
By ED OLSEN
Denver Post Staff Writer

In the world of golf, the name of Louis E. Fiske of Denver has been a byword for more than a dozen years.

From Palm Springs to Havana, "Lou" is famous as a year-around player with an excellent game. He plays at Green Gables Country Club, his home course, practically every day the sun shines. In mid-winter he follows the sun south.

For years he's played frequently with such celebrities as Bing Crosby, Jesse Lasky, and former Gov. Dan Thornton, in addition to regular companions at Green Gables like Jess Shwayder and Gus Kohn.

Although he will be 76 next Saturday, Lou Fiske shows no sign of stepping down as a dean of the sport.

Even with snow-white hair, he looks many years younger than his age.

On the golf course Fiske walks every step of the way. He had a wide reputation for his deadly ability to win bets.

Gets Job in City

Golfing has been Fiske's main activity for about 18 years. But before that came a career that took him from newspaper boy, to trick bicycle rider, to a steel empire and financial success that enabled him to retire in 1928, at the age of 48.

Lou was born Jan. 14, 1880, on a farm near Albany, N. Y. He attributes his health and vigor today to the rugged exercise he got on the farm, and has kept up with throughout his life.

At 11, he recalls, his father put him to work building a stone fence around a five-acre plot in the center of the farm. Lou would gather the stones from a nearby hill, load them onto a flat scow and drag them to the fence with a horse. He earned $2.50 a month.

When he was 14, Lou left the farm and went to Albany, 15 miles away, to live with his brother and sister-in-law. He got a job with the Albany News, selling papers at a busy street corner.

Licks 'Every One of Them'

A few weeks after he started, he found the muscles he had developed hauling stones came in handy.

"A gang of boys came around to see me one day, and they told me they wanted that corner," he said.

"Well, I was a pretty tough kid. I told them they couldn't have it. The next couple of weeks I licked every one of them, one at a time."

As soon as he got some money ahead, Lou bought a bicycle and started practicing on it, in the evenings. Before long, he could ride backward, and on one wheel, and standing on his head.

Little knots of people would gather to watch him, Fiske said. One time he tried to get a bigger crowd by riding his bike down the steps of the New York state capitol. A crowd came, all right, but so did the police, and Fiske had to be bailed out by his father.

Joins Fair Show

One time he rode to Hagerstown, Md., where he had read there was a fair.

"I was riding back and forth on a sandy road, doing all kinds of tricks, and the crowd seemed to like it.

"Then a man came up to me and wanted to know where I came from and why I was doing this. I told him, 'Heck, it didn't cost me anything.'"

The stranger suggested that Fiske let him act as manager and try to book him in the fair show. He succeeded, and Fiske got $5 a performance for a whole week's work. The manager got $20 a show.

A representative of the B. F. Goodrich Co. happened to see Lou perform. The company was bringing out a new bicycle tire. He sent Lou out to Akron, O., with a note telling them to put him to work publicizing the tire.

$10 a Day and Expenses

Goodrich sent him around the country to do his bicycle act on main streets and capitol steps, with signs on the bike or on his back plugging the tire. Best of all, they paid him $10 a day plus expenses.

"I didn't know there was that much money in the world," Fiske recalls now.

He must have been a success, because the job stretched on for nearly 10 years.

On a trip to Kansas City, Lou met a girl named Hermine Gladstone, only daughter of a Kansas City cigar manufacturer. They were married two years later, in 1905. Last January they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

During his travels through the south, Fiske said, he was often struck by the fact that iron and steel seemed scarce. He often saw junk dealers traveling from farm to farm collecting old steel.

New Firm is Born

Soon after his marriage, he quit at Goodrich and went to Detroit.

"I had the idea that I'd like to know something about iron and steel, and why everyone was so after it. So I went to a small steel company and told them I had a little money ahead and would like to work for them a few months for nothing, to learn something about the business.

"They gave me $1 a day to cover my expenses for food, and I went to work."

Soon he met a man named Harry Marks, who was also in the steel business. One day Marks suggested they go into business for themselves. Marks had $30,000 and said he would take Fiske's note for an equal amount.

The men put up a warehouse that Fiske said "didn't cost us more than $700," and the firm of Marks & Fiske was born.

'Sitting Pretty With Ford'

In 1913, while the new steel warehousing company was still young, Fiske scored a coup that set them on the way to the big money. He got the Ford Motor Co. as a customer.

He recalled that he had tackled the company several times but the purchasing officers were "the toughest guys in the whole world." But he kept going back, and one day he got an order for 200 tons of 1/4-inch rods.

The only trouble was, Marks & Fiske didn't have the merchandise, and the steel firms were behind on orders.

"I went to Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. in Pittsburgh. I told them I had the order, and showed it to them. I told them I was sick, that if I didn't produce the merchandise I wouldn't be able to show my face again in Detroit."

Finally the J & L official said he would ship the steel in small installments.

"From then on we were sitting pretty with Ford," Fiske said.

Fiske and Marks both became intimates of Edsel Ford. In later years, they went into manufacturing and made, among other things, the cowl and running boards for the Model T.

The two partners sold out in 1928 to a subsidiary of United States Steel Co. Fiske had already acquired considerable property around Detroit, including a large motion picture theater. His principal investments still are in real estate in the Detroit area.

If he had stayed in business a couple more years, Fiske might have been wiped out in the depression. He said his retirement was at the urging of Mrs. Fiske.

Eighteen years ago, Mrs. David Touff, only daughter of the Fiskes, moved to Denver with her husband. The Fiskes commuted between here and Detroit several years on visits, then moved here permanently 12 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Fiske built a contemporary brick-and-glass home, often featured in homemaking magazines, at 750 Pontiac St., four years ago. They are directly across the street from their son-in-law and daughter and their three grandchildren.

On the patio outside the glass wall of his livingroom Fiske has a bicycle of the type he rode at the turn of the century. He still likes to take a turn on it occasionally.

He is a Shriner, a 32d degree Mason and a life member of the Press Club.

On his birthday next Saturday, the Fiskes plan a dinner for a small group of relatives and close friends. If the weather's decent, it's a safe bet Lou will spend part of the day on the links.

[A photograph of Louis E. Fiske accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, January 8, 1956, p. 4AA

MR. AND MRS. BEN FITZGERALD

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fitzgerald of Brighton, Colo., observed their golden wedding with a series of celebrations Dec. 29-31.

The Fitzgeralds were married near Cortez, Colo., on Dec. 27, 1911, and lived in Dolores, Colo., and other towns in the area until moving to Kenilworth, Utah, in 1944. Fitzgerald was employed as a miner. They moved to Brighton in June, 1954.

He has been a route salesman for The Denver Post since 1955.

Mrs. Fitzgerald, who taught school for 40 years, now does substitute teaching.

The Fitzgeralds celebrated their anniversary with a dinner Dec. 29, another dinner for relatives and family friends Dec. 30, and an open house the following day.

They had one son, Benjamin Lee Fitzgerald, a first lieutenant in the U. S. Army who was killed Oct. 6, 1943, in action near Naples, Italy. They also have one grandson.

Denver Post, January 14, 1962, p. 5AA

J. B. FITZPATRICK

A Colorado Pioneer

The funeral of J. B. Fitzpatrick was held in Golden on Thursday. It was the last public recognition of a worthy Colorado pioneer. He was one of the first settlers of Jefferson County. He brought a steam saw mill from St. Joseph, Missouri, and set it up where the Cambria Brick and Tile works now are. He next engaged in quartz mining in Black Hawk, was elected mayor and was a very efficient official. In later years he built the brick flouring mill in Golden.

Mr. Fitzpatrick was born at Kildare, Canada, and was one of the best machinists in the country. Among the honors bestowed upon him were a seat in the territorial council and a membership of the Golden City Government. In every respect he was a model citizen, a public spirited man and is mourned by a large circle of friends. Funeral services were performed by Bishop Machebeuf and full honors of the Catholic Church were rendered to their deceased brother.

Denver Republican, February 4, 1888

DONALD FLETCHER
Fletcher's Wonder Mansion
Panics Could Not Kill the Faith Of Donald Fletcher
Who Built His Fortune on Denver Real Estate
By EDITH EUDORA KOHL

Donald Fletcher was a poor, sickly youth who came to Colorado as a last hope for recovery. He took a light clerical job and lived to build one of the most handsome homes in Denver.

Fletcher built his mansion of rough-carved Colorado stone at 1575 Grant street, the street once known as the nation's gold and silver thoroughfare. It is across the street from the forty-room Kountze home (see issue of May 30, 1948) and now is the property of the Knights of Columbus.

One of the few early-day Denver millionaires not connected with mining, Fletcher made his fortune in real estate.

He opened up the Fletcher addition east of Brown's Bluff. Although there were other plots between the two, history records this as "the second residential subdivision, extending population beyond the Brown addition into those cattle grazing lands with a brickyard here and there."

The Fletcher addition, which lay between Seventh and Eighth avenues and roughly from Marion and Downing to Clarkson streets, became one of the most beautiful residential areas of the metropolis. But it took a long time to sell the people on what Fletcher called "the uplands." This tract, however, was only the beginning of his real estate operations.

In 1882 with Colorado entering upon its second period of growth Fletcher saw his opportunity. With a few dollars capital he opened a small real estate office, got options on cheap vacant tracts and went about boosting Denver as a "future hub of a rich empire." It was Fletcher who turned the tide of settlement to East Denver, then beyond the city limits. In the big building boom of '86 to '90 Fletcher made a huge fortune.

He was elected president of the Denver Chamber of Commerce and of the state board of immigration through which he boosted industry and commerce. At one time he was a heavy stockholder in six manufacturing and seven retail firms in Denver to promote industry here. He helped start Pueblo on its first real growth by laying out subdivisions and enlisting the interest of public spirited men in that city. The famous Mineral Palace erected there was largely due to his influence.

In '89 Fletcher took in a partner, W. D. Todd of the Union bank, and moved his office from Sixteenth and Arapahoe streets to the new Equitable building. Meantime he had started the great structure on Grant street of which, say his biographers, "he was his own architect as he had been of his own career and of city planning."

The house was incomplete when the panic of '93 broke and the skeleton of the towering hulk stood like a ghost of Denver's prosperity. For a time the Fletchers, who had three daughters, lived in a corner of the house.

Harold Kountze Sr., president of the Colorado National bank of Denver, recalls that time. As a youngster in his home across the street he used to watch Fletcher watering the spacious grounds, puttering around the place or just sitting idly at the rear of the house which had created a lot of interest.

"Think you'll ever get it finished?" people would ask as they stopped to look at the frame work of a palace.

"Yes, I think so," Fletcher would reply. "You know Denver is bound to become the hub of this nation!" Panics could not kill the old pioneer faith.

The mansion was finally completed in 1900. Denver newspapers said, "None can surpass its elegance. . . ." "It is a marvel of perfection inside and out . . ."

The house was finished in English oak, mahogany and cherrywood. The floors throughout were of white quarter-sawed oak except that of the library which was of marble. For fire protection and for strength the entire house was double-floored with two inches of concrete in between.

One of the mansion's features was a great art gallery in which hung many costly originals. One of the daughters, Anne Fletcher, who became an artist of note, is reported to have said: "My desire to be an artist was born in the art gallery of my father's home in Denver."

The second-floor bedrooms and master suite were decorated in keeping with the luxury of the rest of the home. The five bathrooms including a huge Turkish bath were finished in Italian marble. On the third floor was what the Fletchers called the hall. This hall was forty-five feet square and equipped to serve as gymnasium, skating rink, theater, ballroom and auditorium.

The skating rink was a source of great pleasure to the three little Fletchers who brought in children of the neighborhood for skating parties. When a ball or amateur theatrical was to be held the gymnasium rings and trapezes hanging from the ceiling hooks were replaced by huge baskets of flowers and clusters of colored lights from the privately installed electric plant.

In one wing of the third floor were the servants' quarters and general-purpose rooms. On the ground floor, beneath the main floor, was the bowling alley and a thirty-foot-long plunge equipped with heating radiators.

Another feature that made this mansion a marvel of its day was the underground heating system (through which steam was tunneled from the barns to the house) which could be made into a cooling system.

Water from an artesian well was pumped into tanks on the tower of the stables for household use. One of the finishing touches of the wonder house was the conservatory walled with plate glass mirrors.

Although Fletcher gradually retrieved much of his lost fortune, he saw no return of such a boom as that of the '80s in Denver real estate. He finally moved to Seattle, Wash.

The mansion was sold to Frank J. Hearne, a noted industrialist and engineer. Hearne was sent here by the Rockefeller-Gould interests to take charge of the Colorado Fuel & Iron corporation, which he reorganized, laying the groundwork for much of its future expansion.

The Hearne family was living at the Brown Palace hotel waiting for the Fletcher house to be put in order when Hearne died unexpectedly.

For some years the mansion remained vacant with only caretakers to keep it up. The city meanwhile grew and spread far beyond the old Fletcher addition.

At one time, it is said, the "wonder palace" was leased as the Tally Ho Dancing academy. In 1919 the Knights of Columbus purchased the property as a club and recreational center. They have occupied it since. The sale price was $52,000, less than the cost of its unusual equipment. During World war II the building was used as a U. S. O. center.

The general arrangement of the house and many of its original features are still as they were when the place was built.

Denver Post, August 8, 1948, Magazine Section, p. 8

JULIA FLINCHPAUGH AND LOUISE WEAVER
Oldest Identical Twins Will Reach 97 Monday Unless Fate Prevents
One Sister Lies Gravely Ill in S. Denver Home
By RICHARD WILBUR

In two days the oldest identical twins in the United States, Mrs. Julia Flinchpaugh and Mrs. Louise Weaver, 901 S. Josephine st., are scheduled to celebrate their 97th birthday. But there are grave chances that one of the "inseparables" may not keep the yearly July 7 appointment.

Mrs. Flinchpaugh, bedridden for the last 10 months, was in a seriously weakened condition yesterday and her daughter, Mrs. Guy Brewster, expressed only hope that her mother would live to see the new birthday which is so close.

Persuaded to relax her vigil at her sister's bedside, Mrs. Weaver took a brief ride yesterday as the first passenger in a friend's new car. The change was a much needed one, according to her daughter, Mrs. Minnie Ackerman, since "every day that Mrs. Flinchpaugh is worse, Mrs. Weaver grows more unhappy."

Both Marry 'Davids'

The twins have been separated for only one sizable span, four years, in their lives. That was when Mrs. Flinchpaugh visited Mrs. Ackerman in Tacoma, Wash.

Both Mrs. Flinchpaugh and Mrs. Weaver married men named David in Macon County, Mo., where they lived after moving from their birthplace in Vevay, Ind. Julia was married in 1865, Louise the following year.

The two Davids, who were both farmers and fought in the Civil War, had not known each other previously, but from the start "they got along like brothers -- in fact, practically as well as twins," said Mrs. Weaver.

Both Pairs Came West

It was such a congenial foursome that when David and Julia Flinchpaugh moved west in 1878 "to grow up with the country," David and Louise Weaver got lonesome and followed the next year. The former couple settled in Buena Vista, the latter in Colorado Springs, and exchanged visits constantly.

For the past 10 years, since the death of their husbands, the twins have been living with Mrs. Flinchpaugh's daughter, Mrs. Guy Brewster, and family at the Josephine st. address.

In school, Mrs. Weaver recalled, she and her sister were so alike that the teacher had to put one nick on her sister's desk and two nicks on her own. It was the only way he could tell them apart. And in recent years, she added, they have been mistaken for each other whenever one has gone marketing alone.

The twins have been a perfect complement to each other in cooking, their favorite pastime for years, since Mrs. Weaver makes a specialty of "substantial" dishes, and Mrs. Flinchpaugh has a flair for dessert delicacies.

With never a quarrel between them, the twins have only one difference in temperament. Mrs. Flinchpaugh has always been quiet and retiring, while Mrs. Weaver is of a livelier nature, particularly fond of travel.

Mrs. Weaver's wish in recent months has been that she and her sister would soon be zooming across country again in a high-powered automobile, as they did six years ago when a friend drove them to Tacoma.

But yesterday her special wish was that they might both reach July 7 safely.

[A photograph of Julia Flinchpaugh and Louise Weaver "as they appeared before the illness of Mrs. Flinchpaugh" accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, July 5, 1941

FLINN FAMILY
Letters Out of the Past
By MRS. DOROTHY BOYD*
of Las Animas

Many wagons were on the trails that led from the States to the Pikes Peak country in the summer of 1859. Most of them traveled west, but a few rolled in the opposite direction; for some men already had become discouraged and were heading "home."

Denver consisted of a few cabins, but it was growing rapidly. Golden City also was growing, with as many as 20 new cabins going up in a single week.

A very good account of the trip across the plains that summer and of life as it was in Denver and Golden during the following winter and spring has come to light in some old letters owned by Myron Flinn of Las Animas.

The letters were written to Mr. Flinn's aunt, Miss Mary Flinn, who was a school teacher in Sycamore, De Kalb County, Ill.

On her death, Nov. 22, 1922, at the age of 81, the letters went to her nephew, Sydney Flinn, who had been too young to go west with the Gold Rush or to serve in the army.

The letters are published here for the first time through the courtesy of Myron Flinn, who was born Nov. 29, 1898, at Cadoa, Colo.

The newly discovered Gold Rush letters were written by Mary's adventurous brothers, by a brother-in-law, Newton Earl, who joined later, and by her good (but bashful, in the fashion of the day) friend, Lewis Dow.

Nebraska Territory, Sixty Miles west of Council Bluffs
June 12th, 1859

Friend Mary: --

We are on the plains of Nebraska, where there are no settlements -- no human habitation except the white covered wagons -- where the wolves, antelope, and foxes make their homes, and the wiley Indian skulks around, through the ravines and watches an opportunity to rob and pilfer the single wagons that leave the larger train.

Mary, I can hardly realize that I am so far from home. Last Sunday I wrote to you when we were camped at Council Bluffs. We have made our way some sixty miles west of the great Missouri river. I really cannot make myself (realize) that week has flown by in that distance.

Yesterday Lewis and I took a tramp over the prairie away from the wagons and although somewhat wearied by the jaunt, we felt well repaid for it by seeing the wonderful and curious works of nature -- as they are manifested in the deep ravine and gulches on the border of a small stream we followed.

Today we have been taking another short ramble and have just returned to the camp, having gathered gooseberries enough to last us two or three days for dessert. This is truly a wonderful country and the heart that could not praise the God of creation as it appears in this Hesperian clime must be a heart insensible to any appreciation of his glorious works.

8 o'clock evening 12th

I wrote the above a little after noon. There are two wagons on their return from Ft. Kearney. They said we could send a letter back to the P. O. on the Missouri river, so I thought I'd finish mine and send it.

Well the first thing I can think of the mosquitoes are quite troublesome, and that there are four of us in the tent, Viz: Saml. H. Folger and myself all writing on the head of the big drum and Newton in another corner with the tenor drum for a desk, so you will see that we are having something of a novel style of writing. The novelty of the scene is heightened when you imagine Jo on the ground telling stories and keeps us laughing half of the time by his drolleries.

There is a train of government wagons loaded with provisions for the U. S. troops at Salt Lake encamped just over the creek from us, forty in number. We shall probably keep along with them as far as Ft. Kearney and conduct them into the Ft. with music. By the way we astonish the natives with the Band music -- they seem to like it and always listen in perfect silence until the music is finished.

Well to tell the truth the mosquitoes are so very troublesome that I can scarcely think what I am writing and I will close. Remember me to Laura and the rest of the folks.

California Gulch
June 10th, 1860

Sister Mary,

I received a few lines from you together with 2 letters from Calista. I was very glad to hear from you all. I hope you will all keep well for I should not like to come back this fall and find you all with a long face for I should think that you did not want to see me.

We are all well at present and hope to remain so. We have quite a large family and it is still increase -- 23 tomorrow we shall have 25 and we shall keep just as many men as have a chance to work if it is 50.

I will send you 2 small pieces of Gold so you can see what I came to this country for. It is snowing quite fast this evening and has been snowing pretty much all day. I don't think of anything more to write this time. Please except this from Ugly Brother
NEWTON

Monday Eve. Sept. 26

We have just been to supper and Dr. Rose is washing the supper dishes (don't laugh) and a bright fire is blazing up in the fireplace and the pine logs crackle and you may depend it looks quite cheerful if 'tis away in the Rocky Mountains.

I was hunting cattle all of the forenoon but this afternoon, with the assistance of a hired hand I took $8.30 in gold from its long hiding place. One nugget weight $2.85 and is a very pretty specimen of the golden mineral. We have taken out a number of smaller nuggets but most of the gold is fine -- from the fineness of flour up to large shot, and occasionally what is called a nugget is found. Many are now leaving the mountains and this leaves but comparatively few at work in the mines at present.

Tuesday Eve -- 27th

I see that my letter is still unfinished and as the Dr. has gone to a political meeting leaving me to "mind the house," I thought to make another attempt to write.

Methinks I hear one mother say "I wonder how the boys spend their evenings." Well, we don't spend them at the grog shops and gambling places but generally find something around home to interest us. Sometimes mending our old clothes, sometimes reading, sometimes the band is playing to edify the miners, and every Saturday night the "Rocky Mountain Debating Club" meet at Mr. J. L. Harrison's cabin. Our next question is: "Resolved, That Conscience is innate."

Well I must draw this scrawl to a terminus for fear that you will be impatient to see the end of it. Believe me as ever your most sincere friend.

LEWIS

Dear Sister Mary

I am carrying the Express from Denver to this place. Am glad Father is pleased with his man this summer I hope he will do well tell him I think by the first of September I can send him some money but wont say for certain.

We have a garden of 2 acres plowed and planted and it is growing fast all kinds of vegetables please write often we shall have Uncle Sams mail by the 1 of July then letters wont cost us much.

Your B
L. L. F.

Denver, K. T.
Sunday Even. candlelight
September 25th 1859

Distant Friend:

I have just returned from a walk. I started about noon in company with E. L. Randall to climb a high mountain where we might survey the beauties of natures works. We reached its summit after about two hours climbing and seated ourselves upon a mammoth pile of rocks that crowned the apex of this mighty upheaval to get breath and rest our weary limbs.

Suddenly we were overtaken by a heavy snowstorm which reminded us that we were about 4 miles from home, and that night was approaching -- consequently we turned with hasty steps homeward where we arrived safely about dark, finding that there had been no snow here but the peaks all around us were mantled with white robes.

I bid you a "good night" wishing you pleasant dreams.

LEWIS

Golden City, July 24, '59

Friend Mary:

You will see by the date this bears that we are in the "Gold Region." Samuel and Newton are off on a prospecting party at Gregory Diggings 25 miles into the mountains.

I am staying to guard camp, milk the cows, and see to things generally around the camp. "Golden City" is 15 miles from Denver City and is the loveliest site for a town or a city that I ever saw. It is enclosed on all sides by high mountains where we can not see the sun rise or set without scaling the cliffs and even then we should have to go 50 miles or more before we could see it set in the west.

"Clear Creek" or more properly St. Vrain Fork, a cold mountain stream comes plunging through the valley with a velocity that makes it very dangerous to ford, especially when the rains are melting snows off the mountains cause it to overflow.

Upon its banks, yes even in the valley where so lately roamed the Cheyenne, Arapahoe, and the Utahs -- where the buffalo, Elk, Bear, Mountain sheep feed in such sweet security, now their bones lie bleaching in the sun and the habitation of the white man, the buzz of the steam saw -- the echoes of the axe and anvil -- and the hum of human voices has driven them to seek their homes farther back in the wild mountains fastness for the Indian and the wild beast will never live in peace where the white man is "Monarch of all he surveys."

July 26, '59

We are fixing to go into the mountains as the prospectors have returned and feel well satisfied with their investigations having made claims for the whole company.

It is said to be very sickly in the mines, 14 having died in two days of the Mountain fever, but so far as I can learn it is wholly owing to imprudent exposure to the cold, damp, and changeable atmosphere. It rains every day and the rainy season will continue until the middle of next month and then it will begin to grow colder until the winter snows set in.

I send you a specimen of P. O. gold that I dug out of the creek only a few rods from camp. It all came out of one pan of dirt and is worth about three cents. It was taken from a sand bar and from the surface -- so you can tell "Americans" that Pikes Peak is not all a humbug.

We have preaching here regularly every Sabbath and just as good as I ever heard anywhere. The meetings are held in a large tent that is used for a store during the week.

Golden City is growing rapidly, 20 houses having been erected within the last week. Samuel, Lewis, and I intend to build us each a house here and there are hundreds that will come from the mountains as soon as winter sets in and put up houses to winter in.

I send you two or three specimens of flowers and would send a cactus blossom but I think it is rather too heavy.

Write often, please do. Love to all reserving a large piece for yourself.

Your friend
LEWIS

Denver City, July 18th, 1859

Friend Mary:

I received your very welcome letter dated June 19 and you may rest assured that I was not long in reading it. We arrived here yesterday noon and the first thing to be done was to look in the P. O.

I looked over a list of advertised letters that covered over one whole side of the building and how my heart jumped when I found my name written with the figure 2 opposite, signifying thereby that there were two letters for me.

The first one I opened was from father with sheets from Laura and Mary enclosed and you can not imagine how very much good it did me to read them, being the first news I had heard direct from home. On opening the next letter the first sheet that I saw was from father, the next was directed to Samuel, the next to Newton and what next? Why last but not least was a little white envelope with my superscription thereupon.

Well "the last shall be first" says I to myself and so I read that letter first and found it signed "Friend Mary." Now Friend Mary's letter was so good that I hope that she will not let this be the last one, because a letter from a friend is the same as a ruby, and can truly be kept and looked upon as a treasure.

The wagons have all gone to Golden City, 15 miles northwest from here. The prospects for gold are now beyond dispute although I am not going to assert anything that I can not bear witness to. The principal diggings are in the gulches in the mountains and new discoveries are being made every few days.

Pike's Peak is not a humbug entirely but it is the thousands that have turned back that are "Hum Bugs" after all. I see specimens of the gold every day and have seen it in the ground here on Cherry Creek today -- but the Cherry Creek diggings have mostly been given up and miners have gone into the mountains.

The mountains present a glorious sight you may depend. With the snow covered summits and deep dark ravines, while the almost perpendicular sides are dotted with pines and evergreens. Denver City is at the mouth of Cherry Creek on the Platte and 8 miles from the foot of the mountains but we have seen the mountains for one hundred and fifty miles back and the view was indeed sublime.

I am seated under a large cottonwood tree and there is a long level flat about one mile in width between this and the Platte river which is skirted with heavy timber. The bluffs gradually ascend for 7 miles and reach the foot of the Mt. then range after range rise up and up until the snowy peaks mingle with the clouds and seem lost in vapor and nothingness.

But I see that I must stop sentimentalizing and draw this epistle to a focus. I am sorry I have not some prettier flowers to send to you but I don't have much luck pressing them. I send one that I happened to have in my valise.

I forgot to tell you that I am cook now and Lewis says I can beat them all making Johnny Cake and light biscuits. Isn't that clever?

It would astonish you to go shopping one of the Denver stores. One of our company yesterday went into a news office to get a copy of the N. Y. Tribune for which he had to pay 50 cents. Flour $20.00 per cwt and other provisions in proportion.

Receive this hasty scrawl with my best wishes for your happiness and well being.

A True Friend

LEWIS

Direct to Denver City, K. T.

[Pictures of George Flinn, Sydney Flinn and the log cabin built north of Golden by George Nelson Flinn, '59er accompany the articles.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 19, 1959, pp. 32, 35, 40 and April 21, 1959, pp. 20, 36, 42

* Mrs. Dorothy Boyd is the wife of Rev. Le Roy Boyd, chaplain at Fort Lyon, Colo. She is a graduate of Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa, where she took her degree in history, an interest which has continued to the present.

She is active in the American Assn. of University Women and is a district officer in the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church. The Boyds have one daughter, Mrs. John E. Rydel of Onawa, Iowa.

Mrs. Boyd was assisted in collecting, documenting and transcribing the Flinn letters by four Las Animas grandchildren of George Nelson Flinn -- Myron, John and Robert Flinn and Mrs. Violette Smith.

MRS. MARY COX FLINT

Six Sons are Pallbearers at Denver Woman's Funeral
Mrs. Mary Cox Flint was Born in Covered Wagon Seventy-Six Years Ago --
Two Daughters Also Survive Pioneer

Immortally happy is Mrs. Mary Cox Flint, knowing she was carried to her grave by six grown sons.

No tears were shed Friday morning by the stalwart pallbearers and the Rev. George F. Sevier, chaplain of the Olinger mortuary, admitted he was at a loss for words with which to describe the remarkable mother's immortal privilege.

Life, from the start, was good to Mrs. Flint, and death, it might be said, was even better.

Seventy-six years ago she was born in a covered wagon, and her childhood was most colorful.

Four Sons Come From Los Angeles

Mrs. Flint died last Tuesday night at an hour when four of her sons -- William M., Virgil, Leslie M. and Lester H. -- were racing to Denver in an automobile from Los Angeles, Calif. The other two sons, Porter Flint of Colorado Springs, and Walter N. Flint of Denver were here at the time of their mother's death.

"I think," the Rev. Sevier said, "I can put my heart close to these six sons this morning, because my mother has gone, too, and life has not quite been the same since she left me."

Two of the sons, Leslie and Lester, the chaplain revealed, are twins, and Mrs. Flint is also survived by two daughters -- Mrs. W. S. Hair of La Junta, and Miss Bertha Flint of Denver.

Mrs. Flint, the daughter of Maj. Sam P. Cox of Kentucky, was born as her father was driving thru Grass Valley, California. Major Cox was a government scout and his work took him back and forth between Missouri and California. He had struck gold in California and had gone back to Missouri for his wife.

His child had beautiful red hair and the Indians with whom the major came in contact thought the girl's hair was real gold and were constantly endeavoring to obtain her. When she was 7 years old, one tribe of Indians attempted to trade her father a number of ponies for the girl, and one Indian Chief followed the major's wagon for over 100 miles.

At the age of 15, the girl was married to William M. Flint of Missouri and after his death, forty-five years ago, she brought her children to Denver. Her second husband died several years ago.

"She was a most true and a most loyal mother," the Rev. Mr. Sevier said, as he glanced at the dry-eyed sons. "And what an aching void is left. Have courage, you men, and know she is happy. I am sure you will agree with me that our Heavenly Father has given us few gifts that are finer than the memory of a true, loyal, devoted mother. She has caressed you, has held you on her knee, has comforted you and what a glory to her to know that it is you, her sons, who place her in her grave."

Death came to Mrs. Flint in her home, 2789 Dunkeld place, after a very brief illness.

Newspaper article, no date or name of paper given.

CHARLES L. FLUKE
Son of Pioneer Local Family Is Honored by Society

Publicity accompanying the 80th convention of the Wisconsin State Horticultural society, tells as follows of honors paid to Charles L. Fluke, son of a pioneer Grand Junction family for "advancing the art and science of horticulture through research and teaching":

Two University of Wisconsin scientists -- Charles L. Fluke, entomologist, and George W. Keitt, plant pathologist -- were honored by the Wisconsin State Horticultural society in Fond du Lac. The society was holding its 80th convention.

The two men came to Wisconsin from distant parts of the country early in their careers to study fruit diseases and pests.

Fluke was born in Grand Junction, Colo., on the western slope of the continental divide. His father was a printer who moved to a small fruit farm near Grand Junction when Charles was a small boy.

Fluke tells that the codling moth was the main pest of apples in that district. And it was natural for him to want to learn more about insect control when he graduated from the agricultural college at Fort Collins in 1916. He came to Wisconsin later that same year and received his Ph.D. in 1928.

Through the years at Wisconsin he has worked out a number of ways to defeat fruit insects. As early as 1918, he studied the pea moth and grasshoppers in Door county. From 1942 to 1946 he was chairman of his department but gave up the work because of illness. He is now back to research on fruit pests.

E. L. Chambers, entomologist of the state department of agriculture presented the certificates in behalf of the society. The award to Fluke read, "The Wisconsin State Horticultural Society recognizes the eminent service of Charles L. Fluke in advancing the art and science of horticulture through research and teaching . . . "

Keitt was nominated for similar honors with the emphasis on plant pathology.

Grand Junction newspaper, November 14, 1948

BARNEY L. FORD
Pioneer Negro Built Inter-Ocean Hotel Here
EDITED by JACK FOSTER
Research by Frances Melrose

One of Denver's most colorful early-day characters is involved in a question this week from Fred M. Mazzulla.

He writes:

"Luella Shaw in 1909 published 'True History on Some of the Pioneers of Colorado.' On page 259 these words appear:

"An old pioneer Negro from Joplin, Mo., built the first smelter and produced the first bullion ever taken out in Colorado, and if he had lived until the present time, he might have been at the head of the smelter trust and had great political honors conferred upon him."

"The quotation appears to be taken from an address by N. S. Hurd, who was president of the Colorado Pioneer Society in 1907.

"Barney L. Ford is listed in the first Denver directory. I am told he was a Negro and that he had extensive mining interests. Do you have any information as to whether there is any connection between the man mentioned in the quotation and Barney L. Ford?"

* * * * *

Dear Mr. Mazzulla: Ford was one of the most interesting of Colorado's early residents, but I can find nothing to indicate he had any smelting interests, or even any success in mining. In fact the contrary seems to be true.

In his History of Colorado, Hall says: "Ford came to Colorado in 1860 and proceeded to Central City. He purchased a placer claim in Gregory Gulch, and after a brief but rather unfortunate experience in mining, he came to Denver and went to work for his board in the old Hemingway House.

* * * * *

Ford crowded several lifetimes into his 80 years. He was born in 1822 and grew up in South Carolina. As a youth, he started driving hogs and mules from Kentucky to Columbus, Ga. Next he served as steward on a cotton boat. Then he worked three years as steward on a Mississippi River passenger steamer.

In 1848 he went to Chicago, where he became a barber. Two years later, he ventured down to Nicaragua, where he bought and managed the United States Hotel at Greytown.

When he finally reached Denver, he bought a vacant lot next to the Hemingway House Hotel and opened a barber shop.

* * * * *

He added a restaurant to the barber shop in November 1861. Hall reports: "Ford was a superior caterer and cook and soon was taking in $250 a day." He later sold the restaurant for $23,400 and returned to Chicago.

Ford suffered financial losses and returned to the West in 1867. His new ventures included the building of the Inter-Ocean Hotel at 16th and Blake sts., which was "the" hotel of Denver until the Windsor was built.

Hall concludes by saying that Ford was the most noted caterer and restaurateur in the Rocky Mountain region, and that he had "an extremely checkered but scrupulously honest career."

[A photograph of the Inter-Ocean Hotel accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 20, 1956, p. 61

BOB FORD
Ford Slain in Creede

Dear J. F.: Recently I was looking through a collection of old-time post cards when I came across one showing a group of people at a burial. It was entitled "Bob Ford's Funeral, Creede, Colo.," and names Ford as the slayer of Jesse James.

Do you have any data in your files concerning this event? I never knew Jesse James' past reached into Colorado.
C. S. Morris

Dear Mr. Morris: Bob Ford, who killed Jesse James, was himself killed in Creede, Colo., on June 8, 1892.

Ford, who was a nephew of James, killed him in cold blood at St. Joseph, Mo., on April 3, 1882.

Ford came to Colorado and eventually reached Creede, where he operated a saloon, dance hall and gambling joint. At the time he was shot he had set up his bar in a large tent.

Several versions of the shooting of Bob Ford have been told. The man who killed him was Edward O'Kelley, town marshal of Bachelor City, not far from Creede.

Ford was an outlaw. He drank heavily, and was generally disliked. And it was not surprising that eventually some one shot him as he had shot James, without warning and with no chance to escape.

The killing took place in Ford's saloon and Kelley used a double barreled shotgun. Walking into the bar, Kelley spoke to Ford and, as he turned, let him have it. He died instantly.

Dr. Nolie Mumey has written about the slaying of Ford in his book "Creede," and about the funeral that was the first one conducted at the camp with all the rites.

The Rocky Mountain News, June 12, 1892, reported the funeral:

"Bob Ford . . . was buried in the graveyard here (Creede). The funeral was largely attended by all classes of people and the services which were held in the Tabernacle were quite impressive.

"Rev. Davis preached a touching sermon. The body was taken to the burying ground followed by seven carriages."

Later the body was removed to Missouri by Ford's wife.

Rocky Mountain News, August 29, 1954, p. 51

MRS. GEORGE FORREST
Picture of Five Generations

Five generations, from great-great-grandmother to laughing great-great-granddaughter are together for a family reunion at the Clifton home of the baby's great-grandmother, Mrs. George Forrest of Clifton. Left to right are Shirlene Dillard and her mother, Mrs. Vernon Dillard, of Dillon, Colo., Mrs. Kenneth Turkle of Palisade, Mrs. George Forrest of Clifton and Mrs. Ida B. Hickman of Lincoln, Kan.

Grand Junction Daily Sentinel, September 2 (3?), 1953

JOHN McEWEN FOSTER, JR.

Date: September 25, 1937

No. 2 B886 D5 E16 F65
MAS/BDK

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

John McEwen Foster, Jr., Physician and Surgeon,
504 Republic Building, Denver, Colorado

John McEwen Foster, Jr., son of Dr. John McEwen, Sr. and Bessie (Bethell) Foster; born in Denver, Colorado, September 6, 1899.

Dr. John McEwen Foster, Sr.*, son of the Hon. Turner Saunders and Harriet (Erwin) Foster; born in Nashville, Tennessee, January 11, 1861. He attended public schools in Nashville; student, Montgomery Bell Academy (Nashville); University of the South (Sewanee, Tennessee); graduate, University of Tennessee College of Medicine (Memphis), M.D., 1891. He later spent several years in Europe, where he took special courses in eye, ear, nose and throat work. He practiced medicine in New Orleans, Louisiana, 5 years, and in 1891, moved to Denver, Colorado, where he has since practiced his profession, specializing in the treatment of eye, ear, nose and throat diseases. His wife, Bessie (Bethell) Foster, whom he married December 29, 1885, was born in Columbia, Tennessee. She died in February 1936, and is buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver. She was the daughter of Capt. William G. and Cynthia (Pillow) Bethell, the former of whom was born in Tennessee. He served as a captain in the Confederate Army, in the War Between the States. He later operated a plantation, and a real estate business, in Memphis, Tennessee, and about 1890, retired, and moved to Colorado. Three children were born to Dr. John McEwen, Sr. and Bessie (Bethell) Foster: (1) William B., born in Denver, Colorado, in 1890. (2) Pinckney Bethell. (3) John McEwen, Jr.

The Hon. Turner Saunders Foster, father of Dr. John McEwen Foster, Sr., was born in 1820. He engaged in the practice of law, and at one time served as a judge. He died in 1898. His wife, Harriet (Erwin) Foster, was the daughter of James and Margaret (Caldwell) Erwin. The Hon. Turner Saunders and Harriet (Erwin) Foster were the parents of 5 children, John McEwen, Sr. being the third child.

John McEwen Foster, Jr., attended grade schools in Denver, Colorado; student, Salisbury (Connecticut) School, 5 years; University of Colorado; graduate, Harvard University Medical School, M. D., 1924; interne, Presbyterian Hospital, in New York City, 2 years. In 1926, he entered the medical profession in Denver, where he specializes in general surgery. Dr. Foster is assistant professor of surgery at the University of Colorado School of Medicine, and a staff member of the General Hospital, St. Joseph's Hospital, Children's Hospital, Mercy Hospital, St. Luke's Hospital, and the Presbyterian Hospital. Dr. Foster is a Republican, and a member of the following: American Medical Association; Colorado State Medical Society; The Medical Society of the City and County of Denver; American College of Surgeons (elected a fellow in 1931); Western Surgical Association (one of 7 members from Denver, having been elected in 1932); Denver Clinical and Pathological Society (secretary); Denver Medical Club; Medical Science Club; Osler Society; Mile High Club; Nu Sigma Nu (fraternity); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church. His hobbies are golf, and swimming.

In 1924, John McEwen Foster, Jr. married Margery Morrison, of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, daughter of Hugh and Claire (?) Morrison. Dr. and Mrs. Foster are the parents of 2 children: (1) Hugh Bethell, born in 1927. (2) Kendall Lee, born in 1929.

* For further data regarding Dr. John McEwen Foster, Sr., see Wilbur Fisk Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1919), vol. 4, p. 58
See: Sketches of Colorado, p. 336

Mrs. Foster - D.A.R. #46126

MR. AND MRS. CLAY D. FRANKFATHER

Mr. and Mrs. Clay D. Frankfather of 115 S. Sherman St. observed their 59th wedding anniversary Thursday.

They were married in Seibert, Colo., Feb. 16, 1902. The couple lived in Seibert until 1945, when they moved to Denver.

Frankfather is a retired carpenter and painter. His wife retired in 1954 after teaching school for 23 years.

Mrs. Frankfather taught at an Osage Indian School, Gray Horse, Okla., when she was 19.

The couple has a son, Dwight of Denver; two grandchildren, and a great-grandchild.

Denver Post, February 19, 1961, p. 16A

GEORGE A. H. FRASER

Biographical data to accompany the portrait of George A. H. Fraser
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: George Albert Holden Fraser, born March 3, 1867 at Bond Head, Ontario, Canada

Name of father: Reverend William Fraser, D.D., a native of Nova Scotia

Name of mother: Maria James (Nicholas) Fraser, a native of Guernsey, Channel Islands

Attended school or college: Barria Collegiate Institute, Ontario, Canada; University of Toronto

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: B.A., University of Toronto, 1889; M.A., University of Toronto, 1890

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Colorado in 1893; to Denver in 1898.

Avocation: Attorney at Law

Give dates: Since 1901

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Member of Montana State Council of Higher Education, 1892, 1893

Give brief incidents of special historical interest:

Tutorial Fellow and Presiding Examiner, University of Toronto, 1889 to 1891; Professor of Classics, College of Montana, 1891 to 1893; Professor of Latin, Colorado College, 1893 to 1898

Partner in law firm of Rogers, Ellis & Johnson since 1907

One of the legal representatives in Colorado of The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company (Assistant Attorney); The Colorado Midland Railway Company (Assistant to General Solicitor); The Colorado Eastern Railroad Company, Pullman Company, Wells Fargo & Company Express, and other corporations.

Professor in University of Denver Law School.

Member of University Club, Interlachen Golf Club, Denver Chamber of Commerce, Zeta Psi Fraternity, Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity

Please give autograph signature: (signed) George A. H. Fraser

See Jerome Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 251

Biography File

DR. M. ETHEL V. FRASER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Dr. M. Ethel V. Fraser
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Margaret Ethel Victoria Fraser, born at Quebec City, Canada

Name of father: Donald Fraser, a native of Canada

Name of mother: Elizabeth Jane Brown Fraser, a native of Canada

Attended school or college: Girls High School, Quebec; Morrin College, Quebec

Give names, dates, honorary degrees: B.A., McGill University, Montreal, 1894; W.D.C.M.
Toronto University, Toronto, 1899

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Denver 1905

Avocation: Travel, golf, swimming

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: City
Physician, Denver; Member, Colorado State Board of Health

Give brief incidents of historical interest: Overseas service with American Women's Hospitals;
Director, Unit No 2, La Ferte-Milon, France; Medaille de Reconnaissance

Please give autograph signature: (signed) M. Ethel V. Fraser

Biography File

MRS. NETTIE S. FREED

Nettie S. Freed is New Superintendent of Schools

In the November election, Mrs. Nettie S. Freed of Pueblo was elected to the office of States Superintendent of Public Instruction. She is well qualified for this office, having served as County Superintendent of Schools in Pueblo county since 1931.

Mrs. Freed came to Colorado when she was two years old and received her elementary and high school education in the Pueblo schools. She received her A.B. degree from the University of Colorado. After teaching one year in Fruita, Colo., where she also served as principal of the Union High school, she returned to Pueblo and taught there in the Centennial High school until her marriage to Charles E. Freed.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Freed took over the Freed Insurance Agency which she managed until 1931 when she was appointed County Superintendent of Schools in Pueblo county, a position she has held ever since. Mrs. Freed is the mother of five children -- three sons and two daughters. Two of her sons served overseas in World War II.

The Pueblo Business and Professional Women's Club is rightfully proud of Mrs. Freed. She has been a member of their club for many years and was its president in 1937-38. Mrs. Freed is now the state chairman of the Education-Vocations committee for the Colorado Federation of B. & P. W. Clubs. The whole Colorado Federation wishes to extend congratulations to Mrs. Freed and to wish every success in the years to come.

[A photograph of Mrs. Nettie S. Freed accompanies the article]

Colorado Business Woman, December 1946

MR. AND MRS. L. L. FREEMAN
Family Reunion is Held at Home of L. L. Freeman
By Mrs. L. L. Freeman

A reunion of much interest to residents of Salida and of Howard took place at the home of L. L. Freeman in Howard on the Fourth and Fifth of July when all of the five sons and one daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Freeman were at home together for the first time in 20 years.

Just before the World War a group picture was made of the parents and six children and the same eight people were again photographed Sunday. A second group picture included also the four daughters-in-law and eight grandchildren who were also present at the reunion.

By automobile, bus and train the family convened, four states being represented by automobile licenses. The total mileage traveled by the party from their home to Howard and return was 38,480 miles, or more than one and a half times the distance around the world at the equator.

While it had been 20 years since the entire family had been together, it had also been years -- in one instance 17 -- since some of the members had seen each other and for some of the daughters-in-law and grandchildren it was their first introduction all around.

Those present at the picnic on Poncha Pass Monday and the reunion Sunday at the old home place in Howard were Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Freeman, who have lived there for 40 years, and the following children and other relatives:

Miss Pearl Freeman of Denver, who is a trained welfare worker there;

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Freeman and three children, Arthur, Ellen and Frank, of New Orleans, La. Mr. Freeman is state auditor with the telephone company and Mrs. Freeman was formerly Edna Wilcox of Salida. She and the children are spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. M. M. Wilcox, at 327 East First st.;

Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Freeman and two children, Wesley and Ramon, of Monterey Park, Calif. He is the manager of an auto service station;

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Freeman and daughter, Beth, of Gretna, La. Mr. Freeman is resident electrician of the Intra-Coastal Canal Lock at Harvey, La.;

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd J. Freeman and two children, Mary Lou and Jimmy, of Medicine Park, Okla. Mr. Freeman is in charge of construction of roads, power plants and power lines for the United States government;

Orville W. Freeman of Long Beach, Calif., where he is connected with Sears Roebuck & Co. His wife and two children, Milton and Orma, were the only members of the immediate family not present at the reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gardner and daughter, Pearl, and son, Stephen, of Center, Colo., also joined the picnic party Monday and many friends and relatives dropped in on the reunion Sunday. Among the relatives were Mrs. Lucille Murray of Salida and Mr. and Mrs. Holman Freeman and family of Breckenridge, Colo.

Many memories were revived, old acquaintances renewed and new friends made. As the various individuals return to their homes they carry memories of a reunion that will never be forgotten.

Salida Daily Mail, July 8, 1937, p. 2

DR. LEONARD FREEMAN

Biographical data to accompany the portrait of Dr. Leonard Freeman
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Leonard Freeman, born December 16, 1860 at Cincinnati, Ohio

Name of father: Zoeth Freeman, a native of Nova Scotia

Name of mother: Ellen Ricker, a native of Ohio

Attended school or college: University of Cincinnati, Graduate 1881, B.S.; Medical College of Ohio, Graduate 1886, M.D.; University of Denver, M.A. 1901

Give names, dates, honorary degrees: Medical studies in Universities of Gottingen, Berlin and Vienna, in 1886-7

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: 1894

Married: (1) Amand Frank, in Cincinnati in 1894 (deceased); (2) Jeanne Wright, in Denver in 1905

Names of children and years of birth: Frank Freeman, born in 1898; Paul Freeman, deceased); Leonard Freeman, Jr., born in 1903

Avocation: Surgeon

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

Surgeon to the Denver General Hospital for many years, also St. Anthony's Hospital

Now Surgeon, Colorado General Hospital (Chief Surgical Service) and to St. Joseph's Hospital. Consulting Surgeon, Jewish National Hospital

Member, International Surgical Association, American Surgical Association, Western Surgical Association, etc.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Leonard Freeman

Also see: Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 83

Biography File

C. M. FRENCH
Being Retired Is Hardest Job Fruita Man of 97 Ever Had; Taught School 50 Years
By GRACE LOWE

The hardest job C. M. French, Fruita, ever had in his life is the job he has now at 97 years of age -- being retired!

Mr. French taught school for 50 years in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, and would still like to teach "if anyone would have me." He now spends his time resting or at his typewriter. He has been a contributor to the "letters to the editor" column of The Daily Sentinel since moving to Fruita.

For years his hobby was embroidery and quilting, but he gave that up a few years ago. He still doesn't wear glasses, but his eyes tire. He took up embroidery in Fruita after watching his granddaughter working on a design at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. R. Dickerson. He even got the "butterfly bug," and did a quilt in that design when in Denver. His choice handwork pieces are now in the hands of relatives, but he has a few with him at the John Kramer home east of Fruita, where he lives.

Mr. French was born in West Point, Ia., (near the penitentiary, he says, but he never went there). He was 97 Aug. 27. He received his education in Washington academy, Washington, Ia., and taught his first school in the backwoods of Iowa -- "a school nobody else wanted." The subjects he liked best were psychology, arithmetic and spelling. He recalls with real enthusiasm the old fashioned spelling entertainments.

The last school he taught was 1928-29 south of Salida in the Poncha Pass area. He came to Colorado in 1899 and taught at the Avon school, near Minturn, frequently walking 10 miles into Minturn after groceries. His longest tenure in the school room was in Alamosa where he spent 14 years. He became interested in the Spanish-American department of the Alamosa schools, and worked with grade school children there for years.

The near-centenarian, has never smoked, used liquor, or tea and coffee. He likes lots of milk and buttermilk. He moved to Fruita to live Aug. 23 from Ogden, Utah, where he had been with another daughter, following the death of his second wife in Denver. Thru the years he had frequently visited in Fruita with the Dickersons. When they lived three miles north of town he walked back and forth frequently rather than ask to be taken to town, Mrs. Dickerson said in recalling that he always walked a lot.

Mr. French has composed one song, "Marching On," which was copyrighted in 1947. The tune came to him in a dream in 1933. As a boy he had also dreamed the tune for a song, but that time let it elude him before getting it down. He doesn't play any instrument, but has studied the rudiments of music. The song has a religious theme -- marching to eternity. Mr. French has been a Seventh Day Adventist as long as he can remember.

He was nine years old at the time of the Civil War -- his father was one of the "black abolitionists" and his mother's father a southerner, which caused no little friction in the household, he recalls. Mr. French, himself, has never yet participated in a war -- always the "wrong age," he says.

He has never been in an airplane, and has no desire to go up. It isn't falling that hurts, he says but "lighting so quick." He owned one car in his lifetime -- a "flivver." He left it out one night and the radiator froze. He sold it and never bought another. He talked over the telephone for the first time in 1890 at Des Moines, Ia. He has attended the motion pictures -- but only a few times, because of religious scruples.

Mr. French's health is good for his age, and he is only slightly hard of hearing. he keeps his dictionary handy to his typewriter because he forgets words. He laughingly says that for years he was never willing to admit he couldn't remember, but has to admit it now!

Mr. French has three daughters, Mrs. Dickerson of Fruita, Mrs. Lola McGillivray, Ogden, Utah, and Mrs. Winnie Mathews of Stoutsville, Mo., but he has 10 grandchildren and four great grandchildren including four grandsons in Mesa county -- Harold Dickerson, Fruita; Glen Dickerson, Fruita; Floyd Dickerson, Grand Junction; and Raymond Kisinger, Appleton.

Grand Junction Daily Sentinel, December 30, 1949

STILLMAN WILLIS FRENCH

Denver, Arapahoe County, Colorado, in 1873 or 4

STILLMAN WILLIS FRENCH, b. 1 July 1845 at Boston, Mass., died 17 Jan. 1934 at Denver, Colo., son of Abner French (b. Apr. 1815 at Landown, N. H., d. Nov. 1884 at Watertown, Mass.), and Harriett Augusta Willis (b. Aug. 1820, d. Mar. 1853 at Watertown, Mass.). She was the daughter of Stillman Willis (b. Mar. 1786, Easton, Mass., d. June 1865, Boston), and Mahala Woods (b. Dec. 1785, Groton, Mass., d. June 1865, Boston). Abner French was son of William French (b. Oct. 1778 at South Hampton, N.H., d. Sandown, N.H.), and Phebe Mitchell (b. 1779).

Stillman Willis French married GRACE ALICE STONE (b. 20 Oct. 1851 at Watertown, Mass., d. 24 Jan. 1835, Denver, Colo); daughter of Capt. Isaac Stone (member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company), (born Mar. 1798, d. Apr. 1861, born, lived and died at Watertown, Mass.), and Elmira C. Atwood who were married 1836 at Bald Hill Cove, now Camden, Me. Elmira Atwood was b. 1811 at Bald Hill Cove, d. Jan. 1853 at Watertown, Mass., daughter of Stevens Atwood (b. 1773 Harwich, Mass., d. 1844 Camden, Me.) and Anna Cole (b. 1770 Eastham, Mass., d. 1848 Camden, Me., m. 1794). Isaac Stone was son of Nathaniel Stone (b. 1760, d. Apr. 1843) and Jerusha Learned (b. Nov. 1765, d. June 1852, m. abt. 1782), both of whom were born, died and married at Watertown, Mass. Nathaniel Stone was a private, Capt. Edward Fuller's Co., Col. Wm. McIntosh's regiment, entered camp Mar. 19, 1779, discharged Apr. 5, 1778, Co. stationed Roxbury, Roll dated Newton, Mass.

STILLMAN WILLIS FRENCH resided at Watertown and Boston where he taught in Commercial School, until in 1873 or 1874 he wished to make a change and started to California, but stopping in Denver, he like it so well that he decided to stay. His education was acquired in general school and two years or so at Harvard College. He came to Colorado by train, engaged there in the real estate business, and was a member of the Rocky Mountain Harvard Club.

CHILDREN OF STILLMAN W. AND GRACE ALICE (STONE) FRENCH were:

- I. Adelaide French, (unmarried), 460 Lafayette St., Denver, Colo.
- II. Franklin G. French, (unmarried), Vernon, California
- III. Richard Whitsitt French, b. Oct. 1880 Denver, Colo., m. (1st) on 1 Apr. 1899 at Denver to Charlotte S. Robbins, now residing in Elizabeth, N. J. Their children:
  - III - 1. Edward Dawson French, b. 8 Mar. 1900, Colo. Spgs., Colo. m. Eleanor Morde in Jan. 1927. Address: 1414 E. Mountain, Glendale, Cal. Their children:
    - III-11 Edward D. Jr., b. Dec. 1927 at Los Angeles
    - III-12 Errol Robert, b. Aug. 1929 at Los Angeles
    - III-13 Richard Lawrence, b. Feb. 1934 at Los Angeles
  - III - 2. Laurence A. French, b. Nov. 1902, Colo. Spgs., Colo. m. Winifred ? Reside in Richmond, Virginia
  - III - 3. Richard W. French, Jr., b. Apr. 1907 at Colo. Spgs, Colo. m. Nov. 19?? to Elizabeth Pond, Reside at Alhambra, Calif.

Richard Whitsitt French m. (2nd) to Georgia Rotermund, residence, Elizabeth, N. J. Child:

- III - 4. Jeanne Elizabeth French, b. Oct. 1921, Oakland, Cal.

IV. Sidney Willis French, b. May 1883 at Denver, Colo., m. Aug. 1930 to Marguerite Wallace at Long Beach, California. Child:

IV - 1. Patricia Elaine French, b. Aug. 1932 at Los Angeles

V. George P. French enlisted for World War at Philadelphia April 1918. Trained at Camp Dix, N. J. 53rd Engineers, June 1918. Sailed for France, stationed at Gievres until return in 1919.

Information by Miss Adelaide French, 460 Lafayette St., Denver, Colo.

REV. DR. WILLIAM S. FRIEDMAN

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Rev. Dr. Friedman
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Rev. Dr. William Sterne Friedman, born October 24, 1869 at Chicago, Illinois

Name of father: Nathan Friedman, a native of Weilburg an der Lahn, Germany

Name of mother: Bertha Sternberg Friedman, a native of Weilburg an der Lahn, Germany

Attended school or college: Cincinnati, Ohio

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: B.A., University of Cincinnati, 1889; Rabbi, 1889, Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati; LL.D., University of Colorado.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: August 1889

Married: Yes, April 29, 1903, at New Orleans

Name of wife: Juliet Freyhan, the daughter of Julius Freyhan and Sarah Wolf

Name of children and years of birth: J. Freyhan Friedman, born January 31, 1904; Pauline - Alma Friedman, born August 2, 1910.

Avocation: Rabbi, Temple Emanuel, Denver

Give dates: Denver 1889 to date

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: President, State Board of Charities and Correction; Vice President, Denver Public Library Commission; Member, State Board Peace Commissioners; Founder, National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives located in Denver; President, Board of Managers, National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives; One of Vice Presidents, National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives; Vice President, Charity Organization Society of Denver 1892-1900; Vice President, Hospital Saturday & Sunday Association and one of the Founders.

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: Conducted funeral service of Rev. Myron W. Reed; one of speakers in Union Thanksgiving Services held every year at Auditorium in Denver.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) W. S. Friedman

See: Sketches of Colorado, p. 396

Biography File

SILAS REDMON FULCHER FAMILY

By ANNA LEE (FULCHER) CLARKSON

I was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, January 3, 1868.

My father, Silas Redmon Fulcher, the pioneer of this article, was born in Boone County, Missouri, April 24, 1824, shortly after Missouri had been admitted as a state.

My mother was born in Schuyler County, Missouri, in 1824. She and my father married August 26, 1844, in Schuyler County. My father was teaming for the Government at the time of the Civil War. They moved from Missouri to Iowa, where they resided until 1872, when they came to Colorado, taking all the family but one with them. Our Uncle Milt Robinson, my mother's brother had already moved to Boulder County, Colorado, from Missouri, and for that reason when my father and family came to Colorado, they came directly to Boulder County, near Valmont, at a place known as "White Rock Mill". The children were Tom, John, Mary, Millard, Ira, Etta, and Anna Lee (myself). Mattie, the oldest remained in the east.

White Rock Mill got its name on account of the great quantities of pure white sandstone hills and boulders all over that section of the country. This mill was a REAL flour mill, and Mr. John Carnahan was the proprietor.

Early in 1873 my father and the two oldest boys, Tom and John left the rest of us at White Rock Mill and set out for the San Luis Valley. They crossed over La Veta Pass, came down to Fort Garland, and from there to where Alamosa now stands, although at that time the little settlement there was called "Wayside".

They came west, up the river from Alamosa about eight or nine miles and took up a hay ranch on the south side of the river. The Hank Dorris family came a few years later and settled on a hay ranch on the North side of the river, directly opposite that of my father's. The family of John Shock came from Central, Missouri, in 1874, settling on the south side of the Rio Grande, just around what was called "Fulcher's" Bend. The Loui Widman family had already settled a little farther west on the river, as had the Johansen's, and these three families, Widman's, Johansen's and Fulcher's were the first pioneers in that particular section in 1873.

My father and the boys, Tom and John and Millard homesteaded four hay ranches in a continuous body of land, and theirs was the original filing on this land from the Government. When they had taken up these ranches, they went up into the hills on the west side of the Valley, over on the Piedra Valley and went up into one of those little draws or gulches and built the first log cabin there in which they lived when they were taking out posts (cedar) and quaking-aspen poles for the fences for these four ranches. (Those cedar posts which were put into the ground in 1873 are still in a good state of preservation after these sixty years of usage. Of course the pole fences are gone and barbed wire has taken their place.) This little gulch was named "Fulcher's gulch", and has carried that name for a number of years until the forest service re-named creeks and gulches. They built three log cabins on the ranches, and these cabins had dirt roofs and dirt floors for several years.

After they had finished the cabin for us to move into, my father and boys came back to Valmont after the rest of the family, the teams and supplies and furniture.

Before he left the Valley that time, father noted that the only flour the people who lived there had to use, (there was quite a scattered community of mexicans living in the Valley then) was a very coarse black stuff that was milled out by sheep and goats tramping it. Now, we didn't have much of this world's goods to take with us, so he loaded up the wagons with thousands of pounds of pure white flour from the White Rock Mill -- and it was real white flour too -- so my mother was the only woman down there who could have nice white bread. We didn't sell any of it either, and it was a good thing, I guess, for there were many times when we had nothing but black coffee and bread for our meals. We had no milk for some months, and when the men would be gone to Del Norte (our nearest postoffice and supply station) for several days at a time, our food would run very low.

We used both oxen and horses for our wagons in making the trip over. Among other things that we brought, though we were not allowed to take much furniture crossing the mountains for once or twice we had to unload and climb a hill and load again, was my mother's carpet loom, and we wove our own carpets and those for our neighbors for years. We made our own soap too, using wood ashes for lye -- this makes a very strong soap, but it gets the dirt. I have helped my father mould bullets many times, we made both the cartridges and large bullets. My father was a great hunter, and in the winter time supplied our table with meat. This reminds me that we had a candle mould too, it was about 24 inches long, and was a twelve candle mould. We used cotton wick, and tallow for the making of the candles, and I have made many dozens during my childhood. The cotton wick is the same as is used these days for the tufted Bed spreads the fancy work departments of the stores are exhibiting so much.

Father engaged in freighting from Pueblo to Del Norte for a few years, and he furnished nearly all the hay for the contracting firm of Carlyle, Orman and Crook when they were building the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad into the Valley. The railroad came to Alamosa in 1879. Hay was worth between $35.00 and $45.00 a ton those days. This was the only way we had of making a living, as all those ranches along the river were hay ranches. We had cattle too later on. Brother Ira was in with father in the hay and freighting business. A hay baler from Fort Garland used to make trips through the country and set up on the ranch and bale up all the hay. Jim Lowery was the man who owned the baler at that time. A family by the name of Kent lived at the Wayside station, kept a little store and the post office in the same building.

When the family came from Missouri they brought with them a very fine mare, a singlefooter; we called her "Old Kit". She stayed with us until she died. When father came back to Valmont after the rest of the family, we had a beautiful black stallion colt, her baby, to fetch along, with the rest of the belongings and possessions. After he was old enough to ride, he became a sort of ferry boat for all the neighborhood. Any number could ride him, and he was sure footed, never making a mis-step when he had the children on his back. Whenever Mrs. Dorris wanted to cross the river, and visit the Fulchers or others on the south side, she would just come out the door and call to us, or put up a signal, and I would put the bridle on Bill and we would ferry Mrs. Dorris over. Or if mother or any of us wanted to go to the Dorrises, Bill was the ferry boat across the Rio Grande.

In 1874, the family of Mancil Garrett moved from Missouri to the San Luis Valley. Now, Mrs. Mancil Garrett was Sarah Ann Fulcher, my father's sister, so that connects the Garretts and the Fulchers. The Garretts were headed for the La Jara, but crossed La Veta Pass and came in by Fort Garland to Wayside (Alamosa) the same as we did. From Alamosa they went south to the La Jara meadows. My father had no idea these people were coming to the Valley, but when he was on one of the trips to Boulder County, one evening he was camped out on the road, probably near the Pass, and after he had unhitched the horses, and made his camp for the night, he discovered he had neighbor campers, although the night was getting dark. He could not see their faces very well, but he imagined he heard a voice he hadn't heard for some years, so he walked over to the other camp to investigate. He found he had actually heard the voice of Mancil Garrett, his brother-in-law, who with his family were enroute to La Jara. He told my mother afterwards, "I just knew that was Manc's voice."

The Robert S. Neeley family, three boys, Perry, Charlie and James, and Jennie came to Alamosa in 1897, some of them settling there, and James after some years, going on up the river to where Monte Vista now stands, and took some land. My brothers sold their holdings on the river to Robt. S. Neeley later on. One brother, T. G., after having experienced a couple of cold winters in Wyoming and Colorado, decided to go back to Missouri, marry and settle down there.

I want to say something about the first school I attended in the Valley. It was in 1878 or 1879, there was a little log school house built across the river from father's place on land that belonged to John Shock. The equipment was primitive, and the second teacher we had was a little on that order too, but the first teacher was a Mr. Marcy, (C. W.) a little, dark complected man of about 35, who boarded with us. We seemed to do pretty well under his teachership, but I was rather young. Then the second teacher we had was Wayne Starbuck; he did the best he could, but his equipment to say the least was pretty slim. The benches were hewn out of logs, and the large desk that we used to have to stand up to write on, was a huge slab of wood fastened up to the side of the wall, like a shelf, on one side of the room and we had to stand up to do what writing we could. The pupils were the three Dorris girls, Kate, Jennie and Hattie (who in later years became Mrs. William H. Adams); the Shocks, Ada, Carrie and Josie, and it seems to me there were two boys in this family, but were perhaps too young to go to school when I did, and then there were Perry and Charlie Neeley, me and two brothers, and part of the time my sister Etta, and the two Rutherford girls. Perry and Charlie Neeley and I used to ride horseback across the river to get to school.

I remember when we came to Colorado, and passed through Denver on our way to Valmont, my first impression of Denver was indeed a very poor one. We had heard so much about it, and my sister and I kept looking out of the back of the covered wagon, and saw only a clump of log buildings we were much disappointed. Of course there were some larger buildings, but we did not see them at first, and our first impression was not much.

In 1876 an event happened that stands out in my memory and that was the first big dance given in the Valley. I have told you that our cabins had dirt floors, but as soon as it was practicable, floors were put in, and we had just put in a new floor in our largest cabin. Whether the dance was given in celebration of the new floor or the fact that Colorado had entered statehood is not clear in my mind, only I know that night I was allowed to dance with anyone who would ask me, and I danced a lot, because I was so small. Well, there were several people at this dance who afterwards became of some importance to the State of Colorado. A young man, rather slight of build, wore a little mustache, and had blue eyes, and a fancier of fine horses although his occupation was cowboy, (he still loves to ride) came over from Alamosa way, and his sweetheart and her sister. That was Billy Adams and the Ottaway girls. Then there was Bert Sanford, I am not sure, but he stole Billie's girl that night. Then from the Piedra side were the Hockers, and Heilmans, and some of the Laricks and McOlloughs. Sigel Heilman was teaching school at that time, but he afterwards became County Superintendent of Rio Grande County. Old man Babe played the violin, and he did his own calling too. Whenever anyone did not make the right change in the square dances, and we danced mostly those then, he would stop playing and go down and straighten out the couple, show them the right change, and then the music would go on. We had other players too, one Lucero from up near Del Norte was a wonderfully fine violinist.

My brothers Tom and John left the Valley, having sold out to the Neeleys, and went to Durango in the early eighties, and a few years later my brother Ira followed and went into the cattle business there. Then he took up a ranch on the La Platta, and finally went into the sheep business over there. My father engaged extensively in the cattle business in the late seventies, and our old brand taken out years ago was the I X L.

I left the Valley in 1884, going to Durango for a couple of years, and then to other towns in the San Juan, coming back to Durango in the nineties. In 1893 I went to Rifle, where, in 1895 I married George E. Clarkson, who was an old settler of Aspen.

Father came to live with me in 1892, after the death of my brother Ira. He lived with me 14 years, until the time of his death, in 1915, at the ripe old age of 91 years. My mother came to me in Rifle in 1896, and stayed two years. She passed away at my sister's home in Durango in March, 1911.

My daughter Dora was born in January, 1898; now lives in the east. After my husband's death in 1923, I came to Denver where I have since resided.

Signed: Anna Lee Fulcher Clarkson

Present Address: 1579 Emerson Street, Denver, Colorado

Interviewed by Laura Manson White, December 18, 1933

I nearly forgot, I would like to add something about the first milk cows we had on the Fulcher place. There was a Sam Bailey of Texas fame, came in there about 1875 with a large herd of Texas Longhorns -- and they were LONGHORNS and no mistake, and poor and scrawney. My father took those cattle, there were about 1500 head of steers and cows, on the shares for five years, that is to say, he got one half the increase of the herd for his pay, for the care of them. The first milk we had was from some of these old cows, and this is the way we got it. My two brothers rode into the corral, one of those high, round pole corrals common to the times. One would rope a cow around the horns, while the other tied the hind legs to keep her from kicking, and my mother milked them!! They would fasten the cow securely to the fence, otherwise mother would not have been safe, and where do you suppose father was? on the top pole of the fence "bossing" the job. It took a good big lariat rope for the horns, because they were indeed wide spread.

I wanted to add this to my statement because I think the pioneer women of that day did their share in keeping things going and in developing the country, and it mostly fell to the women of that time to do the milking. Of course, mother made butter, and had a very primitive churn at first, but when we had a store churn, that was loaned to all the neighboring ranches during the week.

I remember on one trip to Del Norte to market the butter, we went into the old Windsor hotel there, and there was an old colored cook who made some of the nicest doughnuts I had ever tasted and being hungry and having driven about 23 miles, I accepted them and ate plenty. When I got home I told my brother about them and he proceeded to make fun of me because the cook's hands were so black. This bantering had the opposite effect on me this time, and I defended my colored friend against heavy odds, believe me, and they didn't tease me any more about those black hands and he had an idea the doughnuts ought to have been black too.

MRS. A. L. (FULCHER) CLARKSON
Woman Knocks Gun Down and Threatens To Spank Young Thug

In case a point of etiquet on how to meet a stickup man bothers you, it might be well to consult Mrs. A. L. Clarkson, 48 [66], of 1002 South Emerson street.

Mrs. Clarkson has very positive convictions on how such riff-raff should be handled, and she demonstrated Wednesday night that her ideas on the subject are practical.

As she waited for a street car at East Tennessee avenue and South Pearl street, she related to police a young man approached and pushed a gun against her side, demanding money.

First, Mrs. Clarkson knocked the gun from the hands of the aspiring robber, with the firm remark, "I'll not give you my purse, young man."

This little detail out of the way, Mrs. Clarkson then gave the amazed fellow a piece of her mind.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself -- a big, strong fellow like you -- trying to hold up poor women who haven't any money," she said.

"Now you get away from here and get away quick, before I take you over my knee and spank you."

The holdup paused only long enough to snatch his gun from the ground, and then fled.

[A photograph of Mrs. A. L. Fulcher accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, January 19, 1934

[The following note accompanies the clipping:

State Historical Society,

Dr. Hafen:

This is the same Mrs. Clarkson, whose interview is in Rio Grande County, under Fulcher. I have changed the age in the above article, and I thought perhaps you would want to place it in those files.

L. C. M. White]

DOUGLAS E. FULLER

Pioneer, 92, Relives Old Days in Film

A Wyoming rancher who knew the West of nearly 100 years ago, sat through a previewing Sunday of "How the West Was Won" and declared the great cinerama production "the next best thing to being there."

"It sure was a dinger," said Douglas E. Fuller, "Best danged show I ever saw in my life."

Fuller was in Denver celebrating his 92nd birthday anniversary, and visiting his two daughters, Mrs. Richard Sullivan, 2565 Dexter St., and Mrs. Alica Hammans of Evergreen, Colo.

With his son, Robert Fuller, the veteran rancher operates a cattle spread in the Copper Mountains near Shoshoni, Wyo. He settled there prior to the turn of the century.

Fuller was particularly impressed by the horsemanship of men who handled the lines on six-horse teams in the cinerama production.

"Looked pretty authentic to me," he said. "Those fellows driving those teams and riding the horses sure knew their business. I think that fellow driving the stagecoach mebbe was doing a better job than I could do. He was pretty good."

Denver Post, March 12, 1963, p. 33

WILFRED FULLERTON

Date: January 29, 1938

No. 2 B992 D5 E16 F160
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Wilfred Fullerton, President, Fairmount Cemetery Association
515 Security Building, Denver, Colorado

Wilfred Fullerton, son of William and Clara L. (Oyler) Fullerton; born in Denver, Colorado, June 15, 1888.

William Fullerton*, son of James and Jane (Paul) Fullerton, was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, August, 22, 1841. During the Civil War, he served as sergeant in Co. D, 8th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was wounded at the Battle of Gaine's Mill (Virginia). In the fall of 1866, he moved to Gilpin County, Colorado, where he served as an agent for a New York gold mining company. In addition to acquiring various mining interests in Gilpin County, he operated a store at Blackhawk, and was a custom miller. In 1867, in partnership with Job V. Kimber, he built his first stamp mill at Blackhawk, and later served as manager of the Gunnell Gold Mining Co. He subsequently sold his interest in the company, and moved to Denver, Colorado, where, in 1914, he became president of the Fairmount Cemetery Association. He died February 25, 1920, and is buried in Fairmount Cemetery. His widow, Clara L. (Oyler) Fullerton, whom he married in 1879, was born in Springfield, Illinois, and resides in Denver. Her father, Thomas J. Oyler, was an early settler and miner at Blackhawk, Colorado. Five children were born to William and Clara L. (Oyler) Fullerton: (1) Elizabeth. (2) Kate**. (3) Janet. (4) Wilfred. (5) Paul.

Wilfred Fullerton, attended grade and high schools in Denver, and graduated from the Colorado School of Mines, E. M., in 1912. He was employed as a mining engineer by the Standard Chemical Co., of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, from 1912 to 1917, after which he entered the U. S. Army for service in the World War. He served overseas as a 2nd lieutenant in the 115th Engineers, and surveyed the cemetery for Belleau Wood, France. He was an instructor in the chemical department of the A. E. F. headquarters. He was honorably discharged at Ft. Warren, Wyoming, in July 1919. Since November 1930, he has been president of the Fairmount Cemetery Association, which was organized in 1890 by Donald Fletcher, who served as its first president. Fairmount Cemetery contains 560 acres of land. Its present mausoleum, the construction of which was begun in 1929 and finished in 1931, originally contained 1,957 crypts, to which are now being added 1,600 more. There are two chapels, each of which have a seating capacity of approximately 200 persons.

Mr. Fullerton, who is independent in politics, is a member of the following: Albert Pike Lodge No. 117, A.F. and A.M. (worshipful master, 1928), Chapter, R. A. M. (high priest, 1933, and present grand master of the second veil, Colorado Grand Chapter), Commandery, and Consistory; Denver Chamber of Commerce; Royal Arcanum; Denver Athletic Club (a life member); American Legion; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His favorite recreation is fishing. Mr. Fullerton is not married.

* For further data regarding William Fullerton, see Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 391.

** For further data regarding Kate Fullerton, see Denver Post, March 17, 1943, p. 10.

OTTO FULSCHER

Fulscher, Man of Year in Livestock

Otto Fulscher, 85, Holyoke, Colo., rancher, has been named "Man of the Year in Livestock" by the Record Stockman.

Fulscher is the 18th rancher to receive the annual award for "outstanding contributions to the livestock industry."

Presentation of the award to Fulscher, a producer of registered Hereford cattle since 1903, will be made at the Jan. 18 evening performance of the National Western Stock Show.

The trade paper hails Fulscher as one of the nation's master breeders of Herefords.

Two Hereford bulls are credited with helping Fulscher attain a position of prominence in the cattle industry. They were Beau Aster, bought as an 8-month-old calf from Mousel Bros., Cambridge, Neb., and Prince Domino, which he acquired in 1915 as a 6-months-old calf from the Gudgeon and Simpson herd at Independence, Mo.

Fulscher was born Dec. 11, 1875, in Holstein, Germany. He came to the United States at the age of 5, and when he was 10 settled with his family in Sedgwick County, a few miles from the present Fulscher ranch near Holyoke.

He married Carrie Lammers April 25, 1900. They celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary last April. They have six children -- Harold, Denver; Mrs. Hertha McKague, Salt Lake City; Mrs. Clara Duvall, Long Beach, Calif.; Mrs. Florence Tool, Muskegon, Mich.; Mrs. Vivienne Mountain, Milwaukee, Wis.; and Max, who is an active partner in the ranch at Holyoke; 17 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

Denver Post, January 4, 1961, p. 32

ARTHUR J. FYNN

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Arthur J. Fynn
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full Name: Arthur John Fynn, born November 21, 1857, at Salisbury Center, New York

Name of father: Michael Fynn, a native of Galway, Ireland

Name of mother: Mary (Barnes) Fynn, a native of Salisbury Center, New York.

Attended school or college: Village Schools, Salisbury Center, New York; Fairfield Seminary, Fairfield, New York; Tufts College; University of Colorado; University of Denver

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Tufts College, A.B. 1884, A.M. 1887; University of Colorado, Ph.D., 1899; University of Denver, Litt.D., 1914 (Honorary)

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Central City, Colorado, 1889; to Alamosa, 1891; to Denver, 1899

Name of wife: (1) Miss Mary MacDonald, the daughter of John MacDonald of Woodville, New York, died March 1922. (2) Miss Rose Curry, the daughter of Chas. M. Curry and Eliza Hope Curry, married August 8, 1924 at Denver, Colorado.

Children: None

Avocation: Writing. Lecturing on historical, ethnological and literary subjects.

Author.

Books:

1. "The American Indian as a product of environment," 1907.
2. "North America in days of discovery," 1922.
3. Chapter on Indians in the History of Colorado published by The State Historical Society, edited by James H. Baker.

Songs:

1. "The Mohawk" dedicated to the New York Society of Colorado.
2. "Brother Jonathan leaves home" - a World war song, 1917.
3. "Where the columbines grow" adopted by the State legislature as official State song, 1915.
4. Numerous poems.

Lecturer.

Before educational, literary and industrial organizations
Normal Institutes, Schools, Tourist groups (Overland Park)
Historical and philosophical Societies

Responsible positions:

Principal, High School, Central City and Alamosa. Principal, Twenty-Fourth St.; Gilpin; Longfellow; Technical, Valverde in Denver.

Instructor in ethnology and literature in extension classes of Denver University, 1903-1924.

Member of party sent by the Archaeological Institute of America to excavate Mesa Verde in 1907.

Vice President and Director (15 years) of State Historical Society.

Curator of State Historical Society, 1923-24.

President - Denver Teachers Club, 1904-1905.

President - Denver Philosophical Society, 1908-1909.

Vice President - Columbine Day Association.

Member of: State Schoolmasters' Club; Scholia; Chamber of Commerce; Knights Templar; Eastern Star; Universalist Church.

While a student at Tufts College, Mr. Fynn made the acquaintance of many poets of that time living in or near Boston, among them being Longfellow, Lowell, Holmes, Whittier, etc. He treasured volumes of their poems which they not only autographed but occasionally inscribed with Stanzas from their well known poems, such as Lowell's "But oh, my country touched by thee" and Holmes "If I should live to be", etc. from "The Last Leaf." Mr. Fynn made the initial movement which resulted in the passage by the Legislature of the bill making the teaching of Colorado history compulsory in the Schools of the State.

(Stamped) A. J. Fynn

Biography File

THOMAS J. GALLAHER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Thomas J. Gallaher
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Thomas Jones Gallaher, AM, M.D., born March 17, 1867, at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Name of father: Thomas Jones Gallaher, Sr., M.D., a native of Pennsylvania

Name of mother: Eliza Jane Lutton, a native of Baltimore, Maryland

Attended school or college: Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania High School; Elder's Ridge Academy, Penn. Washington and Jefferson

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Washington, Penn., 1886-A.M.; University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, 1889-M.D.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: 1894

Avocation: Music, Geology, Astronomy

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: In 1889 served as Special Surgeon for Pennsylvania Railroad for 5 months following the Johnstown flood, with headquarters at Conemaugh, having charge of the different camps of the workmen, during the reconstruction of Johnstown and the rehabilitation of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

Fellow of the American College of Surgeons; Professor of University of Denver Medical Department, Laryngology, Rhinology and Otology, 1902; Member of Active Staff of St. Luke's Hospital filling different executive positions, 1900-1928; Member of Staff of Children's Hospital. Member of the following: Denver Medical Society; Colorado State Medical Society; American Medical Association; Society of L. R. & O.; Academy of Otolaryngology; Denver Club.

Please give autograph signature: (Signed) Thos. J. Gallaher

Biography File

JOHN AUGUSTIN GALLAHER

Date: October 9, 1937

No. 2 B898 D5 E16 F94
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

John Augustin Gallaher, Attorney
Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

John Augustin Gallaher*, born in Savannah, Georgia, May 29, 1873; son of John and Beatrice A. (McGloine) Gallaher.

John Gallaher, born in Ireland, in 1838; son of John, Sr., who brought his family to America in 1848, settling in Savannah, Georgia. John Gallaher, who came with his parents to America in 1848, resided in Savannah, Georgia, until his death, which occurred in 1886. He was a merchant. His wife, Beatrice A. (McGloine) Gallaher, daughter of James McGloine, was born in Savannah, Georgia, in 1846. She died in Georgia in 1900. John and Beatrice A. (McGloine) Gallaher were the parents of 5 children, 4 of whom were sons, John Augustin being the 2nd child.

John Augustin Gallaher, attended grade and high schools in Savannah, Georgia; and graduated from the University of Denver, B. C. S., 1910. He moved to Denver, Colorado, in October 1902, and entered the law office of Wolcott, Vaile & Waterman, where he read law. Since his admission to the bar in 1913, he has practiced his profession in Denver. He specializes in railroad commerce law for the Denver & Rio Grande Western R. R. Co., and serves as commerce counsel for the entire system. Mr. Gallaher, who was a member of the faculty of the University of Denver School of Commerce, several years, has been a director of the Community Chest, many years. He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: City Club; Hotel Greeters Home Association (chairman, board of trustees); Alpha Kappa Psi (fraternity); Knights of Columbus; State Historical Society of Colorado (life member); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

On June 14, 1899, Mr. Gallaher married Mary Marjorie Dooner, who was born in Savannah, Georgia, daughter of William H. and Rosa A. (Gay) Dooner. Mr. and Mrs. Gallaher were the parents of 2 children: (1) Marjorie, who was born June 9, 1904. She is now at home. (2) Horace Augustin, who died when 2 years of age.

* For further date regarding John Augustin Gallaher, see Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 250.

MRS. ANNA GAJEFSKI

Mrs. Anna Gajefski, Resident of Denver Since 1888, is Dead

Mrs. Anna Gajefski, 79, of 702 Canosa court, a resident of Colorado since 1888, died Friday noon of pneumonia after a year's illness.

A native of Germany, she came to the United States in 1882. For thirty-nine years she and her husband, Michael, a retired farmer, lived at the Canosa court address.

Surviving, in addition to her husband, are five daughters, Mrs. Thomas Farrell, Mrs. John Schurn, Mrs. Merle George and Miss Clara Gajefski, all of Los Angeles, and Mrs. George Huff of Nashville, Tenn.; ten grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday by the Theodore Hackethal mortuary. Burial will be in Mount Olivet cemetery.

[A photograph of Mrs. Anna Gajefski accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, December 29, 1940

GEORGE H. GALLUP

Date: November 6, 1937

No. 2 B918 D5 E16 F113
MAS/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

George H. Gallup, President, George H. Gallup Realty Investment Co.
211 Midland Savings Building, Denver, Colorado

George H(ittle) Gallup, born in Greensburg, Indiana, April 30, 1880; son of James Henry and Amelia Sefton (Hittle) Gallup.

James Henry Gallup*, born in Tiffin, or Norwalk, Ohio, March 13, 1839; son of William and Sarah (Boalt) Gallup, who were born in 1795, and January 6, 1800, respectively. James Henry Gallup attended school in Tiffin, Ohio. He learned the watchmaker's trade, and later took a course in optical work under the direction of Dr. Julius King, of Chicago. In September 1861, he enlisted in Co. G. 55th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry for service in the Civil War. He served successively as a private, 3rd sergeant, 1st sergeant, sergeant major, 1st lieutenant, and adjutant, and as captain of Co. E. He participated in many major battles, including the Battle of Gettysburg, in which he was wounded. He served nearly 4 years. After receiving his honorable discharge, he went to Louisiana, after which he settled in Greensburg, Indiana, where he was an optometrist, a jeweler, and a watchmaker., 1866-90. In 1890, he moved to Denver, Colo., where he purchased the Geneva Optical Co., and engaged in the optical business the remainder of his life, his business being located in the Gas and Electric Building. Since his death, which occurred April 23, 1918, his daughters have operated the business under the name, James H. Gallup's Daughters. He was a member of the following: American Optometric Association (served as secretary); Colorado Association of Optometrists; Denver Chamber of Commerce (charter member); I. O. O. F.; Loyal Legion; and Central Presbyterian Church (was member, board of trustees). His wife, Amelia Sefton (Hittle) Gallup, daughter of James P. and Anna (Sefton) Hittle, was born in Greensburg, Indiana. She died in 1921. Her father, James P. Hittle, married, 2nd, Cynthia Jamison, of Greensburg, Indiana. James Henry and Amelia Sefton (Hittle) Gallup, who are buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver, were the parents of 3 children: (1) Pearl. (2) Edith. (3) George Hittle.

George H. Gallup, attended the public schools of Greensburg, Indiana; graduate, East Denver High School, in 1898; student, Wallace Business College, in Denver. He was employed as cashier by the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co., 10 years (1898-1908), following which he entered the real estate business independently, organizing in 1908, the firm, George H. Gallup & Co., dealers in business property. His business originally was located in the International Trust Building, in Denver, and since December 1926, has been located in the Midland Savings Building. It is now known as the George H. Gallup Realty Investment Co. Mr. Gallup is a director of the Denver Realty Associates, which is a group composed of 18 of the oldest firms in Denver. This group was organized December 28, 1916, the first president being L. F. Effley. Mr. Gallup is independent in politics, and is a member of the following: National Association of Real Estate Boards; Denver Real Estate Exchange (president, 1925); Denver Chamber of Commerce (a past director); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Central Presbyterian Church (member and past president, board of trustees). His hobbies are golf, horseback riding, swimming and motoring.

In June, 1908, Mr. Gallup married Charlotte McClellan, daughter of William C. and Elizabeth Annette (Strong) McClellan, who were residents of Denver. William C. McClellan carried mail from Denver to Leadville, several years. Mrs. Gallup's ancestral cousin, Gen. George B. McClellan, was a general in the Civil War. Mr. and Mrs. Gallup are the parents of 1 child, Charlotte Elizabeth Gallup, who was born in 1912. She graduated from the University of Colorado, in 1935, and was a student of Columbia University.

* For further data regarding James Henry Gallup, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 5, p. 590

REV. JOSEPH S. GARCIA

Trinidad Priest Recalls His Godfather - Kit Carson

By TOM GAVIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Trinidad, March 9 --In Mt. San Rafael Hospital, high on a wooded hill overlooking the valley of the river called Purgatory, lives a tiny man of god.

He is listed in the Official Catholic directory as the Rev. Joseph S. Garcia. One name among thousands in a thick volume

He is listed, too, in slightly different form, on another document--a baptismal certificate issued 97 years ago in Taos, N. M., by Our Lady of Guadalupe Church.

Carson Recalled

Jose Samuel Garcia, the certificate says, son of Estevan de la Cruz Garcia and Maria Manuela Sanchez, was born in Taos on the 28th day of October, 1859, and was baptized according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church 11 days later.

Standing at the baptismal font as the infant Jose's godparents, the certificate adds, were Christopher Carson and Maria Josepha Jaramiel, Carson's wife.

"Kit Carson was a big man, with a long beard," Father Garcia recalls.

"He gave me $20 for a present when I was baptized. My parents must have kept it with their other money under a stone in the fireplace. No one could steal it. They kept a fire there, and anybody who tried to lift the stone would have burned his hands."

Although he is nearly 100 years old and has been a priest only 10 years less than Colorado has been a state, there is little of the Old West pioneer about Father Garcia.

No Indian War

Conscious, perhaps, that his Spanish ancestors had settled the area in which he was born before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth--before, even, the founding of the first Virginia colony--Father Garcia recounts no wild tales of Indian warfare when remembering his youth.

"There were Indians," he says. "They farmed near my father's house in Taos, by the river. They brought grain to my father's mill for grinding.

"The Indians still hunted, too, and made very fine blankets. We traded with them, gave them whisky."

"They liked it," he added, with a smile, when the propriety of giving whisky to Indians was questioned.

Indians were often close to the then-young priest's first parishes at Pina Blanca, on the Rio Grande, and San Luis--the site of Colorado's first church.

In 1882, as a young man of 23, Jose Garcia enrolled at Niagara University in upstate New York to undertake the study of philosophy. Two years later, at the urging of the Most Rev. J. B. Lamy, first archbishop of Santa Fe, he entered the Grand Seminaire in Montreal.

"I worked my way through the seminary, planting onions in the garden of the priests and unloading coal cars. I worked plenty."

Being pastor of San Luis for 29 years beginning in 1891 meant keeping cattle, sheep and other livestock as well as administering to the parish's spiritual needs.

It also meant traveling between the smaller towns of Chama, San Pedro, Ft. Garland and San Acacio--"missions" where masses were celebrated, too, and children baptized and young couples married.

Those trips were made, in nearly every sort of weather, in a horse-drawn buggy and-- much later--in a Model T Ford. Parts of two states, and two dioceses, were embraced by Father Garcia's large sphere of religious influence.

"After more than 30 years, they still remember and love him at San Luis," a young friend of the old padre says, "Whenever I take him back for a visit, the priests ring the church bells and a huge crowd of people collect to kiss his hand and ask his blessing."

Still a healthy man, he rises daily, dons the vestments of his vocation and celebrates the votive mass of the Blessed Mother.

Although little given to numerical speculation himself, younger priests estimate he has offered more than 25,000 masses during his long life.

Father Jose Samuel Garcia, son of Estevan de la Cruz Garcia, smiled broadly as a young friend, rising to depart, said "see you later, alligator."

"After while, crocodile," he replied.

[A photograph of Rev. Jose S. Garcia accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, March 10, 1957, p. 30

REV. JOSEPH SAMUEL GARCIA

Priest in Trinidad Is Oldest in U.S.

By WES FRENCH

Rocky Mountain News Religion Editor

Trinidad, Colo., Oct. 22 --In the silence of an immaculate hospital room here a handful of persons knelt to receive a special blessing.

It came from the lips and the heart of a tiny priest who will be 101 on Friday--the oldest living priest in the U. S.

The Rev. Joseph Samuel Garcia is living out his years, now in their second century, at Mt. San Rafael Hospital in the loving care of the nuns and nurses.

He served Mt. San Rafael as chaplain for 21 years until his retirement in 1955.

Father Garcia's life could have come from a story book of the old Southwest.

Help To Writer

Indeed, his life and his memories were a big help to Willa Cather when she wrote "Death Comes for the Archbishop," the famous novel based on the lives of Archbishop Lamy and Bishop Machebeuf.

Miss Cather interviewed Father Garcia, who was born in Taos, N. M., and has spent most of his life in Northern New Mexico and Southern Colorado.

Still vivid in Father Garcia's memory is Kit Carson, who stood near the baptismal font at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Taos as the infant Jose Garcia's godfather.

Godmother was Carson's wife, Maria. Carson was a prominent figure in the southwest as Father Garcia grew up.

"He gave me $20 as a baptismal present," Father Garcia said. "Probably my parents kept it under a stone in the fireplace with the rest of their money. A fire burned there most of the time and no one could steal the money without burning their hands."

Father Garcia was born on Oct. 28, 1859, at Taos, the son of Estevan de la Cruz Garcia and Maria Manuela Sanchez. He remembers the many Indians who lived nearby.

Indian Trade

"They were farmers and brought their grain to my father's mill," he said. "They also were good hunters and we traded for the pelts."

Filled with a desire to serve God and the church in the frontier Southwest, the 23-year-old student set out in 1882 for Niagara University in upstate New York.

When he finished his studies there Archbishop Lamy urged him to attend the Grand Seminaire in Montreal.

He was ordained to holy orders in 1887 and returned to his beloved New Mexico where he served at Pina Blanca for a year.

Much of his work at Pina Blanca was among the Pueblo Indians. He then moved to Costilla, N. M., a year later moving across the Colorado border.

His 32 years at Precious Blood parish in San Luis have not been forgotten by the older generations throughout the valley. Anyone from the hospital here who visits in the San Luis area these days is asked how Father Garcia is getting along.

Proven Formula

From his earliest days as a priest comes Father Garcia's habit of rising and retiring with the sun.

Asked the traditional question about the recipe for a long life, Father Garcia answered: "Work hard--put your trust in God."

One of Father Garcia's fondest memories over his 73 years as a Jesuit priest is the day in 1957 when he was honored at a special mass and given the Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice award from Pope Pius XII.

Today Father Garcia is cared for by almost constant companions, Sister Stephan Ann and Joseph Ortega, his male nurse.

Up until two years ago Father Garcia said mass daily, but has had to discontinue because of the infirmities of old age.

Last year he finally had to give up reading, but he still looks forward to receiving The Rocky Mountain News each morning, looking at the pictures and having someone read to him.

Although Father Garcia's birthday won't actually come until Friday, he was pleased by the cake and candles provided a week early so he could have his picture taken.

His alert eyes followed the photographer around the room and he broke into a broad smile each time the flash went off.

Camera Fan

"He loves to have his picture taken," said Sister Bernard Marie, sister superior at the hospital.

His birthday Friday will be a quiet one--on doctor's orders. The Rev. Ralph Woodward, hospital chaplain, will say mass in the hospital chapel and there will be a private dinner later. Father Garcia's guests will be a few old time priest friends and possibly some relatives.

He has nieces and nephews in Denver, Albuquerque and San Luis and looks forward to their visits with great pleasure.

[A photograph of Rev. Joseph Samuel Garcia, with Joseph Ortega and Sister Stephan Ann, accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, October 23, 1960, p. 6

JAMES FRANK GARDNER AND FRANKTOWN

By J. F. Gardner, Jr.*

My father, James Frank Gardner, one of the pioneers of Colorado, was born November 2, 1833, on a farm near Attica, New York. He lived with his parents on the farm until he was 22 years old, then decided to try his fortune in the "West."

So in 1856, with Colonel John B. Folsom, grandfather of Mrs. Grover Cleveland, and William B. Beck, brother of the late Senator Beck of Kentucky, father set out for the Territory of Nebraska. They traveled by rail to Des Moines, and then by wagon to Council Bluffs (at that time called Kanessville) and on to Omaha. Here he met William N. Byers and was employed by him to do some surveying up the Platte and Elkhorn rivers, north and west of Omaha. He completed this survey in four or five months and returned to Omaha. Father then took up some land near a town called Tekannah, where he lived for three years, serving one or two terms as city clerk of that town.

In 1858 father became excited about the glowing news of "gold" in the far West. He furnished a Mr. Lowery with two yoke of oxen, wagons, and provisions to make the trip across the plains and learn what he could about the gold excitement. Mr. Lowery wrote back such glowing accounts of the West and the fortunes to be had for the asking that father prepared at once to follow him.

On March 15, 1859, in the company of William B. Beck and George M. Chilcotte, he set out by ox-team for Denver. They made the trip from Omaha, over the plains, in two months, arriving in Denver May 15, 1859. Before starting west, Mr. Beck and father had made a machine with which to dredge the gold. They now took this up Clear Creek and prepared to make their fortune in short order. But disappointment lay in store for them; the machine would not work. Then father contracted typhoid fever and was taken to Denver, where he was seriously ill throughout the months of September and October, 1859. After his recovery in November he decided to abandon the elusive fortunes to be had in the gold fields, and to try other labor. He accepted a position in a saw-mill in Douglas County operated by Mr. Thomas Bayaud. He worked here until June 15, 1860, when he bought a team of oxen and a wagon, and started hauling lumber from the mill into Denver. He followed this line of work for almost a year.

Father now took up a squatter's claim on Cherry Creek. He called it the California Ranch, but it soon came to be called "Frank's Town" in honor of father. It is present Franktown, Colorado. In 1863 he sold this ranch to Mr. Bracker. (It is now owned by Mr. Thomas Christensen of Castle Rock.) He then, in partnership with George M. Chilcotte, bought a shingle mill, hauled it to Douglas County, and made and hauled shingles to Denver. After a few months Mr. Chilcotte sold out his interest to father, and moved to Pueblo, Colorado.

About this time the Indians became very troublesome and dangerous. The men who worked at the mill and their families had a camp about one-half mile from the mill. One day father was alone at the mill, getting out a load of shingles to fill a contract, when a roving band of Indians sighted him and yelling, dashed out from the timber to surround the mill. However, the men at the mill perceived his plight and came to the rescue, doubtless saving his life. There were about sixty men and fifteen or twenty women in the camp. Father now felt that his men were not safe, so he moved them to the California Ranch, where they built a stockade around the ranch house by standing logs on end about three or four feet in the ground and extending eight or ten feet above the ground. While they were camped here, he went out in the timber toward the mill to look after their horses, fearing the Indians would drive them away. He saw a man running toward him, pursued by a band of Indians. Father took the fellow up on his horse, turned about and started at full gallop for the stockade. The Indians chased them to within one-half mile of the stockade, then started back. Father did not find his horses but, no doubt, saved a life.

While camped at the California Ranch from August until November the men organized a military company and chose father as commander. In November Colonel Shoup asked father to bring his company to Denver. He made the proposition that if my father would enlist his men into a regiment, those that wanted to stay and protect their homes could do so, and the rest could go on to the war. He enlisted the men as requested, and they moved to Camp Wheeler, now known as Lincoln Park. His regiment stayed at this camp 100 days, when they were mustered out in December, 1864.

When Douglas County was organized in 1861, Franktown, named for the Hon. J. Frank Gardner (my father) was made the county seat. Father was the county's first treasurer, made so by appointment, and the following year was elected treasurer of the county, in which capacity he served until 1866. He was elected to represent his county in the legislature, serving from 1869 to 1873. He served as State Senator, 1879-81 and again from 1889 to 1893. He then served another term in the house, 1897-99.

Father was always a staunch Republican. He was loved by all who knew him, Democrats and Republicans alike. When he was campaigning for his party he never said an unkind word of his Democratic friends, and of course in those days one so prominent in the affairs of the county and state knew nearly everyone in them. During his term as Senator he took part in the election of seven U. S. Senators. Often times when I was a boy at home I can remember seeing the following men in father's house: H. M. Teller, C. S. Thomas, E. O. Wolcott, T. W. Patterson, Alva Adams and D. H. Moffat, talking over the affairs of state. I could name many others but these six are still remembered by most of us. While father was in the legislature he served as chairman on a number of committees and as member of others. At the time of his retirement he was next to the oldest in point of service in the Senate

On January 13, 1867, father married my mother, then Miss Helen J. Knox, who came to Colorado in 1866 with her mother. She lived in Douglas County the rest of her life. She often visited the family of Mr. Delano, who in 1868 was elected mayor of Denver. On one of these visits she met General Grant, who was a guest at the Delano home. She and Miss Delano, then girls about fourteen or fifteen years of age, had the honor of making the hot biscuits for the dinner at which General Grant was a guest, a fact of which my mother was always very proud.

Mother and father had four daughters and one son.

I have often heard my father speak of Chief Ouray and Chief Colorow, whom he always considered among his best friends. I often saw them in his store at Franktown when I was a very small lad. On one of General Grant's visits here he met and gave Chief Ouray a silver mug with the initial "O" engraved on it. Later, Chief Ouray gave this mug to my father as a token of true friendship. This mug, which I prize highly, is now on display with the State Historical Society. I have also a resolution from the Fifteenth General Assembly of Colorado and one from the Democratic County Convention, also letters from the late U. S. Senator E. O. Wolcott, which I prize very much.

These things I have written constitute just the highlights of my father's life lived in our beautiful state of Colorado.

* Mr. Gardner, son of the pioneer, lives in Denver today. --Ed.

[A photograph of Joseph Frank Gardner accompanies the article.]

Colorado Magazine, September 1937, pp. 187-190

MR. AND MRS. JOHN GARRAMONE

Mr. and Mrs. John Garramone, 4751 Zuni St., lifetime residents of Denver, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Dec. 18 with a reception for about 200 friends and relatives at the Knights of Pythias Hall.

They were married Dec. 18, 1910, in the Mt. Carmel Catholic Church. Garramone owns the Zuni Greenhouses next to his residence, but retired three years ago from active operation of the business.

Denver Post, January 8, 1961, p. 4AAA

THE GASKILL FAMILY

Daughter Recalls Man Who Opened Berthoud Pass

The daughter of the man who pushed the first road over Berthoud Pass can't quite get over the fact that a year-round highway now spans the route to Middle Park.

She is Mrs. Bertha Gaskill Gilbo of 1147 California st., daughter of Capt. L. D. Q. Gaskill. Captain Gaskill, a Civil War veteran, left his professorship of mathematics at a New York college in 1868 to come to Colorado with a group of mining men.

They made some money on gold and promptly lost it. Captain Gaskill then undertook the task of opening a wagon road across the pass.

No Bulldozers Then

"Dear me, to think what a bulldozer would have meant to them!" Mrs. Gilbo fluttered. "All they had was their hands and shovels and plows, and it took years to make the road."

The Gaskills lived, while the road was a-building, in Summit House--a 10-room log cabin atop the pass. Their cabin was frequently entirely covered by snow, which they had to tunnel through to start their trips to Empire or Georgetown for provisions.

The Utes always camped near their cabin when crossing the range. Mrs. Gilbo remembers them as "friendly, but great beggars." The friendship paid off, however--when the Utes went on the warpath and massacred Tabernash settlers, they passed their friends the Gaskills by.

Remove to Fraser

In 1885, when Mrs. Gilbo was 10 years old, the family moved to a ranch near Fraser. They were the second family into the area.

Her proudest recollection of the period is her success in making a riding animal out of a calf. She broke it, and either rode it side-saddle or hitched it to a sled.

She and her two sisters, who have since died, received all their education at the hands of their parents.

There were no other children around Summit House, and few near Fraser. The big social event of the week at Fraser was the day the mail came in. All the settlers would get their letters, then converge on the Gaskill ranch for a day and night of dancing and merrymaking.

Mrs. Gilbo stayed in Fraser till six years ago, operating first the ranch, then a restaurant. She then moved to Denver, where she is active in the Territorial Daughters and other old-time clubs.

[A photograph of Mrs. B. G. Gilbo accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, July 31, 1951, p. 16

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES CASSIUS GATES

Mr., Mrs. Gates to Note Anniversary

By DOROTHY JANE BURKE

Rocky Mountain News Society Editor

The memory of 50 years will be brought to mind Monday for one of Denver's leading industrial families . . . a memory which encompasses Denver's growth, the development of one of the nation's leading businesses, and, more important, one of its finest families.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cassius Gates will observe their golden wedding anniversary in their winter home, Kalani-Lua, at Diamond Head, Honolulu, Hawaii.

The couple was married in Denver in the Plymouth Congregational Church, then at E. 14th ave. and Lafayette st., April 4, 1910. Their family now numbers a son, four daughters, nine grandsons and seven granddaughters. Another son, Harry Fisher Gates, died in 1955, and a daughter, Ruth Gates Lorton, died in 1936.

Mrs. Gates is the former Hazel Rhoads, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisher Rhoads. She was born in Denver and was graduated from Wolfe Hall School for Girls.

Her father was an early-day Denver hardware merchant who was born in Berks County, Pa., and came to Denver in 1879. He died in 1940.

Her mother was Addie Mellon of the Pennsylvania Mellons. She was born in Schuylkill Haven, Pa., and died in 1937.

Mrs. Gates has two brothers, Bert Lee Rhoads, a building contractor, of Houston, Tex., and the celebrated dean of American press photographers, Harry Mellon Rhoads, now in his 60th year with The Rocky Mountain News.

Charles C. Gates, president of Gates Rubber Co., was born in Waterford, Mich. He attended Michigan University and was graduated from Michigan College of Mines as a mining engineer.

He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Gates of Waterford. His mother was Ruth Ann Voorheis of Waterford.

His brother, John Gideon Gates, is secretary-treasurer of the Denver-based rubber firm.

The company that grew to sixth in size among U. S. rubber manufacturers, was started by Charles as the Colorado Tire and Leather Co. in 1911 and later incorporated as the Gates Rubber Co.

The Gates' son, Charles Cassius Gates Jr., now executive vice president of the company, and the late Harry Fisher Gates, moved into the company management following their education.

Charles Jr. married June Duney Swaner of Salt Lake City, and Harry, Mitten Howell of Denver.

The Gates' daughters have married. Ruth, now deceased, was married to William F. Lorton. Hazel is married to James A. Woodruff Jr. They live in Cherry Hills. LeBurta, who is married to Alexander S. Atherton, lives in Honolulu. Charla, nicknamed Sparkie, is the wife of Brown W. Cannon of Denver. And Berenice, nicknamed Niece, lives with her husband, Paul Loughridge, in Newport Beach, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Gates maintain homes in Denver, Honolulu, and at Chateau Gates, summer home show place at Evergreen.

Their grandchildren are James A. Woodruff III, Thomas Scott Woodruff and Hazel Gates Woodruff, all of Cherry Hills; Frank Atherton, LeBurta Gates Atherton and Marjorie Atherton, all of Honolulu; Brown W. Cannon Jr., Charles Gates Cannon, Reynolds Gates Cannon, John Swaner Gates, Harry Fisher Gates Jr., Diane Gates and Valerie Mitten Gates, all of Denver; Paul Loughridge Jr., Charla Loughbridge and Sandra Loughridge, all of Newport Beach, Calif.

[Family pictures accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 3, 1960, p. 60

CHARLES CASSIUS GATES
1877-1961

On Tuesday, August 29, Charles Cassius Gates, president and founder of the Company which bears his name, passed away at his home in Denver at the age of 83. He died of a heart attack after several months of illness.

Memorial services were held on Thursday, August 31, followed by entombment in Fairmount Mausoleum.

Friends from all parts of the nation as well as employees of the organization which he founded and helped build over the past 50 years shared in the sorrow and grief at his passing.

The son of Gideon B. and Ruth Ann Gates, Charles C. Gates was born in Waterford, Mich., on Nov. 26, 1877. He attended schools in Oakland and Waterford; the Business University in Detroit; and the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor before obtaining his degree in mining engineering at Michigan College of Mining and Technology at Houghton, Mich., in 1904. He was graduated with top honors scoring some of the highest marks at the school of mining up to that time.

After serving as a mining engineer for seven years in the West, he and Mrs. Gates (Hazel LaDora Rhoads of Denver, whom he married in 1910) purchased the Colorado Tire & Leather Company. This was a small firm, manufacturing the "Durable Tread," a steel-studded leather tread which could be fastened over the tire of that day for added mileage. It was the same firm which, under Mr. Gates' competent leadership throughout the past 50 years, grew to sixth largest rubber manufacturing firm in the nation, distributing its products to 90 nations of the world.

Mr. Gates was a member of various Masonic organizations, the Denver Country Club and Tower Club; an honorary member of the Rotary Clubs of Denver and Honolulu, and two engineering and mining fraternities--Tau Beta Pi and Sigma Rho.

Surviving him, in addition to his widow, is his brother, John, secretary-treasurer of the company, who worked side by side with the president-founder throughout the past 50 years; a son, Charles C. Gates, Jr., Denver, who succeeds him in general management as president of the Company; four daughters--Mrs. Alexander S. Atherton of Honolulu; Mrs. Paul Loughridge, Jr., of Newport Beach, Calif.; Mrs. James A. Woodruff, and Mrs. Brown W. Cannon of Denver--and 16 grandchildren.

The Gates Employees Progress News, October, 1961, p. 2

CHARLES C. GATES, JR.
C. C. Gates, Jr. Elected President of Company

Charles C. Gates, Jr., vice president since 1949 and executive vice president since 1958, was recently elected president of The Gates Rubber Company by the Board of Directors. Announcement of his election was made at a meeting of the Board of Management shortly after the death of his father, the founder and president of the Company for the past 50 years.

In accepting the new responsibility, Mr. Gates announced that there would be no change in Company policy. It would be his goal, and the Company's goal, he said, "to carry on and to build constructively on the 50 years' efforts of those who have gone before us."

As part of his acceptance, Mr. Gates paid tribute to the concepts, ideals and objectives proved by his father over the years and reminded everyone that he, too, accepted these same principles and hoped to carry on toward the same constructive objectives.

Mr. Gates started the Company in 1946 after three years' experience in New Orleans with the Copolymer Corporation, a synthetic rubber manufacturing plant, where he served as assistant chief engineer. He then came to work for Gates in Denver in the Engineering department where he served until 1949, when he was named vice president.

During the next 12 years, he worked steadily at the executive level, increasing his knowledge and experience of Company operations. Working closely with the Board of Management, he developed full acceptance as a business leader. His abilities "at the helm" were soon recognized and respected not only within the organization but also outside by those with whom the Company does business and by other business leaders in the community. He was made executive vice president in 1958--the position he has held until his recent election as president.

Born in Morrison, Colo., on May 27, 1921, Mr. Gates received his education in Denver and at Ponahou School in Honolulu. He attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1939 to 1941 and then transferred to Stanford University at Palo Alto where he received his bachelor's degree in engineering in 1943. He went to work with Copolymer immediately after graduation.

At Stanford, Mr. Gates met Miss June Swanner of Salt Lake City, and they were married Nov. 26, 1943. They have two children--Diane, 7, and Johnny, 4. They live at 444 So. University Blvd. in Denver.

In addition to his constant attention to management work with the Company, Mr. Gates has been active in civic affairs in Denver. He is former trustee of the University of Denver; has served as a member of the Executive Council, Boy Scouts of America; a member of the executive council of the Mile High United Fund; a member of the Denver Executive Club, the Denver Club and the Denver Country Club; and a director of the Colorado State Chamber of Commerce.

He is a member of the Board of Directors of the American Red Cross, the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad and the Robinson Brick and Tile Co. He is an ardent fisherman, a big game hunter and a private pilot.

Mr. Gates assumes the presidency after years of direct instruction and guidance from his father, the founder and successful helmsman of the organization for the past 50 years. During recent years, Mr. Gates, Sr., typical of his skill in planning far ahead, had purposely directed, as a gradual process, more and more management responsibility to Mr. Gates, Jr. During the past few years, he has been increasingly active in assuming responsibility at the helm.

As a result, the transition has been a gradual and an orderly one, and this has been another instance in which the forward planning and visionary direction of the former president and founder brings its benefits to employees, customers and friends within the community at large.

The Gates Employees Progress News, October, 1961, p. 7

PETER GEARY
A Town Comes of Age

In the days of Colorado's birth, every pioneer town aspired to a cemetery, as final proof that it was a full-fledged, organized metropolis. Empire came by hers Sept. 20, 1864--because of a dog.

A "quiet, inoffensive Irishman named Peter Geary" apparently had been at loggerheads with a rather rough fellow named G. V. Hunter, who owned oxen. A feud arose after Hunter shot Geary's dog, claiming that the dog had bothered his oxen.

When Geary retaliated by shooting Hunter's dog, Hunter decided to do things on a grander scale. He shot Geary dead in the street, and Empire had the first official resident of its civic cemetery.

The pictured tombstone reads:

PETER GEARY
Shot by G. V. Hunter
Sept. 20, 1864.
AGED 35 Years.

[A photograph of the tombstone accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, October 12, 1959, p. 16

MRS. WILLARD (OLGA OSTWALD) GEDDES

Colorado Clubwoman Tells 'Inside Story' of Her Life

The "success story" of a prominent local woman is always of interest to local readers in its own right, but it isn't often that such an article also contains an "inside story" that might easily be written up someday into an adventure thriller.

As president of the Colorado Coordinating Council of Women's organizations Mrs. Willard Geddes of Denver heads a federation of thirteen state organizations, representing a membership of about 100,000 women.

As a Russian-born American, who found out at the age of 30 that she had been brought into this country illegally and under an assumed name, Mrs. Geddes has a story to tell of government suspicion of her as an alien, and of the difficult time she had in getting her United States citizenship papers.

Mrs. Geddes was born in Russia on July 20, 1906, and was named Olga Ostwald after the Grand Duchess Olga of Russia, whose birthday was the same day.

Everything Fine Until --

Her mother brought her to the United States when she was two years old, and she grew up in Fort Collins, attending public schools and college there.

Then she came to Denver, where she held several insurance jobs and worked for three years in the bureau of internal revenue before her marriage in 1936.

Everything was just fine until 1937 when her mother died, and in the property probation processes that followed she discovered that she had been brought into the United States illegally, under an assumed name, and though she had been voting continuously and had even held a political job, she wasn't even an American citizen.

"I'd been slightly suspicious that there was something wrong for a while, because my mother had been just a little evasive about telling me how we came to America," Mrs. Geddes said. "But I never thought I wasn't a citizen."

"I finally got the real story from my grandmother--and since she was frightened of what had been done and hadn't told anyone for so many years, I'm still not sure I have all the facts.

"As it happened, my mother ran away from my father in Russia when she was 19, and came to the United States posing as the wife of a man whose own wife and child had died the night before, using their papers.

"When we got to New York, the man went his own way and my mother and I came to Pueblo. Here, we always went under our real names and I grew up never knowing that I wasn't a citizen. And the people we knew just assumed we were citizens."

To The Authorities

When she discovered the truth, Mrs. Geddes immediately went to the proper authorities with her story, and as she says, "It was lucky I did--because in the period that followed the only thing that saved me from being deported to Mexico was their belief that I was an innocent bystander in the whole business and that I had been unaware anything was wrong."

At first, Mrs. Geddes says, the department of naturalization didn't know what to do with her, since she was in the country illegally.

There was talk of deporting her to Mexico and having her wait to re-enter under the Mexican quota.

"But there were difficulties in that direction," says Mrs. Geddes, "because I was married and was expecting a baby at the time.

"Finally, because of the facts that I was here, that I had lived continually in Fort Collins and in Denver and had obviously never left this country, I was allowed to remain."

Classified As Alien

Her difficulties weren't over, however, since she still was classed as a registered alien and had to apply for citizenship papers.

She first filed for citizenship in 1938, and in 1940 took an oral examination. Six months later, in front of the court, she took another oral examination and then made her allegiance to the United States.

"Believe me, they really gave me the works in those examinations," says Mrs. Geddes. "I guess since I'd lived here practically all my life they expected me to know more than the average person applying."

The climax came when she received her final papers on Nov. 13, 1941 -- less than a month before the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7 and war was declared.

"Of course, Russia was our ally in the war so it probably wouldn't have made too much difference --but then again . . ."

One thing that Mrs. Geddes' citizenship experiences have done for her, she says, has been to make her intensely interested in politics.

Purpose Political

The main purpose of the Colorado Coordinating Council, for instance, is political in that it tries to encourage more capable women ("and underline that capable") to take an interest in politics, to run for office and to take appointments on boards and committees.

"We don't do much outside of making recommendations for appointments," says Mrs. Geddes. "We're a no pressure group and don't intend to be--I think our weight comes from being ladies . . ."

Member groups of the council are the American Association of University Women, Colorado Association of Deans of Women, National Council of Jewish Women, Colorado Dietetics association, Colorado Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Colorado Federation of Women's Clubs, Colorado Home Demonstration Council, Colorado Home Economics association, Delta Kappa Gamma, Federation of Women's Republican Clubs of Colorado, Jane Jefferson Democratic Club, Women's Auxiliary of the Colorado State Medical Society and the Women's Christian Temperance union.

Mrs. Geddes also is interested in the Denver Symphony orchestra, and is now in the Symphony Guild and a Red Rocks Festival board member.

She also does work for the A. A. U. W. and League of Women Voters and is a Goodwill auxiliary board member, Republican committee member and a consumer consultant for the food and drug administration. Just a few weeks ago she resigned as state deputy in charge of the Women's Advisory committee on civil defense activities for Colorado.

"My husband says I'm on every board but the 2x4," she says.

[A photograph of Mrs. Willard Geddes accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, March 22, 1953, p. 6D

FRANKLIN PAUL GENGENBACH

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Franklin Paul Gengenbach
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Franklin Paul Gengenbach, born October 13, 1875, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Name of father: John Henry Gengenbach, a native of Germany

Name of mother: Margarette Henrietta Grossman, a native of Germany

Attended school or college: Public Schools of Philadelphia, and University of Pennsylvania

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: M.D. from University of Pennsylvania, 1899

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Denver, October 1900

Married: June 3, 1903, at Denver

Name of wife: Anna Welty Stuart, the daughter of James Kyle Stuart and Jane Brady McCausland

Names of children and years of birth: Margaret Stuart, born in 1905

Avocation: Physician

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: After graduation, Resident Physician at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, House Surgeon at Lackawanna Hospital, Scranton, Pennsylvania. Post graduate work at Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Berlin and Vienna, 1906-1908. Connected with Denver and Gross Medical College, Denver College of Physicians and Surgeons, University of Colorado Medical School. Member of Staff at Children's Hospital and Denver City and County Hospital. Member of Denver Academy of Medicine, Colorado State Medical Society, American Medical Association (Secretary of Section on Diseases of Children, 1913-1915), American Association for Study of Prevention of Infant Mortality, American Association of Teachers of Diseases of Children, Denver Athletic Club, Denver Motor Club, Denver Chamber of Commerce, Lakewood Country Club. Member and former trustee of Central Presbyterian Church.

Please give autograph signature:

(signed) F. P. Gengenbach

Biography file

ELIZABETH ANN GENTLE
Biographical Information

Name: Elizabeth Ann Gentle

Born: April 9, 1819

Married to: Thomas Spencer on March 26, 1840

Children: Sarah Elizabeth, born March 3, 1841, died September 6, 1879; Thomas Fielder, born June 14, 1843, died September 26, 1904; Joel Francis, born September 17, 1845; Andrew Monroe, born July 10, 1848, died September 13, 1868; Walter, born November 28, 1855, died 1948; Olin, born October 27, 1859, died May 13, 1930

Father's name: Fielder Gentle

Mother's name: Sarah Onstadt

Brothers and sisters (all born at Pike County, Missouri): Eleanor, Jarris, Joshua, William, Polly Ann or Mary Jane, Emery, John, Martha Washington

Biographical information concerning parents: Sarah Onstadt's parents were John and Sarah Onstadt. They came from Holland on a Dutch Trading Vessel. I do not have the date.

No source given

CHARLES S. GEORGIA

Charles S. Georgia, son of Delphi H., and grandson of Harmon S. Georgia, was born at Port Huron, Michigan, June 17th, 1868. He married Lena B. Aldrich. They had four children: Irene E., Charles S., Jr., Delphi G., and Theodore R. The father, Charles S. Georgia, was six feet tall and the sons were even taller. Charles S., Jr., the soldier who died in France, was six feet and one inch, Delphi G., who also had been in the service, is six feet and three inches, and Theodore, the youngest, at 19 years of age, is two inches over six feet tall.

Charles S., the father, was accidentally killed in a street car accident in Colorado Springs, in 1906. Five years later the daughter died. The mother, Lena B. Georgia, lives in Denver, where she makes a home for the son, Theodore.

The Georgia Genealogy, p. 113, August 8, 1961

CHARLES S. GEORGIA, JR.

Charles S. Georgia, Jr., son of Charles S. and Lena B. Georgia, of Denver, Colorado, enlisted in the service of his country at Fort Logan, Colorado, August 5th, 1918. He was sent to Waco, Texas, camp McArthur Branch, and was assigned to Company I, Third B. N. Infantry, which was a Replacement Regiment of all men over six feet tall. He was transferred to Medical Unit, No., 41, on August 26th, 1918, and sailed for France September 14th, from camp Merritt, New Jersey. Nothing more was heard from him until November 22nd, when a telegram from Washington, notified his friends that he had died October 12th, from disease, at Base Hospital, No. 65, Kerhuon, near the city of Brest, France. His body was sent home, with another one, a comrade, and these two were the first to reach Colorado from the great war. They were given a military funeral and great honors. Their bodies were placed in the Rotunda of the Capitol building, in Denver, on the day of the funeral, July 24th, 1920, and laid in state from ten o'clock in the forenoon until three in the afternoon, when the services took place in the Rotunda. These were the first two privates to be accorded such an honor in Colorado. The remains were escorted to their last resting place, in the Old Soldier's Plot, River Side Cemetery, by many privates and officers of the army, together with marines and sailors. The bearers were soldiers, sailors, and marines. A squad from Fort Logan fired the salute over the graves.

The family of Charles S. Georgia, Jr., have many certificates of Honor, accorded him, four of which are given here.

"Army of the United States of America: To all who shall see these Presents, Greeting.

Charles S. Georgia, private, 41st Medical Replacement Units, died with honors in the service of his country, on the 12th day of October, 1918.

Given at Washington, D. C., office of the Adjutant General of the Army, this the 26th day of June, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen."

(Signed) James N. Peale,
Adjutant General.

FROM PRESIDENT WILSON

"Charles S. Georgia, private, Medical Replacement Troops, served with honor in the World War and died in the service of his Country.

Columbia gives to her son, the Accolade of the new Chivalry of Humanity."

(Signed) Woodrow Wilson.

FROM THE GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF COLORADO

"In profound appreciation of the loyalty and devotion to his country, and to the ideals of Liberty and Independence, which caused Charles S. Georgia to make the supreme sacrifice for their preservation, in the great war just victoriously concluded, the State of Colorado offers to his family and friends this token of its sympathy and enduring gratitude."

(Signed) James R. Newland,
Secretary of State .

C. H. Sharpe,
Governor.

(Note. This certificate bears the stamp of the great Gold Seal of the State of Colorado, with ribbons of red, white, and blue, and gold star.)

THIS ONE IS FROM FRANCE, AND IS WRITTEN IN FRENCH

"To the memory of Charles S. Georgia, private Medical Replacement Troops, of the United States of America, who died for Liberty during the great war, the homage of France."

(Signed) The President of the Republic,
R. Poincare.

The Georgia Genealogy, August 8, 1961, p. 114

MRS. J. H. GEWINNER
Her Grandfather Built Denver's First House
By MAXINE LOWRY
Denver Post Staff Writer

A sprightly, gray-haired Glendale, Calif., woman was in Denver this week because her grandfather built the first house in Denver after the survey in 1859.

Mrs. J. H. Gewinner presented some of her grandfather's souvenirs of Colorado's early days to Pioneer Village, the small town in Civic Center which was dedicated Friday. The articles later will be given to the State Historical Society.

Mrs. Gewinner's grandfather, Anselm Holcomb Barker, built his 16x16 cabin at the corner of which are now 12th and Wynkoop Sts. The small log structure had a sod roof and earthen floor.

"Wouldn't grandfather be surprised to know his granddaughter is doing all this because of what he did a hundred years ago?" Mrs. Gewinner laughed.

Mrs. Gewinner also loaned her grandfather's diary to Dr. Nolie Mumey, local historian, who has written a book based on Barker's day-by-day account of his trip from Plattsmouth, Neb., to Denver in 1858. The wagon train took 34 days to reach Denver.

"It was a record for his own satisfaction," Mrs. Gewinner said. "It includes the weather, the miles they traveled, the conditions as they were. And he only mentioned being tired once -- he'd ridden 25 miles that day."

She said he ended the diary soon after his arrival because he was running out of paper.

Her grandfather became one of the area's most outstanding men. He served as sergeant-at-arms for the state constitutional convention in 1876; he was active in the early Masonic Lodge; he was appointed a major by Territorial Gov. John Evans and was quite active in politics.

Documents and mementos from these early activities are included in Mrs. Gewinner's collection which she will give to the Historical Society. Large portraits of her grandparents and a painting of the cabin will be on display in Pioneer Village.

Mrs. Gewinner was born in Denver and lived here until she was 20.

"We lived at 13th and Washington, now it's the rectory of St. John's (Episcopal Cathedral)," she said. "When Grandfather built a house on E. Colfax in the 1880s, it was the only house on the block. Now it's all stores out there."

She said she could remember when there was only one house on Washington St. between E. 13th and 14th Aves. and when the same block on Pearl St. was a vacant lot.

She said she was amazed at the growth of the city since her girlhood.

"There wasn't too much beyond City Park in those days," she recalled.

Mrs. Gewinner said her interest in history is "just part of the family."

"I used to listen to my mother and her sisters talk about the olden days," she said. "Now I wish I'd listened more than I did."

Mrs. Gewinner will be in Denver through Friday for the dedication of Pioneer Village and then will travel on to Kansas City and Birmingham, Ala., to visit relatives before returning home to Glendale.

[A photograph of Mrs. J. H. Gewinner accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, July 5, 1959, p. 4D

MR. AND MRS. WILBERT S. GIBERSON

Frisco Couple Plans to Celebrate 60th Anniversary

Special to The Rocky Mountain News

Frisco, Dec. 29 --Mine tailings and reservoir waters have a way of covering the past of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert S. Giberson of Frisco, who will mark their 60th wedding anniversary Friday.

Mrs. Giberson, the former Elizabeth Ann McDonald, was born May 14, 1883, in Robinson, Colo. Robinson is now covered with the tailings from the Climax Molybdenum Co. mine near Tennessee Pass.

The Gibersons reared their family on a ranch between Dillon and Frisco, which is being covered by waters of the Dillon Reservoir.

Giberson was born Nov. 28, 1878, in Mars Hill, Maine, in that state's Aroostook County, famous for its potatoes.

He came West at the age of 17 and became a miner in the Col. Sellers Mine at Kokomo in Summit County.

The Gibersons were married Jan. 3, 1904, in Breckenridge at the home of a judge.

The couple lived first at Uneva Switch on the Rio Grande Railroad near Frisco. Giberson has been a member of Breckenridge Masonic Lodge No. 47 for 56 years and is a Modern Woodman. Before retiring from ranching, he received a certificate for meritorious service from the U. S. Forest Service for 30 years of fire warden work.

In addition to their former ranch between Dillon and Frisco, they homesteaded 160 acres of national forest land adjoining the ranch, where one of their sons, Howard, 51, now resides.

Their other living children are Jim, 58, and Kenneth, 46, both of Colorado Springs, and Mrs. Edith Mary Chamberlain of Frisco. They have seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Two of their sons, Roy and Glen, are deceased.

The Gibersons enjoy excellent health. He's 85 and she's 80. They live by themselves in Frisco and keep up on town happenings by daily walks.

Giberson has two brothers, Cole, 95, who lives in Washington State, and Winfield, 78 of California. Mrs. Giberson has two sisters.

Rocky Mountain News, December 30, 1963, p. 42

GEORGE WHITFIELD GILDERSLEEVE
FAMILIES OF COLORADO PIONEERS

Name of Pioneer: George Whitfield Gildersleeve, born October 12, 1839 at Sunbury, Delaware County, Ohio, died June 4, 1912 at Denver, Colorado. He was the son of William Gildersleeve and Hannah Leland.

The dates of birth, marriage, death, and place of residence of his parents and grand-parents were:

Pioneer's Ancestry

Father's name: William Gildersleeve, born September 3, 1794 at South East, New York, died June 11, 1848 at Rochester, New York. He resided at Sunbury, Ohio. He married Hannah Leland on September 15, 1824 at Wendon, New York.

Father's father: Lieut. Finch Gildersleeve, born in 1751 at Huntington, Long Island, died in 1812, at South East, New York. His father's mother was Mary Seymour, born January 1, 1758 at Norwalk, Connecticut. They married on November 2, 1782 in Norwalk, Connecticut. She died in 1810.

Mother's name: Hannah Leland, born June 4, 1800 and died November 18, 1866.

The Pioneer married: Sarah Elizabeth Snyder, born December 28, 1847 in Ross County, Ohio, died October 16, 1933, at Denver, Colo.

Pioneer Wife's Ancestry

Her father's name was John Snyder, born March 31, 1818 at Ross County, Ohio, died January 22, 1896 at Kingston, Ross County, Ohio. He married Catherine Jones in 1844 near Hallsville, Ohio.

Her mother's name was Catherine Jones, died August 26, 1885 at Kingston, Ohio.

Earlier ancestry or comments concerning any of the above as to military service, biography, etc.

Pioneer George W. Gildersleeve is the 8th in direct line from Richard Gildersleeve who came from England in 1635 and finally settled in Hempstead, Long Island, New York. He lived at Sunbury, Delaware County, Ohio and various places west until 1871 when he settled in Denver, Colorado.

Other places in which he lived: First came West as far as Topeka, then returned to Ohio. Came to Denver later and went to Central City, then back to Denver and to Oberlin, Ohio, 1866. Later went to Wyoming, about 1869, and came to Denver in 1871 and settled.

Occupation or profession: Had a general merchandise store

Education, membership in church, etc.: Had a partial course at Oberlin College, Ohio, and a full course in a commercial school. Attended Baptist and Methodist Churches.

Reasons for moving west, method of transportation, and travel routes: To seek his fortune and new opportunities. First trip was to St. Louis, Kansas City, Topeka and Atchison, Lexington and decided to go to Ohio for more education. The second time he came with others by team and followed up the Platte to Denver, a typical western village of a few hundred people. Went with a freighter to Central City and worked hauling quartz to a stamp mill. Later went back to Denver and as prospects looked poor, decided to go back to Ohio in 1866 to look after his mother. He floated down the Platte on a raft with some others to the Missouri, then by steamer to St. Joseph and by train to Ohio. After the death of his mother, he decided to go to Wyoming to meet two older brothers, Charles and James and went to Cheyenne. There was mining excitement so by walking and joining an outfit, he went to South Pass and then to Atlantic where he opened a store and stayed until 1871 when he came to Denver and started a store.

It was a wild and exciting life with various experiences in dealing with Indians.

Descendants of Colorado Pioneers George and Sarah Gildersleeve

So that future generations may be able to establish their relationship to pioneer ancestors, make a record below of as many as possible of their children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, etc., giving names, wives or husbands, dates of birth, marriage, places of birth, marriage, death, residence or present address, with interesting comments concerning any of them:

Their oldest child: Lillian, born June 28, 1875, at Denver, Colorado; married to Samuel S. Large at Denver, Colorado on Sept. 28, 1904; residence, 2325 Bellaire Street, Denver, Colorado. Their children: 1. Sarah Elizabeth, born December 10, 1906, at Denver, Colorado, address: 2325 Bellaire Street, Denver, Colorado.

2. Ruth Gildersleeve, born January 14, 1909, at Denver, Colorado, married July 1, 1939 to March Flagg Beall, address: Portland, Oregon. Children: Julianne, born July 16, 1946 at Portland, Oregon; Cynthia, born October 29, 1949 at Portland, Oregon.

3. Patricia Anne, born March 17, 1910, at Denver, Colorado; married May 1, 1943 to Maurice James Wedum; address: Fairfield, Montana. Children: Donald Scott, born June 9, 1944 at Denver, Colorado; JoAnn, born January 21, 1947, at Fairfield, Montana; Robert John, born March 18, 1948 at Fairfield, Montana.

Their second child: Laura, born December 25, 1877, at Denver, Colorado; married Samuel D. Morrison October 29, 1901, at Denver, Colorado, address: Denver, Colorado. Died May 25, 1939

Their third child: George Snyder Gildersleeve, born April 7, 1881, at Denver, Colorado; married Mary Grace Nelson at Boston, Massachusetts. Children: Katherine Nelson, born May 5, 1915; Nelson, born June 1, 1919.

Brothers and sisters of pioneer husband

Half brother: Dr. William C., born 1822, married Martha E. Driesback, died October 23, 1894, Denver.

Sister: Emily, born 1828, married McAllister, died 1891, Ohio

James Hervey, born 1825, married Elizabeth Heath, died 1882, Denver

Eliza, born 1832, married Captain Arley, died 1902, Indianapolis

Hannah, born 1837, married Samuel Reed, died 1916

Chas. Leland, born 1835, died 1917, Montana
Frances, born 1830, married John Bosworth, died 1890

List of references to printed biography of pioneer subject: Biographical sketch of George W. Gildersleeve in History of City of Denver, Arapahoe County and Colorado, published by O. L. Baskin and Co. of Chicago, 1880.

Also in History of Colorado by Frank Hall, 1895.

Also Gildersleeve Pioneers by Willard Harvey Gildersleeve by Tuttle Publishing Co. of Rutland, Vermont.

All property of Lillian Gildersleeve Large, 2325 Bellaire Street, Denver, Colorado.

DR. CARBON GILLASPIE

Dr. Carbon Gillaspie, born July 27, 1879; died May 5, 1933, Boulder, Colorado; married, July 3, 1906, Grace Fairchild, born Apr. 12, 1876, daughter of John Henry, born July 23, 1850, and Frances McKittrick, born April 17, 1853 in Ireland. She died October 28, 1935 at Mexico City, Missouri. He died October 15, 1922 at Mexico City.

Mrs. Gillaspie's grandfather was Aaron Fairchild, born at Sheffield, Massachusetts, born August 11, 1759; died Wellsborough, New York, October 18, 1738; married Elizabeth Smith. He was a Revolutionary soldier. His son, John Fairchild, born April 21, 1798; died June 1869; married December 25, 1833 to Grace Folett. She was born in 1813, died 1866 at Wellsborough, New York.

Dr. Carbon Gillaspie graduated from the University of Colorado, practiced for a short time in Nederland, then moved to Boulder where he was a prominent physician up to the time of his death. He was prominent in City and school and church affairs and generally loved and respected. Grace has held State and National offices in D. A. R., State offices in P. E. O., the Christian Church, and other organizations. Dr. Carbon served in World War II, Medical Corps.

They had one child: John DeWitt, born June 17, 1907 at Nederland. He married in Boulder, July 14, 1930, Carolyn Henry, daughter of Albert and Jessie (Foote) Henry of Boulder pioneer families. John graduated from Colorado University Medical School, was in World War II, Medical Corps for the duration. Has been practicing in Boulder since 1933. They have two children: (1) Richard Carbon, born August 15, 1934. (2) Carol Ann, born March 10, 1938.

From "Boulder County Pioneers" by Jennie E. Stewart

HENRY B. GILLESPIE

Father of Aspen Dies in Dutch Guiana
H. B. Gillespie, Identified With the History of Pitkin County and the Famous Mollie Gibson Bonanza, Succumbs to Malarial Fever.
Special to the Rocky Mountain News

ASPEN, Colo., April 20. --Word was received here to-day by Mrs. Al Robinson, from her sister-in-law, Mrs. H. B. Gillespie, that her husband, H. B. Gillespie, had died on March 22, at Paramaraibo, Dutch Guiana, after an illness lasting but a short time. The cause of death was malarial fever. Mrs. Gillespie's sons, Ken and Bert, are with her in her hour of trouble.

Colonel Henry B. Gillespie was born in Missouri, in 1849, where he lived until he was 7 years old, when his family removed to Manhattan, Kansas. He was the youngest of thirteen children. He attended the district school in Manhattan, and then entered the Kansas State Agricultural college, from which institution he graduated with high honors. He then engaged in railroading, starting in as a fireman of the second division of the Kansas Pacific, and worked until he got an engine. Later he was made general passenger agent of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe. In 1874 he came to Colorado, and settled in Boulder county, keeping books for A. D. Breed, a New York capitalist who was mining in that district. He lived at Boulder, Denver, Black Hawk and other places in that district until 1879, when he moved to Leadville.

In the early part of 1886 he and his wife took a trip to the Hawaiian island. In the summer of 1886 he was nominated on the Democratic ticket for lieutenant governor, as running mate of Alva Adams. He was defeated, though Governor Adams was elected. At that time Mr. Gillespie was interested in the apex side of the famous apex and side line law suit that was so bitterly fought through all the courts of the Colorado, and, while Mr. Gillespie was personally beloved by all the people of Aspen, they could not vote for a man who was interested in the apex side of this suit, and so he did not have a majority in Pitkin county. In 1886 Mr. Gillespie made a present to the Aspen fire department of a 2,300-pound bell, which cost $750. He also paid the freight and stood the expense of putting the bell in place. Mr. Gillespie had pretty well run through the sum he received for the sale of the Spar mine when he made a raise in the Mollie Gibson, it being reported that he made another $250,000 out of this property.

In 1892 he built a palatial home on his farm at El Jebel, twenty-four miles below Aspen, spending in all about $60,000 in building the house, fitting up the grounds, etc. He was appointed world's fair commissioner for the Chicago world's fair during 1892 and 1893, after which he returned to Colorado, making his home most of the time in Denver. In 1896 he went to London, England, in the interests of the Gold Valley properties, in Routt county. He remained there eighteen months, but was unable to interest English money in the enterprise.

He returned to Colorado, and in the winter of 1901-02 he lived in Aspen, during which time he had charge of the Star Group of mines in Taylor park. He did not make a success of this, and his backer, who it is said was Winfield S. Stratton, refused to put any more money in the enterprise. He then went to Denver, where he remained until some time in December, 1902, when he went to Paramaraibo, Dutch Guiana, on a mining enterprise. From reports received in letters to relatives and friends in this vicinity, it seems he stood in a fair way to realize an immense fortune, when he was taken with malarial fever and died, after a brief illness.

Blazed A Trail

The history of Aspen camp is inseparably blended with that of Mr. Gillespie. Early in 1879 this gentleman crossed over the range to the Roaring Fork country, by way of trail, there being no such thing as wagon roads at that time. A few sturdy miners who had tried California gulch had preceded him. Walter S. Clark, now of the wholesale firm of Clark & Denman, was the first to fire a shot on Aspen mountain, and gave out the name of Roaring Fork for the district. The first location on Aspen mountain was the Galena mine, made in the spring of 1879, and it was the purchase of this property that brought Mr. Gillespie thither. He had hitherto been engaged in mining in Boulder county and at Leadville. He returned over the Mosquito range with a contract for the purchase of the Spar and Galena mines on Aspen mountain for $25,000. Not long afterwards Mr. Gillespie took sixteen miners over the range on snow shoes to work his new possessions, and thus was first begun active and enterprising mining for the new camp.

On the very evening of his second arrival with a force of men, Mr. Gillespie opened up the subject of building a town to a bevy of miners gathered for the purpose. Railroads, telegraph lines, post office, and in fact all modern conveniences attending late day towns, were discussed with enthusiasm. It was a matter of great sincerity to Mr. Gillespie, and his ability and popularity put him at the head of every public enterprise. This meeting occurred in October, 1879, and in addition to organizing a little miners' society, a petition was drawn up asking the third assistant postmaster general for mail service. Mr. Gillespie had means, and there was not any public enterprise but that he was willing to spend money for as if for private purposes. He went to Washington City at his own expense to present this petition. On his return he stopped at Philadelphia and organized the Roaring Fork Improvement company, whose object was to build a road from Buena Vista into Aspen--then proposed to be called Ute.

Now comes a remarkable bit of history. While Mr. Gillespie was absent Mr. B. Clark Wheeler came in and is said to have actually "jumped" the town. Mr. Wheeler laid out and platted his town, which he called Aspen. Mr. Gillespie, at all times progressive, compromised with his rival, and labored as fiercely for the success of the new town as he would have done for the town of Ute. In 1880 Mr. Gillespie brought his family to the new camp in wagons. He put up a large tent as a residence, which tent was the cradle of society in the new town. A literary society was organized through the winter, and Mr. Gillespie, possessing so rare an instrument in those parts as an organ, opened Sunday school in "the big tent." Later Mr. Gillespie built the first permanent dwelling house in Aspen.

High Cost Of Freight

In the meantime Mr. Gillespie had developed his mining properties by continuous labor. As an incident demonstrating the difficulties in mining in the Aspen camp in its first days, the following is related by Mr. Gillespie himself: "In 1880 and 1881 I contracted for carrying ores from my mines to Leadville by pack or jack train. My contracts called for the packing of 1,000 tons of ore, and it was to cost 4 cents per pound. Think of it, 4 cents per pound. And it paid. In those days we didn't have the convenience of tramways, mills and hoisters you see all over the side of Aspen mountain now. We used to put our ore in cow hides in 1,000-pound lots and roll it down the hill." In 1881 Mr. Gillespie became involved in a law suit over mining properties, which was not terminated until 1883.

Early in the days of the camp Mr. Gillespie recognized the need of carrying into effect the plans of the first little meeting he held with the Aspen miners in 1879. He succeeded in interesting Mr. J. B. Wheeler of New York, in Aspen properties. Mr. Wheeler became interested in the Spar mine. After taking a large amount of money out of this mine, Messrs. Gillespie and Wheeler organized the Aspen Mining and Smelting company, with a capital stock of $2,000,000 -- shares $5 each. Mr. Gillespie later purchased the Enterprise tunnel and that group of mines, and sold out to what is now the Enterprise Mining company. He also purchased the Veteran tunnel for the Aspen Mining and Smelting company. He was one of the organizers of the Percy Consolidated Mining company, and was elected its first president. Early in 1888, Mr. Gillespie was commissioned by the court to visit and examine a Smuggler mountain property then in litigation. While making this examination, Mr. Gillespie became impressed with the property, and as soon as his duty was performed as commissioner of the court, set about to purchase it. He succeeded in buying off all the litigating properties, and soon he was in control of the famous Mollie Gibson group of mines. He organized the Mollie Gibson Mining and Milling company, and was elected its first president in 1888. This property has not as yet made its wonderful record as a producer. The stock was quoted in 1888 as low as 30 cents per share, and went as high as $6 to $7--par value $5. In 1889 the Mollie Gibson Consolidated Mining and Milling company was organized with Mr. Hagerman as president and this property passed under new management. It is said that there is not a paying mine on Aspen mountain that Mr. H. B. Gillespie has not at one time or another been connected with; and it is further fact this gentleman has discovered all the big bonanzas in the camp.

In addition to his remarkable mining record, Mr. Gillespie was one of three gentlemen who built the telegraph line from Granite to Aspen, the first wire into the latter place. He succeeded in interesting Mr. Maxey Tabor of Denver in the project. Later he built the line from Aspen to Glenwood in company with Messrs. Jacobs and Cooley. And another evidence of his far-seeing enterprise is the Colorado Mining Stock exchange, Denver. He was one of the first gentlemen to suggest the enterprise and was as energetic in pushing it forward as any man in the state, notwithstanding he was not a resident of Denver. He was a co-laborer of President Charles E. Taylor and the latter gentleman has to say of him: "Mr. H. B. Gillespie was one of the founders of the Colorado Mining Stock exchange."

Rocky Mountain News, April 21, 1903, pp. 1 and 9

WILLIAM GILPIN
1822-1894

William Gilpin was born near Wilmington, Delaware. He was graduated from Pennsylvania University, of which his grandfather was a founder. From there adventure lay ahead for William Gilpin. He attended West Point, joined Colonel Doniphan against the Navajo, practiced law, worked on a newspaper, became geographer for Fremont's expedition, wrote books, became part owner of the great Baca Grant, and was appointed first governor of Colorado Territory.

At the onset of the Civil War, many southerners who had helped to form Jefferson Territory, now replaced by Colorado Territory, unfurled Confederate flags. At Camp Weld, Gilpin trained 11 regiments. These won the battle of LaGlorieta pass, saving the Union in the West. At first Washington refused the $750,000 debt and demanded Gilpin's resignation in 1862. His great foresight was responsible for the launching of many tremendous projects--most notable of which was his support of Otto Mears and his amazing road-building program.

Rocky Mountain News, September 27, 1959, p. 56

FRANK GIRARDOT

Modern social and political sciences differ widely from the standards accepted by the Indian fighters and cowpunchers of the Old West. Yet a vision which enables him to see the good in both is held by Frank Girardot, 86 years old, of 1135 Fillmore st. He made that clear Saturday as he launched into a thrilling story of his adventures with the Indians and his struggles in the cattle business in the '70s just east of Denver.

"You take this seat at my right because I do not hear so well with my left ear," Girardot said. But his rugged, bearded face, clear blue eye and steady step belied the age of this pioneer who landed in Denver 61 years ago at the age of 25.

He told of the killing of a number of friends and neighbors by Indians; of the theft of horses and money and burning of buildings by these marauders and of narrow escapes.

Girardot with his wife came to Denver in 1866. That was before the railroad was built. He at once began the struggle for a living, handicapped by lack of funds. He accumulated sufficient capital by 1872 to enable him to buy some cattle and in that year he and a few other would-be cattlemen established homes on Coal creek.

Didn't Need Much Land

That was in the days of the free range and a cattleman did not need to own much land. After keeping his homestead on Coal creek fourteen years, he sold it for $800 and received this sum chiefly as a consideration for the building he had constructed on the land.

The last raid by the Indians in that country was in 1877. It was made by the Arapahoe tribe on Kiowa creek. A number of German families had deserted their homesteads and moved into the town of Kiowa for safety.

The Dietermans, consisting of the husband and wife and one small child, remained on their homestead. Two men lived with them. Dieterman had gone to Denver, and when he did not return as soon as expected the two men and his wife became frightened and started to drive to Kiowa. They had not gone far when they were attacked by the Arapahoes, and Mrs. Dieterman and her baby were killed. Mrs. Dieterman was scalped, and $1,600 in gold, concealed in her clothing, was stolen.

"Mrs. Dieterman and the two men were armed with rifles, and all would have been safe had they remained at the house," Girardot said.

On the site of the house now owned by Girardot on Running creek, the Hungate family, consisting of the husband, wife and two children, were wiped out by the Arapahoes several years before the Dieterman slaughter. A servant of the family also was killed. "No one witnessed the massacre, but members of the family probably were killed when they resisted horse stealing," Girardot said.

Left Her Unmolested

A Frenchman named Penot and his family lived on Coal creek near the Girardots. Mrs. Penot was alone one day when a band of Arapahoes mobilized at the Penot place. Scattered segments of the band arrived thruout the day. Mrs. Penot had despaired of her life. She saw no avenue of escape. Toward the end of the day, however, they went away leaving her unmolested. They moved on to the house of the next neighbor where they stole about 35 horses.

The Ute tribe of Indians had spent the winter of '79 and '80 in the mountains. They had come down onto the plains in the spring to obtain food and had traveled to the Kansas line where they encountered the Arapahoes. A battle between these two warring tribes followed. The Utes were the victors, having captured 100 horses from their enemies. They killed one Arapahoe.

A few days later Girardot and some neighbors were rounding up and branding cattle in the Coal creek country when they heard weird, screeching sounds and looked up. Several Utes were scurrying about on the crest of a raise a quarter of a mile away.

"Determined to learn the nature of the trouble, I rode to the top of the hill where I held council with one of the successful warriors. I soon learned from the Ute, who could speak an occasional word of English, that the Utes had mistaken us for Arapahoes, and they were mobilizing their tribesmen for another battle," Girardot said.

An Ugly Visitor

An ugly looking Arapahoe came to the Girardot house on Coal creek one day when Mrs. Girardot was alone. Girardot had gone to Denver for supplies, and a carpenter, living with the Girardots, had gone hunting. The Indian carried a heavy iron bar.

On reaching the house the Arapahoe immediately asked Mrs. Girardot, "Where's your man?" Mrs. Girardot was badly scared. The Indian demanded something to eat, and, without argument, she fed him. During the entire time he was eating he kept the iron bar on the table beside his plate. When he had finished eating, the Indian walked about the house examining contents of drawers and cabinets, all the time carrying the heavy iron bar in his hand. Mrs. Girardot had little hope for her life.

"Where's your man?" the Indian pressed Mrs. Girardot time and again. Each time she replied he was hunting nearby. She watched sharply, desperately hoping to see the carpenter returning over the nearby hill. Finally, as the Indian once more demanded, "Where's your man?" Mrs. Girardot looked out of the door and saw the carpenter coming with his rifle over his shoulder. She dashed out of the house and ran in the direction of the hunter, while the Indian lost no time in making an exit in the opposite direction.

The Utes were friendly to the whites. The more lazy ones occasionally came to the Girardot house and asked for something to eat. A friendly Ute rode up on his horse one day and asked for coffee and sugar.

"Go kill me an antelope and I will give you something to eat," said Girardot, who happened to be at the house. Girardot watched the Indian as he rode to the nearby hills. The Indian dismounted and carried his gun and red blanket with him. Girardot said that the Indian secluded himself behind a small mound of ground and slowly raised the blanket with the barrel of his gun until the blanket was placed in view of the surrounding country. After repeating this operation cautiously a few times, a couple of curious antelope approached within range of the Indian's deadly aim.

"The Indian brought the antelope to the house on his horse and then I was compelled to fill my part of the contract," Girardot said. "That experience reminded me how much better the Indians of those days understood the animals than did the whites."

Held Dance Near Watkins

Girardot said that in 1882 the Utes held a big festive dance about four miles south of Watkins to which Girardot and some of his neighbors were invited. The dance was led by an old chief who carried a long pole, crowned with a scalp, probably the one taken by them in the battle with the Arapahoes. A great circle was formed by the Utes and whites about the dancing arena.

At the close of the festivities, a cob pipe, filled with tobacco was lighted and started around the circle by the chief and smoked by the redskins and whites alike.

A number of whites in the neighborhood who had not known of the celebration became frightened on hearing the screeching of the Indians. They feared an attack; some of them deserting their homes and mobilizing for protection. Girardot said the experience was too much for a group of bachelors who sold out and left the country.

Despite the dangers to which Girardot and his neighbors were constantly exposed during the years spent in the Coal and Running creek countries, he declared they lived happily most of the time. Frequent dances and picnics were held by the whites. They also participated in pony races with the Utes, he said.

"For a number of years Mrs. Girardot and I looked forward to the time when we could accumulate enough wealth to enable us to go back to Indiana to live, but the longer we stayed in the Coal creek country, the more like home it seemed, and finally we forgot all about our leanings toward Indiana," he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Girardot lived on Coal creek 14 years. Eight of their eleven children were born there. In 1886 they moved over to Running creek where he still owns a large acreage. They lived on Running creek until a few years ago, and are well known to Colorado pioneers. Mrs. Girardot lived until a few months ago. Girardot lives with two daughters.

Girardot believes in keeping himself modern, but he insists that the good old sixties and seventies which were saturated with Indian fighting and cow punching contributed their bit in civilization's onward march.

[A photograph of Frank Girardot accompanies the article.]

Newspaper article, no source or date given - 1927?

GLASIER BROTHERS
Brothers Reunited
4 Brothers United 1st time in 52 Years
Ages Total 297 Years

For the first time in 52 years four brothers Thursday were reunited in Denver. All now in their seventies, their combined ages total 297 years.

All the Glasier boys were born on a farm in Livingston county, Ill., and while they were young the family moved to Whittemore, Iowa, where they were all together for the last time until now.

John T. Glasier, youngest, came to Colorado and settled on farm land that is now engulfed by the expanding city. It's at 5001 E. Kentucky Ave.

P. J. Glasier, eldest, eventually went to farming at what now is E. Alameda Ave. and Dayton Rd., southeast of Lowry air force base. Dr. W. F. Glasier went to Carlsbad, N. M., to practice, while J. M. Glasier settled at St. James, Minn.

Through the course of the years they corresponded and occasionally one would see another, but never until recently did they make the arrangements whereby they all could get together.

[Caption under picture reads: For the first time in 52 years, four brothers get together. Left to right are Dr. W. F. Glasier, 72, of Carlsbad, N. M.; John T. Glasier, 71, of Denver; J. M. Glasier, 75, of St. James, Minn.; and P. J. Glasier, 79, of Denver.]

Denver Post, November 4, 1954, p. 42

MRS. IDA R. GLEASON

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. Ida R. Gleason
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Ida Riner Gleason, born in Cheyenne, Wyoming

Name of father: John Alden Riner, a native of Ohio

Name of mother: May Augusta Riner, a native of Ohio

Attended school or college: Cheyenne, lower grade schools; Dana Hall Preparatory School, Wellesley, Massachusetts; Wellesley College, Stanford University, Short Story Course, School of Commerce, University of Denver

Give names, dates, honorary degrees: Dana Hall, 1900-02; Wellesley College, 1902; Stanford University, 1904; University of Denver, 1922

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Denver, July 9, 1919

Married: Yes, February 27, 1906, at Cheyenne, Wyoming

Name of husband: Frank Hubbard Gleason, the son of William Wallace Gleason and Julia Gould Gleason

Names of children and years of birth: Gertrude Gleason, born January 4, 1907; William Severy Gleason, born July 9, 1909

Avocation: Homemaker and mother; scribbler on the side

Biography file

WILLIAM COOPER GLENN

He Didn't Meet Geronimo So Denver Man's Now 94

By PAT KING

Rocky Mountain News Writer

William Cooper Glenn, one of Denver's most colorful citizens, yesterday stopped reading with his magnifying glass to tell about his dealings with Geronimo, the wily Indian man-killer.

Mr. Glenn will be 94 tomorrow. He is stone deaf, but he can talk in a normal voice. His memory is fantastic. It is no more amazing, however, than the things he has to remember.

He Didn't Try Hard

Mr. Glenn came close to being a Geronimo acquaintance quite by accident. He had no desire to shake the hand of that feared and famous Indian and has never to this day regretted the fact that he didn't encounter him directly.

"This was sometime around 1880. I was in Arizona with my family--that is, my wife--when we heard Geronimo was on the warpath.

"He didn't know I was looking for him . . . I never let it get around. So we never met."

This jolly old gentleman was born Aug. 30, 1858, in Mount Sterling, Brown County, Ill. When he was a young man, he went to Arizona to get into the cattle business. It was then that Geronimo broke out between Clifton and Lordsburg.

Kept Out Of Sight

"He was a crafty old Indian. He took some scalps in our party. Things began to look pretty serious. We stayed out of sight in some adobe huts there. That may be why I never met the man."

Mr. Glenn later came to Colorado. He arrived in Denver, caught the mining bug and took a narrow gauge railroad to Buena Vista. From there he went by stage to Leadville, where he worked in the mines. He and a partner were trying to find an extension of the famous London mine. "We're still hunting it," he said

Blew Himself Up

One day Mr. Glenn was working with some dynamite. He had entered the tunnel, where the charge was supposedly dead. It was by no means dead and when it exploded, it fairly blew his left leg to bits.

"I hit the top of the tunnel. Guess I would have still been flying up, but for the rock above me."

It took Mr. Glenn two and a half years to mend his leg. During that time history went on. He witnessed the bloody miners' strike at Leadville and "heard Governor (Sic) Tabor cussin' those miners."

Mr. Glenn is proud of his 33d degree Mason standing. He has been a member of seven different lodges and head of six. He wears a 50-year button from the A.F. & A.M. Lodge of Missouri and wouldn't trade it for his right arm.

He lives with his son and daughter-in-law, the A. A. Glenns at 3810 Jackson st.

[A photograph of William Glenn accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, August 29, 1952, p. 5

GEORGE RUSSELL GLUTH

Denver-Born Ex-Fireman Returns to Seek 'Lost' Kin

Has Few Years to Live

By ROBERT BYERS

Denver Post Staff Writer

A 51-year-old retired fireman from Dayton, O., who doctors say will live only three to five more years, was in Denver Saturday searching for his long-lost brother and sister.

Russell George Gluth, who was 16 before he even knew he ever had a brother and a sister, told a strange tale of a broken home and a kidnaping in seeking help from The Denver Post in locating his lost kin.

Gluth said his father, John Gluth, and his mother, Stella Irene Gluth, were married in Covington, Ky., sometime before the turn of the 20th century and came to Denver to live.

"I don't even know what kind of work my father did, but I do know he was a musician at times," he said.

Deserted By Father

Two older Gluth children--John Albert Gluth and Leota Gluth--were born in Denver shortly after 1900, Gluth said. Apparently in 1904, as nearly as Gluth can piece the story together, his father deserted his mother.

Destitute and jobless, Gluth said, his mother was repeatedly prevailed upon by a woman named "Mrs. Rose Greenwood" to allow the boy, John Albert, to be adopted by her.

On July 23, 1904, Gluth said, his mother finally relented and permitted Mrs. Greenwood to take the boy home with her for a few days, with the understanding it would not be for adoption.

Mrs. Greenwood, however, fled the city with the boy immediately, Gluth said he had been told.

Later that year, the father returned to Gluth's mother and the daughter, only to desert her again in a few months.

Gluth himself was born in Denver June 13, 1905.

Permitted Adoption

Gluth said his mother apparently attempted to make her own way here for a while, but finally gave up. She permitted the girl to be adopted by a family known to Gluth only as "the Bartons" in Denver before taking Gluth and going to Dayton, O.

In Dayton, Gluth said his mother almost immediately allowed him to be adopted by Mr. and Mrs. John Firestein of Dayton. He was reared by them.

In 1921, when Gluth was 16, he sought to enlist in the army and was told the story of his adoption by the Firesteins. His mother was still living in Dayton at the time and he visited with her once before entering service. She died a year later.

Some of the story the mother told her son during that one meeting.

Other pieces of it Gluth learned by reading an account of the alleged kidnaping of his older brother in back copies of The Denver Post.

Heart Attack

Gluth joined the Dayton fire department in 1929. He suffered a heart attack in 1953, which forced his retirement from the department. His doctors have advised him that he has three to five years to live because of his heart condition.

Gluth is married and has one daughter, Susanne, 19. His wife, Ethel, accompanied him on the trip to Denver in search of his lost brother and sister. Due to his heart condition, this will probably be his last chance to find them.

His father, Gluth said, died five years ago in Dayton.

"He lived in Dayton for many years and I saw him about three times in my entire life," he said. "But whenever I saw him, he flatly refused to tell me anything about my early life and the trouble in Denver."

In Denver, Gluth and his wife were staying at the Oxford hotel. In Ohio their address is 1809 E. 3rd St., Dayton 3.

[A photograph of George Russell Gluth accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, September 2, 1956, p. 3A

RUSSELL GEORGE GLUTH
Ohioan Seeks Lost Siblings in Denver

An Ohio man came to Denver Sunday looking for a brother who was kidnaped 52 years ago and a sister turned over to foster parents shortly after that.

Russell George Gluth of Dayton first heard of his brother and sister when he was 16 years old. Now retired from his job with the Dayton Fire Department, he wants to find them.

Half-century-old newspaper clippings bore out Gluth's story of the kidnaping. They told how John Albert Gluth, then 2 years old, was taken away on June 22, 1904, by a Mrs. Rose Greenwood.

The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Gluth, who then lived at 1844 Champa st. She was a cook and he a waiter. The clip told how he abandoned her in April, and how their daughter Leota was born shortly afterward.

Mrs. Greenwood, a neighbor, was attracted to the boy, and asked the mother to give him to her. The mother refused, but finally consented to let Mrs. Greenwood mind the child for a few days.

Mrs. Greenwood took the child to her room, told her landlady he was her child and that she was taking him away to educate him for a stage career, packed a few things and left. Neither she nor the child was ever found.

Mrs. Gluth then handed her daughter over to foster parents. She left Denver for Dayton, where Russell Gluth was born. He too was given to foster parents.

He said Sunday that his foster mother told him about his real mother when he was 16. He went to see his mother, who then lived in Dayton too, and she told him about his sister and brother.

The last name of the people to whom she gave her daughter, she said, was Barton.

Gluth asked News readers who might have any information about either brother or sister to pass it on to him.

He will be staying in Denver at the Oxford Hotel until Thursday. After that, he will be at his Dayton home at 1809 E. Third st.

Rocky Mountain News, September 3, 1956, p. 14

SAMUEL GOLLAGHER
Colorado Pioneer

Samuel Gollagher, born September 2, 1852 in Maghera, Londonderry County, Ireland, was the son of Thomas (born 1813, died May 2, 1887) Maghera, and Rose (Phillips) Gollagher.

Thomas Gollagher owned a farm in Maghera, and his father, Rev. John Gollagher, a Baptist minister and formerly a missionary in India, lived with the family. Rose was the daughter of Samuel Phillips, and died several years after her son Samuel.

In December 1893, Samuel Gollagher married Annie Berniece Clickener in the home of her uncle, Courtenius La Tourette, at Covington, Indiana. She was born May 21, 1864 at Chambersburg, Fountain County, Indiana, the daughter of John La Tourette Clickener (born October 10, 1831, New Jersey; died March 1910, Indiana residence, Silverwood, Parke County, Indiana) and Susan La Tourette (born, Indiana, August 28, 1842; died, Silverwood, July 14, 1914).

John La Tourette Clickener was the son of Mathias Clickener or Clickenger (born, October 6, 1779 in New Jersey and died in Hunterdon County, New Jersey, November 25, 1845). He had lived at Whitehorse, Hunterdon County. On January 2, 1806, Mathias married Mary (Marie) La Tourette (born March 25, 1789, Staten Island, New York; died December 20, 1854 at Whitehorse). They were married either in Hunterdon or Somerset County.

Susan La Tourette was the daughter of John La Tourette (born, Staten Island, New York, January 30, 1793; died February 22, 1849 at Covington, Indiana) and Sarah Schenck (born, New Jersey, July 19, 1799; died Covington, Indiana, December 15, 1816). She was a descendant of the Schencks, Van Voorhees, Van Cirwenhevens (?), Schuylers and many other pioneer families of New York (New Amsterdam).

John La Tourette and Mathias Clickener were soldiers in the War of 1812 and the latter's father fought in the Colonial Wars and the American Revolution and lost a leg at the Siege of Yorktown. Three of John La Tourette's sons: Capt. Schuyler, Lieut. Courtenius and Oliver, were soldiers in the Civil War.

Samuel Phillips Gollagher, with his brothers and sisters, was sent to a boarding school in Ireland. He then went to Cookstown to learn the mercantile business, remaining but four years; as he came with his friends, Carmichael and Parker, to New York, where he had an uncle named Phillips. A brother, John, and a sister, Margaret, had preceded him, but they died and were buried in Greenwood Cemetery.

In the fall of 1877 he went back to Ireland for a visit of six months, and on his return worked in the Hauffman House till he left New York with his friend, Parker, and went to Leadville. In December 1879, with some friends, he walked to Tin Cup, and in the early 1880's he bought the dry goods, grocery and hardware store of Mr. C. A. Freeman, who wished to move to Denver.

Mr. Gollagher did a big merchandising and banking business with the miners and mining companies in the district. In 1899 he was held up and robbed of several thousand dollars, yet his business grew so, he employed several clerks, and in 1905 sent for a nephew to come from Australia to join him in the business. He died suddenly, July 9, 1906 and that fall the store burned with a big loss. After that the widow and seven children went back to Indiana to live.

Children, all of whom were born in Tin Cup except Rose:

1. Katherine, born May 12, 1895, married March 12, 1916 at Cedersburg, Indiana, John Young, lived at Crawfordsville, Indiana
  - 1-1 Mary Katherine Young, born September 9, 1917, married December 24, 193_, Sanford George Boraker
    - 1-1-1 Ross Ray Boraker, Crawfordsville, Indiana
  - 1-2 Virginia Ann Young, born November 11, 1919, married December 31, ___, George Henry Simmons
  - 1-3 Samuel William Young, born September 23, 1922, married Nina Jean Shoaf
    - 1-3-1 Samuel Ray Young, born November 27, 1946
    - 1-3-2 Patricia Ann Young, born December 12, 1947
  - 1-4 John Bryant Young, born February 25, ___, married July 1949, Doris Zachary
2. Rose, born June 29, 1896, married M. William Leisure, reside Indianapolis
  - 2-1 Richard Leisure, born 1925
  - 2-2 Robert Leisure, born 1927
3. Susan, born December 17, 1897, married Clarence J. Toner, five children
4. Annie, born 1899, unmarried
5. Gertrude, born 1900, married ___, no children
6. Samuel John, born February 9, 1902, married ___, reside Pasadena
  - 6-1 Michael Gollagher
  - 6-2 Katherine Gollagher
7. Charles Courtenius, born July 6, 1906, married ____
  - 7-1 Charles Courtenius Gollagher Jr.

Brothers and sisters of Samuel Phillips Gollagher:

John, went to New York City

Margaret, went to New York City

Sarah, married William Barnette or Rehnette, lived in Ireland

Thomas, went to Australia

James of Maghera, Ireland, several children, died young

Brothers and sisters of Annie Berniece (Clickener) Gollagher:

George Clickener, born 1861, Silverwood, Indiana

Charles Clickener, born 1862, Silverwood, Indiana

Kate Clickener, born 1864, Silverwood, Indiana

Johnny Clickener, died aged 6 months

A half sister

Great Grandfather Henry La Tourette was a weaver.

The Colorado Genealogist, no date given, pp. 37-39

Gollagher References:

Denver Post, March 15, 1904, p. 9

Early Histories of Parks and Fountain Counties, Indiana

Early Histories of New York and New Jersey

Certified copy, Will of John La Tourette, Covington, Indiana

Certified copy, Will of John La Tourette, Piscataway, Middlesex County, New Jersey

Certified copy, Will of Henry LaTourette (grandfather), Fresh Kills Staten Island, New York.
Proved December 1794

History, City of New York, by Martha J. Lamb

Huguenot Emigration by Baird, vol. 2, pp. 20, 22

Other Histories of New York

Name and address of informant: Annie B. Clickener Gollagher

Name and address of compiler: Katherine S. Gollagher Young, 611 E. Pike Street, Crawfordsville, Indiana

JOHN GOOD

by MARJORIE BARRETT
Rocky Mountain News Writer

Somewhere in the town of Uhrweiler, Alsace-Lorraine, there stands a castle with irregular lines, strange turrets and wrought-iron doors.

Because the French, like all Europeans, recognize the importance of old buildings and the need for architectural contrast in an area, the building still stands. It is over 150 years old.

Its counterpart is located at 1007 Pennsylvania st. The principal difference between the two structures lies in the material used for construction.

The castle in Alsace was a grey stone. The Denver onetime home of John Good was fashioned of native red sandstone.

Good spent his childhood in Alsace, a poor little boy who admired the castle and memorized its architectural lines.

He settled in the United States when he was 19 and settled in Akron, Ohio.

He journeyed to Denver by oxcart in 1859 and opened one of the city's first merchandise stores on what is now Blake st. To equip his store it was necessary for him to freight merchandise from Omaha and St. Joseph.

During those first years in the city he made 16 trips across the prairie, always alone, disregarding the dangers of Indian attack.

Following one of his first trips he arrived back to discover that the man who had been left in charge of his store had packed up the remaining merchandise and money and departed for parts unknown.

Good started over.

In 1862 he married Rosalie Wagner of Mishawaka, Indiana. The couple was prominent in the early social life of Denver.

Good was a hardworking and resourceful man. He branched out in many enterprises. He established the old German Union Bank of Denver in 1870, was interested in railroad ventures and represented the Milwaukee brewery and later the Union Brewery. He consolidated the two in 1900 into the Tivoli-Union.

It wasn't until 1889 that Good began construction of the home of his dreams--a reproduction of the castle he had stared at throughout his childhood.

It was a busy time in the construction field on Capitol Hill. Houses were going up everywhere in the area south and east of E. Colfax ave. and Broadway.

The Good home cost more than $300,000 to construct. The furniture all was imported. There were elaborately scrolled wrought-iron double doors that had a large initial "G" engraved on them.

Floors throughout the main floor were of solid oak in brick-shaped blocks set in a popular style of the day called "herringbone pattern." The huge wrought-iron and cut-glass lamps still stand and illuminate the front steps.

The art work on ceilings and walls was exquisite. Each room was finished in a different color. The room that seems to have garnered the attention from early-day reporters was the so-called Rose Room.

According to a description in the Denver Republican, the "walls of the room were furnished in tapestry."

There was a delicate tracery of roses in the material and cameo heads highlighted the corners of the highly decorated ceilings. Much of the heavy furniture carried the Good initial in heavy gold.

The Goods had six children, four of whom died after the family moved to the house. The only remaining son died in young manhood and left a widow. A daughter married and moved to the East.

Good died in 1918 of cancer of the throat. His widow and his son's widow stayed on in the house until Mrs. Good's death in 1936.

The house had been a rooming house since World War II.

[Photographs of John Good, Mrs. Good and the Castle accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, January 27, 1963, p. 21A

MRS. JOHN GOOD

Mrs. John Good, Denver Resident Since City Began, Is Dead at 91 Came Here Bride of 16, Passed Thru Pioneer Hardships to Become Cultural Leader of Community
By GLENN T. NEVILLE

Death came Thursday morning to Mrs. John Good, whose life story was the story of Denver.

Mrs. Good arrived in Denver in 1862 a bride of 16, brave, eager, one of the first and certainly one of the most beautiful women in the infant empire that was not to become a state for another 14 years.

The last of her family, she died at the age of 91 in her home, 1007 Pennsylvania st.--the three-story stone palace on the northwest corner of 10th ave. and Pennsylvania st., which her late husband bought with one of the first great fortunes of early-day Denver, riches that began with a yoke of oxen and the merchandise that one prairie wagon would hold.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. in the residence with Rev. Henry S. Foster, pastor of the Church of the Ascension, in charge. Burial will be in the family vault at Fairmount Cemetery.

In telling the story of Mrs. Good, the usual identifying phrases such as "social and cultural leader" and "resident of Denver for 74 years" are flat and meaningless.

She was a social leader, one who had carried water from the Platte River with her own hands, done the washing for a family of eight, borne six children before she was 24, worn homespun dresses, crossed the plains nine times by stagecoach and covered wagon, and seen her clapboard and log home surrounded by hostile Indians.

She was a cultural leader, one who could speak French and German fluently before she was 16, one who could smilingly leave boarding school and set out with her 28-year-old husband for an unknown and savage country.

Denver was three years old when she came here. It was a way station of crude huts on the route to Gregorys Gulch and the other diggings that had drawn men, lode-stone-like, hundreds of miles across the hostile prairies.

Dreams of Empire

The most imaginative of the adventurous population--among them William N. Byers, who had founded The Rocky Mountain News in 1859--had notions of a future empire. But they were the stuff of dreams. Hopes, at best. There was no certainty that this flimsy settlement at the junction of Cherry Creek and the Platte would survive.

Mrs. Good saw the settlement for the first time on the summer day of 1862, when, from the seat of the covered wagon laboring over the Platte River trail she was able to discern that the buildings shimmering in the heat were not another plains mirage.

John Good was in the mercantile business, into which he had invested a modest capital built up by freighting goods across the Indian-infested prairies. He had made profits quickly as a freighter. A man who could safely conduct merchandise from Leavenworth to Denver could name his own price for the service.

Native of Alsace

Mr. Good had been born in Alsace-Lorraine and had come to this country as a young man, going first to Akron, Ohio, where one of his brothers lived.

Mrs. Good was born Rosalia Wagner, May 30, 1845, in Mishawaka, Ind. She was educated in public schools and then sent to boarding school.

Her family was acquainted with the Good family in Akron. She was a child of only 13 when John Good struck out across the prairies in a covered wagon to find his fortune. He was the only settler, by the way, to make the crossing from Fort Leavenworth to Denver alone in 1859. All others came in caravans, with military guard.

When he returned to the "East" for a visit in 1862, he found Rosalia Wagner had become a woman.

They were married. The trip to Denver was their honeymoon.

Their first child was born here in 1863, and it was in the same year that John Good, having made a deal for the sale of the business, took his bride and baby and returned to Akron, intending to make his home there.

Back to Denver

It was not long, however, until Mr. Good realized the sale of his Denver interests had not helped him. Payments on the transaction stopped. He returned to Denver to repossess the business.

Mrs. Good followed him by stagecoach.

Her trip to Fort Leavenworth was uneventful.

But there the bearded men at the stage company office shook their heads.

The soldiers would not let the stages start out, and the reason was Indian trouble.

"But I have to get to Denver," Mrs. Good insisted almost tearfully.

It was no use.

The Cheyennes and the Sioux were out with war paint. It would be suicide for a coach to try to run the gauntlet.

The delay lengthened into days, week, two months.

Finally permission was given for a stage to start. It had a heavy guard of cavalry. Mrs. Good was a passenger.

Second Baby Born

On the day she arrived in Denver, her second baby was born.

She and her husband gave up their previous idea of returning to "civilization" They would make their home here. At first it was only a frame house--the second built in Denver--at about the point where 23rd st. crosses the Platte today.

Mrs. Good carried water from the river, did her washing and housework. The keeping of a well-ordered and immaculate house remained a passion with her thruout life.

She had another task. John Good, born and reared in that buffer strip between France and Germany, could speak English fluently, if with an accent, but he could read only German. His bride taught him to read English, so well that before his death he was schooled in the classics and accounted one of the best-read men in Denver.

The years of hardship were not many.

Soon there was a new house, a mansion for those days, at about 16th and Welton sts., and later the palatial residence at 1007 Pennsylvania st., which Mr. Good purchased.

Surrounded by Savages

Before leaving her first home, however, Mrs. Good had one exciting brush with Indians. The place was surrounded at dusk one day by savages, taunting, derisive and hostile. Mrs. Good locked the doors. Mr. Good, returning from town, spurred thru the Redskins and grasped a rifle from the wall, prepared to shoot it out. His wife stopped him, and in so doing perhaps averted serious trouble. Soldiers arrived to disperse the party before any attempt was made to enter the house.

Between 1862 and 1870, when the first railroad came to Denver, Mrs. Good crossed the plains nine times by stagecoach or covered wagon.

She knew the Platte River and the Smoky Hill trails by heart.

She knew Ben Holliday, the "Napoleon of the Plains," one of the most famous of the old stagecoach operators, for whom a street in early-day Denver, later renamed Market, was designated.

Travel Abroad

The prairie travel was but a prelude to journeys that were to carry Mrs. Good all over the globe. In 1878, John Good took his entire family to Europe. They visited all the capitals, even St. Petersburg in Czarist Russia, and were among the first Coloradans to travel abroad.

Mrs. Good made many subsequent trips.

Vivacious, beautiful and queen-like despite her small stature, Mrs. Good not only was an engaging conversationalist on all subjects but a raconteur of travel tales without peer.

The house at 1007 Pennsylvania st. is filled with treasures of her travels, and there also is a sumptuous wardrobe which covers every period and every fashion from the time Mrs. Good was a bride to the present day. There are brocades, silks, satins, laces and velvets, picture hats, feathered and flowered, furs and fine cloth.

Charm Despite Age

Four of Mrs. Good's children died when they were young.

A daughter, Mrs. John Everett Hasler, died in 1925, and a son, John Edward Good, Denver capitalist, who carried on his father's business ventures, died in 1931.

The latter's widow, now Mrs. Raymond Royce Kent, arrived here from New York Wednesday and was with Mrs. Good when she died.

Mrs. Good's charm was not lessened by age, nor was her enthusiasm or zest for life.

She took frequent trips into the country, and liked to ride at a speed of about 60 miles an hour. "What's the matter, Duncan?" she would say to her chauffeur, "Step it up a little, please!"

She was giving a dinner party the night she was stricken with her last illness.

[Four pictures of Mrs. Good, taken at various times in the latter years of her life, accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, October 2, 1936, pp. 1 and 8

JOHN GOOD'S CASTLE

By EDITH EUDORA KOHL

John Good, who ox-teamed a load of merchandise into Denver in the spring of '59, was not a man to build castles in the air. But he built one of rock that was a wonder of the west.

Many palatial homes were built in Denver during the mining boom but the Good place, known as "The Castle," is one to which the name truly applies. It was patterned after those of the Alsace from which John Good had migrated at the age of 20.

With its irregular lines, and curves and towering cupolas, the Castle stands at the corner of East Tenth avenue and Pennsylvania street, little changed by time or weather. Built of native red sandstone, with a red-tiled roof, it covers a sixty-foot front on Pennsylvania, and some 100 feet on Tenth avenue.

Prices of materials and labor were only a fraction of what they are today when the building was erected, but it is said to have cost a quarter-million dollars. The magnificent interior decorations and the imported furniture may have doubled that figure.

Huge double doors, embellished by wrought-iron work open into a veritable maze of rooms, halls, wings and corridors--enough to confuse the bravest explorer.

It became a sort of legend after Good's death that bags of silver and gold from his mines were hidden in some secret nook of the old castle, or behind secret panels in the third-floor library. But concealed doors in the library were found to lead to a barroom, well-stocked with rare liquors, and thence up a stairway to one of the castle towers.

Good's introduction to Denver was promising of anything but a palatial home. He left his first load of merchandise in care of a friend and went back east for a second shipment. But when he returned many weeks later, he found the man had sold the entire stock and disappeared with the proceeds.

Good re-established his store and eventually made sixteen trips across the plains to freight in stock. In 1862 Good married Rosalie Wagner of Mishawaka, Ind.

The first brewery in the Denver region was founded by Good, but his vast wealth was not built, as many believe, on beer alone. He went into railroad building with Moffat, invested in mines and real estate, and in the early '70s organized the German National bank of Denver. In 1900 Good consolidated the Milwaukee and Union brewery into the Tivoli-Union of which he became president.

After moving to the castle, John Good was engulfed in business and civic affairs and Rosalie was kept busy with their three sons and three daughters, and managing the household with the sixteen to twenty servants required to run the establishment.

John was a lover of fine horses with which his large stable was filled. His high-stepping steeds were a familiar attraction on Denver streets.

But sorrow darkened the great castle many times. The Goods lost five of their six children. When John Good died in 1918, only a son, John Edward, a Yale graduate, prominent clubman and socialite, was left.

Then, in 1931, John Edward died suddenly of a heart attack while vacationing along the Yellowstone in Montana. His wife, Mabel LoRaine, continued to live in the old castle with John Good's widow until she was married to Raymond Royce Kent in 1935. Mrs. John Good died in 1936. She was in her nineties. The estate then passed into the hands of Mrs. Kent.

After Mrs. Good's death the castle was sold and converted into a select guest home with public dining rooms. In the post-war housing shortage it served as a students' boarding home.

Though lacking the original rich furnishings, the interior with its rare decorations has not been greatly altered.

The Castle's Rose room probably had no equal for splendor in its day. Elaborate designs were carved in the ivory-like ceiling, and the walls still retain the original rose-design paper.

Cameo heads grace the corners of the room, and winged and draped full-length feminine figures are also to be seen. The marble fireplaces have bas-relief panels, and a large "G" was engraved in gold on each piece of furniture.

The ground story flooring is of solid oak inlay with brick-shaped blocks laid in herringbone pattern. Today, there is not a nail showing and not a crack visible. Wrought-iron and cut-glass lamps still flank each entrance.

The Good house accommodated sixty students. To many of them, no doubt, the installation of a new furnace and other comforts were of greater interest than artistic grandeur.

The Castle was recently sold again, and the purchaser plans to restore the interior to a new splendor and open dining rooms for groups appreciative of a dignified atmosphere.

The large stable whose architecture conforms with that of the Castle is set back in the beautiful grounds facing Pennsylvania street. This part of the property is owned by A. D. Jones, realtor, who has remodeled the two-story structure into offices which he occupies.

Denver Post, July 4, 1948, p. 5, Empire Magazine Section, Denver Mansions: VI

E. W. GOODAN FAMILY

Eaton, Colorado

E. W. Goodan is listed among pioneers who came to Eaton in 1880. He made the trip at 17 against his father's wishes but with his consent. He began work for Governor Eaton on the Larimer & Weld almost at once, living in the camp. In his second year he rented a farm from Mr. Eaton and engaged A. J. Smillie to assist him with the farm work.

While working with a scraper in the early spring of the second year, the earth-filled implement fell against his leg, breaking it. A. J. Eaton took him to the home of his aunt, Rebecca Eaton, and Dr. Hawes, pioneer physician of Greeley, was summoned. Afterward Dr. Hawes delighted in telling the boy's father how, when he announced after four visits to the injured lad he would not be needed further, the boy inquired the amount he owed him. Dr. Hawes said he did not suppose Willie Goodan could pay him anyway so he told him just what four trips at that distance would cost, and Goodan, pulling out his wallet, began counting out the bills. The doctor stared in amazement and finally amended, "Well, for cash I'll make it just half." He got the cash.

Will Goodan persuaded his father, John A., to move to Colorado with his family in 1882, and they farmed together. After having accumulated sufficient money, E. W. Goodan went to Nebraska and fed cattle, afterward going into a mercantile business with two brothers. Goodan moved his wife and two children back to Eaton in 1891 and began working in A. J. Eaton's store and in four years purchased the partnership with Felton.

. . . The town's future as a health resort was predicted too by the Herald editor, Goodan, who based his prediction on his observation that many with throat and lung troubles had come to Eaton to benefit from its salubrious climate, and stated many more would come if a suitable place were established in the town for their comfort and convenience. Mr. Goodan advocated the construction of a sanitarium for hotel for health seekers.

In favor of politics John Goodan relinquished ownership and control of the Eaton Herald to J. E. Snook, with the deal consummated on June 27, 1896. Goodan served one term as county treasurer and two terms as county commissioner.

After thirteen years of operating the pioneer store of Eaton, A. J. Eaton sold the grocery part of the big store to George L. Felton and E. W. Goodan.

Eaton (Colorado) Herald, July 5, 1940

LEWIS GOODARD

Lewis Goodard, born October 23, 1841, Indiana; died August 4, 1918, Boulder; married, May 31, 1866, Nancy Smith who died May 4, 1906. Both were born in Tippecanoe, Indiana, came to Boulder County 1874, lived in Boulder, Leadville and Springdale, Colorado. He was a Veteran of the Civil War.

Children:

- 1 - Frank, born May 3, 1867
- 2 - Esther, born July 14, 1870; died December 10, 1932; married Joseph Chedsey
- 3 - Zoe Elia, born April 27, 1874; married (1) Thurlow of Gold Hill, 1891; (2) Thomas Wold, April 15, 1905, born in Norway. She died August 3, 1947
  - 1 - Edna Thurlow, married Harry McCollar of Pueblo
  - 2 - Mary Thurlow, married Earle Meyers
  - 3 - Lewis Wold, about 1906
  - 4 - Opal Wold, born 1911; married ____ Harper of Denver
  - 5 - Beryl Wold, married John Strawsnyder of Boulder
    - 1 - Shirley, born about 1930, other children
- 4 - Edith Goodard, born February 6, 1880; married William Dennion
- 5 - Carl, born August 10, 1878; died October 2, 1878

From "Boulder County Pioneers" by Jennie E. Stewart

JOHN H. GOODE

Date: October 30, 1937

No. 2 B912 D5 E16 F107
MAS/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

John H. Goode, Investments
205 First National Bank Building, Denver, Colorado

John H. Goode, son of A. F. and Eleanor (Seaton) Goode; born in the Indian Territory (now Paoli, Oklahoma), February 12, 1891.

A. F. Goode, son of John H. Goode (I), was born in Grayson County, Texas. He was a farmer and rancher, as well as a cattle dealer in Oklahoma. He died in 1933, and is buried in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. His wife, Eleanor (Seaton) Goode, who is a native of Hannibal, Missouri, resides in Oklahoma City.

John H. Goode, attended grade schools, in the Indian Territory, and was a student at the Lexington (Oklahoma) High School. He attended the University of Oklahoma, 3 years, after which he was employed as an accountant by the T. P. M. & M. Railroad Company, in Texas. In 1915, he located in Denver, Colorado, where he was auditor and bookkeeper for the U. S. Bank of Denver. He later was bookkeeper for the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company, in Denver, and in 1918, entered the bond business. He enlisted for service in the World War, in 1918, and was stationed at Ft. Logan, Colorado, but never saw active service. In 1922, he assisted in organizing a bond company, and in 1928, he established John H. Goode & Co., investment and municipal bond business, in Denver. In 1933, he opened his present office, specializing in investments. Mr. Goode, who is branch manager of the Bond Department for the city and county of Denver, is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Masonic Lodge, Commandery, Consistory, and Shrine; Lions Club; Denver Athletic Club; Lake Country Club; Cherry Hills Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. Mr. Goode attends the Presbyterian Church. His hobbies are hunting, and golf.

On October 20, 1937, John H. Goode married Eula Ferguson, of Kansas City.

JAMES L. GOREE

Date: October 2, 1937

No. 2 B891 D5 E16 F75
LCD/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

James L. Goree, Attorney,
Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

James L. Goree, son of Dr. James L. and Victoria (Evans) Goree; born in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, July 20, 1889.

Dr. James L. Goree, son of Dr. James L. and Mary (Dixon) Goree, was born in Tennessee. He was a physician, and died in 1905. His wife, Victoria (Evans) Goree, daughter of T. H. Evans, was born in Kentucky, and died in 1913.

James L. Goree, father of Dr. James L., and son of James Lyle and Martha Goree, was born in Alabama, in 1817. He later moved to Arkansas County, Arkansas, where he was a cotton planter. He was one of the founders of Judson College (girls' school), at Marion, Alabama. He died in 1866. His wife, Mary (Dixon) Goree, was a native of Tennessee.

James Lyle Goree, father of James L., was born in South Carolina, and was of French-Huguenot descent. Members of the Goree family were cotton planters.

James L. Goree, was a student of the University of Arkansas (Fayetteville), class of 1910. He was admitted to the Arkansas State Bar, in 1913, and to the Illinois State Bar, in that same year. He then engaged in the practice of law in Chicago, and was assistant general attorney for the Chicago Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, until 1922, subsequently moving to Denver, Colorado, where he is assistant attorney for the same railway company. He also maintains a general practice of law. Mr. Goree, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; Denver Law Club; Denver Club; Denver Country Club; University Club of Chicago; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church.

On October 31, 1936, James L. Goree married Alice Altman, daughter of J. I. and Anna Altman. Mrs. Goree was born in Omaha, Nebraska

LEO R. GOTTLIEB

By GENE LINDBERG
Denver Post Staff Writer

Even if he is about to celebrate his 91st birthday, Leo R. Gottlieb of Trinidad, Colo., has found he's "still too young to retire."

So he's going back to the business he knows best--selling insurance.

"That's why I'm up here now," the diminutive and dapper southern Coloradan said in Denver Saturday.

"At the Denver office of the Continental Casualty Co. of Chicago, Donald S. Vernon is filling me in on all the details of casualty, hospitalization, accident and health insurance.

"As a salesman I never misrepresented anything in my life, and I'm not going to start now through lack of information."

Anywhere you meet him, Leo Gottlieb would be a remarkable human being. He says he's one of the oldest living subscribers of The Denver Post. In Trinidad, he's a regular civic landmark.

He's been there for 89 years. In Colorado Springs they know him as the chairman of the board of the Colorado Deaf and Blind School. He was appointed to that board originally by Gov. James T. Peabody more than 50 years ago.

Gottlieb was born in Sandusky, Ohio on Nov. 7, 1869--just 10 days before the opening of the Suez Canal. In this country, 1869 was quite a year, too. It was the year of the original "Black Friday" on Wall Street, Sept. 24.

In May of that year, the golden spike was driven at Promontory, Utah, completing the Union Pacific Railroad, and Memorial Day was celebrated for the first time. On Dec. 10, Wyoming adopted woman's suffrage, a national "first."

While still in his mother's arms, Leo rode the train from Ohio to Kit Carson, Colo. There they took a stagecoach for Trinidad, where his father, David Gottlieb, had started a mercantile business.

Leo attended schools there, but being a sickly child, he says, he never finished the eighth grade. Later his health improved, and when he was 21, he started selling insurance.

That was the line he followed save for a brief time when he went to Cokedale, Colo., to help out in his father's new store. He sold his insurance business then to Cashman and Holland, who sold it to S. C. Hall. Later he bought it back. He operated his general agency under his own name until 10 years ago, then merged it into the Gottlieb-Baxby agency.

Leo sold the business last September, planning to take it easy. But this, he says, was a mistake.

"I'm too young to retire. So I'm taking on a line not competitive with those carried by my old agency."

The Gottlieb memory goes back a long way. He knew Uncle Dick Wooten, the near-legendary pioneer who ran the toll gate to New Mexico, collecting from the wagons going to Raton, N. M.

He was a pal of the fabulous Damon Runyon when that Colorado worthy was a reporter for the Trinidad Advertiser, run by the grandfather of Barron Beshoar, Denver bureau chief for Time, Life Magazines. He saw Black Jack, the notorious train-robber taken, wounded, off the train for treatment by a Trinidad doctor. When they hanged Black Jack later, the rope literally jerked his head off.

Chenoweth Booster

Leo Gottlieb is a lifelong friend and staunch supporter of Congressman J. Edgar Chenoweth (R) of Trinidad, the father of William Chenoweth, Denver advertising man.

"I used to ride up on the stagecoach with Walker Hines when he drove for the old Wells Fargo Express," Leo recalls. "We made a Mutt and Jeff pair, Walker being 6-foot-2, and I'm only 2-foot-6." Later he went to the University of Virginia, became an attorney, joined the legal staff of the Santa Fe railroad, became general counsel, and wound up chairman of the board.

Actually, Leo says, he's taller than 2-foot-6. His real height is 5 feet, 1½ inches. But he stands tall in many ways.

He married 43 years ago in Kansas City, Mo. He and his wife, Mrs. Hulda Baum Gottlieb, have one daughter, Mrs. Stanley Mindlin of St. Louis. There are two grandchildren, Janet Mindlin, 14, and Harold, 11.

Leo is a member of Trinidad Lodge No. 89, AF&AM. He joined nearly 70 years ago, and has been master of the lodge five times. He belongs to the Southern Colorado Consistory at Pueblo, and El Jebel Shrine Temple, Denver.

He proudly carries a 50-year card from El Jebel. He's past president of the Trinidad Rotary Club, and past exalted ruler of the Trinidad Elks. He's president of the Alfred Freudenthal Foundation of his home city--a trust fund which a wealthy doctor created to further non-sectarian religious education.

[A photograph of Leo R. Gottlieb accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, September 5, 1960, p. 39

AARON GOVE

Biographical data to accompany the portrait of Aaron Gove
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Estellus Aaron Gove, born September 26, 1839, at Hampton Falls, New Hampshire

Name of father: John Francis Gove, a native of Hampton Falls, New Hampshire

Name of mother: Sarah Jane Wadleigh, a native of Kensington, New Hampshire

Attended school or college: Hampton. Hampton Academy, Mahew and Dwight Schools, Boston, Massachusetts. Illinois Normal University, Bloomington, Illinois

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: A.M., 1878, Dartmouth College; LLD., 1888, University of Colorado

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: September, 1874

Married: February 13, 1865, at North Andover, Massachusetts

Name of wife: Caro Coggeshall Spofford, daughter of Farnham Spofford and Lydia Coggeshall

Names of children and years of birth: F. Edward Gove, born October 29, 1865; Aaron Morrill, born July 12, 1867; Ellen Spofford, born January 29, 1870; Caro, born February 24, 1879

Avocation: 1843 to 1861, in school as pupil or teacher; 1861-64, in Federal Service, 330 Illinois
Volunteer Infantry; 1874-1915, Denver Colorado

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government:
Superintendent of Schools, 1874-1904, Denver

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Aaron Gove

Additional References:

Who's Who - 1914-15

National Cyclopedia of American Biography, v. 12, p. 531

The Encyclopedia of Biography, v. 38, p. 67

Smiley, History of Colorado, vol. 2, p. 411

Hall, History of Colorado, vol. 4, p. 455

Trail, 12:27, August 1919

Glory That was Gold, 1940, p. 27

Denver Post, August 1, 1919, p. 3

Denver Times, August 1, 1919, p. 3

Biography File

MRS. IDA GRAHAM
From Oxcart Era to Atomic Age:
Meet Denver's Mrs. Ida Graham, 94
By EVA HODGES
Denver Post Staff Writer

It took two months to travel by oxcart from Kansas City to Denver eighty-eight years ago when Mrs. Ida Graham of 1802 Pennsylvania street rode across the plains with her parents.

She celebrates her ninety-fourth birthday Saturday in an era when a plane can circle the world in less than four days.

Mrs. Graham left her birthplace in southwestern Wisconsin with her parents in the spring of 1858, when she was 3. After a year in Iowa and a winter in Kansas, she was 5 when she traveled on to Denver, and old enough to remember the Indians who rode up to their oxcart train for food handouts; and the herds of buffalo.

Mrs. Graham's father, a lumberman by trade, set up a saw mill thirty-five miles south of Denver.

Her late husband, George H. Graham, who was active in local politics and at one time was sheriff of Arapahoe county, died in 1905. Their descendants number down to the fifth generation.

Three living children are Mrs. Edna Lind of 1009 Eleventh avenue, Mrs. George E. O'Brien of 1802 Pennsylvania street, and Kent W. Graham of 1420 East Thirteenth avenue.

Mrs. Graham has seven grandchildren, ten great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren. In two cases the great-great-grandchildren represent an unbroken line of five generations.

In those groups are Mrs. O'Brien's daughter, Mrs. Audrey O'Brien Norton of Denver; her granddaughter, Mrs. Audrey Ann Anderson of Buckley field, and her great-granddaughter, Claudia, aged 1½.

Also Mrs. O'Brien's son, Gerald O'Brien of Los Animas; his daughter, Mrs. Barbara O'Brien King of Pioneer Village, and a granddaughter, Kathleen, aged 15 months.

Thirty-five relatives and friends will gather Saturday in Mrs. O'Brien's home to celebrate Mrs. Graham's ninety-fourth birthday.

[A photograph of Mrs. Graham accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, April 2, 1949, p. 2

GOVERNOR JAMES GRANT

Governor Grant Built the Graciousness Of the Plantation Home
Into His Mansion, Now Occupied by the Humphreys Family
By EDITH EUDORA KOHL

One of the most beautiful places in this "city of beautiful homes" is that of Ira B. Humphreys between Seventh and Eighth avenues on Pennsylvania street. This originally was the home of Gov. James Benton Grant, the distinguished pioneer who built it.

Grant, the son of an Alabama planter, patterned the place on the southern plantation homes.

The magnificent mansion, set high above street level, is in the center of terraced grounds covering a square block. It is, in fact, an estate in the heart of the Queen City that grew up around it. Driveways and flights of stone stairs lead through the grounds to the house. Every room opens onto one of the broad stone-pillared porches that surround the three-story mansion.

James Grant, with a desire for land around him, settled on the prairie outside Brown's Bluff. His first home, a modest two-story frame structure built on one end of the property, still stands. The lower end of the grounds which has since been landscaped was his cow pasture.

Planned in the late '80s, the completion of the mansion was delayed several years due to the silver panic. Terry Boyle, Philadelphia architect, supervised the project.

The Humphreys, who acquired the place about the time of World war I, are one of the leading industrial families of the west today.

James Grant belonged to a large family which made its imprint on many frontiers. One uncle, James, an attorney, was one of the founders of Davenport, Ia. After the Civil war had destroyed the family plantation, he helped to educate his nieces and nephews, among them James B., who attended an agricultural college in Iowa. This uncle had started one of the first smelters in Colorado at Leadville and he sent young James to the famous mining institute at Freiburg, Germany, to study.

After a year or two in the mines of Australia, James B. Grant was made manager of the Leadville smelter and later became president of the Omaha & Grant Smelting company. Eventually he became an executive of the American Smelting & Refining company.

As a metallurgist he was internationally known. It was his report to Holland capitalists on the Leadville district that induced them to buy the bonds of the Canon City-Leadville railroad. Grant also made the survey and promoted the building of the famous five-mile Yak tunnel that opened up deep mining in that region.

In 1882 he was elected governor of Colorado when the state government was yet in a formative stage. Under his administration thousands of new settlers were attracted to Colorado.

He was an official of the Denver National bank, president of the Denver board of education for many years and a cofounder of Colorado Woman's college. Grant, a warm, kindly character, died in 1911.

Mrs. Grant, born Mary Goodell, daughter of an Illinois governor, was active in the development of Denver's social and cultural life. They had two children--Lester E., now of New York, and James Benton Jr., who died recently in Denver.

Dr. William W. Grant Sr., a brother of the governor, who also settled here, was one of the leading physicians of that day. He was president of the state medical associations of Iowa and of Illinois before coming west.

W. W. Grant Jr., now a prominent Denver attorney, recalls: "My father and Uncle James loved fishing and hunting and they were never happier than when on such trips together. As a young boy, I accompanied my father on his rounds, holding the horses while he made his calls to these mansions whose history The Denver Post is recording.

"My cousins and I spent a lot of time in Uncle James' mansion, which was magnificently equipped for every kind of recreation."

The Grants, noted for their hospitality, made their home a center for their many friends and for young folk in whom they were greatly interested. On the semi-basement floor was a billiard room, a bowling alley the length of the house and other recreation rooms. The combination ballroom and auditorium has a good-sized stage. During the late war the Humphreys converted it into a Red Cross center.

One stands almost awed by the grandeur of this dignified old palace. The entrance hall and grand stairway make up one end of the luxurious livingroom.

Off another entrance into the livingroom is the drawingroom with gold-glinted satin tapestried walls. The library and diningroom adjoin the livingroom on the opposite side. The six large bedrooms on the second floor all open around the sitting room to which an open stairway leads. There are no closed hallways and double doors as are found in many of these old homes.

There is a full third floor with more bedrooms, servants' quarters and utility rooms. Many of the original fixtures and the furniture have been replaced and some of the rooms redecorated. The solid mahogany finish and plain heavy-beamed ceilings are a contrast to the elaborate carvings of the era in which the house was built.

Col. A. E. Humphreys, father of Ira Humphreys, a rugged individualist, also from the south was a habitual trailbreaker. He opened up resources on many new frontiers reaching from his native West Virginia to the Rockies with interests in coal fields, timberlands and iron in Minnesota.

He came to Colorado in 1898 where he developed properties in Creede and Cripple Creek. He opened the Big Muddy oil field of Wyoming and pioneered rich oil fields in Texas.

The Humphreys had two sons, Albert E. Jr. and Ira B. Ira was married to Lucille Pattison of a prominent Maryland family. The two families lived together in the great mansion on the hill until the death of the elder Humphreys. Albert E. Jr. married Ruth Boettcher of the famous Boettcher family.

The sons carry on the work of their father, operating old properties, developing new ones. Some of the old Creede mines are still producing lead, zinc and some silver.

Seldom have two families with such records of western development as the Grants and the Humphreys lived in the same house. The Humphreys also have carried on the dignified traditions of the old south which the Grant mansion, built in the boisterous west, always has held.

[Photographs of James Grant and A. E. Humphreys accompany the article.]

Denver Post, August 1, 1948, p. 8, Magazine Section, Denver Mansions: X

WILLIAM WEST GRANT

Date: August 28, 1937

No. 2 B858 D5 E16 F11
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANA

William West Grant, Attorney,
Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

William West Grant, son of Dr. William West, Sr. and Mary Adeline (Moseley) Grant; born in Davenport, Iowa, June 27, 1881.

Dr. William West Grant, Sr.*, son of Dr. Thomas Macdonough and Mary Jane (Benton) Grant, was born in Russell County, Alabama. When 16 years of age, he entered a company of Alabama Artillery, known as Clanton's Battery, in Gen. James H. Clanton's Brigade. He served during the last 16 months of the Civil War, being promoted sergeant of Artillery when only 16 years of age. After the war, he returned home and began the study of medicine. He was a student of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia (Pennsylvania), 1 year (1867), and graduated from Bellevue and Long Island Medical College (now Long Island College of Medicine), in Brooklyn, New York, with an M. D. degree in 1868. He began his medical practice at Dakota City, Nebraska (near Sioux City, Iowa). In 1872, he moved to Davenport, Iowa. Dr. Grant spent 1 year (1889) in Europe, where he engaged in the study of surgery and gynecology in the hospitals of Berlin, Vienna, and London. While in England, he studied with the English surgeon, Dr. Joseph Lister. In 1889, Dr. Grant settled in Denver, Colorado, where he continued in the practice of his profession. He performed the first operation for appendicitis. He was one of the founders of the American College of Surgeons, and was serving as a member of the board of governors of this organization at the time of his death. He was a member of the board of trustees of the American Medical Association, 20 years. He was the author of more than 100 papers pertaining to surgery, and was an authority on plastic surgery. Dr. Grant performed his last operation when 84 years of age. He served as surgeon general of Colorado during the Spanish-American War, and as a major and chief of the Fort Logan H. Roots (Arkansas) surgical staff, during the World War. He died in January 1934. His wife, Mary Adeline (Moseley) Grant, daughter of Lycurgus Hamilton Moseley, was born in Franklin, Tennessee. She died in January 1888. Three of her brothers and four of her uncles served in the Civil War. Dr. William West, Sr. and Mary Adeline (Moseley) Grant were the parents of 2 children: (1) William West. (2) James. [Dr. West married (2nd) Nanny Craig, daughter of James Green of Culpepper County, Virginia.]

Dr. Thomas Macdonough Grant, father of Dr. William West Grant, Sr., and son of James (II), was born in Raleigh, North Carolina, September 11, 1814. He was a physician and a planter, in Alabama. His wife, Mary Jane (Beston) Grant, was born at Ft. Mitchell, Alabama. They were the parents of 7 children. Their son, the Hon. James Benton Grant*, served as the first Democratic governor of Colorado, having been elected to the office in 1882. Their son, Whitaker Macdonough Grant, was appointed by Grover Cleveland to see that the practice of seal piracy in the Bering Sea was discontinued. Mr. Grant was able to accomplish this within 2 years. He later was a pioneer oilman in Oklahoma.

James Grant (II), father of Dr. Thomas Macdonough Grant, and son of James (I), was born in Raleigh, North Carolina. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. He was a planter in North Carolina, and at one time served as comptroller of State. His son, James Grant (III), was the first president of the Rock Island Railroad Company. James Grant (I), was born at Glen Moriston, Scotland, and later emigrated to America, settling in North Carolina, in 1746.

William West Grant, graduated from Dartmouth College, A. B., 1903, and later received an honorary A. M. degree from that school; graduate, University of Virginia Law School, LL. B., 1906. He was admitted to the Colorado State Bar, in 1919. Mr. Grant practiced his profession in New York City, 1 year, since which time he has practiced in Denver, Colorado. He served as a member of the Zoning Commission, 12 years. In 1929, he was chairman of the Governor's Committee to Investigate Penitentiary Riots. He served as president of the Colorado Civil Service Commission, in 1913, and of the Denver Civil Service Commission, in 1929. He is a director of the Hendrie & Bolthoff Manufacturing & Supply Co., and since 1931 has been a trustee of Dartmouth College. In 1918, during the World War, he served as a private in the Field Artillery Replacement, in the U. S. Army. He was a captain in the Officers' Reserve Corps, 1918-28.

He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association (president in 1925); Denver Bar Association (vice-president in 1925); Denver Country Club (life member); Denver Club; Mile High Club; National Civil Service Reform League (member, council); American Law Institute; American Judicature Society; Psi Upsilon, and Phi Delta Phi (fraternities); Casque and Gauntlet; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Episcopal Church (member, board of trustees of Colorado Diocese). His hobbies are horseback riding, and golf. Mr. Grant owns more than 20,000 acres in ranches.

On November 3, 1906, Mr. Grant married Gertrude Hendrie, daughter of Edwin B. Hendrie. Mrs. Grant was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Children: (1) Edwin Hendrie, who is a rancher, and a farmer. (2) William West (III), who is a student of the Harvard University Law School. (3) Melanie Mortimer, who married Robert Arbuthnot Hunter. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter reside in London, England.

Edwin B. Hendrie, father of Gertrude (Hendrie) Grant, moved with his family to Burlington, Iowa. He was a mining engineer. He settled in Montana in early days, being the second person to travel through Yellowstone Park. In 1872, he joined his brother, Charles Francis Hendrie, in Denver, Colorado, where the latter had settled in 1858. Edwin B. Hendrie died in Denver, in 1932. His father, Charles Francis Hendrie, Sr., was born in Stamford, Connecticut. He later owned and operated foundries in Council Bluffs and Burlington, Iowa. He built the first threshing machine in the latter city.

* For further data regarding William West Grant, Dr. William West Grant, Sr., and the Hon. James Benton Grant, see the following: "Who's Who in America" (1936-1937), vol. 19, p. 1023; James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 533, and vol. 5, p. 407; "Portrait and Biographical Record of the State of Colorado" (Chapman Publishing Co., Chicago, 1899), pp. 52, and 59; William N. Byers, "Encyclopedia of Biography of Colorado" (Century Publishing and Engraving Co., Chicago, 1901), vol. 1, pp. 253 and 254; "Portrait and Biographical Record of Denver (Colorado) and Vicinity" (Chapman Publishing Co., Chicago, 1898), pp. 152 and 159; and Jerome C. Smiley, "History of Colorado" (Lewis Publishing Co., Chicago, 1913, vol. 4, p. 42.

Mrs. W. W. Grant, D.A.R. #72478

WILLIAM W. GRANT

Biographical data to accompany portrait of William W. Grant, M.D.
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: William W. Grant, born at Russell County, Alabama

Name of father: Dr. Thomas McDonough Grant, a native of North Carolina

Name of mother: Mary Jayne Benton, a native of North Carolina

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: January 1890

Married: (1) Mary A. Moseley, the daughter of L. C. Moseley and Mary Starnes Moseley, at Franklin, Tennessee in 1878; (2) Nancy C. Green, daughter of Jas. W. Green and Anne Green, at Culpeper, Virginia in 1895.

Names of children: W. W. Grant, Jr.; James Grant

Avocation: Surgeon

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Medical Reserve Corps, USA, rank - 1st Lieutenant. Surgeon General Colorado, 1899 to 1904 inclusive. President, Board State Hospital Commissioners, 1900-1906. Private professional - Ex-President, Colorado State Medical Society - Western Surgical Association. President, Denver City and County Medical Society. Trustee, American Medical Association, 1907-1916 and other positions of minor character.

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: Original surgical operation. First appendectomy, Mouth operation, Nerve Anastomosis.

Please give autograph signature.

(signed) W. W. Grant

Biography File

WILLIAM W. GRANT

W. W. Grant Commits Writers' Mortal Sin Stops After Two Books Merely Because He Had Nothing More to Say

By ROBERT STAPP
Rocky Mountain News Writer

It is doubtful if W. W. Grant will ever rank with the literary immortals. He has the wrong slant on the writing business.

After 42 years as a practicing attorney, Grant turned to writing "just for something to do." He wrote two books and then he stopped--because he had nothing more to say. This is considered pretty flimsy reasoning in the writing game.

Grant started his writing career in 1950, after he had retired from the legal firm of Grant, Shafroth and Toll, by jotting down his reminiscences in longhand in a stenographer's notebook.

Informal Library

Without bothering to investigate the market, he had the A. B. Hirschfeld Press print 200 copies, which he distributed to his friends, retaining one copy for himself.

Immediately he was besieged by nostalgic old-timers for additional copies. He satisfied the demand, after a fashion, by referring those who didn't have the book to those who did, thus instituting sort of a W. W. Grant circulating library.

Having satisfied his creative impulse, he was prepared to lay down his pencil. But he was called from retirement by an appeal to his one great passion.

Every now and then, sober Denver citizens are startled, as they drive peacefully along the highway to Colorado Springs, to see a covey of horsemen clad in bright coats, riding hell-for-leather over the sage covered hills of Douglas County. This is the Arapahoe Hunt.

Hunt Historian

The Arapahoe Hunt is an organization of otherwise sane business and professional men fanatically dedicated to the ancient sport of riding to hounds. Among the most fanatic was W. W. Grant, a native of Davenport, Iowa.

Having established his literary reputation, Grant was commissioned by the hunt master to Chronical the history of the Arapahoe Hunt in commemoration of its 25th anniversary in 1954.

He set to work with his spiral notebook, but before he was well underway, he suffered a stroke which paralyzed his entire right side. Since he was right-handed, his literary career seemed to be at an end.

But Grant bought a portable typewriter and laboriously pecked out the book with one finger of his left hand. It was a labor of love.

The storied John Peel would perhaps be nonplussed to find himself riding to hounds in a vast semi-desert half a world away from the neat hedge-bordered fields of Lincolnshire. But he would feel at home. For the Arapahoe Hunt is conducted with the same punctilio and ceremony as it was in Pickwickian England.

Hunt Coyote

In only one significant particular does it depart from time-honored tradition. Instead of a fox, the quarry is a coyote.

Grant is quick to explain that the coyote is just as cunning as the fox, has more speed and stamina. Furthermore, coyotes are somewhat more plentiful in this section of the world than foxes.

The hunters ride, "flat saddles," wear the approved long-billed caps, tight-fitting breeches and scarlet jackets. The "whips" shout "tally-ho" and the master is absolute monarch of the hunt.

Lawrence Phipps Jr. has been master of The Arapahoe Hunt for a quarter of a century. During the war, when he was in military service, Grant was named joint master, a distinction which he esteems second only to his office as life trustee of Dartmouth College.

Hunt Protocol

The master of the hunt enforces a strict protocol while the hunt is in progress, designating the order in which riders shall take the jumps. Should any impetuous horseman commit the unforgivable sin of "riding among the hounds" it is the stern duty of the hunt master to banish him from the course.

The hunt master also has the final word on admission of new members and is empowered to bestow the coveted "pink" coat on those he deems worthy.

Of the 50 members of the Arapahoe hunt, only about 15 are authorized to wear the pink coat. (The "pink" coat is really scarlet. It is named after the English tailor who designed it).

Grant started riding to hounds around 1936. He was feeling "kind of peaked" and his eldest son, Ned, suggested that he get some exercise to "shake up his liver." It had the desired effect. Thereafter while his 17th st. cronies were ambling around the golf course on Wednesday afternoons, Grant was out chasing coyotes through the hills and valleys of Douglas County.

Keeps the Faith

He never regarded his hobby as anything unusual. He is accustomed to being in the minority. From his law offices in the Equitable Bldg. he was surrounded by Republicans as far as the eye could see. But he is a life-long Democrat.

His father was from Alabama and his mother was from Tennessee, and he has kept the faith.

He grew up in Denver and has never lived anywhere else, but Davenport. And that suits him all right.

After he was graduated from Dartmouth College and the University of Virginia law school, he came back here to establish his practice. During a brief interlude at Harvard Law School, he received a note from a Miss Gertrude Hendrie, who was attending a girl's school in Cambridge.

He remembered her as a "skinny, long-legged, suppressed little girl" who lived two blocks from the Grant family in Denver.

Changes Made

But in Cambridge, he found her the "best looking, most stylish gotten-up, high-stepping filly of seventeen" he had ever seen.

He was in love. He hasn't gotten over it yet, and they have been married 48 years.

She shares his enthusiasm for the hunt--at a respectful distance.

To her, a horse is "just a carnivorous animal," but she is an ardent "hilltopper." A hilltopper" is one who drives to the top of a hill in a comfortable car and watches the chase from that vantage point.

But she knows the jargon and she is quick to correct a barbarian who has the temerity to refer to the pack as "dogs."

"Hounds," she says reprovingly. "The temperature goes down if you call them dogs."

Lived in Castle

Mrs. Grant's father was a wealthy industrialist--the Hendrie of Hendrie and Bolthoff--and he owned the renowned Richtofen Castle in far East Denver.

He promised to build a home for the young couple on some of the acreage he owned nearby, but later concluded that "there's room here for all of us." So the Grants moved into the Castle and lived there for 30 years.

Shortly after the First World War, Grant formed a partnership with a couple of boyhood friends--Morrison Shafroth and Henry Toll. The other two members of the firm are still active in it, and Grant's son, Bill, has taken over his father's practice.

Although he ran for mayor in 1935 against Ben Stapleton, Grant maintains that he never really cared much for politics.

Just Too Soon

"I only ran because I felt the town needed fixing up," he says, "and I was dead right, but I was 12 years too soon."

He lost by 20,000 votes. Twelve years later he passed on the benefit of his experience to Quigg Newton, son of one of his closest friends. Newton avenged his defeat by swamping Stapleton in 1947. Young Bill Grant was Newton's campaign manager.

Grant retired from active practice in 1950, but he is still attached to the law. One of the suits he filed seven years ago is still being contested in federal court.

"I guess they haven't unraveled my argument yet," he chortles.

He remembers with even more satisfaction, though, a less involved argument. He was pitted against the flamboyant Lloyd Paul Stryker in a complicated civil case. In his summation, Stryker delivered a lengthy, not to say windy, oration.

Precedent

Grant stood up and observed: "In Lewis Carroll's 'The Hunting of the Snark,' the Bellman contends, 'If I say it three times it's so.' My opponent seems to be proceeding on the same hypothesis."

He won the case.

Grant lives now in an apartment at 99 Downing st. with his wife, the "hilltopper."

His pleasant memories are of the hunt, and they get along very amiably because riding to the hounds is her favorite "spectator--or I should say listening sport. You don't have to hear what somebody did on the 18th hole."

He is not entirely pleased with the changes in Denver.

"I preferred it when it was a city of 80,000 and open ditches ran beside the streets," he said. "But it doesn't make any difference what I prefer. It's going to grow up anyway."

[A photograph of W. W. Grant accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 22, 1955, p. 14

GRAVES-BRADLEY FAMILIES

Out of the Past Comes the Memories of The Graves-Bradley Families

The Graves family left Illinois early in the spring of 1860. Like so many others, they decided to come to the glorious west. They had all of their earthly possessions with them. The trip was long and tiresome, but not dull in any sense of the word. Somewhere along the way the Bradley family joined the wagon train. Both families had young people and they had fun, as well as hardships and accidents.

When they arrived in Colorado, Oliver Graves homesteaded a great strip of land on Clear Creek valley. Part of it was where the Sigman Packing Plant now stands. He became wealthy, not in gold, but in land.

Shortly after their arrival in Colorado, the romance that started on the trip across the plains was consummated in the marriage of Emily Graves and William Bradley. There were fourteen children in this family, ten of which lived to manhood.

My father was the second oldest. There were two children in our family. I, Loretta Bradley, married Eugene Pendleton, and we had four children, two boys and two girls. The two girls, Dorothy Cramm and Frances Barber, are both Territorial Daughters.

I am the proud grandmother of eight granddaughters, all of whom I hope will become Territorial Daughters in the near future.

Loretta E. Pendleton, Pres.

Territorial Daughters of Colorado, July, 1963

JOHN GRAY

Fruita Man, 82, Protests Neglect of Grave of John Gray,
Last Revolutionary Soldier

D. B. Downey of Fruita is 82 years old. But he's not too old to start a new project.

His project is to revive concern for "the last fighting soldier" of the American revolution--John Gray, who died at the age of 104 in 1868. Gray is buried in Noble county, Ohio, and Mr. Downey read recently that the grave has been neglected.

He believes that a veterans' organization, the Daughters of the American Revolution, or some other group should have sufficient interest in the nation's history to provide care for the grave.

Mr. Downey is a descendant of Gray, although the relationship, he said, is not clear.

"My grandmother's name was Gray," he said, "I think John Gray was her uncle, but I never paid much attention when my family used to talk about it. It wasn't until it was too late that I got interested."

Mr. Downey was born Nov. 12, 1869, just 18 months after John Gray died, and only a half-mile from Gray's home. An ex-newspaperman, Mr. Downey owned or worked on papers in Kansas and Oklahoma, but "retired" from newspaper work in 1908.

He's lived in the Fruita area for the last 33 years, farming and working on the railroad. His last job was as caretaker for the railroad at Loma.

He and Mrs. Downey have two sons now living in Loma, operating the Downey Trucking company.

Mr. Downey's interest in John Gray's grave was renewed when he read in two nationally-circulated publications of its neglect. Both said pictures of John Gray were unavailable, but Mr. Downey searched thru his possessions and found a photograph taken in 1862, bearing an autograph from the fly-leaf of a book written by John Gray after the Revolutionary war.

On the back of the photograph, an inscription says that John Gray "was born near Fairfax Court House, Virginia, January 6th, 1764, entered the service in 1780 at the age of 16, was with the Virginia troops at Yorktown and present at the surrender of Cornwallis. This last soldier of Washington's army died March 29th, 1868, aged 104 years, 2 months and 23 days." The photographs were offered for sale by "I. N. Knowlton, Cumberland, Ohio."

The Revolutionary soldier's grave, Mr. Downey said, is out in the country about a mile from Hiramberg, Ohio, on "the old McElroy place."

"I wish they'd do something about it," he said. "It's not right to neglect his grave. He was the last of the Revolutionary war soldiers."

[Pictures of D. B. Downey and John Gray accompany the article.]

Grand Junction Sentinel, December 9, 1951

NINA GRAY
Five Generations

A photograph with the caption: Little Tamara Hoffman Sunday met her three grandmothers for the first time. Tamara continues a living family line to five generations, aged 3 weeks to 85 years. Holding Tamara is her mother, Lorna, of 4109 Ames st., Mountain View. Looking on proudly are from left to right, Mrs. Charlotte Woodruff of 5583 Pecos st., the great-great grandmother; Mrs. Irene Meineke of Greeley, the great-grandmother, and Mrs. Nina Gray of 4105 Fenton st., Wheat Ridge, the grandmother.

Rocky Mountain News, January 6, 1958, p. 17

GEORGE GREEN

Pioneer's Life of Thrills Ends

George Green, 89, Veteran of Civil and Indian Wars, Succumbs Here

The last great adventure--death--came yesterday for George Green, 89, whose life has been as adventure-filled as a romantic novel.

The man who had made thrills part of his daily existence drifted from a four-day coma into death at his home at 4189 Utica st.

Mr. Green's drama-packed life had skipped from fighting Confederates at Antietam to driving an ox-cart across the plains, from skirmishing with Indians to piloting locomotives across frontier rails.

He reached Denver on the hard seat of a creaking ox-wagon in 1865. Mr. Green purchased two lots at 17th and Larimer sts.; soon decided the spot had no future and traded them for a team of ponies.

Indian Scout in Wyoming

From Denver he went to Wyoming and became an Indian scout at the time the first rails of the Union Pacific Railroad were inching across the prairies.

Later he joined an army regiment engaged in sporadic warfare with the Sioux in Montana and the Black Hills.

Mr. Green was with General Crook's outfit when Custer and his band were being massacred on the Little Big Horn only 30 miles away.

While in the army service, Mr. Green spent considerable time among the Sioux in the Black Hills and became a close friend of Red Cloud, Sitting Bull and other tribal chieftains.

Then he returned to Denver and entered the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. He was at the throttle of one of the first locomotives operating out of Denver.

Became Police Officer

From railroading, Mr. Green turned to police work. He was a patrolman on the Denver police force for a number of years until his retirement in 1905.

Mr. Green was born in Williamsburg, Pa., March 23, 1843. Later he moved to Illinois. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in a cavalry unit and saw service during virtually the entire struggle.

Six months ago Mr. Green suffered a paralytic stroke which left him virtually helpless. Another stroke attacked him a few days ago and he soon lapsed into unconsciousness.

Mr. Green was a life member of the Masonic Lodge, which will be in charge of funeral services at the Olinger Mortuary, 16th and Boulder sts., at 1:30 p. m. Thursday. Burial will be in Crown Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Green is survived by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Nellie Green, Denver, and a grandson, George.

Newspaper clipping, Denver, 1932 (?)

CLIFFORD GRIFFIN

Monument Honors Grieving Violinist

The Rocky Mountain News, with the help of the State Historical Society, is presenting a series of articles about Colorado's historical markers.

Here is one of the series.

Clifford Griffin, a young Englishman, sought his fortune in the golden mountains of Colorado in the 1880s.

Near Silver Plume, he opened the 7:30 Mine--so named because this was the hour he summoned the miners each day--and set about making enough money to bring his sweetheart from Shropshire. Griffin was a fine violinist and after a hard day in the mine, he would stand outside his cabin door and play.

With the first note, miners up and down the slope would appear in their doorways to hear the beautiful music.

Before he could bring his fiance to this country he received notice she had died.

Grief-stricken he fell into deep depression.

On June 10, 1887, Griffin dug a grave near his cabin overlooking Silver Plume.

As usual at the end of the day he stepped outside to play his violin and miners later said they had never heard more beautiful music than this day.

With the last note, he turned toward the grave, pulled a revolver, shot himself and fell face down into the grave.

His brother, Henage MacKenzie Griffin came to Colorado and on a lonely, rocky prominence near the grave erected a monument to his brother.

The large stone, 15 feet high, looks down on Silver Plume and off toward Loveland Pass.

[A photograph of the marker accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, July 27, 1964, p. 44

JAMES E. GRIFFITH

Date: October 30, 1937

No. 2 B912 D5 E16 F110
MAS/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. James E. Griffith, Attorney,
701 Midland Savings Building, Denver, Colorado

James E. Griffith, son of N. H. and Ida L. (Lindsey) Griffith; born in Denver, Colorado, September 11, 1899.

N. H. Griffith*, son of James Edwin and Katherine (Eidson) Griffith, was born at Calumet, Pike County, Missouri, November 29, 1871. He attended public school near Louisiana, Missouri, and graduated from LaGrange College, in northern Missouri, in 1889. He then taught school 7 years, in Missouri, Nebraska, and Texas (including Jacksboro and Memphis). In 1896, he settled in Denver, Colorado, where he entered the real estate business. He died in 1918, and is buried in Fairmount Cemetery, in Denver. He was a member of the Baptist Church. His wife, Ida L. (Lindsey) Griffith, whom he married in 1895, was born in Sherman, Texas. She resides in Denver, where she is precinct chairman of District N, Precinct 8, for the Democratic party. She is a charter member of Margaret Davis Hayes Chapter No. 1228, United Daughters of the Confederacy. She is a musician. She was the daughter of John Collier and Martha (Ray) Lindsey. N. H. and Ida L. (Lindsey) Griffith were the parents of 3 children: (1) John, who is clerk of the Denver County Court. (2) James E. (3) Mary Cornwell, who was born November 29, 1915.

John Collier Lindsey, father of Ida L. (Lindsey) Griffith, and son of Charles and Mary (Marshall) Lindsey, was born in Texas. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army, during the War Between the States. His wife, Martha (Ray) Lindsey, was born in Kentucky. Charles Lindsey, father of John Collier, was a soldier in the Mexican War. His father was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Mary (Marshall) Lindsey, wife of Charles, was related to the Marshall family of which John Marshall, former Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, was a member.

James Edwin Griffith, father of N. H., engaged in the insurance business at Louisiana, Missouri. His wife, Katherine (Eidson) Griffith, was born in Missouri. Her mother was a first cousin of President Andrew Jackson**. Members of the Griffith family resided in or near Louisiana, Missouri, for 100 years.

James E. Griffith, attended grade and high schools in Denver, Colorado, graduating from the latter in 1919; graduate, University of Colorado, A. B., 1922, and LL. B., 1925. During the World War, he served in Co. I, of the S. A. T. C., at the University of Colorado. In 1925, he began the practice of law, in partnership with his brother, John Griffith, in Denver, where he since has continued to practice. He served in the Thirtieth and Thirty-first General Assemblies of Colorado, being chairman of the Temperance Committee in the latter. He was one of the founders of the Denver Junior Chamber of Commerce, for which he drafted the bylaws, and of which organization he served as vice-president, secretary and treasurer. He is a Democrat, and a member of the following: Oriental Lodge No. 87, A.F. and A.M. (worshipful master in 1936), Rocky Mountain Consistory No. 2, and Shrine; Denver Bar Association; Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Sigma Rho, and Phi Alpha Delta (fraternities); Cooperative Club, International; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Baptist Church. His hobbies are motoring, tennis, and mechanical research work. The Hon. Mr. Griffith recently received a patent on an automobile accessory to aid in safe driving, the accessory being a periscopic mirror which enables the driver of the automobile to see half a mile through the traffic in front of him. Mr. Griffith is not married.

* For further data regarding N. H. Griffith, see Jerome C. Smiley, "History of Colorado" (Lewis Publishing Co., Chicago, 1913), vol. 2, p. 140.

** For further data regarding members of the Jackson family, see book entitled the "Jackson Family", a copy of which is in the possession of the Hon. James E. Griffith

MRS. MARY A. GRIFFITHS
Resident of Denver Since 1870, is Dead

Mrs. Mary A. Griffiths, 87, of 1007 East Seventeenth avenue, a resident of Denver since 1870, died Thursday night at her home.

She was born in Quincy, Ill., March 22, 1853, and came to Colorado in 1870. She was married to S. H. Griffiths in Leadville, Colo., Nov. 6, 1878.

Surviving are her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Guy V. Sternberg of Grand Junction, Colo.; one grandson, Robert V. Sternberg of Cincinnati, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Graham W. Howard of Almirante, Panama, formerly Dorothy M. Lockwood of Greeley, Colo.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. Saturday at the Olinger mortuary, Sixteenth and Boulder streets. Entombment will be in the Tower of Memories at Crown Hill cemetery.

Denver Post, August 23, 1940

BENJAMIN GRIMES

Date: October 2, 1937

No. 2 B891 D5 E16 F78
LCD/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Benjamin Grimes, Investments,
Equitable Building, Denver, Colorado

Benjamin Grimes, born in Poland, April 14, 1862; son of Joseph Grimes.

Benjamin Grimes came to America, settling in Denver, Colorado, in 1889. He sold papers, and later established a hay and feed business, which he operated 1 year, after which he entered the scrap iron business. Mr. Grimes engaged in the mining machinery business, 20 years, and purchased the Smuggler mine, which he developed and later sold. Mr. Grimes, who has retained interests in mining and oil developments, also handles an investment business with offices located in the Equitable Building. He is a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Consistory (32nd degree), and Shrine; B'nai B'rith; Green Gables Country Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobby is golf.

In 1901, Benjamin Grimes married Lena Jacobson, who was born in Poland. Mrs. Grimes is deceased. Children: (1) Irving, who is an attorney in Denver, Colorado. (2) Mamie, wife of Joseph Pizer. They reside in Denver.

Benjamin Grimes married, 2nd, Birdie E. Knight, who was born in Denver. They are the parents of 1 child, Bertha Jane.

MRS. FANNY GRIMM

By LYNN LILLISTON

Denver Post Staff Writer

Ask Mrs. Fanny Grimm what she thinks about any subject, and she has a strong opinion. A hundred years gives you time to make up your mind.

Mrs. Grimm celebrated her 100th birthday Thursday at Offield Nursing Home, 3249 W. Fairview Pl., where she has lived for the past four years.

During a brief interview the alert Mrs. Grimm had these capsule comments:

On war: "War is hell. It destroys home and business. America should stay out of it."

Marriage: "I had a very good one. My husband, John, a popular musician, didn't smoke or drink and all his life he helped poor people."

Widowhood: "After my husband died in 1922, I could have married a rich man. But I didn't. I had had a good marriage. I didn't want to risk a bad one."

Work: "I should have worked after my husband died, instead of keeping house. I would have learned more about the world."

Long life: "I haven't eaten meat for 50 years, and I never smoked or drank. I'm in good health because I drink milk, eat fruit and vegetables. I always took sensible exercise but I didn't run around or go to dances or other foolish things."

Born in Bohemia on March 6, 1858, Mrs. Grimm went to St. Louis when in her 20's to live with a married sister. She journeyed to Denver to visit a friend, met Grimm, a veteran of the Indian wars, and married him.

Two children died at early ages. Mrs. Grimm has no surviving relatives but a steady stream of callers brightened her birthday with candy, flowers and fruit.

[A photograph of Mrs. Grimm accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, March 7, 1958, p. 16

MRS. FANNY GRIMM

Thursday was a big day for Mrs. Fanny Grimm, a small cheerful woman living at the Offield Nursing Home.

She celebrated her 100th birthday. "It doesn't seem like 100 years thought," she said. "The years have gone by very fast." Mrs. Grimm is convinced that she has the right philosophy for a long and happy life.

"You should never worry, love everybody and follow the teachings in the Bible," she said. "If you sow good you won't reap evil. I look for good in everything because everything came from God."

While in Denver she met the man who was to become her husband. "I was surprised when he proposed. I told him I'd marry him because I wanted to stay in Denver," she said.

"He was a wonderful man. He was a musician and when the other musicians would go bumming around he came home." Her husband died in 1922. They had two children who both died quite young and Mrs. Grimm has no immediate relatives.

Mrs. Grimm still thinks Denver is the best place to live. "I like it just as well as when I first came here but I would like to go and see California and then come back," she said.

[A photograph of Mrs. Grimm with the caption: "Mrs. Fanny Grimm became a centenarian Thursday and Wednesday was a busy day for the cheerful little lady as she prepared for her birthday party. Mrs. Grimm was born March 6, 1858, in Bohemia.]

Rocky Mountain News, March 7, 1958, p. 40

MRS. FANNY GRIMM

A picture of Mrs. Fanny Grimm with the following caption: For living a full and busy 100 years. Mrs. Grimm celebrated her 100th birthday recently at the Offield Nursing Home, 3249 W. Fairview Pl., where she has lived for the last four years. Still alert and in good health, Mrs. Grimm attributes her long life to not smoking, drinking or eating meat. She was born in Bohemia and has lived in Denver since the 1880s.

Denver Post, March 15, 1958, p. 18

ARTHUR ROGERS GROSHEIDER

Date: December 11, 1937

No. 2 B954 D5 E16 F131
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Arthur Rogers Grosheider, Secretary and Treasurer
Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company
Telephone & Telegraph Building, Denver, Colorado

Arthur Rogers Grosheider, born in New Albany, Indiana, February 17, 1876; son of George W. and Jane (Rogers) Grosheider.

George W. Grosheider, born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1844. In 1852, he moved to New Albany, Indiana, where he later operated a wholesale and retail grocery and fruit commission business, 55 years. He died in 1920, and is buried in New Albany. His wife, Jane (Rogers) Grosheider, daughter of Spencer Rogers, was born in Chattanooga, Tennessee, in 1846. She died in 1935, and is buried in New Albany. George W. and Jane (Rogers) Grosheider were the parents of 11 children, Arthur Rogers being the sixth child.

Arthur Rogers Grosheider, attended grade and high schools in New Albany, Indiana, and graduated from a business college in that city in 1894 or 1895. He then was employed as a foreman in the mill of the Tennessee Manufacturing Co., a cotton mill in Nashville, Tennessee, and later was associated with the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co., in Nashville, 2 years (1903-05). Since 1905, he has been employed by the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co., in Denver, Colorado. He served first as assistant treasurer of the firm, and in 1934 was elected secretary and treasurer, in which capacities he has served to the present time. Mr. Grosheider, who is independent in politics, is a member of the Telephone Pioneers of America, and the Denver Chapter of the Citizens Historical Association. His hobby is golf.

In 1895, Arthur Rogers Grosheider married Clara Keppler. Mrs. Grosheider died in 1922, and is buried in Crown Hill Cemetery, in Denver.

In 1924, Mr. Grosheider married, second, Agnes Marie Day, daughter of T. W. and Margaret Day. Mr. and Mrs. Grosheider are the parents of 2 children: (1) Jane, born in 1926. (2) Arthur Rogers, Jr., born in 1932.

DWIGHT DAVID GROSS

Dwight Gross, at 72, Still Serving Denver

By BERNARD KELLY

Denver Post Staff Writer

For Dwight David Gross, 72, water has long been his chief interest as well as a means of livelihood. Gross, retired chief engineer of the Denver water board, is now retained in a consulting capacity on construction of reservoir 22, the largest single project the city has ever undertaken.

But it almost spelled death to him once. That was when he and August P. Gumplich on the board of water commissioners went into a tunnel to test the outlet valves at Lake Cheesman.

Gross gave orders to a workman to open the valves just a trifle so he could see how they were working. Instead, the workman turned them open full and a great gush of water began to fill the tunnel.

"the daylight was almost shut off when he realized he had made a mistake," Gross said. And Gross and Gumplich were up to their shins in the surging flood, hundreds of feet in from the tunnel entrance.

Not "Undampened"

It should be said that he was "undampened" by this unfortunate experience. But the truth is, he was considerably dampened. But wet feet have never much bothered the man who is directing the expenditure of $12 million on a huge dam and reservoir north of Eldorado Springs. The dam, initially to be 340 feet high and 1,002 feet across the top, will impound 42,000 acre feet of spring runoff water for Denver water users.

Eventually it will be 460 feet high, 1,800 feet wide, and will dam 113,000 acre feet. This water comes from the Fraser river, Williams fork and St. Louis and Ranch creeks on the western slope.

When Gross was born Nov. 7, 1879, at Friend, Neb., thirty-five miles west of Lincoln, man's struggle against the land and the elements was far less successful than it is today. He vaguely remembers the great blizzard of 1888, when snow covered the great prairie to such a depth that hundreds were killed and the white coat still was visible the following spring.

Moved To Logan County

That year his father, John R. Gross, decided to try to homestead in Colorado. He sold some of his stock, machinery and furnishings and moved the family to Logan county.

In those days a move was a move--no simple undertaking. His father put horses, cows and machinery into a box car and rode with them out to the new frontier. Gross, his mother and two sisters came out on a passenger train.

But the homestead was not successful and when Gross was 11 the family moved to a farm near Greeley. It was an irrigated plot but Gross does not remember that this fact particularly impressed him with the need of water.

He was graduated from high school in Greeley and went on to the Colorado A. & M. college at Fort Collins, where he was graduated in 1903 as an engineer.

Gross had a liking for railroading and asked for a job with the Denver & Salt Lake, pushing across the continental divide. But they were full up. The second job he asked for was with the Denver Union Water company, and he got it. It was a historic choice.

Chief Draftsman

He worked on construction of Cheesman dam until 1905, when he went into the company's office in the Johnson building at Seventeenth street and Glenarm place, in the drafting room.

In 1919, after the city bought the Union Water company for $13 million, he became chief draftsman. Two years later he was made office engineer. In 1926 he was made chief engineer, a post he held until his retirement on Dec. 1, 1951. His retirement was because of department regulations, but Denver could not afford to lose such a valuable man, so he then was retained in a consulting capacity.

In 1903 he met a girl named Eva Davidson at church. Never a man who was in a hurry, Gross got around to marrying Eva four years later and they now have two daughters, Hazel--who is Mrs. Kenneth B. Ferguson of Denver--and Clara, who is now a librarian at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

Planned City Program

Gross says the most satisfying experience in his life was the planning and development of a $30 million water program for Denver, which got under way in 1947. Practically all of that money has now been used or committed.

The things he has done as chief engineer are almost numberless. He supervised the construction of a new reservoir on Capitol hill, supervised the improvement of three filter plants so that they would handle a greater volume of water, and installed four huge conduits, three pumping booster stations and many miles of water main extensions. Under his direction the water department laid an average of as much as thirty miles of main a year.

But the greatest of all the water projects in which Gross has been the top man is the planning and construction of the big reservoir north of Eldorado Springs. On this job the excavation has been completed and necessary tunnels driven. The first huge bucket of concrete was poured Sept. 11.

Eight Cubic Yards

That was quite a bucket, incidentally. It held eight cubic yards of concrete and was lowered into the proper spot from an overhead tramway 400 feet above the surface of the stream. Two men rode that bucket in an airy, exciting trip from the mixing plant to the damsite, just holding on to the grips provided on the outside.

Approximately 300 men are employed on this gigantic project.

Gross enjoys his work with water even down to the finer points. For example, he still gets a huge chuckle out of a big hassle about the quality of the coffee that was being served to the men on the job when the Moffat tunnel was being enlarged.

One day some of the commissioners came up to inspect the work and had a couple of mugs of the coffee. They went back to Denver and said that it was "very bad" and that it was a shame to serve such stuff to hard-working men.

Makes It Weaker

Gross, who had been sipping that coffee for weeks, was astonished. He thought it was pretty good, but he went to the man who sold them the coffee and told him about the complaints. The man was astonished, too, but he suggested that maybe it was being made too strong. Try using less coffee, he said.

The commissioners tried the newer, weaker coffee and decided it was a lot better. But Gross, just to satisfy himself, made a poll of the men. Ninety per cent of them didn't know any change had been made.

Gross has decided that the telephone operators are an important part of his operation. This was evidenced by the case of the new manager and the broken water pipe.

Many years ago, a new manager was employed to take charge of the water plant. He was a highly trained executive, but not familiar with water works problems. When he had been in office only a few days, a telephone operator called him one night and told him there was a serious break in a water pipe.

"Where Are The Workers?"

In a few minutes he called the operator back and said:

"I'm out here at this break and the water's shooting high in the air, and flooding the streets, and nobody's working. You said you'd notified the men. Where are they?"

The telephone operator replied sweetly:

"The men are there. They're down the street three blocks from where you are, closing the valve and shutting off the water, so that they can repair the pipe."

The man hung up the phone and went back to his office, not saying another word. He knew where he belonged.

Gross has a little hobby, aside from his interest in water. He's a gardener, and each year he has both a vegetable and flower garden at his home at 802 South Race street. He also admits he has a favorite dish--pumpkin pie--and at this time of year he expects to indulge that liking to the last degree.

"I like it without whipped cream," he says for the record.

He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Colorado Society of Engineers, the American Water Works association, the Colorado Historical society and the Denver Chamber of Commerce.

He belongs to Calvary Baptist church.

And he believes in Denver, and in the great importance of water to the growing, thriving community.

Denver Post, November 2, 1952, p. 5AA

MISS OLGA GUNKLE

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Miss Olga Gunkle
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Olga Edith Gunkle, born at Denver Colorado, on June 25, 1899

Name of father: James Morgan Gunkle, a native of Indianapolis, Indiana

Name of mother: Clara Amelia Reed Gunkle, a native of Albany, New York

Attended school or college: University of Denver, Denver, Colorado; Columbia University, New York City

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: University of Denver, 1917-1921, graduated with Bachelor of Arts; Columbia University, 1921-1922, graduated with Master of Arts

Vocation: Assistant Executive Secretary of Denver Community Chest, 1925 to present time.
Editor of Dividends and Chest Chats, two of the Chest Publication.

Avocation: Writing and singing

Biography File

CHARLES H. GUNN

Date: October 2, 1937

No. 2 B891 D5 E16 F80
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. Charles H. Gunn, Supervisor,
State Motor Vehicle Department, Denver, Colorado

Charles H. Gunn, born at Phillipsburg, Kansas, November 29, 1879; son of John M. and Agnes (Brown) Gunn.

John M. Gunn, born in Inverness, Scotland, in 1812. His father, Alexander Gunn, emigrated to Canada. John M. Gunn moved to Kansas in pioneer days and later moved to Detroit, Michigan, where he died in 1908. He was in the insurance business. His wife, Agnes (Brown) Gunn, a native of Guelph, Ontario, Canada, died in 1928.

Charles H. Gunn, attended the public schools of Detroit, Michigan. After working in the iron-rolling mills, he moved on September 11, 1896, to Cripple Creek, Colorado, where he leased and operated mines. He became a member of the police department, and later chief of the fire department, at Cripple Creek. In 1916, he entered the moving picture business, and in 1917 entered the U. S. Army for service in the World War. He was stationed at the first Officers' Training Camp, and, after being commissioned 2nd lieutenant, was sent overseas 1 year. He served as captain of Company M, and later Company H, in the 89th Division and was honorably discharged June 19, 1919. Mr. Gunn then resided in Colorado Springs, Colorado, several months, after which he returned to Cripple Creek, Colorado, where he was employed as a truck driver until February 19, 1921, at which time he became a clerk in the Motor Vehicle Department of the State of Colorado. He has since been promoted successively through all the divisions of this department, and in April 1933, was appointed supervisor of the Colorado State Motor Vehicle Department, in Denver, which position he has held to the present time. He is also a member of the credit committee of the Credit Union, and is a captain in the Officers' Reserve Corps. The Hon. Mr. Gunn, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A.F. and A.M.; Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S.; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobby is fishing.

In 1923, Charles H. Gunn married Pansy E. Ferris, who was born in Ohio, daughter of Florence Ferris. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Gunn. By a former marriage, Mrs. Gunn is the mother of 1 son, Jack G. Orwig.

J. W. GUNNISON
He Knew Captain J. W. Gunnison

The Gunnison Daily Review of January 27, 1882, carried the following story, written by Hon. L. D. Bailey, Associate Justice of Kansas and copied from the Lawrence (Kansas) Tribune of September 8, 1881

" * * * Here on our table lies a copy of the Daily News-Democrat, dated Gunnison City, Colorado, August 30, 1881. * * * It carried us back in our imagination to a little log schoolhouse in a cozy nook of Sunapee Mountains of New Hampshire in the winter of 1836--by the way, the first log building we ever saw in that state. There was an old fashioned spelling school in that little log schoolhouse that evening, and it was a good one, unusually interesting on account of the teacher whose name was Gunnison. He was about our own age--a mere boy of 17, we should judge, rather short, finely formed, of fresh ruddy complexion, brown hair and as handsome as a picture. We think we never saw a young man more prepossessing than he was. And he was the idol of his school and the whole neighborhood. The fame of his school keeping had gone out into all the region roundabout, and had drawn the writer hereof and a number of other lads to undertake a long walk, just to see him and his school.

"We shall never forget that spelling school so long as we remember anything. Nor shall we ever forget that young teacher's face and form--a model of manly beauty.

"He had a smile of Heaven upon his face which limners give to the beloved disciple. How all loved that gracious boy.

"His school was near its close. He was born in the town of Goshen, N. H., a few miles from that log schoolhouse on the opposite side of Sunapee Mountain. The writer and he grew to manhood within sound of the same church bell, though separated by a mountain which cut off all common communication. We have since known his father and brother. Soon after we saw him at spelling school, we heard that he had gone to West Point. In due time we heard that he had graduated with honors and was appointed a second lieutenant in the United States army. Then we heard that on account of his remarkable promise, he had been put in command of a party to explore one of the routes for the Pacific railroad. Too soon after that came sad news that he and his whole party had been surprised and massacred by Indians in some far-off valley of the Rocky Mountains, and that the Mormons were supposed to have aided or instigated the savages to the murder. We do not know whether this charge was true or not. We believe the particulars of the sad catastrophe were never learned. It is one more dark chapter in the vast and bloody volume of Indian murders. Years have rolled over since that sad day.

The great war of the rebellion, in which Gunnison would, in all likelihood, have won name and fame but for the deep damnation of his taking off so prematurely, has come and gone. Colorado from a savage and unknown wilderness has blossomed out into a territory, ripened into a state, and now boasts of cities like Denver, Leadville and Pueblo, besides scores of smaller ones, with more than a thousand miles of railroads to connect those cities, and bring their precious mineral products to assist in carrying on the world's commerce; and here in this city of Lawrence, with its stirring history, in the state of Kansas, with her million of thrifty people, we are confronted with a daily newspaper from the city of Gunnison, the capital or chief city of Gunnison County, in the valley of the Gunnison River, which flows through the extensive region famous for rich mines and known as the 'Gunnison Country' throughout the world. Verily, life and death are full of mystery, and each has its compensations. This young man, so full of promise, cut off in the very blush and bloom of early manhood, has yet left his name as a memory of romantic interest to all future generations who shall swarm and toil and live and die, in the mountains and valley where he was so cruelly doomed to death. Honor to the name and prosperity to the city of Gunnison."

Gunnison News-Champion and Gunnison Republican of May 23, 1946
Colorado Magazine, September 1946

CAPT. JOHN WILLIAMS GUNNISON

Ceremonies at Grave Honor Capt. Gunnison

The grave of one of the West's great explorers, lost in obscurity for a full century, will be marked with granite and bronze Sunday through efforts of a Denver doctor and spare-time historian.

A Memorial Day unveiling service is scheduled in the little cemetery at Fillmore, Utah, where the remains of Capt. John Williams Gunnison have been buried in an unmarked grave since 1853.

Dr. Nolie Mumey, Denver surgeon who spends part of his spare time in research and writing about Western history, will view the unveiling of the bronze plaque he had made to mark the grave of the explorer who left his name on a Colorado river and city.

Stone From Tabor

The plaque will be fixed to a monument of Vermont granite donated by Roy Erickson of the Erickson Memorial Co. in Denver.

The stone came from the Tabor Opera House in Denver and was chosen because Gunnison, like H. A. W. Tabor, was a New Englander.

Capt. Gunnison and seven of his men were massacred Oct. 26, 1853, by a band of Paiute Indians on the Sevier River about 35 miles from Fillmore.

They had passed through Colorado and into Eastern Utah on their expedition seeking a central railroad route through the Rockies.

Last of the official explorers of the area now Colorado, Gunnison was a young Army engineer who had traveled west.

He and his men were slain by the Paiutes in reprisal for the killing a few years earlier of several Indians by a company of emigrants to the new West.

In on-the-scene research for his forthcoming biography of Gunnison, Dr. Mumey visited the Fillmore cemetery. He was guided to the unmarked grave of the explorer by Orlo Bartholomew, cemetery sexton and grandnephew of one of the men who helped bury portions of Gunnison's body there in 1853.

Head Identified

The Indians had dismembered and mutilated the bodies of their victims. Gunnison's head and several other portions of his body were identified for the Fillmore burial.

Dr. Mumey has arranged for two surviving relatives of Gunnison to be present for the ceremony Sunday morning. They are a granddaughter, Miss Genevieve D. O'Neill of Pasadena, Calif., and a grandnephew, S. V. Gunnison of San Francisco.

Assisting in the ceremony will be the Millard County chapters of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers, represented by Mrs. Stella Day of Fillmore, and the Fillmore post of the American Legion. Dr. Mumey will speak on Gunnison's life and explorations.

Forthcoming Book

The bronze plaque to be unveiled has this text:

"John Williams Gunnison, 1812-1853.
Topographical Engineer, Explorer and Pioneer Martyr.
Erected by the Millard Chapters of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers of Fillmore, Utah, and Dr. Nolie Mumey of Denver, Colorado."

Dr. Mumey, who will leave Wednesday for Fillmore, delivered the Colorado State Historical Society's annual invitation lecture last December on Gunnison and the centenary of his death.

His forthcoming book, "John Williams Gunnison: Centennial of His Survey and Tragic Death," is now being printed in Gunnison and is to be published early this summer.

[A photograph of the bronze plaque accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 26, 1954, p. 9

THOMAS R. GUNSON
Biographical Information

Name: Thomas R. Gunson

Address: 286 North Windermere, Littleton, [Colorado]

Born: Aurora, Colorado at Toll Gate Creek, 1884.

Married to: Venita A. Good, February 27, 1911, at Littleton, Colorado

Children: None

Father's name: Thomas Gunson, born in 1841 at County Clair, Ireland; died September 12, 1898 at Montclair, Colorado.

Mother's name: Mary Ann Bonus Gunson, born in 1849 at County Cork, Ireland; died in 1920 at Denver, Colorado.

Brothers and Sisters:

1. Susan Ann, born in 1876 at Silver Plume, Colorado
2. Mary, born in 1877 at Silver Plume, Colorado
3. Marcella, born in 1879 at Georgetown, Colorado
4. Frances, born in 1881 at Central City, Colorado
5. Maud Rachel, born in 1889 at Toll Gate Creek, Colorado
6. Charlot E., born in 1892 at Montclair, Colorado

Biographical information concerning parents:

My parents were married in Statan Island, New York, in 1870. Came to Colorado the same year and worked in the silver mines sorting ore. Homesteaded 160 acres, 10 miles East of Denver on Toll Gate Creek in 1872. Sold the 160 acres in 1893 just before the panic of 1893. Farmed in this locality for many years and retired in 1894. Left six daughters and one son.

Biographical information concerning self:

I attended the Stanley public school in Montclair until 1897. At Jarvis Hall for 2 years until it was destroyed by fire in 1899. After leaving school I farmed and fattened lams. Put in 30 years on the High Line Canal and retired 1945.

Information provided by Thomas R. Gunson

VENITA A. GUNSON
Biographical Information

Name: Venita A. Gunson

Address: 286 N. Windermere, Littleton, Colorado

Born: October 29, 1889, at El Paso, Texas

Married to Thomas R. Gunson, February 27, 1911, at Littleton.

Children: None

Father's name: Herman H. Aderhold, born October 19, 1864, at Emporia, Kansas; died November 16, 1913, at Denver, Colorado.

Mother's name: Jennie Barnes, born January 12, 1865, at Marshaltown, Iowa; died April 19, 1933, at Denver, Colorado.

Brothers and sisters: None

Biographical information concerning parents: My grandfather Aderhold was a Kansas pioneer. Buying and selling oxen to freight haulers to and from the gold fields of California and Colorado. My grandfather Barnes bought and sold cattle in Iowa. Made three trips across the plains to Pikes Peak in 1859. The family settled in Central City a few years later.

Biographical information concerning self: Born in Texas but came to Colorado at the age of two months and spent my childhood at Cumbres Pass, 10015 ft. altitude. Attended the old Longfellow School, later to become the Opportunity School. With the exception of a few years spent in Chama, N. M., have lived all my life in Colorado.

Information provided by Venita A. Gunson

WILLY GUTZMANN
U. S. Cousins Cool to Kin In Berlin

Sterling, Colo. Sept. 25. --Willy Gutzmann of Berlin, Germany, who wrote "Oberburgomeister" Steve McNichols to help him find relatives who migrated to Colorado 52 years ago, won't have too warm a response.

Gutzmann's letter was successful in that it located his cousins Helena, Elizabeth, Max and Willy Krukow. But the American cousins aren't enthusiastic about corresponding with their mother's sister's son back in the old country.

"He probably just wants money," Willy Krukow, 67, a retired farmer living in Sterling said. "I don't think I'll even write to him."

Mrs. Elizabeth Krukow Marks, who lives on a farm 19 1/2 miles southwest of Fleming, Colo., said she'd let her older brother handle the matter.

One Will Write

Mrs. Helena Krukow Grauberger, now living in Haxtun, Colo., said she'd write to the cousin she's not seen since she was 13 years old.

Max Krukow, an adopted son of the late Wilhelm and Carolina Krukow who came to farm near Leroy, Colo., in 1906, now lives in Ontario, Calif., Willy Krukow said.

The Colorado Krukows, all American citizens, have not returned to Pomerania since they left it as children.

Krukow said he had "no idea" why Gutzmann would be looking for them unless it was to ask for some money.

Dr. C. A. Greenawalt, retired Sterling dentist now living at 1801 E. Cornell Ave., Denver, called The Denver Post to report the Krukows were still living in Colorado.

Denver Post, September 25, 1958, p. 25

FRANK J. HAFFNER

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Frank J. Haffner
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Frank J. Haffner, born March 9, 1861 at Portsheim

Name of father: Franz J. Haffner, a native of Germany

Name of mother: Rosalid, a native of Germany

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Denver, 1889

Married: Yes, April, 1889, at Chambersburg

Name of wife: Marilda Haffner, the daughter of Louis Eyster

Names of children and years of birth: Edmonta Haffner, born in 1891; Rose Haffner, born in 1892; Ruth Haffner, born in 1894; Elsie Haffner, born in 1899

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Frank J. Haffner

Biography File

THE HAGUS FAMILY

1859 Gold Rush Recalled on Eve Of Anniversary

By JOHN STEPHENSON

Rocky Mountain News Writer

When lilacs in the dooryard bloom again in Denver, it will be the 85th anniversary of the '59ers of Colorado, and the 85th anniversary of The Rocky Mountain News, too, so it seems like a good time now to tell how Mrs. George Imherr, who was Miss Lucille Hagus, a sunny woman, came to live in a sunny house out at 1455 Steele st.

She'll show you her father's silver badge of the Society of Colorado Pioneers, with the gold pan on it in gold, engraved, Andrew Hagus, 1859. She'll show you the scales with which he weighed his gold dust in the roaring days of Blackhawk. She'll show you many things and tell you many things about the first settlers of Cherry Creek, Kansas Territory.

Andrew Hagus, her father, and his friends, George Hazzard and Thomas Donelson, arrived in May, 1859, and after them, in October, came Frank Aichelman and George Griffin. Emil Reithmann arrived in that year, too, and later John Hagus and Lewis Hagus and Fred Reithmann.

Settle in Brighton Area

After their gold mining days they settled along the Platte, near what is now Brighton, along with the Sherarts and the Blundells and the Stocketts. They were there before Jefferson Territory and the election of its first governor, R. W. Steele. Andrew Hagus went back to Illinois in a covered wagon in 1860 and 1864 to vote for Abraham Lincoln, quite a trip for anybody, but he said he thought Abe Lincoln had a future; he said he thought it was worth it.

Andrew Hagus was born in Prussia, near the cathedral city of Cologne, in 1837. As a boy he threw stones into the Rhine to watch them splash. His father in 1840 served in the Kaiser's army, and he didn't want his boys to serve in the Kaiser's army, too, but the Kaiser did, and forbade him to leave Germany.

He did leave Germany, though, with his family and nothing else, fleeing through Belgium, and on across the sea and across the land to Galena, Ill., where he plied his trade as a tailor. Came the spring of 1859, though, and Galena was wild about the gold rush in Colorado, so out they came in their covered wagons, each man driving his own ox team.

Ferry Across Mississippi

They ferried the mighty Mississippi, one wagon, one team at a time, and they crossed the plains and camped on the banks of the Platte, when the cottonwoods flowered. Then they made their way to Blackhawk and spent their summer mining. When winter came they pushed back to Denver and staked their land claims on the Platte, side by side, and the Aichelmanns still live there in Brighton.

That summer they raised fresh vegetables and hauled them by ox team to the miners. Andrew Hagus and his companions brought the first mowing machine into Colorado, the first rake, the first farming implements. They made trips to Omaha for supplies and established banking facilities through Omaha. They were prime movers in construction of the Fulton Ditch, which brought irrigation to the Valley of the Platte. They established schools and churches.

In 1864 Andrew Hagus married Miss Kate Ziegler, and their children are now Mrs. Emma Abbott of Brighton, Mrs. Louise Ritter, 1319 S. Lincoln st., Denver and Fred Hagus of Los Angeles. Mrs. Katherine Bonard and Henry Hagus, other children, are now dead. After them came Andrew Frank Hagus of Sacramento and John J. Hagus, 3222 Raleigh st., Denver, and Lucille J. Hagus, who is Mrs. Imherr.

Noble but Hungry Redskins

John Hagus, who arrived in the 60s, is the father of the late Rev. Louis F. Hagus and Rt. Rev. Charles H. Hagus, pastor of Annunciation Parish in Denver. The old Hagus place in Brighton is now owned by the Doversbergers, who take blue ribbons in National Western Stock Shows and probably will take some next week.

"Most of this, I heard at my mother's knee," said Mrs. Imherr, 15 years now in the Internal Revenue Department in Denver.

"My mother used to tell me about driving into Denver from Brighton, a two-day trip. She used to tell how the Indians were always watching and waiting everywhere, seeing but unseen. She said it was miraculous how they always became visible just as you had finished dressing a buffalo. She said it was positively uncanny."

[Two photographs accompany this article captioned: The upper photo is of Mrs. George Imherr, 1455 Steele st. In her hand she holds the scales her father used to weigh gold dust in Blackhawk in 1859. On her chest is her father's badge in the Society of Colorado Pioneers, dated 1859. The lower photo is of her father and her mother, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hagus, Denver folks from as far back as Denver goes.]

Rocky Mountain News, January 13, 1944, p. 5

IRVING HALE
9521 SAR, Colo. 46
1263 Columbine St., Denver, Colorado
Manager, Denver Office of General Electric Co.

Born: August 28, 1861, in North Broomfield, Livingston County, New York

Son of: Horace Morrison Hale and Eliza Huntington

Grandson of: John Hale and Jane Morrison

Great grandson of: David Hale and Elizabeth Holden

Great great grandson of: John Hale and Elizabeth Hall

Claim thru:

John Hale who was born October 24, 1731, in Bradford, New Hampshire, and died in Hollis, New Hampshire, October 22, 1791.

He was moderator of Town Meeting at Hollis, New Hampshire, April 28, 1775, to raise a company for the Revolutionary Army.

He took part as a volunteer in the battle of Bunker Hill under his brother-in-law, Col. Prescott.

He had three sons, John, David, and William serving while still minors in the Revolutionary Army.

David Hale served as stated above. In 1777 he was commissioned Colonel and Surgeon.

References: "Genealogy of Descendants of Thomas Hale" by Robert Safford Hale, LL.D., Heitman, page 204; Hammond's New Hampshire Revolutionary Rolls, vol. I, pp. 552 - 391, vol. III, pp. 377 - 381 - 529

Dated: Denver, Colorado, May 28, 1897.

(signed) Irving Hale

Also see:

National Cyclopedia of American Biography, vol. 6, p. 174; vol. 6, p. 492

The Encyclopedia of Biography, vol. 57, p. 107

National Register of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, p. 146

IRVING HALE
VFW Chapter to Dedicate Hale Parkway Next Sunday
National Commander Will Be Speaker At Opening Ceremony

The recently-constructed Hale Parkway, extending diagonally from E. 12th ave. and Albion st. to E. Sixth ave. and Grape st., will be officially dedicated at 2 p. m. next Sunday, under auspices of the Denver County Chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

In conjunction with the dedication, the veterans will present the city with a 15-ton granite monument, bearing a bronze tablet with the history of Gen. Irving Hale. The monument will be at E. 12th ave. and Albion st.

Singer to Speak

Max Singer of Boston, Mass., national commander of the V. F. W., will be principal speaker, and will present the monument to Mayor Stapleton. Mrs. Alice Donahue of New York City, president of the National Women's Auxiliary of V. F. W., also will speak.

The granite monument was taken from the Denver Mountain Parks area, and was selected by Manager of Parks and Improvements George Cranmer.

Named by Stapleton

The name for the new parkway was chosen by Mayor Stapleton, who served with General Hale in the Spanish-American War.

General Hale, a native of New York came to Colorado, with his parents, at the age of four. He spent his youth in Central City. General Hale was a member of the first graduating class of East High School.

He entered West Point in 1880, and was graduated with high honors. He worked for several years as an engineer for the Edison Co., and then returned to Colorado. He drew the plans for the road extending from Central City to Estes Park.

At the outbreak of the Spanish War, he enlisted in the First Colorado U. S. Volunteers. During the war, he was promoted to brigadier general, and on July 5, 1899, he became a major general.

He retired from the army shortly after the war and returned to Denver, where he died, July 16, 1930. He is buried in Fairmount Cemetery.

The program for the dedication ceremonies is being arranged by Gus E. Hartung, past commander-in-chief of the V. F. W. All the ceremonies will take place at the site of the monument.

[A photograph of Gen. Irving Hale accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, September 14, 1941

IRVING HALE

General Hale Monument To Be Dedicated V. F. W. National Officers To Attend Exercises Next Sunday

National officers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and its auxiliary will be in Denver next Sunday to dedicate a monument to Gen. Irving Hale, famous Denver soldier and engineer, which will mark the west entrance to the new Hale boulevard, a diagonal drive running from East Twelfth avenue and Colorado boulevard to East Sixth avenue and Grape street. General Hale was a founder of the V. F. W., and Denver is its birthplace.

Max Singer of Boston, new national commander-in-chief of the organization, is coming by plane for the dedication. Mrs. Alice Donahue of New York city, national president of the women's auxiliary, also is expected, as is H. B. Handy of Kansas City, V. F. W. quartermaster-general.

Monument Weighs Fifteen Tons

The monument itself is a huge, uncut granite boulder from the Denver mountain parks obtained thru the co-operation of George Cranmer, manager of parks and improvements. It weighs fifteen tons, and will bear a brass plate lettered with a brief tribute to General Hale.

On the day of the dedication the Colorado department, V. F. W., will meet in the morning at the Albany hotel with George C. Hess of Pueblo, department commander, presiding. All department officers of the state will attend the dedication at 2 p. m. Mayor Benjamin F. Stapleton will accept the monument for the city. Gus E. Hartung of Denver, past commander-in-chief of the national organization, is chairman of the monument committee.

Gen. Irving Hale was born in New York state Aug. 28, 1861. He moved to Central City, Colo., with his parents in 1865, and came to Denver in 1873.

Scholastic Mark at West Point Still Stands

He was a member of the first class to be graduated from East high school, was appointed to West Point in 1880 and was graduated there with 2,070.4 points in his scholastic rating out of a possible 2,075 -- the highest mark ever achieved by any cadet in the history of the United States military academy.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant of engineers. He entered the Colorado National Guard in 1897 as a lieutenant colonel, became a brigadier general, headed the First Colorado infantry in the Philippines during the war with Spain, was wounded there, cited for gallantry and made a major general in 1899. He retired in October of that year.

In civil life he was an engineer for the old Edison company. He organized the Society of the Army of the Philippines, later known as the V. F. W., in Denver in 1899. He died here in 1930.

Denver Post, September 14, 1941

MRS. HESTER HALEY FAMILY

5 Generations of Coloradans

Rocky Mountain News Photo

by Mel Schieltz

Photograph: Five generations of a longtime Denver family are represented above. Seated, from left, are Mrs. Phyllis Thompson, 28, of 4330 Quay st., in Wheat Ridge, and her great-grandmother, Mrs. Hester Haley, 92, living at the Offield Nursing Home in Denver. Standing, from left, are Roy Niquette, 48, of 1300 Lima st., Aurora, son of Mrs. Gene R. Niquette of 1270 S. Quivas st., who is standing beside him. Mrs. Niquette is the daughter of Mrs. Haley. The boy at right is Bruce McQueen, 6, son of Mrs. Thompson and great-great-grandson of Mrs. Haley. Mr. and Mrs. Niquette of 1270 S. Quivas st. Sunday observed their 50th wedding anniversary -- two days early. They were married on New Year Day, 1913, in Chillicothe, Mo., and came to Denver in 1917. They have four grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Rocky Mountain News, December 31, 1962, p. 44

CHARLES D. HALL
Manual's Principal To Retire in Spring
'Nothing Compares to Teaching . . .'

Charles D. Hall makes no bones about it. When he retires next month as principal of Manual Training High School, he's "going to miss it a lot."

He has no activities saved up for all the free time he will have, because he has been doing what he likes best during his 42 years as a teacher.

One suspects --though Mr. Hall doesn't say so -- that he'd just as soon March 19 could be postponed. That date marks his 67th birthday and means automatic retirement.

Honored at Dinner

The veteran educator and his wife were honored at a dinner last night in the Cosmopolitan Hotel, given by principals of Denver's secondary schools and their wives.

"To me, nothing compares with teaching," Mr. Hall said in an interview yesterday. "Trying to develop young people is very satisfying.

"You're upset, of course, by your failures, but your successes more than compensate."

A native of Colorado Springs, the retiring principal was graduated from Colorado College and received a master's degree from Teachers College, Columbia University.

In Denver 38 Years

He has been associated with Denver Public Schools since 1911, teaching first at West and then at East and Manual High Schools. He was principal of Garden Place and Globeville Schools from 1923 to 1928. From then until 1939, when he became principal of Manual, he was principal at Grant Junior High School.

Position Interesting

Mrs. Claude Temmer, who was president of the Manual Parent-Teacher Assn. last year, was a pupil of Mr. Hall's when he taught at Manual.

Mr. Hall said his position at Manual has been a particularly interesting and challenging one because of the school's inter-racial character. Its enrollment is about 22 percent Negroes, 14 percent Spanish-Americans and seven percent Orientals.

"Students at Manual find that they can get along with and appreciate members of other races," he said, "but the adjustment doesn't come without effort. Young people, of course, adjust more easily than their elders, because their prejudices are less deeply ingrained."

Ironically, the educator will leave his post at Manual just as plans are being drawn for a new building, since a new Manual High is one of the projects included in the 21-million-dollar school board issue.

[A photograph of Charles D. Hall accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, February 2, 1949, p. 14

JOSIAH N. HALL

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Josiah N. Hall
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Josiah Newhall Hall, born October 11, 1859, at North Chelsea, Massachusetts

Name of father: Stephen A. Hall, a native of Massachusetts

Name of mother: Evalina Bancroft, a native of New Hampshire

Attended school or college: Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Massachusetts; Harvard Medical School

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: June, 1878 - B. S., Massachusetts Agricultural College;
June, 1882 - M. D., Harvard Medical School

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: February 14, 1883

Married: Yes, April 12, 1885, at Sterling

Name of wife: Carrie G. Ayres, the daughter of Felix G. Ayres and Mary Davis

Names of children and years of birth: Sigourney D. Hall, born in 1887; Oliver W. Hall, born in 1892

Avocation: Physician (mine!)

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Mayor of Sterling, Colorado, 1889; President, State Board of Medical Examiners, 1891; President, State Board of Health, 1900.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) J. N. Hall

Biography File

STANLEY HALL
City Man Descendant of Martyr
By REGINA LE PAGE

No matter how you spell it, Stanley Hall of 1801 Griggs St., is still a descendant of William Tyndale who was burned at the stake for translating the Bible so that it might be smuggled into England back in the 1500s.

A book tracing the genealogy of Hall's family, supplied by his uncle, Jesse M. Tindall, shows the name spelled Tindall, Tyndall and Tyndale. And there among its pages is the picture of the same William Tyndale about whose work with the Bible there is mention in a condensation of "The Book by My Side" by Albert N. Williams in the April issue of a nationally circulated magazine.

According to this article, Tyndale, an Englishman working on the continent, made a new translation of the Bible which was printed with Gutenberg's newly invented movable type and smuggled into England by the thousands by followers of Martin Luther. In 1535, Tyndale was lured from the safety of his home in Antwerp, imprisoned in England and eventually burned at the stake. The story, which tells how the Bible came to be, says that in true martyrdom style, Tyndale met his fate unafraid and his final words were "Lord, open the king of England's eyes."

The starting of the Tyndale clan was with the parents of William and the genealogy has a brief blank space after he lived, so the Halls have never figured out just what he would be to them. However, the family history shows that Stanley Hall's great-grandfather, Job D. Tindall, and his father's mother, Sarah Tindall, were descendants of the martyr.

Legend has it that one of his descendants crossed the Delaware with George Washington, but no proof has been found.

Hall and his wife, Beverly, have two other little descendants of Tyndale, Becky and Michele. The name of their ancestor came from the River Tyne and dale is for valley in which the clan lived.

[A photograph accompanies this article with the caption: Stanley Hall shows his little daughter, Becky, the book of the family tree which makes him a descendant of William Tyndale, who was burned at the stake in 1535 for translating the Bible into English.]

Commercial News, Danville, Illinois, April 20, 1952, p. 30

W. B. (BILLY) HALL
Over Half-Century of Railroadin' Recalled by Rio Grande Veteran
By KEN WAYMAN
Rocky Mountain News Writer

In 57 years a man can learn a lot about railroadin' and a lot more about history. Thus a 72-year-old Denverite reflected yesterday.

And W. B. "Billy" Hall has a lot of time for reflecting now as he was just recently retired by the Rio Grande Railroad after a tour of duty dating back to July 16, 1891.

The old time railroader sat in a comfortable chair in his home at 914 Ogden st. yesterday and thumbed through one of his prize possessions as he recalled interesting details about his service as a mechanic, clerk and purchasing agent for the Rio Grande.

* * * * *

The prized possession is a book with letters from 120 officials of the railroad, which was presented to him at a testimonial dinner when he retired.

"I never saw the start of the Rio Grande," Hall said, "but I certainly saw it grow."

Hall recalled that he joined the Rio Grande Railroad in Salt Lake City when he was only 14. The first year he was employed as a mechanic he saw the standard gauge rail replace the narrow gauge.

* * * * *

Two years after he went to work for the Rio Grande, Hall was transferred "inside." He served 13 years as a clerk in Salt Lake City, 19 more as a clerk in Denver. The last 23 years he was employed in the purchasing department.

When Hall retired he was purchasing agent.

Hall has a lot of pleasant memories but he considers the highlight of his career an article he was asked to write for the railroad on education versus experience.

* * * * *

He started the article by saying "Experience is a hard teacher," and he should know as he went from a $30-a-month job to an official's rank and salary, with very little formal education.

Another highlight that makes Hall proud of the service he put in is a statement from Wilson McCarthy, president of the railroad, given when Hall retired.

McCarthy said: "In my opinion, no man ever connected with this railroad has made a greater contribution to the success of the property than has Billy Hall."

[A photograph accompanies the article with this caption: W. B. (Billy) Hall displays one of his prized possessions, a book of letters from 120 officials of the Rio Grande Railroad which was given him when he retired after 57 years' service. --Rocky Mountain News Photo]

Rocky Mountain News, November 26, 1948, p. 14

MRS. ANNE M. HALLADAY

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. Anne M. Halladay
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Anne McCamly Halladay, born January 20, 1889, at Battle Creek, Michigan

Name of father: David McCamly, a native of Newburgh, New York

Name of mother: Anna May Preston, a native of Battle Creek, Michigan

Attended school or college: Battle Creek Public Schools; University of Michigan; University of Denver

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Colorado in 1915; to Denver in 1925

Married: Yes, October 17, 1914, at Battle Creek, Michigan

Name of husband: Robin Ellsworth Halladay, the son of Jennie Louise Hunsiker and Frank Ellsworth Halladay

Names of children and years of birth: Frank Walter Halladay, born February 11, 1918

Avocation: Member of the University of Colorado Extension Story Writing Staff

D. A. R. # 250513

Biography File

JULIA HALLETT
(MRS. SAMUEL IRVING HALLETT)
Palace of the "Silver Queen" - Denver Mansions: IX Bitter Litigation Was to Center in The Austere Mansion on Which Julia Hallett Lavished Her Love of Beauty
By EDITH EUDORA KOHL

When Julia Hallett, "grand old lady of the mining camps," added two specially-built speed cars to her personal fleet of ten, paid $2,000 for an ornamental front gate for her Denver mansion and tore up her will bequeathing three-quarters of a million dollars for an old ladies' home in New York, aspirants to her fortune charged she was daffy.

Then followed several years of legal parrying in Denver courts, after which a jury decided in fifteen minutes that Julia Hallett was sound of mind and had every right to spend the 4-million-dollar estate left by her husband, Samuel Irving Hallett.

Triumphant, Julia declared she wasn't going to use her money "for the genteel old ladies who can't be pulled away from the bright lights with a six-mule team. Nor for the distant kin who didn't bother when Sam and I were living on sowbelly."

The sowbelly days were far behind them when Hallett and his wife moved into the mansion at 847 Pearl street, a place that their silver millions had transformed into a glittering palace.

When Julia, born Julia Estelle Gilham of Kansas City, married Sam, Hallett was an obscure bookkeeper in a Colorado mining camp. He had come, however, from an aristocratic colonial family and she of midwest pioneers. Julia, educated in an exclusive New York school, followed her husband from camp to camp and helped him dig the prospectin' holes he worked on the side.

Hallett got his first break when, employed as a bookkeeper for Thomas F. Walsh, the mining king, he was made manager of the Smuggler mine at Aspen. Later he was connected with the Guggenheims, then made an independent fortune in the Colorado silver boom.

For a long time after they were in the money the Halletts lived in Aspen. When they moved into the twenty-four-room mansion on Pearl street Julia Hallett had poured into it the pent-up longings of her beauty-, luxury- and (later) love-starved soul to make up for the drab, lonely years.

Without conformity to period or country, the gorgeously decorated house held a collection of antique furniture and art rarely equaled in beauty and value. There were pieces that dated back to the American revolution and furniture from the palace of Louis XVI.

A desk in the house once graced the boudoir of Marie Antoinette and had cost $25,000.

The handsome library was filled with precious trophies, steel engravings, paintings on rice paper and a collection of original copies of valuable books. Priceless rugs, curtains, ornaments and Venetian glassware added to the treasures. But the most precious of all to Julia Hallett was the huge punch bowl made of solid silver from the Smuggler.

Samuel Hallett was elected to the state senate and served as regent of Colorado university. After his sudden death in 1913, Julia Hallett lived on alone in the palace for twenty years.

Then the woman who had worked by her husband's side in mining camps, gone with him into the wilds of South Africa, Alaska and other mining countries on his trips in the Guggenheim interests, began a period of high-living.

She added costly equipment to the great house, splurged in jewels, maintained a retinue of servants and lived like a queen. Her diamonds, to purchase some of which once she put up a block of her capital stock, were worth a king's ransom and, in her opinion, a good investment.

In business dealings she followed her late husband's policies, limiting her investments largely to Sears, Roebuck & Co. stock of which Hallett had a large block. When at one time she was offered 5 million dollars for the stock she refused to sell because "Sam said it was good."

Julia Hallett went in for speed as she did for color in buying the latest models of cars and driving them as fast as she had driven the finest and fastest horses in Aspen.

Julia was a strong-minded woman. After the maneuvering of kin and associates to curb her extravagance and a suit brought by New York authorities over the destroyed will, she decided to make use of Sam's money on herself, deserving associates and projects because "Sam would want it that way."

The jury's decision that she was sound of mind brought no surcease. There were suits filed against her. A Denver Post reporter of the day wrote: "This brave woman who met all the trials of the mining wilderness now lives in constant dread and fear." Gradually she became a recluse.

To protect her valuables, she had two large vaults with burglar alarms installed in her upstairs suite at a cost of $2,000. Her adversaries claimed it sufficient proof of her lunacy.

But Julia Hallett made friends with salesmen and businessmen with whom she dealt. They declared she was shrewd, rational and knew what she wanted.

At last a conservator was appointed by the state more in her interests than those of the complainants.

When she passed away in 1933 mystery and intrigue entered the drama. There was a futile search for a will; one Samuel I. Hallett, a shell-shocked soldier and supposedly a namesake, disappeared, and the three children of Samuel Hallett's brother contended they had been legally adopted by Hallett shortly before his death.

The estate which had dwindled in the depression to one-half million dollars finally went to the former Virginia Mae Gilham, niece of Mrs. Hallett. The furniture and other valuables were sold through a court order.

The house is now owned by Edwin Miller, a real estate man and relative of Mae Gilham from whom it was inherited. It is leased as a rooming-boarding house by Mr. and Mrs. Harvey V. Hawkins.

The old red-brick-and-sandstone mansion is situated on beautiful, densely shaded grounds, peaceful as a convent.

In the center of the grounds is a white marble fish pool decorated in colors. The fountain in the center is a huge-flower-sculptured vase.

Interspersed over the grounds are eight other fountains with various emblems atop tall marble pedestals. One is a cupid, another a wild fowl from whose open bill the water flows. Of unusual interest is an old sundial on the same type pedestal, with the letter "H" engraved on every side. Semi-circling the dial is an elaborately carved stone seat. The lions at the Hallett place stand as leg bases holding up this and other stone seats scattered over the grounds.

In the center of the yard is a tall iron flagpole on which the United States flag waved high above the treetops.

The controversial vaults in Mrs. Hallett's private rooms, in which some of her valuable personal possessions are still stored, are locked.

A few days ago a young man, books in hand, passed through the gate and we asked, "Do you know who once owned this mansion?" He replied, "I think it was some crazy old mining woman."

But upon Julia Hallett's death The Denver Post, under big headlines, said in tribute: "The quality of mind, heart and courage of pioneer women were exemplified in Julia Hallett."

Denver Post, July 25, 1948, Rocky Mountain Empire Magazine Section, p. 8

CARL INER HALLQUIST

Biographical Information

Name: Carl Iner Hallquist, 1892-1943

Address: Steamboat Springs, Routt County, Colorado

Born: July 24, 1892, at Council Bluffs, Iowa

Married to: Josephine Marguerite Brunette, December 17, 1917, at Sidney, Nebraska

Children:

1. Harold Basil, born in 1918 at Deuel County, Nebraska. Basil is presently married to Jeannette Larson and lives at 2530 South Ivy, Denver, has a boy and girl.
2. Lloyd Eugene Hallquist, born November 22, 1921 at Deuel County, Nebraska. Lloyd is married to Irene Vodehual and lives at Steamboat Springs, has 3 girls.
3. Gilbert Leroy Hallquist, born July 7, 1923 at Deuel County, Nebraska. Gilbert married Patricia Flint, lives at Durango, Colorado, has 2 girls.
4. Naomi Jervaise Hallquist, a twin born June 5, 1926 at Deuel County, Nebraska. Naomi married Albert Harold Otis, lives at 3020 S.W. 23rd St., Oklahoma City, has a boy and 2 girls.
5. Norman Jerome Hallquist, a twin born June 5, 1926 at Deuel County, Nebraska. Norman lives in Utica, New York, married Teresa Kuzer, has three boys.

Parents:

Father: John Hallquist, son of Swan, born in Sweden, died 1946 (?) at Julesburg, Colorado.

Mother: Bengtha Nelson, born in Sweden, died 1928 (?) at Julesburg, Colorado.

Brothers and sisters:

1. Anna Hallquist (Anderson), born at Council Bluffs, Iowa. She was a child of the first marriage and mother was born in Sweden.
2. Mary Louise Hallquist Carlson, born at Council Bluffs, Iowa.
3. Ellen Hallquist Carlson, born at Council Bluffs, Iowa.
4. Elba Hallquist Newberg, born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, now deceased.
5. John B. Hallquist, born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, lives in Denver at 1275 Forest St.
6. Carl Iner Hallquist, born in 1892 at Council Bluffs, Iowa, died at Steamboat Springs.

Biographical information concerning parents:

Pioneers in Sedgwick County. The parents of Carl Iner, and John Bernhard Hallquist, were born in Sweden but were married in Council Bluffs, Iowa. It was a second marriage for John Hallquist Sr., he, having been married in Sweden previously. When married the second time he had one daughter Anna by the first wife who died soon after coming to America. In the year 1893 Mr. Hallquist Sr. left Iowa for Julesburg, Colorado, where he took a homestead across the State line in Deuel County, Nebraska.

He lived there during his active years but moved to Julesburg about 1918 or 19 where he spent his retired years.

His son, John, who lives in Denver remembers the hardships of their early years and has said that all the stories of shooting and carousing of those early times are greatly exaggerated.

Biographical information concerning self:

I am a descendent of some of the first colonial families to settle in the New England states. All my ancestors were pioneers. Starting from Salem, Massachusetts, they continued to pioneer westward until their descendents reached the Pacific coast. I have been doing genealogical research of these families for over a year, as I am writing an historical record of the settlement of the west as it concerns these old families.

The names I am most interested in are Winthrop, Endicott, Putnam, Trask, Hutchinson, Hamilton, Ferguson, Hain and Leach. I hoped to have this book ready for publication by 1959, the centennial year, but it is a big task.

My maiden name was Brunette, my father was born in Canada as descendent of Reals or Royals and Hamilton. My mother was Lelia Hain, a daughter of Maribee Putnam and Levi Hain. I married Carl Iner Hallquist in 1917. I have five living children.

Josephine Brunette Hallquist
1010 E. 13th Avenue
Denver 18, Colorado

MINNIE HALVERSON

5 Generations

Photograph

Five generations got together last week when tiny Teresa Kay Word, 4 months old, of Port Hueneme, Calif., in front, arrived in Denver to visit her great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Minnie Halverson, 76, of 2040 S. Federal blvd., at top of photo.

Others are, from top, Mrs. Stella Mote of 3045 W. Walsh pl., Mrs. Halverson's daughter, Mrs. Elsie Babler of 4598 W. Tennessee ave., granddaughter, and Mrs. Barbara Wood, 19, of Port Hueneme, great-granddaughter and Teresa Kay's mother.

They gathered at the home of Mrs. Claire C. Hampton of 3065 W. Walsh pl., another daughter of Mrs. Halverson. In addition, she has a third daughter, five sons, 26 other grandchildren and 27 other great-grandchildren.

Rocky Mountain News, July 24, 1960, p. 66

ROBERT GANN HAMLIN
Merchant and County Executive

For years a prominent business man of Pueblo, Colorado, Robert Gann Hamlin held an important place in the life of his city and his community, as well as in the hearts of all his fellow citizens who knew the man and his work. He also held a responsible position in the county treasurer's office of Pueblo County for thirteen years, and deserved credit for much of the efficient handling of the affairs of that department of the county government. But more than for his accomplishments, Mr. Hamlin was held in high esteem for the fine, generous and noble traits of character which he regularly displayed; the influence for good that emanated from him, especially in his comradeship with young men, his eagerness to help them in life's battles and set for them a worthy example of citizenship; and his excellent family life. For, despite his many activities and public attainments, he was primarily a home man, and his death caused untold grieving in the circle of his own family, where he was loved and cherished as a splendid husband and father.

Mr. Hamlin was born in Pueblo, Colorado, the city in which he subsequently took such a prominent part, on October 6, 1876, son of William Robert and Cassie (McClelland) Hamlin. The father was born in Clarksville, Arkansas, on August 5, 1847, later removed to Pueblo, Colorado, and the district of Turkey Creek, where he established a ranch and cattle business, after he had returned from serving in the Arkansas Cavalry in the Confederate Army in the American Civil War, and where he died on December 13, 1925, at the advanced age of seventy-eight years. The mother, Cassie (McClelland) Hamlin, was descended from an old English family which came to America early in the history of the white people on this continent, and for generations had been one of the prominent families of the South. As a boy, Robert Gann Hamlin attended the Centennial High School, in Pueblo, Colorado, while his first employment was in his father's large feed and grain store in that city. In working with his father, he acquired a thorough business sense and a knowledge of methods and procedure which helped him in later years, both in his business and public executive duties. In the latter part of his life, he operated a large cigar store in the business district of Pueblo, an enterprise which became profitable and won a reputation in the city for the valuable service that it performed for the people there.

In his business activities, as well as in his work in the county treasurer's office, Mr. Hamlin consistently won friends and admirers by his genial personality and his thoughtfulness and consideration of others. He was a busy man but, needless to say, one who took a wide interest in public affairs and was ready and willing to do whatever was in his power to aid his community and to bring about improvement in conditions. His political affiliation was with the Democratic party, whose principles and candidates he supported. He was a member of several social and fraternal organizations, including the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Woodmen of the World and the Pueblo Fishing Club. Fond of hunting and fishing, he was, none the less, an ardent advocate of fair sportsmanship and fairness to his game, and tried at all times to promote these principles in Pueblo and vicinity.

On May 1, 1901, in Pueblo, Colorado, Robert Gann Hamlin married Ruth McGlothlin, daughter of Isaac Newton McGlothlin, who was born in Franklin, Simpson County, Kentucky, but lived in Pueblo, Colorado, for thirty-eight years.

Mr. Hamlin's death, which occurred on April 26, 1926, came as a profound shock to his many friends and acquaintances, especially to those who had had the privilege of knowing him at all intimately. A high-minded and successful business man whose home life was entirely without stain or blemish, he built for himself the finest monument that can be built to any man -- a monument of unimpeachable character, a fine home, and a group of children whose effort and aim in life is to be fair and useful as their father.

Encyclopedia of Biography, v. 36, pp. 99-100

CHARLES HANINGTON

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Charles Hanington
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Charles Harrington Hanington, born July 31, 1867, at Albion, New York

Name of father: Henry Hanington, a native of Albion, New York

Name of mother: Clara Hanington, a native of Albion, New York (D. A. R. #252704)

Attended school or college: East Denver High School, 1887, Denver, Colorado; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1891

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Central City, September, 1870; Denver, February, 1882

Married: Yes, June, 1897, at New York City

Name of wife: Marie Louise Seibt, a daughter of Rev. Chas. Theo and Jeanette (Parker) Seibt

Names of children and years of birth: Theodore Seibt Hanington, born July 4, 1901

Avocation: Mining, Smelting, Automobile

Give dates: 1891 to 1913; 1916 to 1931

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Red Cross during the war; Board of Education, 1928 to -- ; President, Colorado Museum of Natural History, 1930 to --

Biography File

MARIE MARGRETHE HANSEN

Legacy in Lyrics
Her Life And Will A Poem

A 69-year-old Denver spinster, who died June 26, was credited Thursday with preparing one of the most unusual wills ever presented for probate in county court.

The document, concisely hand-written in blue ink on small stationery, consists of 14 four-line verses of poetry, described by one Denver writer as "professional."

Marie Margrethe Hansen of 1368 Downing St. titled the document simply: "My Last Will and Testament." It is designed to dispose of her estate valued at about $3,000.

Miss Hansen bequeathed equal shares in her estate to two brothers, two sisters and the children of a deceased brother, all residing in California.

Howard Erickson, attorney for the estate, said the will "is certainly unusual" but is believed to be valid. Although not containing a regular "attestation clause" -- which states the will was properly executed -- the witnesses to it are available and will testify to validate the document, Erickson said.

The will, described by one legal observer as "amazing -- clearer than most wills drawn by lawyers," ran this way:

*"It matters not who'll get my things,
When I shall pass beyond,
I only ask that they remain
Within the family-bond;*

*That heirlooms may remain heirlooms,
And be a sacred Trust,
'Til all our members pass beyond
The state of mortal dust.*

*My youngest sister is the one
I beg to take the charge --
That she'll distribute all my things,
The small as well as large;*

*And for her trouble, she may have Whatever she shall choose,
An equal part of all my things,
Are hers, to keep and use.*

*By 'equal,' I refer to those
Who may be living then,
O sisters two, and brothers three --
My nearest, dearest kin.*

*In case that any of the five
Shall be no more, alas,*

*The heirs of one departed so,
Shall constitute, 'en-masse,'*

*One-fifth of all my legatees,
Just as their elder was;
And I am sure the others won't
Consider this a loss.*

*Not only, Sis will get her
But her expenses paid,
Providing there are means, of course,
When survey shall be made.*

*Should there be more financial means,
They'll 'share and share alike,'
To somewhat mitigate their lot,
In case hard luck should strike.*

*Since I've no family to join
In my eternity,
I only ask that I may rest
Beside paternity;*

*Beside my cherished mother's grave,
In our old Upland town,
Where live our parents' memories,
In family renown.*

*When I shall be forever free
From worldly strike and care,
I shall not rue the dust beneath
The lot I'll purchase there.*

*I can't bequeath intangibles
Within God's realm, for sooth;
But if I could, I'd leave to all,
The joy of Christian truth.*

*Hereby my testament is made;
And may it please my heirs;
And may my things bring joy to them,
When they receive their shares."*

Denver Post, July 28, 1955, p. 26

MR. AND MRS. WOLF C. HANSEN
Returning to Homelands
Former Dane to Visit Kin 1st Time Since '03

Wolf C. Hansen, Denver jeweler and Danish vice consul, is going home to Denmark for a visit after 51 years, to see some middle-aged brothers and sisters for the first time.

The brothers and sisters, like several other relatives, were born after he left Denmark in 1903 to make the U. S. his home.

With Mrs. Hansen, he will board a plane in New York Tuesday, arrive in Copenhagen the next day and head for his home town, Kolding, in Jutland. They will be gone two months, spending most of their time in Denmark and in Mrs. Hansen's native Sweden.

Hansen had completed his apprenticeship as watchmaker when he came to this country. He lived briefly in Chicago, where he met the future Mrs. Hansen, and in Colorado Springs before coming to Denver in 1905. He has been an American citizen since 1911, and Danish vice consul here since 1931.

He joined with another native Dane, Jes I. Hansen, in 1920 to form the jewelry firm of Hansen and Hansen, 1628 17th St. Wolf Hansen bought out his partner several years ago, but the firm still merits its traditional name; his new partner is his wife, Angeline.

As vice consul he has given most of his time to settling estates and helping with passport matters.

The Hansens have lived at 455 S. Sherman St. ever since their marriage in 1910. They have three daughters and seven grandchildren.

[A photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Hansen accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, May 27, 1954, p. 22

MAJOR CHARLES B. HARDIN

Whites Made Poor Lo Bad, Says Retired Major Here
Doughty Old Warrior, 75, Fought Many Engagements
With Red Men; Doesn't Think Them Mean
By JOHN SPAULDING

Lo, the poor Indian, would not have been a bad Indian as well had he not been tutored by the white man.

At least that is the private opinion of Maj. Charles B. Hardin, 75, U. S. A., retired.

And the major ought to know his redskins. As a regular army man he fought in 16 engagements with the Indians before his 18th birthday and he was among those present at many other battles before the red man finally was induced to live quietly on his reservations.

Major Hardin has been a resident of Denver since his retirement for disability in 1905. He and Mrs. Hardin and their children have a cozy little home at 1615 Madison st., far removed in time, but not so far away geographically speaking, from the old soldier's scenes of action.

"Old" is used inadvisedly, as Major Hardin insists he is 75 years "young," and appearances seem to bear out his contention.

The major is a quiet-spoken, military chap, not given to yarn spinning. He is all courtesy, however, and because of this generosity he consented to answer queries as to his military career.

His conviction that the Indian learned about meanness from the white man is based upon his actual contact with both species of the genus homo.

Would Have Made Bad Indian

"As I look back over the years," he said yesterday, from a big leather chair parked before a crackling grate fire, "I am more than ever convinced that had I been an Indian I would have been the 'baddest' Indian this side of the Atlantic."

When Private Charles B. Hardin, age 17 years, enlisted in the army in Springfield, Ill., in 1872, he was assigned to the First Cavalry. A month later he and his buddies were engaged in the year-long task of quelling the Modoc uprising in the lava beds that fringe Tule Lake at the Oregon-California border.

It was during a peace conference between the Modoc leaders and Gen. E. R. S. Canby that the general and a civilian peace commissioner were treacherously slain by the Indians.

In the unprovoked assault on the white officers, Lieut. William L. Sherwood, an infantryman, was shot down as he advanced from another group of Indians to hear their peace offerings.

Young Private Hardin was among the first to rush to the wounded officer's assistance. He dragged him out of the reach of the hail of bullets that followed the initial attack, but the wound proved mortal.

Major Hardin sees nothing heroic in this act of exposing himself to fire to rescue another.

"Poof," he exclaimed, "that was merely in the line of duty."

Leaders Later Caught

"Chief Schonschim, Captain Jack and other leaders in the assault were later captured and hanged," Hardin related.

"But much as they deserved the fate, there is a question in my mind if that was justice," he declared.

"A few years before the death of Canby the Indians had suffered a similar fate at the hands of the California vigilantes when they went as the invited guests to a peace party and were shot down by the whites.

"They were playing the white man's own game when they assaulted Canby."

The regular soldier respected the Indian as a fighter and was a stickler for fair play, Hardin said.

He recounted an incident in which Oregon volunteers attacked a wagon bearing a half-dozen sick and aged Indians, over-powered the small cavalry guard and killed their charges.

"The boys of my outfit were so incensed that they mounted and prepared to ride out after the Oregonians," Hardin recalled.

"Only the bravery of John S. Kyle, a second lieutenant in the First Cavalry, prevented bloodshed and disgrace for the colors. He planted himself in the narrow neck of a rocky gorge and defied his men to ride him down."

Visited Battleground

A year ago last June Major Hardin visited the Modoc battlegrounds.

"I wanted to see how it felt to walk among those rocks 'straight up' and not dodging bullets," he said.

In the heart of the lava rocks he came upon an aged Indian. It was Pete Schonschim, son of the hanged chief, and only survivor of the Modoc war band.

When Schonschim was informed by Hardin's forest ranger guide that the white man was one of those who fought against him in 1873, the old red man extended his hand and embraced his former enemy, the major said.

Major Hardin was commissioned in 1882 "because 'Fighting' Capt. Reuben F. Barnard declared they hadn't been able to kill me in 10 years and he saw no other way of getting rid of me."

Lieutenant Hardin was assigned to the 18th infantry and under the insignia of this organization saw service in the Philippines during the Spanish-American War and the Filipino rebellion.

In 1905 he commanded the battalion at Zamboanga, Mindanao, which acted as a guard of honor for Chief Justice Taft, then secretary of war.

The advent of the World War saw Major Hardin "itching" to get overseas. Army medical officers would not accept him for that service but they did recommend his appointment to command in the non-combatant ranks.

During the last days of the war he commanded the student army training corps at Fort Collins and waged a winning battle against the "flu" epidemic.

Gives Others Credit

While Hardin gives the credit to his subordinates, records show that out of 500 cases of the epidemic at the agricultural college there were but 24 casualties.

The major's Indian fighting was not confined to California, but ranged over all of the "new" lands of the Middle West, pivoting around Denver and flaring off to the south.

"But this was more chasing than fighting," he said. "Always it was a case of undoing trickery. And in nine cases out of ten, the trickery could be traced to white example."

Major Hardin was married to Elizabeth King, daughter of the commandant at the engineering school at Fort Totten, N. Y., in 1889.

A son, Charles, graduated from West Point in 1918. He is stationed at Camp Little, Nogales, Ariz.

[A photograph of Major Hardin and drawings depicting events of his life accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, February 10, 1929

THEODORE MARSH HARDING

Theodore Marsh Harding, long-time business leader, devoted public servant, worker for community betterment and highly-respected good citizen, died Tuesday morning at St. Thomas More hospital. He was 71.

He slept quietly away at 10:35 a. m. after a long and gallant fight against a lingering illness.

In his passing, Canon City lost perhaps its best-known and its most active resident. In the last half-century and more, there were few movements for community betterment with which he was not associated. His interests ranged from athletics to religion, from good schools to bigger and better civic celebrations.

Mr. Harding had served devotedly on such public bodies as the board of education and the city council, being a member of each for seven years. He had been a member of the Lions club for more than 30 years, was a life member of the Elks lodge, was a founder and long-time director of the Canon City Rodeo association, had served as president of both the Fruitland Water Co., and the Canon Heights Water Co.

He was one of the most devoted and active members of Christ Episcopal church and had served in every official lay capacity from senior warden to choir member. After he voluntarily retired as senior warden (highest lay office in the parish) a few years ago, the vestry unanimously elected him senior warden emeritus with full voting powers, the only member to be so honored in the long history of the Canon City parish.

Mr. Harding's strong interest in his community is shown by his offer of more than 80 acres of ground north of Canon City for a golf course. The offer was made several years ago, and was renewed a few months ago when interest in forming a golf club was revived.

He was one of the charter members of the original Canon City Golf club, which was formed in 1922, and he served the club as president and director for a number of years. It closed in the depression years of the mid-1930s.

Mr. Harding's love of sports and the outdoors extended into many other fields as well. He was an ardent hunter, and in 1919 he was the leading figure in restoring football as a major high school sport after an absence of several years. He joined with the coach Frank M. Hickey, who had come to Canon City that fall, in canvassing the business district to get funds for uniforms.

"We raised around $185," he recalled. "This went to buy the first uniforms, a sum that would now scarcely equip one player."

It was a short time later that he was elected to the school board, and took a leading part in securing the present high school building.

He ranked as among the most loyal followers of the Tiger athletic teams, was a founder of the old Third Team -- boosters organization -- and was instrumental in giving Canon City the first prep sod football field in Southern Colorado. Mr. Harding was an ardent wild life conservationist, and for years was a member of the Fremont County Fish and Game Association, having served as a director of the group.

He had served on Chamber of Commerce committees almost without number and had participated in literally dozens of community drives. He had helped stage the Royal Gorge Roundup and many other celebrations over his long span of public life.

Mr. Harding had operated the Harding Hardware Co., from 1913 until his retirement in 1949. The firm was established in 1879 by his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Harding Sr., pioneer residents of Canon City. He was associated with his father in the business during his younger years, then assumed the management upon the death of Mr. Harding, Sr. He was long active in the Mountain States Hardware and Implement Assn. and had filled the office of president as well as a board member.

After he closed the hardware store six years ago, Mr. Harding "decided to take it easy." However, that was in theory only, for he maintained his deep interest in civic affairs almost until the time of his death.

He was serving out a three-year term on the Canon City Museum Board at the time of his passing, and he was also a member of the governing board of St. Thomas More hospital.

[A photograph accompanies this article with the following caption: T. M. Harding had retired from his hardware store when this picture was taken two years ago. However, his retirement had not dimmed his love for Canon City or his interest in its advancement. He remained active in community affairs until his last illness. "This shows a man in retirement hard at work on the lawn," he had quipped in referring to this picture.]

Canon City Daily Record, September 22, 1955

THEODORE MARSH HARDING

Mr. Canon City

In the passing of Ted Harding, Canon City has lost its most enthusiastic booster and tireless worker for all things good for the community. No one in all the history of the community deserved the title of "Mr. Canon City" more than did Ted Harding.

From the time he took over an ailing business in his youth and built it to one of Canon City's outstanding establishments until sickness laid him low recently, Ted was never so busy that he couldn't pick up the torch and boost any activity.

Ted served official capacities in his church, his city and his school system. But it didn't stop there. Whether it was raising money to buy football suits in the early days, saving a rodeo by a Main street canvass, or taking an active part in someone's political campaign, Ted was enthusiastically there. No activity was too small for him to shrug nor too big to tackle. If it was good for Canon City he was working hard for it.

Canon City was just plain fortunate that Ted Harding lived here for 71 years. There are hundreds who feel a great personal loss and the community as a whole loses one of its greatest workers of all time.

Canon City Daily Record, September 22, 1955

CHARLES LEE HARKER

Mine Owner

During the lifetime of the late Charles Lee Harker, of Denver, Colorado, it was often declared that when he took up mining interests the State and the Nation lost a fine jurist. He was a man who had wonderful gifts of logic, combined with the faculty of presenting his arguments for or against a proposition in the clearest terms. He became associated with men in all stations of life, who sought his advice and counsel whenever they were in doubt as to the course to pursue. Many a litigation was avoided because the parties to the dispute placed implicit confidence in Mr. Harker's wisdom and fairness. He was sent as a delegate to the convention at Chicago that nominated Grover Cleveland for the Presidency, and his influence had undoubtedly much to do with the result of the balloting.

Mr. Harker was born in Dayton, Ohio, April 21, 1841, the son of Jesse and Susan Evelyn (Dunn) Harker, the former a well-known educator of his day and holder of a professorship in one of the leading colleges of Dayton. The Harker family is of an old line of English nobility, of Quaker extraction, the members locating in Philadelphia in the pre-Revolutionary era. They were very prominent in Philadelphia and throughout Pennsylvania and were of substantial fortune.

Following his early education in public and private schools in his community, Mr. Harker entered Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Michigan, from which he graduated in 1862. In 1866, he came west and became a mining engineer at Central City, Colorado, and thus laid the foundations of his later fortune.

He owned and operated several very rich mines, among them being the Topeka Mine, the Frontenac Mine, and the Fairfield holdings, each of which brought to him a sizable fortune. He remained in the mining business until his retirement from active business a few years before his death.

He was urged at one time to accept the nomination for the Gubernatorial chair, and on another occasion he was asked to allow his name to be used for the office of United States Senator, but on each occasion he refused.

He was an extensive reader; a student of the biographies of the world's famous men; was very broad in his religious views and, although not actively affiliated with any church, was consistently religious. Wealth brought with it the possibility of travel, and with his family he spent many happy years in visiting practically every place of note throughout the world. Mr. Harker was a member of every representative club and civic organization of Central City, and was also affiliated with the Denver Club and the Denver Athletic Club. His favorite recreations were chess, billiards and travel.

In February, 1901, Charles Lee Harker married Mary Elizabeth Rhodes, at Denver. Mrs. Harker's ancestors were landed proprietors of Yorkshire, England. Her father, William Rhodes, was of one of the cadet branches of one of England's noble families.

Mr. and Mrs. Harker were the parents of one child, a daughter, Helen. Miss Harker has been educated in the finest and most exclusive schools of America, supplemented by additional work in some of Europe's famous educational institutions, and by extensive travel. She is a distinguished linguist of note and takes a deep interest in sculpture, having been the originator of some very handsome studies. On July 24, 1927, Helen Harker was married to Major Frederick L. L. Neylan, nephew of Sir Daniel Neylan, of London. He is a graduate of Oxford, a barrister from Middle Temple, "Inns of Court," London. He entered the army in 1914, and was in active service, cited for bravery and was wounded many times. He is a skilled athlete and takes pleasure in athletic sports. His home is in London, England.

[A portrait of Charles Lee Harker accompanies the article.]

Encyclopedia of Biography, pp. 47-49

DR. ELMER W. HARNER
Minister Will Mark Unusual Anniversary
By WES FRENCH
Rocky Mountain News Religion Editor

Forty years in the pulpit of one church is the unusual record which the Rev. Elmer W. Harner will celebrate Sunday at a special vesper service and reception at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, E. 16th ave. and Grant st.

Dr. Harner was a young man only a few years out of seminary when he came to Denver and St. Paul's to preach his first sermon on Dec. 15, 1918.

Colorado is the only state Dr. Harner has served in his 43 years in the ministry. He was assigned to a mission congregation in Canon City when he received his diploma from Gettysburg College and Seminary in Gettysburg, Pa.

He was ordained in 1915 by the Rocky Mountain Synod of the United Lutheran Church in Trinidad, Colo.

Dr. Harner explained that St. Paul's has always been a down-town church. When he came in 1918 the church was at 22d and California sts. However, it took only a few years of Dr. Harner's energetic leadership to make a new and larger church necessary.

The English-style church at E. 16th ave. and Grant st. was dedicated in 1926.

"The church largely serves a somewhat transient congregation," Dr. Harner said. "Of course, we have our more permanent members, but in an apartment and hotel district the membership is bound to change rather rapidly."

There are 31 members still with the church who were there when Dr. Harner came in 1918.

"I think a minister would have to have a transient congregation in order to stay 40 years," Dr. Harner laughed. "They move on before they get tired of looking at the same old face in the pulpit Sunday after Sunday."

The church has grown from 173 members in 1918 to about 1300 now. But it would be impossible to count the thousands of members who have entered the church and then left for other communities or suburban churches.

Within the past five years the church has bought two apartment buildings in the 1600 block of Logan st. for possible future expansion.

Dr. Harner is a former president of the Denver Ministerial Alliance and served two terms as president of the Rocky Mountain Synod.

Sunday's special service will begin at 7 p.m. The main speaker will be the Rev. Leeland C. Soker, president of the Synod.

[A photograph of Dr. Harner accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, December 12, 1958, p. 65

RUSSELL HARRIMAN

Boonville, Mo., Lawyer
11293 SAR, Colo. 93

Born: March 24, 1868, near Lone Elm in Clark's Fork Township, Cooper County, Missouri

Son of: Wm. Peyton Harriman and Elizabeth Margaret Russell

Grandson of: Thomas Russell and Elizabeth E. Russell

Great grandson of: James Russell and Angeletta Craighill

Claim thru:

James Russell who died in London County, Virginia the 3rd of November, 1832.

He was Sergeant in 1st New York Regiment, 10th December, 1776. Ensign, 20 February, 1777.

Reference: Hertman's Officers of the Revolution. Accepted application of J. N. Russell Jr.,
Colorado 41

Dated: Denver, Colorado, July 14, 1898

Transferred: To Missouri Society S.A.R., May 22, 1899

(signed) Russell Harriman

BRENDAN J. HARRINGTON

Date: January 29, 1938

No. 2 B992 D5 E16 F157
MAS/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Brendan J. Harrington, Manager
Arapahoe District, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company
418 Patterson Building, Denver, Colorado

Brendan J. Harrington, son of Michael J. and Mary Ellen (O'Donovan) Harrington; born in San Francisco, California, April 21, 1896.

Michael J. Harrington, son of Dennis and Eileen Harrington, was born in Skibbereen, County Cork, Ireland. In 1891, he came to America, and settled in San Francisco, California, where he served as manager of the F. E. Hesthal Company, a real estate firm. He is living, retired, in that city. His wife, Mary Ellen (O'Donovan) Harrington, who was born in Aughadown, Ireland, came to America in 1892. She died in 1923. She was the daughter of Jeremiah and Mary (Hagerty) O'Donovan.

Brendan J. Harrington, attended grade school, and graduated from high school, in San Francisco, California. Since 1910, he has been associated with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., serving successively as errand clerk, mail boy, underwriter, and executive clerk. In 1927, he began collecting a debit account, and served as assistant manager of the office in San Francisco, where he installed a conservation system. He subsequently was agency superintendent after which he served consecutively as assistant superintendent and as superintendent of agencies in San Francisco. In 1931, he was made manager of the Seattle (Washington) district, and since January 1934, has been manager of the Arapahoe District of the company in Denver, Colorado. His present office, which was established in January 1918, employs 26 agents, 3 assistant managers, and 5 clerks.

In February 1918, Mr. Harrington enlisted in the U. S. Army for service in the World War, and was stationed at Camp Fremont, in Palo Alto, California. He served as a sergeant first class in the Medical Department, doing war risk insurance work in the U. S., and overseas, from July 1918, to May 1919. He was assigned to Base Hospital No. 47, and to the Hospital Center in Beaune, France. He was later transferred to Tours, France, where he had charge of prisoners. He was honorably discharged in San Francisco, California, in June 1919.

Mr. Harrington, who is a Democrat, is a member of the following: National Association of Life Underwriters (member, education committee, and Colorado Association of Life Underwriters committee); Colorado Association of Life Underwriters (vice-president); Denver Chamber of Commerce; American Legion; Y.M.C.A.; Knights of Columbus; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Roman Catholic Church. His favorite recreations are golf, ping-pong, and contract bridge.

On June 6, 1923, Brandon J. Harrington married Eileen M. Richert, daughter of Paul and Catherine Richert. There are no children.

HARRINGTON FAMILY

Rocky Mountain News Photo by Mike O'Meara

Christmas is one day of the year set aside for family gatherings . . . It's a spiritual day filled with happiness for grandparents, parents and children and in many cases great-grandchildren. This year is no different . . . Party Line wishes each and everyone of its readers a very Merry Christmas.

Party Line here features one of Denver's most prominent families of four generations grouped around their Christmas tree. Seated in the center of the picture is Mrs. Martin J. O'Fallon, who was born in Ireland and came to Denver to live in the 1890s. With her are her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Harrington (Mrs. Harrington is the former Miss Margaret O'Fallon), and the Harringtons' children and grandchildren. In the front row with Mrs. O'Fallon are her great-grandchildren, left to right, Nandie and Paul Harrington, children of Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Harrington; David Carey, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. P. Carey Jr., and Martin J. Harrington Jr. Behind them are, left to right, Miss Patti-Jeanne Harrington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Harrington; Martin J. Harrington, holding his young son, Timothy; Mrs. William D. P. Carey Jr., the former Miss Margaret Harrington; Mr. Carey, holding their baby daughter, Meegan; Jerry Purcell of Hartsdale, N. Y., who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Purcell (Mrs. Purcell is the former Miss Maryanne Harrington), standing in front of Jerry is his grandmother, Mrs. Clarence L. Harrington; Mrs. Martin J. Harrington and Clarence L. Harrington.

Rocky Mountain News, December 25, 1959, p. 24

CLARK J HARRIS.

U. P. Engineer 49 Years Retires to Angler's Life

Clark J. Harris of 1445 California street, for forty-nine years a Union Pacific railroader, took the rest of his life off Saturday to fish.

The 70-year-old engineer brought the U. P.'s City of St. Louis into Denver's Union station from Hugo, Colo., for the last time before retirement Friday morning. With that trip, he wound up the kind of career every kid dreams about.

"If I had it to do over again," he said, "I would still be a railroad engineer."

Harris was born in Ohio in 1883 but moved west with his parents at an early age, settling in Julesburg, Colorado, in 1893 where he attended public schools. Julesburg is a railhead for the U. P.

"I remember as a kid I used to watch the old-time trains and always wanted to be an engineer," he said. "I guess I got my wish, forty-eight years and seven months of it."

Harris joined U. P. in 1905 as a fireman. Within four years he was an engineer. For almost that entire time Harris has worked the Denver to Hugo, Colo., section.

In 1940, Harris became the first engineer in the district to be placed aboard Diesel engines pulling the sleek City of St. Louis streamliner. Between 1950 and 1952 he ran the Denver to Sterling route on the sister train, the City of Denver, but last year returned to his old Denver-Hugo run.

His plans? "Well, I like to fish a lot -- and that's just what I'm going to do."

When he finished his last run, Harris was given a "high ball" order from Elgin Hicks, general manager for the U. P.'s southern district, ordering him to a life of bliss "which you have so richly earned." At Denver, he was met by a delegation including Arthur Patterson of Eastlake, Colo., who started railroading at the same time and who is now a retired City of Denver engineer. The delegation gave Harris a life membership in the U. P.'s Old Timers club.

[A photograph of Clark J. Harris accompanies the article.

Denver Post, August 2, 1953, p. 16A

EDWARD L. HARRIS

Edward L. Harris, Pioneer, is Dead at the Age of 81
Native of England Worked Since 1910 With Rogers Mortuary

Edward L. Harris, 81, a Colorado pioneer, died Tuesday afternoon at his home at 605 South Grant street after an illness of two weeks. Prior to coming to Denver in 1910 to become associated with the Rogers mortuary, he operated a similar business in Central City for forty-two years. He was born in Devonshire, England, and was brought to this country by his parents in 1862 when he was a small child. The family settled at Hancock, Mich., and four years later moved to Central City.

His father, Robert Harris, erected three hotel buildings in Central City. They are still standing.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Erzella Harris; seven children, fourteen grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren and a brother, Robert Harris of Denver. The children are Mrs. Ethel Preville, Mrs. Florence Wenzel, Mrs. Emma Norberg, Mrs. Nettie Lake and Mrs. Margaret McNulty, all of Denver, and Robert M. Harris of San Diego, Calif., and George D. Harris of Edgewater.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Saturday at the Rogers mortuary at 1544 Lincoln street. Burial will be in Riverside cemetery.

[A photograph of Edward L. Harris accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, December 1940

GEORGE HARRISON

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. George Harrison
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: George Billinsley Harrison, born October 23, 1870, at Howard County, Missouri

Name of father: George B. Harrison, a native of Missouri

Name of mother: Lovan Birch Harrison, a native of Missouri

Attended school or college: Pritchett School Institute

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: A.B. degree - 1887

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: July 15, 1926

Married: Yes, March 4, 1891, at Honey Grove, Texas

Name of wife: Adelaide Ligon,* the daughter of Thomas H. and Martha Ligon

Names of children and years of birth: E. Birch Harrison, born in 1892; Ruth Harrison, born in 1906

Avocation: Banker

Give dates: Since 1887 to present

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: No public office

* Mrs. Ligon: D.A.R. #82860

Biography File

THE VERY REV. DEAN HART

Biographical data to accompany portrait of The Very Rev. Dean Hart
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Henry Martyn Hart, born March 3, 1838, at Okley, Yorkshire

Name of father: Joshua Hart, a native of London

Name of mother: Hannah Hart, a native of Knaresboro

Attended school or college: Unity College, Dublin

Give names, dates, honorary degrees: D.D. T.C.D. - 1889, LL D (SO) - 1904

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came - 1879

Married: April 19, 1865, at Blackheath

Name of wife: Eleanor Wilson, the daughter of William and Harriet Wilson

Names of children and years of birth: Wilson Hart, born in 1866; Edith, born in 1867; Margaret and Eleanor, born in 1868; Agnes and Grace, born in 1869; Eleanor, born in 1874, married Robert Harrington, died in 1958 (see Rocky Mountain News, January 26, 1958, p. 12) at 82 years of age.

Avocation: Minister

Give dates: Dean of St. John's Cathedral since 1879.

Give brief incidents of special historical interest:

One of the originators of the Charity Organization Society - London - 1869

Author of: Children's Service Book - Musical Edition; Several volumes of Sermons; Elementary Chemistry; Priest Craft, Roman & other; A way that seemeth right (a criticism of Christian Science); A Book of Prayers - 1915; The 10 Commandments in the XXth Century; The Teacher's Catechism.

Editor and Translator of "The World of the Sea". Numerous Magazine Articles.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) H. Martyn Hart

Biography File

DEAN HENRY MARTYN HART

Dean Hart, Vigorous and Colorful Man Of God,
Left His Monument in One of The Finest Cathedrals in the West

By Madeleine C. Kyle

Special Contributor to the Rocky Mountain Empire Magazine

You would have wondered, as many people in Denver did, which was the more bent on making the grade -- the bright red one-cylinder Cadillac or the driver, Dean Henry Martyn Hart, who sat so erect and drove with such concentrated determination.

The black coat, the cleric's collar, the low-crowned black felt hat failed to tone down the gay color of the car, in fact seemed only to accentuate it.

As the car came to a stop in front of a down-at-the-heel cottage, the driver jumped from his seat and went to the back of the car, where he removed a large wicker basket perched upon a platform obviously made especially for it, and walked briskly toward the house.

It was then you saw the rosette on the front of his hat, which marked him as a dean of the Episcopal church. You noticed, too, the square cut, powerful features, the keen penetrating eyes, the firm mouth. There was an air about that stocky figure that gave you the impression that he was carrying a banner, and there were few in Denver to whom Dean Hart's daily pilgrimage in this odd vehicle were not a familiar sight at the turn of the century.

"Boozeless Saloon"

In the forty-one years of service he gave to Denver, his activities covered almost every phase of human endeavor, from individual charities (via the basket on the car) and organizing a "boozeless saloon" where only coffee and doughnuts were served, to the building of one of the west's finest cathedrals at a cost of approximately one-half million dollars.

Henry Martyn Hart had a fine heritage for the important part he was to play. His father, a man of keen intellect, was the vicar of Otley, Yorkshire, England, and when young Henry was born there in 1838 his parents named him for that great missionary Henry Martyn.

During his school years, under a severe Scotch master, he proved himself an outstanding student. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Dublin university at the age of 25. He became instructor of mathematics at Blackheath Preparatory school, remained there as head master for seventeen years, and married the sister-in-law of his senior.

As the years progressed he became more and more dedicated to the idea of making religion a working principle to level class distinction and do away with privileges for a few. The banner was beginning to unfurl!

In 1861 he became a doctor of divinity and was ordained by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1863. It was here at Blackheath that Mr. Hart made his first notable contribution to society. The founding of the world's first organized charity movement for which he was solely responsible made his name known throughout England.

Founds Model Charity

Blackheath had long been overrun by itinerant beggars so in order that the deserving should not be deprived by the undeserving Hart had printed cards distributed to each household. The cards bore the name "Blackheath Mendicity Society" and a suggestion for help if presented to the society's office. It proved such a success that the Charity Organization of London was founded in 1869 with Hart at its head.

But the strenuous life he had laid out for himself caused a serious break in his health. In 1871 at the suggestion of his physician he embarked upon a trip around the world.

Landing in America, he went to Chicago. There he heard of a buffalo hunt near Kansas City and decided to go. The hunt was not such a thrilling adventure as he had anticipated. "I regret to say I didn't kill a buffalo, but there was no more sport in it than shooting a cow in a barnyard," he wrote.

Moving on toward San Francisco he stopped over in Denver, and to fill a vacancy he preached a sermon here at St. John's of the Wilderness, a small frame church at Fourteenth and Arapahoe streets. The sermon so impressed the congregation that he had hardly returned to England (in perfect health by this time) when he received an offer of $4,000 from Bishop Spaulding of the Episcopal church if he would come to Denver. This was twice the prevailing salary.

Sensing that here lay a fertile field for the promotion of his ideals, Hart left England with his wife and six children. "There are people pouring in here at the rate of 2,000 a week," he wrote back home, "most of whom by their own admission have left God at the Missouri river."

The first objective was to build a cathedral, but the church organization had been unable to raise $10,000. Hart soon raised $120,000 and the cornerstone of the new St. John's in the Wilderness was laid with great ceremony. Seats were rented from a traveling circus, and Masons, Odd Fellows, Phythians, and the fire and police departments, all in full uniform, participated. A cannon was fired, the Stars and Stripes were raised and Bishop Spaulding gave the address.

The cathedral was opened in 1882. The entire congregation, with Dean Hart in the lead, marched from Fourteenth and Arapahoe across town to the splendid new St. John's in the Wilderness at Twentieth and Broadway. There was no mistaking now that he carried a banner.

During the ensuing years Dean Hart became a symbol of charity. He believed that those who had should share, and in his appeals to Denver's wealthy it was said his manner was often times almost brusque -- a chiding that they should have to be asked to share.

When a deanery was needed he put up $6,000 of his own money, borrowing $4,000 more to build it. Later he moved his family to a small cottage, renting the deanery so that he might have the income to help maintain a boys' school, Jarvis hall, that he had started. He also founded two other schools in Denver, Wolfe hall and Wolcott school.

Hart was a tolerant man with a sense of humor quite unusual for a man of his calling. He was not an uncompromising teetotaler. He liked to recall an experience he had in Japan. He visited an ancient temple there and the priest showed him about, and then took him to a secret sanctuary beneath a huge Buddha.

"I expected to see a toe of Buddha or one of the prized relics of his order," Hart said. "Instead he produced a bottle of Bass pale ale and with much Japanese ceremony we drank to each other's health." The ale was no sooner down than the Japanese hinted very delicately that a price about three times its worth would be acceptable. The dean never revealed whether he paid off.

While at Blackheath the organ gave him no end of trouble. He said once, "I wonder if machines are not used by our tempters to try our patience. On Easter Sunday in the middle of the Te Deum the organist whispered to me, "No wind, Sir."

"With all the dignity I could muster I left my stall, but the moment I had passed the vestry door I gathered up my vestments and fairly flew to the motor room. Picking up a monkey wrench I threw it with exasperation at the motor. The motor started up immediately and went on through the rest of the service and I returned sedately to my post apparently unruffled."

Some of Dean Hart's beliefs might brand him as an eccentric, but to him they were merely his interpretation of a constructive life. He never attended a theater.

"I read many books and have talked to innumerable people about plays they have seen," he said. "They tell me how they have been moved to tears over some injustice depicted, but I have yet to see one who does anything about it.

"I have never smoked tobacco. I never had the money for it for one thing, and I question whether the benefit equals the expenditure."

There were many with whom he took very decisive opposing viewpoints. He said of Elbert Hubbard "he was a very talented man with his remarkable command of rich language. If his loose character had been controlled by any religion he would have been a prophet whose voice would have awakened the wilderness."

He Flayed the Press

Hubbard had just written an article in his paper saying that Dean Hart's real name was Patrick O'Callighan, that he was born in Cork, that his father drove a jaunting car and his mother was a barmaid.

Hart once sought to have the Ten Commandments taught in school, but opposition was too strong and the attempt failed. This in no way altered his point of view, he merely bowed to the will of the majority and went ahead with added zeal.

He flayed the press frequently for misrepresentations. Because he opposed Sunday theater performances a small mob gathered outside the deanery in 1893 and a few boys threw stones. Eastern papers reported a riot of 2,000 causing bloodshed and destruction and requiring seventy-five policemen to disperse the mob. Actually one policeman scattered the crowd, then the dean invited him to have supper.

In 1903 a fire destroyed the cathedral. Dean Hart collected $66,000 from the insurance company and sold the site for $30,000 and immediately started plans for a larger cathedral. A block was purchased on Capitol hill, as the city seemed to be moving in that direction, and after seven years the new St. John's in the Wilderness, an imposing edifice at East Fourteenth avenue and Clarkson street was dedicated.

It was in the early 1900's that the little red Cadillac came into being. Dean Hart's charity activities had reached such proportions that he found it almost impossible to cover the whole territory. After much deliberation, for $750 was a great deal of money to be put to his own use, the car was purchased and for many years it served nobly.

On March 24, 1920, Dean Hart at 82 came to the end of the road. He had been ill with pneumonia only a few weeks. He knew death was coming. "A stimulant will do no good; they only whip up the heart, the machinery is worn out," he said. He made plans for his epitaph and bade his friends goodbye.

After a simple service without eulogy he was laid to rest on the east side of the cathedral, a kindly, brilliant man with a courage so splendid and a conviction so divine that no earthly challenge could lower the banner he so valiantly bore.

[Photographs accompanying this article: Dean Henry M. Hart and St. John's Cathedral, built 1911]

Denver Post, January 11, 1948, Rocky Mountain Empire Magazine Section, p. 4

RICHARD HUSON HART

Date of birth: August 28, 1875

Place of birth: Lawrence, Kansas

Married: Elizabeth Jerome, born December 10, 1877

Date and place of marriage: September 16, 1903, at Denver, Colorado

A. B. (Harvard) 1897; LL. D, Denver University, 1902; Professor of Law, D. U.
Colonial Wars. Mayflower. Colonial Governors.

Children:

John Lathrop Jerome, born August 15, 1904, at Denver

Stephen Harding, born April 13, 1908, at Denver

Margaret Arms, born December 1, 1911, at Denver

Parents:

Father: Charles Nelson Hart, born at Hartford, Connecticut, November 24, 1849; died at Marshfield, Massachusetts, May 25, 1923; married Elizabeth Arms, June 22, 1872, at Lawrence Kansas. M.D.; Hartford, Connecticut; Lawrence, Kansas; Denver, Colorado. President, State Board of Medical Examiners, Colorado.

Mother: Elizabeth Arms, born December 7, 1854, at North Adams, Massachusetts died February 3, 1912, at Marshfield, Massachusetts; daughter of Leonard Arms and Frances Anne Eldridge; Frances Eldridge, daughter of Lyman Eldridge

Children:

Leonard Arms, born September 20, 1873, at Lawrence, Kansas, died in infancy

Richard Huson, born August 28, 1875, at Lawrence, Kansas

Frances Mary, born May 16, 1881, at Denver, Colorado

Grandparents:

Father's father: Alfred Hart, born at Norwich, Connecticut, March 28, 1816; died 1906 (the day of the earthquake), San Francisco, California; married Mary Cornelia Gardner, January 21, 1841, at Bozrah (?) Connecticut. Occupation: Landscape Painter

Father's mother: Mary Cornelia Gardner, born at Bozrah, Connecticut, March 2, 1820; died Easter Day (April 5) 1896, at Denver, Colorado

Children:

Lillie Mitchell, born January 21, 1842, at Norwich; died September 13, 1929, at Hartford, Connecticut; married Silas Stone at Cleveland, Ohio, September 3, 1866.

Georgianna, born August 26, 1845; married Edward A. Reser at Cleveland, June 19, 1871.

Charles Nelson, born November 24, 1849, at Hartford; died at Marshfield, supra.

Edward, born June 20, 1860, at Hartford; died May 13, 1864 at Hartford.

Alfred Lawrence, born June 20, 1843, at Norwich; died August 3, 1844.

Great-grandparents:

- 7 Eliphaz Hart
- 6 Judah Hart (2nd)
- 5 Judah Hart (1st)
- 4 John Hart
- 3 John Hart
- 2 John Hart
- 1 Stephen Hart

Hart line shown in Andrews'
Hart Genealogy 1875.

MRS. MOLLIE HARTMAN
71-Year-Old Montrose Woman
Makes Piano Debut at Her Birthday Party
By MRS. JOY DODGE

Some 50 friends invited to help Mrs. E. R. Hartman, better known as "Aunt Mollie," celebrate her 71st birthday were surprised and delighted to hear her play piano solos, duets with her teacher, Mrs. J. A. Bullock, and then to join in group singing with Mrs. Hartman at the piano. Taking up piano lessons Jan. 29, 1947, Mrs. Hartman had kept the lessons a secret from friends and few knew that she was to make her debut at her party Thursday.

Mrs. Bullock was hostess for the affair honoring Mrs. Hartman. Mrs. Hartman and Mrs. Bullock played three piano duets. Dr. Harriett Collins Lingham, who first became associated with Mrs. Hartman 46 years ago in their work at the old Hartman sanitarium, talked briefly of her association and work with the honored guest paying a lovely tribute to the generous selfless service given to the community by Mrs. Hartman over almost half a century. Mrs. Hartman gave a group of piano solos and accompanied at the piano for a period of group singing.

Guests had brought a large array of beautiful and useful gifts which were opened and displayed by Mrs. Hartman with the assistance of Mrs. T. B. Townsend.

Refreshments featuring a huge white birthday cake were served at a long table centered with spring flowers which were used throughout the house. Mrs. Joe Hartman and Mrs. S. C. Hartman, sisters-in-law of the honored guest, and her niece, Mrs. Fred Flower, presided at the table.

Visiting was enjoyed during a social time when the chief topic of conversation was amazement of those present that Mrs. Hartman had found time during her busy days to carry out the ambition of a lifetime in learning to play the piano for her own enjoyment, and to do such a thorough job in the achievement.

Born March 4, 1877, just across the Illinois line from Terre Haute, Ind., Mollie Mock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Mock, moved with her family to Kansas at the age of six, and six years later to Colorado. She was graduated from nurses training at the Colorado Sanitarium, now known as Boulder Sanitarium, in 1899, and was married to Edward R. Hartman in the fall of that year. The couple spent several months at Battle Creek, Mich., receiving further schooling, then came to Montrose in 1900, joining his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Joe Hartman, in management of the Hartman Sanitarium here. During the past 47 years Mrs. Hartman had five and one-half years when she was not connected directly with hospital work and during that time did private nursing.

She "retired" in April, 1946 after a serious illness but found time palling on her hands after six months and again opened her home to the care of aged persons.

Mrs. Hartman, who had two children, Mrs. Pardi of Boulder and Alonza, of Denver, finds relaxation from her duties as nurse to care for a large flower garden, her particular specialty being roses. She is also famous for her fine cookery and her gifts of food have been welcomed many times when her call and gift came at a time of grief or trouble in homes of the community.

Guest list for the party, which included only a few of the many friends made by Mrs. Hartman during her life in Montrose included Mesdames Rollen Flowers, Richard Collin, D. Gamarra, Fred Flower, R. L. Gleason, S. C. Hartman, J. F. Hartman, Harold Hartman, W. A. Lingham, D. H. Hughes, Earle Bryant, William Sampson, N. A. Brethouwer, James Shaw, Ralph Gibson, R. V. Adler, Pearl Cobb, Lottie Byerrum, Walter Lacher, Ed Braund, Fred Schermerhorn, George W. Bruce, F. H. Posey, C. E. Lockwood, Fred Sorenson, C. E. Adams, Nellie Dwyer, Laura Galloway, T. B. Townsend, Carlyle Teague.

A. C. Dodge, Frank Loehr, Alice Raish, Ora Sanburg, A. R. Follett, Anna Fender, Maude Austin, Fred Donley Sr., Richard Edmondson, A. J. Humphrey, Keith Kinsey, Ernest Littleton, M. L. Ormsbee, Harry Mitchell, Herbert Ross, Homer Okey, Noel Ensley, J. A. Spring, John L. Stives, C. J. Moynihan, F. V. Stong, Mary Unrein, Tavia Walker and Misses Grace Parker and Elizabeth Whitted.

Grand Junction Daily Sentinel, March 7, 1948

HARVARD HOTEL
History of Harvard Hotel
Colorado Question Box

Dear Editor:

I notice where wreckers are tearing down the old Harvard Hotel near the Immaculate Conception Cathedral.

Looking at it, it looks as if it was once a private home. Was it?

Thank you.

Mrs. A. J., Denver

Dear Mrs. A. J.:

The old Harvard Hotel at 501 E. Colfax ave. was indeed a private residence at one time. According to J. C. Blickensderfer of Littleton, his grandfather had it built in 1892. He occupied it with his family for about 12 years.

It was a large 3-story structure with leaded glass and leaded stained glass windows. Much of the interior woodwork was golden oak. There were fireplaces in many of the rooms. Mantles were all hand carved.

Dr. James C. Blickensderfer was an early-day Denver physician. He had had a residence at 17th and California sts. which he vacated in 1891 to make room for an office building he planned to erect.

His office building was the recently demolished California Building completed the same year as his home on E. Colfax ave. He maintained offices in the California building.

Around 1904 the family moved out. The house, after being vacant for a time, became a rooming house. Later, two 3-story wings were added to the structure and it was turned into a hotel.

The Harvard Hotel had a capacity of 68 residents. There were both transient and permanent guests. The old-fashioned porch was a visiting spot for guests throughout the years. They sat on wicker furniture and watched the bustling traffic of E. Colfax ave.

The property still is owned by the Blickensderfer family. The property probably will be used as a parking lot with perhaps a motel built in the future.

[A photograph of the Harvard Hotel accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, October 15, 1961, p. 22A

ANDREW JACKSON HARVEY

Cousin of Daltons

A. J. Harvey, at 95, Admits to Full Life

By GEORGE JOHNSTON

Denver Post Staff Writer

Andrew Jackson Harvey says he has led a pretty full life -- "the way things went sometimes it was almost too full" -- but now he's resigned to a life of "just sitting around."

Harvey celebrated his 95th birthday Tuesday at 10 a.m.

"I was born at 10 a.m. Aug. 14, 1867," he recalled. "That was a Sunday, and they always say that Sunday is supposed to be your lucky day. But that's a lot of bunk. Whether or not you have any luck is the way you manage your life."

Harvey, who never married and who has outlived all his eight brothers and sisters, was a cousin of the infamous Dalton boys of Oklahoma and Kansas, and often relates tales of the Dalton desperadoes to friends and guests at the Brunswick Hotel, 1309 17th St., where he has made his home for seven years.

"Bob, Grattan (Gratt) and Emmett were the bad ones," he recalled Tuesday. "They were always up to something."

"Although they kept preaching against stealing, the temptation was just too much for them. They had to try to make it the easy way."

Their brother, Henry, he said, was a U. S. marshal "who didn't think much of his brothers."

The mother of the Dalton boys was Harvey's aunt.

Harvey was born near Union City, Tenn., and in his long and varied life he has been a farmer, rancher, cattle wrangler, locomotive fireman, furniture packer, oil field worker "and probably some other things."

He really planned to make a career of railroading, declaring "I know steam engines and I love them." But an accident put an end to that career. An engine which he was firing ran off a bridge in Iowa and he was laid up for 18 months.

He worked for a number of years for the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad.

Harvey first saw Denver, he said, in 1900 "when Lawrence used to be the show street of the city." He lives today only a block from Lawrence, but friends often take him for tours around the city.

Income from a 1,000-acre Nebraska farm which he owns keeps him in comfortable circumstances and permits him to do a little traveling. He flew to Oklahoma by jet a few months ago for a visit with friends and relatives.

Harvey appears in good health, but he says "I'm going downhill." He was reading a pocketbook thriller in the lobby of his hotel Tuesday, but complained, "I need these glasses to read."

Why did he never marry?

"I just never had a good place to keep a woman," Harvey said.

[A photograph of Andrew Jackson Harvey accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, August 15, 1962, p. 16

BERNICE HATHAWAY

Who Were My Ancestors?

That's what this Denver woman wondered.

Now she earns her pocket money tracing family trees

Nearly everyone wonders at times what kind of ancestors make up his family tree, but few people take time to find out. Bernice Hathaway of Denver is one person who took up the challenge and delved into genealogy and history books on a hunt for ancestors.

She discovered a girl in the family, thirteen generations back, who was responsible for the British parliament issuing a proclamation warning ladies not to flirt! A French-born forebearer was one of the first ten men to pass the bar exam in Maryland and a Dutch-born antecedent was the first sheriff of Ulster county, Long Island, way back in 1660.

The story about the flirtatious relative is one of Mrs. Hathaway's favorites. It seems that her far-distant ancestor, one Samuel Jordan, sailed from France on the Sea Venture which landed at Jamestown in 1609 -- eleven years before the arrival of the Pilgrims. His wife had died in France, so when a shipload of eligible young ladies arrived from England in 1610, he claimed one of them -- a 24-year-old lass named Sicily -- for his bride.

When Jordan died, Sicily inherited his large plantation, Jordan's Journey. Being attractive as well as blessed with rich lands, she became a popular young woman in the colony -- so popular, in fact, that she ended up engaged to two men! The problem of what to do about the double betrothal was presented to the council of the colony. But it proved too thorny for them, so they referred it to parliament. These pompous gentlemen then issued their proclamation warning ladies against flirting. Sicily finally resolved her problem by marrying William Ferrar, one of the two suitors.

Mrs. Hathaway's friends became so intrigued with her genealogical pursuits that they persuaded her to dig into their family backgrounds. Now, she has a money-making hobby of tracing family genealogies and then painting coats of arms.

When a person asks Mrs. Hathaway to work out a coat of arms, she ferrets out as much ancestral history from the family as possible. Then she spends hours searching through genealogical and heraldic books. When she has verified the information, she makes up a coat of arms for the family. Colors and charges (the lions, coins, etc.) must be in the correct position described in genealogical histories, but the manteling, shield shape and design are left to the artist's discretion.

Mrs. Hathaway uses vegetable or sheepskin parchment, copper or a regular artist's Gesso panel. She traces the design with India ink, paints it with oils and trims it with 23-karat gold or sterling leaf where these colors are called for. Since she started the business, Mrs. Hathaway has traced the family trees of hundreds of Rocky Mountain Empire residents.

[A photograph of Bernice Hathaway, coat of arms she traced and her reference materials accompanies this article.]

Denver Post, May 10, 1953, Magazine Section, p. 27

MRS. BERNICE HATHAWAY
Painting Coats of Arms Denver Woman's Hobby

Heraldry is not dead in America, declared Mrs. Bernice Hathaway of 1351 Marion street, whose hobby is painting family coats of arms.

Mrs. Hathaway, a state employe in the auditor's office, became interested in escutcheons six years ago when she started writing family histories, illustrated with the family heralds. She has since done extensive research to find authentic coats of arms to illustrate them for prominent Denver families.

"While the United States has never granted family coats of arms," Mrs. Hathaway said, "the great seal of the United States is a combination of the family escutcheons of the Washington and Ball families. Mary Ball was the maiden name of George Washington's mother. The founders of our country felt that the heraldry smacked too much of the divine right of kings -- the thing they came to the New World to get away from.

"The only coat of arms of which I know that was granted specifically for America was given in 1630 by the king of England to the Rev. Stephen Batchelder, then 70 years old, who came to New England to found a plow works. His shield was green with a golden plow on it.

"Most of the Puritans, frowned upon creation of new coats of arms, but many continued to use their family escutcheons brought from England."

Mrs. Hathaway, an active member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, traces her ancestry back to the Mayflower.

"The desire for distinctive insignia for individual groups has given rise to state seals, flags, emblems for lodges, clubs, organizations, fraternities and units in the armed forces," she pointed out.

"The only colors used are black, red, blue, purple and green," she said. "Metals, of course, are gold and silver. Furs are sometimes used but only ermine and vair. Designs might be anything, geometric, animals, birds, flowers, fruits, ships. Heraldry developed its own terms until it became almost a language of its own."

[A photograph of Mrs. Hathaway accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, August 19, 1945, p. 6

ELDON W. HAUSER
Eldon W. Hauser Retires
After Serving 40 Years With Federal Agencies

Montrose -- After 40 years' service with the federal government, Eldon W. Hauser retired at the close of 1952.

During his long connection with the federal government, Mr. Hauser worked as forest ranger and postal employe. Because of his accumulated leave, he actually began his retirement more than a month before the official termination of employment. Plans for the future include trips to Texas and California during the rest of the winter and then return to his home at 526 South Second Street in the spring.

Born in Iowa, Mr. Hauser came to Delta with his parents in 1880, where his father served as manager of the Independent Lumber Company. He attended Delta schools and in 1908 married Miss Blanche Border of Delta at her parents' home.

During his tenure with the forest service, which began in 1911, Mr. Hauser served as forest guard at Crawford on the Gunnison National Forest, ranger at the Cement Creek station near Crested Butte and ranger in the Horsefly area on the Uncompahgre National Forest. He concluded his connections with the forest service Nov. 15, 1920, and immediately accepted a position with the post office in Montrose, where he has been until retirement.

Between 1927 and 1930, Mr. and Mrs. Hauser also owned and operated the Central Hotel.

He is a member of the Methodist Church, Modern Woodmen and the Elks lodge. Although no longer a member, he served a term as noble grand of the IOOF lodge.

Grand Junction Sentinel, January 1, 1953

HORACE W. HAVENS

Claim Jump Started Tabor Riches
Pioneer Reveals How Slickers Outsmarted Selves
By BARRON B. BESHOAR

The late Senator H. A. W. Tabor, Colorado's most famous mining king, might have spent his entire life tending store in Leadville had it not been for claim jumpers.

This was the story told here yesterday for the first time by Horace W. Havens, veteran Colorado miner and prospector, who is the oldest executive in the State Capitol in point of service.

Grew Up With State

A colorful, pioneer figure who spent his youth in the lusty mining camps of the '70s and '80s, Mr. Havens said he learned the story from George Hook, one of the two prospectors who found the Little Pittsburgh for Senator Tabor.

"Hook told me the story in Leadville during the early days," Mr. Havens said. "He and August Rische went into Senator Tabor's store in Leadville and asked for a grubstake.

"Mr. Tabor was a good judge of men. He looked them up and down and said, 'All right, boys, you pick it out.' They each selected grub and a jug of whisky.

Claim Jumpers Act

"Tabor told them to go up on Fryer Hill and get to work. They lugged their stuff up on the hill and sat down. Rische told Hook he thought they might as well camp on the spot -- that it was as good as any place -- so they drove their stakes.

"During the night claim jumpers moved in on them and moved the stakes on up the hill. When Hook and Rische awakened in the morning several men were working the claim.

"At first they thought they would battle it out, but Rische gave up the idea. 'What do we care, George? One spot is as good as another. Let's move on up.' he told his partner.

Then Find Millions

"The two men trudged on up the hill to where the claim jumpers had moved their stakes and started to work.

"They found the Little Pittsburgh and its silver millions.

"Their original land -- which the claim jumpers got -- was below the fault and not worth $5.

"Hook and Rische went to Tabor's store after the strike to sign up partnership papers. Each man signed his name.

"They were standing at a counter in the store and just after they had signed a Virginian came in. He was a colorful figure in yellow breeches, a fancy cloak and a jaunty hat. He was hunting gold.

"'Come over here stranger and I'll sell you an interest in a silver mine for $1,000.' Tabor called. The man talked the proposition over with them for a minute or two, snorted in disgust and walked out. He walked out on millions."

That was in 1877.

Bull Team Used

Mr. Havens arrived there a few months later with his father, Gilbert L. Havens, a mining man. The two Havens had come to Colorado two years earlier with a bull team and joined the rush to Breckenridge where they engaged in placer mining until they moved to Leadville.

"There were thousands of men in Breckenridge," Mr. Havens said. "And scores of fortunes were made."

The first rush of miners to the Leadville district brought educated, cultured men to the region, Mr. Havens said.

"It was not until much later that the roughnecks came in. The first miners were often from the best families in the East. They sought fortunes to hold up their social positions in their home communities, to repay gambling losses; for a thousand reasons. Many of them did not use their own names."

Traveled on Horseback

Mr. Havens made frequent trips between Leadville and Denver on horseback. The old Mosquito Pass road was heavily traveled by horsemen and stages. Most of the freighters went to Leadville by way of Colorado Springs, Ute Pass and Buena Vista because of the severe grades on other routes.

Nervier freighters took their teams and heavy wagons through Morrison and up the canon to Shaffer's Crossing, then up the Platte and over Kenosha Pass. The route was strewn with dead horses and mules.

Hunger and Cold

In 1878, Chestnut st. was the only street in Leadville, Mr. Havens said. Tabor had his store there, and the thoroughfare was lined with dancehalls and saloons.

In the winter of 1879, thousands of miners, prospectors and tenderfeet suffered. There were no bunkhouses or other accommodations, Mr. Havens said.

"Hundreds slept in the sawdust on the floors of dancehalls every night. Hunger and cold caused privation. I have seen as many as eight dead men on the streets in a single morning -- frozen stiff."

The following winter bunkhouses and hotels were erected. Lumber was hauled in and Leadville was on its way to becoming the mining metropolis of the West.

Mr. Havens still exudes pride when he recalls John G. Morgan's "Board of Trade," the fanciest drink place in Leadville.

Had 24 Bartenders

"I didn't go in many of the saloons, but it was a treat to go into the Board of Trade," he said. "It had a 24-foot rosewood bar and 24 bartenders. Each bartender wore a $1,000 diamond stickpin. And that is not all, the porters wore the same kind of stones."

Mr. Havens stayed in Leadville from 1878 to 1886. Then he went into the wilds of Idaho Territory prospecting for Chicago mining interests. His father also moved into the Territory and for many years operated the Mayflower and Idahoan mines.

Six later Mr. Havens came out again and went back to Leadville, where he remained until 1896. In that year, Charles H. S. Whipple of Leadville was elected secretary of state on a fusion ticket.

Moves to Denver

When Mr. Whipple came to Denver and the newly completed State Capitol, Mr. Havens came with him as his deputy, a post he held for four years. Then he went into Gov. James B. Orman's office as his secretary.

"The GOP got in then and we went out," Mr. Havens said. "I came back in here in 1909 as superintendent of the mineral department for the State Land Board."

For 37 years he has held the position. Members of the land board credit his extensive knowledge of mining and his keen ability as an administrator for the $270,000 he collected for the state last year.

His Extensive Collection

During the years he has served as head of the mineral department, Mr. Havens has gathered one of the most extensive collections of ore samples and geological maps in the West.

He knows all of the districts, their production, the date when the excitement began, and has a fair idea as to the district's future.

A lifelong Democrat, Mr. Havens is proud of having cast his first vote when he was only 18.

"I was born in New York and I was proud to cast a vote in Breckenridge for Samuel J. Tilden, the Sage of Gramercy Park," he said. Mr. Tilden was defeated for the presidency in 1876 by Rutherford B. Hayes.

Still Visits Leadville

Mr. Havens goes to Leadville two or three times a year to greet old friends and acquaintances. His office is filled with mementoes of an earlier day. Above his desk hangs a gold pan; ore samples serve as paperweights, and his filing cabinets are filled with historical matter.

On his desk are pictures of his political friends -- men who have passed through the State Capitol in the last 42 years.

He prizes large photographs of President Roosevelt, Dr. Benjamin L. Jefferson, James B. Orman, former Gov. W. H. Adams and Senator Edwin C. Johnson.

"Funny thing about that Roosevelt picture," he said. "You see them everywhere now. I got that one and put it up while he was still assistant secretary of the navy."

He's for New Deal

"I'm a New Deal Democrat. Maybe the party is different now than it was years ago, but times change and parties must change with them."

Metal mining in Colorado has a future, Mr. Havens believes.

"There are no real prospectors to go out and uncover new mines, but I don't believe our mineral wealth is exhausted. Millions remain in the mountains for those with the courage and will to seek them out."

Mr. Havens still can do 14 miles a day on horseback and admits he can twirl a gold pan as well as yesterday -- in Breckenridge.

[A photograph of Horace W. Havens accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, August 13, 1938, p. 12

HORACE NORMAN HAWKINS

Date: August 21, 1937

No. 2 B850 D5 E16 F4
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Horace Norman Hawkins, Attorney
Ernest & Cranmer Building, Denver, Colorado

Horace Norman Hawkins*, son of Dr. Ashton W. and Sarah Ann (May) Hawkins; born in Dickson County, Tennessee, February 19, 1867.

Dr. Ashton W. Hawkins, son of John M. and Mary G. (Ralston) Hawkins, was born in Bath County, Kentucky, in 1826. He later was a physician until his death, which occurred in Huntingdon, Tennessee, in 1888. He was active in the political life of Tennessee, serving as commissioner of agriculture, commissioner of internal revenue, clerk of the Circuit Court of Carroll County, and railroad commissioner. During the Mexican War, Dr. Hawkins participated in the storming of Vera Cruz, Mexico, and during the Civil War served as a captain in the Union Army. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His wife, Sarah Ann (May) Hawkins, whom he married in Dickson County, Tennessee, was born in that county in 1832. She died in Huntingdon, Tennessee, in 1894. Her father, Jesse May, a planter in Mississippi, was the son of John May, an extensive slave owner. He was known never to have sold a slave. Dr. Ashton W. and Sarah Ann (May) Hawkins were the parents of 6 children: (1) Wilhella, who married A. S. Brevard, of Huntingdon, Tennessee. (2) John M., of Los Angeles California. (3) William A., of El Paso, Texas. (4) Horace Norman. (5) Lena, who married the Rev. C. A. Waterfield. (6) Effie, who married J. D. Luten.

John M. Hawkins, father of Dr. Ashton W., and son of John M., Sr., was born in Pennsylvania. He and his father were gunmakers, manufacturing the "Hawkins" rifle. John M. Hawkins later moved to Bath County, Kentucky, where he engaged in farming, and served as deputy sheriff. His wife, Mary G. (Ralston) Hawkins, was born in Kentucky. They were the parents of 13 children (all sons), 11 of whom grew to maturity, and 10 of whom were as follows: (1) Alvin, who was governor of Tennessee, 1880-82. He was also judge of the Supreme Court of Tennessee, and consul to Havana, Cuba. (2) Albert, an attorney, who was judge of the Circuit Court, 15 years. During the Civil War, he was an adjutant, serving under the command of General Forrest, the famous Confederate leader. (3) Joseph, an attorney, who was judge of the Circuit Court. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army during the Civil War. (4) Camillus, an attorney of Tennessee. (5) Ashton W. (6) James, a farmer and minister of Kentucky. (7) Samuel, a minister of Texas. (8) William, a farmer of Texas. He served as captain of a regiment in the Confederate Army during the Civil War. (9) Frank, who was killed while serving in the Civil War. (10) Elvis, a physician of Tennessee.

John M. Hawkins, Sr., father of John M., was born in Maryland, and in pioneer days moved to Bath County, Kentucky, where he served as sheriff. Early members of the Hawkins family, which is of English descent, settled in America in Colonial days.

Horace Norman Hawkins, attended public schools in Tennessee, and graduated from the Vanderbilt University School of Law, LL. B., in June 1893. After reading law with his uncle, Joseph R. Hawkins, he was admitted to the bar, following which he engaged in legal practice in Huntingdon, Tennessee, 1888-92. He has practiced his profession in Denver, Colorado, since September 1893. He was associated with the Hon. T. M. Patterson, 1893-95, with the firm, Patterson, Richardson & Hawkins, 1895-1903, and with Richardson & Hawkins from 1903 until Mr. Richardson's death in 1911. He has practiced law in association with his son, Horace Norman, Jr., since 1925. Mr. Hawkins was a member of the Colorado Bar Examining Board, 1902-05, of the Civil Service Board, 1911-1913, of the Colorado State Council Defense and the Denver Liberty Loan League during the World War, and of the City Council, in Denver, 1918-19. He was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, in San Francisco, in 1920, and was a member of the committee on resolutions and platform. Mr. Hawkins is a member of the advisory board of the University of Colorado, and since 1927 has been a lecturer at the Westminster Law School. He is a member of the following: American Bar Association; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association (president, 1908); Denver Club; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobby is gardening, especially flowers, fruit, and vegetables. Mr. Hawkins has 52 varieties of grapes, and has demonstrated that okra, cotton, and peanuts can be profitably grown in Colorado.

On May 14, 1896, in Nashville, Tennessee, Horace Norman Hawkins married Frances Rubin, of Nashville. Mrs. Hawkins died February 27, 1913. Children: (1) Mary O'Neil, who was born June 13, 1897. She is a graduate of Bryn Mawr School for Girls, and Columbia University School of Medicine. Dr. Hawkins, who is a physician, resides in New York City. (2) Margaret Marsh, who also is a graduate of Bryn Mawr School for Girls. She is a scenario writer in Hollywood, California. (3) Frances Rubin, who is a graduate of the University of Denver. She is an artist's representative in New York City. (4) Horace Norman, Jr., who is a graduate of the University of Denver, and the Denver Law School. He is practicing law in association with his father. He married Katherine Vickery, of Denver, and they are the parents of 2 children: Horace Norman (III), and Larrie Katherine. (5) Agnes Luten, who married James G. Miner. They have no children, and reside with Horace Norman Hawkins.

* For further data regarding Horace Norman Hawkins, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-37), vol. 19, p. 1131; and "Portrait and Biographical Record of Denver and Vicinity, Colorado" (Chapman Publishing Co., 1898), p. 1295.

Biography File

WILLARD E. HAWKINS

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Willard E. Hawkins
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Willard E. Hawkins, born September 22, 1887, at Fairplay, Colorado

Name of father: Edward M. Hawkins, a native of Joliet, Illinois

Name of mother: Lilla Merrill Hawkins, a native of New Hampshire

Attended school or college: Denver public school, graduated East Denver High School.

Married: Yes, June 8, 1911, at Denver, Colorado

Name of wife: Queenabelle Smith, the daughter of George Albert Smith and Edith Pearce Smith

Names of children and years of birth: Stephana Eudora Hawkins, born January 14, 1913;
Valerie Villair Hawkins, born November 13, 1916

Avocation: Author

Travel: Various places in U. S. - New York, Virginia, California, Texas, etc.

Influences affecting writings: Reading and general experiences; contact with public and other writers

Hobbies: Nothing special - publishing and writing principal interests.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Willard E. Hawkins

Biography File

MRS. LYDIA HAWLEY
'What's Wonderful About Being 100?'
She's Pert, Spirited On 100th Birthday
By EVA HODGES
Denver Post Staff Writer

Denver's newest addition to its exclusive circle of persons 100 years of age is Mrs. Lydia Hawley, who crossed the century mark Friday.

Mrs. Hawley, who makes her home at 1708 Gaylord St., was as pert and spirited as when The Denver Post visited her on her two previous birthdays.

On both those occasions, she had mentioned that she was looking forward to her 100th year because "I got a fellow who said he'd give me $100 on my 100th birthday. Of course," she added last year, "I bet he ain't got 5 cents."

Man Was Busted

So, promptly The Post asked: "Did you receive your $100?"

"No," Aunt Lydia hooted. "The man was here this morning and he was busted."

The stream of birthday cards and wires to Mrs. Hawley was quickening Friday.

"Oh, I don't mind it," she commented. "Everyone thinks it's so wonderful that I'm 100. What's so wonderful about it?"

She was honored at an open house Friday given by Dr. Noel Breeden, owner of the rooming house in which she lives.

So Much Crime Now!

Aunt Lydia, whose memory stretches back to Wintersville, O. (named for her father), and the grown-up talk about Lincoln's assassination, thinks the world has changed for the worse in the meantime.

"Land of love, there's so much crime!" she exclaimed.

Then, Aunt Lydia takes a dim view of the scanty attire young women run around in these days.

"Mercy alive, when I was a girl I'd be washing dishes or something, and someone would knock at the door," she said. "When I'd go to answer it, my mother would say 'pull your sleeves down, pull your sleeves down!' And now look, you can go to the door with practically nothing on!"

Came Here in 1884

Aunt Lydia came to Denver in 1884. Her late husband, A. L. Hawley, was an employe of the J. K. Mullen Milling and Elevator plant here 43 years.

How did Aunt Lydia pass her 99th year?

"I ain't doing anything except sitting here," she said. "Course I do my own mending and take care of my room."

Present for her birthday celebration was a niece, Mrs. Georgia Peterson of Chicago. Another caller was Mrs. Howard Campbell of 3801 S. Santa Fe Dr., whose "son-in-law is a great nephew of Aunt Lydia's."

Aunt Lydia, the last surviving member of nine children, now has no closer relatives than her raft of nieces, nephews, and grand and great-grand varieties of these.

[A photograph accompanies the article with this caption: Alert and in good health on her 100th birthday, Mrs. Lydia Hawley (left) of 1708 Gaylord St. is shown with a niece, Mrs. Georgia Peterson of Chicago, who is "approaching 70." Mrs. Hawley enjoyed the congratulations of her friends and relatives, but she wondered: "What's so wonderful about living to be 100?" She was honored at an open house.]

Denver Post, February 26, 1954, p. 2

LUKE HAYDEN FAMILY

Picture of 5 Generations

Five generations of the Hayden family gather in Denver. Luke Hayden, 99, of 4851 Knox ct., retired Denver carpenter, met his latest grandchild, Tammy Kay, 4 months old. The ladder, top to bottom, has Hayden; his daughter, Mrs. Bernice Campbell, 66, of Bennett; her daughter, Mrs. Grace Orth, 44, of Byers; her daughter, Mrs. Dolan Limbeck, 20, of Kimball, Nebr., and her daughter, Tammy Kay. --Rocky Mountain News Photo

Rocky Mountain News, September 20, 1962, p. 14

LEONARD M. HAYNIE
District Attorney

Leonard M. Haynie, district attorney of the 12th Judicial district of the state of Colorado for the past 14 years, is one of the San Luis valley's most respected and prominent citizens. A former resident of Manassa, he is well-known in the six valley counties -- Alamosa, Rio Grande, Saguache, Conejos, Costilla and Mineral.

In addition to being an attorney and holding a public office, Mr. Haynie is prominent as a public speaker, a church and church school leader, and a student of Biblical history. He is sought often as a commencement speaker and has conducted a number of funeral services, as well as having addressed P. T. A., Elks memorial services, and other gatherings.

At the present he is vice-president of the Colorado State Bar Association and has served as president of the San Luis Valley Bar Association.

Born at Manassa

Mr. Haynie was born at Manassa, Conejos county, May 12, 1893, the son of the late Robert M. Haynie, pioneer blacksmith and merchant, and the former Lydie B. Stover. His father came to Manassa in 1879 from Georgia and his mother arrived in Manassa from the same state in 1880.

The future attorney attended grade school in Manassa and for three years attended the San Luis Stake academy, the Manassa high school.

In 1911, at the age of 18, he left for Great Britain where he served as a Latter Day Saints church missionary for two years. He visited northern England, Scotland, London, Liverpool and Manchester during his stay abroad, returning to the states at the age of 20, just prior to World War I.

From 1914 to 1916 he attended the pre-law school at Brigham Young university, Provo, Utah.

On Oct. 4, 1916 he married Hazel Gertrude Mortensen of Manassa. Three years later the Haynies moved to Denver where he entered Denver University law school.

Denver U. Graduate

Mr. Haynie worked in a hardware store as bookkeeper and clerk during his school years in Manassa. During his three years in law school he did part-time work in a Denver hardware store to help in supporting his wife and two children. He was graduated from Denver University in 1922, receiving his L. L. B. degree. Later the same year he was admitted to the Colorado bar.

From 1923 to 1932 Mr. Haynie was manager of the Haynie Hardware Co., a general merchandise store at Manassa. In addition, he served as Conejos county attorney from 1929 to 1932, inclusive.

Through his untiring efforts, advice and business direction, the county commissioners reduced Conejos county indebtedness from a total of $180,000 to $80,000 in four years. This was mostly accomplished by his auditing of receipts and disbursements continually at county commissioners' meetings.

From 1933 to date, Mr. Haynie has served as attorney of the 12th Judicial district, comprising the six valley counties mentioned above.

Church Leader

One of his outstanding accomplishments was his success in working out a compromise which saved warrant holders their investments in a suit brought by tax payers in 1940 to cancel $186,000 in warrants in Costilla county. As a result of the settlement the county has reduced its indebtedness more than $150,000 since 1941.

Reared in the Latter Day Saints church, the district attorney is a devout church leader and has conducted a Sunday school class for many years.

He has held various offices in the church, both in Manassa and Alamosa. During his years as a law student in Denver, he worked in the Denver branch presidency of the church.

Sunday school pupils of Mr. Haynie find him a thorough, interesting and intellectual teacher of the Bible and religious history.

He has in his possession valuable and interesting charts and graphs, several of them six to ten feet in length, on which he has spent hours of research and work. The graphs compare the secular and religious history of the world.

Collector of Poems

In addition to his hobby of preparing such charts and maps, Mr. Haynie has a scrapbook in which he collects poems and prose, both humorous and serious. A lover of poetry, he has memorized hundreds of stanzas which illustrates ideas and thoughts in his public talks.

Mr. Haynie is beloved for his friendly, smiling manner and his kindness to friends and acquaintances in time of trouble and sorrow.

He is a member of Rotary International, having joined the Alamosa club soon after his arrival here in 1933.

Mr. and Mrs. Haynie have reared four children -- two sons and two daughters -- three of whom served in World War II. They own their home at 300 Ross avenue where they reside with their youngest son, Delph, student at Adams State college and a former U. S. Navy trainee.

The older son, Elwood M. Haynie, following in his father's footsteps, is a student at Denver University law school. A former lieutenant in the ordnance department of the army, he served in the European theater of operations. He and his wife reside in a Denver apartment.

Daughter in N. Y.

Their elder daughter, La Rue, was married last June to Theodore Elliott and now resides in Sidney, N. Y., where her husband practices as an optometrist. Mrs. Elliott, a graduate nurse, served in the army nurse corps as a first lieutenant in Germany.

The Haynie's younger daughter, Louise, now is Mrs. Russell Johnson. She resides in Minneapolis where she is employed at the University of Minnesota where her husband, a former marine, is attending school.

[A photograph of Leonard M. Haynie accompanies this article.]

Alamosa Courier, November 27, 1946, p. 6

MRS. LILLIE E. HAYS
5-Generation Clan
[Photograph]

Mrs. Lillie E. Hays, right, of 3953 S. Grant st., Englewood, 83-year-old great-great-grandmother, is the proud head of a 5-generation clan. From right of Mrs. Hays are Mrs. Gladys Hays Kellogg, great-grandmother; Mrs. Helen Kellogg Nelms, grandmother; Mrs. Mary Lou Nelms Goodrich, mother, and her twin daughters, Lesha Raye and Lorie Lynn, 3 months. The families are all residents of the Denver area.

Rocky Mountain News, November 22, 1963, p. 48

HON. CHARLES DENISON HAYT

Jurist

It is given to few men to suddenly leave a prosperous mercantile business in the prime of life, take up the study of law, and by sheer ability and perseverance attain the office of Chief Justice of his State, commanding in this post the respect and admiration of his professional associates, and the fullest esteem of the community at large. This was the record of Judge Charles Denison Hayt, of Denver, Colorado, one of the most able jurists who ever sat on the bench -- a man who would have made his mark in whatever line of endeavor he entered.

The Hayt family came originally from England in early Colonial days. They did not come in the "Mayflower," but were passengers in one of the ships which left the Mother Country shortly after that historic vessel sailed for the New World. The original way of spelling the name was the same as that used by the descendants of today, but it was corrupted in some cases to "Hoyt," "Haight," and Hyatt." The Hayt family settled in New England, but later some of them drifted into Western New York, and they were there when the American Revolution broke out. Nine of the Hayt brothers fought in that struggle; three of these brothers married three daughters of Lieutenant Timothy Delavan. The Delavan family were French Huguenots, who had been driven out of France by Louis XIV. From France they went to England, and while in that country purchased a "Grandfather's Clock," which is today one of the prized heirlooms of the family. It has been in the possession of the Hayt family ever since the American Revolution and today rests in the hall of the apartment occupied by the widow of the late Chief Justice Hayt, of whom this is a record. After a short stay in England the Delavans returned to France, but they were soon driven out of their native country again. They journeyed to Holland where a colony was organized, the members of which went to England and about 1696 or 1698 sailed to America, where they founded the town of New Rochelle, just outside of New York City. It was from this family that General Timothy Delavan, the heroic and historical character of those days, descended. General Delavan is buried in the cemetery at Sleepy Hollow, Tarrytown, near Irvington-on-the-Hudson, New York, where Washington Irving, Gompers, and many other historic characters are interred.

Judge Hayt was born in Poughkeepsie, New York, May 20, 1850. He was the son of Henry Delavan and Jane (Berry) Hayt, the former a prosperous farmer and merchant, born on a farm near Patterson, New York, July 5, 1796. He died February 8, 1880. He was a personal friend of Robert Fulton and was one of the few to take the first ride on the latter's boat. The elder Hayt and his young wife settled in Fishkill, New York, where he became a prosperous merchant. He afterwards moved to Poughkeepsie, where he went into business with a Mr. Titus. In 1835 he purchased a farm five miles from Poughkeepsie and it was in the house on this estate that Judge Hayt was born, he being the last of eleven children. He was named after a close personal friend of Judge Hayt's father, Charles Denison. The son of this friend, Dr. Charles Denison, was a prominent physician of Denver.

Judge Hayt obtained his early education at a little private school near the farm, operated by a Miss Bryan. When he was eleven years of age his father sent him to boys' school at Albany. In 1865 he was sent to Williston, East Hampton, Massachusetts, a preparatory school, from which institution he graduated in 1869. He was in charge of his father's farm until 1871, in which year he took a trip to Frankstown, Colorado, where one of his brothers was in the cattle business and, also held the office of county treasurer. This was Judge Hayt's first venture in business for he purchased a small store and was doing very well when another of his brothers, who had a spoke factory at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, met with an accident, and asked Judge Hayt to handle the business for him. He sold out his prosperous little business and went to Uniontown, where he soon demonstrated his ability to handle workmen and in a short time became manager of the plant. The plant was closed down in 1874, and Judge Hayt returned to Colorado.

In Huerfano County he became associated with Judge John F. Read, and the two men opened an office which combined law and real estate, under the name of Read and Hayt. There he continued his law studies and in 1878 was admitted to the bar. He had already received a taste for the law and had gained considerable experience in that line, for in 1874 he had been appointed by the Governor a member of the Board of Commissioners of Huerfano County and in the fall of that year was elected probate judge. In 1876, under the new State Constitution he was made County Judge. In the latter year he opened offices at La Veta, then the terminus of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, and when, in 1877, the railroad was extended to Garland City, Castilla County, he removed to the latter place. He was later appointed postmaster at Alamosa, where he also continued his law practice. In 1880 he was elected District Attorney for the Sixth Judicial District; in 1882 was elected Judge for that district, and in 1888 was elected to the Supreme Court of the State, serving in that capacity until 1898, for the last six years of his term acting as Chief Justice. Upon the expiration of his term in 1898, Judge Hayt established himself in practice in Denver, which he continued until his death.

From 1900 to 1908 Judge Hayt lectured on taxation in the University of Colorado. He was an honorary member of the Philosophical Society of Denver and was offered the presidency of Boulder University, which he refused. One of the many honors conferred upon Judge Hayt was the sending of special messengers from the Far East, by order of the then Empress of China, to thank him for the assistance he had rendered the Chinese residents of Colorado. The favorite sports of Judge Hayt were golf, fishing and hunting, and he was an active member of the Denver Athletic Club and the Denver Club.

On October 3, 1878, Charles Denison Hayt married Julia Aline Palmer, daughter of Andrew Jackson Palmer, of Dalton, Georgia. Judge and Mrs. Hayt were the parents of three children, all of whom have passed away. They were: Henry Chester, Charles Denison, and Ella.

Judge Hayt died January 8, 1927, sincerely mourned by a host of true and loyal friends.

[A portrait and signature of Charles D. Hayt accompany the article.]

[Mrs. Hayt's D.A.R. #46132, #52431]

Encyclopedia of Biography, pp. 19-21

DR. LILLIAN HEATH
Wyoming's First Woman Doctor On Job in 1893
By RED FENWICK

Al Rung, "the Jasper from Casper," puts out a lively monthly news letter for the Burlington Railroad reporting a wide field of developments in the Equality State.

In his latest issue he reports that "the number of women doctors in Wyoming rose to seven with the arrival in Cheyenne of Dr. Elizabeth Ann Erhardt. A native of Albany, N. Y." the letter continued, "she plans to practice internal medicine. First woman doctors arrived in Wyoming in 1900."

Rung should know that the first woman doctor in Wyoming didn't arrive in the 1900s, but slightly earlier. As a matter of record, Dr. Lillian Heath, who will be 94 come Dec. 29, this year, was the first woman licensed to practice medicine in Wyoming.

She obtained her degree in medicine in 1893 from Hughes College of Physicians and Surgeons at Keokuk, Iowa, after studying seven years as a nurse at Rawlins under Dr. Thomas G. Maghee.

She entered practice immediately afterward, dug bullets out of bandits shot by sheriffs' officers, administered to the sick and brought into this world many of the grandfathers of today's generation.

In August, 1955, Dr. Heath was recognized by the Colorado State Medical Society and the Denver Medical Society for her services to Wyoming's mankind, was flown to Denver at their expense and was given a tour of this city's modern hospitals.

Not long after that she was honored by the Wyoming Medical Society as the state's first woman doctor--a pioneer of Wyoming and of medicine as well.

* * *

Another Wyoming item which took my eye came in a University of Wyoming press release. It announced that Dr. Charles W. Jeffrey of Rawlins, was sponsoring the preparing of a 12-foot bronze bust of Abraham Lincoln. The bust, by Robert I. Russin, University of Wyoming art professor of considerable distinction, will be placed on U. S. 30 not far from Laramie.

It is to be situated in a roadside park two acres in size, which will contain tables, benches, rest facilities and a parking area. It will be supervised by the state.

Dr. Jeffrey is to be commended for his public spirit. We need more men like him in the West.

* * *

And we need somebody with sufficient pocket cash to erect some monuments to the greats of our own area. I'd suggest that Rawlins could begin by perpetuating the memory of Dr. Lillian Heath.

Our oldtimers are rapidly disappearing. Each time I visit Dr. Heath -- and I do that each time I'm in Rawlins -- she says goodbye as though it would be our last get-together.

Wyoming is world famous for its contributions to the rights of women. It was first to grant the right to vote to its petticoat crowd, first to put women in public office but has been slow to do something to honor the memory of their people in stone and bronze.

While she is still living, I hope someone will come forward with a planned campaign to raise funds for a plaque, a bust or some other fitting memorial to Dr. Lillian Heath -- pioneer woman doctor.

And I'll give the first five bucks.

[A photograph of Dr. Heath accompanies this article.]

Denver Post, February 16, 1959, p. 16

AUGUST HECKENDORF

Denverite, 95, Worshiper at Same Church 60 Years
August Heckendorf Arrived Here When Population Was 5,000

August Heckendorf, 95, of 2046 Emerson st., has been a member of the same Denver church for 60 years -- and probably is the oldest church member in Denver.

When the present California Street Methodist Church was organized in 1872, Heckendorf was one of the 12 charter members.

Today he is the only charter member alive.

At first, meetings were held in a building on Market st., between 14th and 15th sts. But in 1873 construction was started on a church at 18th and Arapahoe sts.

The present edifice at 25th and California sts. was erected in 1888.

Heckendorf and other old members of the church were honored at services last Sunday by Rev. Frederic Tevis Krueger, pastor.

Doesn't Feel at Home

Charles Ecker of 3652 Alcott st. has been a member since 1873; Samuel Steiger of 1711 Washington st., since 1878, and Joseph Klaiber of 135 W. Ellsworth ave., since 1880.

When a man has lived in the same city for 62 years, you would think he'd feel at home.

But not Heckendorf.

"When I go downtown nowadays," he said, "I might as well be in New York or Chicago. Nothing seems familiar. I feel like a stranger."

When Heckendorf came to Denver in 1870, the population was less than 5,000 and the business district extended two blocks.

Heckendorf is remarkably active for a man of his years, and his memory is exceptionally clear. Instead of trying to fit in with the noisy life of today, he spends his time reading.

Rescued Doomed Chinese

To look at the quiet studious man of today, you would hardly realize he was the strapping youth who fought his way thru a mob trying to hang a Chinese here.

The noose already was around the neck of the Chinese, but Heckendorf cleared a way with his fists, freed the Chinese and held off the pack while he made his escape.

On every holiday after that the grateful Chinese called on him and presented him with candy and fruits.

Heckendorf was born in Berlin, Germany, in 1837, coming to this country as a youth of 17. It took six and one-half weeks for the sailing vessel to make its way across the Atlantic.

First he went to Wisconsin and then later to St. Joseph, Mo., from where he came to Denver to set up his shoe business.

Indians Flaunt Scalps

"I can remember one time after I first got here," Heckendorf said. "I was sitting around with some friends, talking about the future of Denver. One of the men made the startling assertion Denver would grow to have 20,000 inhabitants, and everybody laughed.

"One time, after the Utes and the Cheyennes fought a battle near Denver, the victorious Utes paraded thru the city with the scalps of their defeated foes on long poles.

"Every winter the Utes used to camp out by what is now Five Points."

Despite the excitement of the early days, Heckendorf thinks modern young people are more reckless.

"We didn't have to worry about kidnaping and holdups in my day," he asserted.

[A photograph of August Heckendorf accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 3, 1932, p. 2

FREDERICK W. HEDGCOCK
Aged Coloradan Recalls a Path 89 Years Long
From Bondage to Early Denver
By JACK GASKIE
Rocky Mountain News Writer

An Englishman who left a sleepy Kent town to come to bustling, frontier Denver in 1889, who was thrown out of business in one World War and almost starved in the second, yesterday took a long stretch and surveyed the 89 years which took him from indenture in London to retirement here.

Frederick W. Hedgcock, who has made his home at 2074 S. Clayton st. since his return from blitzed England in 1943, is content to have traded the excitement for a life devoted to religious studies, correspondence with friends and an occasional get-together with the neighborhood kids.

His eyes have almost completely failed him, but he is still as spry as he was 30 years ago. And that spryness he attributes in equal parts to a life replete with interesting work and the religious spirit from which he draws his strength.

Hedgcock left school in Rochester, Kent, in 1874, to start his dry goods apprenticeship -- little less than slavery then -- in London. The training stood him in good stead when, driven by an urge he still can't explain, he came in 1889 to Denver, then a city of 90,000, with board sidewalks, dirt roads and far-scattered irrigating ditches.

Sent Him Back to Europe

He started to work at once for Daniels & Fisher, soon graduating to a position as linen and lace buyer that sent him back to Europe several times in search of new materials.

In 1905 he and his brother-in-law, Herbert C. Jones, opened the specialty shop of Hedgcock and Jones at 16th and California sts. The lace and linen shop did well till the first World War, when tight supply combined with small demand forced them out of business.

Life was quiet for Hedgcock for 15 years thereafter. In 1933 his wife, whom he had wooed in Wales and brought to America to marry after he was established here, died. He returned to England to marry her widowed sister.

They made their home in Sussex overlooking the sea. After the evacuation at Dunkirk, when it seemed sure that England would be invaded, all aliens were ordered off the coasts. Hedgcock was an American citizen, thus an alien -- and despite his age and a noticeable British accent, he was subject to the order and the routine monthly inspection by police to see that he wasn't spying.

Bombs Fell Thick and Fast

The only place he could find to live was a suburb of London, where the bombs fell thick and fast. He survived them, though, and even thrived -- once managing to astound his neighbors by bearing home from a shopping trip five onions, a delicacy which most British by that time thought must be extinct.

Prior to his repatriation in 1943 he lived for several months in Wales, where food was so scarce that he lost 30 pounds and almost his health.

His three children in Denver were striving to get him back, and finally enlisted the aid of Mayor Ben Stapleton. Before the poor food had sapped all his strength, he landed on a Victory ship and made his way back at last to Denver.

Looking back now, he's glad he had his wartime ordeals. They were unpleasant at the time, but they gave him a store of memories that keep him busy giving his "little chats" to clubs and societies in and around Denver.

[A photograph of Frederick W. Hedgcock accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 28, 1949, p. 11

MRS. JOHANNA HEIDEMANN

Busy 100 Years

Mrs. Johanna Heidemann said Thursday, as she was feted on her 100th birthday, that "keeping busy" had been her key to a long life. Friends dropped by the home she shares with her daughter, Miss Martha Heidemann at 535 Milwaukee st., with birthday greetings and refreshments were served by the Dominicettes, teenage volunteer group of the Dominican Sisters of the Sick Poor. Mrs. Heidemann was born in Germany and came to Denver in 1905. Up until her 98th year, when she suffered a broken hip, Mrs. Heidemann always took care of the yard work.

[A photograph of Mrs. Johanna Heidemann accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, September 18, 1964, p. 8

BEN HEILMAN
A Ranger Rests Here
He sleeps on a beautiful hill 20 miles from any town

Ben Heilman was a ranger in Colorado forests for 26 years. Before he died at the age of 80 in 1950 at Crawford, Colo., Heilman asked his friends to bury him in a plot he had marked on Black Mesa, overlooking Curecanti creek near the Black Canyon of the Gunnison river. "It's the most beautiful place on earth, and that's where I want to sleep," he explained.

Rangers, cowboys, and many others who had known Heilman accompanied him on his last trip. They laid him to rest beneath the spruce and aspen on a hill in the Gunnison National forest more than 20 miles from the nearest settlement.

Each summer, cowboys who ride the forest trails pause to decorate Ranger Heilman's grave with wildflowers. George Tracy Jr., a cowboy whose forefathers grazed cattle on the Black Mesa range soon after the Ute Indians were driven from the area, lays a wildflower bouquet on Heilman's grave.

[A picture accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, Empire Section, May 8, 1955, p. 17

GLADYS ELEANOR MILHEIM HEIMER

Biographical Information

Name: Gladys Eleanor Milheim Heimer

Address: 2302 Belle Grove Drive, Bossier City, Louisiana (December 1959)

Born: October 19, 1920 at Brighton Colorado

Married to: Duane Roland Heimer, May 1, 1942, at Arvada, Colorado

Children: Allen Eugene Heimer, born February 2, 1944, at Pierre, South Dakota; Margaret Evelyn Heimer, born October 1, 1952, at St. Paul, Minnesota

Father's name: James Otto Milheim, born January 21, 1891, at Brighton, Colorado

Mother's name: Thelma Snodgrass, born June 22, 1896, at Berthoud, Colorado; died June 28, 1922, at Brighton, Colorado

Brothers and sisters: Richard Ernest, born September 14, 1915, at Brighton, Colorado; David Allen, born September 15, 1918, at Brighton, Colorado

Granddaughter of Alexander Milheim

WILLIAM HEINEMANN

William Heinemann Now Bailiff After 42 Years as Court Reporter

By AL NAKKULA

Rocky Mountain News Writer

After 42 years of court reporting, William B. Heinemann has laid aside his stenographer's notebook and pen.

His career extends back to when the late Judge Robert E. Lewis presided on the federal bench in Denver. This was before the long career of the late U. S. District Judge J. Foster Symes.

Since then, Mr. Heinemann has been reporter under Judge James C. Starkweather, Judge George F. Dunklee, Judge Joseph E. Cook and Judge Frank E. Hickey.

* * *

Mr. Heinemann, who was 70 April 3, won't go into hibernation because of his retirement, however. The color and excitement of courtroom life is too deeply instilled in his blood.

He has taken a position as bailiff for Judge Hickey and is, as he puts it, "watching the world go by."

Mr. Heinemann's early life and struggles to succeed read like copy from a novel of Horatio Alger. Born in Oakland, Maryland, Mr. Heinemann came to Denver with his family in 1889.

His first home was a tent in the Platte River bottoms, where the Heinemann family of eight lived. For lack of shoes, he went to school barefoot and wore his brothers' clothes. Reaching the fifty grade, he quit school to go to work.

* * *

His first job was as a cashboy for the old Golden Eagle Dry Goods Co., at 35 cents a day. He later sold papers and ran an elevator -- always continuing an active study and practice of shorthand.

His first shorthand job later brought him $7 a week.

For a time he was a stenographer for the Union Pacific Railroad, where he met and made a friend of the late W. M. Jeffers, who later became president of the road.

His first legal reporting work was in 1905 as a stenographer for the late Henry A. Lindsley, father of Judge "Hank" Lindsley. He acquired the knack of court reporting by sitting in on trials and practicing on his own. He later got actual experience by substituting for regular reporters -- for free.

* * *

Several years later, Mr. Heinemann obtained an office in the old Peoples National Bank Bldg., now the Interstate Trust Bldg., for $5 a month. He bought a $5 desk, $2 worth of paper and a notebook and started taking depositions for Sanford C. Hinsdale, then standing master in chancery and U. S. commissioner.

Business became so good he took in his two brothers, Ewald and Albert, as partners. Albert, or "Al," is now a reporter for County Judge David Brofman. Before Ewald died three years ago, the combined reporting experience of the three brothers was more than 100 years.

Mr. Heinemann has no idea how many millions of sheets of transcript he has reported. One reporting job, for example, took over 10 months, while another case covered over a quarter of a million sheets of paper.

[A photograph of William W. Heinemann accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, April 17, 1953, p. 42

MR. AND MRS. JOHN HELSTIEN

Mr. and Mrs. John Helstien, 3850 E. 17th Ave., will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary Sunday (today) with a dinner party for about 75 relatives and friends at the Park Lane Hotel.

They were married Nov. 1, 1903, in Duluth, Minn., and came to Denver in 1917. Mr. Helstien is a retired accountant, a member of B'nai B'rith and life Mason.

Mrs. Helstien is a member of the Golden Rule chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star and a member of Hadassah. She is one of 10 children, all of whom will attend the anniversary celebration.

Also in attendance Sunday will be the Helstien's three children, Mrs. David Stern of Fords, N. J., Melvin Helstien of Los Angeles, and Berbard Helstien of Denver, and five grandchildren.

Denver Post, November 1, 1953, p. 4AA

DARIE L. HENDERSON
Darie Henderson, Who Holds Service Record
With Bureau of Reclamation, Is Retiring

Darie L. Henderson, Grand Valley project, Bureau of Reclamation, has requested retirement. He lives at 230 Hill avenue.

As of today he holds the national record for longevity of service with the bureau. The Bureau of Reclamation was formed in April, 1902, and Mr. Henderson started to work Oct. 24, 1902, on the Grand Valley project.

One man with the bureau, Gilbert H. Hogue, in California, started in September, 1902, but retired Dec. 31.

* * *

Mr. Henderson is not only a veteran with the reclamation service, but he is a slope pioneer who has had a great deal to do with the development of the slope. He came to Grand Junction in 1895 in a covered wagon.

He was born in 1879 in Indiana, removed to Nebraska in 1890, and to Grand Junction in 1895.

In 1904 Mr. Henderson married Jessie A. Norine, who succumbed two years ago. The ceremony was performed at the Indian school, sometimes called the Teller institute, but more recently made the state home.

Four children are Richard, who lives on Wellington avenue here, Mrs. Josephine Reseigh, 230 Hill avenue, Roger, now vacationing in Grand Junction from his schooling at Fort Collins, and Ben, in San Francisco. Roger and Ben are World War II veterans.

* * *

During the period of Mr. Henderson's service the reclamation bureau has poured millions of dollars into the western slope, on projects with which he was associated.

He started on the Grand Valley project as a rodman. This work was completed in 1903 at which time he joined a survey party doing preliminary work on the Uncompahgre project.

During the winter of 1903 and 1904 he was assigned to survey work on the Pecos river near Roswell, N. M., but returned here in the spring to continue the Uncompahgre project, which work he continued until 1909 when the Grand Valley project was opened up again.

He has been with the Grand Valley project since 1909 except for a few months in 1910 on the Boise project, and two years, 1910 to 1912, on the Strawberry project in Utah.

He worked on preliminary and construction surveys for the Grand Valley project from 1912 to 1919 and has been on operation and maintenance since that time.

The Grand Valley project, on which Mr. Henderson spent much of his life, watered 19,300 productive acres in 1946. Irrigation was somewhat less than normal the past year as fewer farms were operated.

* * *

Mr. Henderson's plans after his resignation gets thru channels and back again are to "catch up on fishing, hunting and camping." Mr. Henderson loves the mountains and intends to spend summers on local hills.

He recalls that in 1908, when he started going to Grand Mesa, a mess of fish was assured. He has been getting his deer nearly every year since 1918, timing his vacations with the hunting season.

Mr. Henderson says that "practically all of his work has been with local people, and all of them are my friends."

[A photograph of Darie Henderson accompanies the article.]

Grand Junction Daily Sentinel, January 1, 1947

MRS. ELAINE HENDERSON
Colorado Pilgrim Descendant Wants to Welcome Mayflower II

A Salina, Colo., woman, descendant of the first English woman to step from the Mayflower onto Plymouth Rock, would like to meet the Mayflower II when it arrives from England.

A replica of the original 180-ton ship which brought the Pilgrims to America is scheduled to sail Tuesday for the United States.

Arrival date is not certain.

Mrs. Elaine Henderson, who lives in the hamlet of Salina, northwest of Boulder, doesn't know how to get an invitation to meet the Mayflower II at arrival ceremonies. But she would like to be there.

Mrs. Henderson has traced her ancestry back to Mary Chilton, by legend the first English woman to step ashore on the New World, and John Winslow, one of five brothers aboard the little vessel.

Mrs. Henderson has a pair of delicate bracelets she said came off the Mayflower with her ancestors.

She got them from her grandmother, Mrs. Gertrude Barclay Smith, 34 years ago.

The identical bracelets were made several centuries ago by a goldsmith, probably English.

They can be expanded on their spring-like bands to go over the wrist. Small gold knobs, attached with what apparently is a softer metal worked in filigree, are at each end of the open loop.

Examination under a magnifying glass shows that the metal has been worked into fleurs-de-lis, with elaborations in the form of coils of rope.

Mrs. Henderson never wears the bracelets for fear of losing them. Her problem now is to decide which of her three granddaughters to give them to.

"I guess I'll just give it to my daughter and let her have the headache," she said. Her daughter is Mrs. Marion Medley, Chicago.

Her interest in the delicate bands was revived last year when she heard of the pending voyage of Mayflower II.

The ship, built as an expression of Anglo-American friendship, will be turned over to a historical society and be moored permanently at Plymouth.

Sub lieutenant John Winslow, also descended from Mary Chilton and the original John Winslow, will represent both families at the reception for Mayflower II.

He is distantly related to Mrs. Henderson, "but I don't know how far," she said.

He is now training with the British fleet air arm at the NATO base in Florida.

[A photograph of Mrs. Henderson holding the bracelets that crossed the Atlantic on the Mayflower accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, March 31, 1957, p. 8AA

HAROLD B. HENDERSON

Date: December 11, 1937

No. 2 B947 D5 E16 F128
MAS/KAR

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Harold B. Henderson, Physician and Surgeon
1019 Republic Building, Denver, Colorado

Harold Burrows Henderson*, son of Samuel and Jennie (Wells) Henderson; born at Montgomery, Pennsylvania, November 8, 1888.

Samuel Henderson, son of Ambrose Barber and Cornelia (Burrows) Henderson, was born at Whitedeer, Pennsylvania. He was a furniture manufacturer, and operated a planing mill under the firm name, Henderson, Hull & Co. He later engaged in the retail furniture business at Montgomery, Pennsylvania. He died in 1930, and is buried at Montgomery, Pennsylvania. His wife, Jennie (Wells) Henderson, daughter of Edward Clark and Elizabeth (Bruner) Wells, was born at Muncy, Pennsylvania. She died in 1932, and is buried at Montgomery. Her cousin, Col. James Coryell, served in the Spanish-American War, and was a major general in the 28th Division, during the World War.

Edward Clark and Elizabeth (Bruner) Wells, parents of Jennie (Wells) Henderson, resided in Massachusetts, and later in Pennsylvania. Edward Clark Wells went to California in 1849, during the gold rush. Their son, Adjutant General Burrows Wells, served as an aide to General Ulysses S. Grant, during the Civil War.

Ambrose Henderson, father of Samuel, was the son of Samuel Henderson (I), who served in the Revolutionary War. Ambrose Henderson married Cornelia Burrows, granddaughter of Gen. John Burrows, who served as an aide-de-camp to General George Washington, and later was the first major general of the Pennsylvania Militia.

Harold Burrows Henderson, attended public schools at Montgomery, Pennsylvania; student, Bucknell Academy, and Bucknell University, in Lewisburg, Pennsylvania; Washington and Lee University, in Lexington, Virginia, 1 year; University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, 1 year; graduate, Northwestern University, B.A. and M.D. degrees, in 1922; interne, St. Luke's Hospital, in Chicago. He established a practice of medicine in Chicago, and in 1925, moved to Denver, where he has since continued in the medical profession, specializing in gynecology and obstetrics. Dr. Henderson is assistant professor of gynecology and obstetrics at the University of Colorado School of Medicine. In May 1917, he entered the service of the World War, and was assigned to the Medical Corps at Camp Custer, Michigan. He served overseas, attached to Base Hospital, No. 14, and later was a surgeon at the front. He was honorably discharged, in May 1919. Dr. Henderson, who is a Republican, is a member of the following: American Medical Association; Colorado State Medical Society; The Medical Society of the City and County of Denver; American College of Surgeons (elected a fellow in 1930); American Legion; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. His hobbies are fishing, and motoring in the mountains.

In 1917, Harold Burrows Henderson married Anne Huston, of Indianapolis, Indiana, daughter of the Rev. Frank C. and Bertha (Martin) Huston. The Rev. Frank C. Huston, who is minister of the Disciples of Christ Church, resides in Knightstown, Indiana. He is the author of numerous hymns, and popular songs. Dr. and Mrs. Henderson are the parents of 3 children: (1) Helen, born in 1918. (2) Jean, born in 1921. (3) John (called Jack) Burrows, born in 1930.

* For further data regarding the Henderson family, see files of Dr. Joseph Welles Henderson, 1210 Packard Building, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; and the files of Mrs. George L. Van Alen (aunt of Dr. Harold B. Henderson), who resides in Swarthmore, Pennsylvania.

EDWIN BEARD HENDRIE

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Edwin Beard Hendrie
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Edwin Beard Hendrie, born January 7, 1847, at Burlington, Iowa

Name of father: Charles Francis Hendrie, a native of Greenwich, Connecticut

Name of mother: Mary Ann Beard, a native of Danbury, Connecticut

Attended school or college: Polytechnic College of Philadelphia, afterwards absorbed by the University of Pennsylvania

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Graduated in 1867 as Mechanical Engineer

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: January 31, 1880, to reside permanently

Married: July 3, 1879, at San Francisco

Name of wife: Marion Carnes, daughter of Frederick Green Carnes and Hannah Elizabeth Frost

Names of children and years of birth: Gertrude Hallidie Hendrie (Grant); married Wm. West Grant Jr., in November 1906

Avocation: Mechanical engineer but in business always in manufacture and sale of mining and milling machinery. He is the President of the Hendrie & Bolthoff Manufacturing and Supply Co., and of several other companies.

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Never filled any political or governmental positions. At present, however, he is a member of the Colorado State Peace Commission.

Signature placed on photo:

E. B. Hendrie

Biography File

THOMAS F. HENRY
The 'Candy Kid' Returns to Denver
By ROBERT W. FENWICK
Denver Post Staff Writer

For a lad who used to hustle newspapers on Larimer St., and sleep nights in an exhaust ventilator shaft, The Candy Kid has come a long way.

Back in a rougher era the Kid, Thomas F. Henry, sold papers to such notable characters as Bat Masterson, Buffalo Bill Cody and H. A. W. Tabor. He also counted among his clientele some of the fanciest gamblers and most painted madams in Denver.

Now he owns and operates The Better Mouse-Trap Candy Co. at Little Rock, Ark., has a substantial Dun & Bradstreet rating and, at 78, drives his air-conditioned Cadillac 500 miles a day as though he were delivering the latest edition.

Wearing a characteristic, modified version of a Buster Brown necktie and a short-sleeve shirt, Tom Henry was back in Denver Tuesday on his annual vacation trip here. He had just driven from Arkansas to California and plans now to travel Kansas before returning home.

He had only one comment on Denver: "It's getting too big for me."

Got Double His Money

Tom's eyeglasses wriggled on his nose as he recalled with mirth how he used to profiteer at the expense of Buffalo Bill.

"He'd be talking to a bunch in a barroom in the old Tabor Opera House building when I'd walk in with a bundle of papers," Tom said. "He'd give me a dollar for the bunch I was carrying. Then he'd stack them on one end of the bar.

"I'd sneak around through the alley and in the back door, pick up the papers and sell 'em to him again.

"Bat Masterson was a little different. He wasn't easy to trick. I used to box for him when Bat ran a little gymnasium at 23rd and Arapahoe Sts. and promoted fights there."

Fussy About Change

Tabor, Tom said, was very careful with money. "I used to have to have exactly the right change," he continued. "Once I delivered a paper to him and didn't have the two cents change for his nickel.

"He looked at me, reached over and got back his nickel, then he handed the paper back to me. 'Next time,' he said, 'have the correct change'."

Tom is proud that he sold the first edition of The Denver Post as it came off the presses down at the old, original plant at 1744 Curtis St. That was in 1895.

He was born in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1880 and came to Denver with his parents when he was 7.

"When I was 12 years old I accidentally got into business -- making candy. I didn't have a license, so one day a cop came along and closed me up. I had bought some equipment -- not much -- from a candy manufacturer here and I had to pay off my debt so I went to work for them.

"That was the Enterprising Candy Co., predecessor to the Brecht Candy Co. When I left there I was superintendent of the plant."

Possibly it was while he was attending Regis College and selling papers and working nights making candy for one "Greek Joe," that he was impressed by Ralph Waldo Emerson's philosophy that the world would beat a path to the man who built a better mouse trap.

That's why he named his own candy manufactory The Better Mouse-Trap Candy Co.

It's been a long time since Tom Henry sold newspapers and slept in that ventilator shaft on stormy nights when he couldn't get home. And he recalled the time clearly as he visited his brother-in-law Gus Brodhag at 4873 Quitman St.

[A photograph of Thomas F. Henry accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, July 30, 1958, p. 46

TOM HENRY
Ex-Paper Boy Candy Tycoon
By MARK BEARWALD
Denver Post Staff Writer

The world is still beating a path to Tom Henry's door.

Henry, a pioneer Denverite is proof of Emerson's adage that if you build a better mousetrap the world will seek you out to buy it.

Now 80, Henry is president, owner and everything else of the Better Mouse-Trap Candy Co., Little Rock, Ark. He based the firm's name on Emerson's adage.

Sometimes it takes a traffic cop to handle the crowds that come to Henry's candy factory, he says.

Keep the quality high and the price reasonable and you'll always do business, is his motto. And he points to a number of old time competitors who have gone under because they tried to make candy quicker or cheaper.

On Vacation

Business is so good for Henry that he closes the factory for two months every year and "takes off." Henry, who still rolls up 500 miles a day on the road in his air-conditioned Cadillac, is in Denver on his way home from a California vacation.

He's no stranger to Denver, but he said, Denver has become strange to him.

"Every time I come here, the city's gotten bigger and now I need a guide to find my way around," he said.

Things were different back in 1887 when young Tom Henry, then 7, sold papers at and around 16th and Curtis Sts. He peddled the Denver Times, Denver Republican, Rocky Mountain News, Colorado Sun and the first edition of The Denver Post when it came off the presses at its original plant at 1744 Curtis St., in 1895.

Some of Henry's customers were H. A. W. Tabor, Buffalo Bill, John L. Sullivan and Bat Masterson.

Henry sold papers until 1906 and then went into the candy business. He traveled the U.S. extensively and became a troubleshooter for candy factories.

"Most places I'd go, I'd be just ahead of the sheriff," he said. "I went to Little Rock to help a company whose president had had a stroke. I stayed there 10 years and that company became the Better Mouse-Trap Co."

Henry, a native of Boston, Mass., came to Denver with his parents in 1887 after an uncle, Thomas Gettings, was killed in an explosion at his Maid of Erin gold and silver mine at Leadville, Colorado.

The family filed a lawsuit for damages and the suit dragged through the courts for 20 years. When it finally was settled, Henry's family "didn't get a dime."

[A photograph of Tom Henry accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, July 24, 1960, p. 11A

GUSTUS BRINTON HEPP, M. D.

Death Ends Fifty Years of Service for Dr. G. B. Hepp
Denver Physician and Surgeon Since 1909 Dies After Long Illness

Dr. Gustus Brinton Hepp, 76, of 1680 Steele street, Denver physician and surgeon in practice here since 1909, died Tuesday after a long illness. He was the father of Dr. L. Clark Hepp and brother of Dr. P. F. Hepp, both of Denver.

Dr. Hepp was born Jan. 22, 1866, at Armour, N. Y., and graduated from the Northwestern university medical school in 1891 and practiced medicine for more than fifty years, first in Buffalo, N. Y., and later in Denver. He was a Mason, a member of the El Jebel shrine, the state and county medical societies, American Medical association and was a staff member of several Denver hospitals. He was one of the founders of Liberty Masonic lodge.

Besides his son and brother here, Dr. Hepp is survived by a brother, Edward E. Hepp of Hamburg, N. Y., and a daughter, Mrs. Florence Summerill of Middletown, N. Y. Funeral services will be held in the Moore mortuary at 10:30 a. m. Friday and burial will be in Fairmount cemetery.

[A photograph of Dr. G. Brinton Hepp accompanies the article.]

Newspaper article, May 26, 1942

JOHN L. HERRON

John Herron's Seen a Lot of Silver Cities

By ROBERT L. PERKIN

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Aspen, Sept. 22 - John L. Herron's cobalt blue eyes have seen a lot of Aspens come and go -- silver cities as well as golden trees.

As a boy he knew Aspen as a city of 15,000 persons with electric street cars, booming mines and six newspapers, three of them morning dailies. No city in America, not even mighty New York, was so liberally supplied with breakfast news as the Aspen John Herron knew as a boy.

He watched the Smuggler and the Mollie Gibson gush forth their millions in silver. He knew the "world's biggest nugget," the 1840-pound chunk of silver, 93 percent pure, that came from the Smuggler's rich depths.

In those days, one Aspen mine was paying $150,000 a month in dividends -- and did so for seven years hand running.

Plush Hotel Being Built

The ore was running 1600 ounces to the ton, and many a 25-ton car worth $75,000 was shipped down the two railroads that then served Aspen. Mansions, an opera house, a plush hotel were being built. Hallam st. was millionaire's row.

The youthful Herron saw all that pass in the great Silver Panic of '93 and its aftermath.

He saw his town dwindle to about 5000 population in 1907, watched it spurt again during World War I when the Smuggler yielded more than a million dollars in lead. He saw the town "really start down" when the Smuggler quit in 1918. The Midnight was all that was left. It managed to build a gravity mill in 1929 and during World War II produced lead, zinc and silver.

Then even the Midnight shut down. John Herron watched most of the miners -- once a rowdy, noisy crew of 5000 or more -- dwindle away to a handful. Aspen itself dropped to a population of 750 souls.

Will Always Be Tomorrow

But John Herron stayed on in his well-kept white house on Hopkins ave., his hair greyed by the passing years but, like the hard-rock miners he sprang from and is, always hopeful. There would always be a tomorrow, and tomorrow the new strike would be made.

John Herron was still around, tending the mammoth sweetpeas that grow in his garden, when the new bonanza hit. He was there to see Walter Paepcke come to town.

And he was there to help Paepcke as a spearhead of local support in his plans for the new Aspen that has taken shape.

"The last 10 years have been wonderful," John Herron says. "Walter Paepcke is one of the most unusual men I ever met. He's a dynamo. Everything that has happened to Aspen in the last few years was caused by one man, and that man is Walter Paepcke.

"We love it all. Our families love it. My mother -- she's 86 now -- thinks Walter is a fine person, and we all do."

Trustee of Both Groups

Herron is a trustee both of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies and of the Music Associates, and he serves as vice chairman of the latter group. He has been in on the Paepcke

Renaissance from the beginning, and it wasn't always a comfortable position for a "local" to be in. (To the new Aspenites the long-timers are "locals.")

There were some who resented the Chicagoan with much money and many ideas who wanted to get things done now. Whose town was this, anyway? Behind his back, some called Paepcke "the baron," and most of the town turned down his offer of free paint if home-owners would use it to spruce up their Victorian houses.

"All those early tensions have eased off tremendously," Herron said. "The business people of Aspen realize all this is their bread and butter.

"Why, I can remember back before the second war when you could count the going businesses in this town on the fingers of one hand. Now we have 135 business members of the Chamber of Commerce, and they all support the new Aspen program.

"Last year, for instance, we raised $29,000 in a single night to get the Music Associates going. That's what we think today of what's going on."

Founded Aspen Chamber

Herron himself founded the Aspen Chamber of Commerce in 1949, and it was he more than any other "local" in town who captured the Paepcke vision and pitched in to help.

Herron is a bouncy, vital, pint-sized man with silver-grey hair and a neatly clipped salt-and-pepper mustache. At 61, he still exudes the aggressive energy he must have had in abundance when he was the little scooter quarterback of the Colorado College team "that beat Boulder."

Sitting in the garden of his neat white clapboard home, his leg thrown casually over the arm of a lawn chair, Herron could speak authoritatively of Aspen's old days and with enthusiasm for the new.

He was born in Montana, but his parents brought him to Aspen in 1896. His father, Patrick, was foreman of the Molly Gibson. His mother, Cassie, is still living in Aspen.

Herron grew up with silver mining, and he's still in it -- hoping, always, for that elusive gain of a few pennies in the price of metals that will mean the mines can reopen again. The Herron Bros. now own a third interest in the Molly Gibson, lease the equally famous Smuggler and own 50 acres or more of other mining property.

Lease Mountain for Skiing

It's the Herron Bros. and the Brown mining interests who lease Aspen Mountain for $100 a year to the Aspen Ski Corp. for the huge pattern of runs and courses which have won for Aspen the experts' rating of finest ski country in the world.

Mrs. Herron, Frances, also is from an early Aspen mining family. She's a Willoughby. Her father, Fred, ran the Midnight during all the years when its payroll was "all Aspen had." Her brothers, Frank and Fred, were among the early organizers of the white bonanza of Aspen skiing.

Skiing is about the only activity of the new Aspen in which John Herron doesn't personally take an active part, though Frances Herron does.

"I've thought I might get up there and break a leg yet," he mused. "Sure looks interesting, and people seem to love it. I've seen the line at the ski tow stretch out three blocks long."

Herron went off to college at CC in 1910, taking a liberal arts course with a major in philosophy. In addition to quarterbacking the team that beat Boulder, he pole vaulted 11½ feet -- "Enough to win in those days" -- and played baseball and basketball.

He remembers acutely one game he pitched for the Aspen team against Glenwood Springs.

"I struck out 17 men in that game, and would you believe it, we lost, 4 to 3."

After World War I service, Herron came back to Aspen, and he has been there ever since watching the hardrock miner become a "disappearing breed" and waiting for silver to go up a few cents to beat the high costs of metal mining.

None of the Aspen mining properties is operating now, but the interest of the Atomic Energy Commission in uranium found in the Smuggler keeps hope glowing in Herron's miner's heart.

"There's uranium there as high as 3 percent," he enthused. "But it occurs with lime, and that's bad. The AEC is trying to work out a process to get rid of the lime."

Though he dreams the dreams of all mining men, Herron chases no will-o'-the-wisps. Right now the market is high on culture, and John Herron is among the most bullish enthusiasts of the new Aspen idea.

Puts $4 Million in Idea

He estimates Walter Paepcke has put $4 million into the idea and has taken losses of about $750,000, but "Aspen is accumulating a good background of permanence."

"Paepcke is generous, hardworking and dedicated to the idea," he said. "He loves it, and all his energy is going into it."

"What's needed now is integration, and that's coming. The music festival is getting on a sound basis. Paepcke gave $1000 personally to the Music Associates, and last year he spent $14,000 rehabilitating the dormitories for the music students."

Herron himself has no musical background, although he does have a large record collection. His taste runs to Mozart, Beethoven and Bach rather than to Bartok.

Try to Attend Concerts

He and Mrs. Herron try to attend every one of the Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday concerts in the big tent during the summer.

They get a very special thrill, known only to old-timers, when they attend lectures and small recitals in the old Wheeler Opera House. John Herron was graduated from Aspen High School on the opera house stage, and as a youth he worked there as a stagehand.

As for the music, well, the taste comes naturally.

"I guess I'm active in the program just because I like it," he explained. "I've always wished I were a tenor with the Met. Matter of fact, I'm awfully good after three or four shots of scotch."

[A photograph of John L. Herron and his prized sweetpeas accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, September 23, 1955, p. 46

EMANUEL HERSKOVITZ
94 Years Recalled With Hearty Laugh
By WILLIAM LOGAN
Rocky Mountain News Writer

Emanuel Herskovitz of 1521 Grape st., who turned 94 on Thanksgiving Day, never let the lack of money worry him.

He has the habit of making himself the butt of a joke. Over his lifetime he can look back with a twinkle in his eye and a hearty laugh at what another man might call misfortune.

Like the time he arrived in Denver in 1890, fresh from Hungary, unable to understand English. He looked for a job without success.

"I was a real greenhorn," he says. "Another fellow and I heard we could make $5 a day helping them lay track on the cog railway up Pikes Peak. You only had to work 12 hours.

"We worked down there about a week when my friend said, 'Let's go on down the mountain.'

'Owed Company'

"We'd figured out at the end of the week instead of making money we owed the company money for room and board."

Then a friend, Sam Schwartz, set Herskovitz up in the express business by providing a horse and wagon. Herskovitz, his horse and wagon, proudly took a position on 15th st. between Larimer and Market sts.

"I couldn't speak English. Schwartz just told me if anyone wanted to know the price, tell them 75 cents. There were 300 express wagons in Denver in those days.

"Pretty soon I heard someone yelling, 'Express! Express!'

"I got a load for Overland Park (about five miles from downtown Denver, a long trip for those days) and told the man it would cost 75 cents.

"By the time I got down there and unloaded, my horse was in a real lather. Coming back, I loaded up a lot of water pipe and unloaded it, too, for 75 cents, and then a woman at E. 12th ave. and Sherman st. had some luggage to be taken.

"Everyone was asking why I took such a long trip to Overland Park for only 75 cents, and I told them that's what Schwartz told me to say."

Sent for Family

Herskovitz had been a baker in Hungary and finally got a job in Denver as a baker -- room and board and $6 a week. When his pay was raised to $9, he sent for his family in Hungary. He eventually brought over his father, mother, a brother and two sisters.

Herskovitz came to the U. S. landing in New York in 1888. His ship passage for the 2½ week voyage cost $22.50. It took him another $36 to get to Denver from there.

In 1892, Herskovitz married Miss Fraschman, who was the governess for the two children of H. A. W. Tabor and Baby Doe. He still has a portrait Tabor ordered taken, showing Herskovitz and his bride. She died in July 1961.

They had six children. One died in an accident during World War I, but the rest are living. There also are 15 grandchildren, 36 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

From 1896 until they were washed out by a Cherry Creek flood in 1913, Herskovitz and a partner operated the Eastern Bakery at 1146 Walnut st.

Then he traded his bakery interest for a farm near Weldona.

"The first year we had a pretty good wheat crop," he recalls. "Of course some cattle broke into it."

'Bring Some Sacks'

"The second year, a fellow I had running the farm called up and said bring some sacks, the beans were ready to harvest and the wheat was doing good.

"When I got up there, he pointed to a big cloud in the sky and said, 'See that? It's going to ruin us.'

"You never saw such a hail storm. It ruined all the wheat.

"Not long after that, there was a big wind storm and it took all my beans over to the next farm, roots and all. We lost everything, so I traded the farm for four lots in Denver, where St. Anthony's Hospital is now, which I later sold for $90."

In 1921, Herskovitz opened a soft drink parlor at 1860 Curtis st. Then, in 1932 with the end of prohibition, he converted it to a bar called Uncle Sam's Grill. He ran the bar until 1955, when he retired.

Herskovitz, strong and healthy for his age, used to smoke seven to eight cigars a day before quitting about seven years ago. He said he owes his good health to "three bottles of beer a day -- sometimes four."

He still eats like a horse, his relatives say. He formerly got a lot of exercise by walking to work and swimming on weekends.

There were 36 sons and daughters and other relatives around the table Thursday when Herskovitz sat down to Thanksgiving dinner.

[A photograph accompanies the article. It is of Emanuel Herskovitz holding a picture paid for in 1892 by H. A. W. Tabor. The picture is of Herskovitz and his new bride, who had been the governess for the two children of Tabor and Baby Doe.]

Rocky Mountain News, November 29, 1964, p. 25

EDWIN HARRISON HESS

Denverite, 100, Prefers Sociable 'Medicine'

By CHARLES WIGLE

Denver Post Staff Writer

Edwin Harrison Hess, who lives at the rear of 2925 S. Downing St., stroked his cat and smoked his pipe Friday as he reviewed 100 years of gambling, mining, violence and horse racing he has seen during travels that took him almost around the world.

Born in Hagerstown, Md., May 17, 1855, Hess has no theories about reaching the century mark. "I just didn't die," he said.

Though the lifelong bachelor has "no recipe" for becoming a centenarian, an English doctor he once knew prescribed a "practical" cure when not feeling well.

Take a drink. If not feeling better, take two drinks. If that doesn't help, get drunk.

"And I still follow it if I get a little cold or something," Hess confided with a twinkle in his eye.

An admitted "jack-of-all-trades," the slight, agile Hess said temperance is "all right" as a formula for an increased life span. But he likes "sociable" people and likes being "sociable" better. Consequently he's been drinking beer and wine "since I can remember," and has smoked his pipe daily since he was "about 6 or 7."

His only companion is his 18-year-old cat, Calico.

Hess came to Denver in 1887 when Denver was Larimer St.

His second day in town was highlighted by a hanging on Larimer St. near Cherry Creek. The victim had stolen 10 horses from a Golden rancher. His trial was held in the street from the back of a wagon. Found guilty, he was hanged from a cottonwood tree. "Those were fierce doings," Hess said.

Gambling was the chief recreation then, and everyone wore a pistol or carried a Winchester. Sometimes they did both.

"But there was no grabbing women's purses or robberies. Not even the gambling houses were held up. People weren't tough then like they are now."

After working as an iron worker, he made a $30,000 stake in a gold mine near Devil's Head mountain southwest of Denver only to lose it in the 1893 panic. Hess went to England shortly before the turn of the century.

He took eight ponies over for harness racing.

"I only stayed three days, and would like to have stayed longer. But I had a lot of fun drinking beer and half-and-half," he chuckled.

He returned to Denver only to leave for the Philippines "with a guy named Sullivan," 100 gamecocks, and three "cheap runners."

When they returned several months later Sullivan was richer by $50,000 won betting on his menagerie, which he finally sold before coming back.

Since the run on the banks in '93, Hess said he's been broke, and now lives on an old age pension. His daily activities of doing a "little something all the time to keep healthy," consist of working in his garden, which he planted himself, and listening to a radio ("I ain't much stuck on television") given him by a friend.

[A photograph of Edwin Harrison Hess and his cat, Calico, accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, May 20, 1955, p. 19

GEORGE HETHERINGTON

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B878 D5 E16 F35
LCD/CFD

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. George Hetherington,
Inheritance Tax Commissioner, Denver, Colorado

George Hetherington, born in Hamilton County, Indiana, September 12, 1876; son of Hugh and Josephene (Berryman) Hetherington.

Hugh Hetherington, born in Giles County, Virginia. His father, Christopher, a native of County Fermanagh, Northern Ireland, emigrated to America when a young man, and settled in Virginia, where he engaged in farming. Hugh Hetherington, who was a merchant, moved by wagon to Indiana, settling first in Franklin, Johnson County, and later in Hamilton County, where he remained until his death, which occurred in 1912. His wife, Josephene (Berryman) Hetherington, who was born in Highland County, Ohio, died in 1920. She was the daughter of Thomas and Rebecca (McPherson) Berryman, the latter of whom was a descendant of William Fithian, who was residing in East Hampton, Long Island, New York, in 1639. Nathaniel McPherson, father of Rebecca (McPherson) Berryman, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

George Hetherington graduated from the University of Colorado School of Law in 1899. He moved to Colorado in 1894, and, after graduating from law school, engaged in legal practice at Gunnison, Colorado, until 1923, at which time he was appointed assistant attorney general and inheritance tax commissioner, in which capacities he served 1 year. He then was assistant city attorney of Denver, 1927-31, following which he practiced law independently, 1931-33. He was appointed to his present positions of assistant attorney general and inheritance tax commissioner in 1933. The Hon. Mr. Hetherington, who is a Democrat, is a member of the Denver Chapter of the Citizens Historical Association, and of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His hobby is work.

On August 18, 1902, George Hetherington married Annie Jones, who was born in Le Mars, Iowa, daughter of William H. Jones. Mrs. Hetherington died November 5, 1927. Mr. and Mrs. Hetherington were the parents of 5 children: (1) Hugh William. (2) George. (3) Rowena, who resides in New York City, with her husband, Frank Welles. (4) Robert Allen. (5) Esther, who died when 10 years of age.

On May 26, 1933, George Hetherington married, second, Mrs. Ethel (Clark) Anderson, who was born at Marion, Kansas.

DR. HOWARD H. HEUSTON

Colorado Country Doctor

By FRANCES MELROSE

Rocky Mountain News Writer

In the days when doctors had to rely on morphine and chloroform instead of sulpha, penicillin and insulin to work their wonders, Dr. Howard H. Heuston was a country practitioner in Boulder County.

That was more than 25 years ago, when remote corners of the county were humming with mining activity. On his calls to stricken families in isolated spots, the doctor came to know the griefs and secrets of people in his county as well as he knows his own family.

Dr. Heuston was still in his first year of practice, one cold Sunday evening in February, 1921, when his telephone rang. He was helping his older partner, Dr. Carbon Gillespie, with an emergency appendectomy when the call came.

"I'm the caretaker at Silver Lake Lodge," came a hoarse voice. "Got a girl up here that broke her leg skiing today. Since you're the new doc, I thought mebbe you'd come up and take care of her."

"I'll be up and take her out," answered the doctor, despite the fact that he would have to travel on foot through more than five miles of deep snow to reach the injured girl.

* * *

At 5 a.m. the next day, the doctor and two others with Ernest M. Greenman for a guide, drove from Boulder to a spot above Nederland in an old touring car.

Donning their skis, the party struck off up North Boulder Creek for several miles until they reached the cabin. It was the first time -- and the last -- the doctor ever was on skis, and he made the trip without ski poles and with only a strap to hold the skis to his shoes.

It was 1 p.m. when the group reached the cabin. They had brought along a canvas stretcher, four hot water bottles and a vial of morphine, and Dr. Heuston got busy.

The injured girl was an army nurse from World War I who had come to the lodge with two other girls for a winter outing. The doctor splinted her leg with a suitable piece of firewood, the only thing available, placed the hot water bottles about her, wrapped her in quilts and bound her tightly to the stretcher.

Morphine was administered to deaden the girl's pain, and they were ready for the return trip.

* * *

A fifth man joined the party of rescuers, and they took turns skiing and carrying the stretcher. Over steep slopes, the stretcher was lowered on ropes.

Just at dusk, they reached their car. The car meanwhile, had become stuck in the snow, and had to be shoveled out before they could complete the journey to Boulder. The patient was established in a bed at the university hospital at 9:30 p.m.

Dr. Heuston operated on the girl's leg a week later, plated it, and sent her away well. Recently she brought one of her nearly-grown children to him for an operation.

* * *

This six-foot-two-inch, 60-year-old doctor was born in Nebraska, of pioneer parents. As a young man he studied to be a teacher, and taught in Illinois and Oregon. Then his first wife died and he was 29, and he felt he had to find a new life for himself. Medicine seemed to be the answer.

The doctor studied at the University of Colorado and was graduated from Washington University, returning in 1920 to practice in Boulder.

* * *

Through the years Dr. Heuston has cultivated a manner which at first seems gruff but soon becomes gentle and sympathetic. He wouldn't want many of his experiences in print, to spare the feelings of the persons concerned.

He has learned that a doctor's hardest work is consoling the living after a loved one has died, and he has found that sometimes just faith in the doctor can effect a cure.

One of his greatest personal satisfactions is battling the elements to reach a patient, and he recalls with pleasure the time he and Dr. Gillaspie raced up Boulder Canon to a patient when the weather was 10 below zero and they were in an open touring car.

* * *

Dr. Heuston learned also to be hard and firm when a life was at stake. This has been most necessary when clashes between mothers and fathers occurred over the care of children.

During the time when diphtheria was a community terror choking off young lives, a father flatly refused to let Dr. Heuston use anti-toxin on his young daughter, a victim of the disease.

When all arguments with the father had failed, Dr. Heuston played his trump card.

"All right," he said. "Have your own way, but don't expect me to continue treating your daughter unless I can do what I know is right."

The father consented to the use of anti-toxin and the child recovered.

* * *

Another little girl had a congenital dislocation of the hip, a defect which unless corrected, would render her a cripple for life. The child's father was determined nothing should be done, so Dr. Heuston took the mother in hand.

"Get a little backbone," he told the woman. "Your child's happiness depends on it. You can't let your husband have his way this time."

Dr. Heuston and the woman won out, and the child was taken to an orthopedic surgeon in Denver who made her a well girl.

Dr. Heuston is often called upon to settle touchy human problems.

One girl, a Boulder office worker, came to him in tears one day because she had discovered she was pregnant. She was unmarried and everything depended upon her supporting a widowed, invalid mother. If her plight became known, she would lose her job, yet she couldn't quit work to conceal her secret. Her employer was a woman without an ounce of sympathy in her makeup.

* * *

Matters finally came to a head when the employer discovered the girl's trouble. She was on the verge of discharging her and submitting her to open ridicule when Dr. Heuston took matters into his hands.

The doctor talked patiently to the woman and concluded his argument with: "According to this girl's story, she is as innocent as you are. Except for the grace of God, the same thing might have happened to you."

Dr. Heuston's speech had the desired effect. The woman continued to employ the girl until her confinement and afterwards until she obtained a better job. Two weeks after birth, the baby died.

As Doctor Heuston motors through the pine and aspen-covered slopes of Boulder County hills, he can point out scores of deserted cabins where he once helped a new citizen make his debut in the world.

Up beyond Tungsten, now a crumbling deserted mining town, he remembers the time he arrived too late. A blinding fog on a fall night had kept him from driving more than five miles an hour on the narrow mountain road, and when he reached the patient in a miner's cabin, the stork had been there ahead of him.

* * *

Near Nederland, he gestures toward a lonely little cabin perched on the edge of a cliff. A 16-year-old girl rushed out of this cabin one night and fired a .32 Winchester bullet into her chest. The bullet passed straight through her body, missing her heart by an inch.

Telephoned by the girl's frantic parents, Dr. Heuston sped to the rescue and took the girl to Community Hospital in Boulder. She recovered, but she never told the doctor why she had shot herself.

[A photograph of Dr. Howard H. Heuston accompanies this article.]

Rocky Mountain News, October 6, 1946, p. 2

EDWIN HEWITT
Well Known Real Estate Man, 91 Years Old

Tuesday made no difference in the business routine of Edwin Hewitt, despite the fact it was his ninety-first birthday.

In accordance with the habits of each weekday for decades, Hewitt, well-known Denver pioneer, appeared for work at 9 a. m. as usual at the Mercantile building at 1031 Fifteenth street, which he built and owns.

He was born at Zanesville, Ohio, and lived at Des Moines, Iowa, before coming to Denver in 1880. For many years he operated a candy business thruout the west, and later went into the real estate business.

A surprise reception in his honor at his home at 1415 Washington street Tuesday evening was attended by 100 guests. A sister, Mrs. William Guthrie of Bridgeport, Neb., and a daughter, Mrs. Helen Hewitt Cochran of La Jolla, Calif., came to Denver for the event. A granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Jane Cochran Hoefnagels lives here.

[A photograph of Edwin Hewitt accompanies the article.]

Newspaper article, February 25, 1941

EDWIN HEWITT

Real Estate Man Goes to Office on His 92d Birthday Edwin Hewitt Hasn't Missed A Day at Work in 'Many Years.'

When you get to be 92 years old, birthdays get to be rather monotonous things to celebrate.

At least that is the way it seems to Edwin Hewitt of 1415 Washington street, Denver real estate man. Like he has done since attaining manhood, he was up early Wednesday and was at his office in the Mercantile building at 1031 Fifteenth street, which he built and owns, at the usual hour of 9 a. m.

The fact that Wednesday was his ninety-second birthday was of slight concern to him. There were lots of other things more important.

He was born in Mount Vernon, Ohio, and lived several years in Des Moines, Ia., before coming to Denver in 1881. He established the old Hewitt Candy company, but later abandoned it in favor of the real estate business.

Friends said he has not missed a day at his office in "many years."

He has been active in many civic activities during his life. As one of the original founders of the Community Chest here, he was presented with a medal two years ago.

Hewitt will be the guest of honor at a reception to be given in his home Wednesday night. Among those who will be there are his sister, Mrs. William E. Guthrie of Bridgeport, Neb.; a granddaughter, Miss Mary Jane Cochran, and possibly his daughter, Mrs. Helen Hewitt Cochran, who has been vacationing in the south. He also has a grandson, Hewitt Cochran, who is now in Miami, Fla.

[A photograph of Edwin Hewitt accompanies this article.]

Denver Post, February 25, 1942

ALLAN RAMSEY HICKERSON

Early Sunday morning Allan Ramsey Hickerson died in Mercy Hospital. Al was born in Manchester, Tennessee, fifty-one years ago on Tuesday next, the youngest of a family of nine children. His mother died in his infancy. He attended Vanderbilt University, served in the Army during the first World War, and then engaged in banking for a time in his home town. He first came to Denver in 1919 to visit his sister, Mrs. T. Leon Howard and a few years later returned to make this his permanent home. Here he was associated with the Cadillac Agency for two years, then in 1925 he went with Lester Thomas, first as sales manager, and soon afterwards as partner, under the name of Thomas-Hickerson Motor Company. There he has since been actively engaged in the sales and service of automobiles.

He joined The Rotary Club of Denver in February 1934. He has served us as Director, and was first Vice-President last year. Prior to a heart attack a year ago, he had a long record of perfect attendance, and since then, although his health has limited his activities, he has continued his Rotary interest and attendance, and was here at our last meeting only one week ago.

Al had been a Director of the Denver Convention and Visitors Bureau, and active in other civic, charitable and fraternal groups, but his principal interests have been two: first his home, where he was devoted to his family, his garden, his trees and his livestock; and second, the Denver Automobile Dealers Association where he worked faithfully and unselfishly for the interest of the group and their better service to the community. He was past president of the Denver association and active in the State and National associations. Above all, he was a lover of his fellow men regardless of race or class, and the multitude who came from every walk of life to pay their respect at his funeral made a touching demonstration of the high and affectionate regard in which he was held by the people of Denver; and of the fact that even in a great city unselfish service is appreciated and that love begets love.

In 1926 he married Lorena Leech, also a native of Tennessee, who survives him, with their three children, Allan R., Jr., 17; Sarah Ann, 15; and Nancy, 12; and one brother and five sisters.

Al is a kindly, generous and genial southern gentleman, a diligent worker, a fair competitor, a gracious companion and a loyal friend.

Mr. President, I move that this club extend our sympathy to his family and to Rotarian Dr. T. Leon Howard; that this memorial be spread on the minutes of the club and that a copy be sent to the family, and that we now stand in expression of our sense of personal sorrow at the passing of a fine Rotarian and a great soul.

The above resolution, prepared by Mort Stone, Vice-Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, was unanimously adopted Thursday, May 27, 1948, with all members standing.

[A photograph of Allan Hickerson accompanies this article.]

Mile High Keyway, (Rotary Club of Denver), June 3, 1948

CLINTON G. HICKEY

Date: November 13, 1937

No. 2 B923 D5 E16 F119
MAS/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

Clinton G. Hickey, Physician
558 Metropolitan Building, Denver, Colorado

Clinton G. Hickey*, born at Nicholville, St. Lawrence County, New York, October 16, 1858; son of George and Esther (Lowry) Hickey.

George Hickey, born at Renfrew, Ontario, Canada, January 9, 1833; son of William Hickey, who was born in Ireland, and crossed the Atlantic Ocean to Canada, in the early part of the nineteenth century. He resided in Ontario, Canada, until about 1854. He was the founder of the Hickey family in America. George Hickey resided in Ontario, Canada, until about 1854. He was a harness maker and saddler by trade, and engaged in those lines of work at Nicholville, New York, more than 40 years. In addition, he operated a carriage-upholstering business. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His wife, Esther (Lowry) Hickey, who was born at Waddington, St. Lawrence County, New York, in 1830, died in 1863, and is buried at Nicholville. They were the parents of 4 children (order of birth not known): (1) Clarence, who died when a child. (2) Emma. (3) Clinton G. (4) Mina A.

Clinton G. Hickey, attended the public schools of Nicholville, New York; student, State Normal School (Potsdam, New York); graduate, Albany (New York) Medical College, M. D., 1884; and graduate student, New York Polyclinic Medical School and Hospital (New York City), in 1891. He practiced his profession at Gaylordsville, Connecticut, 3½ years, after which he was a resident physician and surgeon to the Burden Iron & Ore Company, of Troy, New York, 3 or 4 years. In Nov. 1891, he moved to Denver, Colorado, where he began the practice of his profession, specializing in internal medicine. For 14 years he was associated with the Gross Medical College, and the University of Denver, serving first as a clinical assistant in medicine and later as associate professor of medicine, teaching physical diagnosis. He served 2 years as professor of internal medicine at the University of Colorado School of Medicine, and was a staff member of the Hospital of the City and County of Denver (now Denver General Hospital), 5 years. He was appointed by Governor George A. Carlson, to the Colorado State Board of Health, on which he served 1916-21, being vice-president and acting president of the board in 1918 and 1919, and president, 1920-21. Dr. Hickey, who helped establish the medical library of Denver, is a charter member of the Adult Blind Home, which he helped found, and of which he served as president 18 years. He has served as a member of the board of directors of the North Side Community Center, 27 years, and as president of various social agencies in Denver. He formerly served as president of the Denver Clinical and Pathological Society, served in an official capacity in the old county medical society 14 years, and for 3 years was treasurer of the Denver Medical Society. Dr. Hickey has contributed articles to the "Journal of the American Medical Association", and to "Colorado Medicine", the official journal of the Colorado State Medical Society.

He was a member of the Grant Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, from January 1892 until 1928. For 24 years he was chairman of the official board, and for 20 years was chairman of the music committee of that church. He is a Republican, and a member of the following: American Medical Association; Colorado State Medical Society; The Medical Society of the City and County of Denver (past president; member, board of trustees); Colorado Historical Society of the Methodist Church (charter member); Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Park Hill Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Hickey, who is interested in horticulture, particularly enjoys gardening.

On January 21, 1885, at Nicholville, New York, Dr. Hickey married Jennie A. E. Simonds, who was born at Nicholville, daughter of Titus S. and Mary (Chandler) Simonds. Mrs. Hickey died November 30, 1920, and is buried in Crown Hill Cemetery, in Denver. The following children were born to Dr. and Mrs. Hickey; (1) Ethelwyn, who died when 6 years of age. (2) Muriel Mary, who died when 4 years of age. (3) Harold Lowry, who was born in Denver, November 15, 1892. He graduated from the University of Denver, in June 1913, and from Northwestern University Medical School, in June 1917. He served his internship at the Wesley Memorial Hospital in Chicago, and is now practicing his profession in Denver, where he specializes in eye, ear, nose and throat work. During the World War, he served in the U. S. Naval Reserve Corps. He married Allena Clark, who originally was from Ontario, Canada. They are the parents of 2 children, Beatrice, and Margery. (4) Dorothy Simonds, who was born February 17, 1895. She graduated from the University of Denver, with a B. A. degree. She married Robert E. Sherer. Mr. and Mrs. Sherer, who reside in Evanston, Illinois, are the parents of 4 children: Muriel; Katherine; Robert, Jr.; and Kenneth.

In 1921, Dr. Hickey married Mrs. Nelle (Severance) Harris, of Davenport, Iowa. By a former marriage, she is the mother of 1 child, Charles Wilson Harris. He married Adeline Holloway, and they are the parents of 1 child, Nancy Harris.

* For further data regarding Dr. Clinton G. Hickey, see James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Co., Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 5, p. 514; and Wilbur Fisk Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 119.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM HIGBY
Denver Couple Will Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. William Higby of 2715 Decatur st., will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary Thursday at their home.

Their daughter, Mrs. George C. Cell, La Junta, will be hostess at an open house at Mr. and Mrs. Higby's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Higby were married in Colorado Springs April 17, 1902, and lived in Pueblo until 1919, when they moved to Denver.

They have one daughter, Mrs. Cell, and a grandson, William E. Cell of Denver.

Rocky Mountain News, April 13, 1952, p. 16

MRS. ADALINE HILBURN
Denver Woman Marks 90th Year
Mrs. Adaline Hilburn Pioneered in Texas;
Came to Colorado in Covered Wagon in '74

There was a great deal of ringing of a doorbell in the 1300 block on S. Gaylord st. yesterday and for good reason.

Mrs. Adaline Hilburn, mother-in-law of Arch White, clerk of the Colorado Supreme Court, celebrated her 90th birthday, and 100 friends were on hand to see that she did a good job of celebrating.

Born in Mesopotamia, Ohio, December 26, 1848, Mrs. Hilburn came to Colorado 44 years ago. She came here with her husband in a covered wagon in 1874, after the family had pioneered in Texas.

They first settled in Rosita, Colo., a booming mining town west of Pueblo. They lived in a dirt-covered one-room cabin until 1880, when they moved to Pueblo. Mr. Hilburn was a mining man in the Victor district before coming to Denver, a quarter century ago.

Mrs. Hilburn's closest companion is her radio.

Her pet peeve is publicity. She detests having her picture taken, and roared disapproval yesterday.

She finally consented to a picture, but said, "All you need to print is my name and how old I am."

Mrs. Hilburn has two children, Mrs. Pearl White of 1315 S. Gaylord st., and Robert E. Hilburn of Long Beach, Calif.; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Rocky Mountain News, December 27, 1938, p. 6

MRS. CRAWFORD HILL

Mrs. Crawford Hill Rites Wednesday at St. John's

Services for Mrs. Crawford Hill, the southern belle who dominated Denver society for several decades after the turn of the century, will be at 11 a. m. Wednesday in the chapel of St. John's Episcopal Cathedral.

The family will attend private interment service at Fairmount.

Mrs. Hill died at midnight Saturday in her suite in the Brown Palace Hotel, where she had lived in seclusion the last 11 years. She was in her 90's.

Born Louise Sneed at Henderson, N. C., she was a descendant of the Bethells and Sneeds, long-line land-grant aristocracy of the south.

She met her husband, Crawford Hill, son of a United States senator and Colorado mining magnate, when she visited a cousin here in 1893.

After their marriage at Memphis, Tenn., in 1895, the couple returned to Denver, and Mrs. Hill was soon setting the pace for the city's socialites.

Her husband died in 1922.

Mrs. Hill issued the city's first social directory, and determined the membership of the "Sacred 36," a select group of socialites who originally belonged to an exclusive bridge club.

She traveled extensively, and when she was in Denver, members of the international smart set, including royalty and such personalities as Elsie de Wolfe (Lady Mendl), met with the elect of Denver's society, politicians, artists, actors, labor leaders and journalists in the drawing-room of her 22-room mansion at 969 Sherman St.

Mrs. Hill moved to the Brown Palace Hotel in 1944, and her residence was sold three years later to the Town club.

Surviving are two sons, Nathaniel P. and Crawford Hill of New York and Newport; four grandchildren, Louis G. of New York, Mrs. Caspar Townsend of Philadelphia, Mrs. Samuel M. V. Hamilton of Wayne, Pa., and Mrs. John Archibold of Newport, R. I., and seven great-grandchildren.

Denver Post, May 31, 1955, p. 3

MRS. CRAWFORD HILL

Funeral for Mrs. Hill Scheduled Wednesday

Funeral services for Mrs. Crawford Hill, Denver society leader at the turn of the century, will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at St. Martin's Chapel of St. John's Episcopal Cathedral.

Private burial, with only the family in attendance, will be in Fairmount.

Mrs. Hill died of a blood clot at midnight Saturday in her suite at the Brown Palace Hotel. She was 94.

Forced to Retire

Mrs. Hill lived in seclusion at the hotel for the past 15 years after ill health forced her to step down from the role of dowager queen of Denver society in 1940.

Mrs. Hill came to Denver from Memphis in 1893. Her marriage to Crawford Hill, son of Sen. Nathan P. Hill, smelting and mining magnate, took place two years later in Memphis.

The couple returned to Denver and made their home in an impressive dwelling at 1407 Cleveland pl.

Mrs. Hill inaugurated many firsts in Denver society. Among them were the first private banquet where a private orchestra played and the first afternoon dance.

She also issued the city's first social register, listing those she conceded to be the leading lights of Denver society.

Palatial Home

After her husband's death in 1922, she built the palatial Hill home at 969 Sherman where she entertained the great of America and the world.

Surviving are two sons, Nathaniel P. and Crawford Jr. of New York and Newport; four grandchildren, Louis G. of New York, Mrs. Caspar Townsend of Philadelphia, Mrs. Samuel M. V. Hamilton of Wayne, Pa., and Mrs. John Archibold of Newport; and seven great-grandchildren.

Rocky Mountain News, June 1, 1955, p. 61

MRS. CRAWFORD HILL
Mrs. Hill Leaves Rich Memories
By PASQUALE MARRANZINO

*"... There is
"One great society alone on earth;
"The noble living and the noble dead."
-Wordsworth*

The Queen of Denver society, Mrs. Crawford Hill, slipped quietly over the hill of life Saturday late.

Her death, like most of her life, was kept secret behind the high wall of seclusion that money and social state commands. Denver didn't know the dowager queen had gone for much longer than an event of such news significance can stand.

I never met Mrs. Crawford Hill. I never laid eyes on her. And yet my life seemed punctuated with the mention of Mrs. Hill, her hold on my town and on its social doings.

In the newspaper business you keep brushing up against people you never know but feel you know through reading or writing about them. People like presidents, kings and artists.

Social Arbiter

I thought I knew about Mrs. Hill. I know, for instance, that she was Denver's great social arbiter. That she had set out to give Denver a high echelon of social functioning and she had done the job. That she had created a "Sacred 36" made up of people she selected to be the nucleus of Denver's post-Victorian society.

Our story of her death put it succinctly:

"For more than 30 years she led Denver society as it has never been governed before or since. What she wore, what she said and where she went became topics of daily conversation."

These attributes became truth because of the frequency of their mention, whether they were true or not. Everybody with any length of memory or residency knew what Lizzie Hill stood for. But not many people knew Lizzie Hill.

I made an attempt to find out. It seemed imperative because Mrs. Hill appeared to have more effect on Denver than any other woman who ever lived here. And it seems important that someone should assay that importance and to give Mrs. Hill her proper place in history.

And so I talked to a score of people who knew her, some better than others. And the following is a distillation of what I learned.

Woman of Great Beauty

It is unquestioned that Mrs. Hill was a woman of great beauty and physical attraction. She had black hair, fair skin and sparkling hazel eyes. She was the darling of a prominent Memphis family and came to Denver in 1894 to visit a cousin. Here she met and captivated Crawford Hill, son of Sen. Nathaniel P. Hill and scion of a rich mining family.

"She immediately had the makings," one gentleman told me, "to take the reins of Denver society. She had a fine, social polish, she had brains, she had beauty, she had charm -- and most of all she had the money. She took on a studied life and built it to perfection."

Another man said: "She went at it like Bob Young went at collaring the New York Central, or as a politician goes at organizing to get elected. Every step she took, every friend she made was aimed at becoming queen bee. And she did it and many people were trod on because of that ambition."

But that steely, cold approach didn't fit the description of Mrs. Hill offered by people who knew her better and more intimately. Somewhere in her personality was that quicksilver virtue of being able to make friends and admirers.

"She was a true social artist," a close friend related. "She mastered the art of making people feel more than they really were. Anybody who ever met Mrs. Hill left her feeling enriched in some spiritual fashion. And she turned on the same charm and wit for the postman as well as for her honored guest.

"She appeared, more than anyone I ever met, to be practicing the Second Commandment. She was kind and thoughtful and wise. It is no wonder people copied her tastes and manner and did her bidding. She had to be greatly beloved before she became a leader. That's the way with leaders."

Memories Still Live

It has been two decades since Mrs. Hill threw one of her big parties. A stroke in 1940 put an end to her social life and she spent the years since that time in almost complete seclusion.

But the memories of those parties still live here. They were the best. They were staged always with all the perfection that a theatrical producer could muster. The guests always could look forward to a little of the unexpected. All the people who were anybody were there but always there was the last person the guest would expect.

The Hill home, now the Town Club, was a perfect setting for the parties. Mrs. Hill had a penchant for white -- clothes, household decor and furnishings. The halls were white marble and carpeted with thick treasures she picked up on her extensive travels.

The walls were hung with the great art of those times. Two of these were hung with portraits of her two sons, Crawford and Nathaniel, which were done by Sir John St. Heller Lander, once England's foremost portrait painter.

Friend of the Press

Mrs. Hill got along fabulously with the press. Her husband owned the old Denver Republican and through it she found newspapermen were people.

When News photographer Harry Mellon Rhoads, who knew Mrs. Hill all of his life, was temporarily blinded when flash powder went off in his face at a Denver Club party, she visited him every day for two weeks and sent specialists and private nurses to help him.

When a society editor took sick, Mrs. Hill moved her into her own home. Her house staff always was treated by Mrs. Hill as if they were part of the family and they responded by giving her the best of service and helped make her parties as successful as they were.

A reporter one day asked her what were the ingredients that went into making a social leader. Mrs. Hill answered: "First you must have money. Then you must have the knowledge to give people a wonderful time." Mrs. Hill had those ingredients and used them well.

"She had a strong personality," another man told me. "She had firm convictions about society, business, politics and all she thought and did. But she was kind and had great charm and she made those convictions appealing."

Rocky Mountain News, June 1, 1955, p. 39

MRS. CRAWFORD HILL

Mrs. Hill Leaves $2 Million Estate To Her Two Sons

Mrs. Crawford Hill, 94, Denver social leader at the turn of the century who died in her Brown Palace Hotel suite May 28, left an estate of a "minimum of $2 million."

This was disclosed in County Court Monday by E. Ray Campbell, attorney for the estate.

A bond for this amount was posted with the court by the International Trust Co., appointed administrator of the estate.

Under terms of her will her estate will be divided equally between two sons, Nathaniel P. Hill and Crawford Hill, both of Newport, R. I.

Mrs. Hill appointed Nathaniel and Campbell executors of her estate. Campbell has declined to act in this capacity, but will act as attorney for the estate.

As alternates she nominated Crawford and Elmer Brock, Denver attorney who died Aug. 14, 1949.

With the death of Mr. Brock and the fact that both her sons are non-residents of Colorado, the International Trust Co. was appointed to administer the estate.

Rocky Mountain News, August 9, 1955, p. 5

Also see: Denver Post, August 8, 1955, p. 11

FRANCIS L. L. HILLER
Down Memory Lane -- D. U. 50 Years Ago

Celebration of Founder's Day is not complete without a simultaneous recognition of those alumni of the University who have so lived that they are a tangible tribute to their Alma Mater.

One such alumnus is Francis L. L. Hiller of Washington, D. C., who received his A.B. in 1900 and his A.M. in 1901. He has "taken a trip down Memory Lane" to give us some of the feeling of the University at the turn of the century and its impact on the career which followed graduation.

The editors would like to quote from an autobiographical sketch contributed by Mr. Hiller at our request some time ago:

"I entered Denver University in September 1893, 56 years ago. Never having had more than a grade school education, I had to take both the preparatory and the University courses and so spent seven years there, preaching at Student's Appointments to get the means.

"I was graduated in June, 1900, in the first class to graduate under Chancellor Henry A. Buchtel. All of my courses, except in the last half year, however, were under Chancellor William Frazer McDowell.

"When I began at DU there were only about 125 students in the Liberal Arts College. We had 13 graduates in 1900, among them Rev. Ervin Edgerton, still a Denver resident; Nanaruth Taggart (now Mrs. Charles Haines, who lives in University Park); Elise Jones, who married Ola Putman; Cora Taylor and James Westhaver, who were later married.

"Rev. Edgerton and Wayne C. Williams were my two closest college chums. Williams was my best man when I was married to Orlena Beggs, A.B. (also of the Class of 1900). She was the oldest daughter of Principal Robert H. Beggs of Whittier School, Denver, and was German professor at DU after study in Europe. We were married in July, 1903; and have lived in Washington, D. C., ever since. I am now in my 81st year.

"My brother, Rev. C. C. P. Hiller, A.B., '99, Hon. D.D. '14, graduated from DU a year ahead of me. He went to Boston University Theological School, married and settled in Massachusetts. He was in the ministry in Colorado for 12 years and the rest of his 50 years service was spent in the New England Conference. At DU we were called the 'Alphabetical Hillers.'

"I have often thought that my wife and I had a wonderful time at DU. We knew personally all of the members of the faculty and they all knew us. Personal contacts with such personalities mean much. We had Chancellor McDowell, Dean Herbert A. Howe, the astronomer; Dr. Ammi B. Hyde, the wonder man in Greek and other subjects; Dr. Herbert Russell in mathematics; E. B. T. Spencer (the students called him 'Et Tu Bruate Spencer') in Latin; Prof. Anna Fisher in literature; Prof. Wilber D. Engle for chemistry; and Prof. Anne Grace Wirt in French.

"After graduation I got into the United States Land Service in the local office at Pueblo, Colo., and a year and a half later was transferred to the main office in Washington. I was law reviewer there for the ten years preceding my retirement.

"Mrs. Hiller and I have three children. Robert, the eldest, is now a Methodist minister in Dundalk, a big steel town just outside of Baltimore. He and his wife have one child, Peggy, nine years old, and our only grandchild.

"Son Charles is in the State Department here. He was married four years ago and lives just across the Potomac in Virginia. Daughter Clara, who is Charles' twin, is still with us and for twelve years has been a Latin teacher in the District of Columbia schools. I am enormously proud of my children because all are intellectually brilliant and doing a fine job of living.

"For many years I was in nearly all the local Methodist organizations. I am still a lay member of the Baltimore Conference and get quite a 'kick' out of sitting in conference with my son. I was never a conference member, just a local elder.

"My only contribution to literature, beyond articles in the religious press, is a book, 'Talks About the Bible, and Religion,' published in 1926 and dedicated to my children. I believe there is a copy in the University library.

"For some 36 years we have had a summer home in Washington Grove, Md. At the last election there I declined further nomination, having served the town for 25 years, two terms as Mayor and the rest as town clerk. Mindful of the example of Senator Norris of Nebraska and others who carried the pitcher to the well once too often, I got out when I could still say that I had never failed to get elected when I ran for public office.

"In April, 1947, my wife suffered a coronary occlusion and was an invalid for nearly a year. I am glad to say she is now considerably better. I am fearful that both of us are getting in the 'sere and yellow leaf.'

"Thank you for your interest and for giving me a wonderful trip down Memory Lane . . . it has awakened a lot of memories of old days and old friends. I can truly say that no period of my life is richer in fine memories than the time I spent in Denver University."

[Photographs in the article include: The Alphabetical Hillers, C. C. P and Francis L. L.; Orlena Beggs Hiller and Francis L. L. Hiller.]

Denver University Pioneer, March, 1949, p. 4

BEN CLARK HILLIARD JR.

Dad's Impassioned Plea in Court Led Hilliard to Become Attorney

By GEORGE McWILLIAMS

Denver Post Staff Writer

It was a hot day in the summer of 1906 and the little town of Kiowa, seat of Elbert county, drowsed in the sun.

On the log hitch rack which ran the full three blocks of the main street sat an 8-year-old boy. From the second-floor window of the general store behind him which doubled as courthouse droned the voice of the defense attorney in an attempt to murder case.

The boy was Ben C. (for Clark) Hilliard Jr., who took over June 1 as federal referee in bankruptcy for Colorado. The voice was that of his father, the late Ben C. Hilliard Sr. who rose to chief justice of the Colorado supreme court.

The elder Hilliard's voice rose in an impassioned plea for his young client and a few minutes later the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty. Young Ben was so impressed that he decided then and there what his career would be.

"That's For Me."

"I said, 'that's for me,'" Hilliard recalled, nearly a half-century later. "I made up my mind right then I would be an attorney."

Young Ben had a long way to go before he received his law degree from George Washington university in Washington, D. C., in 1922 and hung up his shingle in Denver a year later. He was born in Denver in 1898, the youngest of four children of Benjamin C. and Tida Hilliard who had come to Colorado from Kansas City, Mo., in 1892.

He attended Denver grade schools and high school in Washington when his father was elected to congress in 1914 and the family moved to the nation's capital. After graduating from high school he enrolled at the University of Iowa but interrupted his college work at 19 when America entered the first World war.

During the war, Hilliard was assigned to the adjutant general's office at Hoboken, N. J., and spent his army career at that port of embarkation. He resumed his law studies at George Washington university after the war.

Leader in Legion.

Hilliard has made a secondary career of veterans affairs and has long been associated with and a leader in the American Legion. He joined Denver's Leyden-Chiles-Wickersham post in 1923 and was at various times chairman of all the post's committees, state judge advocate and a member of the special Legion committee named to probe alleged subversive activities at the University of Colorado.

He is a former Colorado department commander of the Legion, was national executive committeeman in 1943 and in 1948 was a candidate for national commander at the Miami, Fla., convention. During his campaign for that post he stumped every state in the union.

The Legion's fun-provoking unit -- the 40 & 8 society -- has also claimed a lot of Hilliard's time in the past quarter-century. He joined the outfit in 1930 and in 1943 was elected grand commander at the convention in Boston. He had previously been national vice commander, correspondent, grand chef de fare, cheminos national and grand advocate for Colorado.

Likes to Travel.

Hilliard's law practice has been his life for thirty years and hasn't left much time for hobbies. He likes to travel and read and has a 1,500-volume library in his home at 23 South Downing street.

A prominent place on the shelves is occupied by a literary curiosity -- a copy of Dr. Frederick A. Cook's "My Discovery of the Pole." It was given to Hilliard by Cook when that controversial faker was haunting the halls of congress trying to establish his claim to having first reached the North Pole.

Hilliard's travels include a visit to Moscow and Vienna in 1938. He was in the Austrian capital when the Nazis moved in and took over.

"I was in Russia eight days and spent eight years lecturing on it after I came home," he recalled.

Hard Worker.

Hilliard is a hard worker, although he has a life-long repugnance for manual labor. During the long years he was in private law practice he got accustomed to hauling his long, spare frame out of bed by dawn and would reach the office by 7 a. m.

By 9 a. m. when most lawyers are just opening their mail, Hilliard had the routine work of the day done. As a result, it's also early to bed. He usually retires by 9:30 p. m. and reads himself to sleep.

Hilliard's dislike of manual labor also dates back to the days in Kiowa when his silver-thatched, silver-tongued father was county attorney. When he was 12, young Ben got a summer job driving a hay wagon for a farmer at the going rate of fifty cents a day.

On his first trip he tried to make a short turn through the gate, turned the wagon over and dumped the load. He was promptly fired and walked to town, more determined to be an attorney than ever. He has never been sorry.

"There's no such thing as routine in the law business," Hilliard says. "There's no work more interesting."

* * *

To his father, who died Aug. 9, 1951, Hilliard owes his ambition in law and his ideals. His home life was happy.

"When I was a boy, I used to wait on the corner for him to come home on the streetcar," Hilliard said. "We'd race to the house and he always let me beat him. When he went to the state supreme court, we'd still meet every day. When he died I lost more than my father -- I lost my best friend."

Hilliard's mother died in 1944. He recalled that she was a good manager and a hard worker.

"She had to be," Hilliard explained. "When my mother and father came here in 1892 the panic was on. My dad used to say that as far as we were concerned the panic was always on."

Hilliard's two sisters, Mrs. Loraine Finnicum and Miss Opel Hilliard, live in the home at 3132 Federal boulevard where the family first moved in 1906. A brother, Albert, lives in Reno, Nev.

The new federal referee in bankruptcy appointed by United States District Judge Lee Knous is 55 and a Democrat. He is a member of the bar of the U. S. supreme court, the court of appeals for the District of Columbia, U. S. circuit court of appeals for the Tenth district, Colorado supreme court and the U. S. district courts for Colorado and Nevada.

Vice President of Bar.

He was vice president of the Denver Bar association in 1940 and is affiliated with Delta Tau Delta and Phi Delta Thi fraternities. He is a member of Oriental lodge Royal Arch Masons, Scottish Rite Masons, El Jebel shrine and Woodmen of the World.

Hilliard was formerly a member of the Moffat tunnel commission and resigned to become public administrator for Colorado.

The appointment to his new position was the realization of a deep ambition on Hilliard's part.

High Mark To Shoot At.

"Every lawyer would like to be a judge," he said. "It's a position in which you can see both sides and be impartial."

Hilliard has great respect for the man he succeeds, the late Frank McLaughlin. He recalled that McLaughlin took the referee's post to which he was appointed by the late Judge J. Foster Symes in 1923 "as a temporary job" and died thirty years later at the age of 85.

"I hope I can retire at that age with as much a sense of accomplishment," Hilliard said. "He left a mark to shoot at."

[A photograph of Ben Clark Hilliard Jr. accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, June 7, 1953, p. 3AA

RICHARD CHARLES HILLS

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. R. C. Hills
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Richard Charles Hills, born February 5, 1848, at Euheret Luney, England

Name of father: Richard Charles Hills, a native of England

Name of mother: Emily Cooper Hills, a native of England

Attended school or college: Private study at home

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Fellow, Geological Society, London; Fellow, Geological Society of America; Honorary Fellow, Colorado Scientific Society; Member, American Association, etc.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: To Colorado, 1877. To Denver, 1879.

Married: March 10, 1901 at Denver, Colorado

Name of wife: Anne Louise Bruce, the daughter of John Bruce and Anne (Wolcott) Bruce Avocation: Geologist

Give dates: Since 1880

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: Geologist, U. S. Geological, 1894 to 1900; Hon. Curator, Geology and Mineralogy, Colorado Museum Natural History, City Park, at present time.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Richard Charles Hills

Biography File

MICHAEL CREED HINDERLIDER

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B878 D5 E16 F34
LCD/MRM

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. Michael Creed Hinderlider,
State Engineer, Denver, Colorado

Michael Creed Hinderlider*, son of Daniel Peck and Ann Eliza (Wilson) Hinderlider; born at Medora, Jackson County, Indiana, May 19, 1876.

Daniel Peck Hinderlider, son of Joel and Ellen (Peck) Hinderlider, was born in Jackson County, Indiana, in 1839. He engaged in farming, was a banker, and a stock feeder. He died in June 1929. His wife, Ann Eliza (Wilson) Hinderlider, was born in Jackson County, Indiana, and died in 1890. Her parents were Creed Taylor and Sophia (Douglas) Wilson, the latter of whom was a cousin of Stephen A. Douglas.

Joel Hinderlider, father of Daniel Peck Hinderlider, and son of Michael Hinderlider, was born in Jackson County, Indiana. He married Ellen Peck, who was a native of Jackson County.

Michael Hinderlider, father of Joel Hinderlider, was born in Germany. He later emigrated to America, settling in Pennsylvania, and in the late 1700's, moved to Jackson County, Indiana, where he entered Government land, which is now owned by his great-grandson, Michael Creed Hinderlider. The land patent was signed by John Quincy Adams.

Michael Creed Hinderlider, who was reared on a farm, attended public schools of Indiana, and graduated from Purdue University, B. S., in civil engineering, in 1897. He then moved to Grand Junction, Colorado, where he became associated in the engineering business with Addison J. McCune, who was a pioneer civil engineer of Colorado, and who served as state engineer, 10 years. The Hon. Mr. Hinderlider served as deputy engineer, after which he was a civil engineer on public land surveys in Colorado, until 1898. He subsequently was employed as follows: was in charge of his father's extensive farming interests in Jackson County, Indiana, 1898-99; draftsman, Board of Public Works, Denver, from 1899 to 1900; again in charge of father's affairs, 1900-01; hydrographer, state engineer's office, Denver, 1901-02; district engineer, U. S. Geological Survey, in charge of hydrographic work in Colorado, and later in charge of all Government hydrographic work in Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas, North Dakota and South Dakota, and parts of Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Utah, 1902-06; during the latter period was engineer for the U. S. Reclamation Service in charge of surveys, designs and estimates of cost for a 60,000-acre project in southern California and northern New Mexico; engineer in charge of surveys, location and construction of a 28,000 H. P. hydro-electric installation on the Colorado River near Glenwood Springs, Colorado, 1906-07; designed Redlands Hydro-electric Power Plant, which pumps water under a maximum head of 260 feet for 4,000 acres of land, 1907-08; resident engineer for Orchard Construction Company, in charge of surveys, designs and construction of the largest pumping plant in Colorado for delivering water under a maximum head of 135 feet to irrigate 10,000 acres of land, 1908-10; made investigation of, designs for and construction of one of the largest underflow systems for irrigating 10,000 acres near Tucson, Arizona, 1910-12; during the latter period was associated with his former partner in the design and construction of a hydraulic-fill dam on the Alamosa River in Colorado; completed Beaver Park Dam, 1912-14; general practice, including investigations and reports on numerous dams, irrigation projects, etc., 1914-17; in charge of construction of large earth dam across Little Colorado in Arizona, 1917-18; investigating and reporting on irrigation system in northern New Mexico, 1918-19; general practice covering designs of numerous dams, investigations and reports on irrigation projects, water supply, etc., 1919-23; consulting engineer for the State of California on San Gabriel and Pine Canyon concrete dams, 1929-30; and has served as state engineer of Colorado, since his appointment to that office, November 30, 1923.

The Hon. Mr. Hinderlider, who has served as interstate river commissioner for Colorado, since 1932, is chairman of the State Irrigation District Commission, and secretary-treasurer of the State Board of Examiners for Engineers and Land Surveyors. He is a member of the following: State Planning Commission; State Water Conservation Board; State Board of Conservation; and Colorado River Planning Commission (secretary). He has taken an active part in two of the noted cases before the Supreme Court of the United States, involving interstate litigation between Colorado and her sister states in water matters. He is consulting engineer for U. S. engineers on certain dams in Missouri, Oklahoma, and Colorado. The Hon. Mr. Hinderlider, who is a Democrat, is a member of the following: Oriental Lodge No. 87, A.F. and A.M. (worshipful master, 1933), and Consistory (32nd degree); Lakewood Country Club; Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association; and Presbyterian Church. He owns farms in Indiana. The Hon. Mr. Hinderlider is the author of various articles on civil engineering subjects.

On October 31, 1900, Michael Creed Hinderlider married Caroline Kirk, who was born in Alabama, in 1880. Her parents, Isaac and Nancy Kirk, who were natives of Ohio, settled in Indiana, subsequently moving to Alabama, and Grand Junction, Colorado, where they died. The following children were born to the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Hinderlider: (1) Ruth, who is the wife of James Thomas MacCluskey. They reside in Denver, and are the parents of 3 children, Ruth Maurine, Thomas J., and Carol Lee. (2) Clyde Kirk, who resides in Denver. He is married, and is the father of 3 children, Clyde Kirk, Jr., Bryan, and Marcianna. (3) Michael Creed, Jr., who is state inspector in the engineering department. (4) Daniel Peck, who died when 9 years of age.

* For further data regarding the Hon. Michael Creed Hinderlider, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-1937), vol. 19, p. 1189; James H. Baker, "History of Colorado" (Linderman Company, Inc., Denver, 1927), vol. 4, p. 412; and Citizens Historical Association files.

JOHN B. HINDRY

Edited By JACK FOSTER

Research by Frances Melrose

Dear J. F.: We often have been attracted to the old house at 5500 N. Washington st., as we have driven into Denver. We have wondered about its history.

J. C. B., Laramie, Wyo.

Dear J. C. B.: The old Hindry house does have an interesting story -- probably one of the most unusual in the Denver area. It is a story that combines all of happiness, heartbreak and violence.

John B. Hindry came to Colorado from New York. He started a lumber business in Bear Creek Canon, and from this branched into ranching. The town of Masters, Colo., was started by him.

In 1870, Hindry bought 110 acres of land on the Platte River as the site for the grand mansion he planned to build. He had examined the real estate situation in Denver, and decided that the land along the Platte would grow into a beautiful residential area.

With dreams of a bright future in his mind, Hindry set to work building the house you now see at 5500 N. Washington st. The house was completed in 1873 at a cost of $75,000 and it looked far different from the shell you see now.

Originally, there was a cupola on top. Two wrought-iron lions guarded the front entrance. Black walnut paneling and Italian marble enhanced the elegance of the interior.

As a part of his establishment, Hindry added a stable for his fine trotting horses, and greenhouses where he would grow his own flowers.

A large plot of land around the house was beautifully landscaped. Hindry added an orchard to one area of the grounds.

Just when everything seemed to be going at its very best, troubles began to beset Hindry. His wife died, and their three children, who were still in school, were sent to relatives in California for their schooling. Hindry stayed on, alone, in the house.

Then the Globe Smelter was erected in the vicinity of the Hindry house. Smoke and fumes harmed the garden and orchard and decreased the value of the property.

Because of its deserted look, the house soon became a target for prowlers.

To catch prowlers Hindry rigged a shotgun to go off automatically when a side window was raised. The gun was fastened through a board, which in turn, was fastened to a table. A cord ran from the gun trigger to the window. When the window was raised, the gun went off automatically, straight toward the person raising the window.

One man was killed by the shotgun in September 1901 while trying to break into the house. Two more later also met death from Hindry's trap.

Hindry himself was wounded by his own trap. He stumbled over the cord one night while trying to peer out for prowlers. The gun went off, wounding him in the side. He recovered, but never lived in the house after that. He moved to California and died there in 1906.

After standing vacant for many years and earning a wide-spread reputation as a "haunted house," the old Hindry place was purchased in 1921 by Leo Bomareto.

[A picture of "what's left of the old mansion" accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, October 13, 1957, p. 61

MRS. DORA HINES
103-Year-Old Woman

A frail Denver woman celebrated her 103d birthday Saturday with a prayer for a 104th.

"I want to go to Jesus," Mrs. Dora Hines of 2669 Arapahoe st. told her pastor.

"But I asked Jesus to let me stay a little longer."

Dressed in white satin with a rosary around her neck, Mrs. Hines remembered her days as a slave in Texas.

"Hard times," she sighed. "Grown men came out from under the houses and cried when slavery times were over."

"Is it time to go to church now?" Mrs. Hines asked the Rev. G. E. Smith, pastor of Ogden Street Church of God in Christ, who arranged her birthday party.

"Not now, Sister Hines," he told her, "tomorrow."

"Might not be able to go tomorrow," Mrs. Hines shook her head.

But she was comforted when the Rev. Mr. Smith gave her a pink and white birthday cake.

"How long do you want to stay here before you go to Jesus?" the Rev. Mr. Smith asked her.

Mrs. Hines smiled. "As long as Jesus will let me," she said.

Then she ate a piece of birthday cake.

Mrs. Hines has three children, two grandchildren, three great-grandchildren and eight great-great-grandchildren. She lives with her daughter, Mrs. Fannie Leatherman.

[A photograph of Mrs. Dora Hines and the Rev. G. E. Smith accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, September 22, 1957, p. 60

FLORENCE LAMONT HINMAN

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Florence Lamont Hinman
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Florence Lamont Hinman, Mus. DDC

Place of birth: Cass City, Michigan

Name of father: Peter Lamont, a native of Canada

Name of mother: Anne Edwards Lamont, a native of Canada

Attended school or college: Harding Hall Girls School, London, Canada; London Conservatory of Music. Studied with world renowned teachers of music.

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Doctor of Music Conferred by Denver Conservatory of Music, April 24th, 1929.

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: 1903

Married: Yes, June 26, 1924 at Denver

Name of husband: Leroy Race Hinman

Avocation: Director and President of Lamont School of Music, incorporated 1924. Director and Founder of Treble Clef Club, organized 1918; Bass Clef Club, organized 1927.

Pupils have won National Contests - which turned the eyes of the Nation to Denver as a Musical Centre.

Give brief incidents of historical interest: Mrs. Hinman has endeavored to build the cultural life of Denver and its environs by organizing choral bodies - and stirring them with no remuneration other than the joy attending their development. They have grown through the years in size and quality and have become an integral part of the musical life of the city. The Lamont School of Music, founded and directed by Mrs. Hinman, has grown to be one of the largest Schools in the West and has numbered among its graduates many pupils who have won National Contests - and others who have made fame for themselves both in this country and abroad. Three books on Vocal Technic are ready for publication - and her work has received National Recognition of the highest order.

Please give autograph signature:

(signed) Florence Lamont Hinman

Biography File

MRS. FLORENCE LAMONT HINMAN
'Denver's Star-Maker' Title Befits Mrs. Hinman
By ALEX MURPHREE
Denver Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Florence Lamont Hinman wouldn't like to be called an institution. She is too vital, too alive, too busy, too humorous, too human to enjoy a place on such a cold and formal pedestal.

But as the head and moving spirit of one of Denver's biggest and most revered cultural institutions, the Lamont School of Music of the University of Denver, Mrs. Hinman has the respect and admiration Denverites pay such accomplishment.

Perhaps, in view of her dedicated helpfulness and warm personal friendship for young singers, the title which fits her best is the one Frank H. Ricketson Jr., president of the Central City Opera House association thinks is hers by right: "Denver's Star-Maker."

Devoted to Music.

When she stopped for an hour or so during a busy day recently to relax in her comfortable living-room-office next door to her grand piano-commanded studio at the Lamont school and to reminisce modestly about a life devoted to music, Mrs. Hinman was in the setting which best suits her. As she reviewed her career with the conversational warmth which her friends so admire, the sound of a Bach fugue came from one room of the old sandstone residence which is the Lamont school's home. From another room came the sound of an assiduously practiced vocal exercise and somewhere nearby a flute was assaying a persistent trill.

Such moments of relaxation are rare for Mrs. Hinman, who is seldom far from the sound of music being made by the accomplished or marred by the ambitious but untalented.

The Central City festival is just two and one-half months off and the task of preparing a carefully selected chorus in the music of four operas has begun even before all of the principals of the casts have been announced. That isn't the only job occupying Mrs. Hinman at the moment, either. That's just extra work beyond the details of managing a music school which is a department of a university and which is ending one term in a flurry of graduation recitals and getting ready to start another.

Mrs. Hinman started out her life in Cass City, Mich., with one advantage over most of us. She can move about the world on either a Canadian or a United States passport. Her Canadian parents were in Cass City when she was born but she spent the first seventeen years of her life in Canada. She is, then, an American citizen by birth and a Canadian citizen because her parents were Canadians.

She was educated at Harding Hall in London, Ont. "I never went to public school a day," she explains.

Gave Recital at 15

Showing an early talent for music, she gave her first piano recital when she was 15 and "was exploited a bit" as a piano prodigy before she decided that the voice was her instrument.

A dangerous pneumonia attack left her health in a precarious state and she "came out here" to recover. That she did, and rapidly, too. It wasn't long until she was singing a principal role in the first operatic production, "Mignon," offered by Msgr. Joseph J. Bosetti's newly-organized Denver Grand Opera company. She was soloist with the Denver Symphony orchestra, too, before she decided to take her career to New York city.

"When I returned, I resolved to stay," she recalls. Her career in the east had been successful but there were personal reasons which persuaded her to abandon it.

The Lamont school was founded in 1924 in the old Berger home at East Twelfth avenue and Sherman street and it began to make news -- a musical school always makes noise -- right away. Two pupils, Francesco Valentino and Ina Raines, won national contests in 1926. Valentino, then Frank Dinhaupt, is a leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera company and frequently prominent in Central City casts. In fact, he will sing at Central City again this summer and no one is looking forward to it more than Mrs. Hinman. Miss Raines, under the name of Ina Suez, carved out a career for herself, too, notable among her successes being appearances at the Glyndebourne festival.

National Winner.

In 1927 a third pupil, Agnes Davis, won a national contest and the Lamont school was definitely established. Miss Davis was the victor in the first Atwater Kent competition and The Denver Post -- Al Birch, perennial producer of The Denver Post operas, presiding -- saw to it that Miss Davis and her teacher were welcomed home with brass band and parade.

"As a matter of fact," Mrs. Hinman notes, "Al Birch and I started The Post operas. The first season we gave excerpts from 'Aida' and 'Il Trovatore.' The second year it was 'Tannheuser' and 'Lucia di Lammermoor' with an orchestra of 125, supplied by the musicians union -- free.

"After that Al thought we should do operettas and musical comedies and I didn't think it was exactly my sort of thing. But I don't want to imply that I take a superior attitude to them.

"The Post operas have been great and I have always encouraged my singers to sing in them. They have, hundreds of them through the years."

Fame As Educator.

Mrs. Hinman, in those early years of her school, began to earn fame as an educator. In a short time her school was accredited with the National Association of Schools of Music, one of very few in this area to qualify. Actually, there are only 250 out of 15,000 music schools in America considered worthy of membership.

Through all of this time, Mrs. Hinman was making a name for herself as a music educator. Her book, "Slogans for Singers," now in its fourth printing, helped but mostly recognition came -- including such concrete recognition as her employment to teach in the Austrian-American conservatory in Vienna in 1932 -- through the philosophy back of her teaching and her school.

"The voice," Mrs. Hinman insists, "is a musical instrument and the first preparation is correct handling of its acoustical properties. Singers must sing and I send my students out to sing wherever they are invited besides sponsoring an opera workshop, staging recitals and so on.

Many Discouraged.

"Then, too, I discourage more singers than I encourage. They come to me expecting to study a couple of years and then be starred at the Met. I wait awhile to see and then, oftener than not, I tell them, 'You have something good but it is not special.' I recommend courses in musical education to prepare them as teachers. Some of them thank me but most of them aren't very happy about it."

"Central City is one of my fondest 'loves,'" Mrs. Hinman declares and she has conducted its choruses, preparing them assiduously and turning them over to the musical director when he arrives to whip the festival operas together.

"My favorite was 'Orpheus' in 1941 because it is, of course, the greatest of music and there was such rich opportunity for the chorus. But this year's 'Romeo and Juliet' gives us another big opportunity with all of those Montagues and Capulets singing all the time, singing good choruses, too," she adds.

Mrs. Hinman married L. E. Hinman, director of Denver's park system, in 1934 when he was vice president of the Vulcan Iron works.

Such a busy woman might be thought not to have time for hobbies but Mrs. Hinman does, the chief of them being needlework and bridge. Listening to music, of course, is too important to be called a hobby.

Mutual Hobby.

"My husband and I have a mutual hobby, too," Mrs. Hinman reports and it turns out to be the sort of interest a music teacher who occasionally wants quiet and a parks director who always wants trees would logically share. "It's called 'Tall Timber' and it's 480 acres of heaven where we spend our weekends."

Tall Timber may get a little neglected during the next few weeks -- Central City opera chorus rehearsals being as demanding as they are -- but music for Denver won't be neglected. Not by Mrs. Hinman.

[A photograph of Mrs. Hinman accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, April 22, 1951, p. 2AA

MR. AND MRS. A. B. (AL) HIRSCHFELD
Hirschfelds Find Joy In Long Life Together
By PAT KING

California is beautiful, New York is fun, but this -- this is God's country.

With enthusiasm and conviction, Al (A. B.) Hirschfeld and his wife Emma tell of their life in Denver, their arrival in 1903 and 1900 respectively, and their intention "never to leave."

They met at a dance in 1906 and were married a year later. That adds up to 44 years and it makes them plenty proud.

Emma Runs the Show

"Emma is the promoter of the show. I've discussed every move with her and she's been all the help in the world to me," the short, vibrant Mr. Hirschfeld stated.

A Cincinnati native, he came to Denver with his father, Isaac Mendel Hirschfeld, a sick man. Isaac Hirschfeld was born in April . . . 100 years ago.

A. B. was 16 years old then, had quit school when he was 13 and started to work here in the printing trade. From the first small handpress has grown one of the country's largest printing companies, Hirschfeld Press at Speer blvd. and Acoma st.

Early Jobs Recalled

His first jobs consisted of making up cards 39 cents a 100 -- in the basement of the old Colorado National Bank building at 17th and Larimer streets. His oldest employe, William Handleman, is associated with him today as superintendent.

This dynamic man has deep brown eyes which really do sparkle, a frequent and hearty laugh and handsome hands. He is a baseball "fanatic" and has seen 30 World Series. A director for the Denver Bears, he reads baseball books, sees baseball movies and attends every game he can.

Mrs. Hirschfeld is "not so keen" about the game, but she goes with him -- just to be with him. They travel a lot together and are currently planning a winter home in La Junta, Calif., for a yearly spell in the sun.

Has Exquisite Taste

She's a blond with bright blue eyes. She likes houseplants, canaries and goldfish. Her lovely home is decorated almost entirely in French Provincial furniture. Her taste is exquisite.

Both are bound "willingly" hand and foot in the community. Believe it or not, A. B. belongs actively to 77 organizations -- yes, 77.

He is chairman of the Crippled Children's Aid Society, and on the board of Goodwill Industries and Grace Community Center, to mention only a few. Keeps him busy, all right, but the business is in capable hands when he's away . . . it's run by his son, Edward.

But they like it here for good reasons. They have made innumerable friends . . . they have grown with the town from the time it had boardwalks . . . and they've been happy together here for 44 years.

[Photographs of Emma Hirschfeld and A. B. Hirschfeld accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 13, 1951, p. 12

MRS. MARY BREEN HOARE

History's Part of Her Life

By WALTER SAUNDERS

Rocky Mountain News Writer

History is more than a series of names, places and dates to Mrs. Mary Breen Hoare.

It's part of her everyday life. She knows more about historic places like Nevadaville and Gregory Gulch than most full-time historians.

History comes alive when you talk with Mrs. Hoare.

She'll proudly tell you that her mother was the first white child born in Nevadaville, the booming mining area located near present Central City.

" . . . And what a pretty baby she was," Mrs. Hoare will say as she hands you a series of pictures.

"Did you know about my grandfather? He was one of the first lawyers in the area. In fact he was the first judge of the mining courts in the Nevadaville district.

"Ask any historian. The name William Train Muir is a familiar one. He's mentioned in the history books, too."

Mrs. Hoare's lively interest in history has paid off in more ways than one.

It won her first prize in the popular Colorado Ghost Town Contest, and gave historians a chance to learn more about Nevadaville in 1861.

The Colorado Ghost Town Contest, sponsored by The Rocky Mountain News and Industrial Federal Savings, was aimed at uncovering valuable documents, letters, photographs and other materials pertaining to Colorado's ghost towns and mining camps.

Mrs. Hoare's entry was a hand-written ledger of the mining laws of Nevadaville in 1861. Its author was William Train Muir, Mrs. Hoare's grandfather.

The entry was the unanimous choice of the judges, who spent hours delving into its colorful contest.

"I thought it might be a prize-winner of some sort," Mrs. Hoare said, with a twinkle in her eye.

"But I didn't think it would win first prize.

"Our family has gone to a lot of trouble to preserve that ledger. It's been through several fires and a flood. I'm glad that it gives historians a chance to know more about that important period of Colorado history.

"I continually reread this ledger and some of the letters written by my grandmother. It helps me appreciate the tremendous hardships pioneers went through to settle Colorado.

"Think of the agony our pioneers endured just to cross the mountains. Today some people complain because they become tired driving through them."

The first prize in the contest, a high fidelity record player, is a welcome gift to Mrs. Hoare. She has spent a good share of her life as a music teacher.

[A photograph of Mrs. Mary Breen Hoare accompanies the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, September 25, 1958, p. 53

WILLIAM VAN DERVEER HODGES

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. William Van Derveer Hodges
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: William Van Derveer Hodges, born July 6, 1878, at Westville, Otsego County, New York

Name of father; George L. Hodges, a native of New York

Name of mother: Ella E. Francesca Van Derveer Hodges, a native of New York [D.A.R. #51723]

Attended school or college: East Denver High School; Columbia University Law School

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: Columbia, L.L.B., 1899

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: August, 1887

Married: December 3, 1902, at Denver

Name of wife: Mabel E. Gilluly Hodges, the daughter of Joseph W. Gilluly and Euphemia Lawson Gilluly

Names of children and years of birth: Joseph Gilluly Hodges, born April 31, 1909; William Van Derveer Hodges Jr., born September 19, 1911

Avocation: Lawyer

Give dates: August 1, 1899 to date

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: None

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Wm. V. Hodges

For further information see Sketches of Colorado, p. 312

Biography File

RICHARD H. HOFFMAN

Veteran Recalls Harper's Ferry

Richard H. Hoffman, who knows about war, thinks Sherman was right.

Like most of Denver's 15 living Civil War veterans, Mr. Hoffman enjoyed the fighting when he was young, but did not enjoy war's aftermath. And new tactics, such as airplane bombings of noncombatants and the use of poison gas, fill him with horror.

National Inspector

Mr. Hoffman, who lives alone in a hotel at 1321 Logan st., will be 92 Nov. 15. He is national inspector for the Grand Army of the Republic and past department commander for Colorado and Wyoming. He spends every morning in his office at the State Museum, opposite the Capitol.

Of war, he says "General Sherman was right, but I enjoyed fighting, and I even used to refuse furlough when it was offered to me."

This is almost the extent of Mr. Hoffman's conversation on war. He does not want to talk about Civil War experiences as many of his comrades do.

Leg Bothers Him

He will admit that his right knee, where a Civil War bullet entered and grazed the bone, still bothers him some.

Stooped and gray, he insists his health is "quite good" except for chronic bronchitis.

Mr. Hoffman was born in Switzerland County, Indiana. He enlisted Jan. 12, 1863, when he was 16, and ran away from a log schoolhouse to do it.

"I tried three times to run away, and the last time I made it.

"My folks didn't want me to go, but all the other boys were going, and I wanted to be with them. One day at school a fellow came along and told me Cap Banty's company was organizing down in the town, and the boys were going.

"He mentioned Theodore Freeland Hyson Sullivan, who later was to become a national political leader. 'Hy' was my best friend. The third day after that, I took my bread-and-molasses lunch with me and went down to Anderson's grocery store and signed up.

"Then I went back to school. The next day I gave my books to my little brother and told him, 'I'm a soldier now; you go home and tell the folks.' And I marched away."

Mr. Hoffman served two and a half years, receiving his only wound at Cedar Creek in 1864. He was mustered out in September, 1865.

Caught Fever Early

He enlisted with the First Brigade, Sixth Infantry Corps. He caught typho-malarial fever early in his service and frequently had to be hospitalized.

"But a soldier's life is always exciting. Sometimes we ate and sometimes we didn't. Sometimes we fought and sometimes we played. But we enjoyed it all."

Mr. Hoffman was married in 1872 to Flora E. Chapman, who died 23 years ago.

"I met her at a country dance in Iowa. It was corn-husking time . . . November. I'll tell you . . . she was a handsome woman. She had black eyes, and hair the same color. I remember her just as well as if she were here now."

He came to Colorado in 1894. His business activities were "barbering" and real estate. He retired 13 years ago, and now receives the usual Civil War pension of $100 a month.

Has Three Daughters

He has three daughters -- Mrs. E. D. Cronk of Oklahoma City, Mrs. Bessie Morrow and Mrs. Ben Cook, both of Great Bend, Kan., and one son, Ed C. Hoffman of Hutchinson, Kan.

"You ought to look up that son of mine some time. He is registrar of deeds now, and he's held every office in the Reno County Courthouse in the past 48 years, except sheriff."

Mr. Hoffman will be in the Memorial Day parade today, and will go to Gettysburg for the reunion of Confederate and Union forces June 29 if his "health is good."

Recalls Harper's Ferry

He recalls Harper's Ferry as the gateway between the North and the South throughout the four years of the war.

"I spent a lot of my time in the Shenandoah Valley there, and when the war was over it was absolutely devastated. There was not a tree, a fence post or flower anywhere in it.

"I couldn't believe my eyes nine years ago, when I went back to a G. A. R. encampment. The whole valley is one vast apple orchard, and one of the greenest spots on earth."

[Photographs of Richard Hoffman as a soldier and at age 91 accompany the article.]

Rocky Mountain News, May 30, 1938, p. 5

R. J. (RUDY) HOFMAN

Rudy Hofman's Sideline Rodeo -- He Rides Herd on Major Sport

By DON STERLING

Denver Post Staff Writer

Cheyenne - Rodeo has graduated from the status of a cowhand's pastime to a major American sport, and one which is gradually spreading to all parts of the country.

About 1,300 rodeos now are held annually, two of the biggest ones being in New York and Boston, where the native cowboys ride drug store stools. It is even becoming known overseas: one of the first things a group of cowhand-servicemen did after VJ-day was organize a rodeo in Tokyo.

As the sport has grown, both the cowboys and the producers and sponsors of rodeos have formed organizations for the purpose of standardizing conditions among shows and of bargaining with each other. The principal organization of show managers is the International Rodeo association, and his presidency of that powerful group is among the reasons that R. J. (Rudy) Hofman of Cheyenne, Wyo., is one of the leading citizens of the Rocky Mountain Empire.

Rodeo a Sideline.

Rodeo isn't Hofman's business, but in Cheyenne, home of the "daddy of 'em all" Frontier days, it turns out to be a very important sideline. Hofman tends to it in time taken from the jobs of president of the American National bank of Cheyenne, director of the Plains Hotel company, and owner of the Cheyenne (grain) Elevator and a trucking company.

The I. R. A. now has about 100 of the big-league rodeo shows in its membership. Hofman came to its presidency by way of the Cheyenne Chamber of Commerce Frontier days committee of which he was a member from 1926 to 1947, and chairman from 1938 to 1946. He was elected president of the Rodeo Association of America in 1941, and became president of its successor, the I. R. A. when the latter was organized in 1946.

Native of Cheyenne.

As befits a ramrod of the rodeo game, Hofman, now 57, is a native of the west and a son of pioneers. He was born in Cheyenne, where his mother settled in 1878 and to which his father, Fred, came in 1885. Fred Hofman, who operated a Cheyenne loan and real estate business, himself was chairman of the Frontier days committee during its early years.

Rudy was graduated from the University of Michigan, and then returned to Cheyenne to take a job as messenger boy in the American National bank, of which he is now president.

From the messenger job he moved to a position in the Wyoming state bank examiner's office, and then to the Wyoming Stockmen's Loan company, which was formed to rescue the state's livestock industry after the farm depression of the early 1920's. He went into business for himself in 1926, when he bought into the Cheyenne elevator.

Despite his many activities, Hofman maintains his business headquarters in the tiny, old-fashioned office of the elevator, on the outskirts of Cheyenne. There he weighs in trucks and makes change for drivers between telephone calls.

In politics a Democrat, Hofman served six years as county commissioner of Larimer county, of which Cheyenne is the seat.

He and Mrs. Hofman have one child, Mrs. Lois Deever of Cheyenne. She was "Miss Frontier," queen of the rodeo celebration, in 1946.

Authentic westerner and rodeo official though he is, the brusque Hofman said he has never had much interest in going into the cattle business.

"The way to afford a ranch is to run a good business in town," he commented.

[A photograph of R. J. Hofman accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, September 17, 1950, p. 5AA

ALVENA MATILDA HOGSTOTZ
'Dean o' Candy Dippers' Keeps Lost Art Alive
By HELEN MESSENGER
Denver Post Woman's Director

"Dean of Women Dippers" is a title merited by Miss Alvena Matilda Hogstotz who has earned her living as a hand dipper of chocolate candy for close to forty-four years.

When the Denver born woman, who is now 60, learned her trade back in 1907 she was one of thousands of chocolate candy dippers in America, but today hers is a disappearing profession because hand dipping is an art that's being replaced by machines.

Ironically, it was machinery which was responsible for Miss Hogstotz' decision to enter her profession back in 1907. Looking for her first job, she applied at a Denver factory, but was "frightened by all the machines" in the plant.

Then and there she decided to get into "machineless" work which turned out to be candy hand dipping. In 1910 she became a dipper at Baur's and she is still there at her table on the third floor Curtis street factory. At that time all of the store's candies were hand dipped. Now about 80 per cent are done by hand and 20 per cent are machine dipped.

Miss Hogstotz hand dips an average of 75 to 80 pounds of chocolates a day. That figure multiplied by some forty-odd years of service adds up to a lot of candy.

The skilled operator deftly dips cream, nut or fruit centers into a bowl of creamy chocolate. Her years of experience make it a routine matter to get exactly the same amount of chocolate covering on each center. The operation is completed by hand stringing which is making a particular design on each different kind of candy to identify its center.

These designs are actually an international code, known by candy makers and connoisseurs the world over. For example, a chocolate-covered cherry may be identified by its counter-clockwise swirl on top.

Mr. David S. Walker, executive vice president of the confectionary company describes the veteran dipper as an "expert on chocolates and bonbons" and as one of his "most faithful employees."

Although the candy business is always rushed during the Christmas season, Miss Hogstotz particularly enjoyed her work this year because Mr. Walker put back into production close to thirty types of candies missing from the store's shelves since before the war. The pecan floats, chocolate snow caps, Lemmels and rum caramels are among those to return which many Denverites will remember.

Denver Post, December 20, 1951, p. 41

G. WALTER HOLDEN

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Dr. Holden
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: G. Walter Holden, M. D., born at Barre, Massachusetts, September 17, 1866

Name of father: James E. Holden, a native of Petersham, Massachusetts

Name of mother: Harriet Wheelock Holden, a native of Barre, Massachusetts Attended school or college: Barre Academy; Mt. Herman Academy, Northfield

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: M.D., University of Vermont, 1895

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: July, 1898

Married: Yes, December 31, 1896 at North Brookfield, Massachusetts

Name of wife: Elsie Green Holden, the daughter of Henry Brooks and Helen Ordway Greene

Names of children and years of birth: Robert Greene Holden, born December, 1897; Laurence Wheelock Holden, born March 8, 1907

Avocation: Landscape painting

Give brief incidents of historical interest:

Practiced in North Brookfield, Massachusetts, 1896-1898. At Denver since 1898. Superintendent & Medical Director of Agnes Memorial Sanatorium since 1903.

War Record: Chairman, Medical Advisory Board at Denver; Captain Medical Corps, U.S.A., stationed at Fitzsimmons General Hospital; Major, Medical Reserve Corps, U.S.A.

Organized and first president of Colorado Tuberculosis Association. Organized and first president of Denver Tuberculosis Association. Organized and first president of Denver Sanatorium Association.

Fellow, American College of Physicians; President, Board of Control, Child Research Council, University of Colorado School of Medicine.

Member, Executive Committee, Denver Red Cross.

Member, Colorado State Medical Association and Denver City and County Medical Society; Director, Colorado Hospital Association (ex-president); Member, American Sanatorium Association; American Public Health Association; American Congress of Internal Medicine, American Medical Association, National Tuberculosis Association (vice-president, one year; director, 5 years); American Clinical and Climatological Association; Denver Health Council.

Member, Denver Art Museum, Nu Sigma Nu, Mason (K.T. Shriner), Unitarian, Republican.

Clubs: University, City Club, Mile High, Denver Country.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) G. Walter Holden

Biography File

MRS. G. WALTER HOLDEN

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. G. Walter Holden
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Elsie Greene Holden

Place and date of birth: Boston, Massachusetts, on July 22, 1874

Name of father: Henry Brooks Greene, a native of Pepperell, Massachusetts

Name of mother: Helen Ordway Greene, a native of Boston, Massachusetts

Attended school or college: Boston Normal School

Married: December 31, 1896 at North Brookfield, Massachusetts

Name of husband: G. Walter Holden

Biography File

ELDRIDGE V. HOLLAND

Date: September 18, 1937

No. 2 B878 D5 E16 F32
LCD/DLH

CITIZENS HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION INDIANAPOLIS

The Hon. Eldridge V. Holland
Justice of the Supreme Court of Colorado, Denver, Colorado

Eldridge V. Holland*, born in Jefferson County, Kansas, November 10, 1880; son of Robert Eldridge and Martha Louise (Chestnut) Holland

Robert Eldridge Holland, born in Fauquier County, Virginia, in 1839. He was a farmer. He settled in Jefferson County, Kansas, in pioneer days, and in 1883, moved to Platte County, Missouri. He later moved to Buchanan County, Missouri, where he died in 1903. He served in the Confederate Army during the War Between the States. His wife, Martha Louise (Chestnut) Holland, who was born in Laurel County, Kentucky, died in Buchanan County, Missouri. They were the parents of 4 children: (1) William R. (2) James O. (3) Eldridge V. (4) Robert C. The Holland family in America was founded by 3 brothers who settled in this country prior to the Revolutionary War. One branch of the family was established in Virginia.

Eldridge V. Holland, was a student of the William Jewell College (Liberty, Missouri), 1901-02; and of the University of Michigan Law School, 1903-04. He was admitted to the Missouri State Bar, in 1905, following which he practiced his profession in St. Joseph, Missouri, until 1910. He since has practiced in Denver, Colorado. Mr. Holland was elected a member of the City Council, in Denver, in 1917. He served as assistant city attorney, 1924-29. He was appointed judge of the District Court, in 1929, elected to the office in 1930, and served until July 1933. Since 1933, he has served as a justice of the Supreme Court of Colorado, having been appointed to the office in 1933, and elected in 1934. He was Democratic candidate for Governor of Colorado, in 1932. The Hon. Eldridge V. Holland is a member of the following: Blue Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Consistory (32nd degree), and Shrine; Colorado Bar Association; Denver Bar Association; and Denver Chapter, Citizens Historical Association. His hobbies are outdoor sports, especially hunting, and fishing.

On December 19, 1918, Mr. Holland married Gertrude Raine Nesbit, who was born in Clark County, Missouri, daughter of John W. Nesbit. The Hon. Eldridge V. and Mrs. Holland are the parents of 1 child, Robert E. Holland.

* For further data regarding the Hon. Eldridge V. Holland, see "Who's Who in America" (1936-1937), vol. 19, p. 1207; and Wilbur Fisk Stone, "History of Colorado" (S. J. Clarke Publishing Co., Chicago, 1918), vol. 2, p. 398.

CHARLIE HOLLINGSWORTH
Denverite Since 1906
Changes Frighten East Kansas Kid, 101

Charlie Hollingsworth celebrated his 101st birthday Thursday.
You'd swear he's not over 75 or 80.

"When I first came to Colorado (he pronounces it Cahl-o-rheda) in 1880," says Charlie, "there was nothin' in this country. No trees . . . no roads . . . no houses . . . no fences -- nothing except cattle."

Charlie, who dresses daily in matching suit and vest, said it "frightens" him to recollect back over nearly a century to the times when he was a kid in eastern Kansas.

His family's home was at Topeka.

"It frightens me to look back and see how much the country's changed," he says.

"The people who came out in covered wagons with everything they had strapped to the sides -- their children are wealthy farmers and land owners back in Kansas now.

"The little towns that sprung up along the railroads are big cities now.

"I say to myself, 'Where'd those people come from?'

"I can still see those wagons windin' up to the tops of the hills around Topeka, scavengerin' for buffalo bones." Selling buffalo bones to fertilizer plants in Kansas City was what kept most people in eastern Kansas alive during the pioneering days, Charlie says. There were too few jobs.

Charlie, who lives with a widowed daughter, Mrs. Phyllis Shafer, at 3922 E. 17th Ave., traveled throughout the Western states for 20 years as a salesman of ladies' wear. He brought his family to Denver to live in 1906.

His two other children, both sons and nearing 70, also are still living. One is in Arizona and the other lives in South America. His wife, a childhood sweetheart from Kansas, died four years ago at 95.

[A photograph of Charlie Hollingsworth accompanies the article.]

Denver Post, September 29, 1960, p. 52

MRS. PETER H. HOLME

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mrs. Peter H. Holme
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Jamie Sexton Holme, born at Hazlehurst, Mississippi, April, 1893

Name of father: James Seymour Sexton, a native of Mississippi

Name of mother: Lillian Wise Sexton, a native of Mississippi

Attended school or college: Public School, through 8th grade

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: Came to Denver to stay permanently after my marriage.

Married: Yes, May 14, 1914, at Hazlehurst, Mississippi

Name of husband: Peter Hagner Holme, the son of Richard Holme and Elizabeth Holme

Names of children and years of birth: James Sexton Holme, born in 1916; Peter Hagner Holme Jr., born in 1918

Avocation: Writing Poetry

Give brief incidents of special historical interest: Published first Book of Poems --"Star Gatherer", in the fall of 1926.

Please give autograph signature: (signed) Jamie Sexton Holme

For further information see: The Encyclopedia of Biography, v. 46, p. 298

Biography File

JOHN E. HOLMES

John E. Holmes, who was 91 Saturday and observed that "birthdays can still be fun," is looking forward to next November so he can break a tie vote.

Mr. Holmes, who cast his first presidential ballot for Grover Cleveland in 1884, has voted for 18 presidents -- all Democrats. He's kept tab, and the way he has it figured, he's voted for nine winners and nine losers.

"This November will settle it," he said.

His vote, he adds, will go to the Democratic nominee, altho he figures that President Eisenhower has done a pretty fair job -- considering he's a Republican.

However, Mrs. Holmes will keep the family honest. As solid a Republican as her husband is on the other side, her vote, she said, will go to the Republican nominee.

A spry old gentleman who still reads without glasses and thinks the cigaret will never replace the corn cob pipe as a good, substantial smoke, he is holder of the nation's top mine safety award -- the Joseph A. Holmes citation.

He got that on April 18, 1939 in recognition of 63 years of mine work without a single lost-time accident. His mining career, which covered just about every job in the business, included work in 26 different mines. The Joseph A. Holmes award was presented him at a testimonial dinner given by the Union Pacific Coal Co., at Rock Springs, Wyo. All the top brass from the president on down took part.

"It was quite a blowout," Mr. Holmes recalled. "They sure gave me a good sendoff."

Born in Chattanooga, Tenn., on June 9, 1865, just a few weeks after the Civil war closed, he began his mining career in Kentucky when he was only 10 years old.

"That age wasn't unusual," he said. "there were a lot of kids in the mine of that age. We worked 12 hours a day and got $1.10 for the shift. In the winter time, I rarely saw the sun, I'd go to work before daylight, and come home after dark."

When Mr. and Mrs. Holmes were married in 1898, he was making, he recalls, "real good wages as a mine contractor -- $3 or $4 a day. But you've got to remember, you could buy a 25-pound sack of flour for 25 cents, five pounds of lard was a quarter, and we rented a four-room house for $5 a month. Our first baby cost us only $5, and we got Clarence (Colorado state prison Manager Clarence T. Holmes) for $8. I guess he was worth it," he chuckled.

The Holmes family moved north to Greeley in 1913, and went to Wyoming in 1917. During the latter stages of his career, Mr. Holmes was with the Union Pacific Coal Co., the last several years prior to his retirement as head of their waterworks system. However, he was still an underground man at 73.

Among the earliest advocates of organized labor as a benefit for the working man, he was a member of the Knights of Labor and a charter member of the United Mine Workers.

"I've still got my paid-up card," he said.

After his retirement, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes returned to Greeley, then moved here last July 1. "We like it fine," said Mrs. Holmes.

While all the family couldn't attend his 91st birthday last Saturday, there was a good delegation. The Holmes' have 16 grandchildren, 35 great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren.

Children, in addition to Clarence Holmes are Harry F. of Cedar City, Utah; John of Clinchport, Va., Charles of Seattle, Wash., and Mrs. Edith Belle Porenta of Rock Springs, Wyo.

[A photograph of John E. Holmes displaying the Joseph A. Holmes Safety Award accompanies the article.]

Canon City Daily Record, June 14, 1956

BENJAMIN SANDERSON HOPKINS

Photographer.

For almost thirty-five years Benjamin Sanderson Hopkins was a citizen of Denver, Colorado, during which time he became not only one of the foremost men of the community but also, by his wonderful personal qualities, one of the best loved and highly respected residents of Denver. When he passed away, at the age of fifty-four years, there was general sorrow throughout the community and there was a deep sense of something vital lost to the well-being of all.

Mr. Hopkins was born in Zora, Ontario, Canada, September 26, 1861, the son of William Chapin and Jane (Havens) Hopkins, the former being a native of New York State and the latter of Zora. His education he received in the local schools of his native town and his first position was that of clerk in Bixby's book store in St. Catherine's, Ontario. He located in Denver in 1881 and for a year was a clerk in the Colorado Iron Works. He was always interested in photography and at the end of his first year of work in Denver he decided to launch out for himself. He opened a studio in the Tabor block and his artistic work soon brought him a large and remunerative patronage. Every notable who came to Denver, including those who only tarried awhile on their journey East or West, sat to Mr. Hopkins for a portrait, and it is safe to assert that they all became his personal friends and admirers. In 1903 a severe attack of fever left him somewhat of an invalid, but in spite of his physical handicaps he continued at his work until, in 1914, he was forced to relinquish active control of the business to his wife, who still continues to operate it under his name.

The religious affiliations of Mr. Hopkins were with the Baptist Church. He was a prominent member of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Denver Country Club, the Denver Athletic Club, and the Lakewood Country Club. He was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and was ever to the fore in all the charitable and social work of his lodge. Before he became an invalid his favorite recreations were tennis, boxing and baseball, and in his later years he played a good game of golf.

On August 15, 1898, at Denver, Mr. Hopkins married Flora May Thomas, daughter of James Mattson Thomas, a well-known merchant and mine owner of the city. As stated, Mrs. Hopkins continues to operate the business which her husband brought to such a peak of excellence.

It was on March 25, 1915, that Mr. Hopkins died at his home in Denver. When the news of his passing was made public there was widespread grief, for all knew that they had lost a true and loyal friend, an upright citizen and a man who was at all times a credit to his community.

[A portrait and signature of Ben S. Hopkins accompanies the article.]

Encyclopedia Biography, pp. 177-178

MR. AND MRS. URI HOTCHKISS

Mr. and Mrs. Uri Hotchkiss, 59 Years Married, Celebrate Wedding Anniversary
By MRS. JOY DODGE

Montrose. - Mr. and Mrs. Uri Hotchkiss, only living principals of a triple wedding ceremony performed 59 years ago, quietly celebrated their anniversary Saturday at their home at Colona. No formal observance was planned due to the frail health of Mrs. Hotchkiss, tho Mr. Hotchkiss remains active despite his advanced age.

Three sisters, Mary, Sarah and Lucy Martin, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Martin of Cow Creek, were brides in the triple ceremony. Mary Martin married Uri Hotchkiss, Sarah Martin married William Hotchkiss, brother of Uri, and Lucy Martin became the bride of George Jeynes. The Hotchkiss brothers and their brides moved to homes prepared for them near Colona and the Jeynes couple left for Detroit where they remained until their deaths some years ago. Both Mr. and Mrs. William Hotchkiss are deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Uri Hotchkiss moved to the family land near Colona, living in the old home until it burned to the ground. They rebuilt on a site nearby, this house being their present home.

This home has served over the more than half century as a community gathering place and general hospitality house since both Mr. and Mrs. Hotchkiss are known widely for their generosity of time and material gifts to aid those less fortunate. Their aid in community building included a gift of the site for the town of Colona and Mr. Hotchkiss plotted the new town. Latest of such gifts is land for stockyards at Colona.

Attesting the love and affection felt by friends of the family came hundreds of cards, messages, letters, gifts and visits on the anniversary of this fine couple. Three of their eight children live in this community. George H. and Bill Hotchkiss, Colona, and Mrs. Medora Lee, Montrose. Other children are Earl H., Batavia, Ark.; John, New York City; Roswell, Bell, Calif.; Mrs. Lucy Short, Canon City; Mrs. Gladys Kenly, Phoenix. They have 17 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Grandchildren living here are Diana, Barbara and Mary Lee; Edgar and George Harvey, sons of George Hotchkiss, Joan and Billy, children of Bill Hotchkiss. The one great-grandchild is a daughter of Preston Hotchkiss, who resides at Ridgway.

Mrs. Hotchkiss, 78, keeps an active interest in community affairs tho for the past few years she has not been able to attend clubs and other such meetings. She has no particular hobby unless it be following the Golden Rule. She does all her own housework in spite of the physical handicaps occasioned by age. Born in Detroit, Mary Martin Hotchkiss came to Colorado with her parents when she was 16.

Uri Hotchkiss was born in the Dakota territory before statehood there, coming to Colorado at the age of 5 when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Hotchkiss, who with two brothers, Enos and Roswell, located at Saguache. A year later the families moved to this section, Preston bringing his family to Montrose, the others settling at what is now the town of Hotchkiss, the place being named for the family. From there the family scattered over the state until their name is one linked with much of the early day history of this area due to the part they took in development of the state.

Mr. Hotchkiss, whose life was spent at stock-raising, is well known as an early day hunter of bear, lion, wildcat and other game and at one time, with his brother, Will, brought in a half-grown lion which was sold to a circus making an appearance here. However, the fearlessness shown in hunting did not extend to cameras, his camera-shyness being responsible for the fact that the family has no formal picture of him since the wedding picture of 1888, and very few kodak pictures.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Hotchkiss, both deceased, had much to do with early day activity in this section. Their daughters, Mrs. Anna von Rosenberg and Mrs. Katherine Calkins, live in Montrose at this time.

Sons of Roswell Hotchkiss, one of the three brothers originally coming to Colorado were Verdie, (deceased) and Charles. Children of Enos Hotchkiss, the third brother, include Judge Adair Hotchkiss, Grand Junction; Fred Hotchkiss, Montrose; Leon and Claire Hotchkiss, Hotchkiss.

[An early photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Hotchkiss accompanies this article.]

Grand Junction Sentinel, April 27, 1947

JOHN S. HOUGH***
Early Western Experiences

My boyhood life was made up of a wonderful experience in wild western life. At the age of fifteen years I started overland to California with my father. This was in the year 1849. We started from Baltimore, Maryland, taking the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to its terminal at the foot of the Allegheny Mountains at the town of Cumberland, from there taking stage coaches over the mountains to Pittsburgh, over what was then known as the National Road. After remaining a short time in Pittsburgh we took passage on the Ohio River boat called the Messenger, which was one of the finest boats on the river, for Cincinnati. However, we were obliged to leave this boat in a few days as the river was falling and take a smaller boat that did not draw so much water.

When we arrived at Cincinnati we took another boat for St. Louis. We remained some days in St. Louis, awaiting the starting of the boat we had taken passage on for the upper Missouri. At that time, the cholera was very bad in St. Louis, and we were anxious to get away from there thinking we could leave that fatal disease behind, but how disappointed we were. We had just started on the Missouri River when the disease broke out on our boat in its most violent form. In these days the steamboats used cord wood for fuel and wood yards lined the banks of the river. Our boat took on wood once each day, and making the stop for wood, all that had died since the day before were carried ashore and buried. They had men, day and night, making rough board coffins. We, however, were not affected.

We reached Independence, or rather the landing, as the town is some four or five miles from the river. We remained ten or twelve days at the town as my father was buying mules, wagons and supplies for our overland trip. We started with three other men who also had a good outfit. Their names I do not remember. They were all from New England. I should mention also that my father took a young man along whom father knew to be a West Pointer, but who was discharged before he graduated.

There were a great many emigrant trains crossing. In fact, wagons were hardly ever out of sight. Occasionally we would see Indians, and they would frequently come to our camp to visit, especially when they thought it was about meal time. We always treated them well, but what appetites they did have. One instance I shall always remember was when we had been only a few days on the road. At the place we intended to camp there were two Buck Indians sitting, apparently watching the different wagon trains passing. One of the two could talk a little English, and coming to me first, began saying, "Heap white man going California." I said, "Yes, heap." The Indian said, "I guess pretty soon all be gone." I agreed with him. Said, "Almost." Then he said, "When all gone Indian go down and get what white man left." Little they thought that all the white men they had seen pass would be scarcely missed from whence they came. We had a pleasant time and had game in abundance, but for me the saddest was coming.

After having passed through the plains country, and before crossing the mountains, my father was taken with cholera, and only lived two days. We had to bury him there. Our New England friends stayed with us. Then we had to decide what was best for us to do. Should we

---

* Mr. Hough was a prominent pioneer of Colorado. He was a member of the Colorado Constitutional Convention of 1876 and was the Democratic candidate for governor in 1880. At Las Animas he was closely associated with Kit Carson and with John W. Prowers, whose sister he married. At Lake City he took an active part in mining development. John Simpson Hough was born in Philadelphia on December 25, 1833, and died at Lake City, Colorado, November 28, 1919. In his last years he wrote this sketch and other reminiscences. --Ed.

return, or go on to California? The young West Pointer was so determined to return that I thought it useless to insist on going ahead. After starting back across the plains, nothing of importance occurred. At least, it seems so to me now, after passing a lifetime in the mountains and plains regions. When we arrived at Independence we had no difficulty in disposing of our outfit, as we found the place crowded with men enroute to California. We took the same route home as we came, excepting the stage route across the Alleghenies, as the Baltimore and Ohio had been completed to Wheeling, West Virginia, which route we took.

What a sad meeting for me, for my mother had heard nothing from us since we started west from Independence, and being a delicate woman the shock of my father's death under such circumstances caused her death within a short time. I had several uncles and aunts on my father's side living in and near Philadelphia who were all well-to-do merchants, who at once took charge of me and without consulting my wishes decided that I was to learn the wholesale dry goods business, and I started the work. However, I had plenty of time to do a little figuring for myself. The employes in these large wholesale houses have their vacations during the summer months and by the time my vacation arrived I had formed a plan entirely different from what those staid old uncles had planned for me.

I had sniffed the air of the Rocky Mountains and plains, and when I again left my home I struck a bee line for Independence. I was afraid to ask for too much money on leaving, because it might arouse the suspicions of my uncles, so I was about broke when I reached there, but I felt quite at home. I went to the same hotel we had stopped at both going and returning, kept by as fine an old gentleman as I have ever known. He had taken a fancy to me when we were there before, so I told him what had happened and also that I was not going to California, but wanted to go out in the Indian country if I could get a place with some trading company. Uncle Wood Nolan, as that was his name, said, "Well you must go to Westport, twelve miles from here, as that is headquarters for the Indian traders. Some of them may appear rough, but you will find them as true friends, and perhaps more so, than many of the polished gentlemen you have known, and if you need any money let me know before you leave here." I said that I had enough to take me to Westport, and I thought that having no money would be an incentive to boost me up in looking for a place.

When I arrived at Westport, and had paid for my room and breakfast, I had just one dollar left, so I inquired of the landlord if there were any Indian traders in town. He was a fine old gentleman, this hotel man, "Uncle Jack Harriss." He made me sit down beside him on the steps of the hotel and gave me quite a lecture on what I should do to get in the good graces of the Indian traders and telling me there was one now who had four wagons loaded, camped down the street, and ready to start as soon as they could find another driver. He gave me the name of the man and where I could find him. I was not long in hunting him up. As I was so well dressed, the old trader could scarcely refrain a smile as he looked me over, but said, "You can't drive oxen, can you?" I replied, "I can drive mules, and anyone who can do that, can drive anything." He seemed rather amused at my answer, and told me to go down to see the wagon master, and if he hired me for me to come up to the store and get what I needed as those togs I was wearing would stampede the cattle.

I at once went down to see the wagon master whose name was Cannatser (?), and struck him for the job of ox-driver. He, like his boss the trader, was surprised, but unlike the trader was unable to restrain his laughter. I at once saw that he was a man of kindly feelings. He said, "You have just struck it right, my boy. I know that when we get out to the trading post the old man will not let you get away. It is only 150 miles out there. We will start in the morning, and you had better come down this evening and make some keys for your yokes." As I had had no experience with oxen I had to admit that I did now know what the keys were. He said that he would make them for me and would give me the six yoke of the most gentle oxen, and said that I would soon learn to yoke them up, and that they would not require any skill in driving.

I then went up to the store, as the trader had told me, and fitted myself out with a Hickory shirt and corduroy pants, together with a western hat. The next morning I was down at the camp ready to start to work in a business I knew nothing about, but thanks to the wagon boss, I got along fine. He helped me to yoke up my six yoke of oxen, and then gave me an ox whip, and I should not have known how to use it had I not taken notice of the other drivers. The whip had a hickory stock and long lash. When I saw the other drivers making their whips pop as loud as a pistol shot, I thought I could do the same and the first effort I was unlucky enough to land that long lash around my neck to the great delight of the other drivers.

We had nice weather all the way and in a little over two weeks reached our destination, but the stream on which the trading post was located, was flooding and we could not cross that night, so we made camp on the east side of the stream. We heard a great noise further down the stream. I asked the wagon master what it meant. "Oh," he said, "it's the Indians having some kind of dance. If you would like to go down I will take you." I told him that it would suit me exactly. When we got down there the Indians were dancing around a big fire, and carrying something on a pole. Cannatser, the wagon master, had been talking to some of the Indians, whose language he spoke, and he told me then that they were having a scalp dance, and the thing on the pole was a scalp of an Otoe (?) Indian, that they had killed in a fight that day. So I was well satisfied that I had gone down as I got my first lesson in Indian celebration of victory.

The next day the stream had fallen and we crossed over and unloaded the wagon in the trading house, and as the trader had no one to help in unpacking his Indian goods, I saw my chance and pitched in to help him, and what a help it was to me, the training I had had in the wholesale house, and the old trader seemed more astonished at the way I handled his goods than he did at my togs (as he called my clothes) when I struck him for the job to drive oxen. When we got through with the goods, he said: "I would like you to stay with me, as my man has left for the States, and if you will, I will give you $75.00 a month and board, and will raise it to $100.00 when you learn to speak the language well enough to trade with the Indians." Of course, I took him up. To the price he offered, I hardly gave a thought, as what I was after was a job as Indian trader.

So to my great delight, I was duly installed and by watching the boss trading with the Indians for a few days, I picked up a few words so I could, with the assistance of signs, make a start at trading. Before the first month was out I could talk the language almost as well as an "Injun." When the Indians found out my name was John they gave me the name of Johnyshinga (Little John). As everything was so new and strange to me, and being of that disposition, I enjoyed my surroundings.

Soon after my arrival at the trading post, the Indians began making preparations for the buffalo hunt. The buffalo did not winter as far north as where we were located, but sought the southern country, principally along the borders of Texas and what is now Oklahoma, and along in the spring and summer move north as the grazing is sufficient for their support. There was a stream some 100 miles southwest in which the grass was generally earlier and the buffalo would remain there some time. As soon as the Indians knew that the buffalo had reached this place they would, in a few days, be on the way. The whole tribe would leave except a few of the very old, who would be left at their villages. Then we would have a dull time for five or six weeks until the return of the Indians.

There was, a short distance from the trading post, a Methodist Mission for boys, which generally had about fifty pupils. These boys, when taken into the school, were furnished with white men's clothes, but when their older friends and relatives were ready to start on the hunt they would desert the school and join the hunter and on return would be wearing blankets like the other Indians. The robes they would get would not be of very good quality. However, we did not pay much for them in trade. The meat was very good. The Indians have a way of curing this buffalo meat for winter use. They cut the meat in long strips which, when dried, are about one inch wide. These, after drying and smoking, are plaited into squares resembling a door mat. We would sometimes use this meat in the winter, and we prepared it by boiling, but were careful to pour off the first water to get rid of the dirt. They would bring a great many buffalo tongues, which we were glad to get as they were very good eating.

This tribe of Indians, like most others, thought it a disgrace for a man to work, thinking all work should be done by the squaws. Many times I have seen a squaw pack an eighty pound sack of flour from the trading house, and her buck go strutting along without carrying anything. In those times no paper sacks were used. If an Indian, in his trade, got any sugar or coffee, it was weighed to him and he would hold up the corner of the blanket and it would be dumped in. The principal goods traded to this tribe of Indians were blankets, a blue cloth used by both sexes for leggings, bright colored calico for shirts for the aristocrats, wampum and ear-bobs, and a red paint put up in small packages, butcher knives. But few groceries were sold them outside of coffee, sugar, flour, and tobacco. The blankets were of different sizes and of the best quality and various colors. Wampum, ear-bobs, and paint were brought from France. The flour was of very inferior quality and put up in eighty pound sacks, especially for the Indian traders.

An Indian's wealth was estimated by the number of ponies he possessed, and the number of wives he was entitled to depended on the number of younger sisters his squaw had, and his ability to furnish the required number of ponies to the father of the young squaws. The Indian ponies were smaller than the Spanish broncos, and more docile. We would trade for them, but did not make any particular effort to get them as we had no sale for them. When we had quite a herd of them we would drive them down to the states, and sell them for anything they would bring, as we knew we could not lose anything on them as we only paid $5.00 apiece for them in trade.

And now, we must leave the Indians, with whom I first became a trader, for other worlds to conquer. A party enroute to Albuquerque had come out as far as our post. It consisted of a Mexican trader at Albuquerque, his half-brother and a younger half-brother, a boy. He had two fine ambulances and a span of fine, large, American mules to each. His idea was to travel out thus far, and from there on to accompany the U. S. monthly mail to Santa Fe through the dangerous Indian country. He was not getting along well with the older half brother who was a young doctor from Georgia. I heard him talking to the trader. He was asking him if there was any show to get a man who had knowledge of the country and Indians whom he could get to go with him for good wages, as he was afraid he could not keep up with the U. S. mail. The trader said he did not know of any, and I thought I did, so I said to the boss, "Let me off until the winter trade, and I will go with him, if we can agree on terms, as I would like to see that country along the Rio Grande." "Well, I don't like to let you go," he said, "on account of the danger of storms about the time you will be coming back. Should it be later than you expect, stay out until spring, as I know the danger of the plains when the storms overtake you."

The Mexican trader was pleased when I told him I would go with him, if we would agree on terms. He was quite liberal in his offer, and I closed with him, and began getting ready to start the next morning, as I advised him not to wait for the mail coaches, because we would be better able to keep up with them when they overtook us farther west. We got an early start, the first camping place being fifteen miles, but as I told him, there was another good spring fifteen miles further on. We concluded to make that place before stopping.

It was arranged that the trader and the boy were to take one conveyance and the doctor and myself the other. When we camped at the spring I soon had my span of mules picketed out and the trader had his also, but my partner, the doctor, showed no inclination to do anything, but after we had the mules picketed, he came out wearing one of those silk hats about a foot tall, and going near the mules he nearly stampeded them all. One of the wildest of the mules jerked up the picket pin and made a straight streak back across the road from which we had come. As he had a forty foot rope dragging the picket pin, I thought that I could get near enough to catch the end of the rope. While I came pretty near doing so several times, the mules would put on a little more steam and widen the distance between us, and when Mr. Mule and I were coming near the other spring, fifteen miles, how glad I was when I looked up and saw the mail coaches driving in there to camp, well knowing that my mule would stop with the mail mules, which he did. The mail men, whom I knew, had a time plaguing me about running a fifteen mile race with a mule. I stayed with them for supper, and when we started, tied my mule along side of their mules, and took a seat in the coach and was soon back where we all camped for the night.

These mail coaches carried mail and passengers. They ran monthly; on the first day of each month they left Independence, Missouri, and the same day one would leave Santa Fe. They generally met at the crossing of Arkansas, where Fort Atkinson was located. That is near where Fort Dodge is now located. The fare from Independence to Santa Fe was one hundred and twenty-five dollars in the summer time, and one hundred and fifty dollars in the winter months. The passengers were furnished their food, but were expected to help in preparing it, besides to assist in collecting fuel which at most times consisted of buffalo chips, a description of which my modesty prevents me from giving. There was a coach for mail and passengers, and one for grain for the mules and food supplies, also for baggage, which was little, as only fifty pounds were allowed for each passenger. Anything in excess of that was extra, at fifty cents a pound. There were six mules to each coach, and besides the driver there was a whipper-up, mounted on a mule with a big black snake whip to encourage the mules to put in their best licks. Besides the two drivers and two whipper-ups, there was a conductor. We managed to keep up with the mail coaches until we reached Fort Atkinson.

Here the mail changed mules. We knew we could not keep up with this lot of fresh mules. Besides the road on the south side of the river was, for great distances, in heavy sand. I had an elegant partner. While he would do nothing to aid us in our work in camp, he was very profuse in trying to impress on my mind what a brave man he was, and of the number of duels he had fought, and took great pride in showing me his pair of dueling pistols. I took it all in and never made any complaints to the boss, knowing that it would do no good, and perhaps cause more ill feeling between them. However, I had a chance to test his bravery in a very short time.

We were making a night drive to reach a certain small lake, to camp there. It was as bright a moonlight night as I have ever seen. When we reached the lake at almost midnight, the boss, whose carriage was ahead of us, I, following close behind with our teams and walking slow through deep sand, hollered back at me that there was a train camped at the lake. I at once stood up, and as soon as I got sight of them I replied that it was not a train but Indians, as there were no wagons, but an immense amount of horse stock. The road, which in those days we called a trail (Santa Fe Trail), ran about a hundred yards from the lake, and the boss and I concluded we might possibly pass by without the Indians discovering us. In the meantime, I commenced to punch up the doctor who was laying asleep. When I had him awake I told him to get one of the guns and his dueling pistols as the country was full of Indians.

When we got directly in front of the lake we discovered a small fire with some objects around it. Right then, some seven or eight Indians jumped up, and in Spanish, hollered, "Stop, Friends." The boss, who spoke Spanish, told them to stay away. The boss and myself each took a gun, and getting on the ground next to the Indians, I tried to get the doctor to come to the front of the carriage and take the lines, but he seemed so paralyzed with fear that he could not even sit up, at least he didn't. The Indians then, in Spanish, hollered, "Stop, God damn you." The boss hollered back in Spanish, "If you come any closer we will fire into you." These Indians then stood where they were and we kept going on in a slow walk, walking beside our teams. The mules were about giving out in the heavy sand after a hard day's travel, and about the time we lost sight of the Indians, one of my mules laid down in the harness. I took out my butcher knife and putting my thumb about half an inch from the point of the blade began such a spurring of that mule as she never had before, and she was not long in getting on to her feet again. We then soon got out of the sand, and drove slowly until we reached a camping place five miles distant called McNiece Creek. It bore this name on account of the McNiece party of white people who were murdered by the Indians some years previous, at this place.

I had expected that the Indians would make a daylight attack on us at our camp, but we were not attacked. We were on the road by daylight, our mules being so refreshed with good grass and water we made over fifty miles that day. When we arrived at Fort Union, we discovered the reason the Indians did not attack us. The U. S. government has a government farm some four or five miles from the fort which is used for the keeping of all extra horses, not in actual use. The Indians, a night or two before we ran into them had run off all the government stock, and did not wish to chance a battle fearing they might lose the stock they already had.

But now, our brave doctor, has an inning, as I hear him talking to the officer, and telling what wonderful things he did to save our outfits. We made but a short stay at Fort Union and pulled out for Las Vegas some thirty miles, and then in two more days reached Santa Fe, which was, in those early days, quite a little city. The principal part of the town was built around a square called the Plaza. The business houses were all fronting the Plaza. The Plaza in the evening was used by the government band for dress-parade in the day time as Santa Fe was the capital of the Territory, as well as headquarters for the army. We stopped a couple of days there for our stock to rest up as we contemplated making the drive through to Albuquerque in one day which is about sixty miles, and late that night we reached there.

The next morning after my breakfast I took a stroll through the town, looking for Americans. The only one I found was an old German who kept the Fonda, and who came out with the American troops during the Mexican war. The population was made up of Mexicans. I made one discovery in prowling around the Mexicans. I ran across a Mexican whose hair was fiery red, something, at that time, new to me.

I soon tired of Albuquerque, and buying a saddle horse I started for Santa Fe. All along the road there were trails made by the Mexicans with their trains of pack animals, which are cut-offs coming back in the road again shortening the distance. When I thought I was nearing Santa Fe, I concluded to take one of these that had the appearance of being traveled a good deal as it was nearly dark. The trail soon emerged into the timber and the trail almost entirely disappeared and I began to think that I had taken a wrong trail. I saw nothing better to do than to make camp with nothing to eat and a saddle blanket for bed, and no feed for the horse. As the night was not cold I fared pretty well.

I awoke in the morning after daylight by hearing some Mexicans with burros passing a short distance from where I had camped and seeing their burros all loaded I at once followed them. I did not go a mile until I looked down from where I was and there loomed up the town of Santa Fe. I soon passed my Mexican guide and reached the town. I satisfied my hunger, and that of my horse. I spent a few days in Santa Fe, and while there met for the first time, F. E. Aubrey, the then famous mountain and plain traveller. He had just returned from a trip to California with his men who had taken a herd of sheep there to sell. He told me a very interesting story of his experiences with some Indian in the mountains on his return trip.

His party, if my memory serves me right, consisted, besides himself, of four men and a boy, besides the animals they rode and three pack mules. The Indians were not of any tribe that Aubrey had seen although he had been over the route before. By signs they made it known that they had bullets to trade, and showed one which Aubrey recognized as gold. He told them he would trade. The Indians made signs that they would be back. After waiting a long time, they concluded that the Indians were not coming and commenced to pack up. Just then six of the Indians appeared, and as Aubrey was stooping over tightening the pack rope, one of the Indians jerked a club from under his blanket, and made for Aubrey, the other Indians doing the same thing to the other men, but fortunately they had overlooked the boy who had a good pistol and began using it on the Indian that had attacked Aubrey. This gave Aubrey a chance to get his aim and in a very few minutes they had all six Indians laid out for keeps. After looking the dead Indians over they discovered they had about a quart of the gold bullets. Aubrey concluded that good Indians did not need any gold bullets, so brought them along.

Aubrey said he was going to make another trip to California in the spring and wanted me to go with him, but since I had agreed to return I could not do so. As I heard so much while in Santa Fe of the famous ride made by Aubrey from Santa Fe to Independence, Missouri, it seems that it might be interesting to any who have not heard of it before. It was sometime in the '40s, several years before my time in the country. Santa Fe in those days was a great sporting center, and such men as Aubrey, Kit Carson, and hundreds of others would gamble on most any proposition. Some of those who were great friends of Aubrey's offered to bet large sums of money that Aubrey could ride horseback from Santa Fe to Independence in six continuous days and nights. The distance was about one thousand miles. This was soon taken up. Aubrey was to have the privilege of as many horses as he wished and to have the privilege of fixing the starting time. Large bets were made all over the Territory for and against. Even the Missourians, who in those days, loved nothing better than any sort of a game of chance chipped in thousands of dollars.

In the springs of the year the Mexican freight trains would be passing in over the Santa Fe Trail empty, for the Missouri river. Aubrey after selecting the best horses that could be found arranged with the wagon masters to take one horse and a man he would send with feed for the horse and equipments. Then on the next train he would do the same thing, until he had some ten or twelve horses and men strung out along the trail, and being careful to have them distributed as nearly as possible at given distances apart. Then when the last were gone a sufficient length of time, Aubrey mounted his horse at Santa Fe and started. He had his men trained so that when he came in sight they would have their horse saddled. He would immediately mount the fresh horse and in less than one minute would be in full run. This arrangement worked like clockwork, but what a terrible strain on the rider, as the only chance for sleep was in the saddle. The last change he made was at Council Grove, an Indian Trading Post in those days, about 150 miles from Independence, where he mounted his last horse a small clay bank mare, which he rode into Independence, having six hours to spare. He was, however, unable to dismount, and had to be carried into the hotel, and thus ended the greatest ride ever known.

Aubrey was rather a small man, but of great nerve, and as Kit Carson has often told me, he was the greatest mountain and plain explorer that had ever crossed the mountains and plains. Some years after meeting him in Santa Fe I was pained to learn of his death, which occurred at that place. He had a difficulty of some nature with a man, I think an army officer, and they apparently settled it and went up to the bar of the hotel to take a drink. Aubrey was one of those hot-headed Frenchmen, and after pouring out his glass of whiskey for some unknown cause dashed it in the face of the other man, and he, being armed, drew his pistol, and killed Aubrey, and so ended the life of the greatest of all Pathfinders.

[A photograph taken at Lake City, Colorado, in Mr. Hough's last years accompanies the article. The buckskin hunting coat he is wearing was given him by his friend Kit Carson. This coat was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, 1876. It was taken by the sculptor, F. W. MacMonnies, to Paris and was worn by the model for his figure of Kit Carson on the Pioneer Monument at Denver. The coat is now among the State Historical Society's exhibits in the State Museum, Denver.]

Colorado Magazine, May, 1940, pp. 101-112

HOWARDSVILLE, COLORADO

Howardsville, Colorado, postoffice was discontinued Oct. 31, 1939, after about 65 years service to its community. Records show that Howardsville was the first postoffice on the Western Slope of the Rockies in Colorado.

After 3000 mining claims were filed in what is now San Juan County, Colorado, in 1873, the Howardsville postoffice was established with W. H. Nichols postmaster in 1874. In the same year La Plata County was established, with Howardsville as county seat. The county comprised what is now La Plata, San Juan, Ouray, Dolores and San Miguel Counties. Part of the original court house still stands in Howardsville, the building having been cut in half to make right of way for a county road.

In the early days of Howardsville, mail was brought by stage from Pueblo to Creede, on horseback to Grassy Hill, on the east side of Stony Pass and by skis between Grassy Hill and Howardsville and later Silverton.

Henry Forsyth, prosperous merchant and mining man, served as postmaster from 1898 until the office was discontinued. Mr. Forsyth was elected county commissioner of San Juan County and during the 15 years he held that job, Mr. Forsyth's daughter was nominally postmistress and he assistant postmaster.

Mr. Forsyth tells of coming from Massachusetts May 3, 1880, to visit his brother, Wm. J. Forsyth, and has resided in Howardsville since.

After the County seat was moved to Silverton Mr. Forsyth and a partner lived in the old court house; and he says that they would leave on prospecting trips to be gone several days at a time, without thinking of locking doors or taking their good watches or other valuables with them. None of their property was ever molested. One day when weary from prospecting near 13,000 elevation, they came upon a tent upon which was pinned a sign, "Help yourself, but WASH THE DISHES." This was characteristic of the hospitality of the "boom" days of San Juan County.

Mr. Forsyth and other "old timers" regret that nowadays telephone company, power company and road crews cannot leave emergency provisions in the camps safely. He says, "hard rock miners still respect property rights, but it is the transient who has no thought of others."

A few weeks after the D. & R.G.W. Railroad was extended to Silverton in 1883, the Robinson Circus, then consisting of several trains, came to Silverton, which was the occasion for a general holiday in the entire section.

Mr. Forsyth attended with Dave Kimball, a stage driver. Mr. Kimball purchased peanuts for the party and gave a $20 gold piece in payment. The vendor said he would have to go after change, but neglected to return. After the performance, Kimball attached the show's largest elephant for the missing change. When circus officials offered to settle, Mr. Kimball replied that the case was set before the justice of the peace and he was perfectly willing to let the law take its course. After considerable argument he did settle and allow the show to proceed.

Asked what he would have done with the elephant, Mr. Kimball said, "I would have started a pack train."

Upon arrival in this region, Mr. Forsyth worked for several years at the Highland Mary Mine, head of Cunningham Gulch, which shipped ore by pack train to Pueblo and still paid owners handsome returns. He recalls that for some time freight rates on all commodities between Alamosa, Colo., and Howardsville was 10c per pound.

The Highland Mary was entirely reconditioned the past summer, with new tramway, new water power system and mill and will be in position for production next year after several years of idleness.

Mr. Forsyth was interested in the Royal Charter Mines Co., operating the Little Nation mine and mill at Howardsville and was also interested in the Diamond L mine in the Silver Lake Basin. He still owns mining claims in Eureka Gulch on Green Mountain and several on King Solomon Mountain.

Mr. Forsyth received letters and post cards from nearly every section of the United States for cancellation on the last day of the Howardsville office, but the total cancellation was less than $3, so philatelists are of the opinion that such cancellations will soon prove valuable.

Silverton Standard, November 3, 1939

Grand Junction Sentinel, November 5, 1939

IRVING HOWBERT

Biographical data to accompany portrait of Mr. Irving Howbert
in the portrait collection of the Denver Public Library

Full name: Irving Howbert, born at Mt. Healthy, Bartholomew County, Indiana, April 11, 1846

Name of father: William Howbert, a native of Virginia

Name of mother: Martha Marshall, a native of Ohio

Attended school or college: Public schools in Iowa and Prof. Beattie's Academy in Colorado City.

Give name, dates, honorary degrees: 1911, L.L.D. from Colorado College; 1914, D. Litt. from Colorado College

If born outside of Colorado, when came to Colorado and Denver: June 14, 1860

Married: Yes, December 17, 1874, at Colorado Springs

Name of wife: Lizzie A. Copeland, the daughter of William L. Copeland and Sarah Foss Copeland

Names of children and years of birth: May Howbert, born October 16, 1876; William Irving Howbert, born July 31, 1884

Avocation: Banking

Responsible positions of honor and trust in national, state or municipal government: County Clerk of El Paso, 1869-79; State Senator, 1882-86; Delegate to National Republican Convention, 1888-1912; Chairman, Republican State Central Committee, 1894

Biography File

THOMAS AND ALLEN HUBBLE

Denverites Recall 1896 Bike Trip

By MARILYN HANCOCK

Rocky Mountain News Writer

Twenty-eight days to go 1844 miles -- this was the record of two young Denver men 51 years ago today.

Across deserts, over mountains, once chased by a herd of wild steers, Thomas and Allen Hubbell, then 23 and 22, rode their bicycles from Denver to San Francisco in 1896, when this part of the country was little more than a settlement.

* * *

Allen, who now lives at 2425 W. 29th ave., took a vacation from the plumbing business he had started the year before and which he has run continuously since, making it the oldest business of its kind in Denver. "We rode in bad luck," he reminisced. "At least, Tom did, for to start things off he got a pin puncture when we were 10 miles from any human habitation."

The brothers sat "remembering when" before a stack of old photographs, clippings and souvenirs which included a copy of The Rocky Mountain News from 1876 and Tom's membership cards in the Typographical Union from the time he operated a newspaper in Leadville, in 1888, and was a printer for the News. He was forced to discontinue this work 35 years ago because of failing eyesight and since has worked with his brother.

* * *

Recalling the day more than half a century ago when the two young "blades" set out, they said, "like all wheel tourists we started out with a big bed, a dinner basket, gun coat, overcoat, kit of tools and several other articles. But before two days had passed we found that the railroad track was our road most of the time and we decided we could get along pretty well without a bed. We gave it to some tramps."

