Organizational Note

Cleo Parker Robinson Dance began as a grassroots organization in 1970. It is now a 501c3 multicultural performing arts group in Denver with a long history of serving the needs of the community. Founded with the belief that the language of dance transcends the boundaries of culture, class and age, this institution is committed to bringing dance into the lives of many diverse people. In addition to a professional modern dance ensemble, the group also runs a year-round dance school, a 300-seat theatre, an in-school lecture demonstration series, international summer dance institute, and an outreach program for at-risk youth. In 1999, the Company became affiliated with the Denver Center for the Performing Arts.

Its founder, Denver native Cleo Parker Robinson, was born in 1949. She almost died at age ten when her kidneys shut down and a segregated Dallas hospital did not admit her quickly enough to prevent heart failure. A doctor told her she would remain bedridden her entire life, but Robinson refused to believe that. She threw herself into dancing in order to overcome the pain of her body and the racism she faced. Today, she is the executive artistic director and choreographer of the Cleo Parker Robinson Dance Ensemble.

Robinson began teaching dance at the University of Colorado at the age of fifteen. She graduated from the Colorado Women's College (now Denver University), having focused on dance, education and psychology.

Robinson has collaborated with many people on diverse projects, from operas such as Aida and Carmen to commissions with mentor Maya Angelou. She has worked with Marin Alsop, conductor of the Colorado Symphony Orchestra, on such pieces as Porgy and Bess and Stravinsky's The Firebird. She has been granted choreography fellowships from the Colorado Council on the Arts, the National Endowment for the Arts and the Lila Wallace Foundation. Robinson was featured in the Gordon Parks film Run Sister Run. She serves as first vice president of the International Association of Blacks in Dance and as a trustee of the Denver Center for the Performing Arts.
