

DENVER POLICE MAGISTRATES COURT RECORDS

1895 - 1904

by Gerald E. Sherard

October 2012 (Revised November 2021)

The Denver Police Magistrates court records and conviction records consist of eighteen book volumes, Colorado State Archives container numbers 17437A through 17437N and 17438A through 17438D, covering the time period 5/1895 through 8/1904. There are a few missing volumes for the short time periods in 1896, 1897, 1900 and 1903. The records consist of: judgment record showing case number, date, name of defendant, charge, complainant (prosecutor), plea, amount of fine, number of days to be imprisoned, signature of judge appeal prayed, amount of bond filed, date bond filed and whether defendant paid cash or worked. Occasionally, the defendant posted bond which was always more than enough to cover the fine, and never bothered to pay the fine.

A charge of “inmate” occurred when the released inmate failed to participate in a rehabilitation program, violated the terms of their release or defaulted in labor or fine payment for a previous conviction. All the inmate violations were against women. A “soliciting” charge usually was a charge for soliciting for prostitution. In the late 1800s, Denver’s Market Street, previously called Holladay Street, had many saloons and was one of the most popular prostitution strips in the country. “The Row”, three downtown city blocks of Market Street, consisted of more than one thousand prostitutes at its activity peak in the early 1890s. Although some of the records did not state clearly what involved the charge of “Contributing”, the term “Contributing” always appeared to mean a “payment”.

A vagrant is a person without a settled home or regular work who wanders from place to place and lives by begging. Vagrancy in some instances was considered a serious crime with the penalty sometimes set as high as a $300 fine or 90 days in jail with a $600 bond fixed. Usually vagrants chose to leave the city within 24 hours or less and remain away which was usually an offered option by the court rather than paying the fine or be jailed, but it also appears that an unusual number escaped. Some were working in chain gangs, in city stables or barn, in the engine room, for the city engineer, in city hall and at the police headquarters. Such work often involved janitor and cleaning work. Also in some cases people charged left town before their court appearance date and could not be found.

Some of the things not permitted and were misdemeanor crimes were riding a bicycle on a walk and swimming in the Platte River. A charge of riding on a walk most likely was due to riding a bicycle on a sidewalk because bicycling was the major means of transportation . Meat markets, grocery stores and theatres were not allowed to be open on Sunday. Jumping onto trains and moving street cars was illegal. Peddlers and dogs were also required to have a license. Occasionally for dog license violations, the person was normally was given 24 hours to procure a dog license or to destroy the dog. Health ordinance violations usually dealt with violations associated with sewage discharge & privies. It was also a violation for a saloon or barber shop to be open on Sunday and for women to be in wine rooms. Saloons were required to close at midnight. Opium was the major drug problem. If a fine was suspended (fines dropped), it was usually due to good behavior.

Minor girls who were charged as incorrigable, bad beyond correction or reform, were sent to the State Home and Industrial School for Girls which was later renamed the Mount View School for Girls in Golden. Minor boys were sent to the Brightside Home for Boys (or Fern Farm) located twelve miles northwest of Denver in Jefferson county and consisting of 320 acres. The Steel Hospital was a Denver contagious disease hospital (included a tuberculosis sanatorium) and the last to close in Denver about 1965.

For a better description of the various types of licenses required, see a paper by Gerald E. Sherard titled "Denver Treasurer License Records 1884-1897", October 2012.

The below database has the following fields: Name, charge or violation, whether defendant paid cash or worked (c = cash; l = labor / work), date (year & month), case number, and the archives container number. Aka means "also known as". John and Mary Doe and Richard and Mary Roe records have been deleted from the database because they were names used for individuals who refused to use their real names. Also it was hard to distinguish between the hand written letters of "a" and "o" and "u" and "n".
